Stradley: Death account was forced, false

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Murder suspect Donnell "Bud" Stradley told a jury Friday that he did not throw 2-year-old Amanda Hostetler 10 feet onto a wooden bed frame. That story conflicted with the one Twin Falls police detectives recorded on Jan. 22, two days after the little girl died of internal bleeding. But Stradley told the court Friday he was intimidated by police and told them what he thought they wanted to hear.

He spoke clearly and evenly, although he appeared close to tears on a couple of occasions, his voice cracking slightly. "I always wanted to have a family and I find one," Stradley said when asked why he didn't leave Amanda's mother, Jodie Hostetler, when their relationship turned rocky. "I wanted to hold onto something," he said. The three of them lived on Fourth Avenue East when Amanda stopped breathing the afternoon of Jan. 20. "Amanda acted like she wasn't feeling well," Stradley said, so he offered to give her an "airplane ride" before putting her on the bed, Stradley said. He put one hand under her chest, another under her knees and "flew" her around the living room as he had done many times before, he said. Then he went to the doorway of Amanda's small bedroom to the edge of her bed and tossed her into the center of the mattress—three to four feet at most, Stradley said. She did not hit the edge of the waterbed, he said. The detectives who interviewed Stradley at the police station two days later say he told them the toss was from the living room, some 10 feet from the bed, and that Amanda's abdomen landed on the padded wooden corner. Medical experts have testified that her mesentery—a fan of abdominal tissue—was torn and caused her to die from internal bleeding. The detectives interviewed Stradley for more than an hour before they recorded a 17-minute statement that was played to the jury earlier in the trial. Chief Deputy Prosecutor Dan Mink played back parts of that interview Friday and asked Stradley why his story changed. "I wasn't sure what was true and what wasn't true at that time," Stradley said.

Somalia deployment starts

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Deployment of more than 28,000 soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines to Somalia will take up to four weeks and they will stay in the region at least a couple months. Gen. Colin Powell said Friday. At a Pentagon briefing, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney described a four-phase plan for carrying out the largest humanitarian mission ever undertaken by the U.S. military. The goal, they said, was for United Nations forces to take control before long to keep relief supplies flowing to the starving population. "It's sort of like the cavalry coming to the rescue, straightening things out for a while and then letting the marshall keep things under control," Powell said. Earlier Friday, President Bush ordered American troops to lead a "difficult and dangerous" mercy mission to Somalia, threatening military action against warlords and gangs blocking food for starving millions. "We will not tolerate armed gangs ripping off their own people, condemning them to death by starvation," Bush said in a nationally broadcast address from the Oval Office. He said troops from the United States and about a dozen other countries participating in "Operation Restore Hope" would "save thousands of innocents from death." More than 300,000 people have died of starvation and disease in Somalia and 2 million more are at risk. The tragedy is aggravated by clan battles that have been raging since the collapse of President Mohamed Siad Barre's rule in January 1991. Well-armed militias, mostly untrained young men and boys, have stolen at least half the food and medicine shipped to Somalia and have threatened a 500-member U.N. peacekeeping force dispatched in September. Cheney bluntly termed White House predictions the force could be withdrawn by Jan. 20—the day President-elect Clinton takes office—an "artificial deadline." He said the U.S. military will do what is necessary to accomplish the job and not be guided by "political events at home." Most U.S. forces should be able to withdraw "in a couple months," but some may remain after that, Powell added. For example, the Marines may keep an amphibious strike force afloat off the

During the Gulf War, the 1st Marines helped liberate southern Kuwait. Marines from the unit were deployed in Los Angeles to restore order during last spring's riot. In Somalia, they will be armed with high-tech weaponry, light armor and a Marine combat helicopter wing. The Army's 10th Mountain Division, based in Fort Drum, in upstate New York, was formed during World War II as a force that specialized in mountain operations. About 10,500 troops are expected to ship out. The division recently aided victims of Hurricane Andrew in Florida.

Magic Valley November jobless rate stays at 5.9%

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS—The Magic Valley labor force continued its upward—but slow—progress in November. The unemployment rate remained at 5.9 percent, the same rate as October. Although pace of growth appears to be slowing a bit, the valley's labor force remains healthy. "All is still well in the Magic Valley labor force," local analyst Lon McDonald said. "For the first time in a long time, the national job market showed signs that the economic recovery is taking hold in the job market: The unemployment rate dropped for the fifth straight month and employers hired more workers for the third straight month. McDonald said the labor force is growing and more jobs are available, but continued immigration means that more job hunters are out there, keeping the unemployment rate higher. He expects to see slow but continuing growth in the future. About 300 more workers drew paychecks in November 1992 than in November 1991, according to the Department of Employment's preliminary estimate. That means the valley continued its year-over-year growth pattern.

But November also marks the normal seasonal downturn in the labor market, McDonald said. "In November, in the middle of the month, we start to see a lot of folks coming in from seasonal work and from slowdowns," McDonald said. About 1,900 workers dropped off the payroll between October and November, before adjustments were made to remove normal seasonal fluctuations. The labor force is composed of job hunters and workers—totaling about 12,000, indicating that as those seasonal workers lost their jobs, they didn't start looking for new work. Normal conditions returned to Idaho's statewide employment picture in November as total employment remained above the 490,000 level for the fourth straight month. The unemployment rate remained unchanged at 6.3 percent. The outlook is for continued slow but steady growth in Idaho's employment, the department said. The nation's unemployment rate went down for the fifth straight month in November. The U.S. Department of Labor reported that the rate dropped from 7.4 percent in October to 7.2 percent in November, the largest decrease since February 1989. An accompanying report showed a bigger-than-expected advance in employers' payrolls, which rose by 105,000 jobs to 108.6 million, the third consecutive monthly gain and the best since July. It was the first set of labor reports in a long time that led to general agreement that the economy was recovering. Although the nation's economy has been recovering in paper since May 1991, the pace has been almost too slow to notice. The seasonally adjusted unemployment rates for regions in Idaho, during November, October, and November 1991 were: • Panhandle, 9.8 percent, 8.9 percent, 9 percent. • Lewiston area, 5 percent, 4.9 percent, 5 percent. • Canyon County, 7.2 percent, 8.3 percent, 7.7 percent. • Ada County, 4 percent, 3.7 percent, 4.4 percent. • Magic Valley, 5.9 percent, 5.9 percent, 5.5 percent. • Pocatello area, 6.2 percent, 6.2 percent, 6.3 percent. • Idaho Falls area, 5 percent, 4.5 percent, 5.5 percent.

Weather summary

Cold air and clear skies.
That combination of conditions moving across Idaho from the northwest brought record low temperatures to the state today, the National Weather Service says.
The storm system that dropped snow on the Gem State the last several days moved southward over California Friday, and high pressure was building into the Pacific Northwest.
Extremely cold temperatures were the rule early Friday. A record was set at Pocatello as the mercury dropped to 22 degrees below zero at about 7:45 a.m.
The cold air persisted through the day, with readings generally below freezing and expected to fall to zero or below in many areas this morning.
The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 36 degrees at Emmet. Stanley reported the coldest at 32 degrees below zero.
Elsewhere in the region Friday, the highest temperature was 84 degrees at Brownsville, Texas. The lowest was 33 degrees below zero at West Yellowstone, Mont.

coast of Somalia so the U.N. peacekeepers "know there's a posse out there if they need one," Powell said.
The general said the operation would begin "some time next week." A U.N. no-fly zone over the area would be established.
The 1,800 Marines aboard a three-ship strike force off the coast of Somalia probably wouldn't enter the capital of Mogadishu until the middle of next week, said a senior Pentagon source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.
After the Marines secured the port, the major airstrip to the city and the warehouses where food supplies are stored, they would begin to fan out and establish safe havens for the relief workers.
The movement of relief supplies to the starving, Powell said.
Powell said the forces would be able to take "pre-emptive action" should they encounter threats to themselves or the relief workers.
"We're not just going to ride shotgun. We'll do what's necessary to eliminate the danger," he said.
The general added that U.S. forces would try to work with the country's warring factions, but could disarm them if necessary. There also might be bounties for weapons, he said.
The bulk of the U.S. force will be 16,000 Marines from the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force, from Camp Pendleton, Calif. Up to 10,000 soldiers from Fort Drum would also go, Powell said.
About 600 airmen will support the airlift mission while T-550 Navy personnel will operate the supply ships, he said.
He did not include in his 28,000 figure the several thousand sailors aboard the three-ship battle group headed by the nuclear carrier USS Ranger, saying they had already been on station in the Persian Gulf.
The ships were expected to be off Somalia's coast on Monday.
The Ranger, with 60 combat warplanes, is accompanied by the Agos cruiser USS Valley Forge and the destroyer USS Kinkaid. The warplanes will be used to dissuade opposition forces from mounting any offensive action, Cheney said.

The defense secretary left open the possibility that some members of the reserves and National Guard might be called to active duty to provide support.
The president briefed congressional leaders and won bipartisan support — tempered by concern over the east and the possibility of a Vietnam-style quagmire.
"The United States is the only superpower left in the world, the most powerful and wealthiest nation on earth, and I think we have as much a moral responsibility in Somalia as anything else," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said as he left the White House.
However, Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., said, "I think it's a mistake to have U.S. troops involved in it. And the terms of the engagement are not clearly spelled out, and I think that's a mistake."

U.S. may help Forces

in Bosnia skies
WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent reports that Bosnian Serbs may have violated a U.N. no-fly zone over armed helicopters flights could prompt the United States and its allies to use military measures to enforce the embargo. Bush administration officials said Friday.
Consultations with Britain, France and other countries may lead to a new U.N. resolution authorizing force to keep the skies over Bosnia-Herzegovina clear of military aircraft, the officials said.
The U.N. Security Council was established in October to shield Bosnian Muslims from attack. In November, however, the United Nations detected more than 175 flights.
None of them has been judged definitive by the State Department to be part of a military operation.

The 10th Division is equipped with helicopters, trucks and armvces and is designed to be mobile, self-sufficient and trained in special operations.
The soldiers are also taught how to achieve political, as well as military, objectives: how to win over civilian populations, providing order, opening roads, hospitals, controlling refugees and distributing food.
The spearhead of the U.S. effort will be the 1,800 men and women of the 1st Marine Air-Ground Task Force. These Marines are already off Somalia, ready to land with light armor, including tanks, a combat helicopter wing and portable water purification plants.
After the initial landings to secure port and airfield facilities, the one Marine and Army units will begin the task force will also secure major roads and food warehouses, and Marines will also move to Baidoa, an island city where the Air Force has been delivering food.

Stradley

The basic fact for the distance that, too, has centered around the space between a chair and the doorway to Amanda's room.
When asked on tape how far the chair was to the doorway, Stradley replied "about 10 feet."
But he said Stradley that he was sitting on a chair in the interview room that had been mentioned before the tape recorder was turned on.
"I didn't know they were talking about a chair in my living room," he said. "I didn't say I was tossing her any distances."
Jurors will have to decide which of Stradley's stories to believe when they decide the case, probably around the middle of next week.
The defense tried to explain the difference with testimony from Ketchum — psychologist Dan Hamilton that Stradley is extremely susceptible to pressure from authority figures.
Stradley said Friday that the police kept pressuring him to change his story until he actually believed that he had tossed Amanda onto the bed frame and caused her death.
When he finally came up with a story the police accepted, they recorded it and let him go, Stradley said.
"It went from an interview to a terrifying situation for me," he said.
Detectives Jack Freeman and Ron Roberson have testified that they did not curse or raise their voices during the interview.
Freeman did raise his voice and use profanity during the interview; during which he accused Stradley of rolling Amanda up like a ball and kicking her around the room, Stradley said.
When Stradley began to look for an explanation, he told them he

Storm dumps rain, snow on California, heads east

The Associated Press
A powerful winter storm dumped several inches of snow in Southern California's mountains Friday while dumping heavy rain and sleet on the state's lowlands, winds and hail storms.
Cold, windy conditions also prevailed elsewhere in the nation.
In California, several roads were closed because of snow, wind or flooding. Lightning knocked out power to some homes in the San Bernardino County.
The storm was moving into Arizona during the afternoon. Ten inches of snow had fallen in Flagstaff by midday.
Elsewhere Friday, cold air working its way into the Great Lakes combined with increasing north to northwesterly winds to produce snow squalls across portions of Indiana and Michigan. Heavy snow fell overnight Thursday in the Upper Mississippi Valley.
Record low temperatures Friday morning included 14 below in Laramie, Wyo., 19 in Olympia, Wash., 22 below in Pocatello, Idaho, 20 below in Klamath, Wyo., and 3 in Salt Lake City.
The morning low for the nation Friday was 33 degrees below zero at West Yellowstone, Mont.
Along the East Coast, a storm began developing and was expected to bring heavy snow to parts of New England, Vermont and West Virginia.
Rain fell in the south-central portion of the United States.
Heavier rainfall for the six hours ending at noon MST included .76 inch at Beaumont, Texas; .67 at Tupelo, Miss.; .58 at Greenwood, Miss.; and .51 at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Officials doubt POWs alive in Asia

Sen. John McCain, right, talks with retired Gen. John Vessely, serving as special presidential emissary to Vietnam, said one problem complicating a full accounting of missing servicemen was the tendency for officers to declare their comrades missing rather than killed in situations where death was virtually certain, like a plane crash with no parachutesight.

Briefly

Cystic fibrosis gene therapy may start

WASHINGTON — Experimental gene therapy for cystic fibrosis, recommended by a federal advisory panel just last Friday, may start as soon as next month, officials said Friday. Preliminary results could follow in weeks.

A National Institutes of Health advisory committee recommended approval of plans by three researchers to insert corrective genes into the breathing passages of a small number of cystic fibrosis patients.

Before the work can begin, it also must be approved by NIH director Dr. Bernardine Healy and by the Food and Drug Administration.

USDA seeks sanctions from states

WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department is seeking millions of dollars in sanctions from states for mistakes and fraud in the food stamp program that cost taxpayers $1 billion a year.

Idaho is not on the list of states.

The states, hammered by the recession and rapidly expanding welfare populations, say they don't have the money, even under USDA's offer to forgive 65 percent of the $300 million owed nationwide.

In Oklahoma and Louisiana, state human services officials say money is so tight that they could be forced to rob other programs for the poor or elderly to come up with the money.

Problems halt experiment on shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Electrical problems prevented Discovery's astronauts from shooting six metal balls into orbit Friday, and ground controllers scrambled to salvage the space-tracking experiment.

NASA hoped to resolve the trouble by the next release opportunity, Sunday evening.

Astronaut Michael "Rich" Clifford was just minutes away from ejecting the balls from a can in the shuttle cargo bay when he found he was getting bad signals through the deploy-mechanism electronics.

Girl wins damages from auto maker

ALBANY, N.Y. — A girl who was left paralyzed and brain damaged after the fall from a Jeep as it veered into the ditch has been awarded $20.5 million, a lawyer said Friday.

A federal jury on Thursday ruled that the now-defunct White Automotive Corp., which made Jeep's soft roofs and doors, was responsible for Olivia Slade's injuries.

Since the Colorado-based company is out of business, it may be impossible to collect the award, said Thomas J. DiNovo, a lawyer for the family, said Friday.

Worker: Packwood checked on woman

WASHINGTON — A former campaign volunteer said Friday that Sen. Bob Packwood called her last month trying to gather potentially damaging information about a woman accusing the Oregon Republican of sexual harassment.

Mabsie Walters, a former president of the Oregon chapter of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said Packwood called her Nov. 9 to ask questions about Mary Heffernan, who founded the chapter.

Heffernan is among five women who have publicly said they were targets of unwelcome sexual advances from Packwood during his 24-year Senate career. Heffernan said that during a visit to his office in the early 1980s, Packwood grabbed her arms and kissed her.

Compiled from wire reports.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials said Friday that after years of painstaking searching — and a recently intensified investigation that continues today — they have no evidence of any live American prisoners of war in Southeast Asia.

Wrapping up its year-long investigation into the fate of missing servicemen, the Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs questioned civilian and Pentagon officials doing the ground work in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Witnesses described mountain trails to crash sites, battles with malaria and jungle leeches, and resentful Vietnamese provincial officials in sites that were heavily bombed during the war. The testimony detailed the efforts of 187 servicemen and civilians now conducting interviews, digging for bones, and sifting through archives in Hanoi.

Through all the searching, the officials say they have produced a mountain of information, some of which has cleared up cases of missing servicemen. But they said emphatically that none of it indicates any POW is alive or that POWs were held after the war.

"The probability (that any POW remains alive) is very, very low but it exists," retired Army Gen. John Vessely told the committee. "All of the evidence gathered points toward death" at crash sites or when captured. The idea that the Vietnamese would hold POWs for 20 years, "is almost beyond the realm of comprehension."

Clinton to quickly OK executive orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Clinton could start reversing Republican policies and making good on his campaign promises as early as Inauguration Day.

Transition lawyers are preparing a stack of executive orders that will be waiting for Clinton when he's sworn in on Jan. 20.

"He wants to be able to take action from the day he takes office," said Bruce Reed, deputy transition director for domestic policy. "The point is to break the gridlock right off the bat, to show that he wasn't kidding when he talked about change."

President Bush did not have executive orders drafted in advance nor did President Reagan, who came into office with ideas that differed greatly from those of his Democratic predecessor.

Transition teams also are drafting orders that would cut the federal bureaucracy, limit perks of executive employees and convert some cars in the federal fleet to natural gas.

"I don't know why Reagan didn't do it," Reed said. He said Clinton is in a hurry "to undo some of the damage that's built up over the last 12 years."

Clinton has already said he wants to cancel executive orders that ban gays in the military, research using fetal tissue and abortion counseling at federally funded birth control clinics. Another order would stop the automatic return of Haitian refugees to their homeland.

ing satellite to find the exact rice paddy in which the letters appeared in aerial photographs taken in 1988.

Interviews with villagers turned up the corner of the paddy, who said his son had made the letters by tugging piles of rice straw. The villager said the boy had received mail from relatives in the United States with the letters, "USA" stamped on the envelope.

Gen. Thomas Needham, chief of the joint task force in charge of the full-accounting effort, said private citizens in Vietnam and some local or district officials are holding remains against Vietnamese law, hoping or waiting for some reward.

While the Vietnamese government has been increasingly cooperative in the past two years, Needham said pockets of ill-feeling toward Americans remain. "There are provinces of Vietnam that were very heavily bombed and their support is less than others," Needham said.

Sens. Bob Smith, R-N.H., and John McCain, R-Ariz., read from a cable sent by U.S. officials in Vietnam to headquarters in Hawaii complaining that some local officials were "just going through the motions," in assisting the searchers. Needham called that an exception.

About every four days the task force office in Bangkok, Thailand, receives a new report of a live American POW somewhere in Southeast Asia, Needham said these reports get top priority. The task force investigated and resolved 143 live sighting reports this year. None could be proved true.

With Marines offshore, Somalis seek U.S. salvation

A Somali woman waits at a feeding station in Mogadishu after arriving Friday from the countryside. Many relief organizations have reduced the amount of meals they give to the needy because banditry has cut into supplies.

MOGADISHU—Somalia (AP) — With 1,800 Marines ready to come ashore in this famine-stricken country, many Somalis appear to think the Americans can put their country back together.

Aid workers who have been struggling to feed the country amid looting and gunfire were more cautious.

They believe that if the mission is as short as White House officials have indicated, it will fail.

"If they don't stay six or seven months, it's not going to achieve anything," said Rhodri Wynn-Pope, the team leader for CARE International. "It could actually make it worse."

But even among aid workers there was confidence that the deployment of 28,000 troops will at least secure Mogadishu's port and airport so food can move freely to the hungry.

President Bush ordered the deployment on Friday, and it was expected to begin Monday.

The chaos Friday in Mogadishu was typical of what the Marines will face.

The port was closed by a dispute between militias. About 12,000 tons of grain were stored there — enough to feed about 1 million people for a month.

The airport was closed briefly by an argument among militias. U.N. peacekeepers from Pakistan opened fire, killing an armed Somali.

A heavy rain dislodged bodies hastily buried after months of war and famine, filling the air with the smell of death.

'If they don't stay six or seven months, it's not going to achieve anything. It could actually make it worse.'

Rhodri Wynn-Pope, CARE International

But Mogadishu's dispirited people were somewhat cheered by the sight of a Navy ship cruising along the horizon. There were unconfirmed reports it was one of the three warships bringing the first 1,800 Marines.

Somalis — many of whom have become accustomed to foreign aid handouts in recent years of drought and warfare — see American forces as their salvation.

"They're going to make sure the security problems in the country are solved and feed us as well, and send our children to school," said Mohamed Nur-Omar, when asked what he expected.

Others said they wanted American troops to disarm the thousands of marauding militiamen, and to reconcile the warlords whose battle for power destroyed much of downtown Mogadishu.

"It will take a couple of years. National reconciliation must be organized and the Americans must play a big role," said Mohamed Aden, a hydro-geologist.

Those hoping for American help told how their lives had been torn apart by Somalia's war and famine.

Nur-Omar, an unemployed factory worker, said many nights his family of 10 has nothing to eat.

Aden, also unemployed despite his education, recounted losing his 20-year-old son and being wounded himself when a battle erupted near them last March.

Not everyone was looking forward to the Americans' arrival.

Fundamentalist Muslims preached in mosques on Friday that the troops were part of a U.S. war on Islam.

The deployment also is likely to anger the young militiamen who've made their living by looting or even working as armed guards for aid agencies.

John Kilkenny, of the Irish humanitarian agency, CONCERN, said the arrival of the militiamen guards will be one of the problems faced by aid groups if the Americans take over security.

Kilkenny said the U.S. forces will have to reach some accommodation with the country's warlords and militiamen.

He and other aid workers said they hoped American forces also would go outside Mogadishu and secure roads to hard-hit rural towns, to ensure farmers could return to their fields.

Wynn-Pope, of CARE, said that unless the Americans stayed long enough to restore security, aid agencies once again would face rough times from militiamen once the U.S. forces left.

"You'll be looking down the wrong end of a dirty barrel all over again," he said.

Somalia Facts and figures

HISTORY
The Somali Republic came into being on July 1, 1960 as a result of the merger of the British Somaliland Protectorate, which became independent on June 26, 1960, and the Italian Trust Territory of Somalia.
On October 20, 1969 Maj. Gen. Mohamed Siad Barre took power. In a coup, suspended the constitution and formed a Supreme Revolutionary Council to administer the country, which was renamed the Somali Democratic Republic.
By the end of 1990, after 12 years of civil war involving 5 factions, rebel forces had fought their way into Mogadishu. Mohamed Siad Barre fled on January 27, 1991.

POPULATION
Population of Somalia is estimated at about 8 million, but actual figures are difficult to gather because of the mostly rural nature of the country.

LANGUAGE AND RELIGION
The national language is Somali. Arabic is also an official language and English and Italian are also extensively spoken. The population is almost exclusively Sunni Muslim.

CLIMATE
Much of the country is arid, though rainfall is more adequate toward the south. Temperatures are very high on the northern coasts.

Somalia compared to the United States

Problems and solutions
Estimates of the scope of humanitarian problems and relief needs in Somalia:
■ Two million people, or one-third of the population, are threatened with starvation; 250,000 could die before Christmas without help.
■ About 300,000 have died this year from starvation, disease and warfare.
■ Hundreds of people are dying daily, down slightly from the 300-per-day toll in some areas.
■ 200,000 metric tons of food and other aid have been delivered this year but experts say 50 percent to 60 percent has been looted or "paid" as protection. One metric ton of grain feeds 2,500 people a day; 83 people a month of 7 people for one year.
■ 12,000 metric tons of food lie in warehouses in Mogadishu's port — enough to feed 995,000 people for one month. Much of it is rotting.
■ The United States, Germany, France, Canada and Italy all have conducted efforts. All major industrial nations and many other countries, including poor ones, have contributed food, money or both.

A look at Somalia's history, land, people

The Associated Press
Somalia, a desert land that shapes the horn of eastern Africa, is an Islamic land united by religion and language.
But divided by clans, it also is a place where the United Nations says one in four residents is now considered in danger of dying from starvation.
Unlike those of any other sub-Saharan African nation, its estimated 6.6 million mostly nomadic people share a common language, faith and ethnic origin. But Somalis belong to six major clans, each of them divided into a bewildering number of sub-clans and sub-sub-clans. Loyalties among the various groups shift frequently.

If Somalia is divided along clan lines, it was further divided by the great powers in the last century. Britain declared a protectorate over northern Somalia in 1886 and Italy colonized the south soon after.
British forces captured the southern Italian colony in 1941 and administered both territories until 1959, when the United Nations declared the south a trust territory and returned its administration to Italy.
On June 26, 1960, British Somaliland was granted independence. Five days later, Italian Somaliland won its independence and united with the former British protectorate.

In 1969, Gen. Mohammed Siad Barre seized power in Somalia in a bloodless coup and put the nation on the path of "scientific socialism." But Siad Barre ran what many observers felt was the most corrupt, brutal dictatorship in Africa.
The Soviet Union was his chief ally until 1977, when Somalis went to war with Ethiopia over the Ogaden desert. The Soviets shifted their support to Ethiopia and Somalia won American backing. The United States withdrew its patronage in the late 1980s over widespread allegations of atrocities by Siad Barre's government.

In the late 1970s and early '80s, a number of clan-based rebel movements sprang up. Although not united, other groups soon took up arms against Siad Barre and he was finally chased from the capital of Mogadishu in January 1991, by the United Somali Congress, composed of the seven principal sub-clans of the Hawiye clan.
With the dictator gone, two major figures in the rebel Congress, Ali Mahdi Mohamed and Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid began quarreling over power and the spoils of war. Their dispute erupted into full-scale urban warfare in Mogadishu last November and it lasted until both sides signed a U.N.-brokered cease-fire in March.

Difficulties in Somalia unique, officials contend

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — If saving lives in Somalia is worth the price of military intervention, then what about humanitarian disasters in Sudan and Bosnia?
Not the same, diplomats say.
Almost unanimously, they see Somalia as an exception to the rule. That rule, enshrined in the U.N. charter, is that military force will be used in humanitarian crises only with the consent of the local government.
Somalia has no government, so there was no one to give permission to allow in up to 28,000 U.S. troops.
But there are more than just legal reasons why Somalia is a special case. Somalia is thought to be a quick-fix situation, where troops can go in, secure areas for emergency food and medical relief with little resistance, and then leave, turning over control to U.N. peacekeepers.
Still, the U.N. Security Council's decision Thursday to authorize a U.S.-led multinational force did establish a precedent.

And Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali was among the first to declare it. "It is for the first time you have a collective intervention in favor of a humanitarian problem. We are creating a precedent which will be very important for the future of the United Nations, future role of the UN and for peace and security all over the world," Boutros-Ghali told ABC News.
He has been pushing since taking office in January for the United Nations to become more involved in humanitarian crises, even creating a new U.N. department to deal with it.
Now, however, the requests for help are starting to roll in, even from field military commanders.

Anderson passes freedom birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former hostage Terry Anderson celebrated the first anniversary of his release from captivity Friday in a Roman Catholic Mass presided over by his fellow hostage, the Rev. Martin Jenco.
Anderson left Beirut for freedom on Dec. 4, 1991, after more than 5 1/2 years in chains, longer than any other Westerner kidnapped by the Shiite radicals in Lebanon. The former Associated Press chief Middle East correspondent was also the last Western hostage to be released.
"Give praise and thanks to a gentle God who set us free," said Jenco at the children's Mass celebrated at the Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown. Jenco was freed in 1986 after 1 1/2 years in the hands of his kidnappers.
Anderson is now working on a book on his experiences, due to be completed by April. "I try to put myself back," he said, "to the years of being chained, blindfolded and kept in solitary confinement. "But sometimes it's pretty hard."

U.S. troops head for another holiday in danger zone

WASHINGTON (AP) — In 1989, Panama. In 1990 the Persian Gulf. Now, Somalia. Time to get out the yellow ribbons again.

If three holiday seasons of the four he's been president, commander-in-chief George Bush will have had American troops in danger zones on far away shores.

Combat forces were sent to Panama and brought down Manuel Noriega, an operation that spanned the Yuletide.

And they spent the holiday season in the Persian Gulf waiting to oust Iraqi invaders from Kuwait.

This time, the mission is driven by the haunting faces of starving children.

Never before has a nation's armed force been deployed on such scale on a mission of mercy.

Fittingly, perhaps, it comes in the season of goodwill.

During the "election" campaign, the president said often that the hardest part of his job was to order young men and women into danger.

He said he spoke from experience — his own, during World War II. "I had barely lived when I began to watch men die," he said.

The troops this time, he said, will be "doing God's work."

About this time two years ago, 400 tons of mail — five plane loads full — were going each day to the troops serving in the Persian Gulf. So many packages addressed to "any soldier" were received that each of the 20,000 soldiers of the 1st Cavalry Division could expect to get a Christmas package.

Troops had their own Christmas songs: "Dashing through the sand, with an M-16 in hand, terrorizing the land, looking for Hussein. Treads on tracks will ring, giving troops a fright, open up the door, we get out and fight."

Nothing so menacing this time, says the president.

"The people of Somalia, especially the children of Somalia, need our help," he said. "We're able to ease their suffering. We must help them live. We must give them hope. America must act."

He promised, as he did during Panama and the Persian Gulf, that Somalia will not stay "one day longer than is absolutely necessary." But he had, also, to address the families of the troops at holiday time.

"I understand it is difficult to see your loved ones go, to send them off knowing they will not be home for the holidays, but the humanitarian mission they undertake is in the finest traditions of service," the president said.

Even before Bush became president, a yellow ribbon was affixed to the door of the White House's West Wing, where the Oval Office is located. Originally it was a reminder of Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

The hostages came home, but the ribbon remained. During Panama and Kuwait it hung there, as a symbol of the wait for America's troops to come home.

It is still there, no longer as fresh and bouffant as it was. Waiting.

Troops prepare for trip

FORT DRUM, N.Y. (AP) — Soldiers in New York and Marinette, Calif., hustled Friday to loading their gear and life insurance policies, and in some cases, to get married, before heading to Somalia to guard famine relief.

U.S. officials said 28,000 members of the military will be deployed to Somalia during the next few weeks. They include 10,500 soldiers from Fort Drum and 16,000 Marines from Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Hundreds of soldiers, in camouflage uniforms lined up in Fort Drum's gymnasium on Friday, completing paperwork, getting shots and giving blood and saliva samples for DNA identification.

In Watertown, soldiers swamped the city clerk's office to snatch up wedding rings and marriage licenses before they leave.

"We find out before the papers, as far as when they're going and how many are going, because the soldiers come here," said Mark Waterbury, owner of Waterbury Fine Jewelers.

In an ordinary week, City Clerk Donna Dutton issues about 30 marriage licenses. But this week, demand has doubled, she said.

"We've had couples standing three deep," Dutton said. "When they shipped out to Saudi, the same thing happened."

Back on base, which sent troops to Florida after Hurricane Andrew, many soldiers said they had been told little about the Somalian mission.

"They haven't told us anything," said Lance Godman of Detroit. "I really don't know what to expect."

Jeff Burrow, a sergeant from Michigan, said he increased the amount of his life insurance policy, "just in case."

In California, Marine wives Tiffiny Cooper and Paula Walkleit, both 21, fought back tears Friday as President Bush announced Operation Restore Hope, a mission he said he hoped would end by Jan. 20, Inauguration Day.

"I've been through this before with the Persian Gulf," Cooper said. "I know that 90 days can easily turn into six months, which can turn into nine months."

Cooper's husband, Derek, a corporal in the 3rd Marine Airwing, has been away three of the last four Christmases. He was in the Persian Gulf for one of the holidays.

Cooper warned Walkleit about the stress of waiting and worrying. "It'll be Walkleit's first such separation from her husband, Jesse, a lance corporal in the 1st Marine Division.

"It makes me sad to see him go, but he believes in it and so do I," Walkleit said. "We don't want to see people starving."

For many of the Fort Drum soldiers, too, this will be the third consecutive Christmas away from families.

Last year, the 10th mountain division was deployed in Cuba, and two years ago it was in the Sinai Desert.

PFC Kevin Hall, left, of Miami checks Staff Sgt. Nelson Vazquez of Puerto Rico during examinations at Fort Drum, N.Y., Friday. About 10,000 soldiers from the Army's light infantry 10th Mountain Division are heading to Somalia as part of a U.S.-led force to safeguard relief operations to the famine-wrecked country.

Iraq calls action publicity stunt; others OK move

LONDON (AP) — Iraq Friday dismissed President Bush's decision to send troops to Somalia as a last-minute publicity stunt.

But a range of other nations said the move, and some joined in.

The United States on Friday committed 28,000 troops in a huge humanitarian exercise, authorized by the United Nations.

Japan, which was criticized for "checkbox diplomacy" during the Gulf War, was considering "logistical support" but no troops, said Chief Cabinet Secretary Koichi Kato. Tokyo earlier committed $27 million in aid.

Although a law passed this year allowed Tokyo to dispatch troops abroad for U.N. peacekeeping, "the location is remote from Japan, and Japan's capabilities are limited,"

Many nations take up effort

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Details on contributions to the U.S.-led military mission to Somalia. President Bush said about a 12 nations would offer troops.

UNITED STATES: Promised 28,000 troops. The first group — 1,800 Marines aboard three ship amphibious strike force — left Somalia to dispatch troops. Washington has sent 200,000 tons of food so far and U.S. planes have airlifted supplies to Somalia and refugees tents in Kenya. U.S. aircraft also carried in 550 Pakistani peacekeepers.

FRANCE: About 1,700 troops pledged. Some relief supplies sent.

CANADA: 900 troops promised, equipped with armored personnel carriers and armored fighting vehicles called Lynxes. So far pledged $20 million in aid and three planes have helped airlift supplies.

BELGIUM: Will dispatch 550 paratroopers for a year. Troops ready to leave on 48-hour notice.

EGYPT: Pledged to leave as early as next week.

ITALY: Plans to send troops, but no figures announced.

NIGERIA: Considering troop deployments.

BRITAIN: Offered four transport aircraft worth $7 million. About $49 million given so far this year for humanitarian aid.

JAPAN: Considering donating untested "logistical support" for troops. $27 million aid program announced.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Masamichi Hanabusa said.

President Bush said about a dozen nations would offer troops for the mission.

Belgium said it could commit 550 paratroopers for a year, but it wasn't clear who would pay for the deployment.

The European Community had earlier offered to finance the Belgian troops out of an international development fund for Somalia, Foreign Minister Willy Claes said. But he wasn't sure if EC governments would foot the bill now that the operation was to be led by Washington, rather than the United Nations.

France was reportedly sending 2,000 soldiers, and Canada 900. Nigeria, Egypt and Turkey were considering deployments.

Italy, a former colonial ruler of Somalia, will send troops by the end of the month, Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo said.

Britain said it had no plans to send soldiers but offered four transport aircraft and $7 million.

In Baghdad, a Thawra, the newspaper of Iraq's ruling party, said Bush was trying to improve his image before stepping down.

Bombing injures 19 whites

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nineteen whites were injured when a bomb exploded in a restaurant, the second attack in a week against whites, and the government vowed Friday to "fight fire with fire." There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, which occurred just before midnight Thursday in the farming community of Queensdown, about 500 miles south of Johannesburg. But police said they believed the explosion was the work of a radical black nationalist group, the Azanian People's Liberation Army. The group took responsibility for an attack last Saturday in which four elderly whites were killed. The recent violence against whites is a rare occurrence. It comes as President F.W. de Klerk's white government and the African National Congress are trying to revive negotiations on ending apartheid. The attacks frightened many whites, but government and moderate black leaders appeared determined to press ahead with the negotiations. Both sides condemned Thursday's bombing in a swift display of unity. De Klerk said his government would not tolerate such acts. National police commander, Gen. Johan van der Merwe, said: "We will fight fire with fire." The ANC, the main black opposition group, called the attack "the work of desperados." Government and ANC officials ended three days of secret talks Friday on reviving full-scale talks and said they would press for a negotiated transformation to a multiracial democracy. The two sides said they would be more talks in January. Last Saturday's gun and hand grenade attack occurred in King William's Town, about 60 miles from Queenstown. Four elderly whites were killed at a country club Christmas party.

Germany plans task force to fight neo-Nazi extremists

BONN, Germany (AP) — The government will set up a special task force to crush neo-Nazi violence, and more undercover agents will try to infiltrate extremist groups, officials said Friday. Interior Minister Rudolf Seiters said his counterpart from Germany's 16 states have endorsed his plan to create a nationwide task force to deal with neo-Nazis and other rightist extremists. The task force's work will be coordinated by the Federal Office for the Protection of the Constitution, the German equivalent of the FBI. "Authorities plan to use more undercover agents to infiltrate right-wing extremist groups and to mid rightists' meeting places, said Interior Minister Rudolf Seiters. The interior minister of the state of Baden-Wuerttemberg. In yet another case of German troops participating in right-wing violence, a newspaper reported that soldiers beat up the owner and employees of a Yugoslav restaurant in the northern German city of Emmenrich. "Seven drunken soldiers walked into the restaurant and started foreign guests there by saying 'Germany for the Germans!' and 'Foreigners go home!'" the Bild newspaper said. It said the restaurant owner drove the soldiers out of the establishment but the soldiers returned and beat him and his patrons so severely they had to be hospitalized. The newspaper said the attack on Nov. 7. The Defense Ministry said last month a handful of soldiers had taken part in at least two dozen acts of far-right violence, including three murders. German police have had little success in combating the nearly 2,000 extremist attacks this year, in which 16 people have been killed. Criticized for doing too little to battle the threat, Chancellor Helmut Kohl, pledged Thursday to "use all possible legal measures to fight violence and political extremism."

Spanish tanker fire out; 'stone-by-stone' cleanup begins

LA CORUNA, Spain (AP) — An oil fire on a grounded Greek tanker went out Friday as crews began scrubbing blackened shores and rescuing oil-covered animals from a spill that could rival the Exxon Valdez disaster. Rafael Lobeto, a Merchant Marine official, said teams would have to clean "stone-by-stone" along the jagged coastline of northeastern Spain. The captain of the tanker Aegean Sea told authorities weather conditions were "hellish" when he attempted to steer the vessel into port Thursday after being authorized to enter. The cause of the accident has not yet been determined, and Capt. Constantine Stavrides and other crewmembers were questioned Friday. Stavrides was in custody. Investigators said the harbor pilot had not reached the vessel before it ran aground. They said he came aboard after the crash as the ship was battered by 12- to 15-foot waves. "The harbor pilot wasn't aboard, but he was in radio contact with the captain," since the tanker ran aground. The $3.964-ton tanker's stern, which mostly contained the ship's own fuel supply, burned itself out, said Lourdes Garcia, a government spokeswoman in La Coruna. "What's left is the slick," Garcia said. Officials said the slick measured at least 10 square miles. A spokesman for the Spanish Repsol oil firm, which had chartered the tanker, estimated Thursday that about 8 million gallons had been spilled. Officials on Friday declined to make an estimate, but it appeared the spill might be larger.

U.S. using super-fast spy plane

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. Air Force is operating a new generation of secret spy planes capable of reaching eight times the speed of sound, Jane's Defense Weekly said Friday. In a report, prepared for next week's issue, the military affairs magazine said the triangular-shaped planes have been in service since 1989. "We've been working on this report for about three years," Jane's editor, Paul Beaver, said in a telephone interview. "The evidence has grown overwhelming — all we need now is a photograph to prove that it exists." Beaver quoted the report as saying that the $1 billion plane, dubbed Aurora, could reach cruising speeds of up to Mach-8 — or 5,280 mph and more than 2½ times the official world speed of sound. The defense establishment continues to deny the existence of Aurora, he said. The Pentagon has no immediate comment from Pentagon officials in Washington. The Pentagon announced in 1990 that it was retiring its supersonic spy plane, the SR-71 Blackbird, and would rely for its future high-altitude surveillance on orbiting satellite. But Jane's technical editor, Bill Sweetman, who compiled the article, reported that the so-called "hypersonic" Aurora operates mainly at night and incorporates the latest radar-evading "stealth" technology. Sweetman, an expert in high-technology aircraft, maintained the Pentagon story was a smokescreen. Beaver said Sweetman reported extensively on the U.S. Air Force's stealth fighter and bomber programs before they were made public and has written a book on the development of stealth technology. A Mach-8 plane would be able to reach any point on the globe in less than three hours. Such a plane, fueled by liquid methane, would be of potentially greater use than high-resolution images from orbiting satellites that can take 24 hours to arrive over the subject, the report said. Sweetman based his conclusions on "pieced-together" data, said Beaver, including strange sounds reported above air bases in Nevada and California, "multimillion-dollar spending on classified research projects and the sighting over the North Sea of a wedge-shaped aircraft, under fighter-bomber escort. Chris Hudson, 30, a trained aircraft observer, told Jane's that while working as an oil-drilling engineer in the North Sea in 1989 he saw a bizarre, wedge-shaped plane flying between two conventional F-111 fighter-bombers and a Hercules tanker. Sweetman believes this was the first sighting of Aurora. Beaver said the sighting can be linked to mysterious sounds heard by aerospace professionals near military airfields in California and Nevada that are characterized as "low-frequency, high-amplitude pulsing." Sweetman said in his article that he believes the U.S. aerospace giant, Lockheed, which produced the F-117 stealth fighter, is the most likely manufacturer of Aurora. "Lockheed's financial figures have indicated a continuing, large flow of income for 'classified' and 'special mission' aircraft," he wrote.

Saudis behead 7 for murder, drug offenses

RIVADI, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Seven people were publicly beheaded "by sword" Friday, including a heroin smuggler and a murderer whose victim's children refused to spare him in exchange for a payoff. Wali ibn Mubarras al-Dossari was executed in Riyadh for killing his cousin, the Interior Ministry said. Under Islamic law, he was kept in prison until the victim's child became old enough to decide whether to accept "dian," or blood money from him, and have him spared. The executions were carried out in public squares in several cities after Friday prayers, the Interior Ministry said in a statement.

Dutch defense chief cited for gay policy

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A gay minister on Friday it will honor the defense minister for his efforts to fight discrimination against gays in the military. Unlike many other military forces in the world, including in the United States, homosexuals are not banned from serving in the Dutch military. The Dutch Association for the Integration of Homosexuality said it will present Defense Minister Rijkman Groenendaal with a medal "in recognition of his attempts to ensure gay men and lesbians find their niche in the army."

Plant collapses, 3 die

HONG KONG (AP) — A three-story shoe factory collapsed in the southern Chinese city of Canton, killing three workers and injuring 35, a news agency reported Friday. About 1,500 rescuers, including soldiers and policemen, pulled 23 survivors from the rubble Thursday night and were searching for one person still missing in the accident, which occurred earlier in the day, the China News Service reported.

Venezuela deploys troops before voting

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Authorities dispatched thousands of soldiers and national guardsmen Friday to protect key buildings and ensure that the country's general election two days ahead of state and local elections. The presence of the troops was jarring for many Venezuelans, still recovering from an attempted overthrow of President Carlos Andres Perez a week earlier by rebel elements of the military. Information Minister Angel Zambrano urged people to ignore rumors of instability. But shops were busy as Caracas residents stocked up on goods.

France bans SS book

PARIS (AP) — France banned a pro-Nazi book on Friday, saying it could endanger public order. Interior Minister Paul Quilès outlawed the circulation, distribution and sale of "The SS Order: Ethics and Ideology," by Edgar Thibault. The book contains an apology of Nazism, racism and anti-Semitism, Quilès said. The SS, or Schutzstaffel, were Adolf Hitler's feared elite troops.

Water board adopts basin plans

The Associated Press

River conservationists are encouraged by some of the changes the Idaho Water Board has made in water plans for the Henry's Fork and Upper Boise River basins.

But they still would like an extra 80 miles included on the Henry's Fork and are concerned the Boise may not be saved from flooding by the proposed Twin Springs hydropower site.

Meeting in Lewiston Thursday, the board recommended protection of about 50 additional stream miles in the Henry's Fork plan, totaling about 200 miles, based on citizen testimony at public hearings in October.

The board is a mixed bag. There are a lot of positive changes, but we are disappointed that the board didn't include 40 miles of the lower Henry's Fork and the lower reaches of the Fall River," said Wendy Wilson, executive director of Idaho Rivers United.

In the last legislative session, lawmakers considered the Henry's Fork and proposed hydroelectric projects there. But they failed to ratify the plan, forcing the board to reevaluate it once more.

"The Henry's Fork 279 proposal drafted by several groups provides a much greater level of protection," she said. That would involve 279 miles in the basin for protection.

The Fremont-Madison Irrigation District asked for fewer river miles.

"You could adopt 279 miles without harming agriculture," she said.

What may become a bone of contention would be pulling water off-stream of the Teton River in the basin to use for hydro projects below the diversions, Wilson said.

"It kind of negates the effectiveness of protecting the Teton River," she said.

Among the stream segments added into the plan are portions of Targhee, Robinson, Targhee, Boone and Conant creeks.

Trout fishing may be stopped to save sockeye

WASHINGTON (AP) — Central Idaho trout anglers may have to reel in their lines if the Northwest's endangered Snake River sockeye salmon run is to be rescued, a federal official says.

The National Marine Fisheries Service wants to reintroduce sockeye to four lakes near Stanley, but that may require eliminating predatory trout, Merritt Tuttle, a division chief for the federal agency, said Thursday.

Sockeye once flourished in Alturas, Pettit, Stanley and Yellow Belly lakes, but no more, Tuttle said. At a fifth lake, Redfish, only four fish returned last year, the spawning beds from the Pacific Ocean in 1991. This year only one came back.

By fertilizing eggs from the lone female sockeye that returned in 1991 with sperm from the three male sockeye, federal and state wildlife officials have produced 2,000 offspring that now are being reared in captivity.

A second generation produced from those fish will be released into the central Idaho lakes, "so that we aren't having the population in a single lake where a catastrophe could destroy the population," Tuttle said.

But he said if hatchery-raised trout also being released into the lakes eat the salmon fry, stocking the lakes with trout may have to stop and "there's a chance trout fishing may need to be curtailed."

The sockeye reintroduction project falls to address the real problem — the hydroelectric dams blocking the migrating salmon's path to the ocean, said Fish-Klahr, resource director for the Idaho Conservation League.

"It's a classic example of where downstream electric interests have twisted this issue to make rainbow trout part of the problem," Klahr said.

"Rainbow trout is not the issue. There have been rainbow trout planted in Redfish Lake for decades and the sockeye have barely been coming back, but they've been there."

Coalition wants stop to INEL program

POCATELLO (AP) — A coalition of citizen groups wants the incoming Clinton administration to slash funding for nuclear energy research and use the money to develop renewable energy and conservation.

At least two of the groups which helped write a 32-page booklet for President-elect Clinton called "Sustainable Energy Blueprint" want the new administration to stop funding breeder reactor research at the Idaho National Laboratory.

The breeder program, known as the Integral Fast Reactor (IFR), is a design by Argonne National Laboratory-West at the site that scientists say will create more nuclear fuel than it burns.

They also say it will produce less radioactive waste by recycling most of its spent fuel, and reduce the time it takes for dangerous radioactivity in waste to decay.

"It may be that (the critics) know little if anything about the IFR," said Argonne spokesman Dick Lindsay.

However, we agree with the National Academy of Sciences, which recommends going ahead with the program.

The National Academy of Sciences' committee on future nuclear power development recently concluded that the reactor provides enhanced safety features, and would be an important long-term technology, especially if it proves to be economically feasible.

What that should tell policy makers, Lindsay said, is that a panel of distinguished experts who are very knowledgeable in energy affairs have examined this in great depth and affirmed what we have — that this is the most important long-term research effort in the nuclear research area.

Lindsay said he thinks that though Clinton has expressed reservations about the future of nuclear energy, the new president will make budget decisions only after weighing the facts.

"We don't believe nuclear is where we should be getting our power from," said Michael Mariotte, executive director of the Nuclear Information and Resource Center. "We believe there are cleaner sources."

Sheriff cross-examines witnesses in his own trial

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Idaho County Sheriff Randy Baldwin continued to act as his own counsel at his state burglary and handgun trial Friday as the judge admonished him to conduct in court.

Baldwin Thursday cross-examined Nampa Police Detective Alan Creech, who led the sting operation that netted the sheriff and Boise drug informant Lamont Duane Jack a year ago after they broke into a Nampa house.

"Mr. Creech, when you investigate other suspects, do they have to pay with their personal lives, or is it just me? Am I getting special treatment here?" the sheriff asked on the third day of his trial before 7th District Judge Fred Wood.

Baldwin, 38, who fired defense attorney Keith Roark of Hatley on Wednesday over what he said were differences concerning technical aspects of the case, said he had a number of nagging questions about the sting operation.

The sheriff said he traveled more than 200 miles to Nampa from his home in Grangeville on Dec. 20, 1991, to help Jack stop what he believed was a major drug dealer preparing to leave the state. Authorities have said they set up the sting after learning from another drug informant that Jack and an unidentified "sheriff friend" were robbing drug dealers of cash and drugs.

"Were you trying to catch Monty Jack or were you trying to catch his sheriff friend?" Baldwin asked Creech.

"Mr. Baldwin, you were never the focus of this investigation at any time," Creech replied. "We were trying to catch Monty Jack and whoever accompanied him."

Jack was convicted of a number of federal crimes in the case. He is serving an eight-year term in a federal prison in Wisconsin. Baldwin was acquitted of federal conspiracy, robbery, drug possession and handgun charges last spring.

But Baldwin has had trouble with court procedures at his state trial. His questioning of witnesses has drawn repeated admonishments from Wood and objections from Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris.

"This is not a question. This is testimony," Harris said. "You are not to ask the witness for giving testimony not under oath and I object to that."

"Mr. Baldwin, you're making speeches again. Just ask your questions," Wood said, then advised jurors that statements made by Baldwin or prosecutors while examining witnesses is not evidence.

Baldwin asked Creech why there was no recording of audio surveillance of the house he and Jack broke into. He said such a recording would prove he had no criminal intent. Creech called it "an oversight."

But the detective disagreed with Baldwin's contention that dark clothing such as his sheriff wore on the night of the break-in is commonly used for undercover investigations.

"I have never in my career begun with any law enforcement officer dressed like that," Creech said. "If they were on a person kicking down the door of a house, they were burglary clothes."

Baldwin argued that local, state and federal officers could have powered the break-in by stopping him before he arrived at the Nampa house.

"If you had not left Grangeville, none of this would have happened," Creech replied.

The sheriff also asked why Creech called a news conference just two hours after Baldwin's arrest.

"Aren't people innocent until proven guilty? So you did you call a press conference and call me a crooked cop?" he asked. "If you were in my shoes, Mr. Creech, would you want this same technique used on you that was used on me? Would you feel bad like I feel bad today?"

LA County ships trash to Utah

COMMERCE, Calif. (AP) — A train-bearing Los Angeles County trash headed for eastern Utah in a demonstration of how distant landfills might help solve the region's waste disposal problems.

Dozens of officials watched Thursday as a huge crane lifted metal containers bearing 20 tons of garbage each onto flatbed rail cars.

The train was to conclude its 800-mile journey today.

On hand were officials from a new, 3,000-acre Utah landfill on the outskirts of East Carbon City. The landfill is billed as having the biggest capacity of any facility in the nation.

"It is not going to be the singular solution but ultimately it will be the biggest piece in the trash disposal puzzle in LA County," LA Verne Councilman Thomas Harvey said.

Harvey heads a countywide group of officials studying the so-called "rail-haul" solution.

The Sanitation Districts of Los Angeles County staged the first local demonstration of rail-haul.

Experimental roundup under way

ELY, Nev. (AP) — About 200 wild horses have been rounded up in a $400,000 study to test a new birth control method that could limit the growth of the herds in Nevada.

"This is still an experiment," said John W. Turner Jr., one of three researchers involved in the study. "This is a big step away from management, but this is a major step."

It marks the first time the Bureau of Land Management has tried to trim Nevada's wild horse herds through contraception, according to agency spokeswoman Maxine Shane.

The horses were captured this week in the Antelope Valley Herd Management Area 85 miles north of Ely.

One-third of the mares age five or older were to receive one injection of porcine zona peltoid, or PZP, another third was to receive two injections of the drug, and the final third was to get placebos.

The vaccine, a protein made from pig ovaries, keeps the sperm from fertilizing the egg but affects neither the mating process nor pregnancies already in progress, Ms. Shane said.

Since many of the mares are pregnant, the researchers hope to lower the birth rate for the 1994 foaling season.

Turner, of the Medical College of Ohio at Toledo; Dr. Jay F. Kirkpatrick of Deaconess Research Institute in Billings, Mont.; and Dr. Irwin K.M. Liu of the University of California, Davis, are overseeing the project.

Turner and Kirkpatrick had conducted similar experiments on Assateague Island, off the eastern coast of Maryland. Liu developed PZP in studies on penned animals at UC-Davis.

"Neither has been in an area such as we have in Nevada," Ms. Shane said.

Depending on who makes the estimates, the state's wild horse population ranges anywhere from fewer than 20,000 to more than 50,000. They're considered a nuisance by ranchers, who must pay the government to graze their livestock on public lands where the horses compete for skimpy forage and water.

The BLM has committed $400,000 over the next two years to the contraception experiment in hopes of saving even more money that's spent to gather the horses and hold them for disposal.

Although two horses had to be destroyed after they were injured in the roundup, animal rights groups supervising the test support the research.

"What they're doing is a smart and decent thing to do," said Allen Rutberg, senior scientist for the Humane Society. "We're interested in it, especially because we see animals getting a break because of this technology."

Other groups overseeing the roundup include the Nevada Commission for the Preservation of Wild Horses and Reno-based Wild Horse Organized Assistance, or WIOA.

Judge imprisons man with AIDS

BOISE (AP) — Calling him a "lethal time bomb," a judge has sentenced a Boise man with AIDS to seven to 21 years in prison for lewd and lascivious acts with a minor.

Morgan D. Warrell, 23, pleaded guilty to two counts of lewd conduct in September in exchange for prosecutors dropping a third lewd conduct count and a charge of knowingly exposing the 1-year-old child he witnessed to the AIDS virus.

"I realize what I did was wrong. I'd like a chance to make amends," Warrell told 4th District Judge Alan Schwartzman on Thursday.

"You are a lethal time bomb, Mr. Warrell," Schwartzman said. "Your behavior in the future at best is unpredictable."

Warrell, looking thin and pale, has lost 25 pounds since last April while in the Ada County Jail.

Insurance chief runs firm Asian-style

BALTIMORE (AP)—The business philosophy of Norman P. Blake Jr. has a decidedly Asian flavor for an executive who spent much of his career at that most western of companies, General Electric Co.

Blake Jr., chairman of USF&G Corp., two years ago, believes companies owe their employees an environment where hard work is rewarded. He also favors a culture that emphasizes focusing on the task at hand, whether it's selling insurance or building Toyota.

Blake Jr. moved from his post as an executive vice president at General Electric Credit Corp. in 1984 to head Heller International Corp. and sent executives to train with him at the Chicago investment firm. Blake had been at GE since 1967.

"You have to realize you are in a competition and strive to be the best," said Blake, who keeps a journal reading "Get the spectators off the field," on his desk and the Japanese character for "win" framed on a wall in his office.

Blake's reorganization plan also eliminated many USF&G jobs. Thirty percent of the company's work force has been cut, bringing the total down to about 8,000 employees, according to Mrs. Burch-DeLuca.

into areas as diverse as a financial services, travel and oil and gas.

All of his diversification was into areas the incumbent management had no familiarity with, Blake said. "We had no oil and gas background. I don't know a thing about oil and gas; but I do know if you don't know about it, you shouldn't be in it."

USF&G has shown some modest improvement following Blake's arrival. The company managed to post a $5 million profit for the third quarter, following a $6 million second-quarter profit, despite $80 million in losses from Hurricane Andrew in the third quarter.

USF&G had lost $25 million and in 1990 losses totaled $569 million. The reaction on Wall Street has been cautiously optimistic. USF&G shares have been trading in the $12 range lately on the New York Stock Exchange, off from a 52-week high of $15 a share but up substantially from a $5 low.

"If you take away the catastrophes, the company continues its path of slow but steady improvement," said Alan Zimmerman, an analyst at Prudential Securities Research in New York.

Steven Givios, an analyst at Kidder, Peabody & Co., gives Blake much of the credit. "He's a quiet, candid and I think that helped a lot in the development of this company."

Blake said it will be three to five years before the company can establish itself as a leader in a segment.

The tough part of my job has just started, Blake said. "I don't see an end to my job here, just a changing role."

Norman Blake, chairman of USF&G, views Baltimore's inner harbor from his office. Blake believes companies owe their employees an environment where hard work is rewarded.

Invest in research

Take time for library trips before going with new stock buy

Boston Globe

For investors who want to know whether a broker is trying to sell them the next Microsoft or the next Texas Airlines—a library should be a required stop.

More libraries around the country are filling their shelves with reference books, newsletters, periodicals—and computerized information for novice and experienced investors.

Many of the people who look for investment information at the Kirstein Business Branch of the Boston Public Library, like most libraries, are older. Dolores Schueler, the Kirstein's head librarian. They are often retirees who have the time to do the research most investors should do before putting money in stocks, bonds or mutual funds.

Almost all large U.S. libraries and a growing number of smaller ones are adding this material.

"Even though some of it is expensive, the libraries are getting so many requests for this information, they have to put it in," Schueler says.

One of the most well-thumbed reference guides is Morningstar Mutual Funds, which puts out semi-annual reports on more than 2,300 stock and bond funds. Mutual fund investors can also find the JBC/Donoghue's Mutual Funds Almanac, the Handbook for No-Load Fund Investors, the Investment Company Institute's Directory of Mutual Funds, and the CD Investors' Investment Companies Service.

For information on individual corporations, most libraries have reports in loose-leaf binders from Standard & Poor's, Moody's, Investors Service or Value Line. Nowadays, the binders get help from computers. These reports, plus another service called Compact Disclosure, are available on CD-ROM, where an investor can quickly research thousands of publicly traded companies. Computer Disclosure, for example, includes annual reports and regulatory filings for more than 12,000 companies.

If you have a home computer, you can bring a formatted diskette to the library and download the information you need to your diskette and take it home. If you don't have a computer, you can print out what you need at the library, Schueler says. Right now, there's no charge for downloading or printing, she says, but some people print so many pages, the library may have to start charging.

The CD-ROM is also handy for the Infotrac Business Index, a compilation of information from more than 800 business, management and trade journals. Mostly abstracts, not full articles, are available, "but they're very good abstracts," Schueler says. These reports can also be downloaded on your own disc or printed out (call the individual library for the size and format of the disc its computer requires).

While the Kirstein branch has more materials than many libraries, bigger libraries can share their bounty, thanks to another piece of modern technology, the facsimile machine. A request can be faxed from a small library to a big one, which can fax the information back.

Lawmakers push tax incentives for businesses

WASHINGTON (AP)—Any investment tax credit enacted next year should be retroactive to business machine purchases made after Dec. 3, senior congressional tax writers said Friday.

The announcement was made by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, to encourage businesses not to delay expansions in anticipation of the credit.

In an effort to spur job-creating investments, President-elect Clinton has promised to propose a tax credit that would have the government pay a portion—perhaps 10 percent—of the cost of machinery.

"We do not know at this time whether any such legislation will in fact be proposed or enacted," Rostenkowski and Bentsen said in a written statement. "However, we wish to reassure the business community that we believe investments in depreciable—tangible—personal property made today and thereafter should be eligible for whatever tax investment incentives are ultimately enacted."

Congressional changes delay release of college aid forms

If your child is headed for college next year, you may be wondering how to get your hands on a 1993 financial-aid application.

So are a few million other anxious parents. The forms are late being delivered this year, educators say. Very late, in fact.

The applications usually are in high schools by Thanksgiving. This year, because of congressional tinkering, they won't be delivered until later this month, at the earliest.

In July, Congress changed some of the eligibility and processing rules for financial aid, and those changes meant delays in printing the necessary forms.

When the applications finally arrive, students may be rushed to beat certain filing deadlines.

And some college officials worry that they may be pushed to process the forms in time to notify students before the start of fall classes.

Glenn Burkins Money notes

"It's ironic, because the changes were meant to make things simpler," said Kathleen Payea, associate director of college scholarship service at The College Board.

Under the new rules, no fee may be charged by processing firms when students apply for federal aid. And the federal application must be separated from other financial-aid applications that carry a processing fee.

Also, home equity no longer will be a factor when calculating how much a parent should contribute before financial aid kicks in. Experts say this change will qualify more families for federal aid, although Congress didn't set aside more money.

Despite the late-arriving forms, parents and students should not be discouraged from seeking aid, Payea said. But some of the new rules will make filing more complex. Payea said parents should work closely with high school counselors and college officials.

Here is a recipe for financial doom: put money in a bank earning 3 percent interest, then take out consumer loans charging you 15 percent or more.

As strange as it sounds, millions of people are doing just that, and it's costing them plenty, says the Consumer Federation of America in Washington.

A recent federation study found that while banks have rushed to slash the interest rates they pay on consumer deposits, they have been slow to reduce the rates they charge for consumer loans.

The results are predictable. Many banks have little record profits this year, and consumers have lost billions.

Here are some of the federation's findings: In November, the average interest rates paid on money market accounts and six-month certificates of deposit dipped below 3 percent.

In contrast, the average interest rate charged by credit cards hovered around 18 percent.

Since April 1989, CD rates have fallen an average of about 6 percentage points, and money market rates have declined about 3.62 percentage points.

Dispose-All would accept outside trash

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Trash from outside the Magic Valley, even from outside Idaho, might come to Twin Falls County if Dispose-All Inc. builds a landfill south of the city. Doug Lomow, president of the Boise company, said on Friday that while he wants the Magic Valley counties to be his primary customers, he cannot rule out taking trash from outside the area.

Dispose-All also might start taking trash without a state permit, Lomow said. Federal rules would let it do that, he said. Asked what area he might draw trash from, Lomow described a "waste shed" stretching from Idaho Falls to Ada County line, and from Stanley to the Nevada border. He also mentioned Jackson, Nev.

Still, Lomow said he does not plan to open up Twin Falls County to the world of trash. "That doesn't mean you can fire trucks from here to New York City," he said. Twin Falls County is working on its own landfill plan, and six other Magic Valley counties have formed the regional district to handle their trash. Dispose-All proposes a privately owned landfill southwest of Twin Falls that both Twin Falls County and the regional district could use.

Attorney Webb applies for state court vacancy

TWIN FALLS — Attorney Lloyd J. Webb of Twin Falls, is among 14 people who have applied for the vacancy on the Idaho Supreme Court. Chief Justice Robert Bakes is retiring, effective Feb. 1.

Webb, 61, is the only Magic Valley attorney to apply for the job. He has made three previous runs at the state high court. The public can comment on the applicants by picking up a questionnaire from any county clerk. Those comments must be received by the Idaho Judicial Council by Dec. 20.

The organization will select two to four applicants and submit their names to Gov. Cecil Andrus, who will choose Bakes' successor.

Webb has twice made the final list, twice, and said he feels good about his chances of making it past the council this time.

"I think I've got as good a chance as anyone," Webb said. Webb has practiced law for 35 years. He received his law degree from the University of Utah in 1955.

United Way receives $18,000, but still $130,000 short of goal

TWIN FALLS — United Way of Magic Valley picked up almost $18,000 in pledges this week, but still remains far short of its goal with five days remaining.

The organization has commitments for $152,962, which is 54 percent of the way toward its $280,000 goal. The campaign will formally end Dec. 10, although some contributions will come in after that.

United Way will allocate the money to its 19 member agencies in January.

Electrical fire ruins farmer's shed, kills several pigs

KIMBERLY — A Kimberly-area farmer lost a shed and several pigs to a fire Friday morning. The electrical fire at Dave Roper's roofing shed at 3245 3600 East was reported at 3:04 a.m.

Three sows and a whole mess of piglets died in the blaze, Kimberly Fire Chief Rob Vawser said.

Forest Service seeks comments on ski area's new owners

TWIN FALLS — The Forest Service is soliciting public comments on a proposed permit to open the Soldier Mountain Ski Area under new ownership.

Magic Valley businessmen Alox Sinclair and Dave Armstrong are buying the ski area from owner Claude Hinkle. But before opening the area, the new owners must obtain a special-use permit for the Forest Service.

Fairfield District Ranger John Madden said the new permit gives the Forest Service a chance to find out what people thought about past operations of the ski area and what suggestions they may have about future operations.

Comments should be sent by December 15 to Sawtooth National Forest, 2647 Kimberly Road East, Twin Falls 83301-7976. Attn: Terry Fletcher.

CSI finds computer virus in Mini-Cassia center lab

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho has found the computer virus Michelangelo II in a computer laboratory and in a computer at the school's Mini-Cassia Center in Burley. Mike Mason, CSI's Dean of Finance, said he is unsure how the virus was introduced by anyone who has taken classes this semester should check their computers for the virus.

He said the virus was discovered during a routine check by the college. Software is available to protect computers against viruses like Michelangelo II, he said.

District buys Milner Butte for landfill

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Southern-Idaho Regional Solid Waste District has reached an "agreement in principle" to buy 500 acres on the eastern slope of Milner Butte.

Terry Schultz, director of the waste district, said a few details remain to be worked out, but that he was "guardedly optimistic."

"There's been some disappointments in the past," he cautioned.

The land lies 4.5 miles west of Burley Butte and approximately 12 miles west of the city of Burley.

This location will save the district $1 million in landfill development costs, Schultz said. This will translate into lower costs per ton to landfill trash, he said.

He declined to name the land seller until the deal is final.

The solid waste district was ready to strike a deal with Burley-area resident Howard Conrad for some acreage on Burley Butte. But area residents said they would fight putting a landfill there, possibly in court, and the district agreed to look at other property.

A group of Burley Butte-area residents formed a group to scout out other possible landfill locations.

The proposed landfill is different than the one being discussed by Twin Falls County, which left the solid waste district earlier this year.

Union Pacific wants to close freight office

The Times-News

BOISE — The Union Pacific Railroad wants to shut down its Twin Falls freight agency, one of two remaining freight offices in the Magic Valley.

The railroad has asked the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for permission to close the office, located at 618 Shoshone St. in Twin Falls, and transfer its operations to a computerized service center in St. Louis; the PUC announced Friday.

Shippers would be able to get the same service by telephone, the railroad says.

"The PUC will take written or oral comments from anyone who does not want to be an intervenor," Richardson said on Friday.

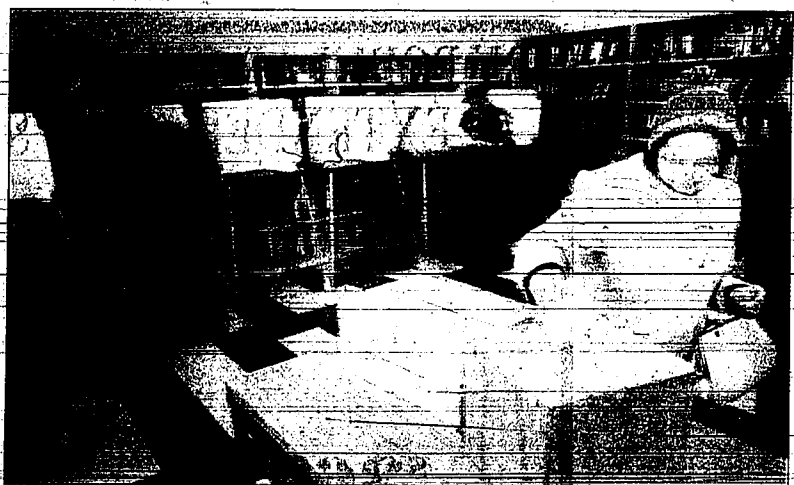

UP has been trying to permanently close all of its one-man freight agencies in Idaho since the mid-1980s.

Five years ago, the PUC turned down the railroad's request and ordered it to keep its freight agencies in Twin Falls, Shoshone, Rupert, and nine other cities open.

But earlier this year, UP was given permission to close its freight offices at Shoshone, Rupert and Idaho Falls.

Kelllogg, based on a lack of shipper protest.

The Shoshone office closed in May, ending the railroad's official presence in the town after 112 years.

Voters approve Valley bond issue

The Times-News

HAZELTON — Election judges for the Valley-School District bond issue may have had to count 806 ballots by candlelight, but proponents' hopes were brightened by the results.

Voters approved the school bond issue by 70 percent in the union of Jerome County Friday night, Valley School District officials dutifully pulled out the candles and flashlights to count the ballots after a full day's voting in what had turned into a controversial election.

And the district didn't win by a flicker either.

A total of 572 residents voted in favor of the bond issue, while 234 people cast votes against the proposal for a greater than 2-to-1 ratio at the polls.

"We're elated," said Valley District Superintendent Arlyn Bodily, who arrived home in Eden at nearly 11 p.m. to a darkened home. "We had lots of support."

Bodily added the bond issue vote - that received a fierce attack by some opponents in its final 48 hours - was the first for the school in 10 or 12 years.

The proposal calls for spending $4.3 million to build a new kindergarten through 12 building at Valley High School and replace the outmoded, 70-year-old elementary buildings.

Opponents of the plan thought it too costly and too grand and waged an attack against the plan during the last week.

Bodily said the lights first went out in the district Friday just after kids were seated in their desks this morning, forcing the school to send the children home.

The lights went on and off all day, and also flicked off four times during the boy's basketball tournament with 18 seconds left in the game.

"It's worth it now," Bodily said.

Children will attend classes in the new school in fall of 1994.

Unions, workers sue Amalgamated, Valhi over pension fund maneuvers

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Another group of Amalgamated Sugar Co. workers has sued the company over pension-fund moves in the middle 1980s.

The lawsuit is the second to claim that Amalgamated and its parent company owes money to retirees and workers from the termination of its pension plans in 1986.

Amalgamated lost the first lawsuit, which was filed by non-union workers, when a federal judge in January ordered the company to pay $900,000 plus interest since 1986.

Amalgamated attorney John Lemke said the company has appealed that decision to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The second lawsuit was filed last week in a Salt Lake City federal court by unions and workers, who are seeking to turn it into a class-action lawsuit. About 1,000 workers and retirees had an interest in the pension plan, according to the lawsuit.

In both cases, workers were given annuities to cover promised benefits but the company absorbed the excess money in the overfunded plans.

The employees claim some of the excess money came from contributions they made. Because of that, they should share the excess funds with Amalgamated, the lawsuits claim.

Pensions funds became a headache and source of litigation in the 1980s as high interest rates swelled the money available for retirees.

Often, as in the case of Amalgamated, the funds ended up with more money than needed to meet obligations.

It isn't illegal to terminate pension plans, but there are restrictions, including the fair distribution of the money in them.

The lawsuit filed by the unions and their workers provides an insight into how such pension fund terminations work.

In 1986, the pension fund contained $22.7 million.

Amalgamated split into two plans in December 1986, one for retirees and one for employees still working.

The company paid $5.3 million for insurance annuities so retirees would receive their promised payments, and $6 million for annuities for current employees.

The company left $3.1 million, which it attributed to employee contributions, in the pension fund for current employees.

Amalgamated kept the remaining $8.3 million.

The unions and employees say part of the $8.3 million that Amalgamated kept came from their contributions and should be put back in the pension fund.

They also say that Amalgamated said it would use the $3.1 million in the pension fund to bump up benefits, but didn't. Instead, it used the money as a "cushion" so it wouldn't have to put as much of its own money into the plan, the lawsuit alleges.

The unions and employees aren't asking for specific dollar damages, but are demanding that Amalgamated return their portion of the money that created the excess in the pension fund.

Lemke declined comment on the lawsuit.

Amalgamated, based in Ogden, Utah, employs about 250 employees in Twin Falls, and also has plants in Paul, Nampa and Oregon. It buys thousands of acres of sugar beets from farmers.

The pension maneuvers came after Texas businessman Harold Simmons bought the company in 1988. Currently, Amalgamated is owned by Valhi Inc.

Valhi, in turn, is 90 percent owned by Contra-Corp, which is owned by a trust Simmons established for his children. Simmons is the chairman of all three corporations.

Judge sentences man to probation for escape

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — A man accused of escaping from custody of the Jerome County Sheriff's Department has pled guilty and received probation.

District Judge Daniel B. Meehl sentenced John William Morris, 43, to a one-year sentence in the state penitentiary on an escape charge. Meehl then suspended the sentence and placed Morris on supervised probation with a number of provisions as part of the plea bargain agreement.

He was serving a sentence for aggravated battery when he escaped in July from a work release site near Eden.

Randy Stoker, attorney for Morris, told the judge that if Morris was released from jail he planned to return to his home state of New York and would serve out his probation there. Morris would leave Jerome next Monday, Stoker said.

Conditions of the plea agreement also specified that Morris would have no contact with Jerome Sheriff Larry Gold, Blair Hawkins, Dale Clew, Bill Hicks, Gertie Mae Rollyson, Richard McClain or members of their families. He also could have no contact with James Arterburn nor Jeffrey Pearson (Pearson).

Morris said before the hearing that he had been a heavy equipment operator all his life and he had come to Idaho because he had been hired by a Boise company to go to Kuwait for $75,000 for a six-month job.

County, BLM plan property transfer

By Bill Schmitt
Times-News writer

The county and BLM plan to transfer the land to the county. The county must pay the third party's fee.

The commissioners got another letter from the BLM on Friday. In this one, Burley District Manager Gerald Quinn told the commissioners to reconsider the amount of land they want to transfer for a landfill site.

The commissioners had asked for more acres in the Twin Falls and Mud Lake areas. Quinn thought this was too much to ask.

"I feel that this acreage is far in excess of the requirements for developing a landfill," Quinn wrote. "I would recommend that you reconsider the amount of land needed by Twin Falls County for landfill purposes."

Quinn wrote that he remains confident that the BLM and county can work together.

Sitting committee chairman Gerald Tewes said he would write another letter to Quinn explaining why the county needs the acreage. He said most of the land would serve as a buffer area, Tewes said.

He hoped that after explaining why the county needed the acreage, the BLM would be transferring that much land.

The county hopes to buy most of the land under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act. Under this act, the county can buy the land for $250 an acre, but Congress must renew the provision when it starts a new session after Jan. 1.

If the county buys land under the Federal Land Management and Policies Act, the land would cost fair market value, said Secret Barr, a BLM real estate specialist.

Tewes said he has talked with Idaho's U.S. senators to get their help in speeding the land transfer.

Gould, Black, Cameron pick up legislative committee chairmanships

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

Across the returns in the Senate, Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, became chairman of the Commerce and Human Resources Committee.

Cameron, elected to his first full term last month, joins Denton Darrington, R-Declo, and Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, as a committee chairman.

Darrington heads the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee; Noh, the Resources and Transportation Committee.

Because Republicans control both chambers of the Legislature, they chair all committees and hold about two-thirds of the seats on each.

The House took longer to settle its committee lineups than the Senate, and several members reportedly were less than happy about their assignments.

"This happens every time," said Majority Leader Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley. "When you downsize committees, there are people who are unhappy, it takes longer to figure out."

Committees were shrunk because the House and Senate are smaller: 70 and 35 members, respectively, down from 84 and 42 last session.

Black said one area he hopes the Education Committee will work on is determining whether state educational requirements, such as the "C average rule," are accomplishing their intended purpose.

The rule requires high-school students to have a C average in all their major classes before they can graduate.

Black led the effort to repeal the 90-percent attendance rule last session.

Jones considered more moderate than Black, with philosophical about being passed over.

"I'd have been stunned if it turned out any other way," he said. "Ron is more philosophically attuned to the new leadership than I am."

Nearly all returning members who chaired committees in the last session retained their posts.

One of the major exceptions was Sen. Rex Furness, R-Rigby, who lost his position as chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee to Sheila Sorenson of Boise.

Sorenson moved from the House to the Senate this year.

When asked why he would no longer head the panel, the deeply conservative Furness would say only, "I could have remained as chairman, but I wasn't willing to compromise my principles."

However, there was speculation the Furness was dumped because he had worked against more moderate Republican legislative candidates in the recent elections.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee created last session as a way around a 21-21 deadlock between Republicans and Democrats, was eliminated. The Senate Commerce and Labor and Human Resources committees were combined into a single panel.

In the House, Donny Reynolds of Caldwell took over the Health and Welfare Committee after her old committee, Commerce, Industry and Tourism, was eliminated.

JoAnn Wood of Rigby moved from the Resources and Conservation Committee to Transportation and Defense. And Donna Jones of Payette will chair the House Ways and Means Committee, which Judi Danielson of Council headed last year.

Judge drops 2 fraud counts against Hansen

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE - Two down, 47 to go. The judge in the federal bank fraud trial of George Hansen dismissed two of the 49 charges against the former 2nd District congressman Friday, saying they were unrelated to the scheme he and associate John Scoresby are accused of operating.

However, the dismissals probably won't affect the course of the rest of the trial, which enters its second week Monday.

Hansen and Scoresby originally faced 49 fraud counts stemming from what the federal government charges was a massive check-kiting scheme.

Hansen represented a check drawn on the account of Hansen's firm, Ideal Consultants, at the Bank of Commerce in Idaho Falls. All but two of the checks were written between March and October 1990 and were made payable to third parties, including Rupert farmer Brad Neibaur.

The other two checks were written in January 1991 and made out to George Hansen & Associates, an account Hansen maintained at Crestar Bank in Virginia.

U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge ruled that those two checks were not part of the "scheme and artifice" allegedly executed by Hansen and Scoresby.

Hansen says he wrote those checks in an attempt to consolidate all his assets, as part of his Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing.

Lodge dismissed the same two checks against Scoresby two weeks ago. At his attorney's argued that Scoresby had left Hansen's employ months before the checks were written.

The major witness Friday, the firm's fifth day, was Bank of Commerce auditor Aida Tyler.

Tyler testified that he was suspicious of the Ideal Consultants account as far back as 1988, when he wrote a memo to bank CEO Richard Adams about it.

In February 1990, he wrote another memo to Adams, saying that Hansen appeared to be kiting checks between the Ideal Consultants account and one of his personal bank accounts.

Mr. Scoresby assured me three weeks ago that the problem would be taken care of in two weeks," Tyler wrote. "It appears that the uncollected funds are getting larger and larger instead of smaller."

On Thursday, Adams testified that he spoke with Hansen after receiving the memo and told him the bank would no longer give immediate credit on his checks.

After that, Tyler said, Hansen stopped depositing his own checks in the bank on the same day, and he stopped monitoring the account closely.

The government charges that one month later, the check-kiting scheme that forms the basis of the current prosecution.

Tyler used a street map of Idaho Falls to describe how Scoresby frequently deposited checks from Neibaur and others at several different branches of the Bank of Commerce on the same day.

The government says Scoresby was trying to conceal the extent of the scheme.

State, local authorities investigate house fire

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

FILER - A suspicious fire in Filer Wednesday night has drawn the attention of state and local investigators.

The state fire marshal's office and Magic Valley Area Task Force are looking into that blaze at 504 Midway St. that apparently started in two different places, Filer Fire Chief Bud Compher said.

No traces of accelerants - gasoline, kerosene or other flammable liquids - were found at the spots, but samples of the building material have been sent to a state crime laboratory for analysis, Compher said.

Someone from the fire marshal's office was expected to look at the fire scene Friday or Saturday, he said.

The fire began at 9 p.m. Wednesday and was quickly reported and extinguished. It caused no more than $4,000 to the single-story brick home; arson task force member Rob Vawser said.

Nobody was home at the time. The fire is a rental owned by Joe Allison of Filer, Vawser said.

unanimous vote of the district's board of directors before out-of-area trash can be brought to a regional landfill. The board comprised commissioners from each of the six counties.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled last year that the Constitution precludes local government regulators from preventing interstate trash hauling. But a county or solid waste district can restrict trash imports to a landfill it owns, Schultz said.

"I don't think we'll foresee the regional district using Limow's landfill. Long-term costs and lack of public control were primary reasons that the district board of directors decided against it," he said.

"The district intends to build its own facility irrespective of Dispose-All's timetable," Schultz said.

The district's financial plan includes paying off debts to build the landfill in 15 years, he said.

Limow said that Idaho may not have its landfill regulations in place before the Oct. 9, 1993, target date for opening up Idaho's Disposal-All will open under a system called "self-certifying."

"Self-certifying basically means the company would promise that its landfill meets federal and state rules," he said.

"We'll be operational by Oct. 9, no excuses," Limow said.

The regional solid-waste district also might opt for self-certification, Schultz said.

But even with self-certification, a landfill would need some local permits - such as planning and zoning - Schultz said.

"Eventually, the landfills would have to get the state permits, but under self-certification, the facilities could be operating in time," Chamber members were receptive Friday to private enterprise entering the solid waste business in Twin Falls, said Commissioner Mark Schemmman said that the county has not ruled that out either.

But because of potential liability Henpleman said he would prefer the county to own the landfill. If a private company wants to contract to operate the county's landfill, that might be workable, he said.

Limow said he might consider a deal like that.

An engineer working for Twin Falls County said Friday the county hopes to begin landfill construction by July.

Truth about LDS Church lies in its namesake

To Beverly Frazier: I am writing in answer to your question, "Are Mormons Christians?"

The Bible League spreads the word

425 million testaments later, group going strong

The Rev. David Stravers, vice president of ministries for The Bible League, holds a four-volume set of the Bible alongside various religious literature in South Holland, Ill.

The Bible League has been quietly distributing millions of Bibles and other religious literature to churches, prisons and hospitals throughout the world.

The league does not concentrate on North America and Western Europe. And it usually sends literature only to countries where people have requested it.

In the past year, Stravers said, its efforts led to the creation of 871 churches in communities previously without Christian churches.

The book, "Full Pardon," for example, was compiled by a converted prisoner and addresses problems like "depression," "guilt," "justice and freedom" through a collection of scriptures, poetry, essays and pictures.

Since its founding, the ministry, based in suburban South Holland, has placed more than 425 million Bibles, testaments and biblical study materials in more than 90 countries from Australia to Zimbabwe.

The Bible League is supported by private donations, 85 percent from individuals and the rest from foundations, churches such as the Assemblies of God and Baptist and Methodist churches.

The league has 195 employees. Its 1991 expenditures totaled $12.4 million compared with $6 million in 1983.

"We basically respond to demand, and we see a high demand for materials like in Nigeria," he added. "We get about 100 letters a week in the office here asking for Bibles."

Mail brings interesting religious track to life negativity has a way of becoming self-fulfilling. Take Darren, for example. Darren is a great young man with incredible potential.

Eventually, his overall behavior changed, and the stories about him seemed less outrageous. And while I still only believe about half of what I hear about him, the other half isn't so far removed from the truth as it used to be.

There's a bunch of folks called "Congress" makes things worse each time it meets.

I don't know why we are so anxious to worry about people and their motivations - even in the face of overwhelming goodness.

Heritage Alliance Church at new spot

TWIN FALLS — Heritage Alliance Church has moved to its new location at 401 Sixth Ave. N. (the former First Church of the Nazarene building). The first service at the new location is set for 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

First Sunday services include Sunday school at 9:30 a.m., morning worship at 10:30 a.m. and an evening service at 6 p.m. During the month of December, the 6 p.m. Sunday services will be special Advent services.

A special dedication service with the Rev. Harvey Town, district superintendent for the Christian and Missionary Alliance, is set for 10:30 a.m. Dec. 13.

Heritage Alliance Church began as an extension church of the Christian and Missionary Alliance in 1980. Pastor Jim Evans and his wife, Patsy, came to Twin Falls in 1979 and started a Bible study outreach. The first service of Heritage Alliance was held in April 1980 at the pastor's home.

Locations of the services were moved three times before the Evans' home on South Blue Lakes was purchased in 1985. Evans said the congregation of Heritage Alliance has grown so much since 1985 that two services have been necessary to accommodate everyone.

St. Edward's slates Sunday breakfast

TWIN FALLS — A benefit breakfast of ham and eggs is set for 10 a.m. Sunday at St. Edward's Parish-Hall. No charge has been set, but donations will be accepted. The public is invited.

The annual event sponsored by the Knights of Columbus is for both St. Edward's and Guadalupe Catholic parishes. Proceeds will help pay for the book of hours for the needy this Christmas. Event chairman Doug Howard said the benefit event reaches beyond the Catholic community to the residents of Twin Falls and the area.

Howard said that last year, the Knights of Columbus delivered boxes of food to 80 needy families in the Magic Valley from the generosity of the parishioners and cleared through the Salvation Army to avoid duplication.

He said every effort is made to match the amount of food to the size of the family, and a ham or turkey is included in each case. If proceeds from this and other fund-raising sources permit, the number of needy families will be increased this year.

Book of Mormon poses translation problem

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon missionaries "travelling to the ends of the Earth would like to be able to present new converts with copies of the faith's doctrinal cornerstone; the Book of Mormon."

The problem, however, is that the text doesn't lend itself to translation and those who try often find themselves doing what church leaders forbid: interpreting the sacred scripture.

Nevertheless, talks with vision by the nation's department heads of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints hope to have materials ready as missionaries are sent to new nations.

They are hindered, however, by a lack of a consistent paraphrase in plain English of Mormon scriptures, which is written in stilted and often clumsy 19th Century English. Several efforts to paraphrase the book over the last years have failed.

Official instructions are clear. "Translations are to preserve the doctrine and meaning of the original author's. They are not to interpret, explain or defend the contents of the standard works of the book of Mormon, the Doctrine and Covenants and the Pearl of Great Price, said a First Presidency statement.

Because paraphrasing necessarily involves interpretation which is prohibited, none has ever been officially adopted.

Currently, the church hires two people to produce each new translation — one person to translate, and the other to review the completed work. Each translation is also reviewed ecclesiastically by members in the area.

The church seeks members to translate its works, but some countries have few or no qualified translators, so the task falls to non-Mormons — or now members who don't have enough doctrinal background to express the complex theological ideas in LDS scriptures.

Moreover, the translators have almost total freedom to make decisions about ambivalent passages or obscure meanings. They can rely on worksheets suggesting several interpretations of "problematical passages" and a lexicon of LDS words and their meanings.

However, the latitude is great and inconsistencies abound. "You can either have us interpret it and approve our work or you can have translators in the field give the interpretations," one unidentified translator at LDS Church headquarters told The Salt Lake Tribune.

Translating the Book of Mormon is particularly difficult since the original text is unavailable.

Mormons believe the Book of Mormon was translated from gold plates inscribed by ancient inhabitants of the American continent.

"A divine messenger led Joseph Smith, Mormonism's founder, to the plates in upstate New York in the early 1820s.

Some fellow Southern Baptists have 'cool' opinion of Clinton

The losing, moderate minority has averaged about 45 percent.

Clinton has said he tends to identify with the moderate minority.

The national convention last June expelled two congregations that either had sanctioned a union of homosexuals or ordained one. Also, a constitutional amendment was initiated to exclude all such congregations.

In Louisiana, the state convention followed suit in November, barring any congregation affirming homosexuality as an acceptable lifestyle. It was the first state convention to impose such a test of fellowship.

Several state conventions promised prayers for Clinton, although the California Baptists couched it in a somewhat resigned, reluctant fashion, saying they "accept our obligation to pray" for him.

That convention also adopted a resolution urging Clinton and Gore to "rethink their positions on abortion and homosexuality," calling their stand "contrary to biblical principles."

The condemnation was protested by David Page, a Baptist from Palmdale, Calif., saying "I don't want to wave a red flag in their face." But the current national administration of the biblical fundamentalists who insist the Bible is totally without error.

Their leadership of the 15.5 million-member Southern Baptist Convention has been kept in power for more than a decade by conservative majorities averaging about 55 percent.

Clinton

Although President-elect Clinton is one of their own, many Southern Baptists are unsettled about him. That was evident at recent denominational state conventions across the country.

Some religious groups, including the Baptist World Alliance, were more receptive to Clinton. But cool reactions turned up in Southern Baptist meetings.

Some said they'd pray for him, though at times reluctantly. Several asked him to reconsider his support for homosexual and abortion rights. Some felt his Southern Baptist affiliation shouldn't even be mentioned.

That uneasiness showed up at the Mississippi convention, where a resolution in prayer for Clinton and Vice President-elect Al Gore Jr. was amended to delete a phrase noting they are "fellow Southern Baptists."

The Rev. Bobby Hood of Laurel, Miss., said "Mississippi Baptists shouldn't identify with the two because of their views on homosexuality and abortion."

Opposing the deletion, the Rev. Dick Allison of Hattiesburg, said if Baptists required agreement on everything there "wouldn't be any fellow Baptists." Nevertheless, a vote eliminated mention of the religious link.

It used to be that differences on such issues were accepted. But that's no longer the case under policies of a current national administration of biblical fundamentalists who insist the Bible is totally without error.

Their leadership of the 15.5 million-member Southern Baptist Convention has been kept in power for more than a decade by conservative majorities averaging about 55 percent.

Clinton to reconsider his support for abortion and homosexuality.

From Southern Baptist headquarters in Nashville, the Rev. Richard D. Land, head of the denomination's Christian Life Commission, urged Clinton to reconsider his stands on abortion and homosexuality.

He said most Southern Baptists believe that a pre-born baby is a distinct human life and want abortion restricted. He said most Southern Baptists oppose giving sexual orientation a "protected status" under civil rights laws.

In Arizona and New Mexico, state conventions also asked Clinton to reconsider his views on homosexuality and abortion rights. In those states and several others — Wyoming, Arkansas, Florida and Utah-Idaho — conventions linked denunciations of homosexuality to Clinton's support of homosexual rights.

Despite the reservations, most of those conventions and others — in North and South Carolina, Oklahoma, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Kentucky and Indiana — pledged prayers for Clinton and other elected officials.

An Oklahoma resolution asked prayers that Clinton "seek divine wisdom in leading this nation according to biblical principles," and saying Baptists would try to support him "in every way possible in accordance with the principles of God's word."

Arkansas Capitol a replica

L.M. Boyd
What's what?

Sight of the U.S. Capitol is hardly unfamiliar to President-Elect Bill Clinton. The Arkansas Capitol building in Little Rock is a replica. Filmakers sometimes use it as background for Washington, D.C., scenes.

Quintin Herrera-Hernandez, 29, left, is embraced by a friend in Miami Thursday following the burial of his brother Miguel Herrera Hernandez and Reinaldo Alvarez Morales, two Cubans who died trying to reach the U.S. in a raft from Cuba.

2 who fled Cuba buried in the land they had hoped to reach

MIAMI (AP) — Two Cuban men have been buried in the U.S. soil they were trying to reach, the latest in an unknown number of would-be refugees whose escape from communism has meant death.

"All men seek freedom. When they don't have freedom, they are unhappy," Roman Catholic Bishop Augustin Roman said in the funeral Mass. "They sought freedom until they lost their own earthly lives."

The caskets of Reinaldo Alvarez Morales, 41, and Miguel Herrera Hernandez, 26, lay side-by-side as more than 50 relatives and other Cuban exiles participated Thursday in the Mass.

Among them was Herrera's brother, Quintin Herrera Hernandez, 29. He was unable to save his younger brother when he slipped off their inner tube raft and drowned — just minutes after they saw lights that meant their grueling four-day journey was near an end. A third man, Ivan Alvisar, also made the 90-mile trip safely.

"My brother ... he came so close. It is painful not to have my brother with me," said Quintin-Herrera. He said he hadn't yet been able to talk with their parents and siblings in Cuba.

The dead men didn't know each other. Cuban exile groups paid for their burial.

Herrera fell overboard Nov. 30 and his body was found two days later by a fisherman. Alvarez was among nine Cubans airlifted Saturday by a Navy helicopter after their small boat was spotted 30 miles off the Florida Keys. He died from hypothermia.

The survivors are among 2,414 Cubans known to have reached the United States by sea this year, an increase of about 200 over 1991.

Dorothy Bush's will gives to family, cook, charities

STUART, Fla. (AP) — President Bush's mother, "Dorothy," bequeathed the bulk of her estate to her five children, but she also left $2,000 to the family's former cook and nearly $50,000 to various charities and foundations.

Mrs. Bush died Nov. 19 at her home in Greenwich, Conn., a day after suffering a stroke. She was 91.

Her will, filed last week in Martin County Circuit Court, didn't give the estate's value, but it is believed to be worth millions.

The will was revised less than six months ago. It named sons Prescott Bush Jr. and Jonathan Bush as executors of her will and trustees of her estate.

"It is my hope and recommendation, however, that my executors and trustees shall consult with my son, George Herbert Walker Bush, on any important matters pertaining to the investment or administration of my estate and any trusts created hereby," the will states.

Mrs. Bush asked that the bulk of her estate be divided equally among her five children. Her other children are William "Bugsy" Bush and Nancy Bush Ellis.

She left Prescott Bush Jr. and Jonathan Bush each an additional $30,000 for having served as executors of their father's estate. Her husband, former U.S. Sen. Prescott Bush, died in 1972.

Mrs. Bush's only daughter was given all of her jewelry and a painting. Another painting was left to Mrs. Bush's daughter-in-law, Elizabeth K. Bush, the wife of Prescott Bush Jr.

Her other daughters-in-law, including Barbara Bush, weren't named in the will.

She left each of 16 grandchildren $10,000, and provided an additional

School honors TV's 'Goober'

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — Don't call actor-George Lindsey "Goober" any more. Call him "Dr. Goober."

The University of North Alabama will present him with an honorary doctor of humane letters degree on Dec. 18.

Lindsey graduated in 1952. From what was then called Florence State Teachers College. He majored in biology and physical education, and played quarterback for the football team.

He later studied acting at the American Theatre Wing in New York City and earned roles in Broadway musicals, television and the movies.

A native of Jasper, Lindsey gained fame as that lovable hick-Goober on "The Andy Griffith Show." "Mayberry R.F.D." and "Hec-Haw."

Governor attracts another governor

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards says she has seen a man who really caught her eye.

The lucky guy mentioned at a fund-raiser this week is another state official, Tennessee Gov. Ned McWherter.

"He's just one of the greatest looking men you've ever seen, and he isn't married. I want you to know. And I've taken note of it," said Richards, 59, who has been divorced for several years.

McWherter, a 62-year-old widower, happened to have been on a hunting trip Thursday in Texas.

"As Texas Governor Ann Richards is not only good looking, smart and capable, but a pretty good shot herself," said McWherter, who killed two javelina pigs with one 30.06 round.

Javelina pigs are wild boars.

Group to honor Denzel Washington for roles

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — "Malcolm X" star Denzel Washington will be honored at next month's Sundance Film Festival for the independent vision he has shown in choosing his roles.

The festival's Piper-Heidsieck Tribute to Independent Vision is given to honor a filmmaker's original voice and artistry.

"His career exemplifies what the award is all about," said Catherine Schulman, the festival's associate programmer.

"He has chosen material with positive socio-political content, and with a strong social conscience. With 'Malcolm X,' he portrayed someone with independent vision," she said Thursday.

The festival in Park City runs Jan. 21-31.

Washington, 37, won the supporting actor Oscar two years ago for his performance as a slave who becomes a soldier in the Civil War movie "Glory."

He played slain South African Steven Biko in "Cry Freedom" and starred earlier this year in "Mississippi Masala."

The award first was presented last year to actor-director John Turturro. It's named for the champagne company that sponsors it.

Achievement award goes to Wonder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After 30 years of living life and writing songs about it, Stevie Wonder's songwriting colleagues have given him their Lifetime Achievement Award.

Wonder, a Grammy and Oscar winner whose career as a writer and entertainer goes back three decades, joined such winners of the National Academy of Songwriters' award as Burt Bacharach, Hal David and Carole King.

"I think that life is an endless, bottomless well," Wonder, 42, said in an interview before accepting the award Thursday.

"If you are always receptive to experience in 'life you can't stop writing lyrics.'"

The award is given by the nonprofit group to writers whose body of work has made significant contributions to popular music.

In the interview, Wonder spoke about the emotional effects of such current events as the Los Angeles riots, homelessness and violence. He said some of that would be reflected in his album "Conversation Piece."

Oscar and Grammy-Award winner Stevie Wonder shares a moment with members of the top-10 singing group Portrait, Irving Washington (right) and Michael Sautsberry (center) Thursday in Los Angeles.

In a second appeal, filed Thursday, Attorney Alan M. Dershowitz accused Denise Washington and her parents of withholding information — they discussed with attorneys about book and movie rights to the woman's story. He didn't say what that information was.

He said the Washingtons also failed to disclose that they had signed a contingency-fee agreement with an attorney before Tyson's trial.

Dershowitz said the jury, divided 6-6 in its first vote, would have acquitted Tyson had it known the information the Washingtons withheld.

The Marion County prosecutor's office has contended the Washingtons did not withhold information, and said they had talked with an attorney during the trial about possible representation but hadn't made up their minds.

The former-heavyweight boxing champion was convicted in March of raping Miss Washington during the Miss "Black America pageant in Indianapolis last year.

He is serving a six-year prison sentence.

Milsap's venture — Tar Heels music

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — To hear Ronnie Milsap's newest song, you have to go to North Carolina.

Milsap composed the music and sings the song that will introduce the Tournament of Champions game broadcast on North Carolina's Tar Heel Sports Network.

"Ronnie is a big Tar Heel fan," said Billy Coran, Milsap's personal assistant. "He's a big ACC fan in general but he has a real admiration for Coach (Dean) Smith."

The network decided a few months ago to record new music to lead its broadcasts, and asked Milsap if he was interested. The network didn't have to ask twice, Coran said.

Milsap wrote the song as a favor. He asked in return to have a chance to sing the national anthem before a North Carolina game in the Smith Center at the University of North Carolina.

Milsap, a Robbinsville, N.C., native, lives in Nashville.

Puckett stays in Minnesota

Twins' slugger rejects more money elsewhere; Astros sign Swindell

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Kirby Puckett ended the suspense Friday by choosing with his heart instead of his checkbook, turning down more money from other teams to re-sign with the Minnesota Twins.

Swindell made out well: His five-year, $30 million contract was the second-biggest in baseball history.

"It was the numbers, I would not be here because I had more lucrative offers elsewhere," Puckett said.

Two other free agents, meanwhile, changed teams. Greg Swindell left Cincinnati to go to Houston, where he'll join recently signed Doug Drabek in the rotation, and shortstop Spike Owen left Montreal for the New York Yankees.

In other deals, outfielder Mitch Webster resigned with Los Angeles and reliever Jesse Gross stayed in Milwaukee. Also, third baseman Molitor of the Brewers rejected the team's first offer of the offseason.

Puckett, 31, is a .321 career hitter. He is a seven-time All-Star and a six-time Gold Glove outfielder. He hit .329 last season with 19 home runs and 10 RBIs. He finished second in the American League MVP voting.

Twins fans campaigned all during the stretch for management to resign him, but general manager Andy MacPhail joked a few years ago that he would be run out of town if he ever let Puckett get away.

The Boston Red Sox met with Puckett last week and the Chicago White Sox and Chicago Cubs were said to be among the other clubs interested.

Puckett signed a day after he and his wife, Tonya, had dinner with Twins owner Carl Pohlad and his wife, Elaine.

"You need to do a little wining and dining yourself sometimes," MacPhail said.

Puckett gets a $6 million signing bonus, of which $1 million is deferred until 2001 at a 5 percent yearly interest rate. He gets $4 million in each of the next two seasons, $5 million each in 1995 and 1996 and $6 million in 1997. And he has the right to become a free agent again after the 1995 season.

"Christmas from now on for me is December Fourth," Puckett said. "I looked at Tonya and I gave her a kiss and said, 'We can finally get some sleep tonight.'"

The only bigger total package is the $32.5 million, five-year deal between shortstop Cal Ripken and Baltimore on Aug. 24. The only higher yearly averages are $7.1 million for Chicago's second baseman Ryan Sandberg and Ripken's $6.5 million.

Swindell also was said to play at home. He pitched for the University of Houston and hoped to play for the Astros.

Swindell signed a four-year, $17 million contract. Earlier in the week, Drabek from Victoria, Texas, left Pittsburgh and got a four-year, $19.5 million deal. "Even before Doug signed I knew where I wanted to play," Swindell said. "Being able to follow someone like Doug will just top me eventually. Only good things can happen."

Swindell was 12-8 with a 2.70 ERA in 30 starts for the Reds last season.

"He turned down offers from five other clubs for more money," said Randy Hendricks, who represents the pitcher along with his brother Alvin. "We just stayed with our offer with Houston even though we had better offers coming because that's what Greg wanted to do and we knew Houston had a budget."

Million-dollar smiles

Byrd's coach contends technique wasn't illegal

NEW YORK — Dennis Byrd was moved to Lenox Hill Hospital orthopedic floor Friday as New York Jets coach Bruce Coslet defended the player's technique on the play, which he broke a vertebra in his spine and was partially paralyzed.

Byrd, who has begun physical rehabilitation, remained in stable condition. He was injured when he collided with teammate Scott Mersereau as both defensive players converged on Kansas City quarterback Dave Krieg Sunday.

Coslet disputed a New York Times story which questioned whether Byrd had placed himself in danger by going for the tackle head first. That technique, called spearing, is illegal.

"How do you spear air?" Coslet said. "We definitely don't teach spearing."

Ex-Royals shortstop appeals to public to help daughter

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Former Kansas City Royals shortstop Fred Patek has more than baseball in common with major league umpire Steve Palermo, who's working to regain use of his limbs after a shooting injury.

Patek's 30-year-old daughter, Kimberlie, suffered a serious spinal injury when she lost control of her pickup truck in July. She's paralyzed from the neck down and unable to breathe without a respirator.

Kimberlie was uninsured, and has medical bills that approach $1 million — with $350,000 needed to begin rehabilitation at a Houston hospital specializing in cases like hers.

After appealing to local foundations without success, Patek on Thursday turned to the public. "This is the last thing I wanted to do, but I've got to do it," he told The Kansas City Star. "I have to give her a chance."

Duke-Michigan matchup retains feel of title fight

The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — The Duke-Michigan basketball game Saturday night in Cameron Indoor Stadium has begun to feel like a title fight.

In one corner, Michigan's Juwan Howard is saying he has pity for the Blue Devils. In another corner, Bobby Hurley is saying Michigan's talk is just part of the Wolverines' act.

"I'd be surprised if they didn't say something like that," Hurley said.

Howard is saying he has pity for the Blue Devils, and Duke's Grant Hill says it feels strange that the Blue Devils are expected to lose.

"We haven't had that feeling since the UNLV game (in 1991)," Hill said.

Both sides are saying the game means nothing, and it means everything. It's, after all, still early December, a full season away from what matters the most.

"This is just a piece of the puzzle. Of course we don't want to lose, but we're not going to hang the season on this game," Webber said.

For one white-hot December night, though, fourth-ranked Duke and Michigan renew a rivalry that has quickly become one of the game's most fierce.

It culminated in a national championship battle won by Duke, 71-51, last April.

When they tangle again tonight, the Wolverines enter as the nation's No. 1 team, a distinction earned from their remarkable cast of sophomores led by Webber and Jalen Rose.

They're brash and breathtaking at the same time. Webber and Rose may be just a season away from the NBA. For the time being, though, they anchor a team that appears to have the best chance of replacing Duke on the national championship throne.

"We know our abilities this year. We were confident last year, but we've boosted that 100 times over. This is business now," said Webber, who had 20 points and 11 rebounds in Saturday's game.

Kansas coach says NIT win gives Hoosiers edge

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Kansas coach Roy Williams thinks No. 2-ranked Indiana has the advantage over the No. 4 Jayhawks heading into Saturday's game, thanks to the Hoosiers' winning the Precision NIT.

"Kansas has played only one game so far, and Williams wasn't happy with his team's performance."

The Jayhawks led Georgia by 20 points at halftime Tuesday, but had to hang on to win 76-65. Williams called the Jayhawks "terrible, disgusting and miserable."

"If we play like that Saturday, it could be a 30-point game and they'll be kicking our tails all the way home," Williams said.

Kansas will have to get better play on the perimeter, he added.

Some of the nation's top shooters will be in action in the Hoosier Dome, where a crowd of 28,000 is expected.

They include Indiana's Calbert Cheaney and Kansas guard Adonis Jordan and Rex Walters.

Cheaney was voted most valuable player in the NIT, after scoring 34 points against Florida State in the semifinals and 36 in the title game against Seton Hall. He is averaging 26 points and six rebounds per game in four games.

Williams knows all about Cheaney. He was an assistant coach and Cheaney was on the Olympic development team that helped prepare the United States team for the Barcelona Games.

"But Williams thinks the Jayhawks' outside shooters are second to none. Richard Scott, a 6-foot-7 junior, is his top shooter. He had 18 points and eight rebounds in the season opener.

Indiana leads the series 6-2, but Kansas has won the last two meetings.

The Jayhawks beat Indiana 83-65 in the 1991 NCAA Southeast Regional at Charlotte, N.C.

Indiana won the national championship in 1940 and 1953 by beating Kansas in the NCAA finals.

World track rejects Reynolds ruling, threatens suit

The Associated Press

LONDON — Track and field's world governing body on Friday rejected a U.S. court judgment awarding Butah Reynolds $27.3 million as "worthless" and said Friday it would consider suing him for libel.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation also said it could impose a further ban on Reynolds, the world record holder at 400 meters. His doping suspension ends Dec. 31.

The IAAF also warned that interference by civil courts into sports matters could threaten major events such as the Olympics, including the Atlanta Games in 1996.

A federal judge in Columbus, Ohio, made the award against the IAAF Thursday. U.S. District Court Judge Joseph

It has been suggested that the results of these (court) proceedings in some way vindicates Mr. Reynolds. They do not.

—International Amateur Athletic Federation

Kinney found that Reynolds, a silver medalist in the 400 at the 1988 Olympics, lost $6.8 million in potential earnings during the more than two years he has been suspended by the IAAF. In addition, Reynolds was awarded $20.5 million in punitive damages.

Reynolds was banned by the IAAF for two years after testing positive for the banned steroid nandrolone following a meet at Monte Carlo in August 1990.

Although Reynolds has maintained his innocence, an IAAF arbitration panel upheld the ban in May.

The federation's only reaction Thursday was that U.S. courts had no jurisdiction over the IAAF.

But in a strongly worded statement Friday, the IAAF said the arbitration panel's ruling was binding and it threatened action against Reynolds.

"It has been suggested that the results of these (court) proceedings in some way vindicates Mr. Reynolds," the statement said. "They do not. The only evidence before the court was that of Mr. Reynolds."

in the NIT, after scoring 34 points against Florida State in the semifinals and 36 in the title game against Seton Hall. He is averaging 26 points and six rebounds per game in four games.

Williams knows all about Cheaney. He was an assistant coach and Cheaney was on the Olympic development team that helped prepare the United States team for the Barcelona Games.

"But Williams thinks the Jayhawks' outside shooters are second to none. Richard Scott, a 6-foot-7 junior, is his top shooter. He had 18 points and eight rebounds in the season opener.

Indiana leads the series 6-2, but Kansas has won the last two meetings.

The Jayhawks beat Indiana 83-65 in the 1991 NCAA Southeast Regional at Charlotte, N.C.

Indiana won the national championship in 1940 and 1953 by beating Kansas in the NCAA finals.

The award of damages is effective only in Ohio. In the IAAF's view, this judgment is worthless as it has been obtained in a court which does not have any jurisdiction to consider this matter.

Reynolds continues to assert his innocence where no reasonable grounds exist for doing so.

"Furthermore in continuing this campaign against the IAAF, he has made a number of libelous allegations about the conduct of our proceedings against Mr. Reynolds."

Initially, the IAAF took no legal action against Mr. Reynolds, regarding these outbursts as representing merely the frustration of a justifiably punished athlete.

"However, at the next IAAF Council meeting, (it) will consider the possibility of commencing proceedings against Mr. Reynolds for libel and taking further disciplinary action under IAAF rules.

Kimberly turns out lights on Murtaugh

HAZELTON — Murtaugh was rapidly closing in on Kimberly and then the lights went out — literally. Kimberly held on to win its first tournament in 13 years. The 45-42 over Murtaugh in the first game, host Valley defeated Hansen 53-35.

Prep tournaments

Murtagh had closed an eight-point deficit down to two points with 12 seconds left on the game clock when the power blinked off in the gymnasium for the fourth time Friday night. After a 10-minute delay while the lights recharged, Kimberly hit the buzzer to move to a 45-42 lead. Murtagh fired off a 3-point attempt at the buzzer, but it bounced off the rim to end the game. In the first game Valley jumped to a 17-4 first quarter lead, but Hansen closed to within two points before taking a 28-22 deficit into halftime. Valley controlled the entire second half and went on to the 18-point victory over McClain led the Vikings with 12 points. Valley will play Kimberly for the championship today and Hansen will play Murtagh in the consolation.

Commentary

PHILADELPHIA — Detroit's Tiger Stadium was not quite up to the media demands of the 1977 All-Star Game. Consequently the Philadelphia Daily News baseball writer, me, wound up with other bitching National League wretches in upper deck-rightfield-fair territory.

It still was climbing when it clattered off the ironwork of a rooftop light standard. Where it would have landed remains a slow-burning fog for the hot stove. It rankled with the longest I have seen in person.

It was my introduction to a Cheltenham High School athlete who played football and baseball at Arizona State; then was drafted by the A's. Here was a superstar who hit 47 homers in his second season for Charlie

Finley who was still a rumor in the National League because the guys in those weird uniforms played for a small-market team three time zones away and rarely made NBC's "Game of the Week."

The A's started winning championships in 1972 and Reggie Jackson began a long, tumultuous run in the vibrant glowings of October.

This is Jackson's first year of eligibility, and with the number of BBWAA electors voting from nursing homes diminishing each year, he should be close to unanimous.

The rest of the choices are not as easy. Also eligible for the first time are Phil Niekro and three-fourths of a famed Los Angeles Dodgers infield — third baseman Ron Cey, second baseman Davey Lopes and first baseman Steve Garvey.

Cey appears destined to be one of those worthy-of-consideration third basemen who will hang on the ballot for his full 15 years. The Penguin, who had decent power numbers of 316 home runs and 1,139 homers, comes up a little, uh, short. No offense intended.

Peréz was the quintessential No. 5 hitter. And don't tell me he got those 1,652 RBI because he had Pete Rose, Joe Morgan and Johnny Bench hitting in front of him, not to mention Bobby Tolson and Ken Griffey. The point is he got the 2,732 hits that drove them in — including a ball-leading 505 doubles and a decent total of 379 homers. This guy was an RBI machine. Perez drove in 100 or more runs seven times, but the stat to remember, him by is the one Pete Rose likes to bring up.

"Doggie had at least 90 RBI eleven straight years, and that's one helluva feat," Rose told me when he was managing the Reds and Perez was his first-base coach.

On the basis of victories, Niekro's and Phil Niekro on my ballot.

And all the agonizing about Steve Garvey produced a white hot flash of pure truth.

"We've been cheating hell out of Cubs third baseman Ron Santo, who has 70 more homers and 23 more RBI than Garvey in a career shorter by three years and 692 at-bats. Better make that Garvey, Perez, Niekro AND Ron Santo."

That argument evaporates, however, when you factor in Niekro's 318 victories. Only seven pitchers in history have more. And only one of them, Warren Spahn, pitched in the second half of the 20th century.

Here's with it, Curse's prep work against Niekro being a knuckleballer. If you Wilhelm, who had his golden years as a relief pitcher, is the only other practitioner of that occult art in the Hall of Fame, Niekro has 175 more victories than Wilhelm.

Sorry, I've got to take a rain check on Jim Kaat. Right now, it's a struggle to shine Kitty's average of 11.32 victories over 25 years. And he allowed 1,02 hits per innings pitched.

I checked Reggie Jackson, Tony Perez and Phil Niekro on my ballot.

And all the agonizing about Steve Garvey produced a white hot flash of pure truth.

But... Gentlemen, all those losses. The only non-Hall of Famer with more losses than Niekro's 274 is Nolan Ryan, who has 278 and has now pitched three more seasons than "Knuckie," impossible as that sounds. Only Cy Young (316) and Walter Johnson (279) have taken more losses than Niekro to Cooperstown.

Hard-serving Rosset dumps favored Courier

FORT WORTH, TEXAS (AP) — Marc Rosset rocketed serves from every angle Friday night to repeat his Olympic triumph over top-ranked Jim Courier with a thrilling five-set victory in Switzerland's first Davis Cup final.

Rosset, ranked 36th in the world, used 27 aces to come from behind and defeat Courier, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, tying the best-of-5 final.

Rosset won a surprise gold medal at the Barcelona Olympics after beating Courier, the first American since John McEnroe in 1984, to finish the year ranked No. 1 in the world.

Earlier in the day, a confident Andre Agassi needed less than 90 minutes to beat Jakob Hlasek 6-1, 6-2, 6-2.

Hlasek and Rosset will play McEnroe and Pete Sampras on Saturday in doubles at the 12,000-seat Tarrant County Convention Center. Reverse singles are slated for Monday with Courier playing Hlasek, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4, and Agassi playing Rosset.

Rosset, who lost to Courier in this year's Australian Open, had a chance to put Courier away early, but bounced back after falling behind two sets to one.

USA's Jim Courier sets for a return during his Davis Cup match with Marc Rosset Friday in Fort Worth, Texas.

Trio sit atop Million Dollar Challenge

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — Nick Price of Zimbabwe slant a bogey-free 67 Friday to share the lead with South African Eric Els and David Frost halfway through the Million Dollar Challenge golf tournament.

The threesome, each with a 54-hole total of 54 under par in 139, led world No. 1 Nick Faldo and John Cook by two strokes in the quest for golf's richest prize — $1 million.

Defending champion Bernhard Langer of Germany was another shot behind at 142, while Masters champion Fred Couples was at par 144, one shot ahead of Spain's Jose Maria Olazola.

Welsman Ian Woosnam's woes continued with a one-over 73, putting him four over for the tournament at 148, one shot ahead of Australia's Craig Parry.

A controversy erupted on the second hole where Faldo, the leader at the time, questioned whether Els flattened the grass with his putter while clearing a bug from his putting line.

Els denied it and the two players argued briefly at the green and the next tee.

The rules committee cleared Els after viewing a television replay.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Yet they, believe me, who await No gifts from Chance, have conquered Fate."

— Matthew Arnold.

"Did they give you the game on board 23?" asked an envious competitor. "With the diamond finesse outside, I saw no chance to make it."

"They gave me nothing," was the curt reply. "I just took my pine tricks."

At the loser's table, declarer ducked the first spade in dummy. The second and cashed. The heart king. Declarer came to hand with the club ace to try to drop a Doubton heart queen, and when that failed, he ran the clubs. This gave him seven winners, so he needed the diamond finesse to get nine.

When this failed, West took his remaining spades, sending the game one down.

The winner gave himself an added chance. After winning the second round of spades, he cashed dummy's heart king and his own ace and queen of clubs. Then he led a spade to West. What could West do? After cashing his spades, he had to lead a red suit, and South enjoyed a free-fire zone to get his ninth trick.

What if West had held a third club to give him a safe exit? Nothing much would have been lost. South would still have had time to try the diamond finesse and he would have been no worse-off than before.
