U.S., Europe dodge trade war

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States and Europe settled on Friday a bitter fight over farm subsidies that had threatened to set off a global trade war.

Both sides expressed hope that the breakthrough would lead to quick completion of a 108-nation effort to rewrite the rules of world trade.

The agreement was announced simultaneously in Brussels, headquarters of the 12-nation European Community, and in Washington where President Bush said he was "exceptionally pleased" with the deal.

"I am hopeful that the breakthrough that we achieved today will spur movement across the board in the ongoing negotiations" to break down barriers to world trade, Bush said.

Successful conclusion of the broader talks, known as the Uruguay Round for the country where they were begun in 1986, has been Bush's top trade priority since taking office. He now has at least a chance of seeing the negotiations wrapped up before he leaves office.

With Friday's agreement, the United States withdrew its threat to impose 200 percent tariffs on $300 million worth of European products beginning Dec. 5.

Those tariffs would have tripled the price Americans paid for European white wine as punishment for subsidies that the Bush administration says were costing American farmers $1 billion in annual lost sales of soybeans and other oilseed crops.

Beyond the soybean fight, negotiators also reached agreement for across-the-board reductions of other European farm subsidies. Europe's previous refusal to go along with American demands for the broader farm subsidy cutbacks had stymied efforts to complete the Uruguay Round for the past two years.

The rewrite of world trade rules, being held under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, seeks to lower barriers across a broad spectrum.

The administration has estimated that a successful Uruguay Round agreement has the potential of boosting world output by $5.25 trillion over the next decade.

EC Trade Commissioner Frans

Andriessen told reporters in Brussels he was hopeful that the major political decisions involving the Uruguay Round could be made by the end of December, although he said some of the technical details would not be wrapped up until sometime early next year.

GATT Director General Arthur Dunkel announced he would restart the negotiations next week in Geneva.

The Uruguay Round has drawn opposition in this country as well, primarily from protected U.S. industries that would face greater competition.

Senators turn MIA hunters

RACH GIA, Vietnam — American senators who visited two prisons and a remote mountain area on Friday found no evidence of American POWs but came away impressed by Vietnam's new spirit of cooperation.

The senators also returned with an appreciation of how hard it is to track down the missing in a land of jungles, hills and tropical rice paddies, a quarter-century after they disappeared.

Two of them, Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., and Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., flew to the wrong spot in pursuit of a tip that American servicemen had been seen there.

Despite the logistical problems, Kerry, Brown and Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said they sensed that the unprecedented cooperation they had obtained earlier in the week from officials in Hanoi was matched at the grass-roots level.

"I think in the last five days Vietnam proved its seriousness in answering questions and being over backwards in showing its willingness to help," said Kerry, the head of a Senate committee on POWs and MIAs.

"I think in every regard today our expectations were met," he said.

Stradley's voice: 'I didn't mean to kill the child,' police told

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two days after 2-year-old Amanda Hostetler died, Donnell "Bud" Stradley told police he didn't mean to kill her.

Jurors listening to the second day of testimony in Stradley's murder trial Friday heard the defendant's voice for the first time in a Jan. 22 taped interview with two Twin Falls police detectives.

"I didn't mean to kill the child," Stradley said. His voice shook and was interrupted by occasional sobs as he continued. "I loved her a lot. She always had a smile for me... I love children."

Stradley sat quietly next to his attorneys and listened to the recording during Friday's proceedings.

The taped interview is at the core of the charge against Stradley. Prosecutors say the little girl struck her abdomen on the wooden corner of a water bed at the end of a toss by Stradley. Amanda died of internal bleeding caused by a tear in abdominal tissue, according to the pathologist who performed an autopsy.

Jurors were allowed to listen to the tape after strenuous objections from Stradley's attorney, Twin Falls County Public Defender Mike Wood.

Wood is attacking the credibility of the tape and of the two detectives who interviewed Stradley because only a portion of that four-hour interview was recorded.

Detective Jack Freeman said he and Detective Ron Roberson expected Stradley to be a witness against Amanda's mother, Jodie Hostetler. They began recording only after Stradley changed his original story and told of the toss onto the bed.

Stradley signed a statement confirming that he had been read and understood his rights before the interview.

Freeman's notes of the longer untaped part of the interview are skimpy and conflict with his testimony. Wood said during cross-examination.

One major point of contention is just how far Stradley is alleged to have tossed Amanda to the bed.

He told police the child was upset, and he began playing "airplane" with her — holding her up with one hand under her knees and another under her rib cage — and swinging her around the living room.

He said he then tossed her onto the waterbed from 10-11 feet away, according to Freeman.

But Wood challenged that statement, pointing out that Freeman never asked Stradley on the tape how far he tossed the child. Instead, he asked Stradley to estimate the distance between the chair he had been standing next to in the living room and the bedroom door, to which Stradley answered 10 feet.

That line of questioning will likely continue when the trial resumes at 9 a.m. Monday.

On the recording, Stradley said he laid Amanda on the bed after the toss, thinking she had the wind knocked out of her.

When he went to check her condition later, Stradley said Amanda wasn't breathing.

"I panicked, freaked out," he told the Prince, commoners save Windsor art

The Associated Press

WINDSOR, England — Royals and commoners joined Friday to rescue art treasures from a fast-spreading fire that severely damaged a historic banquet hall and several other rooms at Windsor Castle, the weekend home of the queen.

Queen Elizabeth II spent the afternoon of her 45th wedding anniversary surveying the damage and helping to evacuate treasures from the castle 20 miles west of London, a royal residence for 900 years and the oldest still in use.

Prince Andrew, who was at Windsor when the fire broke out, rushed to join hundreds of commoners who formed a human chain to take whatever artworks they could to safety.

Flames danced above the castellated roofs into the night, and the fanciful towers stood in black relief against fountains of sparks and billowing smoke turned orange by the fire.

"The queen is devastated, absolutely devastated," said Andrew, the queen's second son, who said he had been inside St. George's Hall, where the monarch has hosted Ronald Reagan, Mikhail Gorbachev and other world leaders.

"It's a pretty nasty mess," he said. Late Friday, the queen, who had planned to spend the weekend at Windsor, stood in the central courtyard surveying the tangle of fire trucks, hoses and ladders. More than 225 firefighters and 35 fire engines were at the castle.

Five firemen and three civilians were taken to hospitals with minor injuries, officials said.

Dean Landsdale, 21, a decorator working at the palace who was treated for burns, said the private royal chapel, where the fire began, "was an inferno."

"The curtains were on fire and walls were burning — it was all going up," he said after treatment. "We dragged paintings into the gallery. I dragged three or four out with other people, then

Weather summary

The National Weather Service said snow fell over eastern Idaho and the north central mountains Friday, while skies cleared in the southwest area of the state as the weather system moved eastward.

Some of the greatest precipitation amounts recorded Friday included Pocatello, with 5.4 inch and five inches of snow on the ground and .35 at Spencer, with 10 inches of snow on the ground.

In the southwest, 28 inch at Emmett fell as rain, and 10 inches of snow was reported on the ground at Dixie and five inches at Red River.

Gusty winds were reported over much of eastern Idaho. Burley had a peak gust to just over 42 mph. Gusts in the 10 to 20 mph range were noted over southwest Idaho during the night.

Another large storm system was working toward the Pacific Northwest coast and is expected to bring a very windy day to Idaho today.

The storm is being fueled by warm moist air from south in the Pacific and should bring widespread rain and snow to the Gem State beginning in the north this afternoon and spreading across the rest of the state tonight and Sunday. A slow clearing trend will bring cold temperatures and snow showers statewide by Tuesday.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 52 degrees at Payette. Ketchum reported the coldest at 12 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 84 degrees at Key West Naval Air Station, Fla. The lowest was zero at Enosburg, Vt.

Tornadoes hit Louisiana; snow falls over wide area

The Associated Press

Tornadoes belted Louisiana on Friday while heavy snow built up in Utah, Minnesota and Wyoming. Rain and some snow fell over the Mississippi Valley.

One injury, a broken arm suffered by a school teacher, was reported in Thibodaux, La., after a funnel cloud set down. No one was hurt when another twister damaged a trailer park in Bayou Blue.

Strong thunderstorms raged across the Gulf Coast by afternoon. High winds knocked over a mobile home and overturned several boats in southern Louisiana. A tornado watch was posted for parts of Mississippi and Alabama.

More than 2 feet of snow fell in the Wasatch Mountains of Utah, with lesser totals at lower elevations. Up to 9 inches fell in north-central Minnesota. Storm warnings and advisories were posted across both states, as well as parts of Wisconsin.

Up to 5 inches of morning snow fell in Wyoming, where heavy drifts brought warnings about blowing snow.

Residents in Kansas, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle stocked up on supplies to prepare for snowstorms forecast through the weekend.

Rain accompanying a cold front extended from the lower Mississippi Valley into parts of Minnesota and upper Michigan early in the afternoon.

Rainfall for the six-hour period ending at 1 p.m. EST included about 1 1/2 inches at New Orleans and Baton Rouge in Louisiana. More than 1 inch fell in Houston.

A flood watch was posted through the night in central and southwestern Missouri. Springfield, Mo., received 1.37 inches of rain by noon, to surpass the record for the date.

bid to oust gay sailor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department on Friday renewed its effort to oust from the Navy a gay sailor who was reinstated this month by a federal judge in Los Angeles.

The department, shifting strategy, appealed to a federal appeals court here to overturn the temporary order reinstating Petty Officer Keith Meinhold, 30, to his old job.

The government wants to shift the case from the San Francisco-based 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit here.

A Justice Department source, requesting anonymity, said the move was prompted in part by hopes the government will get more favorable treatment in the appeals court in the nation's capital.

Department lawyers, in a legal brief, said the appeals court in Washington has authority in the case because Meinhold is seeking back pay of less than $10,000. The appeals court for the federal circuit has jurisdiction over such relatively minor financial claims against the government.

The appeal said putting Meinhold back in his old job violated Navy policy and his "presence in the military environment ... seriously impairs the accomplishment of the military mission."

U.S. District Judge Terry J. Hatter Jr. in Los Angeles told government lawyers Monday that since they had previously appealed his reinstatement order to the 9th Circuit Court, Hatter no longer had jurisdiction in the case.

Hatter earlier ordered the Navy to reinstate the 12-year veteran.

Litigated one-and-felt-my-hands-burning

"There were about 20 blokes trying to save the paintings, but eventually it got too bad," he said.

Palace officials said three drawing rooms were damaged; and the ceiling collapsed in St. George's Hall. But Andrew said as few as six paintings were lost.

David Harper, deputy Berkshire county emergency planning and fire officer, said the fire had been contained Friday night, but could continue to burn until midday Saturday.

The fire, reported at 11:37 a.m. (37 a.m. MST), was spotted in curtains in the chapel, where workers were wrapping up paintings in preparation for renovation work, Andrew told reporters.

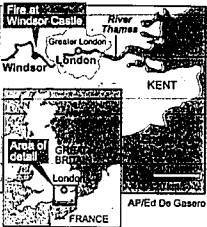

"There is no idea how it started other than in the private chapel," he said.

Scotland Yard ruled out any suspicion of terrorist involvement.

The castle was founded by William the Conqueror in the 11th century and expanded and altered through the centuries. Henry II put up the Round Tower, one of the most photographed parts of the castle, while Edward IV began the construction of St. George's Chapel, where Henry VIII and Charles I are buried.

Andrew and hundreds of soldiers and workers on the grounds grabbed pictures, clocks, tables and all sorts of ornaments and rushed with them to safety. Books and other small pieces were hidden out in a human chain, and a dozen or more soldiers groaned beneath the weight of a heavy carpet.

The queen later joined them. "She is helping to take stuff out of the castle — works of art," Andrew told reporters.

Stradley didn't respond to his question, but was walking around the living room, mumbling to himself and clutching a teddy bear, Baishach said.

Amanda's mother was visibly upset and "in a state of weeping," Doug Rasmussen said. She asked questions and acted the way most people act when their child is in the emergency room, he said.

"The boy here never spoke to me," Rasmussen continued, referring to Stradley, 29. Stradley was quiet and withdrawn, and only spoke when Amanda's grandmother arrived and demanded to know what had happened, he said.

He tried unsuccessfully to perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation, then called 911, he said.

Former Twin Falls police officer Bob Peace was the first to respond.

Stradley met him at the front door of the house and said "help my baby," Peace said.

Peace carried Amanda into the living room and performed CPR, but was unable to get a pulse or any signs of breathing.

He said Stradley appeared "scared, nervous."

Paramedics soon arrived and took over the care of Amanda and took her to the hospital.

Emergency Medical Technician Ken Baishach said he went into the house to see if Stradley and Hosteler wanted a ride to the hospital.

complaint that the Bush administration had compromised too much in its haste to get a deal with the Europeans before leaving office.

"We're giving up too much and getting very little in return," he said.

Dean Kleckner, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said that the soybean settlement would not limit European production enough to adequately compensate American farmers but would "help U.S. farmers recapture a portion of the trade they have been losing for many years."

Originally, the United States had sought elimination of all trade-distorting farm subsidies by the end of this century.

Under the agreement reached Friday, the goal was scaled back to a 21 percent reduction in the volume of export subsidies over six years and a 20 percent reduction in domestic supports.

The administration defended the deal as the best achievable. Officials said it still marked a substantial breakthrough by including farm subsidies in the GATT for the first time and would pave the way for deeper reductions in future negotiating rounds.

Agriculture Secretary Edward

Madigan said that the pact would not force any further cutbacks in American farm subsidies beyond those already established in the 1990 farm bill.

While the farm subsidy issue has received all the attention over the past two years, there are sizable differences still remaining in many of the other areas under negotiation.

Even if this timetable is held to, the final pact could not be ratified by Congress until after Bush leaves office. Thus, it will be up to President-elect Clinton to guide the massive package through Congress.

Clinton, who was generally supportive of the Uruguay Round during the campaign, was guarded in his response Friday.

"I'm hopeful but we've got to look at it," he told reporters. "I've been fooling with farm issues for 20 years now. We've got to look at it, see the details."

U.S. forces won't deliver food to Bosnia

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration said Friday that U.S. combat forces would not participate in delivering food to towns in Bosnia.

On Thursday, as the United Nations deepened its involvement in the Balkans war, French troops exchanged gunfire with Serbian troops while bringing food to the besieged town of Bosanska Krupa.

It was the first time U.N. peacekeepers fired to protect supplies. Joseph Snyder, a State Department spokesman, said there were no U.S. combat forces in the expanded U.N. ground operation except for 15 Americans assigned to headquarters.

"We are contributing what we think is in an appropriate way," he said.

He cited the delivery of supplies into Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, by the U.S. Air Force.

Senate probes federal agencies' actions

WASHINGTON — A Senate committee is questioning actions by 18 federal agencies in the waning days of the Bush administration, including instances of converting political appointments to career positions.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee wants the General Accounting Office to investigate what it says are numerous complaints from federal employees about allegedly improper moves designed to pre-empt Bill Clinton's government.

They range from a restructuring of the Interior Department office that oversees "historically black colleges" to the reported shredding of documents at the Justice Department.

The committee also wants the GAO, Congress' watchdog arm, to investigate some 30 alleged instances of political appointees improperly converting to career status, a practice critics call "burrowing in."

Governor apologizes for remark

JACKSON, Miss. — Gov. Kirk Fordice apologized Friday for saying America was a Christian nation. The rabbi at the state's largest synagogue said he was satisfied.

Fordice said at a Republican governors' gathering in Wisconsin this week that "the less we emphasize the Christian religion the further we fall into the abyss of poor character and chaos in the United States of America."

About 20 leaders of different denominations in the Mississippi Religious Leadership Conference called Fordice's comments "deeply disturbing and divisive."

Planned Parenthood names president

NEW YORK — Planned Parenthood named a new president Friday, and she said the group will be more active in health-care reform because it anticipates less conflict with the Clinton administration about abortion rights.

Pamela-Maraldo, 44, who trained as a nurse, will take over Planned Parenthood Federation of America in February. She replaces Faye Wattleton, who resigned in April after 14 years to be host of a syndicated television show.

Maraldo, a Roman Catholic, has been chief executive officer of the National League for Nursing since 1983. The agency promotes health care.

Jury thrusts rancher foreman into spotlight

DENVER (AP) — The way rancher Wes McKinley tells it, when he and his fellow grand jurors turned on a U.S. attorney during a complex investigation of the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant, it was just another day's work.

"It's like hauling hay. You work every day until it's done," McKinley said this week, shortly after publicly reading a letter asking President-elect Clinton to look into the investigation of possible environmental crime.

McKinley was foreman of the panel that was charged with investigating the Rocky Flats plant, 15 miles northwest of downtown Denver.

The plant had been closed in 1989 after the FBI found numerous environmental and safety violations.

But when the panel wanted to indict officials of the Energy Department and Rockwell International, which formerly managed Rocky Flats, U.S. Attorney Mike Norton said there was insufficient evidence. The grand jury was released in February after 2½ years of work.

Several months ago, a weekly newspaper, Westword, received anonymous information about the workings of the grand jury and its general dissatisfaction with Norton. After that, U.S. District Judge Sherman Finesilver ordered records sealed and warned the grand jurors he would tolerate no additional breaches of secrecy.

At a news conference Wednesday with several other grand jurors, McKinley read the panel's letter.

While the letter expressed dissatis-

Rocky Flats grand jury foreman Wes McKinley reads a letter in Denver on Wednesday from the federal grand jury to President-elect Clinton.

faction with Norton, it did not refer specifically to the inner workings of the panel. No charges have been filed against any of the 23 grand jurors.

Legal experts say the grand jury's public request is highly unusual.

"I've never seen it. Grand juries are usually very controlled by prosecutors," said William Pizzi, a University of Colorado professor and former federal prosecutor in New Jersey.

"We typically say the grand jury is a rubber stamp for whatever the prosecutor wants to do."

"If it wasn't a runaway grand jury it came close to it," said Ron Strable, a retired attorney and former speaker of the Colorado House of Representatives, which often considered legislation about state grand jury operations.

McKinley, who drove 300 miles each month from his ranch near Walsh in southeastern Colorado to spend several days on the grand jury, called the experience educational.

"When they said this was about Rocky Flats, I remembered back in the hippie days when people would protest and live in these tent cities," McKinley said, referring to years of demonstrations at the plant.

"I kept thinking of John Steinbeck and 'Tortilla Flats,' where all those homeless people lived. That's how naive I was. When I finally found out what it really was, I was really embarrassed."

If McKinley was initially confused by the grand jury's subject, another panel member, Denver attorney Kenneth Peek, was in awe.

"I had no experience with criminal law. I don't do environmental law and I don't do criminal law. I'm a commercial litigator," he said.

He said he went into it with a sense of duty and obligation to be fulfilled.

The panel's letter asks that a "suitable independent person" be appointed to investigate "whether any federal criminal laws or rules may have been violated during" the grand jury's service.

It asks the prosecutor to prove violations of laws or rules "in subsequent matters related to that investigation by any Justice Department employee who may have been involved with the case in Colorado or Washington."

Judge bars White House from erasing tapes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge temporarily ordered the White House on Friday to retain its computer records, expressing a fear they could be erased before he decides whether they must be preserved.

The 10-day injunction by U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey applies to backup computer tapes of President Bush, the president's staff, the National Security Council and the Archivist of the United States.

The case began in 1989 when another federal judge issued ordered the Reagan administration not to destroy its computer records. The central issue in the case, still unresolved, is whether the backup tapes must be preserved under federal records law.

The Bush administration contends the tapes, principally electronic mail between White House staffers, are not official records. Nonetheless, government investigators learned a great deal about the Iran-Contra affair from former national security aide Oliver North's backup computer records.

While Bush administration officials "contend they are not currently planning any wholesale purge of their electronic records," Richey said, "they are unwilling to guarantee that such a purge will not take place."

"In fact, history is full of instances where the outgoing president has decided to erase, burn or destroy all or substantially all presidential ... records before the end of his term," the judge said.

The suit was filed by groups interested in preserving the records, including the National Security Archive, the American Library Association, the American Historical Association and the Center for National Security Studies.

Observing that part of the lawsuit involves a Freedom of Information Act request for specific records, Richey said the claims must be given priority because of "the fear that these electronic records will be lost before the end of the Bush administration."

The plaintiffs also want the executive branch to issue clear rules to identify what records must be saved.

The plaintiffs' attorney, Michael Tankersley of the Public Citizen Litigation Group, said the electronic mail is saved automatically on a backup system unless an employee immediately erases it.

Deficit may rise in creating jobs

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — President-elect Clinton hasn't ruled out a short-term increase in the federal deficit if needed to revive the economy in January, a senior aide said Friday.

"The details have not been worked out," Clinton's communications director, George Stephanopoulos, said of the stimulus package being discussed.

Pressed on whether Clinton would be willing to drive up the deficit in the short run in order to get the economy moving, Stephanopoulos said, "OK, I haven't ruled it out."

In more immediate financial matters, the aide said the Clinton transition team expects trouble holding its costs within the $3.5 million provided by the government and plans to accept some private contributions.

"Obviously, we're going to watch every penny we spend," Stephanopoulos said.

Jury indicts employee for embezzlement

BOISE — A former Boise city employee has been arrested in connection with the embezzlement of nearly $200,000 in city funds, reportedly through payments to at least one fake company through the City Hall computer system.

William L. Murray, 38, Emmett, was indicted by an Ada County grand jury on eight counts of grand theft, one count of Idaho tax evasion and one count of using a public position for personal gain, Boise Police Lt. Mike Webb said.

Murray was arrested Wednesday at his home by Gen. County Sheriff's deputies and taken to the Emmett jail. He is being held on $50,000 bond.

7th District judge to retire in January

REXBURG — Seventh District Judge Grant Young is retiring from the bench in January.

Young, 67, of Rigby, notified court officials he will retire after 10 years as district judge, mainly in Fremont, Madison and Jefferson counties.

"This has been a difficult decision for me to make because I enjoy the challenge of this work and the resulting association with so many wonderful people," he wrote to administrative Judge James Herndon of Blackfoot.

Young has had heart-related health problems in the past and said earlier this year he was thinking about retiring.

Pocatello to build library, city complex

POCATELLO — The Pocatello City Council has voted to proceed with plans to build a new library and city hall-police department complex.

In a 5-1 decision Thursday, with L. Ed Brown casting the lone dissenting vote, the council voted to break ground early next year. Council members also urged opponents to get behind the project and work toward its success.

The building plans — Pocatello's most ambitious municipal construction project in decades — include a 28,000-square-foot library to be connected with the city's old Carnegie Library.

A Buttrely Foods building will be renovated to house the city hall and police department. The project's cost is estimated at $5.2 million, with $3.1 earmarked for city hall and the remainder for the library.

Resolution stops talk of restructure

NAMPA — The state Board of Education has adopted a resolution to halt its members from talking about restructuring the universities without bringing it before the panel first.

Board President Karl Shurtiff of Boise was not at the Thursday meeting in Nampa and could not be reached for comment. He recently upset other members by proposing sweeping changes in higher education while he was out in the field before the other regents even heard about them.

The resolution, drafted by Joe Parkinson of Boise, said it is the board's "preference" that major proposals to restructure the schools be brought before the panel first.

U of I may hire liaison to Washington

NAMPA — University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser may hire a special assistant for four months with a $22,000 salary, the state Board of Education has decided.

The board's unanimous vote Thursday allows Boise consultant Martin Peterson to begin working on Dec. 1. He will work as a liaison between the university and business and governmental leaders in Boise and Washington, D.C.

Board member Roy Mosman of Moscow said he would have some reservations if Peterson works as a lobbyist for the school.

Later, she conceded Peterson would do some lobbying, but will also develop ties between Idaho and the state, nation and foreign countries.

Engineers investigate cracks in bridge

BOISE — Ada County Highway District engineers are trying to find out what caused numerous cracks in the Capitol Boulevard Bridge, reopened in February after a seven-month, $1.7 million restoration.

The scenic bridge was restricted to two lanes Thursday as design consultants mapped a pattern of cracks in the new concrete.

"I want to emphasize that there's nothing wrong with the bridge structurally," said L. Kent Brown, highway district engineer.

Most concrete exposed to weather develops cracks due to shrinking, but they usually are shallow and in a random pattern. Many of the cracks on the Boise bridge run in the same direction, and some go completely through the 8-inch concrete road bed, Brown said.

Ex-presidential candidate may run in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Bo Gritz, the former Green Beret and Populist Party candidate for president, says he's thinking about running for governor of Idaho.

Gritz

Gritz, who received 10,281 Idaho votes in the Nov. 3 general election, said he rented a home in Boise in October, although he won't say where.

He's looking for a big-acre spread for a permanent home, he said in an interview with his Sandy Valley, Nev., home. His real estate reconnaissance missions have centered on the St. Anthony area in eastern Idaho, not far from the Grand Teton Mountains along the Idaho-Wyoming border.

But he hasn't ruled out "beautiful" Priest Lake, he said. If he decides against running for governor of Idaho, Gritz said he'll settle in Idaho to open an "outback" camp for boys, teaching self-sufficiency and possibly helping them meet Eagle Scout requirements.

He said he was concerned about the state of the nation, particularly the erosion of constitutional rights.

"I'm very serious about running for it if it looks like our rights are going to be further eroded," Gritz said. "I'll probably throw my hat in the ring for Idaho, hoping Idaho might be a state where people will wake up and realize, we have to make a stand somewhere."

Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced he will not run for re-election after four terms.

Gritz, 53, is a retired lieutenant colonel in the Army Special Forces who gained national fame as the inspiration for the "Rambo" and "Missing in Action" movies.

He gained attention in Idaho when he successfully negotiated an end to a standoff near Naples in northern Idaho, where Randy Weaver and others held off an army of federal officers.

Weaver also is a former Green Beret and Gritz was able to talk him into giving up peacefully after getting a promise that prominent defense attorney Gerry Spence, Jackson, Wyo., would represent him.

He campaigned for president as a strict constitutionalist, with the belief that the income tax is evil and the CIA is run by drug dealers. He's big on private property rights and less government.

A pocket of counties in eastern Idaho gave Gritz his best support. Bonneville County gave him 1,433 votes. He also got 886 in Bingham and 861 in Bannock.

"I'll give Andrus some competition," Gritz said, apparently unaware that the governor is not running. "I think Andrus is a good man, but a product of the political machinery."

Scott Peyton, Andrus' press secretary, said Friday the governor had no response to Gritz's claims.

"The governor has said repeatedly that he has no plans to seek a fifth term even though he is asked to run almost every day," Peyton said.

Rankin, others fined for late sunshine reports

BOISE (AP) — The organization of tax activist Ron Rankin is among more than 20 individuals and groups assessed fines for filing late campaign financial reports under the Idaho Sunshine Law.

Rankin

Penny Yursa, election administrator in the secretary of state's office, said the notices went out Friday to candidates or groups who failed to meet the Oct. 27 deadline for pre-election reports.

Idaho Code 67-6625A requires a $10 fine each day the reports are late, based on mailing postmarks or personal or fax delivery.

Rankin, Coeur d'Alene, spearheaded the One Percent Initiative, seeking to limit property taxes. It was defeated by nearly 150,000 votes.

He also made an unsuccessful bid for the Idaho Senate.

Yursa said Rankin was fined $40 for being late with his personal report and his Idaho Tax Relief Committee was fined the same amount. The fines actually are in the name of Alice Rankin, his wife and listed as treasurer on the reports.

Rankin said he got caught up in the battle to win approval for the initiative just before the election. "It was a matter of being overwhelmed," he said.

Other fines, usually sent out in the name of the treasurer of the candidate's political committee:

- Rep. Montie Beaudoin, D-Sandpoint, $10; Frank Henderson, Coeur d'Alene, GOP Senate candidate, $10; Rep. Donna Jones, R-Payette, $10; Kelly Buckland, Democratic Senate candidate, Boise, $10; Sen. Herb Carlson, R-Eagle, and his Democratic opponent, Jane Golden, $10 each.

Others are Democrat Carol Haley, Eagle, Senate candidate, $10; Rep. William Salt, R-Meridian, $10; Democrat John Barringer, Boise, House candidate, $10; Rep. Party Nufziger, D-Wendell, $10; Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, $10; Rep. Mel Richardson, R-Idaho Falls, $30 and Sen. Jerry Twigg, R-Blackfoot, $10.

Also, Idaho Energy Resources Campaign Committee, $10; Idaho Realtors PAC and Idaho Realtors Issues Mobilization PAC, $10 each; Idaho Rams PAC, $10 and Libertarian Party of Idaho, $10.

Perot backers start initiatives on term limits, contributions

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho supporters of Ross Perot say they're starting two initiatives to limit the time people can spend in public office and how much money can be contributed to get them there.

"We feel that this is just as important as the original effort was," said Barbara Marsh of Pocatello. "It's going to require people who are running for government to more closely communicate with their constituency."

Marsh helped coordinate the statewide move to place Perot on the Idaho ballot. She said the new effort will be nonpartisan and will include Perot backers and others interested in good government.

Two draft initiatives were on their way to the state on Friday. They will be reviewed by the attorney general's office.

Once the petitions are in final form, supporters must collect 32,061 signatures to place the initiatives on the 1994 ballot.

Marsh said she hopes to collect 5,000 more signatures than required by state law. "That's going to take about six to nine months to get," she said.

Boise major cause of river's pollution

BOISE (AP) — Boise residents must clean up their act to improve the condition of the Boise River near its mouth at the Snake River, state health officials say.

Through Boise the river is fine, but by the time it reaches Canyon County it is in poor enough condition that swimming is not recommended.

State monitoring has found the river from Boise to the Snake is polluted from several sources, including agricultural runoff, city sewers and storm drains.

In Boise, storm drains are the biggest culprit. Everything from detergent to wash cars to fertilizer spread on lawns can find its way into drains, which eventually dump into the river.

Magistrate acquits 5 men in weapons case

BONNERS FERRY (AP) — A magistrate has acquitted five men charged with possessing concealed weapons near an armed standoff at the northern Idaho cabin of Randy Weaver in August.

Following a one-day trial, Magistrate Barry E. Watson on Thursday ruled before the case went to the jury the state had not shown the defendants committed the misdemeanor crime as defined by Idaho law.

Watson and attorneys for both sides agreed that law is poorly written.

Acquitted were Evan M. Dowling, 20, Marietta Ga.; Donald S. Durham, 20, Beaverton, Ore.; Stephen P. Shallemberger of Portland, Ore.; Joseph E. Hope, 21, Millwaukie, Ore.; and Jason C. Timmons, 19, Millwaukie.

They were arrested Aug. 25 near Naples in the midst of the 11-day standoff between Weaver and federal authorities.

The defendants told authorities they were looking on Highland Flats Road for a place to view the Weaver residence during the standoff in which a federal deputy marshal, Weaver's wife and son were killed by gunfire.

Agents found several firearms in the vehicle of the defendants. A magistrate ruled early in the case that the firearms were stored legally.

Charges remained against the five for alleged concealment of a bayonet, a knife and a pair of chained sticks known as nunchucks.

World Iraq, U.N. disagree on compliance

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq's foreign minister on Friday said Baghdad was complying fully with conditions for lifting U.N. economic sanctions, but Western diplomats said the Security Council was not likely to agree.

Iraq's deputy prime minister, Tariq Aziz, and the foreign minister, Mohammed Said al-Sahaf, left Baghdad Friday for New York, where they will make their case before the Security Council on Monday.

Aziz, as quoted by the Iraqi News Agency, said he would discuss the council's "unjust position" toward Iraq, taken "under the pressure of the Bush administration."

The council imposed the sanctions to punish Iraq for invading Kuwait in August 1990. Baghdad was later routed from the emirate by U.S.-led forces in the 1991 Gulf War.

The Security Council periodically reviews Iraq's compliance with the U.N. demands and has repeatedly rejected Baghdad's claims to lift the sanctions. A major review, requested by Baghdad, is under way.

In a letter to the Security Council released Friday, Al-Sahaf said Iraq has "fully discharged the substantive obligations" imposed by the council at the end of the war.

A central demand was that Baghdad cooperate with U.N. experts in dismantling its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs, and missiles with a range greater than 90 miles.

On Thursday, Rolf Ekens, the chairman of the U.N. Special Commission overseeing the disarmament program, told reporters Iraq has not furnished a list of the foreign suppliers of technology and expertise for its nuclear weapons program.

Bosnia defies arms embargo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnia's army is heading into winter desperately short of weapons and supplies, and its leaders are stepping up their campaign for an end to the international arms embargo.

Foreign Minister Hriso Silajdic protests public pressure will force the U.N. Security Council to move to lift the ban. "Either stop the aggression or let us stop it," he said in an interview. "If not, hundreds of thousands of people will be dead."

Dervo Harbinja, a Bosnian army logistics officer, said a Bosnian government "wish list" would include tanks, armored vehicles, anti-tank weapons, ammunition and cold-weather apparel. He described the shortage of winter gear as a potentially critical problem.

"They have everything," he said of the Bosnian Serb forces surrounding Sarajevo. "We have very little."

Silajdic plans to attend a summit of Islamic countries in Saudi Arabia starting Dec. 1 to appeal for money and military backing from leaders who have voiced dismay about the sufferings of Bosnia's Muslim majority.

Austrian police nab 144 from drug ring

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Police have broken up a drug ring that smuggled heroin from Turkey and detained 144 suspects, law enforcement officials said Friday.

Since 1991, the organization has smuggled about 110 pounds of heroin into Austria through Yugoslavia and Eastern Europe, said Fritz Demal, the head of Vienna's narcotics squad.

He said 144 people had been detained since mid-June. Of those, 126 are being held in investigative custody. Police had warrants out for 60 more suspects.

Among those still at large is the alleged leader of the group, identified as 37-year-old Bogdan Dasic, a Serb who goes by the nickname "Robby."

Italian police strike at wealth of Mafia

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Striking at the Mafia's wealth, Italian authorities on Friday seized assets worth $385 million, police said.

The operation, code-named Unmasking and Cleaning-Up, targeted 32 members of the Madonia family, considered No. 2 in the Cosa Nostra hierarchy.

It came three days after the biggest organized crime sweep in nearly a decade put 75 people in jail.

In the latest operation, Palermo police reported that judges signed orders to seize title to 200 properties, 62 companies, 250 automobiles, six boats and the bank accounts of 250 people.

BLM withdraws from Clear Creek land bid

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Steep land values in northern Blaine County have prompted the Bureau of Land Management to withdraw from land exchange negotiations with the Idaho Land Board over state lands in Clear Creek Canyon on Bald Mountain.

The BLM was one of three parties bidding for ownership of a 640-acre "school section" on Baldy and an adjoining 43-acre parcel of state land. But when the Department of Lands assessed the value of the property in August it set a price tag of $1.6 million on the real estate.

"That would amount to an awful lot of range-land," said Delmar Vail, state director of the BLM, who halted staff negotiations with the state on the proposed exchange last month.

Vail noted that any exchange of BLM land elsewhere in the state for the property in Clear Creek Canyon would be based on fair market value. The value of most BLM land would be far less than the estimated $25,500 per acre value of the state land in Blaine County.

"I just don't think it's in the best interests of the people to make that kind of exchange," Vail said.

While the BLM is not interested in the 43-acre parcel, it remains committed to a land exchange for the less pricey 640-acre section, according to Vail. That land, assessed at $50-80 per acre, is included in a conceptual agreement between the state and the BLM for land exchanges over a five-year period.

But if the BLM doesn't want the whole 683 acres, the state is making no promises on the 640 acres, said Jay Bildebach of the Department of Lands.

The state Land Board is scheduled to decide on two private exchange proposals for the Clear Creek Canyon land at its Dec. 8 meeting. One of those proposals, submitted by Gene and Polly Bildebach, would open up a portion of the 640-acre section to real estate development along with the 43-acre parcel.

The Bildebachs, who live between the state land and Highway 75 south of Ketchum, have offered the state a right-of-way through their property to access up to four developable housing sites and the state's grazing lands beyond.

"Some of those sites would have to be on the 640-acre section," Bildebach pointed out.

In return, the Bildebachs are asking for a 350-foot buffer strip of state land where it borders their property, amounting to about 11 acres.

A second proposal, submitted to the state Land Board by Ketchum real estate agent Heath Baldwin more than a year ago, asks for 16-20 acres of the Clear Creek Canyon property in exchange for 40 acres of private land on the Sawtooth National Recreation Area. The state would then trade the SNRA land for Forest Service property it is interested in west of Fairfield.

Baldwin's proposal is complicated by questions about access to the state lands. The right-of-way offered in her proposal — the new Owl Rock Road south of Ketchum — was applied to the Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission by the Bildebachs in August. The commission ruled that permits for the road's construction violated county ordinances.

New permits have yet to be approved for the state, which is now closed to access. Any land exchange with Baldwin would likely be conditioned on those road permits, Bildebach noted.

Filer readies for 'School for 2000 and Beyond'

By Bertilia L. Redfern
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Superintendent James Fisher and board members discussed implementing Idaho's broad-based education reform movement, School for 2000 and Beyond, at Filer School District.

The multi-faceted plan sets up goals for school districts to improve student performance through a range of programs. Board members made no decision on the matter.

Fisher also reviewed the Idaho School Board Association's convention held last week in Boise. Board members Dale Coon, Doug Lincoln and Dave Ramseyer also attended.

The board also had this week's meeting in Hollister, so those attending took a tour of the elementary school Tuesday evening.

In other business:
• Written comments were reviewed by board members from Rudy Walker, a parent concerned about Outcome Based Education, in which students must master one task before going on to another.

Four months ago, board members heard a presentation from five Filer teachers about OBE. Since that presentation, the board has received comments from concerned residents about the program, although they have not made any decision on the issue.

Walker encouraged the board to further investigate the program.

The district policy regarding inoculation of students was presented and passed by the board. The new policy requires student records of inoculation up through the twelfth grade.

The budget for the school year was amended and adopted by board members. The amendment was necessary due to some unexpected expenditures and additional revenues.

Castleford will not pay $1,650 solid waste fee

By Diane Schorzman
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — The Castleford School Board voted at its recent meeting not to pay the $1,650 fee charged by the Twin Falls County Solid Waste District because of apparent inequities in assessing the fees.

Superintendent Henry Kilmer told the board that the fee charged to the Castleford School District is "just about what Filer and Buhl (schools) were charged."

Filer and Buhl have been charged less than $1 per student and Twin Falls about $3 per student, while Castleford has been billed at more than $5 per student.

"There doesn't appear to be any rhyme or reason as to how schools are being assessed," said Kilmer.

Kilmer also presented the board with a proposed controversial issues policy for review.

The district's current policy states that all visitors and speakers to the school must have prior approval of the principal.

The new policy says that "while we recognize that there are a lot of controversial issues and that we need to teach them," said Kilmer, the freedom to teach carries with it a responsibility that is determined by the basic ideals, goals and institutions of the local community and parents."

With regard to all sex education and instruction, the policy states that all supplemental materials shall be pre-approved by a committee of parents, teachers and parents representing a cross-section of the community.

The policy also states that, although the school board directs "that a philosophy of abstinence will be the underlying principal in all sex education ... it is recognized that this alone may not prevent pregnancies and sexually transmitted disease and therefore allows for instruction in sex education including AIDS, birth control and sexuality."

After the policy is finalized and adopted, a curriculum will be developed.

Principal Kelly Murphy presented the visual arts curriculum, required by the state for kindergarten through sixth grade. The curriculum encompasses the basic criteria of the state's course of study, but also allows teachers flexibility to expand it to enhance local heritage and traditions.

The board adopted the art curriculum.

Murphy also reported that warning letters will be mailed to the parents of several senior students who probably will not meet graduation requirements by the end of the school year.

"It could be eight or more students," said Murphy. "It will be unusual and unfortunate, but this is the first group where the C-average rule will take a significant toll."

There are 36 students in the senior class.

In other business:
• The board voted to add one year to the superintendent, principal and district clerk contracts.

Teacher Linda Nolewanko reviewed her science, chemistry and physics classes, and demonstrated how new computer programs incorporating an overhead projector are used in the classroom.

FFA members Charles Schaefer and Roger Wells reported on the national FFA convention in Kansas City.

German exchange student Sandra Gadsch described her country and school system. She told the board that she is impressed with how much a small school like Castleford offers to its students.

Board member David Smith reported that the "Kids to D.C." group has raised almost $2,500 so far in its effort to raise money for their visit to Washington D.C. in March.

BSU committee calls for higher student fees

NAMPA (AP) — Student fees and tuition at Boise State University must be increased to raise much-needed revenue, a Boise community panel told the state Board of Education.

But BSU student body president

Todd Sholly says the school should opt for an admissions cap first.

The fee recommendation was one of several in a report presented Thursday to the board at its Nampa meeting. It was based in part on a survey of Ada County residents.

Councilman raises questions about garbage contract

By H.R. Weikel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Councilman Rocky Jackson objected to a proposed garbage contract the city is drawing up.

Jackson challenged 24 areas in a city's draft of specifications for a garbage hauler. The contract with the current company, PSI of Twin Falls, will expire in February, Larry Paine, city administrator said.

"I'm just trying to save money, yet do whatever is necessary to get garbage picked up," Jackson said.

He questioned why 95-gallon containers were designated, when smaller containers at a lesser cost might be more satisfactory to some customers.

Security, performance bonds, requiring the contractor to use trucks less than 4 years old, and whether to allow the garbage haulers to go onto private property, were some of the questions raised by Jackson.

Chief of Police George Silver III asked the council if state law obligated the next council to the garbage pickup contract.

"I'm not going to argue, but if you go with that code you can site every city in the state of Idaho," Mayor Gerald Ostler said.

The council agreed the specifications should be reviewed by the city attorney. Members set a special meeting for Nov. 24 at 5 p.m. to look at revisions and possibly approve the specifications.

In other business, the council:
• Set Dec. 15 for a public hearing to open the city budget for water meter funding.

Robert Culver, supervisor of the Water Department, told the council

150 new meters had been received and would be installed by the end of the month. New meters will be installed throughout the city, since about 69 percent of the meters being used are not accurately measuring water usage. The meter replacement will result in an estimated $150,000 per year increase in payments from city residents.

Approved awarding a $194,000 lease purchase agreement with West One Bank for centrifuge equipment to be installed in the expanded Waste Water Treatment Plant. An additional $95,000 will be taken from the city "sinking" fund to pay for the equipment. Jackson proposed the refinancing plan that will save total costs for the equipment.

Decided to review a bill requiring applications and permits for certain uses of city parks. Insurance liability was a major concern, Ostler said.

Approved hiring Scott Fuller as an operator in charge of the Waste Water Treatment Plant at a monthly salary of $1,454.

Declared an emergency and accepted a bid for aeration equipment.

If the equipment to expand the city waste treatment plant in time to handle waste products from the soon to be completed Jerome Ice Plant.

Approved appointing Larry Wood to the volunteer fire department.

Heard a report from John Cook, street department supervisor, that there are "many" street safety and maintenance problems that must be corrected.

Climbers, off-road vehicle users oppose restrictions

POCATELLO (AP) — Off-road vehicle users and rock climbers are developing a strategy to fight plans to limit access to the Snake River's north shore across from Massacre Rocks State Park.

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation oversteps the narrow, 10-mile-long stretch of cliffs, bluffs and shoreline. Officials say it contains scores of Indian archaeological resources threatened by motor vehicle use on area trails.

"Based on other surveys we've done around our other reservoirs, it's the most valuable archaeological area on Bureau of Reclamation land in the state and one of the most valuable on land under our jurisdiction in the entire Northwest," Lynne MacDonald, a bureau archaeologist, said Thursday.

After seven meetings with citizen groups and state and federal agencies this year, and after hearing from a company hired to survey the archeology, bureau planners came up with three alternative management proposals.

Two alternatives would designate the area a National Historic District, closing all vehicle access. A third would allow vehicles only on some trails and hill climbs, and only during part of the spring.

"I feel the entire riding area on there is in jeopardy," Clark Collins, executive director of the Blue Ribbons Coalition, a national off-road vehicle advocacy group, told about 40 off-road motorists and rock climbers Thursday.

"We've got to nip this in the bud," Collins said even the Bureau of Reclamation's least restrictive proposal is unacceptable to people who have ridden the hill climbs and trails in the area for 25 years.

"If they lock us out, the only people who are going to be in there are the illegal pot and arrowhead hunters and there won't be us to turn them in," he said.

Collins urged the group to support continued year-round vehicle access to the area by showing up at a public meeting with the federal agency Dec. 2 in American Falls.

Off-road vehicle users Collins has talked to, he said, would not object if the bureau closed one hill climb downstream from the Interstate 86 rest area. But he said other nearby hill climbs should remain open because vehicles do not damage the sandy soils.

Police arrest suspect in stabbing, shooting

TWIN FALLS — The primary suspect in a September stabbing and a related shooting that happened in Twin Falls has been arrested in California, the Twin Falls police department reported Friday.

A warrant for the arrest of Isiah D. Robertson, 18, was issued after he was charged with aggravated battery. That charge stemmed from a Sept. 19 party where a 17-year-old Twin Falls man was stabbed in the neck with a screwdriver.

About two hours after Oscar Ortiz was stabbed, 18-year-old Francisco Rendon was shot in the right arm and shoulder as he walked by the same Jefferson Street house.

Both victims recovered from their wounds.

Robertson is the suspect in that shooting, but no charges have been filed, Twin Falls police Lt. Jim Kistler said.

Kistler said Friday he had not received details about where in Southern California or why Robertson was arrested. The Twin Falls County Prosecutor must now decide whether to extradite Robertson to face the charge in Twin Falls.

Police believe arsonist may have set pickup truck on fire

TWIN FALLS — A pickup truck that burned Thursday night may have been the target of an arsonist, a Twin Falls police detective said Friday.

Ernest C. Egan left his home in the 100 block of 10th Ave. N. Thursday night for a late dinner. When he returned about 1:30 a.m. Friday, his pickup had been burned, he told police.

"It's being looked at as a possible arson," Lt. Jim Kistler said.

Egan told police the 1978 Ford truck had not been moved for several months and didn't have a battery.

"It obviously wasn't electrical," Kistler said of the fire. Detectives had no suspects Friday.

Jerome council hopes to have new police chief by January

JEROME — City Council members are hoping to have a new police chief hired by mid-January.

Applications for the office will be accepted from Nov. 25 through Dec. 11. Written and oral exams will be given Dec. 17-18.

The council will interview about four applicants on Dec. 30 or Jan. 6. Mayor Gerald Ostler will appoint a new chief, and the council vote on the matter at a council meeting in early January.

The current chief, George Silver III, will resign next month to become Jerome County sheriff.

Forest Service to start selling Christmas tree permits

The permits will be available at the Twin Falls Ranger District office on Kimberly Road.

Permits for lodgepole pine, Douglas fir and subalpine fir in the northern division will be on sale until Thursday, Dec. 24, at district offices in Fairfield, Ketchum, Stanley and the Sawtooth National Recreation Area headquarters north of Ketchum.

No trees may be cut on the Burley Ranger District, but permits for other districts may be bought there.

Permits cost $5 per tree, with a 50-cent-per-foot fee for trees taller than eight feet. Maps to cutting areas are issued with permits. Cutters should check with the Forest Service for road conditions.

United Way shy $166,000 of goal

By Jim Wilkie
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As the end of the 1992 fund-raising campaign looms, the United Way of the Magic Valley is still only 40 percent of the way toward its goal.

The $114,000 collected so far is down about 30 percent from this time last year, but United Way spokeswoman Tami Gooding said she thinks the charity will reach its $280,000 target.

"I'm real optimistic," Gooding said. "We're identifying problems and things are looking good."

Gooding said staff members are locating accounts and improving communication with past donors. The combination of new workers and the Oct. 15 resignation of Kathy Williams as executive director combined to slow the pace of collections this campaign, Gooding said.

"(Now) the wheels are turning and we feel a lot better," Gooding said.

Contributions from some large and small businesses are still not in, she said.

More help will come from tonight's Celebration of Caring at the Magic Valley Mall from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m. Merchants will offer specials during this last major group fund-raising event, which costs $5 per person.

Ticket proceeds and a portion of proceeds from the evening's sales will go to the charity. Last year's event raised more than $16,000 for the United Way and its 19 member agencies.

The United Way campaign, which began Sept. 19, traditionally ends on Thanksgiving but has continued through mid-December in recent years.

"We were still calculating past Christmas last year," Gooding said.

Idaho looks to Montana for help on wilderness bill

States News Service

WASHINGTON — With Idaho's wilderness debate stuck on dead center, its neighbors in Montana have offered some advice from their just-concluded legislative bloodbath on the same issue.

"Don't bet beer on the outcome of any bill," said Michael Scott, a Wilderness Society spokesman in Bozeman, Mont., who lost sorely on such wagers.

Montanans saw the recently-ended Congress as their last chance to get a bill passed that would balance the needs of multiple-use interests and conservation interests on the state's 6 million roadless acres. But incendiary rhetoric in an election year turned the issue into a political bonfire that no one in the state's divided legislature could extinguish.

The vote came just weeks before Republican Rep. Ron Marleneo, a bitter foe of wilderness, lost to Democratic Rep. Pat Williams, a wilderness supporter, in an election for the state's only seat in the House of Representatives. Reapportionment eliminated the other seat.

Idaho Democratic Rep. Larry LaRooco is gearing up for a third major effort at an Idaho wilderness compromise. In order for Idaho to avoid Montana's fate, citizens need to keep politicians' attention on the ground, focused on specific areas and boundaries, according to advocates on both sides of the Montana debate.

"Every citizen needs to be involved from whatever perspective you come from," said Peggy Olson Trenk, a multiple-use advocate in Helena, Mont. She advised Idahoans to "sit down together with multiple-use and environmental experts and take a look at their forest plans and local economies."

That approach has been tried in Idaho too, with limited success.

Gem pump rates down 6 cents from Labor Day

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — Travel is expected to be the heaviest in at least seven years during the Thanksgiving period, and Idaho motorists will find gasoline prices about 6 cents lower than during the Labor Day weekend.

The Idaho AAA said Friday that its statewide survey of 93 stations put the average price of self-serve unleaded gasoline at $1.228, or 6.3 cents per gallon below Labor Day but about 4 cents higher than last Thanksgiving.

AAA said southwestern Idaho gas prices averaged $1.223, but an informal Times-

News survey showed an average price in the Magic and Wood River valleys of $1.238 for self-serve regular, ranging from $1.169 in Twin Falls to $1.459 at one Blaine County station.

The motoring organization said the gap between Idaho's pump prices and the national average also has dropped to 7 cents.

Idaho motorists were paying about 13 cents more a gallon than the national average over Labor Day, the gap in the Magic Valley was almost 15 cents.

Prices in Idaho and other western states remain 10 to 15 cents higher than other regions of the country.

Nationally, gas prices have been stable for the past four to five months, remaining at or near the current average of $1.157.

The U.S. Travel Data Center, which conducts research for the AAA, said about 28.9 million motorists nationwide are expected to take trips 100 miles or more from home during the Thanksgiving period. The travel survey indicated highway travel in the West might be at record levels.

"Frankly, we're a little surprised that travel would be up in this part of the country, when our gasoline prices are higher than elsewhere," Idaho AAA spokesman Dave Carlson said. "Of course most Thanksgiving travel is more likely regional than cross-country."

Idaho's pump prices for self-serve unleaded were within a few cents of each other in the four geographic areas surveyed by the AAA.

Northern Idaho reported the highest average price at $1.255 per gallon and southeastern Idaho the lowest at $1.203.

Average prices in other western states included $1.298 in California, $1.269 in Colorado, $1.272 in Montana, $1.333 in Nevada, $1.224 in Utah, $1.225 in Washington and $1.15 in Wyoming.

The Idaho AAA said 30 percent of the stations it surveyed plan to be open 24 hours on Thanksgiving Day, and 60 percent will be open at least limited hours.

Humane Society in need of money to find homes for abandoned pets

By Elodie Maller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When a scruffy, stray dog arrived one day on the doorstep of Charles and Betty Troutman, they decided they couldn't ignore the puppy and took her into their home.

But the Troutmans, who live in Jerome County, knew they couldn't keep Pup Pup for long and began looking for a new home for the little stray.

Pup Pup, a stray dog, wants a home

Pup Pup, a stray who was given costly medical care by a Magic Valley family, is still in need of a home.

The family that saved the "ol' yeller" type dog says she is gentle, especially affectionate and tries hard to please.

People interested in adopting the now healthy Pup Pup, may contact John Boling at Valley Veterinary Hospital in Hazelton at 829-5554.

Before they could, though, Pup Pup came down with a deadly virus, and the Troutmans found themselves rushing the yellow Labrador cross to Hazelton veterinarian John Boling.

"They agreed to have her treated if I agreed to find her a home," said Boling, who runs the Valley Veterinary Hospital.

But while recovering from her illness, Pup Pup got a stick lodged in her throat, and before they knew it, the Troutmans' veterinary bill reached close to $300.

The Magic Valley couple plunked down the money for Pup Pup's medical care without a second thought.

"I don't regret it at all," Charles Troutman said. "She was a nice little dog. It wasn't her fault that some heartless nascal dumped her."

Laurie Simonds, who runs the Twin Falls Humane Society, says she has been touched by the Troutmans' generosity — a rarity in the animal shelter business.

Pup Pup, she says, could easily be the society's poster child — a deserving dog that was saved by an especially good-hearted Magic Valley couple, and one who will make a fine pet.

Residents oppose exploratory mining

By N.S. Nokkented
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Since public opinion would be against a mine, why go ahead with a proposed exploration project, a number of people asked Friday evening.

More than 100 people, most of them skeptics, crowded into the meeting room in the KMVT-TV building to discuss a proposal by Atlas Precious Metals Inc. of Denver to drill 12 exploratory holes in Wahlstrom Hollow and the Third Fork of Rock Creek.

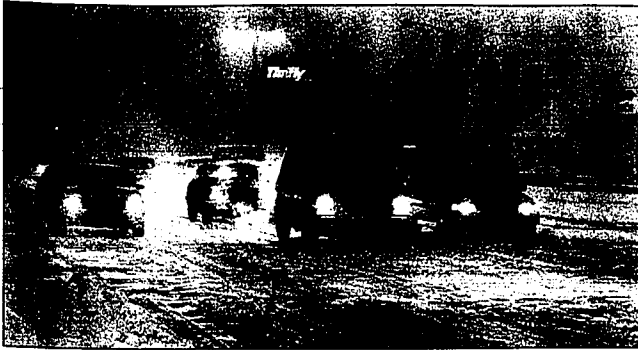

A lot of people are worried that Atlas would find what it's looking for — gold.

They're concerned that an economically viable gold ore deposit would mean some kind of mine in the South Hills. And they are worried about the effects of such a mine on a prime recreation area that is popular with "bikers, hikers and riders."

Because the proposed project is in the Sawtooth National Forest, Forest Service officials will analyze the project's environmental effects.

An important part of that analysis

Early morning commuters plow through the slush of the first major snowstorm in Salt Lake City Friday morning. The storm left from a half inch to over 14 inches of wet and heavy snow.

Snow snarls traffic in Salt Lake

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Motorists struggled with the season's first major snowfall Friday morning along the Wasatch Front, and many weren't so successful.

The Utah Highway Patrol in Salt Lake said there were more than a 100 accidents by late morning on roads covered with four to eight inches of snow.

No serious injuries were reported, although many of the accidents were rollovers. The freeways were clogged when cars, trucks and buses were unable to make it up some off-ramps.

The highway patrol closed the Sixth South southbound off-ramp on Interstate 15 because of the high number of accidents. Some commuters reported it took two hours to reach downtown Salt Lake City from the suburbs.

At the National Weather Service, meteorologists were gleeful. "It's been a delightful storm," said Bill Alder. The snow was heavy, and ranged from eight inches at the Salt Lake Airport to two feet at Alta, 20 miles southeast of Salt Lake in the mountains.

Heavy snow means a high water content, and water is desperately needed in the state plagued by six years of drought.

Olympus Cove, in the foothills east of Salt Lake City, got 16 inches of snow, and that amounted to 1.63 inches of water, Alder said.

The storm put November on the wet side. Typically, 1.29 inches fall during the month, but Salt Lake County now has had 2 inches, Alder said.

The storm dumped snow from Idaho down to the southern parts of Utah county, but Provo had less than an inch and Price, in the center of the state, got no snow.

"It's been six years, I don't know why we've got any now," a Utah Highway Patrol dispatcher in Price said wryly.

However, nearby Scofield, where the reservoir is just about empty, got a foot of snow, Alder said. There also was no snow on the ground in Richfield,

Some fear Lafferty will try to escape

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The Utah State Hospital has a good security record for housing criminals, but those who have dealt with Ronald Lafferty worry that he might try to escape.

And that sets some people on edge, said Utah County Sheriff David Bateman. "There's a number of people who believe that Lafferty would follow up on his past threats to harm them if he could," Bateman said.

On Thursday, a judge declared Lafferty incompetent to stand trial on charges that he killed sister-in-law, Brenda Wright Lafferty, formerly of Kimberly, Idaho, and her baby daughter in 1984. Lafferty earlier was convicted, but his death sentence was overturned on appeal because of errors made when he was declared competent the first time around.

Lafferty, who claims to be a prophet, is to remain at the state hospital until he becomes competent or agrees to take the medication that would enable him to stand trial.

Lafferty has said he believes all doctors, lawyers and judges are conspiring against him, and he still gets angry when people call the murders a tragedy. Lafferty did not want to be found incompetent.

"I believe a competency evaluation should be done on the doctors," Lafferty said Thursday in court. "I'm serious, I think they're all retarded."

A few months ago, when Lafferty was transferred from the Utah

County Jail to the hospital for evaluations, Bateman received several calls from people concerned about the security.

Bateman said he has a list those persons to be contacted if Lafferty attempts to escape, and police would provide security to those who believed they were in danger, he said.

Most believe the longer Lafferty is kept at the hospital, the greater the chances are he will attempt to escape, Bateman said.

Bateman said there is reason for caution about the hospital's ability to hold Lafferty.

"It's a hospital and it's run like a hospital," Bateman said. "It's definitely not as secure as a jail or a prison."

professional mediator, collapsed in acrimony last year.

That came two years after a compromise deal struck by Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus and Republican Sen. Jim McClure came unstuck, rejected by environmentalists, by the timber and mining industries and by off-road recreation interests.

But it was a family feud, among Idahoans and on Idaho issues. Montana's debate was held 2,000 miles from home, in Washington, D.C., and it was messy.

Montanans learned the hard way "not to get into issues of national importance," Scott said, citing reserved federal water rights for wilderness and controversial release language, which sets timetables for study areas. "You bog the process down interminably" with those issues, he said.

Montana's lawmakers wrestled with proposals that could have changed the way courts settle who has access to water-protected streams or the number of years scientists have to examine forest ecosystems. By merely mentioning the changes, the congressional delegation involving grazing from colleagues nationwide, who were concerned over the precedent the new language would set for lands in their states.

Those two controversies were the ultimate roadblock for the compromise, said Jim Riley, who represents the Intermountain Forest Industry Association, based in Coeur d'Alene. His organization represents forest products manufacturers in both Montana and Idaho.

"In the closing hours of Congress a lot of people missed that," said Riley. "But those disagreements made completing the bill impossible."

Riley did not think the Idaho debate should begin anew until those issues are resolved.

"There needs to be agreement in (the House) Interior Committee about what the framework is going to be," he said. "It's just not responsible to begin all these highly charged arguments without it."

But national forest land will support is still workable, others maintained.

"You need to be strong in representing your position, because you'll come up against a group of people who don't understand your state," Trank said. "So be firm about what you're about."

But national forest land will naturally attract national interest.

"People will find themselves getting frustrated with the process," she predicted. "Someone from New York will be deciding whether — Idahoans — could get on their snowmobiles to pick berries," she said.

Voter fraud claims prompts state election law review

CARSON CITY (AP) — Secretary of State Cheryl Lau said Friday she'll push for election law reforms as a result of voter fraud allegations in Las Vegas and questions about the way Nevada conducts its elections.

Mrs. Lau said she will meet with top lawmakers, county election officials and political party representatives to put together a reform package that can be submitted to the state Legislature.

The group won't investigate specific allegations but will review ways to "alleviate election irregularities in future years," she said, adding, "I am not a law enforcement officer. However, I can and will take steps to restore voter confidence in future elections."

All seventeen county clerks and registrars of voters will be invited to a private meeting with Ms. Lau and her staff to discuss ways to improve the election process.

Humane

But Pap Pup's story is unlike hundreds of others, Simonds says. More often, people treat their pets as throwaways — animals that are dumped in fields or left in boxes beside highways or on the shelter's doorstep.

Simonds is especially alarmed by increasing numbers of trays arriving at the pound and is hoping to put a dent in the traffic of homeless and sometimes abused pets.

While Simonds says there hasn't been a big jump in the numbers of abandoned animals, the long line of homeless pets is growing steadily and shortening her lists.

She is particularly concerned now as the Humane Society opens its membership drive, hoping to raise enough money for the coming year to serve the constant stream of discarded pets.

Simonds, who started the shelter and now directs its affairs, is worried the organization's adoption program may falter without a new influx of funds.

While the Humane Society operates on roughly $100,000 a year in city and county funds, none of that money is earmarked for adoption resources, the shelter's program to place healthy animals in good homes.

Those funds come solely from donations. The society raises about $4,000 a year — an amount that is stingily divided up among spaying and neutering of animals, vaccinations, grooming and other health care needs, Simonds said.

The society — which destroys hundreds of unwanted animals every year — has an unbreakable rule: No cat or dog can leave the shelter without being "fixed," so it can no longer produce more animals.

Those operations chew up hundreds of dollars out of the Humane Society's meager health care budget.

"It's a constant struggle to keep the fund up to have an ongoing adoption program," Simonds said. "We've held our spay and neutering costs to a minimum, but we are losing money. This can't go on forever."

Because several veterinarians in town perform the operations at a reduced fee for the shelter, it has been able to manage so far.

Nationally, 14 million creatures a year are destroyed at animal shelters, Simonds said.

"People walk through here all the time and feel bad for the dogs," Simonds said. "But they don't make the correlation between their puppies, and all the animals in the shelter."

And the numbers locally are grim. During the summer, the shelter took in 145 dogs a month and only found homes for 25 percent. Even fewer cats found homes — as little as 5 percent — while more per month streamed into the center.

According to Simonds, Pup Pup's future now pretty much rests with her new owners, whoever they may be.

"She's been a very lucky stray," Simonds said. "But this is only a half-chapter in her life. The rest is still open and up for grabs."

Magic Valley residents can become members of the Magic Valley Humane Society by donating $15 or more to the shelter.

The funds will go solely towards the shelter's adoption program — to provide health care, grooming and for spaying and neutering costs for abandoned animals.

Checks should be made out to: the Magic Valley Humane Society, Box 1163, Twin Falls 83303. The shelter opens at 1 p.m. daily. Shelter workers can be reached at 736-2299.

Mining

is public comment, Cecil Armstrong of the Twin Falls Ranger District said. If people oppose the project, the Forest Service wants to know why, he said.

But the agency at this point is only considering the proposal to drill 12 exploratory holes. Any further exploration or actual mining would require subsequent hearings and environmental studies, Armstrong said.

Mining officials couldn't say the size or nature of the deposit until after the holes are drilled, Jim Dodds of Atlas said.

And Sawtooth National Forest officials won't know the size or effects of any mine until further exploration is done, Armstrong said.

"We have to go through the process," said Ralph Jenkins, minerals administrator for the Twin Falls Ranger District.

But most people at the meeting wanted the project stopped before it gets started.

"We're not going to let you mine up there, so why drill the holes?" Kathy Sursely of Buhl said. Her sentiment was echoed by several others.

Atlas has submitted three alternatives to the Twin Falls Ranger District for its proposed operation.

Roads to reach proposed drill sites range from 1/2 to 2 1/2 miles. And the area disturbed by drill pads would range from 4.37 acres to 2.86 acres.

The track-mounted drilling rig — a machine like a bulldozer — would be accompanied by a six-wheel drive water truck and a service truck. The holes would be four inches in diameter and up to 500 feet deep.

Plans include recontouring and reseeding the roads and drill pads. The holes would be refilled, sealed and plugged with 15 feet of concrete, said Atlas geologist Buster Hunsaker of Boise.

Chances are slim, however — about one in 1,000 — that the exploration will turn up enough gold to make mining it profitable, he said.

Written comments or requests for a formal public hearing on the proposal must be mailed by Dec. 11 to Don Oman, Twin Falls District Ranger, 2647 Kimberly Road East, Twin Falls 83301-7976.

Mini-Cassia

Solid waste district to pick landfill site

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY - Officials from the Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District on Tuesday are expected to pick a landfill site to serve Cassia and Minidoka counties.

Core drillings were recently taken at three sites west of Burley, according to Solid Waste Director Terry Schultz. Two of those sites were not workable, but one site met the initial criteria.

Costs of operating a landfill at the site is being analyzed. Results will be matched up against the Burley Butte location, which was initially picked as a landfill, Schultz said.

Residents living around Burley Butte protested when the Solid Waste District announced it was considering the area, citing concerns such as possible groundwater contamination and trash which might be blown out of the landfill or off garbage trucks.

The district agreed to allow a seven-member siting committee to seek other locations on which a landfill could be constructed. The three sites selected are in a more remote area than the Burley Butte, Schultz said.

Susan Duncan, who helped lead the fight to find another site, said she was confident that the Solid Waste District will be happier with one of the alternatives.

"It is a much better site; it looks really good," Duncan said. The nearest people living nearby are three and a half miles away, she said.

Duncan said if the district mixes the site and sets its eyes on the Butte, she and her neighbors would be prepared to do battle, even if it meant doing so in a courtroom.

"We would jump on it legally to make sure it stayed off of here," Duncan said.

Because of the threatened lawsuit, Duncan said people living around the Butte believe the district wouldn't consider the Butte site again.

Duncan hopes that county commissioners will also look at the plans of a private company, Boise-based Dispose-All, Inc., which has announced plans to build a solid waste facility south of Twin Falls, although it has no contracts to accept waste at the landfill.

"Knowing that a private industry is coming in makes you want to look closer at this," Duncan said. She said she has urged commissioners to look at the economics of having area trash shipped to that site.

Burley will vote on merger

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY - If the members of the two Mini-Cassia chambers of commerce are going to merge, they might as well do it now and reap any benefits from it.

That's what Rupert Chamber of Commerce member Dawn Hutchinson said as she prepared to mail out ballots Friday.

"I guess it's moving faster than some people thought it would," Hutchinson said of the proposed merger between the Burley and Rupert chambers of commerce.

Earnest discussion about the plan began this year. Although some chamber officials and members thought it might be years before the issue was actually voted on, informational meetings were held, bylaws were written and the chambers have now decided to put the issue up to a vote.

The ballots sent to members of the Rupert Chamber are due back Nov. 30.

Members of the Burley Area Chamber of Commerce will vote on the proposed merger at a Dec. 7 meeting scheduled for noon at Price's Cafe.

If the voting shows that members are in favor of joining the chambers, there will still be a lot of complications to work out, said Bill Schaler, executive director of the Burley Area Chamber of Commerce.

"We have approached this thing from a conceptual view and haven't really touched on some problems," he

Minidoka to hear from landfill neighbors

RUPERT - Two Minidoka County residents who live near the county landfill and have complained about trash blowing onto their properties will again address the Minidoka County Commission.

Ellery Wight and Ione Anderson are scheduled to address the commission at 11 a.m. Monday at the County Courthouse.

In other business, at 1:30 p.m., commissioners will discuss county Prosecutor-Elect Gara Newman's contract with the county as public defender.

At 3 p.m., commissioners will consider offering a contract to a new public defender.

Commissioners meet on highway districts

BURLEY - The Cassia County commissioners will meet at 9 a.m. Monday at the courthouse in Burley. On the agenda is a meeting between the Burley and Albion highway districts, discussion with the county weed supervisor, indigent hearings and a meeting with Don Oman of the Forest Service.

James Hicks will also talk with the commissioners about a junkyard problem.

Mini-Cassia, Pocatello areas wake up to snow

By James Prichard
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY - The Mini-Cassia area woke up to about an inch of snow on Friday, while Pocatello got six inches of the white stuff, and Twin Falls received only a few flurries.

Terry Patterson of the Federal Aviation Administration said the Burley Municipal Airport received 0.1 of an inch of moisture - if the snow would have fallen as rain - since starting Thursday afternoon.

Although melting and drifting made it difficult for airport officials to make an accurate measurement of snowfall, the FAA's best estimate was about an inch.

At other locations within the two-county area, there appeared to be closer to two inches of snowfall. The snow had ended by late Friday morning, but Patterson said area residents could expect more by Sunday.

That Pocatello received so much snow while the Magic Valley received little or none is not unusual, Patterson said, Pocatello's higher elevation and proximity to mountainous results in stronger and more frequent snowstorms there.

Dan Keirns of the National Weather Service in Pocatello said most of that city's snowfall came between 5 and 8 a.m. Friday - at the peak of rush hour.

The morning's wet, heavy snow fell on top of existing melting and freezing snow, Keirns said, creating slippery streets and sidewalks throughout Pocatello.

An official at the Twin Falls Municipal Airport said that airport received "only a dusting" Thursday. The Panzerette Ski Resort in Albion reported that a whopping 18 inches of new snow fell Thursday and Friday. The snow arrived just in time; the resort's ski season opened Friday.

Election behind us, it's time for prayer

For some, the outcome of our recent presidential election was a turning point for America. Liberals feel that finally their "day in the sun" has come. Conservatives feel defeated and are fretting about what the future now holds. However, both are asking the question: What do we do now?

Lynn J. Schaal
Clergy's corner

clear mandate from the populace. Who knows? Still we are left with the valid question: What do we do now?

The Bible gives us a direct answer to this question. It is found in 1 Timothy 2:1-3. Pray! The answer is so simple that if we are not careful we will not think this directive is "enough" to stem the tide of liberalism that may persecute America to be plagued with, Verse 2 of this passage tells us to "... pray for 'kings' and all that are in authority ..."

For us in America, that would be equivalent to our president. Christians should pray for our new "president-elect." He needs our prayer support, not our criticism. The hand of God is not moved by criticism, but by prayer. Those in authority over us need our prayer support but, more importantly, Christians need to obey this directive from God's word. There is a purpose for this directive. It is found in Verse 3. "This is good and pleases God our savior."

As we observe this Thanksgiving holiday, we have a lot to be thankful for. Thank God that we live in a nation that allows its people to voice their opinion by voting. Let us begin to please God by praying for those in authority over us.

Anglican Church decision 'overdue'

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - When the Church of England voted last week to ordain women as priests, Brian Thom was delighted.

"I'm very supportive of what's happening in the Church of England," said Thom, rector at the Twin Falls Episcopal Church of the Ascension. "It's long overdue."

The vote allows the church to join 12 of the 28 self-governing provinces in the Anglican Communion that already ordain women priests - most of them in the 2.5 million-member Episcopal Church in the United States.

Not everyone is enthusiastic about the decision.

In Rome, a Vatican spokesman called the move a "grave obstacle" to repairing the 16th century split between Roman Catholics and Anglicans. And the Church of England, itself, is risking a schism with a suburban minority in its pulpits and pews who feel the move contradicts scripture and tradition.

"I'm sure this will create some dissension in the Church of England, and some people will leave," said Anne Weld-Martin, a minister at the Twin Falls First United Methodist Church. "Obviously, I think ordaining women is a good idea."

United Methodists began ordaining women in the '50s, Weld-Martin explained, but women were not commonly placed in pulpits until more recently. "In Idaho, it's never there in other areas where I've served," Weld-Martin said. "Some people here are not as used to the idea of a woman minister."

The Episcopal Church, generally considered a bridge between Catholics and Protestants, has been ordaining women since 1979. "The majority of people in the congregations are supportive of the idea," Thom said, "but some people still have questions about it."

If Parliament and Queen Elizabeth II endorse the Church of England decision, as expected, the first woman priests could be ordained in 1994.

However, the legislation does not permit women bishops. And, parishes would retain the right to refuse to accept a woman priest.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Roman Catholic bishops have defeated a pastoral letter on the role of women which held that they could never be ordained as priests. The document, nine years in the making, has generated enormous controversy within the church.

Currently, the Roman Catholic church operates under a papal rule against ordaining women.

Shared responsibilities lie at Baha'i foundation

NEW YORK (AP) - "The earth is but one country, and mankind its citizens."

So wrote Baha'ullah, the 19th century Persian founder of the Baha'i faith, expressing its central principle of a unified, cooperating world. Adherents see that ideal as an urgent, developing reality as they gather here from around the world.

"In many ways, societies all over the world are moving in that direction, recognizing shared responsibilities of nations for the common good of mankind," said Robert Henderson, U.S. secretary-general of the movement.

Its World Congress meets at the Javits Center here Monday through Thursday in the first international gathering of Baha'is since 1963 in London. Nearly 30,000 of them are expected from about 200 different countries.

"Virtually every kind of human being alive will be represented," said Henderson, 43.

Henderson, of Wilmette, Ill., the administrative center of U.S. Baha'is, said modern societies have reached the point where it's no longer reasonable to think only of a nation's good for a nation, but what's good for all people.

Henderson

He said in an interview that in dealing with the economy, environment, peacekeeping and many other fields, nations are moving toward higher and higher degrees of cooperation.

Asked about opposition to such trends, the entrenched nationalism, patriotism and widespread aversion to international government, he said the United Nations initially faced that kind of opposition.

"That prejudice will die out simply because it doesn't work. We'll find that nations that are unable to cooperate do not fare well," he said. "You can't be isolated and prosper at the same time. You've got to plunge into the world."

The Baha'ism, founded in 1863 by Baha'ullah as an offshoot of Islam, teaches that all races, all nations and all religions are essentially one under one God.

The faith teaches equality of the sexes, the basic harmony of science and religion, compulsory, universal education, the abolition of extremes of wealth and poverty, and work in the service of justice and peace.

Baha'is teach traditional morality, paralleling the Ten Commandments, and have no clergy. They hold that sex relations should be confined to male-female marriage. While taking no official position on abortion, they teach life begins at conception.

They believe in an afterlife, but don't use such terms as heaven and hell.

"We believe the closer you are to God, the better your afterlife will be. The degree is 'up to you,'" said Brad Pokorny of Peekskill, N.Y., editor of the Baha'i international newsletter.

One Country. There are about 125,000 Baha'is in this country, about 5 million around the world, up from about 3.5 million in 1986. Pokorny said the total was growing at about 3.6 percent a year.

National spiritual assemblies are organized in 165 countries, with world headquarters in Haifa, Israel.

As for the Baha'i vision of a world eventually pulling together in peace and harmony, Pokorny said, "The very idea of global community is becoming increasingly accepted. We are on the cutting edge of this trend."

Remember family this Thanksgiving

It didn't take much to make the Pilgrims feel thankful that first Thanksgiving - a few ripe pumpkins, a bushel of corn, a wild turkey that somehow wandered within rifle range. Historical rumor has it that when the Native Americans next door brought squash to the feast, the Pilgrims were actually grateful to receive it.

And (shudder) eat it.

We aren't so easily impressed these days. Most Americans (not all, unfortunately, but most) will have plenty to eat on Thanksgiving - and every other day of the year, for that matter. Life's necessities - food, shelter, clothing and chocolate (not necessarily in that order) - are often taken for granted, leaving us to yearn only for those comparatively few things that we'd really, really, really like to have. Even though we don't really, really, really need them.

But every one in a while, something happens to shake us up a bit and help us realize how much we are blessed. Often that "something" is tragic or, at the very least, controversial - like so many of the experiences we've had this year. And while no one would ever say that we are glad such things happen, we can at least be thankful for lessons learned and for renewed appreciation of life's simple beauties.

Joseph Walker ValueSpeak

There's nothing quite like surviving a hurricane for making you truly thankful for simple, everyday stuff like that.

Peace should also be high on the list of things we have learned to cherish through difficult experience. Just two Thanksgivings ago, hundreds of thousands of our compatriots were encamped on the Saudi Arabian desert preparing for battle.

While it's true that we have experienced our share of hostility (the Los Angeles riots), terror (the recent wave of violent car-jackings) and brutality (the 1992 election campaign), our crises have been short-lived and our confrontations - outside of the political arena, that is - relatively few.

Please don't misunderstand - I'm not saying we don't need to continue to pray for peace at home and abroad.

Those prayers should continue as long as there is cruelty, inhumanity and intolerance between people. But at least this year, we don't have to pray for a world poised on the brink of war. For that we can all be thankful.

More than anything else, however, I hope this Thanksgiving finds you a little more inclined to give thanks for, if not with, your family - wherever and whatever your family may be. We've heard a lot of discussion this year about families and "family values" - some of it hurtful and divisive, if not downright destructive.

Nothing could be more inappropriate, because nothing should be more unifying than a family. While we may well disagree as to exactly what "family values" are, none of us can doubt the significance of our own families in our lives. Regardless of our family situation - whether we're old or young, single or married, childless or proudly parental - we are part of a family. And we belong.

And if that sounds like a line straight out of "Murphy Brown" well, I'm sorry. It's been a long year, and you can't help but pick up an extra thought here and there.

Not to mention something else to be thankful for.

World's teen-age girls in spotlight

Community service will be spotlighted today when nearly half a million teen-age girls in 138 nations and territories reach out with a variety of projects benefiting their communities.

This worldwide celebration is called "Walk in the Light" and is sponsored by the Young Women's organization of the LDS Church. The Young Women's program is designed to promote spiritual growth, personal achievement and the development of leadership skills in girls ages 12 to 18.

Janette C. Hales, world president of the Young Women, says service to family, church and community is an important part of the Young Women's program, but it should not be only a one-day event, and the "Walk in the Light" celebration will kick off a yearlong emphasis on service for the Young Women's program.

Young Women's organizations throughout the Magic Valley have planned service projects and celebration programs. Young women, their parents and leaders are invited to celebration programs at the various stake centers to listen to a pre-recorded message by Hales and Elder Russell M. Ballard of the Council of Twelve Apostles.

In Twin Falls, the West Stake girls will meet at 8 a.m. to make Christmas stockings, stuff them with personal care items and then give them to the Community Action Agency to give to the homeless. The program is set for 10 a.m. The Twin Falls Stake girls will meet at 10 a.m. to make quilts from previously collected denim squares and to prepare personal-care bags. The quilts and bags will be given to the CAA. The program is set for 1 p.m. In the Kimberly Stake, the girls cleaned potatoes earlier this year and delivered them to needy and refugee families and senior citizens. The program is set for 10:30 a.m.

Individual wards in the Filer Stake have completed projects to assist needy people before today. The program is set for 10 a.m.

In the Carey Stake, individual ward organizations have performed such projects as shopping used for the needy, preparing food for the elderly at the nursing home and painting city playground equipment. The program is set for 4 p.m.

Individual wards in the Jerome Stake have performed such projects as a canned food drive, visiting the elderly and shut-ins and assisting mothers with young children. The program is set for 5 p.m.

Girls in the Wendell Stake will perform projects planned by individual ward groups from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Projects include reading and assisting with duties at the local care centers, helping and visiting shut-ins and shopping used for the needy. The program is set for 7 p.m.

In Minidoka County, the Rupert West Stake has planned a service project that will be repeated at a later date. The program is set for 10 a.m. Individual wards in the Paul Stake will perform such tasks as cleaning the church, doing dry-pack canning at the Desert Industries Cannery for the elderly and making Christmas baskets for the needy. The program is set for 2 p.m.

The Rupert Stake girls have collected used dolls and teddy bears and will meet at 10 a.m. to refurbish and clean the items and will then give them to the needy. The program will take place at the completion of the project.

In Cassia County, the Burley West Stake girls will meet at 8 a.m. to make ornaments and tree decorations and decorate a tree for the Festival of Trees in Burley. The tree will be sold and proceeds will go to the Cassia Memorial Hospital. The program will follow the activity. Individual wards in the Burley Stake have planned projects to be carried out today, with the program following the completion of the projects.

The Oakley Stake girls will go to the stake center to clean and wash walls. The program is set for 7:30 p.m. Sunday. Individual-ward projects in the Declo Stake include painting a concrete floor at the Alternative School in Rupert, tying quilts to be given to the Cassia Memorial Hospital nursery, coloring pictures that kindergarten teachers will laminate to use in their lessons and preparing a Thanksgiving dinner for the elderly singles in the Almo area. The program is set for Sunday evening.

"Walk in the Light" is the third in a series of worldwide Young Women's Celebrations.

St. Ed.'s women raise more than $500

TWIN FALLS - The St. Edwards Women's Bible Study group recently held its annual Branch Auction at the home of Edie Laats. More than $500 was raised, and proceeds will go to the Ascension Priory and to special needs of the Parish Hall.

At the brunch, the group heralded the end of its 10th year together. The group has met at St. Edwards Church, the Parish Hall and the Guadalupe Center. Several times a year, daylong retreats are held at the Ascension Priory in Jerome. The group studies various aspects of scripture and women's issues as they relate to family development. Indians' President Bay resigns over differences

CLEVELAND — Cleveland Indians President Rick Bay resigned Friday after 11 months in the job.

Bay, the former athletic director at Ohio State, Oregon and Minnesota and former executive vice president of the New York Yankees, said he was leaving the Indians because of differences with team owner Richard Jacobs. "I have enjoyed my relationship with the Indians, and I am pleased with what the team has accomplished. I have the highest regard for the team and its future," Bay said in a news release issued late Friday afternoon.

Jacobs said in the release that he respected Bay, but said they clashed over running the team.

Philadelphia, sports reach pact on taxing visiting teams

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia officials and representatives of the four major-league sports reached an agreement Friday to allow the city to tax visiting athletes.

The city initially wanted to collect taxes, interest and penalties on wages that hockey, basketball, football and baseball players earned in Philadelphia as far back as 1986. The agreement extends to only 1991, the players' associations said in a joint statement.

Other cities, including New York and Detroit, already collect wage taxes from visiting athletes. "We want a fair share from everyone," said Mayor Ed Rendell.

Rendell promised after taking office in January to collect wage taxes from everyone who worked in the city, including entertainers and broadcasters.

Sportcasters to present Ashe with legend award

NEW YORK — Tennis great Arthur Ashe will receive the 1992 Sports Legend Award from the American Sportscasters Association, next month, Louis O. Schwartz, ASA president, announced Friday.

"Arthur's remarkable career on the court, combined with his strength while recovering from two open-heart bypass surgeries, his courageous battle with AIDS and his numerous charitable and social contributions have made him a true sports legend," Schwartz said.

Carey's Brian Tingey (12) strains to outrun the one-armed grasp of Council's Justin Gotsky in the first half of the A-4 eight-man state championship game in Pocatello Friday.

Lumberjacks run over, around Carey for title

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — With Carey looking in the wrong direction and losing a step, wee Gary Hasselstrom gave Council command of the 1992 A-4 eight-man championship game.

The quick 5-foot, 7-inch, 134-pound freshman halfback scored two touchdowns in the second half that keyed the Lumberjacks' 30-16 victory at Holt Arena Friday afternoon.

Hasselstrom combined with 6-3, 195-pound senior power runner Mark Paradis for the long and the short of the Council attack. When the Lumberjacks diverted Carey's attention, the complementing pair ran wild.

Ahead 8-0 at halftime, Council tried to break the conservative offensive mold it shared with the Panthers by completing a couple long passes and making good on a fourth-and-10 fake punt for a first down.

"We knew we couldn't win with eight points," said Lumberjacks Coach Larry Russell. "We decided we'd gamble in some situations and start throwing the ball."

"I think what killed us was the pass," said Carey senior safety Brian Tingey, who made several touchdown-saving tackles. "We're usually pretty good on the pass. They got some fast ends."

The Lumberjacks scored their second quarter TD on an 18-yard, fourth-down pass from Andy Glenn to Mike Poff. Early in the second half, Glenn just missed two big-play passes on receivers wide open deep over the middle. After the Panthers tied the game, Glenn connected with Travis Krupp for 39-yard pass to the Carey 23.

With the Panthers looking to the air, Hasselstrom squirmed through the left side of the line for a touchdown.

On the next series, Hasselstrom hit the same hole twice again for gains of 50 and 15 and a 24-8 lead.

Carey quarterback Steven Pyrah scrambles away from Council's Mike Poff (86) to launch a pass late in the fourth quarter while Jake Kelsey (25) looks on.

"We were thinking about the pass," Tingey said. "We weren't expecting him to be that fast. He just got away."

On all three runs, Hasselstrom slipped through the line and moved to the outside for a sprint down the sideline.

"We made some adjustments in our blocking, and I think they were starting to get a little worn," Russell said. "They didn't react as quickly."

After a disappointing first half, Carey started the third quarter by forcing a Lumberjack punt from the 50.

Four running plays netted 16 yards. Then Tingey took a short pass from Steven Pyrah at the left sideline, left a Council tackler eating turf at the 48 and raced the rest of the way to the end zone untouched.

"We worked on our approach to the game," said Carey Coach Heber Kirkland about the Panthers' spark to start the second half. "We felt we needed more enthusiasm. We did improve that."

Council got a second touchdown reception from Poff with 8:22 left in the game to extend the lead to 30-8.

The Panthers answered with a 31-yard scoring pass to Lyman Kijikland with 6:14 showing.

Jake Kelsey snatched James Cook's on-side kick on a waist-high bounce at the 50 to keep the ball in Carey's hands.

But Lumberjack interceptions ended the Panthers' final two drives.

Carey spent the first half romping through Council's yard but never managed a score. The Panthers punted only once and

Miami plays for pick of bowls

The Associated Press

While eighth-ranked Syracuse — or virtually any other team playing Miami — is the sentimental favorite, the top-ranked Hurricanes figure to get considerable backing Saturday from those who dream of great bowl matchups.

If Dennis Erickson's team beats the Orangemen, it will win the Big East title. But more important, Miami (9-0) will then have its pick of bowls.

And those who want Miami to win at Syracuse (9-1) also figure to be rooting for idle Alabama when the second-ranked Crimson Tide plays Auburn on Thanksgiving Day, and again against No. 9 Florida or No. 10 Georgia in the Southeastern Conference championship game Dec. 5.

That combination would give Gene Stallings' Tide a 12-0 mark, probably enable Alabama to stay No. 2 and win the SEC's spot in the Sugar Bowl Jan. 1.

That would set up a 1-2 matchup, with the winner claiming the national title.

The only other way two unbeaten and untied teams could meet would be for fourth-ranked Texas A&M (10-0) to win at home against outmanned Texas Christian (2-7-1) Saturday, beat Texas Dec. 5 and somehow leap over two teams. The Aggies could wrap up the Southwest Conference title and a Cotton Bowl berth if Texas loses Saturday to Baylor.

Miami at No. 1 and Texas A&M at No. 2 would put the Hurricanes in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1.

Got it?

If you do, hold on a minute. A loss by Alabama coupled with a victory by No. 3 Florida State (9-1) over Florida on Nov. 28 probably would make the Seminoles No. 2. If so, Miami would go to the Fiesta Bowl on New Year's Day for a rematch with Florida State, whom it beat 19-16 early this season.

But, if form holds up, this could be the bowl picture:

- Sugar (Miami-Alabama).
 - Cotton (Texas A&M-Florida State).
 - Orange (Nebraska-Notre Dame).
 - Rose (Washington-Michigan).
 - Fiesta (Colorado-Syracuse).
 - Blockbuster (Penn State-Stanford).
 - Gator (North Carolina State-Georgia).
 - Citrus (Ohio State-Florida).
 - Hall of Fame (Boston College-Tennessee).
 - Liberty (Air Force-Mississippi).
 - Freedom (Southern Cal-Wisconsin).
 - Hancock (Arizona-Texas).
 - Independence (Wake Forest-Oregon).
 - Aloha (Hawaii-Kansas).
 - Peach (Mississippi State-North Carolina).
 - Holiday (San Diego State-Michigan State).
 - Copper (Brigham Young-Iowa).
 - Silver (Bowling Green-San Jose State).
- But most will have to win this week, and in some cases beyond, to secure those berths.

Eagles roll at Ricks

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

REXBURG — College of Southern Idaho ran its record to 5-0 Friday evening by rolling over Southern Alberta Institute of Technology 110-59 in the Ricks Classic.

The Eagles got off to their slowest start of the season and didn't post a two-digit lead that stuck until midway through the first half at 27-15. By halftime, it had expanded only to 49-30.

But the Eagles scored 12 of the first 14 points of the second half and blew quickly away in another strong defensive showing.

CSI came up with 22 steals and forced SAIT into 37 turnovers.

"They played us hard in the first half," said Coach Fred Tenkley. "(James) Clark had 13 points in the first half, but we shut him out in the second. (Tony) Poole No. 15 worked the hardest and had the biggest reward with 18 for them.

"But when you can force 37 turnovers there's not a lot more you can say about your defense. We didn't have the intensity in the first half that we did last night, but we improved a lot in the second half today."

The victory will send CSI vs. homecoming Ricks in the tournament final at 8:30 p.m. today.

After a 6-6 tie four minutes into the game, Clayton Johnson and Ray Ross scored all the points that broke the Eagles into a 17-6 lead.

Poole pulled SAIT back to within 25-15, and CSI got points from Paul Jarrett and Dave Cason in taking the lead out to 49 at intermission.

Taj McFarlane opened the second half with field goals, and Johnson sandwiched fast break buckets around a field goal by Poole. Cason and J.J. Moore showed CSI ahead 63-37, and the contest was over.

Anderson, Wright help CSI to win

The Times-News

REXBURG — Freshmen Janice Anderson and Stephanie Wright kept College of Southern Idaho women in the game until a point explosion in the last five minutes gave the Golden Eagles a 74-54 victory over the Ricks alumni Friday afternoon in the Ricks College Invitational.

After trailing with two exceptions throughout the first half, CSI got 10 of its first 13 points in the second half from Anderson to move ahead 46-39.

Then, after the Vikings rallied back to within four with 6:29 to play, Wright scored the next six points of the game to establish the first 10-point margin.

In the closing minutes Charlotte Kormik and Jenny Shaw helped expand the margin to 20 points.

Giants' G.M. leaves team

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Al Rosen resigned Friday as president and general manager of the San Francisco Giants, ending a seven-year tenure in which the team went from a 100-loss season to the World Series.

In an emotional farewell, Rosen said he felt that with new ownership coming in, it would be best that he "step aside."

"I've decided that it's time for me to retire and I wanted to make my decision public immediately," Rosen, 68, told a news conference at Candlestick Park.

Rosen said he didn't plan to bowery from baseball, but added he would "never go to work for another club in the same role I am here."

"I'll be available," he said.

BURLY — Courtney Petersen poured in a game-high 32 points to lead the Buhl Indians Friday night in a South Central Idaho Conference battle.

Burley opened a seven point lead after one play, only to have the Indians close the gap to three points at the half 26-23.

Lynette Stahlecker, who scored 21 points for the Indians, led Buhl in the contest while Petersen continued to pace the Bobcats.

Burley outscored the Indians by only two points in the second half, but it was enough to up their record to 3-1.

In the preliminary game the Bobcats defeated Buhl 62-26.

Hagerman 34, Wendell 30
WENDELL — A late fourth quarter point shot by Hagerman's Dawn Andrews pulled the Pirates ahead and gave them a 34-30 non-conference win over Wendell Friday night.

Although they lost, the Wendell Trojans dominated most of the game. It was an improvement from the last four contests.

"I'm proud of the girls. They played with great intensity and hustle. They did everything I asked them to do," said Wendell Coach John Smith.

Wendell's Jana King led the batting of the boards for the Trojans. Jenny Brunchflower also had strong offensive rebounds. Coach Smith commended Stephanie Braga and Rachel Rex for their aggressive hustle.

"They've showed a lot of improvement, now we just need to win a game," said Smith in reference to their 0-5 record.

Diana Eichelberger led Hagerman with a dozen points. Andrus and Shelley Ward had 7 points each.

Stockton jumper lifts Jazz over Pacers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — John Stockton hit an 18-foot jump over the 1.6 seconds to play, lifting the Utah Jazz to a 97-95 victory over the Indiana Pacers on Friday night and their first win in Market Square Arena since 1985.

Indiana had three opportunities to break a 95-95 tie in the final minute, but Delfe Schrempf missed two offensive runners and was tied up on another drive by Stockton.

Utah's Karl Malone led all scorers with 34 points and became the first player in NBA history to score 15,000 points. He entered the game 16 shy of the plateau and netted 20 in the first half, four-game winning streak.

Hornets 117, Warriors 110, OT
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Dell Curry scored 28 points in overtime and rookie Antonio Mourning had 24 points as the Hornets defeated the Golden State Warriors 117-110.

After Billy Owens' layup gave the Warriors a 102-100 lead in overtime, Curry made a long jump to tie the score. He followed with a steal and layup and a three-point play resulting from another layup put the Hornets up 107-102 with 3:51 left. Larry Johnson added 24 points for the Hornets and Curry had 23. In overtime, Curry Mullin scored 46 points for the Warriors, losers in six of their last seven games.

Bullets 108, Timberwolves 100
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Harvey Grant scored 11 of his game-high 25 points in the fourth quarter to lead the undermanned Washington Bullets to a 108-100 victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Washington won its third game in four outings after an 0-4 start despite missing starter Rex Chapman and Fervis Ellison. The Bullets dressed just 10 players and have three on the injured list.

After a late 7-0 Wolves' run cut the Bullets lead to 102-100, Grant sank two free throws with 1:17 left to turn the momentum. Michael Adams hit four free throws in the final minute to clinch the victory for the Bullets, who are now 3-0 in games at the Target Center.

Trail Blazers 104; Kings 99
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Cliff Robinson scored 21 points and the Portland Trail Blazers remained the only unbeaten team in the NBA with a 104-99 victory over the Sacramento Kings.

The Blazers improved to 6-0. Sacramento had won seven straight home games, dating back to last season.

76ers 129, Heat 128, 3OT
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tim Perry hit a driving layup with 14 seconds left in the third overtime to give the Philadelphia 76ers a 129-128 victory over the Miami Heat.

Jeff Hornacek had 32 points for Philadelphia, which won its first home game of the season in keeping Miami winless at the Spectrum in 10 contests.

Sabatini falters, then rebounds Courier to down Capriati; McNeil wins ends year rated 1st

NEW YORK (AP) — Gabriela Sabatini flitted first with perfection, then with disaster before rediscovering her game in time Friday night to nab the final semifinal berth at the Virginia Slims Championships.

By defeating seventh-seeded Jennifer Capriati 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, Sabatini advanced to Saturday's match against defending champion Monica Seles.

Earlier Friday, surprising Lori McNeil pulled off her second straight upset, bouncing No. 8 Coach's Martinez of Spain 3-6, 6-3, 6-2. McNeil, who upset No. 2 Stefri Graf in the opening round, will face fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova in the first semifinal Saturday afternoon.

The unique best-of-5 sets final is set for Sunday afternoon. The winner of this $3 million, 16-player event pockets $250,000, with $120,000 going to the runnerup.

Two of the most popular women's tennis players, Sabatini and Capriati were generous in what they gave the fans at Madison Saure Garden. They battled, at times sloppily, at times brilliantly, for two hours and three minutes. And when Capriati sailed a return of service long on the game's final point, Sabatini retained her hope of capturing the season-ending title she won in 1988.

The third set was unlike the first two, where first Sabatini and then Capriati dominated. In the third, they both played at the top of their game, with Sabatini eventually deciding to pressure her young foe more by taking the net at every chance.

The tactic proved successful. And after they traded service breaks to begin the set, they stayed on serve until the ninth game, when errors once again crept into Capriati's game — errors that sometimes were forced by Sabatini's constant pressure.

The Argentine broke Capriati at 15, taking a 5-4 lead, then closed out the match by holding her own service at love.

Against Graf, McNeil had anticipated perfectly and was always in the right spot for a winning upset. In the opening set against Martinez, McNeil seemed to be a half-step slow, reacting instead of anticipating, letting her Spanish opponent dictate the point.

And Martinez made the most of it. Using her big, penetrating groundstrokes, Martinez broke McNeil in the fourth game of the opening set. While the Spaniard jumped on McNeil's serve, it was McNeil, herself, who was her own worst enemy. She consistently missed first serves and, on break point, double-faulted.

Then McNeil began showing the same form that had carried her to victory over Graf. Her backhand slide went deep into the corners and bounced low. She found the depth she needed with her forehand.

And Martinez began to miss.

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — A little friendly help from His Backcourt, Andrei Paninovic and his own victory, combined to produce a set of favorable circumstances that made Friday a big day for Jim Courier.

Courier became the first American since John McInroe in 1984 to finish the year as the No. 1 tennis player in the world.

He also moved into the semifinals of the ATP Tour World Championship.

Courier began the last day of round-robin play by beating Michael Chang (0-3) 7-5, 6-2.

He then had to wait until the last match of the day to find out if he'd made it to the last four of the season-ending $2.5 million event.

When Ivanisevic took the first set against Richard Krajicek, Courier knew that he was in. Ivanisevic went on to lead 6-4, 6-3.

In between, Becker helped Courier retain the top ranking by beating Stefan Edberg 6-4, 6-0, eliminating the second-ranked Swede from the tournament and ending Edberg's bid to finish as No. 1 for the third year in a row.

Courier, the only player to win two Grand Slam titles this season (the Australian and the French Open), became No. 1 on Feb. 10 and held it for six weeks, before Edberg regained it.

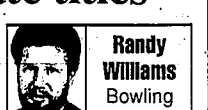

The American took the top spot again on April 13, held it for 22 weeks, and regained it from Edberg again on Sept. 14.

Courier shares the lead on the tour with Sampras at five tournament victories this season.

Edberg said Courier deserved to finish the year as No. 1 because he was the only player to win two Grand Slam titles. "Looking back, he has been the best player," Edberg said.

Mulkey, Kreft take state titles

The Idaho State Seniors' Championship Tourney concluded last weekend at the Bowldrome.

Randy Williams Bowling

Twin's Eugene Mulkey led the way in the Men's B Division with a 1318 pin total. In Division C, Courtney Kreft's 1325 took home top honors.

Over at Magic last Sunday, Wholesale Carpets was crushing Jerry's Kids 199-136 to lay claim to the championship in the Swiss 900 Tournament. For their efforts, Wholesale Carpets collected $425 for first, Jerry's Kids $325. Third place finishers Vanderham Dairy received $225, Horton's Team $150 for fourth.

Then, back over at the Bowldrome Saturday night, the seniors cleared the lanes for the November installment of the NABI of Idaho — and don't we all know what that means: NABI time is Daryl Bergevin time. Daryl's 1373 led all 23 participants in the preliminary round. In the semifinals, Daryl's 606 earned him top seed going into the finals.

Connie Lang caught fire in the first game of the step-ladder finals, easily out distancing Randy Miller 231 to 173. Lang then faced Cathy McGowan in Round 2, with Connie eking out a two-pin victory, 195-193. But Daryl cruised his way to the $160 prize money with a 210 to 176 over Lang. Lang then teamed with Randy Miller to win the $60 doubles event by going with the $110 she pocketed from her second place finish in the tourney's main event.

Upcoming events: Magic's next 900 Swiss Tournament will be Sunday, Dec. 6.

Odds and ends: Filer's Shane Ward rolled a 300 in the Commercial League at the Bowldrome... Cory Moore, who had a 300 in practice a couple of weeks back, had a 707 in league last week... Helen Watson and Ira Pits were winners of Magic's $25 gift certificates last week... In Peewee action, Amanda Adema converted the 6-7-10 split.

Couples, Floyd nab early lead in Shark Shootout

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Fred Couples and Raymond Floyd kept their treasured teamwork rolling for a 10-under-par best-ball of 62 Friday in the first round of the $1 million Shark Shootout golf tournament. They share the lead with the newly-forming team of Hale twin and Bruce Lietzka.

Arnold Palmer and Peter Jacobsen teamed for a 9-under par 63 to trail the leaders by a single shot in the 54-hole event at the par-72, 7,025-yard Sherwood Country Club.

The 10 teams play an alternate-shot round Saturday and the 54-hole tournament winds up Sunday with a scramble format.

Defending champions Lanny Wadkins and Tom Purtzer were at 7-under par 65 along with the three other teams of Tom Kite-Davis Love III, Chip Beck-Ben Crenshaw, and Nick Price-Billy Ray Brown.

Brown was a late replacement for Steve Elkington, who had to withdraw because of a sinus condition.

Couples and Floyd are trying to duplicate their win in this tournament in 1990, which led to their Ryder Cup pairing in 1991.

There's something rotten in Big Apple sports

NEW YORK (AP) — There's a worm in Big Apple sports.

The New York Giants are bland, not grand, and the Jets look like the New York Yankees.

Oh, if only Pat Kieckhefer were half as slick as coach Pat Ryan's hair.

Preseason talk crackled with anticipation for a Stanley Cup for the New York Rangers. Will a paper cup do? Someone, please throw a lifeline to the desert Islanders.

Oh, yes, the Yankees. Well, at least they lived up to expectations even if they lost more than they won.

Things indeed are rotten for fans of Big Apple professional teams. Their spirits have got to be much lower than ticket prices. About the only people smiling are player agents and accountants.

The baseball Mets set the tone for New York teams so far this year. Their high-priced howitzer attack, led by Bobby Bonilla, Eddie Murray and Howard Johnson, was a ringer.

After the Mets finished fifth in the National League East at 72-90 and the Yankees finished fifth in the AL East at 76-86, New York fans looked toward the National Football League season with high hopes.

Coach Ray Handley is not the only one who doesn't smile when it comes to the Giants, who are 5-5 and fourth in the NFC East. Handley vs. the media has been more competitive than some of the Giants' games.

As for the Jets, they have to beat the 1-9 New England Patriots to get two straight victories for the first time this season, and hardly anybody is calling it a lock. Their record is 3-7. That's a 40 percent preseason, which kindled hopes of a successful season. Forget about football fans.

In eight games, the Knicks and Patrick Ewing-Doc Rivers-Charles Oakley and Rolando Blackman and get ready for a run at the NBA title.

Bring on the Rangers and Mark Messier, Brian Leetch and goalies John Vanbiesbrouck and Mike Richter and watch them skate to the NHL championship.

In eight games, the Knicks have scored less than 100 points six times. Their latest sub-100 effort led to their third straight defeat, 101-90, to the Los Angeles Clippers Thursday night, and left them at 4-4 and tied for second in the Eastern Conference's Atlantic Division.

Guard John Starks scored the Knicks' first eight points against the Clippers. About the only thing he hit after that was former Knick Mark Jackson with a layup.

The frustrated Starks was benched in the second half.

So far the Knicks, who have seven new players, haven't looked ready to play together.

"Who knows what rock bottom is, but this is the bottom," the Rangers' Dave King said after a 7-3 loss in the Philadelphia Flyers' Thursday night. "I think we're at the bottom right now."

The fans hope it's rock bottom. The loss was the fourth straight for the Rangers and left them with a 9-8-2 record and third place in the Patrick Division.

Subic base's hosts bid farewell to Americans

The Associated Press

OLONGAPO, Philippines — Tens of thousands of residents of this port city sang "Auld Lang Syne" and waved red, white and blue banners Friday to bid farewell to the U.S. Navy, which leaves its base at Subic Bay next week.

The closing Tuesday of the Navy's largest base in Asia marks the end of nearly 100 years of American military presence in the Philippines, which was a U.S. colony from 1898 to independence in 1946.

In September 1991, the Philippine Senate rejected a new 10-year lease for Subic, and the government gave the Americans until the end of this year to leave.

The government hopes to transform Subic into a commercial center. Mayor Richard Gordon and Rear Adm. Thomas Mercer, the base commander, led thousands of cheering residents in a march Friday from City Hall to the base gates a half-mile away.

Applauding crowds lined the route. Many held placards that read "Thanks America for Everything" and "Philippine-American Friendship Forever."

Several elderly Filipino men saluted as Gordon, Mercer, other Navy officers and city officials passed. Some bar girls and employees unfurled red, white and blue bunting from windows, and some in the crowd wept.

"We're not here to celebrate the withdrawal of Americans," Gordon, whose grandfather was American, told the crowd. "We're celebrating friendship. This is what it's all about."

Mercer said he hoped U.S. ships and planes would be able to visit the Philippines even though the base was closing. "I know this is not goodbye, but just farewell for now," he said.

Most of Olongapo's 300,000 residents, dependent on the base for their livelihood, and its closure is a major blow. U.S. officials estimate the military spent more than $531 million annually in the Philippines.

U.S. carrier battle groups frequently visited the base for repairs and supplies, and thousands of sailors and Marines would jam Olongapo's streets and honk-bonk bars.

Residents of the area are losing their income at a time of virtual economic stagnation because of a lack of foreign investment, poor infrastructure, high credit costs and natural disasters.

"There's a pain in my heart," said Dolor Laban, a 29-year-old photo shop cashier. "It's sad. ... The friendship was good, that's why I'm crying."

The government hopes to attract foreign investors to transform Subic into a commercial center.

"We depended too much on the Americans for the survival of Olongapo," said James Ferrer, a mechanic. "It's about time for us to stand on our own two feet and make the system work. We can do it."

Most of the sprawling base was turned over to the Philippines last month. About 1,000 Americans remain at Clark Point naval air station at its western end, and they will leave Tuesday, U.S. officials said.

The United States once maintained more than 20 military installations in the Philippines, but the number was reduced to six by the 1980s. The five others, including Clark Air Base, were transferred to Philippine control last year.

Clark was abandoned because of extensive damage suffered in the 1991 eruption of Mount Pinatubo volcano.

Rear Adm. Thomas Mercer, commander of U.S. forces in the Philippines, links arms with Olongapo City Mayor Richard Gordon in a march Friday.
