Adjustments aloft

As assistant pastor at Calvary Chapel in Twin Falls, Daniel Romans is sometimes asked to climb into the heavens to do repairs. Friday was one of those days as Romans needed to make adjustments on the radio tower that transmits the church's station KAWZ. Romans said the station is in the process of moving the transmission site to Flat Top Butte near Jerome.

Snow starts after old wing back in place

The Associated Press

WENATCHEE, Wash. — After seven years of little snow, Mission Ridge Ski Area workers began wondering if the weather had anything to do with the wing of a crashed World War II bomber, removed from a ski hill in 1985.

Two weeks ago, they removed the wreckage from Mission Ridge's lodge and took it back up the mountain.

Within an hour after the wing section was mounted on two steel poles at the ski area's upper basin, snow began falling.

The white stuff has been piling up ever since, and by Thursday measured 20 inches — not enough to open for skiing, but close to it.

"If we're open by Thanksgiving, it had to have been because of the wing," said Donn Etherington, vice president of Mission Ridge Mountain Corp.

The wing is from a four-engine B-24 bomber that apparently went off course in evening rain and fog on a Sept. 30, 1944, training flight. Six crew members were killed when the plane took off from Walla Walla Army Air Base and missed clearing the top of Mission Ridge by about 600 feet.

Full speed ahead for Clinton

Knight-Ridder News Service

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Bill Clinton describes telling into the night planning the presidency as sheer joy.

"I'm having a wonderful time," he admitted at his first post-election news conference.

That America's 42nd president will be a workaholic — and proud of it — is one of several hints Clinton has dropped since his election about the kind of chief executive he will be when he moves into the White House Jan. 20.

From all the early signs, the 46-year-old Clinton will be a cup of strong coffee for Washington after eight years of Ronald Reagan's laid-back style and four years of George Bush's passive-government philosophy.

Over the next four years, the nation can expect to know a different kind of president — a hands-on high energy manager, a passionate advocate of government activism, a cautious decision-maker who builds coalitions through compromise, a marathon talker who loves to lecture, a shoulder-hugging politician always mingling with the public and a man with a temper and a need for privacy.

Many of these traits, developed during his 12 years as governor of Arkansas, were not evident during the campaign, when Americans became familiar with him as a candidate-but not a government official.

But in just a short span since he became president-elect, Clinton has revealed more of himself — the nation, in the way he chose leaders of his transition team, his exuberance in confronting the enormous task of assembling an administration, his plan to build support for his economic program, and his testy reaction to reporters following him around non-stop.

"I think you're seeing parts of the Bill Clinton we know well," says Betsy Wright, the governor's former chief of staff in the Arkansas statehouse and a deputy campaign director. "He's cautious, extremely thorough in collecting information, reaches out to everyone and doesn't like the idea of giving up all his privacy. But he'll adjust."

Washington and the rest of the nation will have to adjust to the Clinton presidency, as well. Here are some examples of the governing style the public can look forward to under the new First Citizens.

• Work habits. Clinton has resurrected for his transition the dawn-to-midnight schedule he adopted as a candidate, and those hours will become standard at the White House. Aides claim he can go for days on just two or three hours of sleep a night, and he has been known to call Arkansas legislators well after midnight to lobby them on an issue.

"He doesn't know how to take time off. He has an enormous capacity for work and the process of government," says Gloria Cabe, a long-time political associate who was Clinton's liaison to Congress during the campaign.

Andrus to Navy: Provide data or Idaho closes gate

By N.S. Nokkented
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gov. Cecil Andrus Friday threatened to close Idaho's borders to the Navy's spent reactor fuel if the Navy doesn't cooperate with the state's request for information about waste shipments.

"I'm starting to get more than a little impatient with them," he said in a telephone interview Friday.

In spite of three unanswered letters, the Navy has refused to answer or comply with his request for information about the shipments, Andrus said.

One such shipment moved through the Magic Valley this week.

The only reason the state knew about this week's shipment was that the Snake River Alliance found out about it. Executive Director Kerry Cooke alleged Friday.

Only then did the Navy inform the state about the shipment, she said.

The alliance is a statewide citizen activist group.

Andrus said if the Navy refuses to cooperate and continues to stonewall the state, the Navy's waste will get the same treatment as waste from the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant near Denver, Colo.

Andrus successfully blocked shipments from that plant in October 1988.

The Navy may not be legally required to inform the state about the shipments. But a good-neighbor policy would dictate that it should, Andrus said.

No place else to send spent reactor fuel - B1

And if it takes closing the state's borders to get the Navy's attention, "I will not hesitate to do it," Andrus said.

In addition to keeping the shipments secret, the Navy is being dishonest about them, Cooke said.

The train passed through southern Idaho this week hauling a special railroad car carrying a radioactive-waste shipping cask. Union Pacific Railroad spokesman John Bromley said Wednesday the cask was loaded with radioactive waste.

But Thursday the manager of the Naval Reactors Facility at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory told Steve Hill, manager of the state's INEL Oversight Program, that the cask was empty, Hill said.

The Naval Reactors Facility, through INEL spokesman Brad Bugger, confirmed Friday that the cask was empty.

It is alarming, Cooke said, that the Union Pacific and train crews thought the cask was full, but the Navy told the state it was empty.

Either the Navy is lying to the state, or it's lying to the Union Pacific, she said.

Cooke contends that the state and the public

Ada County E911 manager approves 4-county system

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The head of Ada County's emergency 911 telephone system has urged local officials to go ahead with their plans for a similar system.

Twin Falls, Lincoln, Gooding and Jerome counties joined two years ago to begin a centralized E911 system to handle emergency police, fire and medical calls.

Although the project manager hopes to have the project up and running less than a year from now, the city of Twin Falls has been reluctant to jump in with both feet.

The city asked the four-county board this summer for an independent audit of the plans for the local E911 project.

Lester M. Shaddock, communications project director in Ada County, evaluated those plans and sent local project director Al Sandner a copy of his report earlier this week.

In a two-page letter, Shaddock recommends the four-county group to go ahead with their plans.

The issues of project design and staffing of the emergency dispatch facility have been satisfactorily addressed in the plans, Shaddock said in the report.

Sandner said the positive response came as no surprise to him.

"I was pleased with it," he said, adding that he hopes the report will eliminate any remaining fears the Twin Falls City Council has about supporting the project.

City officials had yet to see the report Friday. Twin Falls County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman, who heads the four-county E911 board, said Friday afternoon he was preparing to

Snow pelts Great Lakes area; record warmth in South

The Associated Press

Cold Canadian air blowing over the Great Lakes triggered snow showers in the upper Midwest on Friday.

Winds, rain and snow also caused flooding and power outages in New York state and parts of the Midwest. Rain showers were scattered across the Northeast, Midwest, Florida and the Pacific Northwest.

Heavy rain also caused flooding along the White River in Indiana, and homes in one Indianapolis neighborhood were surrounded by floodwaters.

But unseasonably warm weather struck Florida, with the high 88 in West Palm Beach setting a record for the date.

Snow rained through Buffalo, N.Y., on the heels of 75-mph winds that overturned trucks, closed schools and cut power to thousands of people.

A 33-year-old man was found dead in his neighbor's yard, apparently after he fell asleep in the cold while intoxicated, said police Capt. Edward Ascheroff.

Two pandas escaped from the Buffalo Zoo after winds toppled a tree that crashed into their habitat. Both were captured, a zoo official said.

Visible planets

Morning: Jupiter, Mars
Evening: Venus, Saturn

The cold front produced the heaviest November winds in Buffalo since 1960, the National Weather Service said.

Warnings of gale force winds were issued for the north Atlantic Coast.

Strong winds were also recorded in Michigan, where 50-mph gusts early Friday flipped the rear trailer of a truck on the 5-mile-long Mackinac-Bridge that connects Upper and Lower Michigan.

Snow during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST included 2 inches at Alpena and Sault Ste. Marie, both in Michigan.

Heavy wind and rain were blamed for two deaths in Kentucky. An 84-year-old Lexington man was killed when a large tree branch struck him, and another man died when a tree toppled onto his car.

In Ohio, a motorist was killed when 70-mph wind snapped off a tree limb that smashed through his windshield. Another Ohio man was electrocuted while pumping water from his basement after a storm that dumped as much as 2 inches of rain in some areas.

Temperatures around the nation at 1 p.m. MST ranged from 22 degrees at Devils Lake, N.D., to 86 degrees at Miami.

Party chair fight opens GOP rifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — State GOP officials are accusing the national party's bigwigs of treating them "like mushrooms" as Republicans square off against Republicans in a post-election struggle for the party chairmanship.

"The inside-the-Beltway, non-elected Republicans have taken on all the characteristics of the Democrats," said six Republican National Committee members.

In their Nov. 6 letter, the six members from Alabama, Mississippi, Oregon, Tennessee and Texas said the national organization is an arrogant bureaucracy that has grown too big. The rank-and-file members believe it is time for them to reclaim the party committee.

"All those in the real world outside the Beltway, including Republican volunteers, Republican Party workers, Republican Party officials, Republican elected officials and Republican voters, are treated like mushrooms," the letter said.

The six criticized the national organization for spending millions of dollars on consultants and unsuccessful programs, and believe a grassroots effort that includes teaching and training of local groups is imperative.

"Republican organizations should be taught to fish, not treated as seals and thrown an occasional fish," the six members said.

The letter comes after the Republicans lost the White House in the presidential election and their disappointing showing in the Senate and House races.

The state GOP officials who signed the letter believe the defeat contributed to RNC Chairman Richard Bond's angry response.

Mexico's beef tariffs could stall NAFTA

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Mexico's decision this week to slap new tariffs on beef and cattle imports could complicate congressional ratification of the North American Free Trade Agreement, according to lawmakers and industry officials.

While President-elect Bill Clinton supports the proposed pact, lawmakers from industrial states that stand to lose jobs could lead a tough fight against its ratification by Congress. One member of the Senate Finance Committee, Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said the tariff decision increases the difficulty of securing congressional approval for the agreement.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, one of the most vocal proponents of NAFTA in Congress, said Friday it is possible the Mexican tariff increases could play into the hands of congressional opponents of the agreement, but said Mexico's action is further evidence that the pact must be promptly ratified.

"I think in reality it's just another indicator that we don't know what's going to happen ...

and if we can lock in the rules for North America we need to do it," Gramm said in an interview.

"If the free-trade agreement were in effect while Mexico would still have the power to impose tariffs on goods coming from countries other than the United States and Canada, the tariffs would not apply to us," Gramm added.

Mexico announced Wednesday that it would impose tariffs of 25 percent on frozen beef, 20 percent on fresh beef and 15 percent on live cattle in an effort to protect its beef and cattle industry from mounting imports from the United States and other countries. The new tariffs took effect last Monday.

NAFTA would link the United States, Mexico and Canada into the world's largest free trade zone. Congress must approve the pact and is expected to vote on the matter next spring or summer.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, Finance Committee chairman, noted that Mexico's action came just a month after that country's trade officials put their initials on NAFTA in a ceremony attended by leaders of all three countries.

Shipyard to pick up a load of spent reactor fuel.

But since the train left Pocatello Wednesday, train crews have protested the shipment as unsafe, a union spokesman said.

The engineer and conductor of the train left Pocatello "under protest" Wednesday afternoon, said George Millward, legislative director of the United Transportation Union in Pocatello.

The loaded tank-car was hooked at the end of the train behind a string of empty cars. Hooking a loaded car behind empty cars is against railroad safety rules, but federal rules require putting nuclear waste shipments at the end of the train.

The configuration could cause a derailment, Millward said.

basic position.

As president-elect, Clinton has taken this route by calling for a summit of business leaders and top economists next month to discuss ways to revive the U.S. economy. Since he says that he is sticking with the economic program he proposed in the campaign, it appears the summit is intended to produce consensus for his plan, not new ideas.

"The Bally Pulpit, Reagan's use of the presidency as a platform for expressing ideas was the key to his success, and Bush's unwillingness to do the same may have been the key to his failure. Clinton needs no encouragement to follow the Reagan model."

"I have to do my best at one of the most important jobs of the president, which is to communicate to the American people to explain exactly where we are at this point in our history, how we got here and how where we're going into the future," he said Thursday.

• Going public. Bush developed a reputation for being too detached, an image Clinton seems determined to avoid despite the elaborate precautions the Secret Service takes to keep the president in a protective cocoon.

Friends expect him to test the patience of the Secret Service and the vigilance of the press by trying to sneak out of the White House to make spontaneous public appearances. "You're going to see a lot of freaked out agents," predicted campaign aide Cabe.

send it to the city right away.

City Manager Tom Courtney said he is anxious for a final decision from the city council on the project.

Support from the city of Twin Falls is important to the project, even though residents of the four counties have been chipping in roughly $35,000 per month since February 1991 in the form of a $1 monthly telephone charge.

A small amount of that money has gone toward expenses, but the bulk remains in the bank and will be used to pay for a building and equipment.

The continued operation of the E911 system will depend, at least in part, on money from the counties and cities it serves.

Law enforcement agencies in the four counties have been asked how much money they can use to operate the project from their current dispatch budgets.

POOR

Sales, prices up sharply; is recovery really here?

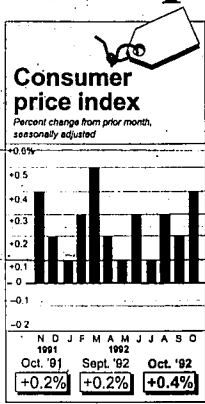

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retailers' sales, propelled by the biggest increase in auto purchases in 20 months, rose a healthy 0.9 percent in October, the government said Friday. Private economists predicted a bigger-than-expected gain is the best sign yet that the beleaguered U.S. economy may finally be coming to life.

Another government report said consumer prices shot up 0.4 percent in October, the fastest inflation pace in eight months, but economists said the gain was an aberration caused by factors such as a record jump in airline fares.

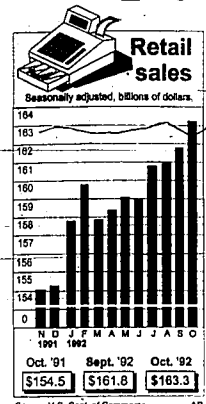

Last month's rise in retail sales, coming at the start of the all-important holiday season, could herald the best Christmas selling season for retailers since 1988, analysts said, while also showing that the economy is not as moribund as had been feared.

"The economy is starting to have a pulse again," said John Albertine, head of a Washington consulting firm.

The 0.9 percent sales gain was the fourth "consecutive" increase, the longest string of advances since mid-1990, when the economy was heading into recession. The rise was led by a 2.9 percent surge in car purchases, the biggest gain in this area since February 1991, but it was widespread, with strength also shown in sales of furniture and clothing.

Source: U.S. Dept. of Labor

Source: U.S. Dept. of Commerce

"This is the most promising indication of a pickup in the economy that we have seen in a long time," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co.

In other economic news Friday: The Labor Department said that Americans' average weekly earnings, after adjusting for inflation, rose 0.4

percent in October, a small improvement following a 1.4 percent drop in the previous month.

The National Association of Realtors reported that home prices managed a tiny 1.6 percent increase nationwide from July through September, the poorest showing since early 1991, as the weak economy continued to depress the housing industry. Many areas of California and the Northeast reported price declines during the period.

Mortgage rates climbed again this week to their highest level since late June. The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. reported that fixed-rate mortgages rose to 8.32 percent, up from 8.29 percent the week before.

Economists gave a variety of reasons for the surprisingly good sales gain, from modest improvements in the jobless rate over the last four months to a possible firming in consumer confidence as the presidential election approached.

But they were still puzzled at the timing of the rebound. Normally, consumer spending does not turn upward until after jobs have picked up significantly and incomes have started improving. Since neither of those factors is in place, some analysts worried that the October spending gain could fizzle.

"I don't think increases like this are sustainable," said Sandra Shaber, an economist at the WBEA Group, an economic consulting firm in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

But she said that even if spending gains over the next three months aren't as large, there is probably enough momentum in place to give merchants their best holiday sales season since 1988.

The 0.4 percent rise in consumer prices was the biggest increase since a 0.5 percent rise in March. The October increase was blamed on several unusual factors.

Airline fares, which had been held down by a summer fare war, shot up 7.8 percent last month, the biggest one-month increase on record. But analysts noted that airlines have already started to announce a new round of fare cuts.

Prices for rents, gasoline, tobacco and private school tuition were also up sharply last month.

But analysts said that with factory operating rates still low and the labor market soft, there is little danger that inflation will get out of hand.

Through the first 10 months of this year, consumer prices have been rising at an annual rate of 3.1 percent, matching last year's modest gain. Inflation for next year is also expected to hover around 3 percent.

"Inflation is not as bad as it looks on the surface. There were a number of special factors including a change in rent-control rules in New York that caused the big jump in rental prices," said David Wyss, an economist at DR-McGraw Hill Inc.

For October, energy prices climbed 0.5 percent, led by a 0.6 percent rise in gasoline prices and a 1.2 percent spurt in home heating oil.

Food prices showed a modest 0.1 percent rise last month as fruit and vegetable costs edged down 0.2 percent after posting a big increase in September. The decline came despite the fact that tomato prices rose 28.3 percent.

Outside of the volatile food and energy categories, the underlying inflation rate took a jump upward as well, rising by 0.5 percent, the biggest increase since a similar rise in March.

Study: MIA identification lab has lost some remains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army laboratory that identifies remains of people killed or missing in the Vietnam War has lost some remains, a congressional study said Friday.

The study, requested last December by the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs, set out to see whether the lab had improved since the mid-1980s, when critics alleged that the Army had inaccurately identified some remains, and whether it had improved management to oversee the process adequately.

The review showed that the Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii "does not have certain internal controls necessary to manage an efficient identification operation," the General Accounting Office study said.

A lack of sufficient control over the remains themselves "had caused either a loss of some remains or unacceptable risks of loss," said the GAO, the investigative arm of Congress.

Some of the losses occurred when remains were transferred to and from consultants hired by the families of the servicemen, the report said, noting that the lab had not completely inventoried the remains until July.

Lab officials said "remains have been returned to CLIH in unsealed containers or with teeth missing," the study reported, adding that keeping track of remains at the lab itself may also be a problem.

The study said that while the file for each missing person "generally contains available data on the circumstances surrounding the loss of that person" and the findings of scientific analysis on the remains, the lab has had trouble maintaining sufficient control over the files.

Ruling in minor trial could force criminal retrials

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A little-known ruling by New York's highest court could put verdicts in thousands of criminal trials in jeopardy, including some of the state's most celebrated cases, a prosecutor said Friday.

The Court of Appeals, ordering a new trial for a defendant in a minor drug case, said recently that criminal defendants have the right to be included in quiet conferences held among judges, lawyers and prospective jurors.

In New York City, the Manhattan

prosecutors' office, noting that these so-called sidebar conferences are relatively common, is worried that courts could use this ruling to order new trials in thousands of cases.

These could include widely publicized cases, including the Central Park jogger beating case, the Happy Land Social Club arson fire in which 87 people died and the stabbing death of a Utah tourist on a subway platform, said Paul Schechtman, counsel to Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau.

"All of our cases are potentially infected," he said. "It's not trivial and it's not crying wolf."

But other experts suggested the prosecutors may be overstating the case's impact, noting it may be difficult to prove from the record that these conferences took place in many trials.

"In a good number of cases, you're probably not going to be able to find them," said William Hellerstein, a Brooklyn Law School professor.

"This is just a scare tactic," said Kenneth Finkelmann, legal aid society lawyer who represented defendant Domingo Antonmarchi in the Manhattan case that led to the ruling. "They don't like to lose."

The state's top court ruled earlier this year that defendants have the right to listen in on sidebar conferences when they request it. These are often called by the judge to allow questioning of potential jurors on personal subjects they may not wish to discuss in open court.

Judge says Noriega should serve time in military facility

MIAMI (AP) — A federal judge said Friday Manuel Noriega is a prisoner of war and should not serve his 40-year sentence in a civilian penitentiary.

He noted, however, the court may not have the authority to enforce his opinion.

"I had it in my power. I would certainly recommend that he be detained in a facility other than in a penitentiary," said U.S. District Judge William Hoeverler.

Hoeverler said he wasn't sure whether he has jurisdiction to enforce the Geneva Convention, which governs treatment of POWs. He said he would issue a ruling within a week on the defense request that Noriega be assigned to a military facility.

In April, Noriega was convicted of eight drug and racketeering counts ac-cusings him of accepting bribes to protect Panamanian operations of Colombia's Medellin cocaine cartel. In July, he received a 40-year sentence.

He was sent to a military destination — the tough, high-security federal prison in Marion, Ill. — Noriega has claimed that as a POW, he must serve his term in a military facility.

He now is being held in a holding cell in the federal courthouse in Miami. Hoeverler agreed to postpone handing Noriega over to the Bureau of Prisons until he resolved the issue.

The defense based its argument on the December 1989 invasion of Panama, and Noriega's subsequent surrender to U.S. troops. Noriega was a general and commander of his troops, making him a POW covered by the Geneva Convention, his attorneys argued.

State officials are homosexual

BOSTON (AP) — Two top officials in Gov. William F. Weld's administration have publicly acknowledged they are a homosexual couple, and said growing support for gay rights made them speak out.

"We've been chewing on this since the day we came into office," said Kevin M. Smith, the commissioner of the Division of Capital Planning and Operations, who shares a Dedham home with Mitchell L. Adams, Weld's revenue commissioner. "Either we were going to do it or we let it happen."

Both men requested an interview with The Boston Globe to speak about their relationship. They had never publicly spoken of their sexual-orientation until the revelations published in Friday's Globe.

They said they hoped that interviewing their status would head off any rumors about them and set an example for other homosexual professionals.

"It's very liberating, but there's also a degree of anxiety," said Adams.

Threat to endangered species law eases with Clinton election

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Bill Clinton on his way to the White House, the Endangered Species Act seems to be on safer ground — and that's good news for the Snake River sockeye salmon, not to mention the rare Furish Lousewort.

The 20-year-old law, which protects more than 600 rare species of plants, fish and wildlife, has been under intense attack from the Bush administration, especially as it applies to the northern spotted owl.

The White House has been intent on trying "to substantially gut" the law, said William Stelle Jr., a staff worker of the House Merchant-Marine and Fisheries Committee. He and most environmentalists believe the assault will stop under Clinton.

Environmentalists say a significant weakening of the law by considering economic effects, as Bush has urged, could threaten some species already under its protection — such as the Snake River sockeye, listed last year. The Furish Lousewort, an herbal plant found in Maine, has been considered endangered for more than a dozen years.

Stelle and environmental leaders believe there will still be a contentious congressional debate next year over the law, especially as it applies to the northern spotted owl, whose survival has threatened thousands of logging jobs in the Northwest.

But the law's detractors will have lost one of their strongest allies in Bush. "A Clinton administration is going to come in and basically say the act is okay and so let's not get bogged down in major changes."

CHANGING DIRECTIONS

predicted Sharon Newsum, vice president for resource conservation at the National Wildlife Federation.

With the defeat of Bush "a long and bruising fight" has been averted, she said.

Bush has made no secret that he intends next year to push vigorously for changes in the law, which he feels is too heavily weighted toward protecting plants and wildlife at the expense of people.

"The law is broken. It must be fixed," Bush proclaimed in the final weeks before the Nov. 3 election as he campaigned in Oregon.

"It's time to make people more important than owls."

At the Interior Department, planners had already begun crafting legislative proposals to require that economic considerations such as job losses be given more prominence when a decision is made whether to protect a plant or animal.

Environmentalists argue that the law already allows for economic issues to be raised as part of an appeals process added in 1977. That year Congress created a special appeals committee, which can sidestep the law if certain public interest concerns are demonstrated.

During the campaign, Clinton sided with environmentalists.

"Science should be the sole criteria in determining whether species should be listed as endangered," he told the League of Conservation Voters.

On a visit to Oregon, Clinton promised a "forest summit" early in his presidency in hopes of working out agreements and programs to ease some of the impact of the spotted owl protection plan on loggers while still protecting the owl.

The Interior Department under Clinton is "almost certain to be more friendly toward the species-protection law than it has been under Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan.

While Clinton has yet to name any of his Cabinet, several people rumored to be likely choices to replace Lujan are Colorado Sen. Timothy Wirth and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, both strong supporters of the law and ardent environmentalists.

In contrast, Lujan repeatedly has called for the law to be changed and complained bitterly that he was hamstringing in the spotted owl case because the law allowed only biological and scientific issues to be considered in deciding whether a species should be protected.

Remembering the Sullivans

Calls tracked in Clinton probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phone calls of an official involved in the controversy over Bill Clinton's passport files were monitored without authorization last month, the State Department said Friday.

After learning of the practice a month ago, Acting Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger directed that no phone calls relayed through the department's Operations Center be monitored except when a party to a conversation asks for it, spokesman Richard Boucher said.

The Washington Post said in Friday's editions that notes were taken of the phone conversations last month of then-Assistant Secretary of State for Consular Affairs Elizabeth Tamposi, who was dismissed by President Bush this week.

Boucher said the FBI has begun looking into "past practices" of the Operations Center personnel concerning the monitoring of telephone calls. This, he said, was an outgrowth of an investigation by the State Department inspector general into the controversy over the passport files of Clinton, his mother and Ross Perot.

The furor began with media reports submitted in late September for information about Clinton's travels to Moscow while a college student in England two decades ago and about his participation in the anti-

Vietnam War movement during that period.

Some Democrats have accused the administration of using the requests to dig up dirt on Clinton under the cover of legitimate media inquiries. Tamposi, a longtime Republican activist, has denied any wrongdoing. The results of the department's inspector general's investigations are expected to be released early next week.

Department officials routinely make calls to colleagues through the Operations Center, and at times officials at the center take notes of the conversations for use later by the participants.

Justice edges closer to assigning investigator to look at Iraq loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has moved a step closer to seeking a court-appointed prosecutor to investigate what a special counsel on Friday called a possible obstruction of justice over a scheme to loan money to Iraq.

In an interview Friday, Frederick B. Lacey, Attorney General William Barr's hand-picked special counsel, said he had found sufficient credible allegations that government officials may have violated that law.

Lacey said he had therefore recommended, and Barr had approved, a preliminary inquiry into the allegations. He said Barr asked him to complete his investigation by Dec. 8. That would give the attorney general time to decide whether to seek a court-appointed prosecutor before the law authorizing them expires Dec. 15.

Lacey's recommendation and Barr's decision came on Oct. 26-27, a week before the election, but neither man announced the moves publicly despite repeated demands by Democrats on the House and Senate Judiciary and Senate Intelligence committees for a court-appointed prosecutor.

The demands mounted during the campaign as Democrats claimed the Bush administration was trying to hide aid it gave Iraq before the Persian Gulf War. Barr had rejected one in August and passed October demands to Lacey to evaluate.

But since August, evidence has come to light suggesting the administration mishandled the loan case, particularly by indicating an Atlanta bank manager for the $5.5 billion loan scheme — despite intelligence information suggesting the banker's superiors in Italy were aware of his activities.

Because those superiors were appointed by the Italian government, which owns the bank, some have alleged that the U.S. government may have secretly approved of the loans, even though some money was diverted to pay for arms.

Barr is expected to inform the two Judiciary committees on Monday that he has authorized Lacey's preliminary investigation.

Lacey wrote Barr on Oct. 26 suggesting that in accordance with the independent counsel statute, he had found specific allegations from a credible source to warrant further investigation.

Lacey identified the source as Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., the Senate Intelligence Committee chairman who had asked Barr last month to apply for a court-appointed prosecutor.

"I am far from concluding that there has been a violation of any federal statute, even assuming the validity of all of the information gathered to date by Senator Boren and me," Lacey's letter said.

Nonetheless, Lacey said, Boren's Oct. 14 letter makes serious allegations against the Justice Department and CIA for possible violation of the law.

"His allegations suggest he has in mind, among other statutes," a specific section of the criminal code prohibiting obstruction of justice, Lacey wrote.

Lacey did not elaborate, saying only that he had been investigating the same allegations made by Boren.

Boren has pointed to several events that could indicate obstruction:

- A misleading Sept. 17 CIA letter to the judge in the case, provided under "strong advice" from the Justice Department, suggesting that the agency had only newspaper accounts of the case.
- CIA documents withheld from the prosecution and/or from Congress.
- The prosecution's failure to follow what intelligence leads it was given, including its failure to question Italian officials.

Ex-aide accepts apology from Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former national security aide has ended nearly 20 years of legal struggle by accepting an apology from Henry Kissinger for consenting to a wiretap on the aide's telephone.

"I am writing this letter to put an end to the painful acrimony," Kissinger wrote to Morton H. Halperin, now a senior associate with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The former secretary of state had always maintained, and repeated in the letter to Halperin, that "nothing that came to my attention from the surveillance or otherwise cast doubt on your integrity or your loyalty to the country."

Halperin said today he regards the apology as adequate and that it establishes the principle that any government official who consents to wiretaps "is violating the Constitution and clearly subject to legal action."

The case dates back to May 1969 when FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover fingered Halperin as the possible source of a leak to The New York Times about the secret U.S. bombing of Cambodia.

Kissinger, then President Nixon's national security adviser, agreed to a tap on Halperin's telephone. The tap remained active for 17 months after Halperin left the NSC in September 1969 and the FBI reported its yield to Kissinger's office. Kissinger later became secretary of state.

Judge lays down law: Fine or turkey

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Get a ticket, cook a turkey. That's how it works in Tom Fiorina's courtroom each Thanksgiving.

The municipal judge plans entertainment at the courthouse on the Tuesday before the holiday while parking violators who put off paying tickets bring on food for the needy in exchange for reduced fines.

For about eight years, Fiorina has offered motorists the chance for reduced fines for overdue parking tickets if they make food for the needy at Thanksgiving.

U.S. Army mobile hospital for U.N. peacekeepers rises in Zagreb

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — A tent city was rising Friday at Zagreb's airport, rapidly transforming the freezing tarmac into a U.S. Army hospital that is America's first major contribution to the U.N. peacekeeping force.

Doctors, nurses and technicians from the Army's 212th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital on Sunday will begin treating the U.N. troops deployed in former Yugoslavia.

The first contingent of the 400-member medical staff arrived Tuesday from bases in Germany as the first major U.S. operation within the U.N. force.

Task force commander Col. Gregg Stevens said the mission is to provide a full range of health care for the 22,000 U.N. troops that will be deployed in Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina by mid-December. It is one of the biggest U.N. peacekeeping operations in history.

"There is a large group of people that will need a medical care, so the hospital is an essential part of such a large mission," said U.N. spokeswoman Shannon Boyd. "We're very happy they're here."

The United Nations' force had been putting a strain on Croatian civilian medical facilities, occupying about 40 hospital beds and consulting local doctors, she added.

Since U.N. soldiers were sent to the former Yugoslavia in April, 20 of them have been killed and another 273 have been wounded.

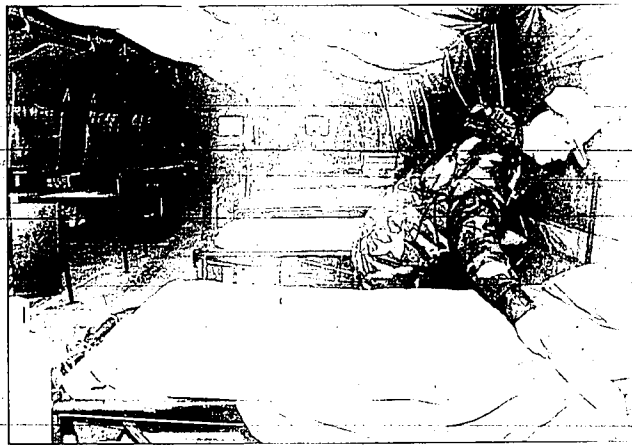

Until now, the United States' only major contribution to the U.N. peacekeeping effort has been monitoring sea access to Yugoslavia as part of the Security Council's economic embargo on Serbia and Montenegro, blamed for fomenting the war.

However, the United States has provided assistance separate from the peacekeeping effort, most notably frequent aid flights into Sarajevo. When flights resumed in early October after a month-long lapse caused by the shooting down of an Italian relief plane, American planes were the first in.

At the Zagreb airport, one of the airport hangars will shelter four large tents serving as the mobile hospital's wards, with a total of 60 beds. The rest of the unit — operating rooms, X-ray unit and laboratories — will be just outside on the tarmac.

Maj. Paul Ehrlich, the chief nurse, said the hospital will consist of 11 tents and five large prefab units providing "all facilities a hospital has to have."

A group of 30 people picked up a huge tent and moved it a few inches, adjusting exits to match with tunnels connecting each section.

Sgt. Lisa Hartfield, from Texas, a member of the U.S. Army's 212th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital (MASH), prepares beds in a tent at Zagreb airport, Friday. A tent city is rising at Zagreb's airport, rapidly transforming the-freezing tarmac into a U.S. Army hospital.

Trade talks to resume to prevent tariff war

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The European Community and the United States will resume stalled trade talks Wednesday in an effort to avert a tariff war in their dispute over farm subsidies, officials said Friday.

With the United States threatening $300 million in trade sanctions against EC white wine and grain, France and the rest of the 12-nation trading bloc agreed to the two-day talks in Washington.

The talks broke down last week, holding up negotiations among 108 nations for an accord to liberalize world trade within the Geneva-based General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The GATT talks had been due to end in December 1990, but have been in limbo because of the stalled negotiations over U.S. demands for cuts in the European Community's subsidies for farmers. Washington and other governments contend the subsidies keep prices for EC farm goods unfairly low.

The EC's foreign affairs commissioner, Frans Andriessen of the Netherlands, and its farm commissioner, Ray MacSharry of Ireland, will represent the Europeans. Trade Representative Carla Hills and Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan will head the U.S. side.

Andriessen said he was optimistic a breakthrough can be made. Negotiators have been in contact by telephone since the last round of talks broke down and both sides are showing new flexibility, he said.

"There is a strong political determination" on both sides to resolve the dispute, Andriessen told a meeting of investors in Amsterdam.

"We have been able to narrow the gap in a considerable way and we are not far from breaching the last elements of divergence," he added, but declined to give any specifics.

Washington has threatened to put punitive import taxes on $300 million worth of European farm products, mainly white wine and grains, if the dispute is not settled by Dec. 5.

France, the biggest farm producer in the community, is the main opponent of further subsidy cuts. But Paris has come under intense pressure from its partners to compromise with Washington and abandon calls for retaliation on imports of U.S. goods.

If a breakthrough is achieved, the "Uruguay Round" of the GATT trade talks could be concluded by year's end, Andriessen said.

The Uruguay round includes about a dozen areas, including soybeans, textiles, manufactured goods and financial services. The talks opened in 1986 in the Uruguayan resort of Punta del Este.

Guerrilla fighters fire on Israeli soldiers

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Hezbollah guerrillas firing machine guns and mortars battled Israeli soldiers and allied Lebanese militiamen Friday in southern Lebanon, security sources said.

The clash was the latest incident in an outbreak of violence that has raged in the south since Sunday, straining Arab-Israeli peace talks.

Hezbollah, an Iranian-backed Shiite Muslim group, opposes the U.S.-sponsored Middle East peace process and hopes to derail the talks.

Israeli helicopter gunships hovered over the area but did not open fire. Howitzers fired by Israeli soldiers and militiamen of the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army shelled the Shiite village of Z'atar.

Japan may revise plan to ship plutonium

TOKYO — Seeking to prevent a diplomatic debacle, Japan said Friday that it may revise its plan to ship tons of highly radioactive plutonium from France.

Officials from the Foreign Ministry, Science and Technology Agency and Maritime Safety Agency told foreign reporters they were surprised by the outcry against the shipment of 1.7 tons of plutonium that left Cherbourg on Sunday.

The lead is the first under an ambitious plan to meet most of Japan's energy needs by using more than 30 tons of plutonium from France to fuel fast-breeder reactors, which produce more nuclear material than they consume. Japan is almost totally dependent on imports for its energy.

At least a dozen nations protested the shipment, however, and several refused to allow the ship to pass through their territorial waters. Protesters fought with police at Cherbourg while the plutonium was loaded, and an environmentalist boat is tailing the cargo ship to warn nations of its approach.

Chemicals, gases destroy ozone layer

GENEVA — A combination of manmade chemicals and volcanic gases caused unprecedented destruction of the protective ozone layer over large parts of the globe the past year, a U.N. environment agency said Friday.

The World Meteorological Organization said ozone levels over northern Europe, Russia and Canada last winter and spring were 12 percent below the seasonal average, "an occurrence never before observed in more than 35 years of continuous ozone observations."

"Statistically one could expect such low values only once in 100 years," said Dr. Rumen Bojkov, a weather expert with the organization.

The Geneva-based agency also reported worryingly high depletion rates for ozone over the South Pole and southern Argentina and Chile.

IF NOVEMBER 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have "writer's" signature. You are quixotic, attractive, dynamic, and you exude a different kind of sex appeal. Before November is finished, you'll receive confirmation that views were accurate and opinions verified. You'll be more popular toward end of month, social activities accelerated.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You'll feel "protected." Focus on shelter, family, knowledge that you can take risk - there is safety net. You'll be dealing with one who does have your best interests at heart. Don't appear!

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Diversity, examine travel material. You'll be invited to attend unique conference - will require additions to wardrobe, journey. Information recently received when applying for more learning.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Received between lines, check source material, express willingness to rebuild on "more suitable structure." You might be amazed by volunteers willing to supply financial backing. It's your Gemini will.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You'll be in "comfortable surroundings." Moon in your sign highlights initiative, originality, personality, sex appeal. Gain initiative via written word. Filiation, dog-spice - maintain poise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on showmanship, color coordinated, music, "strong romantic interlude." Lunar position highlights intrigue, mystery, clandestine arrangement. Money made available from "surprise source."

VIRO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What is first appearance, must be easily planned. Define terms, outline boundaries. Cancer native helps make many of your fondest aspirations become realities. Accent charm, personality.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Key is to organize, to work out schedule, to imprint style, to accept added responsibility. Be aware of time limitation. Scorpio features promotion, production.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22): Emphasis on wider audience, confidence, universal appeal, becoming aware of love. Stress individuality, imagination, publish findings. Key is to be self-starter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Artistic capabilities surge to forefront. You'll be rewarded for efforts - you'll be complimented on what others term "year unique touch." Expand horizons.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Artistic talents surge to forefront. You'll be rewarded for efforts - you'll be complimented on what others term "year unique touch." Expand horizons.

Congresswoman files for vote recount

BOISE — State Rep. Molly Lazecko, D-Boise, has filed a request for a recount in her 24-vote loss to Republican Sylvia McKeeth. Chief Deputy Secretary of State Ben Ysursa said the recount is tentatively set for next Thursday, the day after election results become official. Lazecko, who filed the requested $1,800 bond to cover the cost of the recount Thursday, represents northwestern Boise and Garden City. She said she had decided to delay a possible legal challenge to the outcome based on what she says are potential voting irregularities in a part of precinct on the west side of District 16.

Parents support teachers' suspension

MERIDIAN — About 50 parents met to support the Meridian School Board's disciplinary action taken against three high school teachers for allowing lessons to speak in their classes. "We're putting the Meridian Education Association on notice that there is a tremendous groundswell of support in the Meridian School District and for the board," Barbara Youngstrom, one of the group's organizers, said Thursday. "We appreciate that the board took the matter seriously and felt obligated to act on the matter at once." The news conference at Meridian City Hall was the first organized public show of support for the school board since trustees suspended the three Meridian High School teachers last week.

County must update auto emissions plan

BOISE — Ada County's $20 million in federal transportation funds could be in jeopardy unless the state's plan for controlling automobile emissions is updated, an Ada Planning Association official says. The current plan, 10 years old, is badly out of date, according to a memorandum from Clair Bowman, the Ada Planning Association's executive director. The association would have trouble defending the plan as an effective way to improve air quality to the Environmental Protection Agency if Ada County emissions get bad this winter, he said in the memo. "If the EPA is not satisfied with the plan, it could take away some or all of the federal money."

GTE offers deal to reduce work force

MOSCOW — GTE Northwest employees in Moscow, Orofino and Pullman, Wash., have been offered a "voluntary separation package" as a first step toward reducing the company's regional work force. Kevin Lavery, GTE public affairs manager in Coeur d'Alene, said Thursday that notice of the offer was made this week to a number of management and hourly employees at the three locations. The offer typically is for severance pay based on an employee's longevity with the company. Lavery said he had no estimate of how many employees were offered the separation package. "GTE employs 168 people in Moscow and six each in Orofino and Pullman."

Bar denies passing limited numbers

MOSCOW — The Idaho State Bar denies its commission intentionally limited the number of prospective attorneys passing last summer's bar examination to avoid aggravating an over-supply of lawyers in the state. Michael Oths, the Bar's legal counsel, said that in general the better students passed the examination last July while the weaker ones failed. The median grade point average of the University of Idaho graduates passing the exam was nearly a third of a point higher than the median for those who failed, he said. But former Supreme Court Justice Robert Huntley asked the state's high court last month to investigate the possibility that exam scores were manipulated and adjust them accordingly. The petition for 13 applicants who failed the exam was prompted by the fact that the pass-rate of under 65 percent was the lowest in two decades.

INEL changes might not cost jobs

POCATELLO (AP) — Consolidation of Idaho National Engineering Laboratory management and operations isn't likely to affect the wages, benefits or jobs of most site employees, officials predict. That's based on the way similar Department of Energy consolidations at other national sites have worked in the past. The agency on Thursday announced consolidation aimed at saving $265 million over the next five years. Officials at INEL say they aren't certain how it will work, and won't know until companies submit proposals that aren't due for nearly two years. More than 8,000 of the INEL's 12,000-plus employees work for the five prime contractors affected in the consolidation. "In my estimation, the bulk of those people are going to just continue doing what they're doing now," said Jeff Hoyles, deputy director of DOE-Idaho's Contracts Management Division. Past consolidations at other sites have had little impact on the average site worker's daily duties, he added. "But it's difficult to envision how contractors will implement their plan of combining organizational processes at the INEL, so that's why I can't say for sure how it's really going to impact people. Unfortunately, it's going to be a really long wait for people."

State wants environmental study of hydro project

POCATELLO (AP) — The state wants a full environmental impact study before work is allowed to resume on an eastern Idaho hydroelectric project that washed out in June. On June 11, a stretch of old irrigation canal under the Fall River hydro project washed out along with a new penstock under construction. "Although the sponsoring company and a multiple-use organization in the area claimed there was little environmental damage, state and federal officials have estimated the washout dumped 17,000 to 20,000 cubic yards of material into the river, a popular trout-producing stream. Idaho Division of Environmental Quality biologists studying the damage found a 60 percent drop in the number of insects that the fish eat, said Blaine Drews, water quality compliance officer. Workers are collecting samples in the final stages of the fish food study and findings are expected to be released in December. "What we're looking at is the long-term effects of the failure," Drews said. The state also wants the commission to require Idaho water quality certification before construction can resume. The basis for requesting the increased environmental scrutiny this time, said Idaho Deputy Attorney General Kevin Beaton, is the commission's finding that the company used unsound engineering in laying the pipe. Beaton predicts FERC won't act on the petition request until spring, after state studies are completed.

Counties seek more moisture

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Six eastern Idaho counties and a Wyoming soil conservation district have committed more than $41,000 for a cloud-seeding program to boost winter snowpack in the Upper Snake River Valley. But even with money from the state, about $25,000 still is needed to capture additional moisture to help an area that has suffered through six years of drought. Bannock, Bingham, Bonneville, Fremont and Jefferson counties have committed $6,500 each to lease 25 cloud-seeding generators. Madison County has tossed in $5,500 and the Teton Soil Conservation District in Wyoming has contributed $3,250. "For that kind of investment and for how much is at stake, I think it's worthwhile," said Bonneville County Commissioner Cliff Long.

Commission extends deadline for landfill fee

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Commission on Friday extended the deadline for paying landfill fees until Feb. 1, 1993.

The Dec. 4 deadline was moved back to relieve some pressure off residents during a traditionally heavy billing time because of property taxes and Christmas.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said the extension was granted because of numerous requests by citizens. "It's something we've been kicking around," Hempleman said.

The landfill fee, $50 per household, is intended to help the county build its new landfill.

Hempleman also said the county would allow residents to pay in two payments.

Daughters of the American Revolution to have luncheon

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will meet today at the Canyon Springs Inn for a luncheon.

The program, entitled "Saving Our Legacy," will be given by Teddy Keeton of Buhl. She will show a video of the Snake River Studies.

Members should bring money for gifts for the Veterans' Home in Boise.

The luncheon is scheduled for 12:30 p.m.

Further information can be obtained by phoning 543-5657 or 423-5364.

Police department schedules abandoned bicycle auction

TWIN FALLS — Anyone looking for a used bicycle should be at the Twin Falls police station at 1 p.m. today.

The police department will auction off more than 40 bikes that have been stolen, lost or abandoned and never claimed by their owners. There are bikes of all sizes and colors, each to be sold to the highest bidder.

The auction will be in the police station garage, located at 356 Third Ave. E.

Nov. 30 application deadline set for State Supreme Court

BOISE — Anyone seeking a seat on the Idaho Supreme Court in the wake of Chief Justice Robert E. Bakes' retirement needs to apply by Nov. 30.

The Idaho Judicial Council is gathering nominees to succeed Bakes, whose retirement is effective Feb. 1, 1993. Justices on the Supreme Court make $74,701; the chief justice earns $76,201.

Applications are available from District Court clerks in any county courthouse or from the Judicial Council.

Return the applications to Robert G. Hamlin, Executive Director Idaho Judicial Council, P.O. Box 1525, Boise 83701.

The council plans to meet in January and pare the field down to a list of two to four people to be submitted to Gov. Cecil Andrus, who will make the selection.

Hearing focuses on changes to comprehensive water plan

TWIN FALLS — A public hearing to discuss proposed changes in the Comprehensive State Water Plan is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Idaho Department of Water Resources Twin Falls office, 222 Shoshone St. E.

Amendments to the plan that will be discussed would limit the role of the local advisory board and would delete the subscription mailing requirements.

The board also will listen to comments on amendments to let the board consider requests from individuals to amend the comprehensive state water plan, and provisions for evaluating those requests.

Written comments will be accepted at the state water resources board office through Nov. 30.

Cactus Pete's gaming director to speak to Idaho Press Club

Engineers begin landfill predesign

By Jim Wilkie
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two engineering companies got the go-ahead Friday to conduct a predesign for a new county landfill.

In about two weeks, EHM Engineers and J-U-B Engineers will bring the Twin Falls County Commission the cost estimates to build the landfill. Then the proposal will then go through an independent audit.

After the review by CH2M Hill, a Boise engineering firm, the county commissioners will decide whether to choose the landfill proposal by the engineering companies.

Stephen F. Freiburger, project engineer for J-U-B, explained the $252,800 cost proposal for engineering services to the commissioners during their meeting Friday.

The proposal and schedule for Hub Butte and Mud Lake outlined site acquisition, engineering design services, construction services, and other services such as agency review and public information.

"We feel this is a very competitive proposal," Bill Block, regional manager for J-U-B, told the commissioners.

Four transfer sites are included in the plans. Freiburger said these would be in the Hansen-Murtagh area, the Buhl-Filer area, probably the Hollister-Rogerson area and possibly Roseworth or Castleford. Final transfer sites will depend on whether Hub Butte or Mud Lake is the first choice for the landfill, he said.

Freiburger described the predesign of the landfill as an economic analysis of

'We feel this is a very competitive proposal.'

—Bill Block, regional manager for J-U-B.

the project's components. Predesign, which will cost $19,800 includes initial cost estimates of the sites and soil data.

Once the predesign is complete the commission can take the estimated cost to cities, such as Twin Falls and Buhl, that are considering using a Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District landfill instead of the county's. The CH2M Hill audit will also be presented to the cities.

Commissioner Marvin Hempleman, who represented Twin Falls County on the district's board of directors before it decided to go it alone, said the engineering proposal looks promising and has "lots of expertise."

"This is very comparable," Hempleman said. "The scope of services is complete."

Federal law requires that the county comply with new federal standards for landfills by October 1993.

The county began collecting solid waste fees from residents and businesses last week.

"We've got to have up-front money to build a landfill to meet regulations that are mandated by the federal government," County Commissioner Jim Frealey said.

Freiburger said if their engineering proposal is chosen by the commission before January, completion of the landfill could meet the deadline.

Navy has no alternative site to send spent fuel

By N.S. Nekkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Navy has had a long-standing relationship with Idaho — and it looks as if it's going to continue for a long time to come.

Since 1957, the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory has been the place the Navy sends all its spent nuclear reactor fuel. It's examined at the Expanded Core Facility, a part of INEL's Naval Reactors Facility.

"There are no alternatives to shipping the spent nuclear fuel to the (Expanded Core Facility) at INEL," said Adm. Bruce DeMars, director of the Naval Nuclear Propulsion Program. "No other acceptable facilities have been developed for examination and storage pending final disposal."

But only a portion of the spent fuel shipped to INEL is inspected in any detail, the admiral said. Most of it just stored at the INEL's Chemical Processing Plant.

"Spent naval fuel transferred to ICCPP from the ECF will remain in water-pit storage racks until burial in a geologic repository can be arranged," DeMars said.

No such repository exists. The federal Energy Department is looking at Yucca Mountain northwest of Las Vegas to determine if it is suitable as a geologic repository.

But a recent earthquake, which did $1 million damage to department offices there, has cast doubt on the project.

Despite a proposed INEL environmental impact statement that will discuss the need for additional storage to accommodate increased shipment of spent fuel, the admiral says INEL already has plenty of storage space.

"Sufficient space is available in the existing ICPP water pit to store all naval fuel receipts until about the year 2025," he said.

The Navy has 120 submarines, nine cruisers and seven aircraft carriers powered by nuclear reactors.

The first was the submarine USS Nautilus, commissioned in 1955, whose reactor power plant was developed at INEL. INEL also houses one of eight reactor training facilities.

Modern nuclear propulsion reactors need to be refueled once every 12 to 15 years.

The admiral said the eight nuclear-powered ships are currently refueling. Another four are expected to begin refueling by next October. In addition four ships are being defueled before leaving service, and another 23 are expected to begin defueling by next October.

As a result, the Navy expects to send an average of 20 shipments per year over the next 10 years.

The nuclear-powered aircraft carrier USS Enterprise, which has eight reactors, has not been refueled since 1970. It is currently undergoing refueling at Newport News Shipbuilding in Virginia.

The number of shipments of spent fuel from the giant ship will increase the 10-year average over the next two years.

The spent fuel is loaded into shipping casks mounted on specially built railroad cars and sent to INEL.

Some shipyards have special water-filled basins for partial disassembly of the highly radioactive spent fuel modules. But the basins cannot be used for temporary storage, DeMars said.

"Any significant delay in shipping spent fuel to Idaho would quickly bring the refueling and defueling operations to a grinding halt, he said. It would soon prevent the Navy from sending its ships back to sea, he said.

State initiates 4-month probe into waste water record discrepancies at INEL

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — State officials monitoring environmental impacts of operations at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory have launched an investigation into large, unaccounted-for volumes of water on the government site.

The four-month inquiry will try to explain why records show the radioactive fuel reprocessing facility at INEL, pumping more water out of the Snake River Plain Aquifer than it reports disposing of and why nearly 300 times as much water is being pumped out of storage tanks for high-level radioactive liquid waste than could be naturally expected.

The aquifer is a major source of water for the Magic Valley.

INEL operations have always been a major concern of environmentalists and state officials because the installation sits atop the state's major source of fresh water.

Dave Humphrey, deputy director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said those question of where the water is going must be answered "before we can assess any environmental or health impacts and initiate any adjustments needed to correct the situation."

The discrepancies in water records were uncovered during a routine examination by the state's INEL Oversight Program team.

The special investigation will be conducted by a working committee of state officials and personnel from the Energy Department, the Geological Survey and two INEL contractors — EG&G Idaho Inc., the major site contractor, and Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Co., which runs the fuel reprocessing plant.

The oversight team found that between February 1990 and December 1990 millions of gallons more water was pumped from the aquifer than records show was disposed of at the plant. The discrepancy in June 1990 alone was 20 million gallons.

State Oversight Administrator Steve Hill said the concern is that there could be leaks in the water distribution system that may be creating perched bodies of water underground that could help contaminants move down into the aquifer.

At the tank farm, officials said only about 100 gallons of groundwater would be expected to leak into the underground concrete vaults holding the stainless steel tanks of radioactive liquids and have to be pumped out each year.

But the examination found that from December 1989 through August 1992, when less than 300 gallons should have accumulated, nearly 80,000 gallons was pumped out of the vaults.

And since 1988, the level of a perched body of water nearly 400 feet below ground and just 500 feet from the tank farm has risen nearly six feet despite the persisting drought.

Hill said the investigation should be completed by the end of March.

Jury selection continues for Stradley trial

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Finding 14 people who can set aside their emotions and look objectively at a 2-year-old girl's violent death can be difficult.

That task is more than half over for attorneys in the Donnell "Bud" Stradley murder case, who raised the number of qualified potential jurors to 21 Friday.

Stradley, 29, is charged with first-degree murder in the January death of Amanda Hostetter.

An autopsy showed she died of a blow to the abdomen that caused internal bleeding.

That autopsy also revealed past injuries to the little girl. Her body was covered with more than 50 bruises, and there was evidence of hair being pulled out and bones being broken.

Graphic evidence of her condition will be part of Stradley's trial — a part that many prospective jurors said they could not handle.

Twin Falls County Public Defender Mike Wood and Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter both have used a photograph of Amanda's bruised body, taken shortly after her death, to screen out prospective jurors who can't handle that graphic evidence.

Mayor Howard Allen was one of the jury prospects questioned Friday.

He said he was "taken aback that something like this could happen in our community."

Allen briefly looked at the photo given to him by Baxter. When she asked if he could set aside his sympathy for the girl and evaluate similar evidence rationally, Allen said that would be too much to ask.

"I think I'd fail that test," he said.

An earlier jury prospect — a mother with small children at home — declined an opportunity to look at the picture by saying she would be upset by the photo.

She and Allen are among the 31 people interviewed by Wood and Baxter so far who have been excused from sitting on the jury.

Once 34 potential jurors have been selected, each side will disqualify 10 from the list, leaving a 12-person jury and two alternates.

That probably won't happen until sometime Tuesday. Fifth District Judge James J. May told Baxter to have her first witness ready at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Stallings ponders future

The Times-News
and The Associated Press

REXBURG — Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings said he expects to return to Idaho next spring but may consider a position in the C.I.N.T.A.N. administration.

"I'm going to get my boy through his senior year in May, and then we'll probably be heading back to Idaho," said Stallings, who lost a bid for the U.S. Senate to Republican Dirk Kempthorne.

Stallings' son, Dan, will graduate from a Virginia high school in May.

The four-term lawmaker from Idaho's 2nd Congressional District said he has spoken with Clinton aides and may consider a job if one is offered.

"That's a possibility," Stallings said. "Obviously, we're going to look at what they have in mind. There's not a job offer at this point, but there has been some expression of interest."

Stallings was a member of the House Agriculture Committee for eight years, but he said there was no indication the U.S. Department of Agriculture would be the focus of any federal job opportunity.

He also said he will consider returning to his job as a history

Southwick receives most contributions in Lincoln County sheriff campaign

By Pat Voloshen
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County Sheriff Steve Southwick led the race in campaign contributions in his successful bid for re-election.

Southwick's contributions totaled $1,686, with expenditures amounting to $1,679.

In comparison, challenger Tim Swenson received a total of $1,030 and spent nearly as much.

In the District 3 county commissioners race, incumbent Jerry Nance in his successful bid for re-election reported $1,184 in contributions, with matching expenditures. Write-in challenger Samuel Harris had $520 in contributions and also matching expenditures.

Second District commissioners race Democratic incumbent Everett "Buck" Ward reported zero contributions and $861 in expenditures.

Republican challenger Mike Telford reported he collected no funds and spent nothing on his campaign in which he ousted Ward, an 18-year commissioner, from his seat.

Lincoln County Prosecuting Attorney Lavon Loyd reported he neither received nor spent money on his campaign. He was challenged by write-in candidate Jennifer Brown who also reported no expenditures and went on to win the election.

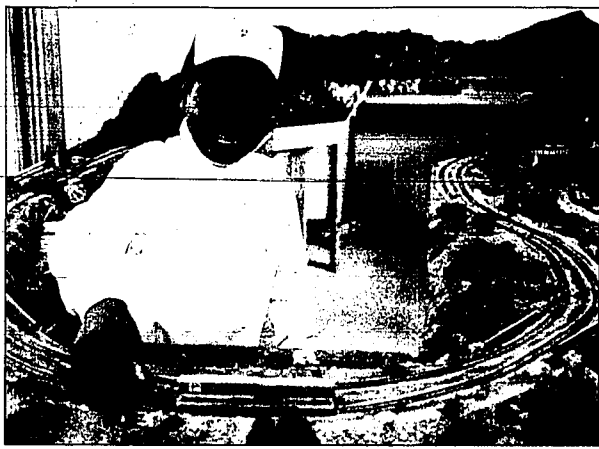

Southwick's contributors included: Gary and Melody Russell, $100; Verlon Southwick, $75; Twin Falls Body & Paint; Jim Thorpe, $150; H & A Land and Cattle, $250; James Whitaker, $100; Radio Service Co., $100; Mark Southwick, $103; Miriam Depew, $85; Wanlis Southwick, $50.

Swenson's contributors were: Melvin Swenson, $100; Elwood Werry, $100; Norma Hill, $100; Robert L. Morris, $225.

Nance's contributors were, Jerry Nance, $954, with $60 listed as non-monetary.

Harris contributors included Jane Lowman, $100; Johnny Urrutia, $100; Elaine Depew, $100; Louisa Harris, $145.

Marvin W. Mathiesen

TWIN FALLS — Marvin William Mathiesen, 78, of Twin Falls, died Thursday, Nov. 12, 1992, at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

He was born June 3, 1914, in Sherwood, Ore., the son of Peter and Sarena Katherine Carter Mathiesen. As a young man, he worked for Standard Oil Co. in Burley. On Nov. 17, 1935, he married Hilda Harstelder in Twin Falls and they farmed near Curry until 1976. Hilda preceded him in death in 1976. On Dec. 9, 1977, he married Helen Dohse in Filer, and they moved to Twin Falls.

Mr. Mathiesen enjoyed gardening and fishing and health prohibited him from going so he was a member of the Peace Lutheran Church in Filer.

Survivors include his wife, Helen Mathiesen of Twin Falls; one daughter, Jean Hodgson of Phoenix, Ariz.; two grandchildren, one stepdaughter, Margene Bauer of Pullman, Wash.; one stepson, Dale Dohse of Kimberly; six stepgrandchildren; and two step great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, two brothers and his first wife, Hilda.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Monday at the Peace Lutheran Church in Filer with Pastor Gary Benedit officiating. Entombment will follow at Sunset Memorial Park Mausoleum. Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. Sunday at White Mortuary in Twin Falls. The family suggests memorial contributions may be made to the Peace Lutheran Church, Stevens and Sixth Street, Filer, ID 83328, or to a charity of the donor's choice.

Idaho Falls makes concessions to encourage low-cost housing

IDaho FALLS (AP) — There's such a strong need for affordable housing in Idaho Falls that the city is making concessions on its usual fees and charges to help a new development.

Idaho Falls Mayor Tom Campbell said the city is making the concessions because of the desperate need for lower-cost homes.

"We're interested in getting some less-expensive houses built in Idaho Falls," Campbell said. "It's not only good but absolutely necessary."

With help from the city and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Homestead Construction and Rosewood Development are working on a subdivision west of Idaho Falls. The goal is homes that can sell for between $55,000 and $85,000.

Last year, new homes averaged about $90,000 in Idaho Falls, with the cheapest going for about $70,000. Builders and developers have had little incentive to build less expensive houses because they've had no trouble selling ones that cost $100,000 or more.

But with Idaho Falls' changing work force and the uncertain future of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, that could change.

"We want to prove to the city that just because it's an affordable housing project doesn't mean it will be raty or substandard," said Lee Gagner, president of Homestead Construction.

The key to building cheaper houses is cutting costs and that's where HUD comes in. Federal workers are helping city leaders and the builders find ways to trim construction expense, said Tom Evans, HUD's chief appraiser and construction analyst in Boise.

The city's concessions on the impact fees it usually charges developers will save about $33,000.

The subdivision will have 132 lots, about a third for two-bedroom houses starting around $55,000. There will be some attached houses, which are like duplexes but each section is owned separately. Some homes will sell for up to $85,000.

Construction should begin in May.

Five or six similar projects have been built successfully in Boise, Evans said. He's been trying to get something going in Idaho Falls for years.

"The Idaho Falls area needs housing, especially in the price range these folks are targeting," he said.

The demand for affordable housing in Idaho has increased during the last two years. Rental property is hard to find and most new houses are too expensive for first-time buyers.

WSU, Nalley's win $1 million grant to develop better tasting soldier food

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Mindful of Napoleon's maxim that an army marches on its stomach, food scientists are trying to improve the "meals-ready-to-eat" fed to U.S. soldiers.

Washington State University said Friday it will share a nearly $1 million Army grant with Tacoma-based Nalley's Fine Foods to develop more palatable fare for soldiers in the field.

Researchers believe the work could eventually revolutionize the commercial food industry. New food-sterilization techniques being tested in the research could make frozen and canned foods obsolete, scientists say.

Preliminary tests indicate food can be kept fresh tasting and nutritious for as long as a year without refrigeration. WSU scientist Gustavo Barbosa-Canova and Barry Swanson said.

Bacteria and other undesirable organisms in liquid food can be destroyed with pulses of high-voltage electricity rather than traditional heating methods, Swanson said.

The technique destroys bacteria without subjecting the food to high temperatures, which can dull flavor and decrease vitamin content, said Rich Meyer, a vice president for technical matters at Nalley's.

Using a set of electrodes about one centimeter across, WSU scientists pulsed electricity through rim-top sized portions of grape juice, yogurt and bouillon.

The electricity charges the cell walls of the food-borne microorganisms, magnetizing them with positive and negative poles. The magnetism breaks the cell walls and kills the organism, the scientists said.

Vitamins and minerals aren't destroyed because they lack cell walls, Meyer said.

If the process proves feasible on a large scale, electricity could be pulsed through food immediately after it is processed in the factory, Meyer said.

The research was made possible by new advances in producing extremely high voltages for very short durations.

Up to 25 kilovolts of electricity could be pulsed through food in about a millionth of a second, said Swanson, a professor of food sciences and nutrition.

The Army hopes the grant will lead to better tasting and more nutritional portable meals, said Patrick Dunne, a food engineering scientist for the Army's Research Development and Engineering Center in Natick, Mass.

The work could also allow soldiers to dine in the field on foods such as dairy products that can't currently be packed in MREs because they would spoil.

"It looks like it could lead to a real breakthrough in both the quality and variety of foods available," Dunne said.

The MREs, which replaced the military's tin-can C-rations beginning in 1980, are ready-made meals contained in plastic pouches. They have an average shelf life of five years, and are used mostly by the Army and Marine Corps.

In addition to attempting to validate the WSU findings, the scientists plan to buy or build equipment big enough to handle solid foods, Meyer said.

Researchers hope the technology can someday replace most frozen and canned foods.

"What we hope to get out of this is a restaurant-quality, shelf-stable food," Meyer said. "It could have quite an impact on frozen and canned foods."

WSU and Nalley's have worked jointly on food science projects for about 10 years.

Nalley's began considering the possibility of using electrical pulse technology to sterilize foods and approach WSU about two years ago for technical help, Swanson said.

Foodco — a partnership of Kraft General Foods, Maxwell Laboratories and Tetrapak — has received a U.S. Army contract for similar research.

Foodco, Nalley's and WSU could be beneficiaries if the grants lead to further research in industrial applications, Meyer said.

"If we are awarded the next contract, (the Army) will allow us shelf life testing this up," Meyer said. "It'll go from bench-top research to a pilot plant."

Hill Air Force Base may lose 1,000 workers

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Hill Air Force Base will have to lay off 1,000 workers by October next year if the base doesn't get more work soon, said Maj. Gen. Dale Thompson Jr.

The base's shrinking work load has not been matched by a reduction in the number of employees through attrition and hiring freeze, Thompson said Thursday at a WorkForce in Transition seminar.

The Ogden Air Logistics Center commander said if it were his decision alone, he would probably go ahead with the staff reductions. Employees must be notified 120 days in advance.

"Quite frankly, if we do have to have a reduction in force, it will be somewhere around 1,000 employees by Oct. 1 of next year," Thompson said.

The alternative is to bring more work to Hill, and the base has been trying to do that for the past two years.

The base is attempting to win a $10 million to $15 million contract to do landing gear repair work that is now performed by an outside company.

The base also is seeking contracts that include F-16 modification jobs, aircraft wheel repairs and Minuteman III computer work that is now done by other military services or companies.

One contract includes corrosion and paint repair work now being done by the Navy and another involves head-to-head competition with General Dynamics for F-16 work, Thompson said. General Dynamics manufactures the F-16s.

"Our intent at Hill is to be competitive to bid on any fighter aircraft work," he said.

But the Department of Defense's policy allowing bases such as Hill to bid for outside work has a down side. The base must also put 10 percent of its workload up for bid.

Military downsizing already has reduced the number of Hill civilian workers in 1990 and 1991 by 2,141. The number of military workers in that time increased by 105.

But this year, the push has been for military personnel decreases. From a total base work force of about 20,000 in 1989, the base is now down to about 17,000.

Marie Osmond moves libel suit to Utah court

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Entertainer Marie Osmond's $18 million libel suit against the Globe supermarket tabloid has been transferred from California to the federal court in Utah, over Osmond's protests.

The U.S. District Court in California sided with the Globe, which argued that Marie and her husband are Utah residents and that when the tabloid published a story about her it took the risk of being sued under Utah law, not California.

"Libel plaintiffs should not be permitted the luxury of suing in the climate they deem most favorable merely because the defendant happens to be a national publication," Globe attorneys said.

A federal judge in Utah recently dismissed the Globe from a lawsuit brought by Salt Lake businessman Gary Sheets.

Sheets said he was defamed in a 1989 Globe story about Osmond's financial losses in his defunct CFS Financial Corp.

Osmond, her husband and their son sued the Globe in Superior Court in Los Angeles in July for a story published a year earlier.

The story said the couple's adopted 1-year-old son Michael was the illegitimate offspring of Osmond's husband, Brian Blossit. Court documents say the Globe reporter who wrote the story got his information from a woman who attended an Osmond wedding.

"I don't want him to go through what I've went through," said Stallings referring to the texty transition between him and former GOP Rep. George Hansen, whom Stallings defeated in 1984.

Phone problems put substation on hold

By James Prichard
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — Plans for a new Rupert electrical substation have been grounded because a major Project Mutual Telephone Co. cable lies beneath the proposed substation site.

City Attorney Rick Bollor said Friday the city is awaiting a joint "interference study" from its engineering consultant and the phone company before making a decision with regard to the substation.

City officials recently announced they would build a new substation on a city-owned parcel along Scott Avenue, then solicited bids on the project.

But just prior to opening the bids, they learned a PMT trunk line servicing nearly all of south Rupert lies beneath the property.

A substation located within a quarter-mile of a trunk line could generate electrical interference during calls made over those lines, Bollor said. Awarding of the contract has been postponed until the interference study is completed.

CH2M Hill, a Boise consulting firm, and the telephone company are working together on the study. The two will determine if the trunk line must be moved or if the city must find another location for its substation.

The Walton Construction Co. of Heyburn submitted the lowest bid on the project, offering to install the substation for $78,197. (The other bidders included Caribou Construction Inc. of Jerome, $82,400; Anderson and Wood of Meridian, $96,266; and Western Line Builders of Wells, Nev., $125,930.)

Kerry Walton, office manager for Walton Construction, said the city should accept his company's low bid.

In addition, he said, the city should also agree to pay Walton Construction an "equitable adjustment" for the additional work necessitated by the underground trunk line.

Walton said he had been working on the trunk line problem "for the past 24 hours."

Bollor said he is unsure when the interference study would be completed.

Prosecutor wants to drop murder charge in old case

CALDWELL (AP) — Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris wants to drop a murder charge filed in a 13-year-old case against Barbara JoAnn Olson because she was granted immunity more than 10 years before she was charged.

Olson and her husband, William Howard Olson, were indicted by a Canyon County grand jury in April, 1991, for first-degree murder. The indictment alleged they paid others to kill Caldwell businessman Troy Vance Jr. on June 27, 1979.

Harris said he requested dismissal because a former prosecutor granted Mrs. Olson immunity in 1980. He also said Idaho law requires a third person to corroborate testimony by an accomplice implicating a defendant.

and he doesn't have that corroboration. The state contended that Howard Olson hired two men to kill Vance, his former business partner, and that his wife assisted in the crime. Jose "Al" Martinez and Robert Richard Jones were convicted of first-degree murder in separate 1990 trials and both were sentenced to life in prison.

The motion to dismiss the murder count against Mrs. Olson was filed before 2nd District Judge George Reinhardt III, Grangeville, who was assigned the case because local judges were disqualified.

Defense attorney Richard Eismann said he expected the charge against Howard Olson to be dismissed once he obtains an evidentiary hearing before Reinhardt.

Declo shooting incident officially ruled a suicide

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — A Sept. 30 shooting incident in Declo that left one man dead and a woman injured has officially been ruled a suicide.

Cassia County Coroner Paul Young announced the ruling Friday after receiving the results of the investigation from the Idaho Bureau of Investigations.

The shooting occurred during the early morning hours when Kenneth E. Redenius visited his ex-wife, Alicia R. Pereyra, in Declo.

According to Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal, the 51-year-old Redenius went into the bedroom in which Pereyra was sleeping and sat on the bed. Pereyra apparently woke up when Redenius, with a .44-caliber handgun to his head, fired the weapon.

The bullet traveled through his head, nicked the Pereyra's head, then caromed three times off a nearby wall and ceiling, said Crystal.

Pereyra, 37, when calling the sheriff's department at 3:50 a.m., didn't realize at first that she had been shot and thought the two had bumped heads, the deputies department said.

Pereyra was taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley where she was treated for the bullet wound.

Her daughter, sleeping on a couch in the living room, also didn't hear a shot.

Pereyra is a state probation and parole officer. Because she works with the sheriff's department, Crystal decided to have tests conducted by the Bureau of Investigations in order to obtain an outside opinion as to what happened during the shooting.

Tests performed on both Redenius' body and Pereyra checked for gunpowder burns on the skin.

Besides the tests, law officers discovered letters, written by Redenius that indicated he was distraught over his divorce with Pereyra, and that he was planning to commit suicide, Crystal said.

The couple had been married for about nine years before divorcing about three months prior to the shooting.

Cloud-seeding proposal receives mixed reviews

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — A cloud-seeding program to help eastern Idaho has been given a cool reception by Teton County officials.

A coalition of Idaho counties and irrigation interests has asked Teton County to take part in the operation, which is designed to increase mountain snowpack and snowpack runoff for crops next year.

Teton County Commissioner Sandy Shuptrine said the program is intended to help drought-stricken counties in eastern Idaho.

But she added that most of the cloud seeding would be aimed at putting snow in the northwestern Wyoming mountains.

Cloud seeding involves lacing potential storm systems with silver iodine to create a nucleus for raindrops.

Shuptrine said proponents hope to create light and moderate storms that would increase snowfall in the mountains by up to 20 percent.

Teton County's share for the program could range up to $35,000, she said.

Besides the money, Shuptrine flagged some other concerns of the county, including fears that the additional snowfall could increase their costs for snowplowing and levee maintenance along the Snake River. "From our point of view, it seems like maybe they should be the ones paying it," she said. "We're the ones who have to deal with the impacts."

However, experts have assured that only areas in Teton County above the major roads have been targeted, said John Kremer, the county's representative in a recent meeting on the proposal.

Kremer said the program also would not affect the ski areas unless they wanted to become involved in an effort to put ground-based cloud seeders.

Kremer suggested the county could use the program as a bargaining chip to create flows out of Jackson Lake Dam that will help Wyoming's trout fishery.

Currently, those flows mostly reflect the needs of Idaho irrigators downstream.

Deputy County Attorney Paul Vaughn said rejecting the idea would mean Idaho cannot tamper with Wyoming's snowfall by seeding clouds on the other side of the Teton.

The Teton County Commission will develop a formal position by their regular Tuesday meeting. Backers of the plan hope to start the program by Dec. 1 and continue through January.

Symms does not want center named for him

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho has decided not to ask the state Board of Education to name the school's fledgling transportation research center for retiring Sen. Steve Symms, at his request.

'He wants to make sure the center is a success, (but) he generally does not like to be noted as responsible for something.'

— Symms' spokesman David Pearson

Symms, a spokesman said, does not want to be seen as pushing a personal interest, more likely if his name is on the center.

Symms wants to help the university develop a public-private partnership to finance the transportation research center.

"He wants to make sure the center is a success," Pearson said, but "he generally does not like to be noted as responsible for something."

A year ago, Zinser and Symms announced the university would get a three-year, $8 million grant out of the $151 billion federal highway bill for the transportation research center.

School officials intend to use the money to help build a $13.6 million engineering-physics building, with construction to begin in two years.

The transportation research center was established last December, primarily to create new technology and transfer it to domestic companies.

The center already has received commitments from several companies to provide financing — including Boise-based Morrison Knudsen and EG&G Idaho Inc. at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory — and funded $700,000 in research contracts for the next five years.

Terminally ill man saw it wasn't too late to be born again

"While visiting a terminally ill patient, I was asked a simple, yet quite profound question: 'What is this born-again stuff I've heard about?'"

James P. O'Donnell
Clergy's corner

Deep within us all lies the spiritual being we call the soul. Often, we deny that need within us, we want to be in control, we want to take charge, not to trust in someone or something we can't see. He acknowledged his need to satisfy the thirst of his soul. He wanted to know, just as a man named Nicodemus almost 2,000 years ago wanted to know: How can a man get to heaven?

Admitting our need is the first step to being born again. When I asked "have you ever sinned?" he laughed and asked "Who hasn't?" Sin is, quite simply, anything displeasing to God.

My next question to him was more complicated. "If you knew what God wanted you to do and could do it, would you?" With barely any hesitation, he answered, "Why yes, of course." "But what is it God wants me to do?"

The Bible tells us in the Book of Romans there are essentially three things — we'll call them the A-B-C of being born again. The A is to admit we have sinned. He quickly agreed to that one. B stands for believe. Not just in Jesus as a historical figure but that Jesus came to pay the price for our gift from God — eternal life. He told me he has always believed in God but hadn't really seen Jesus in that light before. We then discussed Jesus, and I shared my own personal thoughts concerning Jesus.

Then we reached the C — call upon Jesus. I shared that the Bible tells us in Romans 10:10 that with our hearts we believe and by calling upon Jesus we are born again. "That's it?" Yes, I assured him, that is all there is to it. It is a gift freely given; we have only to accept. After carefully considering those things we shared, he invited Jesus into his heart and was born again.

My next visit saw him rapidly approaching death. "I'm ready," he told his family. "I'm ready." There was no longer any doubt or question in his heart. He assured his family he was ready.

At his funeral a few short days later, his words of faith, his being born again, brought relief and joy despite the grief of his loss. I am thankful that I was able to answer his question. "What is this born-again stuff I've heard about?" What a joy to experience being born again through Jesus Christ.

Black church makes history

St. Thomas African Episcopal persists for 200-plus years

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Absalom Jones and other blacks walked out of St. George's Methodist Episcopal Church in 1787 when a new policy required them to sit apart from whites in the church's balcony.

Jones founded St. Thomas African Episcopal Church, and the first black parish in the Episcopal Church just celebrated its bicentennial with the symbolic reinterment of his remains and a conference on the challenges facing black Episcopalians in the 1990s.

The church now has 800 members and is about to move to its fifth building.

"Saint Thomas is the mother church of all black Episcopalians," said its rector, the Rev. Jesse F. Anderson Jr. "We're trying to make people aware of the black presence in the church and their contributions."

The event comes at a time when the Episcopal Church as a whole has begun a nine-year effort to address institutional racism in church and society. About 5 percent of the denomination's 2.5 million members are black.

"The significance of this celebration is to celebrate how far we've come and how far we haven't," said the Rev. Canon Harold Lewis, national staff officer for black ministries. "There are many people who would say there's no problem. I think we have to raise people's consciousness."

Jones was ordained the first black Episcopal priest in 1804. Richard Allen, who walked out of St. George's with him, went on to found the African Methodist Episcopal Church, today one of the nation's largest predominantly black denominations.

According to its original charter, St. Thomas was established "with the purpose of advancing our friends in a true knowledge of God, of the religion and of the ways and means to restore our long lost race to the dignity of men and of Christians."

The acceptance into the Episcopal Church, the religious home then as now of some of society's most wealthy and powerful members, was not on equal terms. St. Thomas was barred for more than 70 years from voting or participating in the church's governing conventions.

But the parish founded an insurance company in 1796, a day school for youth in 1804 and a society for suppression of vice and immorality in 1809, according to parish records.

St. Thomas has been active in social outreach and the civil rights movement throughout its history, notably in efforts to break the color barrier at such traditionally white institutions as Girard College and Episcopal Academy, Anderson said.

Most importantly, it has been a center for black Episcopalians to "have their own legitimacy and feel good about it," he said.

Missionaries

Three Magic Valley area people have been called to serve missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder John T. Victor, son of David Victor of Burley and Farrelle Toome of Buhl, will serve for two years in the Mexico Mazatlan Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 2:15 p.m. Sunday at the Buhl 2nd Ward chapel on Fair Avenue and will enter the Mission Training Center in Provo, Utah, Wednesday. Victor graduated from Buhl High School in 1991 and is a four-year graduate of the Church Educational System Seminary program. During high school, he was a member of the Art Club and Future Farmers of America and represented the Buhl FFA Chapter on the dairy judging team at the state competition.

Victor

Elder Oren D. Lewis, grandson of Oren and Betty Covert of Hollister, will serve for two years in the Oregon Eugene Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 11:45 a.m. and will enter the MTC Wednesday. Sunday at the Hollister Ward chapel on Highway 93. An Eagle Scout, Lewis participated in the high school band and graduated from Filer High School in 1991. He is also a three-year graduate of the CES Seminary program.

Lewis

Sister S. Doyle Hellewell of Twin Falls will serve for 18 months in the England Bristol Family History Mission. She will speak in sacrament meeting at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls LDS 10th Ward Chapel on Park Avenue and will enter the MTC Monday.

The Times-News welcomes news of church missionaries. Send information to Ellen Thomason, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Council to expand ecumenical contacts

CLEVELAND (AP) — The National Council of Churches voted Friday to expand ecumenical contacts with Roman Catholic, Pentecostal and evangelical churches.

The council's policy-making General Board agreed to extend the term of its ecumenical committee for three years through 1995, add up to five new members and pursue further cooperative efforts with the other church groups. Representatives of the Roman Catholic, Pentecostal and evangelical churches should be invited to council leadership meetings and top officials of the council should seek participation in meetings of the other churches, the 270-member General Board said. The group wound up its annual meeting Friday.

The board represents 32 Protestant and Orthodox churches which belong to the council. The churches have a combined membership of more than 45 million.

The Rev. Syngman Rhee, a mission official of the Presbyterian Church and council president, said support for expanded ecumenical contacts reflected an interest of member churches.

"We know our limitations. Although we have 32 communions in the National Council of Churches, we know it is very important to have a very close relationship with Pentecostals, evangelicals and Catholics," Rhee said in an interview.

"We will be making much closer

'What we need to realize is there are differences there just as there are differences among us.'

— The Rev. Herbert Chilstrom, presiding bishop of the Evangelical Lutheran Church contact with them and inviting them to our meetings so we would have much closer relationships with them and a fuller understanding of each other," he said.

The Rev. Herbert W. Chilstrom, presiding bishop of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and head of the council's committee on ecumenism, said closer contacts would improve mutual understanding.

"What we need to realize is there are differences there just as there are differences among us," Chilstrom said. He said some people think members of other churches all have the same outlook.

"Especially among evangelicals and Pentecostals, there is variety in those groups," he said. "What we are discovering is we have some things in common."

Book tells of Magdalene's role in Jesus' life

When the Rev. John Shelby Spong, Episcopal bishop of Newark, N.J., writes a book, you can bet he knows that it will be a church-boiler but one that's thoughtful and aimed at the future.

Clark Morpheu
Faith today

For instance, in his latest book, "Horn of Woman: A Bishop Rethinks the Birth of Jesus" (HarperSanFrancisco, $17), Spong speculates that Jesus may have been married. And of course, Spong says, the woman he was married to was Mary Magdalene, whom the church has painted with a wide scarlet brush down through the centuries.

Spong, 61, says that such negative views of Mary Magdalene are pure nonsense. The only indications that Mary Magdalene even had problems, he says, are a short Gospel passage that says she was a sinner and another passage that says Jesus cast seven demons out of the woman.

But Spong, who was in Minneapolis and St. Paul recently to promote his new book, sees other positive indications—that Mary Magdalene could have been the wife of Jesus. For instance, when the Gospel writers list the contingent of women who followed Jesus and the disciples from town to town, Mary Magdalene is always mentioned first.

Given the many prohibitions on single Jewish women in those days, Spong says that the women following Jesus could have been mothers, wives or prostitutes. Spong thinks that Peter and some of the other disciples had wives who followed along.

What then was the role of Mary Magdalene? The Bible says the women "provided for them out of their means." And in every account Mary Magdalene is the central figure.

Even at the tomb after the crucifixion, the focus is on Mary Magdalene. She tells an angel inside the tomb that someone has taken away her "lord," which would have been a common reference to a husband in those days, Spong says.

And when she sees a mysterious figure outside the tomb who she believes is a gardener, she lays claim to the body of Jesus, which, of course, would be the duty of a man's wife.

Spong, a well-known and controversial liberal, talks about the narrative that describes the moment after the resurrection when Jesus sees Mary and greets her by name. Mary responds, "Rabboni," an intimate reference to Jesus' teaching role.

Apparently, Mary then moves toward Jesus to embrace him, and Jesus says, "Do not embrace me," or "Do not cling to me." In Orthodox Jewish circles, Spong says, women did not embrace men unless they were married — and then only in the privacy of their homes.

Spong contends that the wedding at Cana in Galilee was actually the wedding of Jesus and Mary Magdalene. The bishop notes that the only likely time that Jesus' mother and all of his friends would be at the same wedding was when Jesus himself got married.

And he wonders why Jesus' mother became so upset when the wine was running low. Probably because she was the hostess of her own son's wedding. Otherwise, as an ordinary guest at a wedding, her behavior would have been inappropriate.

—This is not frivolous speculation, Spong says, but serious scholarship that looks beyond the biblical text to see how the church over the centuries has suppressed women.

He concludes his chapter on the married Jesus with a charge that the real Mary Magdalene was excised from holy stories as a way of denying women their true sexual nature.

"By the turn of the first century, there was in the life of the Christian church a clear need to remove Mary Magdalene, the flesh-and-blood woman who was at Jesus' side in life and in death, and to replace her with a sexless woman, the virgin mother. The record of history is that this was accomplished by portraying Magdalene as a prostitute and thus assassinating her character," Spong writes.

During an interview, Spong said that early in the church's history, there were only two appropriate ways for a woman to live out her sexuality.

"You could be a virgin and join a nunnery," Spong says. "Or you could be a mother and only use sex for procreation."

But that view of human sexuality just doesn't wash with women of this day, he says, and that is one of the reasons the Christian church is facing enormous conflict.

"The church is declining. And we spend too much time trying to keep the insecure, secure," Spong says. "We have to start going beneath the words of the Bible, experience the reality and find a way to talk about it."

Church news

Filer Nazarenes plan revival meetings

FILER — The Filer Church of the Nazarene, located at Fifth and Yakima streets, has planned a series of special revival meetings with an emphasis on prayer for this week. Meetings are set for 7 p.m. daily Tuesday through Friday.

Margaret Bromley, missionary to Papua New Guinea, since 1961, will be the guest speaker Tuesday evening. She will tell of "God's answers to Prayers" in relation to her missionary work.

The Rev. Duane Vaughn will lead the services Wednesday through Friday. His topics include "A Right Concept of Prayer," "Establishing an Authority in Prayer" and "Having a Plan for Prayer." Vaughn's ministry has been concentrated on prayer for the past several years. He is currently the pastor at the Church of the Nazarene in Fallon, Nev.

According to a church spokesman, people are called to be God's servants in the community and the primary need for Christians to fulfill this call is prayer. Prayer cells (small groups of people who pray together) will be established to pray for the revival services.

The revival will conclude with a service of praise and thanksgiving at 10:45 a.m. Nov. 22. The public is invited to all services.

Couple presents Adventists' service

TWIN FALLS — Jacob and Mildred Mitteldeier will conduct the 11 a.m. service today at the Seventh-day Adventist Church, 131 Grandview Drive.

Jacob Mitteldeier has recently returned from a trip to Russia, where he was teaching leaders in that country about how the people there are self-supporting. "The Mitteldeier Method" is a well-recognized method around the world on how to grow and support oneself from the soil. Mitteldeier has conducted the program in areas such as the Middle East, Africa, India, Australia, Southeast Asia and the South Pacific and has authored several books on the subject.

According to Mitteldeier, the method not only helps people transform non-productive lands but also increases crop yield in productive areas.

Mitteldeier says he has the passion to feed hungry people around the world and claims he is a committed Christian who supports his ideas from the word of God.

Classes focus on changing bad habits

HEYBURN — Fred Hardinge, administrator at the Total Health Lifestyle Center in Yakima, Wash., and his wife, April, a registered nurse, will present three classes today at the Heyburn Seventh-day Adventist Church, two miles east of the Bailey Mill on Alfresco Road.

The Hardinges will speak on "Habits, You Can Change Them!" at 11 a.m., "Steps to Prevent Heart Attack and Cancer" at 2 p.m., and "Simple Home Treatments" at 3:30 p.m. The public is invited to the free programs.

For more information on the local event, call 678-4626. Interested persons unable to attend the local program may obtain information by calling 1-800-348-0120 or by writing to the Total Health Lifestyle Center, P.O. Box 5, Yakima, WA 98907.

Special women's service scheduled

TWIN FALLS — Betty Swank will be the guest speaker at a special service for women from 10 to 11:30 a.m. today at the Christian Center, 181 Morrison St. Baby-sitting will be provided. She will also minister during the regular worship service at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

John Swank will be leading the Men's Retreat in Sun Valley this weekend. His topic will be "The Making of a Man for God."

The Swanks have been home missionaries for the Assemblies of God Church to Tuen Challenge for the past 23 years. They directed the Phoenix Teen Challenge in Arizona for five years, developed the Teen Challenge of Mexico and directed it for 14 years. John has been counseling addicts and street people who come into the Phoenix Teen Challenge for the past year.

Bliss church slates potluck dinner

BLISS — The Bliss Community Church has planned a community potluck dinner for 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. today. Those attending are asked to bring a favorite dish to share.

The film, "Eye of the Storm," will be shown at 8 p.m. The film, a production by World Wide Pictures (the motion picture ministry of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association) is a dramatic story about a TV journalist, Tom Edwards (Jeff Conaway), and his producer, Patricia "Pete" Peterson (Connie Selleccia), who have returned from covering the Persian Gulf War and have been given the task of "keeping the ratings high."

Conflicts develop between co-workers and between Edwards and his family at home. Stories of soldiers in Operation Desert Storm and the support of Peterson help Edwards to experience peace in the midst of the thoms that engulf him.

"Eye of the Storm" is designed to help single parents and their children face what happens as careers are juggled with personal relationships.

The public is invited. For more information, call Pastor Paul Wager at 352-4632 or 352-4302.

Olympian speaks at Baptist service

BUHL — Allen James will be the guest speaker at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at First Baptist Church, 400 Ninth Ave. N. He will also speak at approximately 7 p.m. following the church's annual harvest dinner. He will be sharing experiences as an Olympics participant and other ministry opportunities he has had.

James is a member of the 1992 U.S. Olympic team and competes in the 20K (12.4-mile) race/walking event. He holds the record for best time by an American in 1992 and was the only American to qualify for the event in Barcelona, Spain, in 1992. James attended Western Washington University, where he was an All-American for the school four times.

He is the manager for the Track & Field team of Athletes in Action, a ministry of Campus Crusade for Christ International. As manager, he oversees more than 100 athletes nationwide.

He and his wife, Laura, have been on staff with Campus

Crusade for several years. His wife has been involved in ministry to the wives of the athletes for several years.

For more information, call Pastor Benson Kern at 352-4442.

Free Will Baptist Church sets revival

JEROME — The Free Will Baptist Church, 520 S. Cleveland, has planned a series of special revival services for this week. Wade Jegunian will be the guest speaker. Services are set for 6 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. The public is invited. For more information, call 324-8143.

Music therapist performs Monday

TWIN FALLS — Christian Encore Performance Center is sponsoring Ken Medema, live, at 7 p.m. Monday at the Twin Falls Reformed Church on the corner of Broadway, 1st and Grandview Drive. The concert is open to the public. A freewill offering will be taken to support Medema's ministry.

Medema began composing original material for his work as a music therapist in a psychiatric hospital and has been writing and performing his own music since that time. He currently resides in San Francisco, Calif., and is involved in a full-time performance schedule throughout North America and to Australia, Europe and Asia.

Blind since birth, Medema says he understands the importance of inclusivity and sensitivity to the needs of his listeners to dream and work for a world of peace.

Medema performs solo on stage with a grand piano and state-of-the-art synthesizers and an electronic drum machine. With these instruments, he creates a wide variety of musical styles, including blues, jazz, rock and pop.

In 1985, Medema launched a small independent publishing, publishing and performance bookers program called Briar Patch Music, which he named after his home in the legendary Old Remus town. Medema is currently based in booking Medema should contact Dave V. Moore, 3825 Meadowdale Lane SW, Grand Haven, Mich. 49418, phone 616-534-6571.

Aglow Fellowship meets Thursday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Women's Aglow Fellowship will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 1000 N. Main. Sison Sharp will speak about the life of a virtuous woman in Proverbs 31.

Know Your Religion lectures set Nov. 21

Know Your Religion lectures sponsored by the Educational System have been scheduled for Nov. 21 at 7 p.m. at the First Baptist Church, 400 Ninth Ave. N.

Charles Beckert, a faculty member at the Washington State College LDS Institute of Religion in Pullman, Wash., will speak Friday at the Twin Falls State Center, 421 Maurice St. N., and again Nov. 21 at the Holy Trinity Chapel on Broadway Road and Cedar Street. Beckert says relationships don't have to be such a struggle and uses his topic, "Making Any Marriage Work," to illustrate devising ways to enhance marriage relations, improve communication and the blessings that come from a strong marriage.

Beckert, professor of church history at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, will speak Friday at the Mountain Home State Center, 1189 N. English St., and again Nov. 21 at the Holy Trinity and the Lord's Anointed. It is a dramatic program that people's covenants/obligations to sustain the Church of Christ leaders, and the blessings that come from a strong marriage as they follow the leaders' counsel and teachings.

Douglas Buntley, associate professor of psychology at Idaho State University, will speak Friday at the Burley State Center, 200 Normal Ave., and again Nov. 21 at the Burley State Center, 36 N. 100 W. He will be speaking on "Strengthening Marriage and Family Relationships." Buntley says people's personal happiness is based on the quality of their family relations and that the proper perspective on the importance of marriage is family life.

Interested persons age 14 and older are invited. Registration is encouraged and can be obtained by calling 324-8143. The cost of the program is $20 per couple (two individuals) or $27 per family (members of the same household). Sessions are good at any Idaho area program.

Participants are encouraged to bring their own materials and to bring tape recorders, if available. Buntley does not allow recording of lectures. A handbook stress releases for women, dress code and dress shirts for men is required.

The purpose of the Know Your Religion program is to provide thought-provoking and informative lectures on religious subjects which are designed to supplement and strengthen the regular program of LDS Church. The presentations are intended to provide and strengthen testimonies of those who attend. All registrants must meet and maintain the standards of the LDS Church while in attendance at the programs.

Catholic students complete module

TWIN FALLS — The first six week learning module for junior and senior high school students at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church has been completed.

Religious Education Director Pat McNamara said students studied in groups of 10 at teachers' homes. The program is a new phase of religious education. This six week series is the first of four phases of the new curriculum. The second week "time out" period, students will participate in a community service project and have a celebration with their friends at the Howland home.

Twelve families have been selected by the Catholic Action Agency to receive a Thanksgiving basket of food and gifts. Each St. Elizabeth's parish priest will be presenting the second learning module is set to begin Dec. 1.

The Times-News welcomes news of church and religious activities. Send information to Ellen Thomson, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline for publication on the Saturday religious page is 5 p.m. Friday.

Evangelists carry message to Russia

By Dan Froomkin Orange County Register

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Just a few years ago, it would have been unthinkable.

Back then, bringing Bibles into the Soviet Union was a crime. Students in the state-run schools were taught there is no God, that people have no souls.

But one morning last week at the Anaheim Convention Center, a top Russian official spoke of the need for help in teaching the children of the former Soviet Union about Jesus Christ and the Bible.

And representatives of a joint venture of 60 evangelical Christian educational groups announced their plan to send a "Christian Peace Corps" into as many as 120,000 public schools there.

"Yes, we hear you, Russia," said Bruce Wilkinson, founder of an Atlanta-based Bible ministry. "And we'd like to come."

Aleksandr Asmolov, deputy minister of education for the Russian Federation, smiled gently as he spoke through an interpreter.

"It is a miracle that the Christianity of the United States is going to help its brothers in Russia," he said. "But isn't that the real essence of Christianity?"

The joint venture, called the CoMission, plans to send 12,000 people to the former Soviet Union over the next five years — laden with books, films and videos — to train public school teachers in Bible education and teach adults and children directly as well.

The first group of about 20 people, each of whom must pay his or her own way, left for Moscow and St. Petersburg last month. Their goal is to help the people of Russia — and, in time, the other former Soviet republics — regain their Christian heritage.

"The life of Jesus needs to be common knowledge throughout the (former) Soviet Union, like it used to be," Wilkinson said.

While expressing thanks, Asmolov also stressed that state-run schools will remain secular.

His country and the other republics are religiously diverse. As well as Christians, there are many Muslims, Jews and atheists.

will not run the risk of simply replacing one state-mandated religion — atheism — with another.

"We don't want mono-ideology, because mono-ideology often means absence of any individual thought," he said. "We are supposed to give a plurality of approaches."

But Asmolov said the region is suffering from a spiritual crisis that eclipses even its economic problems.

"For 75 years, we were in the desert of communism," he said. "With material and training from overseas, he said, the government can at least stop depriving its children of Christian knowledge."

Asmolov speculated that some education about Christianity and the Bible could take place in optional studies classes, some in optional classes at public school and some at independent centers.

The American educators noted that they may have better luck exposing public-school children to the Bible in Russia than in their own country. "It's very ironic," Wilkinson said.

In the two years since former President Mikhail Gorbachev declared religious freedom — one of the reforms that broke communism's grip on the former Soviet Union — the Russian Orthodox Church has slowly awakened.

And delegations of religious groups from the West have traveled to Russia to attract converts.

Spreading the word in uniquely American ways — sometimes through silver-haired preachers and born-again weight lifters — they have sparked some protest from a people whose native Orthodox Church is more similar to Catholicism steeped in Eastern ritual than to evangelical Protestantism.

"There is a questioning of why Christianity is being brought from the outside," said Paul Eshleman, an official of the Campus Crusade for Christ International and vice chairman of the new group.

But Eshleman, based in Laguna Niguel, Calif., said this project is different. "This is basic," he said. "This is foundational."

The goal, he said, is to reintroduce a region to Christianity — not convert it to a particular denomination.

Handbook translator: Catholics in for surprise

BOSTON (UPI) — The Roman Catholic Church's first new catechism in four centuries will surprise many Catholics, but both liberals and conservatives will find surprises, the translator said recently.

The Rev. Douglas Clark spent nine months finding the right words to portray the church's newer approach to old questions.

"The immoral section is always tricky," said Clark, a Greek priest who translated the document from French to English while working at St. John's Seminary in Boston.

"These issues were treated with reverence 400 years ago but they aren't anymore," he said. "People ask very blunt questions."

Pope John Paul II approved the work in June, but church officials would not reveal how it deals with issues such as abortion and the death penalty until it is made public next month.

The catechism, a handbook of questions and answers for teaching principles, offers no new doctrine but spells out the obligations of Catholics.

It was last revised in 1983 in response to Protestantism.

The overhaul began in 1980, when it was called by bishops for a uniform catechism in the forms of the Second Vatican Council in the 1960s. One legacy of the council was the 1983 celebration of Mass in the local vernacular instead of in Latin.

"While this won't hit people as hard as going to church and finding the Mass in a foreign language, I suppose both will be surprising," Clark, 43, was chosen over 10 other candidates after working with Cardinal Bernardini of the Boston archdiocese, who presided over a conference of bishops.

The work, originally written in English, will also be translated to German and Spanish.

Clark's work was reviewed by theologians that included British and American scholars. The work includes teachings on birth control, abortion and issues of medical morality that did not exist when it was last revised.

He said he expects conservatives to be troubled with its heavy use of traditional church practices, including St. John Damascene from the 8th century.

However, Megh Timothy Moran, the head of St. John's, who also worked to redraft the text, said, "It will be a challenge to more conservative Catholics."

As for the more liberal theologians, Clark said he will be surprised. "It's not as radical as many expect," Clark said. "They may be pleasantly surprised."

Town's churches cited for loud bells, chimes

POMPAÑO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Four churches were cited for loud bells and chimes after neighbors said they heard hymns in their dreams and had to turn up their televisions to hear the evening news.

"We'll roll with the punches, but it is something we didn't need before Christmas," Moyer said. The Rev. Dale Moyer, pastor of St. Martin in the Fields Episcopal Church, said First Presbyterian Church was the origin of the noise.

Code enforcement officer Ed Snyder responded with sound tests and citations for First Presbyterian, St. Martin in the Fields, Gabriel Catholic Church, and St. Stephen Lutheran Church. Hearings are set next week.

Sound checks are in the works for two more churches.

Pat Anderson, who lives 450 feet from First Presbyterian, said bells at noon, 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. daily had made her miserable for a year.

She said she has suffered from stress-related maladies since being laid off as an art director in October 1991.

"It was really getting to me," she said, adding she would awaken at night thinking she was hearing "Amazing Grace" and "O God, Amazing Soldiers."

The citations frustrated Moyer. "It's just annoying when an airport and complaining the planes are giving you too much noise," he said Friday.

"If we have to get representation and fight this particular city ordinance, then we will," Moyer said.

A hearing is set on the citations Wednesday before a special master. If the special master rules that the 85-decibel limit in the city ordinance has been violated, each church could face a fine of $250 a day for any more peaks.

Albert Flechter, attorney for First Presbyterian, has asked the city commission to exempt churches from the noise ordinance; no action has been taken on the request.

Bowe goes the distance

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Evander Holyfield said only a man with courage could take the heavyweight title from him. That's what he found in Riddick Bowe, a fighter whose heart had been questioned.

Bowe erased any doubts about his determination and displayed too much punching power for Holyfield as he became the heavyweight champion with a unanimous 12-round decision before a screaming crowd of about 18,000 on Friday night at the Thomas & Mack Center.

Holyfield couldn't match Bowe's power, but he certainly matched his courage. In fact, no fighter ever put on a more courageous display than the man they call the "Real Deal."

"I told you when the fight was over a lot of questions about my heart would be answered," said the new champion, who grew up on the streets of Brooklyn.

He then acknowledged a fellow Brooklynite by saying, "Mike, the best of luck. Thanks for the encouragement."

Mike Tyson, the imprisoned former champion, had said before the fight he was hoping Bowe would win. Tyson did not watch the fight, a prison spokesman said.

Bowe's future includes a defense against either Lennox Lewis or George Foreman. Both men were at ringside and Bowe leaned through the ropes and shook his right fist at Lewis, shouting, "I'll go right now, Lennox."

It was Lewis who raised doubts about Bowe's courage when the stopped Bowe in the super heavyweight gold medal match at the 1988 Olympics.

As for Holyfield's future, the battered 30-year-old ex-champion, asked if he wanted to fight again, said "Not really. I've had enough. I went out there and did what I could. Right now, how I feel, I don't want to see any gloves for a while."

Later at the post-fight press conference, Holyfield said, "I don't want a rematch. I think I'm finished."

A few moments after that, however, he said he wanted some time to think and then said he might consider a rematch after all.

The fight was a series of a toe-to-toe exchanges and both fighters' faces stood as badges to their courage and to their tough profession.

Bowe looked on the verge of stopping it in the 10th and 11th rounds but Holyfield, who went down in the 11th, fought back both times.

In the first minute of the 10th round, Holyfield was hurt by a right uppercut and then was battered around the ring for a full minute.

"In the 10th round, he was knocking me from pillar to post," Holyfield said. "But I thought I got him. He thought he got me."

Holyfield went down from a right to the side of the head early in the 11th round, but got up immediately and took a mandatory eight count. Once again, he fought back.

By this time, it was obvious to almost everyone in the building, except one, that a new champion would be crowned.

The dissenter was Holyfield.

"In the last round, I thought I could land a shot and take him out," said the former champion, who lost for the first time in 29 pro fights.

It was simply a case of a good big man beating a good little man. The 6-foot-5, 235-pound Bowe outweighed the 6-2½ Holyfield by 30 pounds.

Holyfield's critics had wondered ever since he won the title from Buster Douglas in 1990 whether he could handle a big, strong young man. On this Friday the 13th, he couldn't.

Judge Chuck Giampa favored the 25-year-old Bowe 115-112 while judges Jerry Roth and Dalby Shirley each favored the new champion 117-110.

The AP scored it 116-111.

"I take my hat off to Riddick Bowe," Holyfield said. "It's not that I fought a bad fight. He had more and he fought a better fight."

Bowe not only exhibited firepower, he showed poise in the heat of battle.

Some people wondered if he would, since his heart had been questioned since he was stopped in the second round by Lewis in the super heavyweight title fight in the 1988 Olympics. A tape of that fight shows that Bowe didn't quit but that the East German referee acted hastily in stopping that match.

Petty starts down for last race; Mast has pole

HAMPTON, Ga. — Rick Mast stole the thunder Friday from the Winston Cup championship contenders and retiring star Richard Petty by winning his first career pole with the first-ever 180 mph lap at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

The driver from Rockbridge Baths, Va., driving an Oldsmobile Cutlass, toured the 1.52-mile oval at 180.183, breaking the track record of 179.499 set by Rusty Wallace in November 1988.

Petty, who will end an illustrious 35-year driving career in Sunday's Hooters 500, failed to qualify among the top 20, winding up 36th at 175.318. He will have to either stand on that first-day lap or attempt to requalify for the 40-car field today in the final round of time trials.

Ex-Cardinal Smith entertains offers from at least 10 teams

ST. LOUIS — At least 10 teams have contacted Ozzie Smith, a free agent after 11 years as the Cardinals' shortstop. But all in all, he would rather go back to St. Louis. "If he had his way, he'd already be signed with the Cardinals and be out enjoying things with his family," Smith's agent, Debra Ehlmann, said Friday. "But that hasn't happened so now we're just letting the free-agent process work."

Smith and Ehlmann met Thursday with officials of the Houston Astros, who are said to have offered as two-year deal worth $5.5 million.

New York official blasts racing executives for lavish living

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York Racing Association executives were given cash bonuses and luxury cars even as the corporation's year-end profits for the state shrank to zero, state Comptroller Edward Regan said Friday.

Regan called the NYRA spending practices "unreasonable, excessive and inconsistent" with state laws that require it to operate economically.

Majors will leave Tennessee, saying administration pushes him out

The Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The Johnny Majors era at Tennessee is over.

In a sudden and complex reversal of fortune, Majors announced Friday that he is resigning as coach of Tennessee after this season.

"Since I have not been given the opportunity by the UT administration to remain as head football coach past this current season, I am, effective Dec. 31st, 1992, relinquishing all my duties connected with the University of Tennessee," Majors said in a brief but aggressive resignation statement.

Majors spoke shortly after the No. 23 Vols arrived for Saturday's game against Memphis State. He refused to answer reporters' questions unless they dealt with the game.

University president Joe Johnson said Tennessee will pay "between $500,000 and $600,000" to buy out the remaining two years of Majors' contract.

Majors added: "I still love football, and if there's an opportunity to coach elsewhere I certainly would consider it."

There was no immediate word on a successor.

Johnson and athletics director Doug Diekey negotiated the settlement with Majors after the school it would not renew his contract past the 1994 season.

Majors' statement addressed two complaints of disgruntled boosters: that he returned too quickly from heart bypass surgery this season, and that he was too

Wolverines take control at Region 18 tournament

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

REXBURG — Utah Valley smashed College of Southern Idaho and Ricks almost in straight sets Friday to move within a step of the national junior college volleyball playoff.

The Wolverines, regarded as the most athletically talented of the four-team field here, proved it rather conclusively as they wound up a 3-1 whipping of Ricks with a 15-0 shutout Friday morning. They followed up by defeating CSI 15-11, 15-6, 15-12.

Meanwhile Ricks rebounded to eliminate Snow College Friday and will advance to the 10 a.m. loser-out match with CSI. Only the champion advances to nationals.

The Eagles made pretty good runs at Utah Valley early and late but the net play of

'Against a talented team like that, you can't make the mistakes we did and survive.'

— Ben Stoud, CSI coach

Kristi Stratton and Annette Monsen plus some serious CSI mistakes put Utah Valley firmly in control.

The Eagles jumped ahead 11-7 in the first game and then missed three of four serves and had three bad serve receive errors to fall 15-11.

In the second game, six errant serves plus the net play of the Wolverines led the 15-6 win. The Wolverines appeared headed for a laugh in the third, jumping ahead 12-1. CSI managed to reduce that to 13-12 before Utah Valley served out.

"They had a lot of weapons and they had most of them firing tonight," said CSI Coach Ben Stoud. "Against a talented team like that, you can't make the mistakes we did and survive."

In the opening round, CSI never appeared to get into a fluid situation but managed to outlast Snow College in five games. CSI won 16-14, 15-10, 13-15, 6-15, 15-7.

CSI led only once in the opener until scoring the last three points to take the 16-14 win. Midway through the second game, CSI appeared to be hitting its stride when Jennifer Carn served seven straight winners, helping CIS into a 15-10 win.

Sugar Bowl teams stay unsettled

The Associated Press

The first pieces of college football's bowl picture could begin falling into place today except at New Orleans, where the proprietors of the Sugar Bowl have the whole jigsaw puzzle already put together.

Their solution has Miami winning the Big East Conference, finishing the regular season 11-0 and playing undefeated Southeast Conference champion Alabama in a No. 1 vs. No. 2 national championship showdown on New Year's Night.

It could all be premature, though.

The Hurricanes, who fell out of No. 1 when they won a game and then moved back on top the next week when they didn't play one, have pretty much of a walkover this week, playing hapless Temple (1-8) at home. Still ahead are the Hurricanes, however, are Syracuse (3-1) on the road next week, then a game at San Diego State against Heisman Trophy hopeful Marshall-Faulk.

No. 2 Alabama (9-0) plays at No. 16 Mississippi State (7-2) Saturday and the game offers a great opportunity for Jackie Sherrill's reconstructed program to make a significant statement. After that, the Tide also faces its traditional Thanksgiving Day showdown against Auburn, then the first-ever Southeastern Conference title game Dec. 5 at Birmingham.

Please see COLLEGE/B7

That momentum appeared to carry into the third game when the Eagles move ahead 4-0 and then 11-7. But just as quickly, Snow took over. The Badgers dominated the net and blocked everything CSI tried.

The fourth game appeared more lopsided when Snow broke away from a 6-6 tie to a 15-6 decision.

It was 4-4 in the decisive match as the Eagles fought through two bad serves and three out-of-bounds slams. The Eagles moved quickly away as Snow ran out of momentum. Liz Gilbert's spikes ended the 2-hour and 14-minute marathon.

"For a while it appeared like it was a matter of who wanted to lose it most," Stoud said. "I thought we showed signs of getting in stride in the second game, and even in the third game when we jumped out 4-0 — then came up with four bad serves."
