Promises may take time to fulfill

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Clinton and congressional leaders are reminding the American people that promises can be slow to come true, especially in Washington.

Their public show of unity for the television cameras Monday in Little Rock included no new announcements, no agreements, no breakthroughs as a result of their evening-long discussions the night before.

They did not, for example, say which of Clinton's campaign promises was at the top of the congressional agenda. Talk of a first 100 days that would take America's breath away was played down, high expectations tempered with a plea for patience.

Mostly, they pledged to roll up their sleeves and have at it in a friendly way. In the words of House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt: "Gridlock is over and cooperation and teamwork have begun."

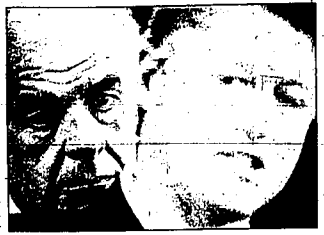

This is not insignificant, nor is it startling. "I think we liked each other pretty well before we had dinner last night," Clinton conceded.

What remains to be seen is how far that will go, and how fast. And the fights for the Clinton legislative train aren't all green yet.

Take, for example, Clinton's demand for the line-item veto, the power to erase pork-barrel items from the big spending bills that Congress passes every year. During his presidential campaign, the Arkansas governor said it was one of the tools he needed to control the federal deficit.

Reluctant as all lawmakers are to cede power to the executive branch, House Speaker Thomas Foley has offered a compromise — a way for Clinton to accomplish the same thing without Congress surrendering as much. Clinton said at Monday's news conference he found Foley's offer intriguing.

But Senate Majority Leader George

Government fights gay sailor ruling

LOS ANGELES — The government returned to court Monday to fight a judge's order that gave a gay sailor his job back.

District Judge Terry J. Hatter Jr., hearing a motion to reverse his temporary reinstatement order, pointed out that he could not act on the government's motion because of its appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

Hatter went through with the hearing after federal lawyers said they would withdraw the 9th Circuit appeal.

Mondays can be dangerous to your health

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Here's another reason to hate Mondays: The risk of a heart attack may be as much as 50 percent greater than on any other day.

Not surprisingly, though, this discovery only applies to people who work.

Researchers from Germany studied nearly 6,000 heart attacks to come to the conclusion that Mondays are even worse than people thought. "It must have something to do with going from being a couch potato to a working person. Maybe we should all call in sick on Monday," commented Dr. Robert Zoble of the University of South Florida.

The findings, though, have a serious side. For several years, researchers have been studying when heart attacks occur, because this can provide clues about precisely what triggers them. And that information will help doctors come up with new strategies to prevent heart attacks, the

The latest data were presented Monday at the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart Association.

Woman gets 3-5 years in death of Jerome girl

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

GOODING — Shirley Wersland will spend the next three years behind bars thinking about the tragic accident that killed a Jerome girl nearly 17 months ago and has tormented her ever since.

Wersland, a 53-year-old grandmother from Mountain Home, was sentenced Monday to at least three and as many as five years in prison for the June 1990 death of Jerome High School cheerleader Angela Jackson, 16.

Several of the 70-some people who crowded into the Gooding County courtroom were crying when the sentencing hearing began. Many more wept before it was over.

Wersland had been drinking when she veered into the wrong lane on the Clear Lakes Grade and collided with Jackson's car head-on.

"I just want to tell you from the bottom of my heart, I'm sorry," a sobbing Wersland told Jackson's parents, who were seated in the courtroom gallery. "I hope, someday you can forgive me."

She pleaded guilty in September to vehicular manslaughter, and Gooding County Prosecutor Phil Brown agreed to request a one-to-three-year sentence, with the court retaining jurisdiction for 120 days.

But 5th District Magistrate John Varin said Monday that, although Wersland "does not fit the mold of a criminal," the severity of the crime left him little room for mercy.

The sentence prompted sighs of relief and tearful hugs among dozens of Jackson's friends and family members who packed the courtroom.

Wersland's apology would have meant a lot more if it had come sooner, Julie Jackson said afterward.

During her own testimony, Jackson said reminders of her daughter are everywhere. "It's no easier today than the day it happened," she said. "We're the real victims in this case. We've got the life sentence and Angie got the death sentence. Nothing's going to change that."

Angela Jackson's father, Joe Torres, said

Andrus gives Ketchum City Council a quorum

The Times-News and The Associated Press

KETCHUM — Gov. Cecil Andrus appointed two new members to the Ketchum City Council on Monday, re-establishing a quorum in a governing body rocked by a recent recall election.

Caryn Crawford, a social services specialist at Wood River Medical Center, and Chip Fisher, the chairman of a Sun Valley-based company that supports and incubates new companies, were named to the council 13 days after Ketchum voters stripped three other council members of their jobs.

Under state law, the council will meet to fill the third vacancy.

That's likely to happen Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., the next regularly scheduled council meeting.

"I was surprised," Crawford said after hearing the news. "I did not apply for the job."

Fisher could not be reached for comment Monday evening.

"My objective in this matter was to appoint two people who would bring immediate credit to the City Council and who had played no part in the recall controversy," Andrus said. "I am satisfied that these two well-qualified people will help return order to the process of local government."

Andrus chose Crawford and Fisher from a list that included 20 to 30 names. Mayor Dan Hamilton said Monday.

Crawford said she knew Hamilton from his involvement with the Ballet Foundation, where Crawford teaches, but was not acquainted with recalled council members Pam Ritzen, Ed Simon and Larry Young, or the only holdover member, Guy Coles.

"I would think the biggest part of the job will be getting the council together as a cohesive group," she said.

"Compiling the list was a more difficult than I had anticipated," Hamilton said.

"The problem was trying to find a match in terms of people's qualifications to do the

Weather summary

Areas of valley fog and low clouds continued across southern Idaho, the National Weather Service said.

Surface high pressure over Idaho at midday was keeping low clouds and fog in the upper Snake, Magic and Treasure valleys. The dense fog dissipated in almost all areas.

In the Magic Valley, skies were generally clear most of the day, and temperatures were mild with light winds.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 57 degrees at Burley. Drive reported the coldest at 14 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the highest temperature was 85 degrees at Gila Bend and Yuma, Ariz. The lowest was 6 degrees at Watertown, N.Y.

Heavy snow falls around Great Lakes region

The Associated Press

Snow fell over parts of the Great Lakes region on Monday, after locally heavy "lake effect" snow fell downwind of lakes Erie and Ontario.

At midday, snow was falling over northern Minnesota, northern and eastern Wisconsin, southern Lower Michigan and parts of the lower Great Lakes.

Up to 4 inches of snow was reported along the Lake Superior shoreline of northeastern Minnesota and northwestern Wisconsin, with 3 inches overnight at Duluth, Minn.

Cold wind picking up moisture from the lower Great Lakes has produced heavy snow from northern Ohio across the northwestern corner of Pennsylvania into western and central New York state.

In western New York, near Lake Erie, 3 feet of snow had fallen since Thursday at the Kissing Bridge Ski Area in Colden, about 15 miles southeast of Buffalo, said marketing director Peter Calleri. The resort opened Sunday and had more than 1,000 skiers.

The town of Boston, N.Y., about 25 miles southeast of Buffalo, picked up about 24 inches Friday, Saturday and Sunday, the National Weather Service said.

And at the eastern end of Lake Ontario, lake-effect squalls produced steady snow in parts of New York's Oswego and Jefferson counties, including 17 feet at Fort Drum near Watertown, the weather service said.

Elsewhere, light rain and drizzle associated with an upper level weather system spread across the northern and central Pacific Coast. Light showers were scattered over southern California.

Strong southerly wind blew from the southern high plains in the lower Great Lakes region. Midday temperatures were above 60 degrees from the southern Plains and the lower Mississippi Valley to the lower Missouri Valley, with readings in the 70s over parts of Texas. But midday readings were still freezing from northern North Dakota to Upper Michigan and northern Wisconsin.

Frost and freeze warnings were posted for late Monday and early Tuesday for most of South Carolina.

Temperatures dipped below the freezing point late Sunday and early Monday over much of area from the Rockies across the upper half of the Mississippi Valley to the northern and central Atlantic Coast states.

Senators seek help in MIA quest

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — War stories of Vietnamese veterans who fought the Americans could provide important clues to help resolve the fate of the 2,265 U.S. servicemen missing and still unaccounted for in Indochina, Sen. John Kerry said Monday.

Kerry, leading a team of three senators from the Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs, asked Vietnamese officials if Pentagon researchers could attend the first meeting of a veterans' association to gather oral histories that might shed light on the missing.

"That would be a very historic beginning of a soldier-to-soldier process of answering questions," said Kerry, who served a tour of duty in 1968-69 as a navy officer on a gunboat in the Mekong Delta. "We are not looking for reprimand. We are looking for answers."

Vietnamese officials with the agency applauded the idea of collecting such oral histories, but said they would have to consult with other officials.

Kerry and Sens. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Hank Brown, R-Colo., on Monday began a three-day visit to Hanoi with a promise from Deputy Foreign Minister Le Mai to get the "clearest possible answers" to any questions they raised.

The senators' visit comes at a time of rising speculation that the United States will lift a trade embargo in force against Vietnam since the Communist regime in Hanoi took over the south in 1975.

America's policy has been that relations will not be normalized until Vietnam offers a full accounting of the missing servicemen.

Last month, it was disclosed that Vietnam recently allowed a large amount of documentation relating to the missing to be turned over to the American government. The action was regarded by U.S. officials as significant progress in settling the MIA problem.

from the witness stand that the depression caused by his daughter's death cost him his job and his home.

"I cannot forgive you," he said to Wersland. "The only one who can is Angie. Unfortunately she's not here."

"Somebody you'll meet her," Torres continued. "Because of the way Angie is - or was - she probably will forgive you. But I can't."

Ken Wersland said his wife also received scars, both mental and physical, from the accident. She was in the hospital for two weeks after the accident, and suffered broken bones in her face and broken ribs, pelvis and an ankle.

It was three days after the accident before she was conscious enough to hear the news that Angela Jackson had died.

"He's welled up in her eyes, and she closed her eyes and fell silent for a long time, Ken Wersland recalled.

"She said, 'Why couldn't it have been me?'" he said. "I didn't know what to say to light."

Since that day, Wersland said his wife has been changed from a happy, outgoing person to someone who is melancholy and depressed.

"She tries to put on being the same of gal, but she isn't," he said.

Shirley Wersland was clearly upset with Varin's sentence, her eyes red with tears as she left the courtroom with her husband and defense attorney Bill Hofffield.

She was not available for comment, but Hofffield said both Werslands were "very upset."

Wersland has no prior criminal record, and an alcohol evaluation showed she is not an alcoholic, Hofffield said.

She told Varin she has not touched alcohol since the accident, and only began driving again less than two months ago.

County charges officers in fatal beating of motorist

Utah man stabbed

DETROIT (AP) — Two police officers were charged Monday with murder and one with manslaughter in the beating death of a black motorist in a case that drew parallels with the Rodney King confrontation in Los Angeles.

A fourth officer was charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm. Three other officers who also had been suspended after the Nov. 5 beating of Malice Green were not charged.

Green, 35, died of head injuries after being beaten on an inner-city street near a suspected drug house.

"I feel justice is done. ... I think they handled it very well," said the victim's father, Jessie Green Jr. He had urged calm in the days after his son's death.

"He's dead, and any charges aren't going to bring him back. I got to live on."

Three of the officers charged, including the two charged with murder, are white. The one charged with manslaughter is black.

motorist drew parallels to the videotaped beating of King and the rioting that followed the acquittal of officers in that case, NAACP officials have said the Detroit case was different. They credited quick action by Police Chief Stanley Knox in suspending the officers allegedly involved. And Mayor Coleman Young publicly denounced the beating. Knox and Young are black.

Green

Knox has said he did not believe the beating was racially motivated, and Wayne County Prosecutor John D. O'Hair said Monday no racial epithets were used during shouting that witnesses said was going on during the beating.

But, "what was in their minds is hard to tell," he said. Knox had suspended seven officers Nov. 6, a day after Green's death. O'Hair said there was not enough evidence to charge the three other officers.

Those officers remain on indefinite suspension, police Sgt. Christopher Buck said Monday. Jack Gravely, NAACP national director of special projects, said quick action by Detroit officials helped defuse the tension.

"What is different in Detroit is the leadership," Gravely said.

"When we compare what happened in Detroit with what happened on the other coast, it does make a difference. Without it, this city probably would still be burning at its walls today."

While the four officers were being arraigned, about a dozen people demonstrated at the site of the beating.

The Rev. Edward Collins of God's Word Tabernacle said he thinks the charges are too lenient. But he urged calm. "We're not looking for violence," he told the demonstrators. "We're not burning out businesses. We're not burning our stores."

O'Hair refused to give details of the beating. Witnesses have said it occurred after Green and police argued when he dropped off a passenger near the suspected drug house, and that Green refused to open his clenched hand.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A man who suffered stab wounds in a fight Sunday night told relatives he was fine, fell asleep on the floor and died. Salt Lake police officers said Melvin Brown, 25 or 26, was staying with relatives in an apartment complex on Redwood Road, the scene of the stabbing.

Clinton touts Cabinet of diverse opinions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Clinton promised a Cabinet of diversity on Monday, even if it means having a secretary of defense who opposes his pledge to end the ban on homosexuals in the military.

"One of the things that has gotten presidents in trouble in the past, big time, is having people around them who were afraid to disagree with them, even in private," Clinton said at a news conference in Little Rock, Ark.

He had been asked about Sen. Sam Nunn's cool response to his proposal to lift the military's ban on homosexuality.

Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, ranks near the top of nearly every gauge list as a possible secretary of defense for Clinton.

Without giving out any information on Cabinet choices, the Arkansas governor said: "It doesn't preclude consideration of him for any position as far as I'm concerned."

"I don't expect my friends or supporters to agree with me on every issue," he added.

Nunn said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" on Sunday that he favors the present policy and that Clinton should "proceed very cautiously" with any changes.

Clinton reiterated his support for ending the ban but said he's set no timetable. "We know there have always been gays in the military," he said. "The issue is whether they can be in the military without lying about it."

He said the change in policy would be accompanied by a strict code of conduct to deal with inappropriate sexual behavior.

On the larger issue of nominating people who don't agree with him, Clinton said:

"I do not think that I should consider for my Cabinet only those persons who are on record as having publicly agreed with everything I've ever said in this presidential campaign."

Nunn will stand by what he said over the weekend, said his spokesman, Scott Williams. As to Clinton's comments, "The governor's remarks were fine."

Williams said. He said Nunn was on the road and unavailable for comment.

Clinton has indicated before that he will make diverse appointments.

For instance, he said during the campaign that New York Gov. Mario Cuomo was the kind of person he would consider for the Supreme Court — even though Cuomo opposes the death penalty while Clinton supports it.

Clinton says wife sat in on high-level gathering

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Hillary Clinton took part in her husband's three-hour dinner session with congressional Democrats and "knew more than we did about some things," Bill Clinton said Monday.

The president-elect offered the observation when asked at a news conference if his wife was at the table for Sunday night's dinner meeting.

"She was. She stayed the whole time. Stayed the whole time. Talked a lot," Clinton said. "She knew more than we did about some things."

He swung his arm in the direction of congressional leaders who dined with the Clintons. "I think they would agree with that," he said.

To those who have watched the Clintons operate in Arkansas, the question was unnecessary. Hillary Clinton is always at the table. And she just ate.

The 44-year-old lawyer is Clinton's closest adviser on political matters and an accomplished lobbyist. She headed a task force that developed Arkansas' landmark education standards, played a key role in his gubernatorial campaigns and presidential race and championed children's issues.

Aides say privately that Mrs. Clinton is a force again during the transition planning. One aide close to Clinton said the president-elect's wife suggested that he make a brief speech the day after the election to reassure foreign leaders and financial markets. Mrs. Clinton also reportedly suggested that her husband give campaign manager Mickey Kantor a lesser role in the transition team.

The speech was made. Kantor is no longer a major force.

Spokeswoman Lisa Caputo said of Hillary Clinton: "Last night, Mrs. Clinton was a hostess to a dinner for the president-elect and congressional leaders. Beyond that, the conversations were confidential and I can't comment on what her role was."

Ex-Senate worker pleads guilty

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former Senate sergeant-at-arms, Henry K. Giugni, has agreed to plead guilty to a misdemeanor charge that he violated conflict-of-interest law as a Senate official, the U.S. attorney's office said Monday.

Giugni accepted a round-trip, Washington-Honolulu ticket from American Telephone and Telegraph Co. in 1988 — three weeks after he requested installation of an AT&T telephone system for the Capitol Police, according to a misdemeanor count filed by prosecutors.

Papers filed in U.S. District Court by the prosecutors said Giugni has agreed to plead guilty to the charge, which carries a maximum penalty of one year in prison and a $100,000 fine. Giugni's attorneys, Joseph DiGenova and Victoria Toensing, said their client was charged under a section of the law reserved for "non-willful" violations — cases in which a criminal act occurs but there is no proof of willfulness on the defendant's part to commit a crime.

Advocate decries 'most dangerous' toys

BOSTON (AP) — The Super Soaker 100, a high-powered water gun, and soft plastic Creative Blocks made a product-liability lawyer's annual list of the nation's 10 most dangerous toys.

The water gun, made by Larami Corp., could cause eye or face injuries, Edward M. Swartz said at a news conference Monday. The guns were in the news earlier this year because some youngsters loaded them with irritating chemicals.

Fisher Price Inc., the nation's fourth-largest toy maker, had two products on the list: Creative Blocks and the Puffalump Snuggle Light, a night light for cribs.

Swartz said wooden dowels that come with the blocks are a choking hazard and the night light can burn an infant if its batteries leak.

Fisher Price spokesman Jack Martin said the company has never had a complaint about the blocks or the night light.

Makers of the other toys listed couldn't immediately be reached for comment.

Also on the list:

- Moon Shoes, molded plastic shoes strapped to a child's feet to create a trampoline effect. They are marketed by the Nickelodeon TV network. Swartz said the product could cause head injuries and bone fractures.

- The Terminator 2 Power Arm by Kenner. The figure has a removable left arm that can be replaced by a spike, claw or missile launcher.

Consumer advocate, author and attorney Edward Swartz displays his annual 'Top Worst Toys' for the upcoming holiday season Monday in Boston, including a high-powered water gun.

- The Captain Hook Tri-Hook, a hard plastic cuff with a plastic hook, dagger and saw attached. It is made by Mattel.

- The Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer doll made by Applause Inc. Swartz said a child could choke on a bell tied to the doll's neck.

- A surfboard-riding troll doll with spiked neon hair. Swartz said the pointy edges could cause puncture wounds and eye injuries. The doll is made by Russ Berrie and Co.

- The Smart Kids I Can Drive Car, a molded plastic car for toddlers with a removable steering column Swartz said could cause injury. It's made by DreamWorks Inc.

- The Busy Boy Tool Chest by Ohio Art. It's a metal tool box with four soft plastic toys and one wood-handled saw that Swartz said could cause cuts or bruises.

Clinton aide leaves law firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of President-elect Clinton's transition team, attorney Vernon Jordan, said Monday he is taking a leave of absence from his Washington law firm and from all his corporate directorships to avoid any potential conflict of interest.

Jordan is best known as the former head of the Urban League. But in recent years the civil rights leader has become an influential lawyer whose clients include major corporations. He also sits on the boards of over a dozen major companies.

"I am on leave from my law firm. I'm on leave from the boards of directors. I am not getting paid. I don't know what else I'm supposed to do," Jordan told CNN.

"I thought it was a good gesture," Clinton told reporters in Little Rock, Ark.

TB strains hit victims of AIDS

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — New strains of tuberculosis attacking AIDS victims can kill in a matter of weeks, and "one report in the field" suggested Monday that people refusing TB treatment can be quarantined.

Tuberculosis is easily spread — often through a sneeze or a cough — and until recently has been easily cured with antibiotics.

Scientists attending the opening of the World Congress on Tuberculosis worried, though, about new strains that resist traditional drug therapy and the swiftness with which the disease can kill people already infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. "The return of this old scourge has created considerable anxiety, particularly in those health professionals who have not seen it before and in the general public," Dr. David Rogers told the hundreds of scientists. "There is no question that we have a large problem on our hands."

As many as 15 million Americans are infected with tuberculosis but in almost all the disease lies dormant, held in check by the body's immune system.

If the immune system is weakened, as it is in a person carrying the HIV virus, sickness can develop either from a long-held tuberculosis infection or from one recently acquired. Among such people, the disease can be fatal in a matter of weeks.

"Estimates of the chances of HIV-positive individuals acquiring or reactivating tuberculosis run from sixfold to 500-fold that of HIV-negative persons," said Rogers, a professor of medicine at Cornell University and the vice chairman of the National Commission on AIDS.

Rogers said better screening methods are needed to detect tuberculosis, along with developing inexpensive drugs to fight the more recent strains.

U.S. wins sea fight's 1st round

Knight-Ridder News Service

In just over 48 hours, Nov. 13 to 15, 1942, two battleships, three cruisers, nine destroyers and seven transports were sunk around Guadalcanal as the U.S. Navy made an all-out effort to stop the "Tokyo Express."

There were two night surface combats during this period, the only two during the Solomons campaign to involve battleships. During the day, aircraft from both sides bombed the warships as they moved to and from the area and finished off those that had been damaged in the fighting.

American code-breakers had known for two weeks that Nov. 14 had been chosen for a major Japanese push. Thus the escorts provided for the reinforcement convoy that arrived at Guadalcanal on Nov. 12 stayed to meet the impending threat.

The U.S. force consisted of the heavy cruisers, San Francisco and Portland, the light cruisers Atlanta, Helena and Juncago and eight destroyers from destroyer divisions 10 and 12.

Though Rear Adm. Norman Scott, the victor at Cape Esperance, was present in Atlanta, he was junior in command to Rear Adm. Daniel Callaghan, who had no night fighting experience. Only three of the American warships had SG radars, and they were placed fourth, eighth and 13th in a single column formation that put to sea the night of Nov. 12.

Thus the supposed U.S. advantage over the Japanese, who lacked radar, proved to be limited in practice. The fleets sailed right into each other in the dark and slugged it out at point-blank range. The battle lasted only 32 minutes, from 1:48 a.m. to 2:20 a.m. on Friday the 13th.

The Japanese sent two battleships, Hiei and Kirishima, each armed with eight 14-inch main guns and 14 6-inch secondary guns. The two U.S. heavy cruisers carried 8-inch guns and the light cruisers and destroyers 6-inch and 5-inch guns. The Japanese also had one light cruiser and 11 destroyers, whose most potent weapons were their "Long Lance" torpedoes with a 1,000-lb. warhead.

The battleships had planned to blast Henderson Field off the map with their heavy guns. Finding the U.S. warships was a surprise.

The fleet formations became entangled and confused. Some U.S. destroyers got within 150 yards of Hiei, so close their torpedoes did not have time to arm before hitting. They were torn apart by closing-in fire.

Destroyers Barton, Cushing, Laffey and Monssen were lost. Light cruiser Atlanta was blasted by "friendly fire" as well as by Japanese guns and sank the next afternoon. Juncago took a torpedo Limping away the next day. Japanese submarine I-26 blew her apart. Only nine of 700 crewmen survived.

Both U.S. heavy cruisers were badly damaged. Portland had to be towed to Australia. San Francisco and destroyer Aaron Ward sailed to California for repairs. Adms. Callaghan and Scott were both killed.

The Japanese lost two destroyers and the Hiei, which had been the main target of the entire American force. Dawn found the enemy battleship drifting and on fire. Dive and torpedo bombers from Henderson Field finally put her under.

Though the loss of a battleship shook the Japanese high command, they felt the heavy American losses had made further resistance by the U.S. Navy impossible. They were wrong.

Zion park sets mark for early fall visitors

ZION NATIONAL PARK, Utah (AP) — Zion National Park officials said the park has set new visitation records for September and October. Superintendent Donald A. Falvey said 370,964 visitors flocked to the park in September, up 18 percent over the same period last year. In October, the park hosted 255,373 visitors, up 9 percent over October 1991.

So far this year, nearly 2.3 million people have visited the majestic red rock canyons and spires in the most popular of Utah's five national parks.

Recycling fight goes to cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court handed cities and counties a victory and environmentalists a setback Monday by setting aside a ruling that had threatened to close garbage-recycling plants run by local governments.

The justices told a federal appeals court to restate its ruling that ash produced by such plants is hazardous waste and requires costly methods of storage and disposal.

Chicago officials had sought the high court's intervention, arguing that the ash should be classified as non-hazardous.

Chicago's appeal was supported by the National League of Cities and the National Association of Counties. The groups said requiring cities and counties to treat ash as hazardous could force the closing of some recycling plants.

Asked for its views, the Bush administration urged the justices to send the controversy back to the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for further study.

Government lawyers said the appeals court should take into account the Environmental Protection Agency's recent determination that the ash is exempt from hazardous-waste regulation.

That's what Monday's high court order told the appeals court to do.

In other action, the court:
• Let Missouri limit the amount of money paid to victims of medical malpractice.

The justices previously had left intact similar laws in California and Idaho that limit medical malpractice awards. Many states have tried to hold down insurance costs by limiting damage awards in medical cases and other personal injury lawsuits.

• Agreed to consider reinstating a $1.8 billion award won, and then lost, by Liggett Group Inc. against a competing cigarette manufacturer.

• Ruled unanimously that the Church of Scientology may continue trying in a lawsuit filed in Los Angeles, to force the federal government to return documents and tape recordings obtained in a tax-fraud investigation.

• Refused to reinstate a California law that denies some veteran benefits to men and women who did not fight in the state when they joined the military.

• Rejected the free-speech challenge of a Ku Klux Klan leader to a Kentucky law that bans pedestrians from handing out literature to passing motorists.

• Cleared the way for a tax-fraud trial for the Rev. Al Sharpton, a flamboyant civil-rights activist who says he already has been found innocent of similar charges.

In the garbage-recycling case, the 7th Circuit court ruled last year that Chicago's Northwest Waste-to-Energy Facility no longer could ship ash to a landfill in Three Oaks, Mich. The landfill is not equipped to handle hazardous material.

The Chicago incinerator burns up as much as 250 truckloads of garbage each day. That yields up to 140,000 tons of ash each year.

The Environmental Defense Fund and Citizens for a Better Environment had sued the city, accusing it of violating the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

The environmental groups said samples of ash from the Chicago incinerator contained dangerous amounts of lead and cadmium, and should be disposed of with extra care.

The federal law requires methods of disposal for hazardous waste that can cost nearly 10 times as much as ridding of non-hazardous waste.

Chicago officials estimated it would cost more than $20 million a year to dispose of the ash if it is classified hazardous.

The 7th Circuit court said it was confronted with a confusing statute and a "waffling" EPA unsure how to apply the law.

But the appeals court said the chemical and physical composition of ash meets the law's definition of hazardous materials "that pose a danger to human health and the environment."

Haze plague is back in northwest Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — 'Tis the season for haze along the Wasatch Front and the National Weather Service said it probably won't leave anytime soon.

Visibility at the Salt Lake International Airport hovered around four miles Sunday night and early Monday but dropped to 2 1/2 miles by 7 a.m.

Dave Sanders, lead forecaster, said a storm system expected Thursday might help clear out some of the gunk, but won't leave any moisture.

Iraqi Kurds face grim winter

SAYID SADIQ, Iraq (AP) — Cold rain heralds the start of a winter in northern Iraq — and new suffering for 3.5 million Kurds trying to sustain their de facto state.

In December, the first snow could block roads and leave them without food and fuel.

U.N. agencies and Western governments are scrambling to provide relief.

But in the Kurdish town of Sayid Sadiq, about 35 miles southeast of Sulaymaniyah, there is a sense of impending disaster.

"If you don't give us a hand, we die this winter," said Hussein Abdurrahman, a middle-aged Kurd who has lost a leg to a land mine.

His two daughters were mixing mud with straw to smear on a reed scaffolding and build a shelter for the family of nine.

The settlement was one of about 4,000 Kurdish communities damaged or destroyed by Saddam Hussein's forces. Hastily reconstructed with U.N. assistance before last winter, the town of 30,000 people is still surrounded by thousands of tents.

Abdurrahman's small son was busy hawking Iranian kerosene on the roadside. The family set up this "business" by selling remaining belongings — including vital blankets.

"We have no fuel to cook," Abdurrahman said in an interview earlier this month. "Well, nothing to cook either," he added, causing the circle of onlookers to burst into laughter.

The Baghdad government has cut off the already limited supplies of food and fuel to the north, causing prices to skyrocket.

Turkish trucks, engaged in an illegal trade of cheap Iraqi diesel, Nazonin Muhammad sells wood her husband brings from the mountains near the village of Kamsok. Kurds are stripping the mountains bare for firewood during the winter.

were hauling supplies from Turkey. But Turkish Kurdish rebels, angered by the Iraqi Kurds' attempts to move them away from their sanctuaries, block the traffic. Iranian kerosene is sold in Sayid

Sadiq for 100 times its cost before the Iraqi blockade. Unable to pay, people look for substitutes.

Cars and old women carrying loads of wood fill the streets, and the hills are becoming stripped.

"If it goes like this, Kurdistan will become a desert in a few years," said Salah Hafid, the Kurdish finance minister.

To cut the wood, villagers often pay a heavy price in limbs lost to millions of mines planted on the mountains by the Iraqi troops.

An Oct. 22 accord between the United Nations and the Iraqi government gave the green light to a crash relief program, but the needs keep increasing.

Relief officials say the villagers have some survival skills, but they fear for the residents of towns, many of whom have already sold virtually everything they own.

Muhammad Hadi, an official of the World Food Program last month said 33,000 tons of food would be distributed to 750,000 Kurds from December through March.

Last week, the WFP announced a stepped-up program to benefit 450,000 more people in central and southern Iraq.

It said 49,000 tons of food worth $22 million, would be distributed. Shipment of the first 15,000 tons was to start this week.

The U.S. Congress has appropriated $43 million for relief, and the European Community has allocated $20 million.

In Ankara, Iraqi Kurdish representatives said they were negotiating with hauling companies to hire 300 trucks for aid deliveries.

But U.N. officials were worried about the passage through southeast Turkey, where separatist Turkish Kurdish rebels torched several trucks last month.

France, Britain spar over subsidies

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Two days before European and American negotiators try to avert a trade war, France quarreled with Britain on Monday over a deal with the United States that reportedly would further cut farm subsidies.

But after three hours of meetings, the agriculture ministers of the European Community urged their negotiators to "go out and make a success" of the EC-U.S. trade talks scheduled for Wednesday in Washington.

British Agriculture Minister John Gummer said the 12 farm ministers called for resolution "as rapidly as possible" with the United States.

The United States claims EC subsidies cost American farmers more than $1 billion and wants deep subsidy cuts. France, the EC's biggest farm producer, does not want the bloc to yield to the American demands.

Washington has threatened to impose $300 million in punitive tariffs on French white wines and other EC products if no deal is reached by Dec. 5. That has raised fears of a trade war that could further weaken the economies on both sides of the Atlantic.

Earlier Monday, French

diplomats released a document they said showed EC negotiators would go beyond agreed-upon EC subsidy cuts and let chunks of farm land be idled. They said that was unacceptable to the bloc's 9 million farmers.

But later, diplomats said French Agriculture Minister Jean-Pierre Soisson was isolated in his arguments. "Nobody said, 'Yes, I agree with the French figures,'" said David Curry, Britain's agriculture minister.

In Paris, Dominique Strauss-Kahn, France's foreign trade minister, said, "France doesn't want French farmers who have already suffered from the (EC's) reform to suffer even more."

If a deal is struck with Washington that goes beyond the EC reform package, he said, "those who push us to sign (the accord) will have to bear the consequences."

The French claims raised new tensions among the EC nations as their chief farm negotiator, Ray MacSharry, sought support for a compromise. MacSharry has insisted any deal with Washington fall within the limits of the reform package of the EC's Common Agricultural Policy farm program agreed to this summer.

Russia draws up plan to survive coming winter

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin and his Cabinet on Monday completed an "anti-crisis plan" to get Russia through the winter, but rejected opposition demands to freeze prices and slow reforms.

The government also decided to charge world prices for oil, gas and other natural resources to former Soviet republics that no longer use the ruble, chief economic spokesman Alexei Ulyukayev told a news conference.

"This is what we have in mind: not to subsidize the economies of neighboring states," Ulyukayev said. Ulyukayev's remarks followed a Cabinet meeting to complete the government's four-month plan and a draft budget for 1993. The program, to be submitted to lawmakers next week, will shore up Russian industries through subsidies and tax breaks, as well as tariffs on some foreign imports, he said.

Russia's military budget will stay roughly at the same level next year. The government will spend less on weapons production, but this savings has been offset by housing and relocation costs for troops returning from eastern Europe and the Baltic states, Ulyukayev said. Military spending this year accounted for $4.2 billion, or 16 percent of Russia's budget.

Yeltsin's government has faced pressure from the increasingly powerful Civic Union parliamentary bloc to slow reforms. Civic Union, which includes factory managers and key figures such as Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, has demanded a freeze on prices and wages — steps that Yeltsin rejected last week.

Ulyukayev said Civic Union lacks a practical plan for improving Russia's economy.

The demand for world prices from nations that have left the "ruble zone" follows Ukraine's move last week to ban the Russian ruble in the second-most populous former republic.

"If Ukraine has already moved to its own national currency, let it immediately start paying us in foreign currency," Yeltsin was quoted by the IFAAR-Fass-news agency as telling the Cabinet.

Eagles crush NCC

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — One thing about early-season basketball tournaments: someone different looks better every night.

Monday night it was 6-11 freshman Sandro Venjo having a big time inside with points, steals and a couple of shot blocks as College of Southern Idaho rolled to a 105-56 victory over the Northwest Nazarene Jayvees.

It was — as the score indicates — the trick for the Golden Eagles who in three opening games have sent their fans out to Wendy's for a free single burger. That restaurant gives a burger to anyone attending a game in which CSI holds the foe to less than 60.

In whipping Central Washington and Lewis-Clark jayvees last week, the Eagles caused just more than 5,000 hamburger coupons to be passed out. There weren't as many fans at Monday's game, but probably another 1,600 or so were taken.

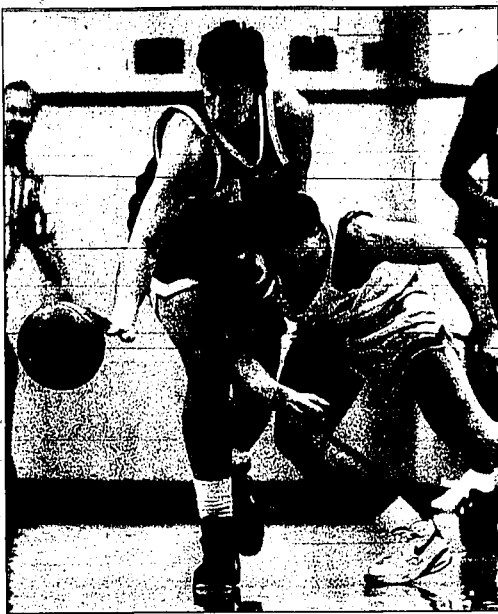

"No way I took the air out of the ball tonight," said Coach Fred Trenkle. "One time I called out a play and the players took that to mean a delay. So I told them I wanted the ball shot. We legitimately held them the last five minutes."

NCC did a good job of staying with CSI, using a zone to keep the jam-happy Eagles within halting distance. The young Crusaders came within 13 points early in the second half and then Clayton Johnson, hitting 10 points, and freshman Jeremy Harald, getting seven, sparked a run that blew things out to 60-37.

NCC had 52 points with 4:49 left in the game and 56 with 3:39 remaining. But the Eagles, who again clicked with 18 steals and forced 35 NCC turnovers, came up with four steals in the closing two-and-one-half minutes. NCC was shooting threes by that time and couldn't hit them. Hence, the line at Wendy's. "I thought we weren't ready to play tonight. At first I didn't care, and then I did," smiled Trenkle of the dilemma.

But the momentum built throughout the contest and CSI was totally dominating over the closing seven minutes. CSI hit 41 of 77 attempts and came up with 22 assists.

The Eagles now head for their first junior

Bills jump on Dolphin miscues, lead AFC East

The Associated Press

MIAMI — The last time Miami played Buffalo, mistakes beat the Bills. This time, mistakes beat the Dolphins.

The Bills took advantage of two Miami turnovers and three key defensive penalties to beat the Dolphins 26-20 in an AFC East showdown Monday night. Buffalo, which had five turnovers in a 37-10 loss to Miami last month, this time had none.

Buffalo improved to 8-2, and the Dolphins fell to 7-3. Because of the NFL's tiebreaker system to settle playoff spots, the victory in effect gave the Bills a two-game lead in the AFC East because they have two fewer losses than Miami within the division.

Defensive penalties against the Dolphins helped set up two Buffalo scores, and a pass interference call against rookie Troy Vincent with three minutes left negated a third-down incompletion at the Bills 18.

Fab Five start season rated No. 1

The Associated Press

Michigan's Fab Five ended their freshman year as close to a national championship as you can get and they start their sophomore season No. 1.

The Wolverines, who lost to Duke in the NCAA title game with five freshman starters, finished atop the AP's preseason college basketball poll Monday with Kansas, Duke, Indiana and Kentucky rounding out the top five.

"I think it says a lot of people recognize the quality of our players and program and the strengths are perceived to be that good," Michigan coach Steve Fisher said Monday. "But there are 10 or 12 teams good enough to be considered the No. 1 team. I think we are one of those teams, but how good? I don't know."

Michigan received 23 of the 65 first-place votes and 1,536 points in the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. Kansas, which was second in the final regular-season poll last year only to be upset by Texas-El Paso in the second round of the NCAA tournament, had 19 first-place votes and 1,513 points.

Two-time defending champion Duke was named first on 15 ballots and had 1,504 points, 15 more than Indiana, which was No. 1 on six ballots. Duke beat Indiana in the national semifinals last season before handily defeating Michigan 71-51 in the

Baseball D-day arrives

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Colorado Rockies began what might become baseball's biggest shopping spree ever, signing free agent Andres Galarraga on Monday, a day before the expansion draft.

Atlanta pitching phenom David Nied was expected to be the No. 1 pick by Colorado when the draft starts at noon MST today. The Florida Marlins may follow by taking by Toronto outfield prospect Nigel Wilson, and both teams figure to finish selecting each of their 36 players by about 9 p.m.

Then, it appears, the fun will really begin.

Because that's when the big names, the Lee Smiths and Shawn Dunstons and Jose Lind, should start flying. And the result could be much more than merely a stocking of two new teams; instead, it could be a major shakeup of the whole major leagues.

Sure, the Marlins and Rockies plan to pick young and inexpensive players, but both teams are certain to select some stars — with the sole purpose of trading them. Danny Tartabull, Jack Morris and catcher Mike LaValliere, Don Slaught, Greg Olson and Damon Berryhill were among the others left off 15-man protected lists.

Indeed, Marlins general manager Dave Dombrowski said Monday that he already had two trades set to announce after the draft, and that he was continuing "serious trade talks" with 17 other general managers.

Rockies general manager Bob Gebhard said he also had some deals set, although he did not say how many.

He said he hoped to have "eight to 10" trades in place before the draft begins. Smith could be traded by one of the new teams and sent to the Braves, who are anxious to acquire a relief ace. Lind is likely to wind up with the Los Angeles Dodgers, who are desperate for a good-fielding second baseman.

No trades can be announced until after the three-round draft is finished. Dombrowski said it was possible that the deals could begin to be announced Tuesday night.

Then again, a lot of these potential trades could fall through. "The one thing you can't control is the situation," Dombrowski said. "Colorado may draft the player before us, or the player might be pulled back from that protected list. And, we're not naive guys into this. We know that a team might talk to us about drafting a player and then trading him, and then call the Rockies and see about the trade for the same player," he said.

Gebhard echoed that thought, saying the Rockies were "competing against the other 26 clubs in a game of cat-and-mouse about who you might draft. We may also have to try to block off the Marlins with certain players."

Each major league team will lose exactly one player in the first round, with five minutes between each selection. After the each round, there will be a 30-minute break while National League teams add three players to their protected list and American League clubs add four.

The Rockies, who won a coin toss with the Marlins last week, had the choice of picking first in the first round, or picking first in the second and third rounds.

Nevada holds Bowe's salary pending payment of fees

LAS VEGAS — Riddick Bowe may be the new heavyweight champion, but his bank account doesn't yet reflect it.

The Nevada State Athletic Commission continued Monday to hold up Bowe's $329 million check because he hasn't paid the sanctioning fees of the three world boxing organizations.

Sandy Johnson, secretary to the commission, said Bowe owes some $250,000 to the World Boxing Council, World Boxing Association and International Boxing Federation for sanctioning his Friday fight against Evander Holyfield as a championship fight.

Johnson said the fees are normally deducted from a boxer's purse prior to the fight and the fighter is given his purse in the dressing room following a bout.

But she said Bowe's manager, Rock Newman, said the fees would be paid by Newman's brother, John, and serves as Bowe's promotion organization.

NBA names rookie O'Neal as league's player of week

NEW YORK — Shaquille O'Neal of the Orlando Magic, who averaged 25.8 points, 16.4 rebounds and 3.4 blocked shots in his first five games as a professional, was selected Monday as player of the week in the NBA.

The 7-foot-1 center, the first player taken in the draft, also became the only rookie ever honored after his first week in the league. He helped the Magic start the season 3-2.

In his debut on Nov. 5, he had 18 rebounds in a 110-100 victory over Miami. That was the most by a rookie in his first game since center Bill Walton had 24 rebounds in his 1974 debut with Portland.

Sunday was one of those 'given' NFL Sundays

The Associated Press

It's not true that the last possession decides most NFL games.

Only if you're San Francisco or Denver.

While the Broncos didn't need John Elway's heroics on Sunday (Or Elway, who missed the second half of Denver's 27-13 win over the Giants with a bruised shoulder), the 49ers made their point — literally.

By beating the New Orleans Saints 21-20 on a 74-yard drive in the last four minutes, they demonstrated why they almost always win those tight NFC West showdowns.

Most places, Sunday was one of those "given" days, one on which the weak can rise up to smite the strong. The NFC East, considered the NFL's strongest division, went 0-5 against outside opposition for the first time in history and even New England swam, beating Indianapolis 37-34 in overtime and eliminating the possibility of the first 0-16 finish in league history.

But the 49ers-Saints game best demonstrated a point — why San Francisco has dominated their division for so many years and why the Saints have become so frustrated chasing them.

"We're just as good as they are but we can't seem to beat them," lamented New Orleans' Ricky Jackson, who had two sacks, knocked down two passes and forced a fumble.

"We've got to put up or shut up."

Why the Saints can't "put up" has to do with the quarterback position, even though Bobby Hebert passed for 301 yards on Sunday.

The win was the eighth for the 49ers in the last 10 meetings with the Saints, most often by scores like Sunday's 27-12, 34-33, 24-20, 24-22 and 16-10. Most are decided, as was Sunday's, by a late drive engineered by Joe Montana or Steve Young — or by a late New Orleans drive that fails.

This year's games are the perfect example. In the first, the 49ers' 16-10 win in New Orleans, the Saints had a shot at winning on their last possession. They drove to the San Francisco 3, got set back by a holding call and then Hebert threw an interception in the end zone.

On Sunday, the 49ers trailed 20-7 with 11 minutes left.

Then Young directed a 65-yard drive capped by a 14-yard TD pass to Brent Jones. They got the ball back with four minutes left and took it all the way, with Young throwing 8 yards to James with 46 seconds left to make it 21-20.

Then the difference. With Morten Andersen as the kicker and all three time outs left, the Saints had a reasonable shot.

Fred MacAfee returned the kickoff to the 31 and then Hebert hit Dalton Hilliard for 8 yards in bounds. While the Saints tried to line up, 20 seconds ticked off the clock and there were about 19 seconds left when New Orleans' next play came.

But no time out. Why not?

Coach Jim Mora said he had ordered two plays run before a time out and offensive coordinator Carl Smith said "I'll take the blame."

"I can't control that," Hebert said. "I just do what I'm told."

Would Steve Young, Joe Montana or John Elway say that?

Doubtful.

Zolak rubs Pat teammates right way

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Scott Zolak draws crazy caricatures of teammates and posts them around Foxboro Stadium. He rubs a football 16 times before a game. He bows dramatically when he throws a touchdown pass.

Weird tales of Zolak's personality are emerging now that he has left the sidelines to lead the New England Patriots to their first win in their first NFL season.

"Very strange man," Patriots nose tackle Fred Smerlas said Monday.

"I don't think I'm a bland guy," said Zolak, in a major understatement. "I like to go out and have fun. I like to show it."

Until Sunday, the Patriots weren't having fun. They had lost all nine of their games and were going to Indianapolis with their top two quarterbacks, Hugh Millen and Tommy Hodson, out with injuries.

The team's fate was in the hands of Zolak, whose only NFL action was in a moppet role in the fourth quarter of a 31-14 loss to New Orleans a week earlier. His teammates could only hope that his passing was as sharp as his wit.

"In the huddle," Zolak said, "you've got to be serious."

The Patriots' fourth-round draft pick from Maryland last season completed five-of-seven passes in a 67-yard march to the tying field goal with no time left in regulation Sunday.

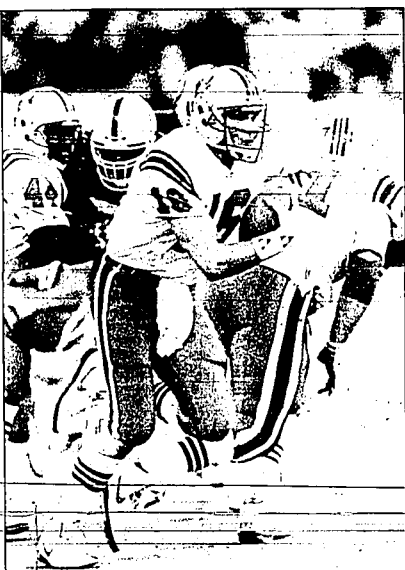

He finished with 20 completions in 29 attempts for 261 yards, two touchdowns and one interception in the 37-34 win over the Colts.

As usual, Zolak made the people around him smile. "At least for this day—this time—we can feel good about ourselves," acting coach Danne Scamecheila said.

"It felt weird," Smerlas said. "It's nice to come to work with a little smile on your face."

The Patriots' defense also excelled, returning two interceptions for touchdowns and using one in overtime to set up the winning field goal by Charlie Baumann.

But the spotlight shone on the 6-foot-5, 222-pound Zolak, who stayed cool, made good decisions and fired accurate and well-timed passes.

"Loves to play. Big, strong, tough kid. Can chuck the bean. He can chuck it right through the side of a barn," Smerlas said. "He brings a lot of spirit to the offense."

After throwing a pass that Greg McMurtry turned into a 65-yard touchdown that tied the game 21-21 with 12 seconds left in the first half, Zolak ran downfield, turned back and the Patriots' sidelines and made a grand bowing gesture.

"I was just happy," he said. "It was a wow play."

Before the game, he continued a college ritual of rubbing an autographed football given to him by Joe Montana, a predecessor at Ringgold High School in Monongahela, Pa. He rubbed it 16 times, matching the number on his uniform.

Then there are the well-drawn caricatures designed to infuriate teammates. Left tackle Pat Harlow was an unwelcome subject.

"He drew Harlow as a nerd with little whiskers, made him look like a mouse, and had them xeroxed and put them all over the locker room and upstairs," Smerlas said.

"Harlow had to go around for an hour taking all these pictures down."

"The guy is out of control."

"I'm going to practical joke just as much as anybody," Zolak said. "Maybe a little more than anybody. A lot more than any of those guys actually."

Sunday was a time to be serious. No team was any worse since the NFL adopted the 16-game schedule in 1978. The Patriots had chances to win near the end of several games but frequently self-destructed.

This time, they battled back from five deficits and beat a mistake-prone team that had its own injury problems, particularly on defense where rookie stars Quentin Coryatt and Steve Emtman were sidelined.

"Just don't make more out of it than what it was," Zolak said. "I played good. I was not superb."

He played well enough to allow Millen, recovering from a left shoulder separation, to make sure he's healthy before returning. Zolak is expected to start Sunday against the Vikings.

Scamecheila said that Millen would regain the starting job when he's "100 percent" and that the Patriots would monitor his progress in practice this week. "Five days ago I think that many people didn't think we had a quarterback and today, five days later, everyone thinks we have one," Scamecheila said. "I don't think that hurts at all."

Zolak accepts that the job is Millen's when he is healthy again. But he knows that as he spends more time in the media glare, his true self will emerge from cliché-ridden comments he makes to reporters.

"Yes, 'Z, be yourself. They'll love you,'" Smerlas said. "But then he'll overload that one brain cell."

Bears coach defends tirade with outburst

Ditka rips into 'lousy people in the media,' says Butler deserved blowup

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Chicago Bears coach Mike Ditka defended his on-field explosion with another eruption Monday, saying malcontents and the "lousy" media are "quit watching me, quit writing about me or get rid of me."

During his morning radio show on WGN, Ditka defended his tirade against kicker Brent Butler and his shouting match with a fan following the Bears' 20-17 loss at Tampa Bay on Sunday. Ditka had to be pulled away from the stands by players and coaches. "I'm not going to be a punching bag for anybody," Ditka said about the shouting match.

"I'm not going to be a cannon fodder," he said. "He called me a name and I called him a name."

Ditka also said he didn't regret tearing into Butler after a kickoff went out of bounds and the Buccaneers took over on their own 35-yard line. Butler then missed a 44-yard field goal with seven seconds left that could have tied the game and sent it into overtime.

"Butler said after the game that Ditka told him 'I'm the worst kicker in the league. I'm gutless, and I'm mentally weak.'"

Ditka said Monday: "We don't plan to kick the ball out of bounds."

"I had nothing to do with the missed field goal and I told him that. It's the kicker that bothered me."

Ditka then ripped into the media.

"At least we've made some people happy ... the malcontents and the lousy people in the media. If they don't like what Ditka does when he shakes his fist or hollers, then he's tough. They can quit watching me, quit writing about me or get rid of me. They have three options and they can use any one of those options."

Ditka became angrier when it was suggested that his blowup at Butler might have unsettled the kicker to the point of missing his final field goal attempt.

"He missed the field goal," Ditka scolded. "If you want to make me the scapegoat, go ahead. If that will answer your question, you can write about it or talk about it all week."

Butler refused to talk about the situation Monday. Most of the other players also were reluctant to discuss the game or their 4-6 record and three-game losing streak, the longest since 1989 when they lost their last six games.

There were some exceptions.

Safety Markus Paul got involved in the episode following the game and scuffled with some cameramen.

"People think we don't hear things but we do hear," Paul said.

"If you cut us, we bleed. If you throw stones it does hurt and we do lose our temper. It was frustrating."

Quarterback Jim Harbaugh said "If somebody threw something at me, I'd do the same thing. How would you react?"

"Coach Ditka gets blamed a lot. People 'throwing things' and yelling obscenities. He's doing all he can but he's not executing."

Falcons, Glanville add excitement on, off field

ATLANTA (AP) — No one can say Jerry Glanville didn't issue a warning when he took over the Atlanta Falcons on Jan. 14, 1990.

He promised he would have a team with a "living on the edge" philosophy.

Few would deny he's accomplished that goal.

Atlanta's latest game, a 20-17 victory over the Phoenix Cardinals on Sunday, is a case in point.

There were the end zone laterals between Deion Sanders and Tim McKeyer that ended with the Cardinals recovering the ball on the Atlanta 4. It was all to no avail, victim of an obscure NFL rule that essentially ruled the play dead when Sanders' momentum following an interception on the 2 carried him into the end zone.

Later, Glanville and his starting quarterback, Billy Joe Tolleriver, had to be separated on the sidelines when the coach decided to put backup Wade Wilson in the game after Tolleriver had thrown an interception for a touchdown and lost a fumble.

When Glanville sent Wilson on the field with 4:22 to play in a tie game, Tolleriver was in the coach's face, yelling, "I'm not coming out."

"We had to remind him who makes the decisions," Glanville said.

"I was frustrated," Tolleriver said.

"I've had a pretty tough long week, built up a lot of emotions and had a lot of distractions to get out of my mind."

The quarterback was referring to his father, Chuck, who Tolleriver, who was accused of transporting illegal drugs in a Colorado court indictment.

"I've never backtalked a coach in my life," Tolleriver said. "I was wrong. Maybe if I'd taken care of the ball a little bit better, it wouldn't have happened."

During the game helped soothe feelings.

Wilson took the Falcons on a 48-yard drive, completing three passes for 31 yards and adding another 4 yards on a pair of quarterback sneaks.

Norm Johnson extended his streak of successful field goals to six when he kicked a 35-yarder to break the 17-17 deadlock with 50 seconds remaining.

"I thought I had played hard the whole day, and I wanted to be in there to help us win," Tolleriver said. "But we won, and that's the main thing."

The Falcons came out of the game without any serious injuries and now have to prepare for one of the AFC's top teams — the Buffalo Bills.

The Phoenix victory lifted Atlanta to 4-6, still two games out of wildcard playoff contention.

Dolphins recall unbeaten '72 season

MIAMI (AP) — The 1972 Miami Dolphins gathered Monday at Shula's Steak House, a famous team looking as anonymous as ever.

Kicker Garo Yepremian — still smiling, still bald — and quarterback Bob Griese were easy to spot. Fullback Larry Csonka's absence was hard to miss. But otherwise, the 20th anniversary reunion of the only undefeated team in NFL history could have been any Rotary meeting.

It coincided with Monday night's Miami-Buffalo game and served as a reminder that the '72 Dolphins had no losses but few stars.

"If you were to design a team to go undefeated, you wouldn't use this blueprint. I guarantee you," center Jim Langer said. "As I look at the players on this team, there's nothing extraordinary about them. We had talent, certainly, but not the superstar."

Langer, Csonka, Griese and receiver Paul Warfield are in the Hall of Fame — respectable representation, but skimpy perhaps for the only team to go 17-0. The 1961 Green Bay Packers, by contrast, sent 11 players to the Hall of Fame.

Don Shula, Miami's coach in '72 and now, thinks the Dolphins should have at least three more players enshrined at Canton.

"You talk about this team, but what you've got to do is look at a three-year period of time," Shula said. "We lost five games in those three years."

The Dolphins of 1971-73 are the only club to play in three consecutive Super Bowls. They won two, Miami had a great defense, but the most memorable thing about it was a nickname: the No-Name Defense.

Ask the '72 Dolphins to select the most unsung of their undefeated teammates, and the list quickly begins to look like the roster: middle linebacker Nick Buoniccontini; cornerback Curtis Johnson; tight end Marv Fleming; backup quarterback Earl Morrall; tackles Norm Evans and Wayne Moore.

Warfield chose Jesse Powell, a linebacker from West Texas State, who never started but led the kickoff and punt coverage.

"Our special teams were very good and very consistent, and very much in character with what our team was about," Warfield said.

Griese and safety Dick Anderson said the most underrated contribution came not from a player, but from defensive coordinator Bill Arnsparger.

"The consummate chess player," Anderson said. "Our game plan was always superb; he put us in the best possible defense in every situation. He was brilliant. He's the one that ought to be in the Hall of Fame."

Langer said Buoniccontini, the 5-foot-11, 220-pound captain of the defense, deserves recognition from Canton.

"He's one player I felt that just due to his physical stature is not in the Hall of Fame," Langer said. "He was an outstanding player and an emotional leader."

No-Name sack leader Vern Den Herder chose as his most unsung teammate an offensive player — Morrall, who took over when Griese suffered a broken leg in the fifth game of the season.

"He did just a wonderful job," Den Herder said, "and then graciously stepped out (during the playoffs) when Bob became healthy again. He didn't bat an eyelash. He was a great team player."

Cowboys say low intensity led to 27-23 loss

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys and the cocky NFL East got a big-time reality check proving it's still a jungle out there every Sunday in the NFL.

The Cowboys fell 27-23 to the 14-point underdog Los Angeles Rams but still maintain a two-game lead in the NFC East with an A-2 record because Philadelphia and Washington also lost.

Giants and New York Giants also fell on "Surprise Sunday."

"I'm disappointed but not surprised," wide receiver Michael Irvin said. "You don't get surprised in the NFL because any team can beat any other team. We just didn't execute. Period."

Running back Emmitt Smith, held to 80 yards by the worst defense against the rush in the league, said something was missing from the Dallas effort.

"The intensity was not there," he said. "We didn't make plays."

Jim Everett passed for two touchdowns and Cleveland Garza scored twice and rushed for 110 yards against a Dallas defense which had ranked No. 1 in the league.

"How do you figure it?" asked fullback Daryl Johnston. "We had a good week of practice."

Defensive tackle Russell Maryland said he was amazed at the Rams defense.

"They did a good job of holding our offense and I was surprised after everybody was talking about how they were 28th in the league," Maryland said. "They met the challenge and we didn't. We're not in a panic situation. Maybe we won't let this happen again."

Tony Castinas, the Cowboys' other starting defensive back, said, "We were kinda complacent on the line. We're not looking for excuses. The Rams just came in here and executed."

Safety Thomas Everett added: "The Rams were good. You have to keep things in perspective. This is the NFL and anything can happen. Look at all the other teams who got beat on Sunday."

Remind feds about risks of Idaho waste storage

Tonight is the Magic Valley's chance to remind federal officials that storing nuclear waste above our water source is a bad idea.

Let's make sure they get the message. The federal Energy Department is beginning an environmental review of cleanup and waste management at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. Tonight's "scoping hearing" will accept public comment on what that review should cover.

What the feds most need to hear is one basic point: Stop bringing nuclear waste to Idaho.

INEL sits atop the Snake River Plain Aquifer, the water source that supports this area's economy. It's in this valley's economic and social interest to see existing nuclear waste at INEL cleaned up, not added to.

Yet adding to the waste is exactly what the federal government is doing, most notably in the form of spent fuel from naval reactors.

This is a complicated issue with many sides. Nuclear-powered vessels are an important part of the nation's defense, and a place to store spent fuel is an unavoidable necessity.

But not over our aquifer.

When federal officials talk about bringing spent fuel (naval and otherwise) to INEL, they imply that storage here is a temporary thing - until a permanent repository is ready.

But no one knows when such a repository might become available. It's significant, however, that the Navy says INEL has room to accept spent fuel until perhaps 2025.

The clear and disturbing implication is that the government plans to store spent fuel atop our aquifer indefinitely. Once again, INEL is a de facto waste dump.

Tonight's hearing will doubtless bring out the usual band of environmentalists and anti-nuclear activists. With no disrespect intended toward those groups, they aren't enough.

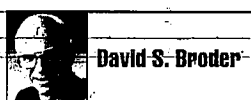

The Energy Department needs to hear from mainstream business, political and agricultural interests. It needs to hear that the Snake River Plain Aquifer is not some fringe environmental cause, but the key to this area's prosperity.

It needs to hear an unequivocal message that INEL's future should contain less waste, not more.

Clinton-Carter similarities won't reveal true colors of president-elect

In the 24 years since Lyndon Johnson left the White House, the only Democrats who have experienced the joys and tribulations that now await Bill Clinton and his crew are the men and women who worked for Jimmy Carter. Two of the most pointed and poignant comments I've heard about the 1992 election and its consequences came from people who were central players in the Carter administration.

David S. Broder

On election night, when most Democrats were euphoric, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale told me in a telephone interview that he could not escape one sobering thought. "If Congress treats Bill Clinton the way it did Jimmy Carter," he said, "we won't be out of power for 12 years, but for 28 years next time."

The next day, Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's domestic policy chief, was both trenchant and touching in his reaction. "I feel as if a burden has been lifted off my shoulders," he said, explaining that for 12 years he had wined at the repeated Republican use of the Carter administration's economic woes as a warning of what would happen if voters elected another Democrat to the presidency.

"I felt," Eizenstat said, "that we had left a crippling legacy to our party and now Clinton has finally exorcised that devil."

As I toured the college lecture circuit last week, the Clinton-Carter comparison came up again and again. Is there any reason to believe that Clinton will be "another Jimmy Carter," either in the opposition he draws from his own party's congressional wing or in the economic mess he creates?

No one can say for sure, but the differences between the two men are far more striking and significant than their similarities.

The main parallels include their background as Southern governors, devoid of national government experience. Both beat establishment Republican incumbent presidents by exploiting public disenchantment with Washington insiders and using the rhetoric of reform to suggest that they were not conventional Democrats. That is more than casual kinship. But the differences are more vivid - and consequential.

Carter was a Naval Academy graduate and an engineer. His model of policymaking was rational, efficient and introspective. Governing to him was an exercise in problem-solving. Come up with the right solution, check and recheck your calculations, and then act. Congress did not respond well to that approach, and Carter did not react well when legislators tinkered with his solutions. Soon they were at odds.

Clinton is very different. He is a lawyer, not an engineer. His instinct is to be consultative and inclusive. He is as flexible as Carter was rigid - some would say, almost too ready to compromise.

In temperament, too, the two men are strikingly dissimilar. Carter regarded politics as a sort of penance that was exacted of those who aspire to leadership in a democracy. It was the price you paid for the privilege of public service. But to him, politics in itself was a rather tawdry arena of ego, ambition and selfish interests, and he did his best to keep it at bay.

Clinton, by contrast, loves politics. He wallows in it. He can't get enough of it. He gets joy out of the bickering and dickering and he clearly is renewed by the hours he spends with voters and politicians of all kinds. The schmoozing and shop-talk that Carter found a burden, Clinton just craves.

The third difference is that Carter came to Washington wearing his Georgia parochialism as a badge of honor on his sleeve. He made a point of saying in his 1976 campaign that he had never met a Democratic president.

Clinton, again, is a polar opposite. He celebrates the moment of his meeting with John F. Kennedy, when Kennedy was president and Clinton an awe-struck high schooler. And he has had a connection to every Democratic president and presidential contender for the past 20 years.

Indeed, Clinton comes to the job as the most thoroughly "networked" politician of his era. He has been part of every major movement in his party from the McGovern campaign on the left to the Democratic Leadership Council on the right.

And he has never given up one set of relationships or alliances when he has moved on to another. Every one of those people has a claim on Clinton, and Clinton has a claim on their loyalty in return.

Indeed, it is the fact that Clinton has been so many things to so many people on his climb to the presidency that makes the selection of his Cabinet and White House staff so vital - and so fascinating. This is the first time, but surely not the last, that he will have to disappoint the hopes of many who have a personal or political claim on him: As he does that, we will get our first clues on who Bill Clinton really is.

But I don't think we will learn much by trying to fit him into the Jimmy Carter mold. They are so unlike, I'd be willing to bet that Clinton's performance - and his problems - will bear little resemblance to those of the last Democratic president.

Heterosexuals who fail to protect against AIDS being deadly dumb

Give the gay community credit, said Magic Johnson last week on CNN's Larry King Live: Gays have done an admirable job of slowing the spread of AIDS. The question we now face is: When are heterosexuals going to get smart?

The answer - to judge from activity in the current issue of Science - is: No time soon. The survey's most ominous finding is that 70 percent of heterosexuals who have a partner they know is at risk of having HIV never use condoms. These high-risk partners include people who have injected drugs, people who got blood transfusions between 1978 and 1985 and people who aren't monogamous.

It's hard to imagine worse news. Between 1988 and 1991, the number of heterosexuals transmitted AIDS cases rose 33 percent in New York State. And it's still climbing - in particular among minority women. Although health officials can point to some progress from school programs and other educational efforts, they're clearly losing ground among heterosexuals. It's hard to say exactly how much because of the 10-year latency period for AIDS. We may not discover the full price of today's high-risk behavior for another decade. By then, the cost could be off the charts.

What accounts for the astonishing attitude of denial uncovered in the study?

In part, that's a question for the shrinks. But across the globe, for 10 years now, one pattern has been consistent: Neither citizens nor their governments are stirred to take tough AIDS prevention measures until the effects of the disease become too awful to ignore. By then much of the damage has been done.

Cultural factors may play a role. In the United States, for example, many women feel powerless to resist if their sex partners refuse to wear condoms. And for some people - such as drug injectors - unsafe sex is simply one among many self-destructive choices.

The nation desperately needs educational programs aimed specifically at hard-to-reach groups. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control - which should be a leader in delivering explicit safe-sex messages - has pulled some of its educational punches because of political flak. Some TV stations have been squeamish about running safe-sex ads.

This needs to change.

Speak up about waste storage

Staying up all night to stand in front of nuclear waste trucks or to "mark" the passage of another rail shipment of high-level nuclear waste into Idaho and the accompanying legal hassles may not appeal to some of your more refined sensibilities, so here, folks, is another avenue to sound your protest against the "wasting of Idaho." Today and tonight, at the Weston Plaza motel from 1 to 4:30 p.m. and again from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., the Department of Energy will be holding a public hearing on "Environmental Restoration and Waste Management at INEL."

As usual the official format and purpose of these hearings are a farce. The DOE's agenda for Idaho is more nuclear waste. With some of the civilian waste being temporarily stored at INEL, they plan full-scale shipments of Navy waste. This waste is not part of the official agenda for tonight's meeting. We must make it so.

While I am somewhat encouraged by the governor's office on the waste issue, it could be bolder. Our past and future congressional delegations are to blame for the position we are in now and will be, at best, weak-kneed proponents of protecting the long-term best interests of our state. At the mention of "INEL jobs" they will lose their stomach, if they even hold any, and hide behind the "iron curtain" of national security.

So it is, folks, up to us, as in "we the people," to stand up and be counted. If you don't want Idaho to be the "Famous Nuke Waste Dump," show up at the hearing and in a voice so loud it can be heard in Washington D.C. and Little Rock, Ark., tell 'em, "No more waste!"

Radar guns may factor into lills

Recently I was stopped on Highway 93 between Twin Falls and Jackpot, Nev. by a patrolman proceeding in the opposite direction. As he passed me, his red lights started to flash and he turned around in the middle of the highway and stopped me. I do not remember his name and it is not important, since he was very courteous and cited me only for the fact that I could not find my vehicle registration, which I found in the vehicle later and took to the station.

The point of this whole thing is the fact that his radar was scanning me and since he was approaching me, it would of necessity have been aimed into my eyes and face. Now since I just had a severe cataract removed from my left eye a month or so ago and one developing in my right eye which will require surgery soon, I did not appreciate this at all since it is a well-known fact that being subjected to radar can cause cancer, including skin cancer and cataracts.

I drive several thousand miles on the highway each year and so it is of grave concern to me. Radar beams readily pass through glass but a beam directed at the rear of a vehicle would be reflected by the rearview mirror totally, since it has a metal backing, directly into the face and eyes of the driver of the vehicle.

I believe the radar beams could also be a contributing factor to the development of women's breast cancer since the beam would also illuminate that area.

Even the patrolmen are concerned about being subjected to their own radar from the rear, so how much worse would it be by having the gun aimed directly at you?

Support diversity, education

The decision by the Meridian School Board to suspend three teachers for allowing a presentation in their classrooms by lesbians saddens me. The strength of our nation is not based on hatred and bigotry.

Truly spiritual people are enlightened enough to recognize that we cannot be carbon copies of one another. All our lives we are taught that no two snowflakes are alike and we are taught that this is marvelous. Why aren't we taught to celebrate the same uniqueness in each other?

It's time to pull our heads out of all the moral rhetoric and religious dogma and move onward to spirituality, to a celebration of our diversity.

The decision to suspend these teachers, and even entertaining a notion of punitive action, frightens me more than any classroom presentation of non-traditional family roles. Bigotry is bigotry, no matter how it is justified; And bigotry is deadly to society because it is based on righteousness and fear rather than reason and spirituality.

This decision and any support for it is divisive and counterproductive to the whole concept of education."

Cease-fire success brightens Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The latest cease-fire in Sarajevo has been the most successful, bringing strollers to the sidewalks, children out to play and garbage men back to their rounds.

But some snipers keep shooting, some civilians keep dying, and predictions of lasting peace are hard to find.

"Maybe, just maybe, this is a bit more serious than the others," 72-year-old Nada Rill said Monday. "But don't forget, we've had 17 cease-fires before."

While residents enjoyed the lull in fighting, military leaders of Bosnia's three warring factions met Monday to evaluate the cease-fire, which has had mixed success in the outlying reaches of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

U.N. officials believe this truce is working better than the others because it was agreed to by military, not political, leaders.

Relative optimists among Sarajevo's siege-weary residents suggested that surrounding Serb forces no longer have the confidence to attack. Pessimists say the lull may be no more than a chance for each side to reposition forces as winter approaches.

But for the moment, people are taking advantage of what by Sarajevo standards amounts to peace — minimal artillery bombardment and sporadic sniper fire. Since the cease-fire took effect early Thursday, 13 Sarajevoans have been killed and 98 wounded, according to hospital officials — far below the average.

"You see more people in the streets, children going out a bit more," said Manuel Fontaine, a UNICEF official. "For us, it's easier. We can do much more in a day, distributing food and clothes."

Workers for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees seized the opportunity with a long-planned campaign to clean up the city's festering piles of trash. The UNICR provided five vehicles of its own and fuel for 60 other garbage trucks, with armored escorts.

Smuggling limits ban's effects

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Bananas and kiwis have reappeared on Belgrade store shelves. Cars once again clog the streets and foul the air.

Fuel, imported foods and consumer goods are finding their way here despite the economic sanctions imposed on Yugoslavia nearly six months ago for provoking the war in neighboring Bosnia.

Most people are too poor now to buy many of the goods smuggled in, but they give an illusion of normalcy. For some, that's enough to boost spirits.

"Sanctions will never hurt us. Serbia is rich enough to live on its own," said Radomir Katic, a Belgrade municipal transport worker.

"The West will eventually understand that we cannot be threatened or pushed around."

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic also insists the sanctions won't work.

Honecker's health stalls crime trial

BERLIN (AP) — The manslaughter trial of former East German Communist leader Erich Honecker was postponed Monday because he suffered an irregular heartbeat and high blood pressure.

The health of Honecker and his aging co-defendants, who are accused in the killings of people trying to flee East Germany, already has played a major role in the country's most sensational trial since the Nuremberg war crimes tribunal.

Thursday's opening session and Monday's proceedings were cut short because of defendants' health woes.

Honecker, dressed in a blue suit, complained that he felt ill after one hour and 40 minutes.

"Herr Honecker, can you not go on?" Berlin District Judge Hans-Joerg Braeutigam asked after Honecker told his lawyer he felt sick.

"No. No more now," Honecker said.

During a recess, doctors found the 80-year-old Honecker was suffering from high blood pressure and an irregular heartbeat.

"That is not unusual for your health condition, Herr Honecker. But when you are not feeling well, then we can break," the judge said.

The proceeding continued for 20 minutes before Braeutigam recessed it until Thursday on health grounds. Honecker, among other health problems, has liver cancer.

The court also granted a defense request that Erich Mielke, the widely reviled former chief of the Communist secret police, be tried separately from Honecker and the others.

Mielke, already on trial for killing two policemen in Berlin in the 1930s, had applied to have his case in connection with the border deaths separated from Honecker's trial.

Honecker, who ruled East Germany with an iron hand for 18 years until he was toppled in 1989, is charged with 13 counts of manslaughter in the deaths of people who tried to escape former East Germany.

Man involved in '88 terrorist plot arrested

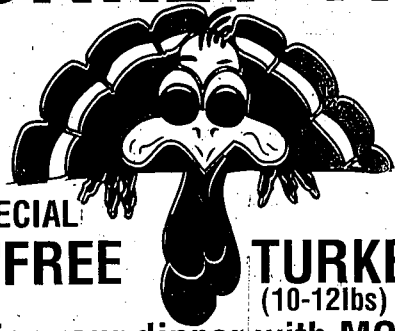

BERLIN (AP) — A suspected Palestinian terrorist wanted for an attack that killed nine people and wounded nearly 100 on a Greek cruise ship in 1988 has been arrested in Germany, police said Monday.

A statement from the Saxony state police headquarters said the man was arrested Friday at an apartment in Dresden, 120 miles south of Berlin. It identified him only as a 28-year-old Lebanese.

The French news agency Agence France Press said the suspect was Mehri Mchididine, who has been on international wanted lists since shortly after the July 11, 1988, attack on the City of Poros cruise ship.

The man is believed to be the first person arrested in the attack. France demanded in March that Libya extradite the alleged mastermind of the attack, Mohamed Ahmed Khadir, but no action has been taken.

Secretary of State finally accepts 1% document for 1994 election

The Associated Press

A document to launch a 1994 version of the failed One Percent Initiative has finally been accepted by the Secretary of State's office.

Tax activist Ron Rankin attempted to submit the form last Wednesday by faxing a copy to the office, but it was turned down. The one accepted Monday contained Rankin's signature and those of 19 other residents in the Coeur d'Alene and Post Falls area. If passed, it would take effect Jan. 1, 1995.

Rankin

The One Percent would limit property taxes to 1 percent of fair market value. The one voted down in this month's election followed a 1978 initiative which passed, but the Legislature could not find a way to implement it. So it resulted in a 5 percent cap on annual property tax hikes. That also fell by the wayside.

The 1992 measure was defeated by an almost 2-to-1 margin after the Idaho Education Association, business groups and municipalities warned voters of its possible effect on government services and the schools. One Percent opponents reportedly spent about $400,000 on advertising to sink the measure.

Rankin, of Coeur d'Alene, has predicted the upcoming crusade would win converts when property owners get their tax bills later this month and the Legislature fails to adopt tax reform.

"We probably won't start a petition drive until we see what the Legislature is going to do," he said. "It'd be silly to go ahead with one if the Legislature approved meaningful tax reform. But don't count on it."

The new initiative would set the tax ceiling at 1 percent, after statutory limits like homeowner's, timber and agriculture exemptions are applied.

It would spell out that residents can pass bond elections by a two-thirds vote of those casting ballots and can exceed the 1 percent limit with such a vote.

The failed measure was criticized because it required a two-thirds vote of all "qualified electors." Initiative foes speculated the language meant two-thirds of all eligible voters, which would make passage of bonds and overrides for the schools nearly impossible.

The state attorney general's office has 20 days to review the language and make any suggestions for change. It then goes back to Rankin. Then, the attorney general has 10 more days to finish the review.

Rankin said he wanted to accomplish that before the Legislature meets to prevent "legislative mischief."

Transition panel seeks Gem advice

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus says President-elect Clinton's transition team has asked his advice on making the move to a Democratic administration in the Department of the Interior — an agency Andrus headed for four years, under President Jimmy Carter.

Andrus said the president-elect's team asked him for suggestions on the agency and he recommended

Andrus

Larry Meierotto, "to help the Clinton administration get off to a fast start."

Meierotto was a top aide to Andrus when he was governor of Idaho in the early 1970s. When Andrus went to Interior under Carter in January, 1977, Meierotto went with him as assistant secretary.

Meierotto is president of the Coalition Group, a Boise public affairs agency.

At a news conference Monday, Andrus confirmed that he recommended Meierotto, along with others. He declined to name the others.

"None of us want a job, none of us would take a job if it were offered," the governor said.

He said the Clinton team was looking for someone with experience with the agency.

"We know how Interior works," Andrus said.

"President-elect Clinton will make his own choices to who will head up those departments. But for him to be successful in passing the legislation, it's going to take a cooperative effort of all the traditional and qualified members of what we call the bureaucracies back there."

"If we're called upon, we will," he said, but said he wasn't looking for work. "I've got all I can handle here."

Andrus has just over two years remaining on a four-year term he won in the 1990 election. He has said he plans to retire from the governor's position after the current term.

Conservation pays, for utility patrons

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Hundreds of residents have received $60 checks and installed new shower heads as part of an energy conservation program administered by the Idaho Falls Electric Division.

Since late September, about 800 residents have traded in standard shower heads for free low-flow replacements, said Van Ashton, customer service and conservation manager for the municipal utility.

About 100 people have received $60 rebates for purchasing more efficient electric water heaters to replace less-efficient models.

Jury selection continues in Stradley murder case

TWIN FALLS — Jury selection in the Donnell "Bud" Stradley murder trial continued Monday and will likely continue through Tuesday.

After 75 potential jurors had been questioned through three days of jury selection, 28 had passed muster as being unbiased enough to sit on the jury.

Ten more must be selected before attorneys for the prosecution and the defense each dismiss 12 people.

That will leave 12 jurors and two alternates. Fifth District Judge James J. May said Monday it will be Wednesday afternoon before testimony begins.

Stradley, 29, is charged with the Jan. 20 death of 2-year-old Amanda Hostetter.

Although jury selection lagged Monday, Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said she is confident an impartial jury can be empaneled to hear the case.

Rural Fire District sees 1st action at 2-story house fire

TWIN FALLS — The first major fire handled by the Twin Falls Rural Fire District destroyed a two-story house and nearly all the personal belongings of the person renting it Sunday night.

Myrna Jones was not home when the house she rented at 3750 North, 2800 East went up in flames, Twin Falls fire department battalion chief Ron Clark said.

The house was owned by Jack McCall of Twin Falls.

A wood stove apparently started the blaze, which drew 10 firefighters to the scene after 11 p.m. Sunday, Clark said.

Jones, who had been staying with friends, did not learn of the fire until she returned to the house Monday morning, Clark said.

Jones did not have insurance for her belongings, he said.

CDC agrees to study health effects of INEL radioactivity

TWIN FALLS — The federal Centers for Disease Control of Atlanta has agreed to study of possible health effects of the radioactivity released from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

CDC will conduct an informal meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Canyon Springs Inn to provide an overview of the INEL study known as an Environmental Dose Reconstruction. CDC also will explain how the study will be done and introduce the contractor Sanford Cohen and Associates, who will perform the study.

A short presentation will be followed by public discussion.

Water Resources to discuss changes in shallow drain wells

TWIN FALLS — The rules may be changing for shallow drain wells that drain parking lots and street and deep wells that drain agricultural lands.

The Idaho Department of Water Resources will discuss proposed changes to the regulations governing injection wells at a public hearing at 10 a.m. today in the Obenchain Building, 264 Main Ave.

Interested parties may present view, date and arguments to the amendments in writing or orally at the hearing.

Blaine County Rec District director joins advisory board

HAILEY — The director of the Blaine County Recreation District, Mary Austin Crofts, has been appointed to Idaho's newly created "Enhancement Advisory Committee" by the Idaho Transportation Board.

The new committee will make annual recommendations on how the state should spend up to $4.5 million in federal transportation funds dedicated for "enhancement" projects, such as bike paths, scenic easements, landscaping, and historic preservation.

Crofts, who developed Blaine County's Wood River Trails System of separated bike paths and equestrian trails, was appointed to the 10-member committee Oct. 30 by Keith Green, acting director of the Idaho Transportation Department. She is the only member from the Magic Valley.

The first meeting of the Enhancement Advisory Committee is planned for early December.

New CSI library moves closer to becoming reality

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A new $5.3 million library at the College of Southern Idaho is one step closer to becoming a reality.

CSI President Gerald Meyerhoeffer said Monday that the state's Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council decided this month to place the library at eighth on the building projects priority list for higher education.

"They have recommended full funding of the $5 million project for us," Meyerhoeffer said.

The library project could receive full funding or at least a large part of the funding in the 1993-94 higher education budget, he said.

"If we were funded, we would be in position to start construction in the summer or fall," Meyerhoeffer said.

The state has already provided $300,000 for an architectural and engineering study for the project.

The No. 1 project on the building projects list is a $7.7 million physical science building at Idaho State University.

In other business, the board discussed either adding on to the dormitory or building a new one for about $1.5 million.

"We'd like to look seriously to see if we could put this together," Meyerhoeffer said.

The new dormitory space would be funded by rent paid by the 100 students who would occupy the building.

"If we don't address this issue we're burying our heads in the sand," board member Charles Lehrman said.

Last year, the college had to refuse 303 rent applications from students wanting to live on campus, said Graydon Stanley, director of student activities.

He said several students in the past few years have canceled plans to attend college at CSI because they could not find housing.

A new dormitory would allow the college to expand its summer programs for summer school programs, Physical Plant Director Dick Sterling said. The existing dormitory building does not have air-conditioning, he said.

Stanley said with more students living in the dorms, the college could also offer more on-campus activities.

Discovery of drowned hunter's body ends 16-day vigil by family

By Suzanne Huxhold
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — A family's 16-day ordeal finally ended Monday morning when the body of 18-year-old Dan Ackley Jr. was pulled from the Snake River.

Ackley's body was sighted about 7:40 a.m., just a few yards from where he disappeared more than two weeks ago while duck hunting.

Elmore County law enforcement officers had said that Ackley's body was probably trapped in one of the 40- to 60-foot sinkholes in the river and was held there for 16 days by the extreme pressure of the water.

A combination of a change in water pressure from the Bliss Dam over the weekend and an increase in body gasses probably brought the body to the surface, law enforcement officials said.

Dan Ackley Sr., who came from his home in Washington state the day his son disappeared and camped at the river's edge day and night for more than two weeks, said the body was spotted near one of the camps early Monday morning by family members on watch.

"They saw him right there at the rapids where we thought he'd come up," Ackley Sr. said. "They called me over and by the time I got there, (Elmore County Deputy Sheriff) Jim Gluch had pulled him out."

Gluch said Monday that he found the body about four miles downstream from where it was first spotted.

"I was just putting my boat in at King Hill when I got the call that the boy's stepfather had seen the body go through the rapids at his camp," Gluch said.

Gluch said he took a personal interest in the case from the beginning. He lost three friends to the river several years ago, and the memory still haunts him.

He said he wanted Dan Jr.'s family to know he was doing everything he could.

"I just felt bad for the family," Gluch said. "I needed to do something to try and ease that pain a little bit. It's hard to imagine how hard it was for the family."

'Right now, we're just glad it's over. The people who came out and helped were really great. I want them to all know how much we appreciate everything they did for us.'

— Dan Ackley Sr.

Gluch spent every day of the watch on the river, motoring up and down a mile-long stretch of river where the body was expected to eventually rise, stopping only long enough to grab a sandwich from the tent where volunteers had set up a makeshift kitchen.

The retrieval of the body ended a 16-day vigil by family and friends of Ackley, a resident of Boise and an Idaho Air Guard trainee. His mother and stepfather, Sandra and John Overton, Ackley Sr. and more than two dozen volunteers, including every member of Overton's Boise-based Army Reserve Unit, kept a 24-hour watch over the river, using generator-powered spotlights at night and boat patrols during the daylight hours.

The two camps were dismantled Monday morning as the family accompanied the body to Mountain Home. The body will be taken to Boise on Tuesday and the funeral is scheduled for Thursday afternoon in Boise.

Ackley Sr. said the family was relieved that Dan Jr.'s body was found.

"Right now, we're just glad it's over," Ackley Sr. said from his mother's home in Bliss. "The people who came out and helped were really great. I want them to all know how much we appreciate everything they did for us."

Judge rejects Hansen's arguments; trial starts Nov. 30

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — A federal judge Monday cleared the way for the multimillion-dollar fraud trial of George Hansen to begin later this month, dismissing a motion by Hansen's attorney to throw out the indictment against the former congressman.

Hansen, a Republican who represented Idaho's 2nd Congressional District for seven terms until his defeat in 1984, faces 49 separate counts of bank fraud stemming from an alleged check-kiting scheme involving several banks in the

Hansen

Mini-Cassia area and the Upper Snake River Valley.

The trial is set to start Nov. 30 in U.S. District Court in Boise. It is tentatively scheduled to last two weeks.

During an hour-long public hearing Monday morning, U.S. District Judge Edward J. Lodge rejected defense arguments that the government's indictment was "patched together" so poorly that it did not make sense, did not describe how the alleged scheme worked, and did not even indicate that a crime had been committed.

Hansen's attorney, John Runft of Boise, was especially critical of one section of the indictment. That section alleges that Hansen and his co-defendant, John Scoresby of Idaho Falls, fraudulently caused banks "to extend credit on uncollected funds based on checks deposited into" his account and those of people who lent Hansen money.

That section, which Runft called the heart of the government's case, "does not make grammatical or legal sense."

East-enders back county fire district

The Times-News

HANSEN — The vast majority of East End residents who attended a public hearing on rural fire districts Monday night favored creating a countywide district.

"I'd say it was about 95 percent," Twin Falls County Commissioner Jim Fraley said. "Everybody wanted the rural fire districts and almost everybody liked the countywide option."

Fraley said there were 62 votes for the countywide district. The next most popular option a Rock Creek Fire District, got six votes, and a two-district system attracted no support.

The commission will hold similar hearings on proposed fire districts tonight in Buhl and Wednesday in Filer, with a hearing for the countywide district scheduled for Thursday on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls.

Fraley estimated the cost of a countywide fire district would be $1.20 to $1.30 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. Smaller districts could cost up to $2 per $1,000.

Fire districts must be approved by a majority of voters who live within their proposed boundaries, and the commission can schedule district elections if it deems there's enough interest. Because Twin Falls County Mutual Fire Insurance Co., which has provided rural fire protection for 60 years, is going out of the firefighting business in February, the commissioners are hoping to schedule elections by the second or third week in December.

Tonight's Buhl hearing is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Buhl City Hall fire bay.

Burley council puts off plan to annex property

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — A miscalculation of property size has at least temporarily scuttled the Burley City Council's plans to annex land located near East Fifth Street.

At its meeting Monday night, the council found that one of the properties that was proposed for annexation was a six-acre plot of ground.

Initially, city officials thought the parcel contained only 2.5 acres. Kenneth Blubaugh, the owner of the land, didn't want to be annexed to the city. According to state law, people who own more than five acres of land can't be forced into city boundaries against their will.

Because Blubaugh's property, located on the 300 block of Hansen Avenue, would have been the eighth parcel not contiguous to the city limits, city officials decided not to annex the property.

"It would isolate two properties — we don't want to do that," Councilman Clay Handy said.

One of the reasons the city considered property annexation in the first place was to square up city boundaries.

Handy also pointed out that the properties contain land which is used for agricultural purposes, including grazing. The city has plans to re-work its animal ordinances to accommodate people who might be annexed who have cattle on their property.

After the changes in the animal ordinance are made, the properties will probably fall under scrutiny the next time the council considers property annexation, said Councilman Derlin Taylor.

Man, 3 boys charged with gun burglary

RUPERT — A Caldwell man and three boys have been charged with stealing two dozen semiautomatic guns last month from a Rupert pawn broker.

The Minidoka County prosecutor's office charged Raymond "Ryco" Rangel, 18, with burglary in connection with the Oct. 2 break-in of The Trading Post, 431 F St.

One of the boys charged with burglary is a Burley resident, while the others are from the Nampa-Caldwell area, according to Rupert police officer Lew Jones.

Jones said Monday three of the 24 stolen weapons have been recovered: one at the residence of the juvenile suspect from Burley, another at Rangel's Caldwell home and the third in Albuquerque, N.M., during a routine traffic stop by the U.S. Border Patrol.

Rangel is being held by the Canyon County Sheriff's Department, with bond set at $5,000. The boys were turned over to their parents.

2 Heyburn men charged with beer-theft

BURLEY — Two Heyburn men were charged with burglarizing a Burley gas station Saturday night.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, Gabriel Rodriguez, 22, 1610 K Street, and Jesse Ray Delgado, 27, same address as Rodriguez, were charged with stealing beer from United Oil along Overland Avenue in Burley.

Deputies allege that two burglaries took place, first at 8:30 p.m. and then at 10:30. After the second alleged burglary, officers spotted the two men in a pickup.

While officers were following the pickup, it crashed into a pole on the 1400 block of Oakley Ave, deputies said.

Delgado was charged with burglary, resisting arrest and felony driving under the influence.

Rodriguez was charged with burglary and resisting arrest.

Utah man charged with lewd conduct

RUPERT — A Salt Lake City man has been charged with fondling an 11-year-old girl in a Rupert home.

Rodney Scott Allen, 27, was charged with lewd conduct with a minor child under 16 years of age.

The allegation was reported to the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department on Sept. 18 by a school counselor.

6 Minico drama students place at state

RUPERT — Six Minico High School drama students placed fourth in a statewide drama competition in Lewiston last weekend.

The six were Jose Garcia, Randy Hunt, Nicole Jensen, Tresa Leedham, Erin Maylan and Chad Mullins.

They were among 17 Minico drama students who attended a district competition in Jerome, according to Karla Jensen, a drama class spokeswoman.

Benefit scheduled to help Rupert man

RUPERT — A benefit and auction have been scheduled to help Rupert resident Al Whiting, who recently returned from St. Luke's Hospital in Boise.

The event, which costs a $5 donation at the door, will be held from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m., Nov. 28 at the Rupert Elks Lodge.

Music will be performed by Paradise Flats. Hors d'oeuvres will be served.

Hospitals schedule baby fair

Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — The semi-annual Baby Your Baby fair scheduled Wednesday at two Mini-Cassia hospitals will answer mothers' questions about the proper care and handling of children.

Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley will host the fair from 4-7 p.m. in the hospital's surgical waiting area, while Minidoka Memorial Hospital will hold the event the same day and time in its Fireplace Room.

The "Baby Your Baby" campaign is designed to help those who are parents-to-be and experienced parents. It focuses on a different theme every six months. The theme for this fair is "Preparing for Baby and Parenthood."

"Baby Your Baby" is a statewide campaign sponsored by Blue Cross of Idaho, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Idaho Perinatal Project, March of Dimes and the Idaho State Broadcasters Association.

Local sponsors are Cassia and Minidoka hospitals, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, the South-central Public Health District and Child Development/Lead Start.

Laraine Hatch, who has painted windows throughout the region for more than 26 years, creates a Christmas panorama at Suburban Propane in Rupert. Each year, merchants throughout the Mini-Cassia area, as well as in American Falls, Pocatello, Blackfoot and Idaho Falls, use the Rupert resident's artistic services during the holiday season to attract attention to their businesses. Hatch also does similar work at other times of the year. Earlier this fall, her paintings of individual Minico High football players filled the windows of several local businesses before the school's homecoming game.

Woman: Criticism before church 'spiritual rape'

BOISE (AP) — Ten people protested after a pastor told the congregation at Boise's Cole Community Church that a woman member was violating the will of God by seeking a divorce.

Participants in the planned protest stood up at the end of a Sunday morning service and said, among other things, "You're not in her marriage — how can you judge her?" and "This is psychological abuse."

They then walked out.

Church Elder Dave Roper said Elder Kris Rudell "reluctantly" read a statement about the woman. Roper said the woman filed for divorce and refused to attend joint counseling with her husband. Rudell declined comment Sunday.

A 16-member council of elders oversees church operations and sets policy.

"This is not a chastising. This is a lost sheep, and the marriage is worth saving. We believe in the sanctity of marriage," Roper said. "The divorce rate is skyrocketing. We were asking her to be willing to work through their problems."

The statement, which said in part that what the woman was doing was "contrary to what we at Cole consider to be Jesus' teaching on divorce," was read during two morning services and an evening service, before about 1,000 members of the non-denominational church.

"We've had to do it before, reluctantly," Roper said. "Jesus commands us to do it. We don't like to do it."

The 39-year-old woman, who filed for divorce in June, said she was too upset to attend the church services. She said her husband of more than 13 years was emotionally and sometimes physically abusive to her and her children.

"I was faithful to the church, and they have hurt me. They wouldn't believe me," said the woman, who used to teach classes at the church. "I was spiritually raped."

"This is a time when she needs people to support her, not beat her down," said Teresa Arnold, a protestor who said she has suffered domestic violence. "That church was promoting her to continue to be victimized. I'm appalled this kind of stuff goes on in the 1990s. This is not the 1600s."

USU president formally invested

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Nearly five months after taking over as Utah State University president, George H. Emert was formally invested to the office during a ceremony Monday.

Among 1,000 attending the proceedings were Sen. Jake Garn, Mormon apostle Boyd Packard and numerous other state, educational and government officials.

The ceremony was conducted by Doug Foxley, chairman of the State Board of Regents.

Emert, formerly an executive vice president at Auburn, said his goal is to bring USU to a greater level of excellence in its academic, research and extension areas.

"We are facing dynamic changes moving with such force and power that we must respond with an active and continuous institutional renewal in order to remain viable and relevant to the needs of our constituents," he said.

Rexburg man in wreck receives 2-year sentence

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — James Harlo Horkley of Rexburg has received prison time for felony manslaughter in connection with a wreck which killed a woman.

Seventh District Judge Grant Young on Monday sentenced Horkley, 40, to a minimum fixed 2-year sentence, as well as an indeterminate term not exceeding three years.

Young retained jurisdiction over the case for 120 days and a 60-day extension, meaning Horkley could be released on probation after that time, court officials said.

Last month, a Jefferson County jury found Horkley guilty of felony vehicular manslaughter in the death of Madelyn Banner on Oct. 25, 1991.

She died after a car driven by Horkley left a country road west of St. Anthony and overturned. Horkley's blood-alcohol content was above the legal limit. Horkley and passenger Kerry Ann Jones of St. Anthony were also injured.

Horkley received a $7,000 fine. He could have been sentenced to 10 years in prison with a $10,000 fine.

Defense attorney Howard Manweiler said Horkley accepted responsibility for what he did when he pleaded guilty to misdemeanor manslaughter, entered as an Alford plea. That means the accused concedes there might be enough evidence to convict although he does not admit guilt.

Magistrate Charles Roos withdrew the initial plea and prosecutors amended it to a felony charge.

Horkley says he suffered a memory loss from head injuries and his life is in turmoil since he and his wife separated four months ago because of stress caused by the incident.

COMFORTING

Martha was reluctant to move to a nursing center until she heard about BridgeView Estates. Elegant, brand new, with a lovely private dining room looking onto a beautifully landscaped courtyard. Each room was bright and colorful with plenty of space for her treasures.

Her doctor was particularly enthusiastic about the Center's physical therapy specialists. He said she certainly wouldn't feel 24 again, but she could enjoy life a lot more with their help.

She liked the idea she was surrounded by a happy, bustling village of retired neighbors and friends. BridgeView certainly isn't anything like "the old folks home" she used to hear about. The beautiful décor and the staff's gentle, caring touch is very... well, COMFORTING!

Association helps blended families cope with change

DEAR READERS: In recent years, the mail from stepchildren, stepparents and steprelatives has increased at an alarming rate. Perhaps it's due to the fact that divorce and remarriage have become more popular and less stigmatized in the last 20 years.

Take heart there is help out there for stepmothers, stepchildren, stepfathers and all manner of steppeople. It's called the Stepfamily Association of America. The group was founded in 1979. It offers information and advocacy for stepfamilies—self-help programs through local chapters, educational resources, a quarterly bulletin, annual national conference, and chapter start-up information.

You need not send a self-addressed envelope to receive information. Simply write to: Stepfamily Association of America, 215 Centennial Mall South, Suite 212, Lincoln, Neb. 68508. The toll-free telephone number is 1-800-733-0329 (U.S.A. and Canada).

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

See her so seldom, it's hard for me to consider her part of the immediate family. I would hate to hurt her feelings, but I also don't want to pretend to be a family because actually we are not. When Carla visits us, she is more like a guest.

Should we have the portrait taken with just my husband and me and our baby, and hide it when Carla visits? Or should we wait several months for her next visit to have the family portrait taken?

Abby, how important would it be for your readers who are stepchildren (grown or otherwise) to have been included in their absent parent's new family portrait? Maybe it wouldn't mean anything to Carla. Am I making a big deal out of nothing?

— UNSURE STEPMOM

DEAR UNSURE: Please do not have a picture taken that you will have to hide when your stepdaughter visits. Better to include her in the family portrait whether it will mean anything to her or not than to exclude her and risk hurting her.

DEAR ABBY: If your readers are beginning to make Christmas lists and are wondering what to give the "old folks," here's a suggestion: How about a once-a-month cleaning person? Many "old folks" are able to handle the daily chores of dusting, vacuuming, laundry, grocery shopping, cooking, clean-up, etc., but when it comes to heavy-duty cleaning, they can't manage it.

They would like to remain independent if they are lucky, until they drop dead, and a little assistance of this sort would make their remaining years easier and more comfortable.

"There are a lot of us out there. Think about it!" — "OLD FOLKS"

Mom fights violence with anti-gang emblems
Chicago Tribune

LOS ANGELES — There is a new look on the West Coast that youngsters might not want to be without, especially if they favor wearing professional sports team apparel.

To offset gang violence, Marie Marden, 38, a sales manager at an L.A. machine parts factory, and clothes manufacturer Nathan Hugg, 44, founded Peace in Time Inc., a company in suburban Sherman Oaks that produces embroidered emblems bearing anti-gang messages.

With an estimated 150,000 gang members in L.A. — twice the foot soldiers of, say, the Salvadoran army at its height — the city's myriad street gangs routinely use pro and college sports apparel to signify gang affiliations.

Marden says she learned this the hard way when her nephew, 16, was shot at and a 19-year-old co-worker of hers was fatally wounded in separate incidents earlier this year. Both youngsters were wearing professional sports team jackets.

The shootings devastated the mother of three.

"That's when Marden said she came up with the iron- or sew-on anti-gang patches with slogans such as "I'm a sports fan. Gangs aren't my game" and "Peace, Tomorrow and Today. Gangs Aren't the Way." The patches, for baseball caps and jackets, sell for $3 to $5 each and come in the colors of Los Angeles' pro football, basketball, baseball and hockey teams. (For orders of more than 1,000, Peace in Time will customize patches.)

Marden first unveiled the patches during the National Sporting Goods Trade Show in Chicago earlier this year.

The goal of her company, she says, is to educate kids to avoid gangs. The mayor's office in Los Angeles, she says, recently purchased 300 emblems for city-sponsored after-school programs.

"What I want is for a lot of people to wear these and for the little kids growing up to see these things and think they don't want to be in gangs, either."

"I don't want to let these guys who have no respect for human life or private property intimidate me into being silent like everybody else," she says. "I've been silent all these years and not spoken up. It's time I speak up now."

Idaho New multi-millionaires plan no changes soon

BOISE (AP) — A Meridian couple, Fred and Martha Gibbons, said Monday they plan no immediate changes in their lifestyle, even after winning $22.1 million in the weekend Powerball drawing.

"Who could ever imagine winning $22 million?" Gibbons, 45, told a news conference at the Idaho Lottery Commission.

Minutes before, Lottery Director Wally Hedrick presented the couple with a replica check for $21.9 million, the largest jackpot ever won by an Idaho resident in a lottery.

Both Gibbons and his wife, 41, said they were in shock but planned a low-key approach to their windfall.

The couple were $200,000 richer Monday afternoon. The prize originally was announced at $21.9 million, but after national ticket sales were checked, the amount was boosted to $22.1 million.

Hedrick said that translates into 20 annual checks of $887,000 after taxes.

Gibbons, who has worked for eight years as a supervisor at the Boise microchip manufacturer, Micron Technology, went to work Monday at 5:30 a.m.

He worked until his wife picked

'We're going to be able to do a lot of things for a lot of people.'

— Martha Gibbons, lottery winner him up for a trip to the lottery agency. Later, they planned a visit to an accountant, but Gibbons fretted about getting back to work. "I feel dedicated to supervise the people who work under me," Gibbons said.

Both said they had little idea of how much money it was and it probably wouldn't sink in until they received the first "real money."

Martha works as a volunteer at the Meridian Chamber of Commerce visitor center. "We're going to be able to do a lot of things for a lot of people," she said.

The first thing they did is seek an unlisted telephone number, only to learn that because their Boise suburb is growing so fast, it might not come soon.

The Gibbons said daughter Tammy, 16, a junior at Centennial High School, learned about the jackpot at about the same time as her parents. Son John, 14, a student at Meridian Middle School, didn't know about the big prize when he went to school Monday.

"We didn't tell my son yet," Gibbons said. "We kinda felt they would have enough problems with school anyway. Give him a break, let him have one more day and then we will hit him with it tonight."

Both are Idaho natives. Gibbons lives on the Wendell area and his wife a Boise native.

Hedrick said it's the first time an Idaho resident has won the 15-state Powerball game.

They matched all five numbers drawn Saturday night, along with the Powerball number.

Hedrick said it's also the largest lottery prize won by an Idaho resident. Two Idaho Falls women won $12.3 million in an earlier game last February. An Idaho resident also got $7.3 million, one-third of a $22 million jackpot.

Eight Idaho residents also have won $100,000 in the Powerball game by matching the five numbers but not the Powerball.

Gibbons said he won $7 on scratch tickets earlier in the week, then bought a couple of Powerball tickets for the weekend game.

Andrus names Coeur d'Alene attorney Idaho's newest judge

BOISE (AP) — The new 2nd District judge job will be filled by a Coeur d'Alene attorney who brings a background of service as a member of the Idaho Commission of Pardons and Parole.

Ida Leggett, 44, was appointed by Gov. Cecil Andrus on Monday to succeed Linda Coppel Trout, who she appointed earlier to the Idaho Supreme Court.

Leggett and 4th District Judge Deborah Bai will be the only female district judges in Idaho, and Leggett is the first black woman to hold a high judicial position in Idaho.

"My focus will be to continue the fairness and dignity that people face when they go to court in the 2nd District," Leggett said.

She said she was a little surprised that she won the appointment.

"It was a good field," she said. "I met a couple of the applicants and they really impressed me."

Later, Andrus said the fact that Leggett was a woman and black wasn't a factor. "That didn't play into it at all," the governor said. "When the Judicial Council nominates them, that means they are qualified to fill that position."

The Idaho Judicial Council screened seven applications for the $74,401 per year position. "I'm thankful for the consideration given me by the Judicial Council and Governor Andrus in deciding I'm the right person for this," Leggett said.

The other finalists were Nez Perce County magistrates William Stielman and Duane Perry, and Lewiston attorney Dean Wullensaber.

She's a partner in the law firm of Jenkins and Leggett. Partner state Rep. Janet Jenkins, D-Coeur d'Alene, said the state will be getting "a deliberative sense of fairness and intellect."

"I think Governor Andrus probably has made another great and important decision for the people of Idaho. She's a fantastic trial attorney and has a great breadth of understanding and wisdom. She will bring a positive perspective to the bench," Jenkins said.

"Ida Leggett understands the court's responsibility from two distinct perspectives — first as an advocate and second as a member of Idaho's pardon and parole authority," the governor said.

"I am particularly impressed that she intends to lead the effort to make the citizen more comfortable in what sometimes can feel like the insider's realm of the courtroom," the governor said.

He said he was particularly impressed by the fact that as a divorced mother of three, she was able to take care of her family and put herself through law school.

He said Leggett would get rid of the perception that a person has to be part of the legal community's "insider club" to get big appointments.

Leggett, who has three grown children, received an undergraduate degree from the University of South Florida and graduated cum laude from the law school at Gonzaga University.

She served as a law clerk for the chief justice of the Washington Supreme Court.

Leggett planned to leave Monday afternoon for Orofino, where the Commission of Pardons and Parole has a number of parole hearings scheduled. "I can't say in good conscience no appointment," she said. "I will resign after this week's meetings and prepare for the district judge position."

Idaho Falls seeks break from INEL

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Faced with an uncertain future for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, local business and governmental leaders have a plan to bolster the economy and create new jobs.

The Idaho Falls Initiative is a $2 million, four-year campaign to balance and diversify the local economy, said Post Register Publisher Jerry Brady on Monday. The initiative is being taken in response to expected job losses at the INEL.

"We want to help to build a steady state of employment at a time when there is concern about a loss of jobs," said Brady, campaign organizer. Members of the Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce, City Council and Bonneville County Commission are partners in the project.

The plan is similar to a successful strategy used by residents of the Tri-Cities in eastern Washington. In 1988, Richland, Kennewick and Pasco were faced with closure of the Department of Energy's Hanford Site.

The Tri-Cities overcame their reliance on a federal employment by recruiting industries which created about 3,000 new jobs.

The region also became a bustling center for waste management companies.

Brady said a fund-raising drive, targeting everyone from Idaho Falls' largest businesses to residents, will be launched in the next few weeks. The DOE may contribute.

Raising the money is not expected to be a problem, Brady said. The National Community Development Service, an Atlanta concern that has helped other Western communities revitalize their economies, has spent the past few months studying the project's chances.

'Suspended' officer returns to work

BOISE (AP) — Attorney Jim Jones says it may have been a misunderstanding that led to the temporary suspension of Emmett policeman Grant Borje.

"We had a meeting today with the police chief and his attorney. He will be going back to work this evening," Jones said Monday. He's Idaho's former attorney general.

Borje said he was suspended after he arrested the son of Mayor Leroy

Campbell Friday night on a charge of driving with a suspended license.

"It may have been a misunderstanding that led to it," Jones said. "It has been determined that Grant handled the arrest properly." Jones said there were some allegations that too much force was used in the arrest. "He made a good arrest; he didn't do anything wrong," he said. "There were dozens of people around. That just wasn't the case."

Utility bill reportedly figured in murder

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A Blackfoot man accused of killing a relative argued with the victim over a $12.40 utility bill, Bingham County authorities say.

Jorge Navarro Martinez faces a Nov. 27 preliminary hearing on a charge of first-degree murder in the shooting death of Hugo Martinez Espino, 30, Bingham County Magistrate James Martsch ruled Monday. Navarro Martinez is also accused of using a gun in the commission of a felony. Navarro Martinez and the victim both worked at Nonparat in Blackfoot. Witnesses said the two had disputes at 2 a.m. and 4 a.m. Saturday about an electricity bill totaling $12.40. Navarro Martinez apparently owed Martinez Espino money.

A farm family's tragedy

Faith in God helps Ohio parents come to terms with death after babies drown in pond

QUAKER CITY, Ohio (AP) — Christopher Kuhns hugs his 7-year-old daughter, Krystal, as if it never left.

Michelle or little Melissa in his arms again.

back to the farmhouse with Michelle and Melissa, when he stopped on the sloping drive to feed cows by the fence.

into tears. "I pulled in and asked where my babies were. And he said they're in the water."

The Kuhns family stand together at the gravesite of daughters Michelle, far left, and Melissa, far right.

On Nov. 3, he helplessly chased a car carrying his two younger daughters as it crashed through a fence, rolled down a hill and plunged into a pond on the family's farm.

He had parked the car and turned off the engine before getting out, but one of the girls apparently turned the ignition key and put the car into gear.

Broken strands of barbed wire still dangle from the fence posts.

Kuhns, 36, and his wife, Robin, 33, now try to come to grips with the loss.

"How we're getting through this is our faith in God and knowing that our babies are little angels," said Mrs. Kuhns.

"My arms feel so empty," she said, her grief swelling up into tears.

But Mrs. Kuhns' eyes light up when she talks about her blond-haired, blue-eyed daughters.

She described Michelle as a "little spitfire" who often ran out of the house naked to greet her.

Melissa, whose first birthday would have been the day after the accident, was just starting to walk and was beginning to follow Michelle's mischievous ways.

"We often laugh and say, 'Right now Michelle's got Melissa' into all sorts of trouble up in heaven."

'Somehow that car was able to go down and avoid big trees that would have stopped it. It made a perfect path to the pond. He wanted them, and he wanted them then.'

— Mother Robin Kuhns

babies were able to turn an ignition and a gear." "Somehow that car was able to go down and avoid big trees that would have stopped it. It made a perfect path to the pond. He wanted them, and he wanted them then."

The Kuhns came to this rolling eastern Ohio farm country in 1983 from the Akron suburb of Cuyahoga Falls to build a life on the 48-acre farm.

Mrs. Kuhns got a job at John Glenn High School in New Concord teaching developmentally disabled children. Her husband stayed home with the children, raising cattle and fixing up the house.

On Nov. 3, Kuhns dropped Krystal at the school bus stop and was driving the posting, gravel road mission into park. While he was feeding the cows, he heard a click and saw the car move.

"You can never underestimate what a kid can do," said Kuhns. "If an adult can do it, they can do it."

He was unable to catch up with the car before it rolled into the pond. "I swam out there and tried to open the doors, but they wouldn't open," he said. Kuhns then ran up to the farmhouse and called for help.

Sheriff Landop Smith said that when he and a rescue squad arrived, the car was submerged.

Mrs. Kuhns, who was at school, was told there had been an accident at home. She said she feared the worst when she reached the farm. "I just knew, and my heart started sinking," said Mrs. Kuhns, breaking Kuhns' school attended the double funeral.

The girls are buried in a tiny church cemetery within walking distance of the farmhouse, and Krystal and her parents visit every day.

Mrs. Kuhns said she and her husband are comforted by knowing they showered Michelle and Melissa with love when they were alive.

"I can't think of a day that didn't go by that I held them both and always told them I loved them and gave them time," said Mrs. Kuhns. "Even though they didn't live long, I loved them every minute."

"Maybe parents could give their babies an extra hug and love and realize they don't know how long those babies will live. Life is funny. You don't know how long."

King: It's a new political ballgame

DEWITT, N.Y. (AP) — Throw the rules out because "the ballgame is new," said Larry King, defending himself against criticism that he's soft on politicians.

"I've been on the front page of The New York Times over 50 times. We must have asked some thing right," said the CNN call-in show host. "I don't know what wasn't asked of candidates this year."

During a speech Sunday, he said his show has helped reinvent politics.

"I think we performed a great public service," he said. President-elect Clinton has promised to appear on "Larry King Live" every six months, King said.

"I would expect that not only will you see the president on frequently, you'll see town halls, you'll see Peter appearing, you'll see the 'Today' show doing longer interviews, you'll see 'Good Morning America' taking phone calls," he said.

Seymour still considers 3rd ex-husband friend

Jane Seymour Wouldn't take alimony

$10,000 a month in alimony, but she still considers him a friend.

"If my husband felt he needed alimony, then he deserved it," the actress said in the December McCall's magazine. "Of course, if I were him I would have never taken it."

Seymour and David Flynn, her business manager and a real estate developer, were divorced last spring. She said she agreed to pay the money instead of fighting it because:

"We had to go through the misery of a public divorce. It has been incredibly hard. I didn't want to go to court because I felt the slander in the press was bad enough."

Despite the divorce, she said, she doesn't consider her relationship with Flynn over. "It's just different," she says. "I now consider David my friend and my co-parent."

They have two children, Katie, 10, and Sean, 7.

Couples can register as domestic partners

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Homosexual and unmarried heterosexual couples could register at City Hall as "domestic partners" Monday for the first time to get recognition and benefits previously reserved only for husbands and wives.

Registering under the city's domestic partnership ordinance, passed in September, gives the partners the same visiting rights at hospitals and jails as are given to husbands and wives. Registration requires just filling out a one-page form at the City Clerk's office.

Partners also can register at schools to get the same rights as husbands and wives regarding a dependent child.

The ordinance also allows city employees in domestic partnerships to get the same fringe benefits such as family health insurance, for their partners and dependents as would be available to married couples.

City Councilwoman Alice K. Wolf, who sponsored the legislation, said this city of about 95,000 people, was the first in the state to pass such a law, and the 19th community to do it in the country.

Zoo kills elephant over abscessed tooth

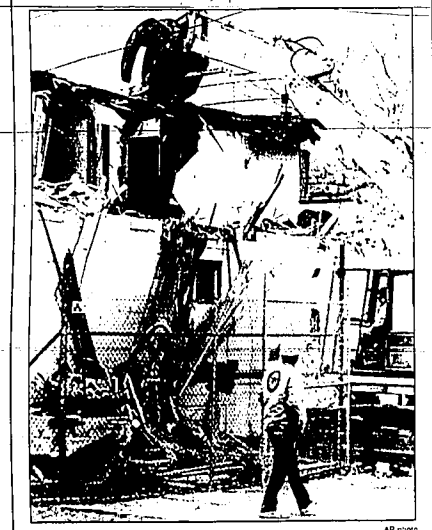

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The Buffalo Zoo euthanized an Asian elephant because a veterinarian said it wouldn't have survived the pulling of an infected tooth.

Lulu was killed Sunday with a lethal injection.

The 42-year-old elephant had lost weight because of an abcessed tooth. Last April, zoo veterinarian Allan Proxten tried drugs and an operation to clean the abscess, but the infection flared a week ago.

Zoo officials said pulling the tooth would have caused the elephant excruciating pain and left her unable to eat, making her lose weight faster.

A workman looks at demolition progress Monday on the Oxford apartments where serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer lived.

Demolition work begins on Dahmer apartment

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Workers on Monday began demolishing the apartment building where Jeffrey Dahmer killed and dismembered many of his 17 victims.

Grass and flowers will be planted on the site after the 19-unit Oxford apartment complex is torn down, said the building's owner, Campus Circle Property.

"I am so happy that it's coming down," said Shirley Hughes, whose son Anthony was slain there about two months before Dahmer's arrest. "We have been through so much. This represents new life."

Dahmer's killing spree ended in July 1991 when a man fled the second-story apartment, a handcut dangling from his wrist.

Hours after he alerted police, authorities found a vat of acid-cooked torsos, boxes of bones, and a freezer and refrigerator that stored body parts.

James Nicholson, 83, who lives behind the apartment, said he doesn't think the building should be torn down.

"So many people out here need homes. There were nice apartments in there," he said. "It's not the dead ones you worry about — it's the live ones."

Man steals doughnuts

BROKEN ARROW, Okla. (AP) — A hapless, hungry robber stole a dozen doughnuts from the Sugar House Bakery — at gunpoint. Bakery employee Ruth Poplin said her first customer of the day Saturday ordered a dozen glazed doughnuts. When she asked for $2.95, the man pulled out a pistol.

"He asked me how much money I had, and I thought he meant how much money I personally had. I told him I didn't have any," Mrs. Poplin said. "Then he said, 'Well, I'll just take the doughnuts, then.'"

She said he told her he was cold, hungry and out of work, and apologized twice as he left.

Each member of the United States Congress should be given neither expenses, nor salary, but an commission account based on the nation's current financial condition - said account to be credited according to national debt - and "debit" ed "according to national debt." So suggests one theorist. And only one, another as if "know."

Another example of why "Isan the Architect" was called that. In 1555, he put two architects, Postnik and Barma, to work on plans for St. Basil's Church in Moscow. So magnificent was their structure that Ivan had them blinded so they'd never design anything better.

Interest rates stay stable

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — No quick changes in interest rates are expected from the Federal Reserve, but analysts said Monday that the central bank may start pushing interest rates higher during President-elect Clinton's first year in office.

The Fed's top policy-making group, the Federal Open Market Committee, meets behind closed doors Tuesday. Its first session on interest rates since the election. Until recently, many economists had been forecasting that the central bank would decide to push interest rates down again in the face of continued economic weakness.

However, the prevailing view now is that barring any surprisingly weak economic reports, the Fed has made its last interest rate cut and could very well start raising rates by late spring.

"I believe policy will stay on hold for awhile until they see what the new administration is going to do," said David Wyss, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill Inc. "Depending on what the new administration's program looks like, they might well start raising rates around midyear."

Based on that view, many analysts believed that consumer and business rates will show little movement over the next six months.

Many analysts suggested that banks' prime lending rate, the benchmark rate for many business and consumer loans, will remain at 6 percent probably until mid-1993.

A Fed sitting on the sidelines would be quite a change from the activist stance the central bank has taken over the past 3 years. It cut interest rates 2 1/2 times as it struggled against a recession and lingering slowdown.

The last reduction came in September following a disappointing unemployment report when the central bank reduced its target for the federal funds rate, the interest banks charge each other on overnight loans, to 3 percent.

During the past recession, the Fed's rate cuts were basically the only tool government had to spur the economy because of the gridlock between Congress and the White House over budget and tax policy.

But in a joint news conference Monday, Clinton and Democratic leaders of Congress signaled that the era of gridlock was over and Clinton's economic stimulus program of increased public works spending and targeted tax business tax breaks would be given top priority early next year.

The Fed is going from the front seat where they were basically the only game in town during the Bush administration to the back seat," said David Jones, an economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. "Now instead of monetary policy, all of the emphasis will be on fiscal policy."

Economists said that the Fed is hesitant to do more to spur the economy on the interest-rate side of the equation because of the uncertainty over just what Clinton and Congress will come up with.

Long-term interest rates, which are more influenced by financial markets than Fed decisions, have been headed up for two months out of four that a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress would cause already huge budget deficits to soar, thus opening the door for greater inflationary pressures.

Fixed-rate mortgages, which reflect changes in long-term bond rates, have headed higher for two months. After dropping to a year low of 7.84 percent last September, rates hit 8.32 percent last week, the highest since last June, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

Market slumps as economy strengthens

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell Monday in a wary response to accumulating evidence that the economy is gathering strength.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 27.29 points to 3,205.74.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume came at an estimated 173.51 million shares as of 2 p.m. MST, against 192.32 million in the previous session.

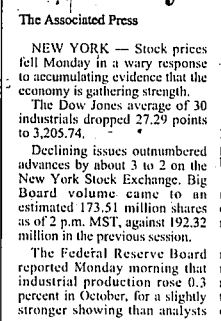

The Federal Reserve Board reported Monday morning that industrial production rose 0.3 percent in October, for a slightly stronger showing than analysts had been expecting.

Separate data showed the economy operating at 78.5 percent of capacity, up from 78.2 percent last month, up a tenth of a percentage point from the month before.

Those reports jibed with other recent data suggesting that the economy had picked up some momentum since last summer.

Blue-chip stocks haven't responded to that news since the middle of last week. Analysts note that a belief is spreading that the Fed has finished its credit-easing for this cycle.

Spies find work in business world

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Now that the Cold War is over, what is there to do for the spies who came in from the cold?

Plenty, if they go corporate. Ex-secret agents will be needed to spy on rival companies and disloyal or drug-using employees, according to speakers at a three-day symposium and trade show that opened Monday in Washington.

And spies that stay in government service will be spending more time countering economic espionage, often by friendly governments, said Wayne Gilbert, assistant director of the FBI's intelligence division.

Combating economic espionage by foreign competitors and foreign governments is the focus of the International Security Systems Symposium and Exhibition at the Sheraton Washington Hotel. "It's growing," Gilbert told a morning session of the symposium on "Economic Espionage, The New War."

"We need to be aware that this goes on, and it's going to get more intense and competitive," he said.

Peter Schweitzer, author of an upcoming book on economic espionage, says the White House Office on Science and Technology estimates such spying costs the U.S. economy $100 billion a year. Schweitzer, whose book "Friendly Spies" details economic espionage by Germany, Japan, France, Israel and South Korea, says access to information and technological secrets is the critical point "in the economic rivalry and the global marketplace today, and whoever controls information is able to use that information to their economic advantage is going to win that competition."

On a lower floor of the hotel, corporate security chiefs and foreign embassy personnel filled a room with unfurled U.S. military officers and established units of surveillance equipment right out of a Tom Clancy techno-thriller.

Kenneth Kennedy, vice president of operations for Cybernetics Inc., of Roanoke, Va., shows how the company's security robot works.

Winn Schwartan, author, electronics expert and self-styled "information warrior" who has written a book about the threat of computer terrorism, said American business and society have become increasingly dependent on computers and communications systems without sufficiently protecting them from vandals, thieves and terrorists.

damage on the U.S. economy for "chump change," said Schwartan, whose book "Information Warfare" describes such nighttime developments as a high energy radio frequency gun that can make a computer system crash.

The end of the Cold War does not mean the end of East-West espionage, just a change in objectives and loyalties, said the FBI's Gilbert.

"There's a lot of former KGB officers roaming around in joint business ventures," he said, adding "we don't know where their allegiance is now."

Gilbert said there were 20 nations engaged in economic spying, although he wouldn't identify them. "They're not out to do us in militarily. They're just looking for an (economic) advantage," he said.

In the exhibition hall, scores of booths sought to entice buyers for devices to encode sensitive data, shred secret documents, detect explosives or illegal narcotics, eavesdrop on sensitive conversations or thwart outsiders from eavesdropping on you.

Cybermotion Inc., of Roanoke, Va., was demonstrating a video camera-equipped robot, Splinter, that acts as an electronic night watchman.

"It gets guards out of the role of having to walk a route endlessly," said company spokesman John Holland. The battery-operated, computer-guided, 400-pound machine that looks more like an industrial floor waker, "does the really dumb things so you can hire smarter people to provide additional security," he added.

On another aisle, Harrington Instruments Inc. demonstrated its IonScan, which can detect even minute traces of drugs or explosives without invasive procedures by scanning the speed of particles obtained from suspects' clothing, autos or luggage.

"It's fantastic," Harold Luning, an economist and head of a Washington consulting firm, said of the gathering. "This is the economy right now," he said, explaining what he was doing among so many espionage types. "This is the most important sector of any economy. You don't want your competitor to get an edge," he added.

Legitimate firms run afoul of software police

SEATTLE (AP) — One call to the Piracy Hotline is all it takes for the "Software Police" to come knocking at your computers.

Parametrix Inc. of Seattle found that out last year when the "Software Police," also known as the Software Publishers Association, showed up with a search warrant and a U.S. marshal to audit their computers.

'The problem is that you end up employing people who don't want to follow convention. We hire hackers. To them it's not stealing, they just want to play with the programs.'

— John Davison, AutoDesk Retail Products

The search turned up dozens of copies of unauthorized software programs and meant a penalty of $350,000 for Parametrix.

The SPA says too many companies "soften" — buying one copy of a program and making copies for as many computers as they have.

It seems so easy — and it's just as easy to get caught. "It only takes one phone call to the 800-number to get the ball rolling. Anyone taking that chance is living on borrowed time," says Peter Beruk, litigation manager for the Washington D.C.-based SPA. "You can run, but you can't hide."

And the stakes just got higher. President Bush recently signed a bill which elevates commercial software piracy from a misdemeanor to a felony. The law imposes prison terms of up to five years and fines of up to $250,000 for anyone convicted for stealing at least 10 copies of a program, or more than $2,500 worth of software.

Those in the computer industry say softlifting will be hard to prevent unless programmers are better policed.

AutoDesk Retail Products in Bothell has met obstacles in educating its staff on the law. AutoDesk makes computer-assisted drawing programs. "The problem is that you end up employing people who don't want to follow convention," AutoDesk manager John Davison said. "We hire hackers. To them it's not stealing; they just want to play with the programs."

"You got a computer, you got a hacker, you got a problem," he said.

Bootlegging results in an estimated loss of $1.2 billion to U.S. software publishers each year, Beruk said. That's out of annual sales of $6 billion to $7 billion.

One in five personal computer programs in use today is an illegal copy, according to the SPA's latest estimates.

SPA was founded in 1984, in part to enforce copyright infringement law for software manufacturers. Since then it has conducted 75 raids and filed 300 lawsuits. Beruk said.

Several of the larger raids have been in the Northwest.

The SPA settled a copyright lawsuit against Olympia, Wash.-based U.S. Intelco for $50,000 in May. Last year the University of Oregon Continuation Center in Eugene, Ore., agreed to pay $130,000 and hold a national conference on copyright law and software use as part of a negotiated settlement with SPA.

The tipoff call often comes to SPA's toll-free Piracy Hotline, from disgruntled employees, or ex-employees, reporting that the company is running illegal copies of software programs, Beruk said.

At Parametrix, an investigation backed up the initial report and SPA got a search warrant, Beruk said.

President Walt Dalrymple says the company now does a quarterly inventory of each computer. Once a year the firm brings in an independent company to check for unauthorized programs.

Softlifting, Dalrymple said, can be an easy tangle to get into. "Our company had had extremely rapid growth coupled with similar growth in the number of computers we use," he said. "We had no policy regarding the use of our software and simply didn't control what was happening."

Making bootleg copies of software is copyright infringement, and it's as illegal — and as easy — as copying a cassette tape or a video tape. A cassette costs $8, a video maybe $25, while computer programs can cost hundreds and even thousands of dollars.

Audio and video tapes come with FBI warnings, and software comes with a notice of copyright penalties on the box. But softlifting isn't taken seriously, said Julie Schaeffer, director of the Washington Software Association.

In its effort to follow the law, The Boeing Co. in Seattle has a department of "Software Accountability. AutoDesk has an inventory.

The SPA itself says the problem is more one of education than enforcement. "The message copying software is so easy and because license agreements can be confusing, many people don't realize they're breaking the law," the SPA said in a policy statement.

But some do it intentionally. "We've heard of companies that have anti-SPA plans in place," Beruk said. "They have everything ready to delete."

How safe are your savings?

Rating services can tell

Knigh-Ridder News Service

Now that we've gotten Nov. 3 safely behind us, should we begin worrying about Dec. 19?

That's the day new federal banking regulations take effect. Under the new rules, some banks will be declared insolvent and shut their doors. The question is how many and where.

In the final presidential debate, Ross Perot cited a recent report that said 100 banks might close, costing the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) as much as $95 billion. The FDIC fund has $16 billion in reserve, and Congress granted the agency a $30 billion credit line last year.

Most economists think there's nothing to worry about, but then most economists thought the recession would be over by now.

While we're all waiting for Dec. 19 to come around, you might want to consider the stability of your bank — or savings and loan, for that matter. "If you're the best way is to use a rating service, where for a modest fee you can get a professional evaluation," said Justin Moran, spokesman for the Michigan Bankers Association.

One such rating service is offered by Veribanc Inc. of Wakefield, Mass. Veribanc has developed its own rating system, which it applies to every bank and S&L. For $10, it'll give you your bank's rating for the past four quarters.

A similar service is offered by Bauer Financial Reports of Coral Gables, Fla. Unlike Veribanc, Bauer offers a basic service for free. It will tell you whether your bank or S&L meets current federal capital requirements.

Sheshunoff Information Services of Dallas offers a more detailed overview of your bank's financial condition for $25.

How do the rating services conclude that a bank is in good shape?

Moran says that bank examiners generally rely on a set of principles called CAMEL — Capital adequacy, Asset quality, Management excellence, Earnings and Liquidity.

Finding out whether your bank has enough liquidity is a complex calculation, and whether it's well managed is a judgment call. The other three elements in the CAMEL equation, however, can be measured pretty easily.

Get your bank's annual report; it will generally provide a copy on request. Look up the value of shareholders' equity and divide that number by the value of the bank's assets. This capital-to-asset ratio tells you if the bank has adequate capital to survive if a bunch of its loans go bad.

"That should never be less than 5.5 percent for a very large bank," Moran said, "and it should be 6, 6.5 percent or more for a smaller bank."

To measure loan quality, look up the bank's level of nonperforming loans. These are loans that aren't being repaid, or on which the bank expects the debtor to stop paying soon. Divide that number by the total of outstanding loans. The resulting number tells you what percentage of the bank's loans have gone sour. The number should be no higher than 4 percent, and the lower it is, the better.

A good S&L will have fewer bad loans than a well-run bank. That's because so many S&L loans are mortgages, which are one of the safest kinds of loans.

Measuring earnings is easy enough. Check the bank's net income figure to see if it's earning a profit. Plainly, more is better.

Another good approach is to divide annual net income by the bank's total assets. This tells you how much money the institution earns on every $100 of its assets.

To obtain bank ratings, call Veribanc at (800) 44-BANKS, 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. MST Monday through Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Friday. To reach Bauer Financial Reports, call (800) 388-6086, 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. To reach Sheshunoff Information Services, call (800) 456-2340, 6:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

REMEMBER WHEN INTEREST RATES WERE OUTRAGEOUS?

Protect yourself. We honestly believe that interest rates will not remain as low as they are now. If you are even thinking about buying a car in the next couple of years, SHOP THEISEN MOTORS NOW!

For example, you can purchase a brand new 1993 Mercury Topaz Sport Coupe for 7.9% O.A.C. which will make your monthly payment very low. In our opinion, interest rates will rise again. We also offer 7.9% local bank financing O.A.C. on our economical 1993 Mercury Tracer 4 Door.

Remember that the difference between 7.9% and 10.9% will make a great deal of difference in your payments. 7.9% financing is less than we have been able to obtain for many years.

If you prefer to lease, you may now lease a beautiful 1993 Mercury Sable for only 1/2 of 1 percent! Can you imagine that? 24 month net lease, OR a beautiful 1993 Lincoln for 3/4 of 1 percent, 24 month net lease. Of course, you may also purchase at anytime or after 24 months is up.

DOESN'T THIS MAKE COMMON SENSE FOR YOU TO SHOP THEISEN MOTORS NOW?
