BERGER — The search for a downed Navy pilot ended Friday when military investigators found the pilot's remains in the wreckage of his F-16 fighter jet southwest of Twin Falls.

Navy officials said the pilot was alone on a routine training mission from Miramar Naval Air Station near San Diego, and was headed back for California when the plane went down Thursday morning south of Berger Butte.

The jet crashed minutes after taking off from the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

Hopes raised Thursday evening by footprints found not far from the jet were dashed shortly after midday Friday when Air Force and Navy officials confirmed the pilot was still in the cockpit when the jet crashed.

"The loss of a close friend and squadron mate is almost a gut-wrenching blow,"

Navy Cmdr. Mike Whitty said after returning from the large crater caused by the crash. "There's a lot of mourning going on today."

Whitty and the downed pilot are from the same 22-member squadron, VF-126, at Miramar.

The pilot died on impact and did not attempt to eject, Whitty said.

He would not release the pilot's name, saying family members had been told the pilot was missing, but had not been notified of his death.

What caused "Bandit 5" to crash into the snow-covered desert seven miles southwest of the Twin Falls airport was still unknown Friday.

Whitty said he and the four other members of the mishap investigation team from Miramar will continue examining the crash site and interviewing people who watched the takeoff.

The jet left Twin Falls just before 10 a.m. Two people in the area south of town reported hearing the jet and what sounded like a small explosion in the air at around 10 a.m., Twin Falls County Sheriff's dispatcher Rob Vawser said.

There were conflicting reports about when the jet disappeared from military radar. Civilian public affairs officer Doug Sayers at Miramar said the last radar contact was 10:20 a.m. MST, but an Air Force statement put the final contact at 1:16 p.m.

The Navy told the sheriff's office at 11:58 a.m. that the jet was missing; Vawser said.

A local search plane spotted the wreckage and directed rescue workers on snowmobiles to the crater at about 4:30 p.m. Thursday, Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn said.

The presence of jet fuel and other possible toxic substances kept deputies and search crews away from the wreckage, Munn said.

While combing the area Thursday night, someone spotted a pair of boot tracks that

Training flights often cross Idaho

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Fighter jets like the one that crashed southwest of Twin Falls Thursday often fly into southern Idaho on training missions, Navy officials say.

The F-16B from Miramar Naval Air Station near San Diego stopped at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport Wednesday afternoon to fuel up during a cross-country training mission, said Doug Sayers, a civilian spokesman for the Navy at Miramar.

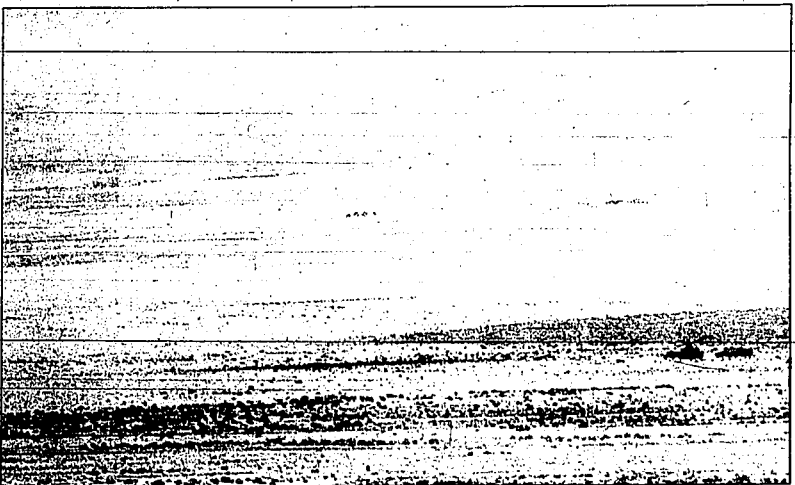

Miramar is the Navy's "Top Gun" pilot training school.

Navy pilots are required to do a certain amount of navigation training — finding their way in unfamiliar terrain, Sayers said. "You pick a place and work your way there," he said. "We want to keep these guys sharp."

Air Force jets from Mountain Home Air Force Base often practice touch-and-go instrument landings in cooperation with the Twin Falls airport.

The model of F-16 that went down was one of only 2 built for the Navy.

Marines expected to head for southern Somalia

The Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — With looting and violence undiminished in much of Somalia, the U.S.-led military coalition was preparing for its next move Friday, and speculation centered on the southern port of Kismayu.

An advance team of U.S. air force personnel flew to Kismayu to check the airport's readiness to receive flights of food for Somalia's starving, said military sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Aid agencies urged American commanders to make the port their next target, just as they once pleaded with them to pacify Baidoa, the central town occupied by U.S. Marines and French Legionnaires on Wednesday.

Kismayu was an important food port, but aid programs there have been crippled by fighting in the 10 days since the first Marines landed in Somalia. About 60 Somalis have died in looting raids and clan skirmishes.

Some agencies, in fact, have suggested the military presence has made their jobs more difficult by driving rampaging gunmen from Mogadishu and Baidoa into the countryside and surrounding towns.

But Mark Stirling, in charge of the U.N. Children's Fund in Somalia, said he thought that perception was the "result of frustration on the part of people who know this is going to end soon, but want it ended sooner."

"I don't think it's any worse," Stirling said. "It's just the same old crap we've been dealing with for months."

The United Nations and private aid agencies have about 30 foreign employees in Kismayu. They have been virtually under siege in their compounds for weeks.

The plans to extend the U.S.-led coalition's reach farther into this East African nation came as its forces grew to more than 15,000, including 14,070 Americans.

Gen. Joseph P. Hoar, the chief of the U.S. Central Command, told reporters in Mogadishu that so many nations have pledged troops to help feed the starving that the United States might be able to reduce the role of its forces.

Many of the countries committing troops to the humanitarian effort do not have the means to transport or support them in the field, a logistical job the American military machine is suited to play.

Aspin appears likely pick for defense slot

The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Clinton Friday interviewed his likely pick for defense secretary, House Armed Services Chairman Les Aspin, and a female utility executive who has emerged as a candidate for energy secretary.

Both Aspin and Hazel O'Leary, an executive vice president of Minneapolis-based Northern States Power Co., were met at Little Rock's airport by Clinton aides and whisked away for their interviews.

Transition sources described Aspin as a new "lock" for defense secretary, saying he was Clinton's clear choice heading into the interview. And, speaking on condition of anonymity, the sources confirmed that O'Leary was a candidate for the energy post.

Colorado Sen. Tim Wirth has been considered the favorite for the job. Wirth, who did not seek re-election, was interviewed by Clinton several weeks ago. Since then, he has waited for word from Clinton while critics have tried to undermine his candidacy for the Cabinet post.

In energy lobbying circles in Washington, speculation is widespread that Wirth's candidacy is dead.

Aspin, 54, a moderate Democrat, opposed the Vietnam War, as did Clinton.

As the House's leading voice on defense matters, Aspin has usually supported Pentagon programs and is generally well-regarded by Republicans.

Aspin was a strong supporter of the Persian Gulf War and backed funding for the MX missile and aid to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Another contender for the Pentagon post, Oklahoma Rep. David McCurdy, was said by senior transition aides to be Clinton's favorite to lead the CIA. McCurdy,

No nuclear arms deal with Moscow, White House says

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials expressed bewilderment at Boris Yeltsin's statement Friday that Russia and the United States have agreed on a treaty to slash long-range nuclear weapons.

Still, private analysts said a deal seemed achieved before President Bush leaves office.

Bush and Yeltsin signed a framework agreement last June to reduce each side's strategic nuclear arsenals to a maximum of 3,500 warheads, but as recently as last Sunday U.S. officials cited obstacles to a final agreement.

From a U.S. standpoint, the proposed accord is of historic importance because it requires Russia to do away with its most fearsome nuclear weapons — those that can fly warheads at multiple targets and a class of missiles known as SS-18s that are more powerful than any missile in the American arsenal.

In Beijing on Friday, the Russian president announced that the accord, known as the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty II, was ready for signing by the two countries' leaders. He said a summit meeting had been set for early January in Alaska.

"I can tell you now that a START II agreement has been prepared for a two-thirds cut in strategic nuclear weapons," Yeltsin said, diverting from his prepared text. "And it can be signed at the beginning of January of next year."

Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, in Brussels for a NATO meeting, said of Yeltsin's announcement: "I hope he's right, but we have to see... I don't know any more than what I've heard out of Beijing."

Private analysts who follow the strategic arms negotiations said they knew of no final breakthrough, but they said Bush could easily wrap up the treaty by making concessions that would do no substantial harm to U.S. interests.

Heavy snow falls from Southwest to northern Minnesota

The Associated Press

Snow extended from the Southwest through the Rockies and across the northern Plains on Friday, with up to 30 inches in Utah, and bitterly cold air pushed into Montana.

Snow fell during the afternoon over sections of the southern Colorado Plateau, the northern and central Rockies, the northern and central Plains, and the upper Mississippi Valley.

Heavy snow blanketed parts of Utah during the night. By Friday morning, 30 inches had piled up at Huntington Canyon, with 24 at Powder Mountain, 18 at Soldier Summit, 17 at Sundance, and 12 inches at Orderville, Clear Creek Mountain, Sandline and Park West, the National Weather Service said.

In California, wind-whipped snow in the Tejon Pass, about 40 miles northwest of Los Angeles, cut visibility and closed a 20-mile section of Interstate 5, California's main north-south highway, early Friday.

The mountains of southern Colorado also received heavy snow during the night. Wolf Creek reported 18 inches in seven hours. Other mountain areas reported 8 to 15 inches. In the Four Corners and Gunnison Valley, 4 to 6 inches.

Snow also fell on northern Arizona. Three inches of snow was reported at Grand Canyon Airport, and Flagstaff, at an elevation of 6,900 feet, got 2 to 3 inches.

Early afternoon snowfall reports from northern Minnesota included 4 to 5 inches northwest of Thief River Falls, with 3 inches in the city, and 2 inches at Bagley.

A little light freezing rain lingered over central and eastern Nebraska during the afternoon.

Elsewhere, snow also fell across northern Maine.

A high pressure system over Alberta, Canada, pumped cold air into Montana. Afternoon temperatures over northern and eastern Montana were only in the single digits, with some spots reporting below-zero readings: The cold combined with brisk northerly wind to produce wind chills in the range of 15 to 30 below zero.

Morning lows in the 40s and 50s prevailed across southern California, southern Texas, the Gulf Coast region and eastern sections of the southern Atlantic Coast states.

Nuclear waste storage sites sought

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department has concluded it cannot have any facility ready to begin storing nuclear waste from the nation's power plants by a 1998 deadline and will search military bases and nuclear weapons factories for temporary storage sites.

At a briefing for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Friday, senior Energy Department officials said they envision withdrawing the material from pools of water at power plants and transporting it to federally owned sites where it would be stored above ground in sealed casks.

Undersecretary Hugo Prohman mentioned the Energy Department's nuclear weapons plants at Savannah River, S.C., and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory as possible sites, along with unspecified military bases experienced in handling nuclear materials.

Any attempt to move nuclear waste from power plants to government-owned sites around the country is certain to stir political and environmental opposition from the material's prospective neighbors.

In a letter to Senate Energy Committee Chairman J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., Energy Secretary

James D. Watkins asked for legislation that would require the department to select sites by the end of 1993, a move that could allow the department to override local opposition.

More than 20,000 metric tons of highly radioactive used fuel is stored in pools of water at nuclear power plants in 30 states.

Under federal law, the Energy Department is required to assume ownership of the material beginning in 1998 and store it in a permanent underground repository or in a temporary, above-ground site to be used only until the permanent one is ready.

His spokesman said McCurdy informed transition officials he would prefer to stay in the House

A massive ground and air search followed, focusing on an area about one mile north of the crash site. A floodlight-equipped helicopter from a Pocatello hospital and an Idaho Air National Guard helicopter from Boise with night-vision capabilities assisted the 50-55 people on the ground searching for the maker of the boot prints.

Local search-and-rescue crews, emergency medical technicians, sheriff's deputies, tracking dogs and the Mountain Home composite squadron Civil Air Patrol all joined in the ground search.

But the military's designated representatives — the disaster response team from Mountain Home Air Force Base — didn't arrive at the scene until late Thursday.

according to Jane's All the World's Aircraft, the F-16N fighter is a stripped-down F-16, which is the multiple-role fighter that is the mainstay of the Air Force inventory.

The only difference between the two models is that the Navy jets don't have guns and some electronic equipment.

The Navy uses the F-16N as an "aggressor" — an aircraft designed to simulate the performance and tactics of Russian-built fighters during electronic warfare training.

The Russians' top-of-the-line fighter, the MiG-29, was patterned after the F-16.

About 1,400 F-16s are in service with the Air Force and Air National Guard units, both in fighter and ground-attack roles. F-16s are also used in the air forces of Israel, Egypt, the Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark, Japan, South Korea, Norway, Venezuela and Taiwan.

Clinton considers plan to raise retirement age

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Clinton, facing an unexpected tide of federal red ink, is weighing a wide range of tough deficit-cutting measures including pushing back the Social Security retirement age, aides said Friday.

Clinton transition spokesman George Stephanopoulos stressed that the proposals were just being studied and that Clinton had made no final decisions. But he said the president-elect was determined to make a significant effort.

"The important thing is that we have a strong long-term deficit reduction package," Stephanopoulos said.

In addition to raising the retirement age for collecting full Social Security benefits, Clinton indicated in an interview Friday in The Wall Street Journal that he was considering taxing capital gains when a person dies and limiting the size of tax writeoffs companies can take for providing health insurance for their

Independent counsel will investigate search of passport files

diGenova

WASHINGTON (AP) — An independent counsel will secretly named early this week to investigate whether White House officials broke the law and covered up their knowledge of a search of Bill Clinton's passport files, government sources confirmed Friday.

Joseph E. diGenova, a former U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, was named Monday by a special three-judge panel at the request of Attorney General William Barr, said government officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The appointment came one day before the law authorizing independent counsels expired.

The investigation will focus in part on whether one or more senior White House aides lied to State Department investigaand whether Bush administration officials illegally disseminated information from Clinton's files, one official said.

Clinton communications director George Stephanopoulos, at a briefing in Little Rock, Ark., said the appointment of an independent counsel was a "good step." He said revelations in the case grew "more crucial every day" and that an independent counsel was the best way to "get to the bottom of it."

The newspapers said it could not be determined who would be investigated for possible criminal wrongdoing. During their inquiry, State Department investigators questioned eight White House staff members, including President Bush's chief of staff James A. Baker III and Baker aides Margaret Tutwiler and Janet Mullins.

The Progressive Policy Institute, a Washington think tank that has supplied a number of advisers to Clinton's campaign, has suggested that the new administration save $60 billion over the next two decades by raising the retirement age of 65 to 66 by the year 2002 and to 67 by the year 2008 — for those receiving full benefits.

Clinton said he was "inclined to agree" with those arguing that a limit should be placed on the size of deductions companies can take for supplying health insurance to their employees. Some have proposed capping those tax writeoffs as a way of forcing companies to economize on the cover-up plans they offer employees. "There has to be some personal responsibility in this health-care system we set up," Clinton said.

On the question of estate taxes, Clinton said he would consider raising revenue by ending the tax exemption for capital gains on assets held when a person dies.

Under current law, the amount that a deceased person's assets such as property or stocks have gained in value since their purchase is not subject to the capital gains tax and a person's heirs have to pay the capital gains tax only on appreciation that occurs after the date of death.

employees.

However, he balked at the idea of raising gasoline taxes as much as 15 cents per gallon, calling that "excessive."

Several participants at his National Economic Conference this week had put forward the idea of raising the gasoline tax to lower the deficit and Clinton seemed to embrace the suggestion, linking it with his proposal to provide middle class tax breaks.

During the conference, the deteriorating outlook for the budget deficit received particular scrutiny. John P. White, who drew up Ross Perot's budget plan, said new estimates had increased the size of the likely deficit through 1996 to $300 billion more than the estimates Clinton used to develop his budget plan last summer.

In the newspaper interview, Clinton said, "Whatever we do in the short run, we need a multi-year program that simultaneously brings down the deficit credibly and increases our investment."

He said that the economic revival program the president's Congress in January will be accompanied by a deficit reduction program that will make projections not just for the next four years but for some period beyond that.

Discussing various deficit-cutting proposals:

Clinton said that raising the Social Security retirement age "is something that definitely has to be looked at." He said, "With the fastest growing group of the population over 80, by the turn of the century, the average person could literally spend 20 years in retirement."

The original Emancipation Proclamation goes on display.

Proclamation goes on display at archive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Handled with white gloves and under careful guard, the fragile original of the Emancipation Proclamation was removed from its darkened vault Friday in preparation for a rare, five-day exhibition.

Bearing Abraham Lincoln's signature, the Civil War document that proclaimed the slaves of the South free hasn't been displayed in more than a dozen years.

It will go on exhibition Dec. 31 through Jan. 4 in the National Archives, where the Constitution and Declaration of Independence are displayed. The exhibit marks the 130th anniversary of the proclamation's signing on New Year's Day, 1863.

subsequent advance through the South.

"It was momentous," said John Hope Franklin, a Duke University professor who has written a history of the Emancipation Proclamation.

"There was no turning back after that. There was no chance slavery could survive after that."

Nicholson wore white cotton gloves as she and other officials of the National Archives displayed the document to the press in advance of the exhibit.

Because it is so vulnerable to damage, particularly from exposure to light, the document hasn't been shown to the public since 1979 and display is being strictly limited this time.

The document is normally kept in the diplomatic vault, a cool, airtight chamber. Archives officials brought it to their conservation laboratory, where a display of filtering glass was being prepared so that it may be exhibited vertically, allowing both sides of each sheet to be seen.

The five-page document is written on the front and back of two sheets of paper and the front of a third. The display will mark the first time the entire text has been available for viewing at one time.

"We consider the Emancipation Proclamation one of the treasures of the archives," said senior conservator Catherine Nicholson. "The only way we can keep it safe for the next generation and the next century is to be very moderate in our exhibition."

The first page is grimy and dark, which Nicholson said was because it was handled most often.

The last page is yellowed, with lines marking past displays before its vulnerability was recognized. That page bears the signatures of Lincoln and William Seward, his secretary of state, as well as a seal and the tattered remnants of blue and red ribbons that originally bound the pages.

Although it is commonly remembered as the instrument that ended slavery, that wasn't fully accomplished until the 13th Amendment to the Constitution was ratified in 1865. Lincoln's document declared slaves to be free in areas of the Confederacy not under Union control at that time, and that meant the northern army brought freedom with ev-

Bush, Major set deadline for agreement on trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and British Prime Minister John Major agreed on Friday to a new goal of mid-January to complete a world trade pact despite concern among negotiators about its prospects.

Trade, stressed that the talks were "moving forward" and negotiations would resume on Jan. 4.

Major alluded to the pessimism surrounding the talks as he appeared with Bush, citing the concerns among some nations that the latest round of talks "might somehow be slipping away when agreement looked as though it was near."

"On trade, we are of one mind," President Bush told reporters on the South Lawn of the White House, shortly after an Oval Office meeting and working lunch with Major and European Commission President Jacques Delors.

The British leader said he and Bush agreed to resume the negotiations early next month with a goal of completing them by mid-January. However, he said there might be some minor issues that would be left unresolved, adding that the goal was to have a "substantive agreement."

Their resolve ran contrary to reports out of Geneva, where the 108-nation talks have taken place, that the deadline for an agreement promoting free trade will not be met for the third straight year.

Bush said U.S. negotiators have been instructed "to work together to this end, and we are committed not only to resolving the differences remaining among ourselves, but also to encouraging Japan and other countries to ... bring the negotiations to a successful conclusion."

Canadian Ambassador Gerald Shannon accused the European Community of delaying tactics and the United States of unravelling established compromises. Prior to the White House meeting, the United States had felt the talks were going so badly that it was considering recalling its negotiators.

Bush said a successful GATT agreement to liberalize trade rules could result in more than $5 trillion in increased world trade during the next decade.

Tsongas moves to cardiac unit

BOSTON (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Paul Tsongas was transferred to the cardiac care unit at Brigham & Women's Hospital Friday when he began experiencing a rapid heart beat, his physician said.

"He is alert and without chest pain," Dr. Jak Takvorian said. "His blood pressure is normal. There presently is no evidence of a heart attack or heart damage."

Tsongas was admitted to Dana-Farber Cancer Institute on Dec. 10 because of an infection that officials said was a complication of the chemotherapy he has been receiving to battle cancer.

On Thursday, doctors characterized the infection as a side effect of his chemotherapy treatment.

Hungry refugees in Baidoa are a new experience for Marines

BAIDOA, Somalia (AP) — U.S. Marines making foot patrols around this Somali town are getting their first real look at the starving people they have come here to save.

The Marines have been walking through the town's outskirts, where Somalis who have fled hunger in the countryside are crowded into squalid and cardboard huts with green plastic sheeting the only cover from rain.

Lt. Brian Fitzell said Friday that the experience was "a real eye-opener" for men used to shopping malls, fast-food joints and the other bounty of 20th century America.

"We're seeing some people who are hurting pretty bad ... a lot who are definitely in the malnourished state," said Fitzell, 25, of Yorktown Heights, N.Y.

Baidoa has been one of the hardest hit towns in the famine that has left an estimated 350,000 people dead of starvation or disease in the past year.

Tens of thousands of displaced farmers and herdsmen have jammed into the town. Charities have set up centers that feed the most malnourished eight tiny portions of porridge over each 24 hours, since their stomachs can handle only a little food at a time.

Along the main street, still muddy from heavy rain two nights ago, stalls have sprung up that offer mangoes, cooking oil and bright-orange packs of Kenyan Sportsman cigarettes.

Fitzell said the men's experience on foot patrol was different than that in the capital, Mogadishu, where the Marines first deployed 10 days ago.

"Men would come up to me and say, 'Sir, these people don't look like they're starving,'" he said. He does not hear that in Baidoa.

In Mogadishu, food deliveries

Marine bitten by deadly snake

ABOARD THE USS TRIPOLI (AP) — A U.S. Marine was admitted to the USS Tripoli's sick bay on Friday for treatment of a potentially deadly snakebite, the first Marine casualty of Operation Restore Hope.

Capt. J.R. Hutchison, the skipper of the helicopter carrier, stationed 12 miles off the Somalia coast, said a mole viper bit the Marine in the upper left arm when the man rolled over in his sleeping bag.

The Marine, who was not identified, was recovering, Hutchison said.

have been fairly regular. Many people in displaced-person camps are hungry, but few are starving.

By contrast, looters have prevented road shipments to Baidoa so food is more scarce. A truck convoy is to be escorted from Mogadishu this weekend, and the 700 U.S. and French troops here already are helping deliver food to outlying villages.

One noticeable difference since the troops arrived is the absence of armed thugs, at least on main streets. Men in cut-down vans mounted with machine guns used to cruise the streets and loot relief agencies.

On Friday, the vans were still around — but minus the guns. Baidoa's townspeople clearly appreciated the difference: several hundred gathered in a main square to watch a half-dozen men dip and weave in a dance celebrating the troops' arrival.

At Bushi, a collection of grass huts about four miles outside Baidoa, village elder Issak Ali raised his hands up and said "We are in heaven" when asked about the foreign troops.

Two truckloads of grain were delivered to the village's 400 families on Thursday under military escort. By contrast, last month's shipment of food to Bushi was stolen.

Ali, 55 and a father of 10, said about 130 people died of hunger or disease in the village in the past year.

Asked about villagers' health now, he reached into a crowd gathered around and pulled out a woman with sick-thin arms and sunken cheeks. He then pointed to a boy of about 8 who had cracked, scabby skin.

"We have no medicine here. We still need much help," Ali said.

Not all villages were as lucky as Bushi in getting food shipments intact. Robbers made off with some food from one village after it was delivered Thursday under escort.

Maj. Gen. Joseph Hoar, head of the U.S. Central Command who visited Baidoa Friday, said such thefts could be expected until the troops got up to full strength.

"To provide the kind of guarantees needed to secure all food, you need to have a large footprint in these areas," he said. "We're not there yet. We have a pretty small footprint actually on the ground in Baidoa."

Meanwhile, troops were settling into a camp at the airport outside town. Marine guards shooed away gawking children from the gate and were teaching them to chant "Hey, what's happening."

Relief officials complain U.S. halts supplying of isolated areas

BAIDOA, Somalia (AP) — So far, U.S. efforts to rescue starving Somalis amount to something of a setback because the Marines have disrupted crucial supply lines without replacing them, aid officials said.

"We can't get to people we used to, and they are dying," said James Fennell of CARE. He praised Operation Restore Hope for securing ports — but said excess military caution is costing lives.

During the months that relief workers waited for United Nations protection, they built a fragile spider web of delivery routes into the bush to bring food; primary medical care and seeds to desperate families.

They hired trucks to ride shotgun on trucks and jeeps, losing some supplies to looters — but also reaching many thousands of people who were too weak to seek help in feeding centers.

The Marines' first move in famine-stricken Baidoa was to disarm the airport security force, tough ex-soldiers CARE had hired as esports. Other free-lance guards hid their weapons and temporarily retired.

Tibebu Haile Selassie, deputy director of UNICEF in Mogadishu, predicted improvement once the military is in place. But for now, he said, "the situation is worse than it was before."

Although continued stocks are needed in Baidoa, relief workers say, their urgent priority is to reach more of these isolated pockets where whole villages hang by a thread.

But many of these deliveries have stopped, not only because no armed escorts are available but also because the Marines have driven bandit gangs out of Baidoa into the most vulnerable hinterlands.

"The military thinks convoys because it looks and sounds very good," said Ian MacLeod, U.N. spokesman in Somalia. "But there are also mobile medical teams, and others, who have to move quickly."

Along with food, he said, children need vaccination against measles and treatment for acute diarrhea, both deadly diseases in Africa. Also, water engineers, sanitation experts and evaluators make quick forays into the bush.

Like others, MacLeod said the threat to relief work was much less heavily armed units to be met with force than it was hit-and-run "moryan" — bandits who prey on unguarded targets of opportunity. Col. Fred Peck, spokesman of the United Task Force, said troops would be available to escort all relief vehicles when they arrived in strength, but he acknowledged the temporary difficulties.

"We're caught between a rock and a hard place," he said. "They scream at us to disarm the bad guys, and then when we do they say they need their guns back."

Operation Restore Hope's mission is to secure main ports, airfields and convoy routes so that an uninterrupted flow of food and medicines can move to distribution centers around the country.

When a regional base is established, troops are detached to escort relief supplies delivered by voluntary organization and U.N. agencies.

First signs are not encouraging, aid workers say. The agencies waited more than a week for troops to move from Mogadishu, where they landed, to the frontier crossroads of Baidoa, 150 miles west.

"We told them all they would need was two men and a dog, and we'd supply the dog," Fennell said. Rick Grant, also of CARE, said the delay bordered on criminal negligence.

On Thursday, the day after a 70-vehicle convoy finally arrived, U.S. Marines and French paratroopers escorted its first load: two small pickups half full of biscuits and meal to a nearby orphanage.

They deployed six light armored vehicles, Humvees, and a truckload of troops, with TOW missiles, mortar launchers and heavy machine guns. A bewildered Baidoa was paralyzed by traffic jams.

Iraq draws warning over Kurds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States on Friday warned Iraq not to attack Kurds in northern Iraq, accusing the Iraqis of increasing harassment against U.N. relief operations by bombings and other types of intimidation.

The Iraqi military has been attempting to impede relief convoys traveling from Turkey into Iraqi regions inhabited by the Kurds, said Assistant Secretary of State Edward P. Djerejian.

"Recently, Iraqi interference has taken on a particularly disturbing dimension," he said.

"There has been over the last month a pattern of sabotage against relief convoy vehicles. This week, at least 15 trucks were damaged by bombs, putting the Turkish drivers at mortal risk," he said.

"Eyewitness accounts of these attacks leave no doubt — no doubt — that the bombs were attached by Iraqi security personnel at checkpoints the Iraqis must pass," Djerejian told reporters.

"We take this matter very seriously. We are consulting with our allies, including the Turks, and at the U.N. on how to meet this challenge," he said.

Koreans elect Kim Young-Sam leader

SEOUL, South Korea — Former opposition leader Kim Young-sam was elected Friday as South Korea's first civilian president in 32 years.

The victory capped four decades in politics for the 65-year-old Kim, who began as a dissident opposed to South-Korean military regimes but merged his opposition movement in 1990 with the ruling Democratic Liberal Party.

When he takes office in February, Kim's goals will be to revitalize South Korea's stagnant economy and work toward unification with Communist North Korea.

With half of Friday's 24 million ballots counted, Kim had 43 percent of the vote to 35 percent for longtime rival Kim Dae-jung. Billionaire Chung Ju-yung, the founder of the giant Hyundai conglomerate, was third with 16 percent.

Tent camp set up for Palestinians

MARI AL-ZOHOUR, Lebanon — The Red Cross rushed tents, food and medicine to 415 Palestinians who were stranded in a no man's land of snow and mud Friday after being expelled from Israel and refused entry into Lebanon.

The United States condemned Israel's unprecedented mass deportation of the Palestinians, saying they would withdraw from the Mideast peace talks until the deportees were repatriated.

A convoy of three U.N. and International Red Cross trucks arrived after dark Friday with about 40 tents and more than 1,000 blankets for the deportees; suspected members of the Muslim fundamentalist groups Hamas and Islamic Jihad.

U.N. approves move to drop embargo

UNITED NATIONS — The 179-nation General Assembly approved a resolution Friday urging the Security Council drop its arms embargo against Bosnia.

The General Assembly — voting 102-0, with 57 abstentions — also called on the council to consider enforcing a no-fly zone over Bosnia and setting up a war crimes tribunal.

The assembly acted on the eve of presidential elections in Serbia that could change the Belgrade government's course in its war with other former Yugoslav republics.

Germany ratifies European unity pact

BONN, Germany — Germany ratified the treaty on European political and economic union Friday, becoming the 10th of the 12 European Community nations to sign on.

Still undecided on the issue are Denmark, whose voters have already refused once to ratify the so-called Maastricht treaty, and Britain, where opposition is high.

All 12 EC nations, which signed the treaty in the Dutch town of Maastricht last year, must ratify the accord before it takes effect.

The Bundestag parliament's upper house, unanimously approved the treaty Friday after just two hours of debate. The Bundestag, the lower house, approved the treaty on Dec. 2.

Serbian voters may determine future

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Serbia's presidential election Sunday between an ex-Communist seeking territorial expansion and a moderate capitalist advocating peace may determine the future of the Balkans.

The race between hard-line nationalist Slobodan Milosevic and Serb-born American millionaire Milan Panic has split Serbs, who according to pre-election polls give each candidate about 40 percent of the vote.

Compiled from wire reports

U.N. mediator seeks settlement in Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — U.N. mediator Lord Owen arrived Friday on a mission to persuade Bosnian Serbs to surrender captured territory and offer Muslims "an honorable settlement" to the civil war.

Mortar and small-arms fire were heard as Owen's jet touched down in the Bosnian capital. Sarajevo is under an eight-month Serbian siege and has been without electricity, running water, telephones or heat for the past 15 days.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic said he agreed to meet with Serb leaders — after refusing to sit with them since August — to get them to abandon their goal of a separate Serb republic in Bosnia.

Whether the meetings of senior Serb, Croat and Muslim military commanders would have any affect was unknown. Previous talks have failed.

The Serbs want to partition Bosnian lands into ethnic departments.

Izetbegovic told reporters his Croat allies, who had leaned towards the Serb idea, had accepted a U.N. plan for a single Bosnia with increased autonomy for different ethnic communities.

Bosnian leader Radovan Karadzic on Thursday offered to stop fighting Christmas Day, but made no offer to withdraw from Serb-captured lands. His promises were warmly rejected by Muslim leaders.

"We've experienced that many times before," said Ejub Ganic, a member of the Bosnian presidency. "There is nothing really serious from the other side."

In Belgrade, Swedish Foreign Minister Margaretha of Ugglas met with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and delivered a "very forceful" message on behalf of European governments demanding respect for human rights in Bosnia.

Milosevic is widely viewed as a major backer of the Serb campaigns in Croatia and Bosnia that have killed tens of thousands of people.

He faces an election challenge Sunday from Milan Panic, a Serb-born U.S. millionaire who has called for Serb compromises to end Bosnia's war.

At the United Nations on Friday, the 179-nation General Assembly approved a resolution urging the Security Council drop its arms embargo against Bosnia.

The General Assembly — voting 102-0, with 57 abstentions — also called on the council to consider enforcing a no-fly zone over Bosnia and setting up a war crimes tribunal.

Russia, China vow military, economic cooperation

BEIJING (AP) — China and Russia cemented improved relations on Friday with agreements on closer military and economic cooperation.

The agreements included a declaration that pledged neither country would enter into treaties that would hurt the other's sovereignty or security interests. Ideological differences, said the two countries, were not to stand in the way of good relations.

But President Boris Yeltsin of Russia, on the second day of a three-day visit, tried to allay any Western concerns over closer Russian-Chinese ties.

"Neither Russia nor China plans to revive the alliance of the 1930s," Yeltsin said. "There's no basis for envy."

The signing of the agreements was overshadowed by Yeltsin's announcement that Moscow and Washington would sign a nuclear arms reduction treaty at a summit in January.

The Russian president also surprised many with comments that China's otogenian leader, Deng Xiaoping, was sitting.

The White House denied that the weapons accord was wrapped up and said no summit plans had been made.

And an aide to Yeltsin later said the Russian president received no information from the Chinese on Deng's health and may simply have been speculating on why the Chinese leader did not meet him.

Moscow and Beijing went from close alliance in the 1950s to armed border conflicts and ideological clashes in the 1960s and 1970s.

Relations were normalized in 1989 by then-Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Privately Chinese leaders have denounced Yeltsin and Gorbachev as traitors to communism, but publicly they are pursuing good relations in hopes of buying more advanced weapons and technology from Russia.

Russia has sold $1 billion worth of arms to China this year and has said it plans to sell more, including defensive systems, fighter jets and anti-aircraft systems.

Memoranda on military technical cooperation and troop cuts along their 2,500-mile border spelled out principles and goals, but left the details to be worked out later. The two sides agreed that border troops should be reduced by the year 2000 to "the minimal level commensurate with normal, good-neighboring relations."

China and the former Soviet Union clashed over the border in 1969. Although only a tiny part is still disputed, both sides have large numbers of soldiers on the frontier.

Soldiers created tuna salad

It was the American soldiers of World War II who introduced tuna salad to Europe.

In medieval England, not even a lord was exempt from the death penalty. He did have one advantage, though. If sentenced, he could elect to be hanged with a rope made of silk.

Q. What were the "stubborn child laws" of Colonial America?

A. Local short-lived laws which gave some patrons the right to kill some disobedient children.

Don't know how much the equivalent of $400 really amounted to in William Shakespeare's day, but that's about what he earned per year at his peak.

"A surprisingly high number" of men in their 60s desert their wives. Exactly how many isn't clear, because the divided couple "always" divorce, so report nothing to the record keepers. As in all matrimonial breakups, odds run higher, if the wives seem to be self-sufficient. When men in that age group go away, it's most likely because they believe they didn't do well enough financially.

In a cemetery near Birmingham, England, are the remains of a traveling minstrel named Big Day (1700-1776). The rest of the inscription on his headstone reads: "Day is Done."

Q. What kind of clothing did a cowboy wear when working "drag"?

A. Same kind he wore when working "point." But duster. The "point" man on a drive was out in front of the herd. The "drag" man brought up the rear.

L.M. Boyd What's what?

Briefly

Mental patients' records, hearing open

BLACKFOOT — Court records and an upcoming hearing involving four State Hospital South mental patients will be open to the public in District Judge James Matsch's court.

Meanwhile, the magistrate who prosecuted two of the men says they should not go free.

Bingham County Public Defender David Parmenter had filed a motion to block public access. His clients are Steven Gafford, Kermit Nielson, John C. Henry and Harold Carstensen who seek release.

They were acquitted of separate, serious felonies in the late 1970s by pleading innocent by reason of insanity. Idaho repealed insanity as a defense in 1982. The men have been confined there for most of the last decade, court records show.

Shoshone sheriff will be tried again

COEUR D'ALENE — Shoshone County Sheriff Frank Crnkovich will be retried in Moscow on federal racketeering, obstructing justice and illegal gambling charges, U.S. District Edward Lodge ruled.

A mistrial was declared in the sheriff's public corruption trial in Wallace last month when a federal jury failed to reach a verdict. Lead Justice Department prosecutor Dan Butler immediately sought a retrial.

Butler also asked that the new trial, scheduled to start April 12, be moved to Boise because of the widespread news coverage in northern Idaho. But Lodge rejected the request, ruling that publicity had not been a problem in jury selection.

Sanctuary will take in pot-bellied pig

POCATELLO — Mike Hollomon's Vietnamese pot-bellied pig, Mollie, is headed for a Utah animal sanctuary after the Pocatello City Council banned exotic pets within city limits.

"It's sad and disappointing at the same time," Hollomon said. "We don't want to fight or push to get the city to change its decision. This is our only option."

Mollie will live in Best Friends Animal Sanctuary in Kanab, the largest of its kind in the country. It is financed with private donations and there is no charge to Mike and his wife, Patricia Jeffery.

The city council in November refused to pass such an ordinance. Hollomon was notified he had 30 days to relocate the animal.

Suspect faces trial in death of brother

SODA SPRINGS — A man charged with killing his brother at a Soda Springs trailer park has waived his preliminary hearing and will be bound over to fifth District Court.

Dale Summers, 43, is charged with first-degree murder. He waived his hearing on Friday. Summers, who is being held in Bingham County Jail, will enter his plea in January, although a date has not been set.

"It's sad and disappointing at the same time," Hollomon said. "We don't want to fight or push to get the city to change its decision. This is our only option."

The city council in November refused to pass such an ordinance. Hollomon was notified he had 30 days to relocate the animal.

Woman wins damages from uncle

LEWISTON — A farmer Lewiston woman has been awarded $83,120 in a civil judgment against an uncle she claims sexually abused her as a child.

Second District Judge Ida Leggett on Thursday awarded damages and medical costs to Riley Bradley, 19, who now lives in Tacoma, Wash.

Leggett approved damages of $3,120 for future medical costs; $40,000 for battery; and suffering; and $40,000 for emotional distress.

Westinghouse workers set record

IDAHO FALLS — Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Co. workers at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory set a record of sorts in September, and hope they can break it again.

For the first time the company can remember, employees at the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant put in 1 million work hours without losing any time to a work-related illness or injury.

That string was broken in September by a minor mishap, but now workers are on another tear of more than 700,000 safe hours on the job.

Madison teachers ratify contract plan

REXBURG — Madison County teachers have ratified a contract proposal, but the School Board now must agree to the pact.

Both district administrators and teachers refused to give any details following Thursday night's decision. The Rexburg newspaper reported the new contract offers about $310,000 in new money for salaries and health insurance.

2 suspected in death of white supremacist

SANDPOINT (AP) — Two men living at a white-supremacist compound have been arrested in the slaying of a man described as a supremacist skinhead.

Adam Elletto, 22, of Portland, Ore., and Timothy Biscope, 19, of Calgary, Alberta, made an initial appearance in 1st District Court Friday and were ordered held without bail for investigation of first-degree murder, Bonner County Under-sheriff Nick Krager said. A public defender was appointed to represent them.

The men were arrested Thursday in the death of Johnny Ray Shurbow, 29, of Taylor, Mich. A logger found the frozen body lying in snow Wednesday off a rural road about 10 miles south of Sandpoint.

Shurbow, who also lived at the Hayden Lake compound of the white-supremacist Aryan Nations, was shot once through the torso with a handgun, authorities said.

Authorities planned to take the body to Spokane, Wash., for an autopsy.

Detectives on Wednesday and Thursday used propane torches to melt snow near the body but found no evidence.

Investigators who served a search warrant Friday at a compound bunkhouse where Elletto and Biscope were staying recovered a handgun believed to have been used in the slaying, Krager said.

Shurbow apparently was killed Dec. 8 and his body left on the roadside nearly two weeks before it was discovered, Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson said Thursday.

Krager said authorities believe they know the motive in the slaying, but he would not discuss it.

Elletto and Biscope were arrested after they were taken from the Aryan Nations compound and interviewed for several hours at the Kootenai County sheriff's department, Robinson said.

Investigators were led to the suspects by another resident of the compound who reported to authorities Thursday that he had heard the men talk about the slaying.

"The people at the compound have cooperated 100 percent in the investigation," Robinson said.

Carl Franklin, chief of staff at the Aryan Nations, said Elletto and Biscope at the compound about two months ago and quickly joined as a member of the Church of Jesus Christ Christian (Aryan Nations), the organization's formal name.

Elletto lived with Biscope in the compound's bunkhouse where recent arrivals to the church and temporary guests stay, Franklin said. Biscope arrived a few weeks ago and was not a member of the organization, Franklin said.

Shurbow formed a supremacist group known as the National Anglo-Saxon Party in Michigan in 1983, said Danny Welch, senior investigator with Klawnsch, a Montgomery, Ala., group that monitors hate organizations.

Franklin said Shurbow arrived at the compound in November and was staying in a bunkhouse. He said the last time he was seen there was about a week ago.

"The left one day, but all his things were here so we figured he would come back," Franklin said. "This is kind of a shock, because he was such a happy guy."

Shurbow, who was estranged from his wife and five children, was given money by his older brother in November to travel by bus to northern Idaho, his father, Edward, Shurbow, said from Michigan Thursday.

He said his son may have gone to Idaho because he was intrigued by August's standoff between fugitive Randy Weaver and authorities.

Andrus will steer clear of daughter's race

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus indicated on Friday that he will steer clear of the Boise mayor's race should his daughter Tracy decide to enter the campaign.

Andrus Keiser

"The best thing I can do for that young woman is to stay clear of her way," Andrus said.

The governor expressed hope that the political opposition he has encountered a generation in public life would not work against his daughter, 36, a downtown Boise businesswoman.

Since it is a nonpartisan office, Andrus said he wanted to "give her the opportunity to sink or swim without me on her back."

The office will open next month when incumbent Dirk Kempthorne resigns to take his seat in the U.S. Senate.

City Council members Brent Coles and Sara Baker have both indicated they want to be appointed Kempthorne's successor for the full year of his term.

But so far, only fired Boise State University President John Keiser has formally announced his candidacy in next November's election for a full four-year term.

In announcing for the office, Keiser, 56, said the keystone of his campaign will be making Boise a national model by charting a course of quality growth. He urged serious consideration of light-rail mass transit in Boise and consolidation of some city and Ada County services.

"I am not anti-growth; I am not pro-growth," Keiser said. "What I am is for quality growth in a managed fashion."

The state Board of Education fired Keiser 15 months ago after 13 years as the president of Boise State, claiming he failed to consult them on important matters. His dismissal prompted strong protests from local supporters.

In deciding to run for mayor in next November's election, Keiser said he would withdraw as a finalist for the presidency of two universities in the Midwest.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — In an unprecedented move, the U.S. Conference of Mayors decided to boycott Colorado Springs and shift its annual convention to another city in June to protest Amendment 2.

Citing its past support of gay rights and a fear that several big-city mayors wouldn't attend the convention, the executive committee of the mayors group voted Thursday overwhelmingly against meeting anywhere in Colorado as long as Amendment 2 remains part of the state's constitution.

The decision heightens the controversy over Amendment 2, which prohibits protecting gays from discrimination based on sexual orientation. State voters approved it Nov. 3 by a 53 percent to 47 percent margin.

Opponents say the decision creates more momentum for a national boycott of Colorado and a repeal of Amendment 2. Supporters complained the mayors were hypocrites for passing judgment on Colorado while many cities and states have no laws to protect gays.

The mayors group is the most influential among the handful of organizations that have canceled meetings in Colorado. The loss to Colorado Springs will be one of prestige, not just money. The group is composed of mayors from cities with populations of 30,000 or more.

Such conventions seldom result in sweeping urban policy changes, but they do attract many big-city mayors and put the host city in a media spotlight.

The convention, scheduled for June 18-23, would have brought more than $1 million worth of media coverage to the Pikes Peak region and $600,000 worth of business from up to 1,500 mayors and their staffers, say tourism officials.

Utah family off to help U.S. airlift

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Jack and Sally Westover and their son, Rex, all members of the Utah Guard's 151st Air Refueling Group, have departed for Spain, where they will aid the Somali relief operation.

The Salt-Lake-City residents learned Thursday that they would be among 20 members of the Guard group going to help relieve the first wave of 151st members deployed in Operation Restore Hope.

Sixty group members were sent to a U.S. base in southern Spain two weeks ago to help in the delivery of troops, supplies, equipment and food to Somalia. All are serving voluntarily.

About 25 are scheduled to return to Utah Saturday. Another 35 will come back the day after Christmas, said Col. Gordon Hill, 151st commander.

Ms. Westover said she volunteered for the second wave so other unit members wouldn't have to spend Christmas Day 30,000 feet in the air somewhere over the Mediterranean. Then 151st commanders picked her son and husband to go, too.

"The Christmas season is a hard time to leave," she said. "But it'll be good to have these two guys with me."

"And it's a worthy cause," said Westover.

While at the Spanish base near Moron, crews work 12 hours per day, refueling jets in the airborne convoy between the United States and the east African nation.

Col. Joseph Simeone, commander of the KC135 Tanker Task Force in Spain, said enough 151st members have volunteered for duty that the average stay overseas will probably be two or three weeks.

Small quake rattles central Utah region

HELPER, Utah (AP) — The University of Utah Seismograph Stations reported a small earthquake near Helper in central Utah.

Seismologist Sue Nava said the tremor, which measured 3.4 on the Richter scale, occurred at 3:50 a.m. MST Friday. Its epicenter, she said, was five miles northwest of Helper in an active coal mining and seismic region.

"This morning's shock is not unusual," she said.

There were no reports of injuries or damage.

Hansen will ask for new trial

The Associated Press

BOISE — The attorney for former Idaho congressman George Hansen will ask for a new trial or acquittal, despite a jury's ruling last week that he and an associate were guilty of bank fraud.

Boise attorney John Runft said Friday he's been given until Jan. 20 to file post-trial motions with U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge. After Lodge rules on them, Runft will have 10 days to appeal.

Hansen, 62, and business associate John Scoresby, 45, Idaho Falls, were convicted last week on 45 counts of bank fraud. The jury found them innocent on two other counts, and Lodge earlier dropped two counts from what originally was a 49-count grand jury indictment.

Pre-sentence investigations are being prepared for both men for sentencing set for March 1. Each of the 45 counts carries a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison and a $1 million fine.

Runft said he will ask Lodge to exonerate Hansen, despite the jury's unanimous decision, or for a new trial based on insufficient evidence or testimony to substantiate the verdict.

The jury verdicts came Dec. 11 after a two-week trial. Jurors sent word with a court clerk after the trial that they did not want to talk to reporters.

Prosecutors alleged that Hansen, who served seven terms as 2nd District congressman, and Scoresby, who was his eastern Idaho field representative, engaged in a massive check-kiting scheme that eventually left Bank of Commerce, Idaho Falls, holding $2.1 million in bad checks.

However, two rebuttal witnesses may have cemented the convictions. Keith Cornelison and Clyde Haws, both eastern Idaho farmers, testified that Hansen borrowed money from them in 1991, after he signed a consent agreement with the state Department of Finance to stop such activities.

Improvements at lake may be unauthorized

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation crews may have made unauthorized changes to Crystal Springs Lake, according to an Idaho Department of Water Resources official.

Under state law, alterations to stream or lake banks require a special permit. If the area is a wetland, changes would require a permit from the Army Corps of Engineers.

Parks and Recreation Department employees apparently removed vegetation along the shore of the small lake, which is located southeast of Wendell, and replaced it with gravel without a required permit, said Terry Blau of the Twin Falls office of the Water Resources Department.

Officials from several state and federal agencies will meet Monday to review the situation and to determine what needs to be done to remedy the situation, Blau said.

Larry Stevens, southern regional manager of the Parks and Recreation Department, said about 300 feet of bank was cleared of brush to improve access for fishing.

"If we've made a mistake, we'll get the crews down there and fix it," Stevens said.

The main landfill will also be open from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. on New Year's Eve and on Saturday, Jan. 2, but will close on New Year's Day.

The Buhl and Murtaugh facilities will be open on Thursday, Dec. 31, but will close Jan. 1-2.

All of the county's landfills will be closed on Dec. 27 and Jan. 3.

'Dear Santa ...'

Flood of letters for North Pole keeps local elves scampering

By Terrell Williams

Times-News correspondent

Dear Santa letters are arriving daily at post offices everywhere, and volunteers all over the Magic Valley are scurrying to answer them.

In Gooding, so many letters arrive at the post office that a special letter box has been designed for a child's reach.

The letters dropped into the red and green "North Pole" box are forwarded to members of the local Optimist and Jaycees clubs.

Gooding postmaster Carl Sabronski said there are 40 to 100 letters to Santa received in Gooding every year. The replies written by elf helpers are mailed back to the children with a "North Pole" cancellation stamp, including Santa's arctic zip code of 00000.

This year, teachers and their students across the Magic Valley are pitching in with answering letters, along with others who search out children in special need.

In Wendell, postmaster Louis German said the letters are given to the high school, where students write replies, and needy children are put on the list to receive baskets of gifts and food.

In Buhl, postmaster Tom Moore gives Santa's mail to Cal Woods, who used to own a local grocery store and, over the years, has made it his tradition to help grant children's written requests.

"Cal takes care of the needy kids," Moore said.

In several other cities, postal workers themselves pen replies to the little ones. Kimberly postmaster Ted McNeil handles the task for his city.

In Shoshone, Michelle Ross and her co-workers have a computerized form letter to fill in the blanks with appropriate answers. Hagerman and Richfield mail workers also act as Santa's elves.

"I try not to say that they will get what they ask for, in case they don't," Richfield postmaster Becky Sage said. "I'd hate to write anything in there so they'd be discouraged. Usually, I just say, 'Be good.'"

At the Twin Falls post office, acting supervisor Ryan Moody said letters to Santa are sent to Boise, where they are answered by volunteers. Castleford and Hansen letters also are forwarded to Boise.

In Hailey, Kathleen Eder said she turns Santa's mail over to high school teacher Mike Healy, who lets his advanced writing class practice their skills.

Shoshone class brings good tidings to seniors

By Suzanne Huxhold

Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — While other Magic Valley teenagers are dreaming of CD players and ski weekends for Christmas, Amy Hullett and Jeremy Higley are making seasonal dreams come true for a group of Shoshone senior citizens.

Amy, Jeremy and five other Shoshone High School students spent most of last week preparing for the senior citizens tea, planning entertainment, food and gift baskets as part of their Community Service class Christmas project. And as the seniors gathered in the cozy Shoshone High School cafeteria to hear Christmas music and share in homemade cookies and punch, their hard work didn't go unnoticed.

"They look so nice, don't they," said Toyshie Tanaka, as she nibbled on cheese and crackers.

"You can ask me because I'm probably the oldest one here," said Gladys Shaw, 87. "We do appreciate everything this Community Service club does for us."

Shoshone Principal Sue Ringquist teaches the Community Service class, which debuted last year and continues to be popular among upperclassmen.

Class projects this year include tutoring for underclassmen, a Big Sister project and a Shoshone city audit, where students interview businesses and community members to see how things are shaping up in this former railroad town.

Ringquist said giving to the community helps the kids in her class learn the true meaning of Christmas.

"The Community Service program has made such a difference in the lives of some of these kids," Ringquist said. "It really has a positive effect."

The effect is evident indeed, as three senior boys, festooned in holly and red carnation boutonnières stand at the entrance to the school, gently escorting a group of women down the stairs into the brightly decorated cafeteria.

And as each golden girl is shown to her seat and offered a plate of goodies and a cup of coffee, young hands reach out to old, young voices laugh at old jokes.

"Did you make these?" an older lady teased Jeremy as she filled her plate.

"No, I'm waiting to find someone who'll cook for me," Jeremy answered, laughing. "I don't care what she looks like, if she can cook, she's mine."

"Are you getting married, honey?" another woman asked.

"Goodness no," her friend answered, shaking her head and smiling. "He's still in high school for heavens sake."

Ringquist recently applied for and received a $7,000 federal community service grant which funds the community projects, and which paid for the coffee, fruit baskets and decorations for the senior citizens tea. She declares though, that more than money went into this event.

"A community service group should really center around the needs of a community, and ours consists of about 33 percent senior citizens over the age of 65," Ringquist said. "We want to show our appreciation of them and help the students see them as valuable people."

Scientist: Predatory brown trout may harm Silver Creek rainbows

The Associated Press

POCAHELLO — Silver Creek in Blaine County is considered one of the state's premier trout streams.

But Idaho State University researchers fear voracious brown trout might be wiping out the rainbows.

"Brown trout are predators, feeding on other fish," said Jack Griffith, ISU fish expert. "Since Silver Creek does not have many larger fish such as minnows, suckers and sculpin, we feel they may be feeding on other fish popular with fishermen."

A Michigan study of brown trout shows they are more likely to feed on trout species other than their own. "Brown trout also live longer than most fish," Griffith said. "A rainbow might live five to six years but a brown trout can live more than 10 years."

Boisean Ed Hedges this summer caught a 20-pound brown in the Boise River near the Boise State University campus. Fish experts estimated it was at least 18 years old.

Brown trout are not native to Silver Creek, or even the United States.

"They are a recent import to Idaho, brought into the U.S. in the 1830s and introduced in Idaho in the 1890s. The trout didn't become established in Idaho until the 1940s, and were found in lower Silver Creek in the late 1970s," Griffith said.

Idaho last in election check-offs

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Idahoans may be showing their growing disgust with politics in the loudest and clearest of all forms: their pocketbooks.

Fewer and fewer taxpayers are marking the $1 check-off on tax forms to contribute to presidential elections.

And Idahoans rank at the very bottom of the list of states ranked by the percentage of taxpayers who check that box on their IRS returns. Only 9 percent of Idaho taxpayers deducted the dollar to federal matching funds for the presidential campaigns.

"If the cash crunch continues, the public fund will be severely depleted by 1996, Federal Election Commission officials said at a press conference.

"The system we have grown used to is in jeopardy," said Joan D. Aikens, FEC chairman.

This year, which was calculated through October, barely 19 percent of all American taxpayers marked the $1 check-off, earmarking $27 million to the fund that

Jerome schools seek means of paying unexpected fee

By H.R. Weikel

Times-News correspondent

JEROME — School District officials aren't happy with an unexpected $9,520 landfill fee and have considered raising lunch fees or taxes to pay for it.

"We expected an increase and put $4,000 in our budget, but you've quadrupled the rate," Mike Gibson, school business manager, told Jerome County commissioners this week. "We just don't have that kind of money." Last year, the district paid $2,200.

School officials talked about raising the price of meals, textbooks and taxes to bring in the needed money, although some trustees voted against the idea.

"For some of these kids, the meals they get at school are the only meals they get all day," Trustee Ben Neff said. "And we can't go out and raise the meals a nickel a student and raise $7,000. When we start tapping our budget for something like the landfill, we're taking away from education. We'd have to not buy textbooks and computers."

Gibson told the commissioners he had trouble using tax dollars meant for education on landfill costs.

He also challenged the propriety of assessing the landfill fee on a public entity, although Commissioner Carl Montgomery argued the point.

"You pay for utility functions like water, garbage pickup," he said. "Are you saying the city shouldn't charge you for these?"

Gibson and Neff proposed raising the cost of all other county property owners, though Montgomery said such a system would be unfair.

switch that burden to someone else, it doesn't seem fair," Commissioner Veronica Lierman said.

Montgomery said Jerome County needed to come up with $600,000 to pay for its share of the new landfill. He said it would cost another $2 million to close the Jerome County landfill in October of next year.

With about 4,800 residential properties paying $80 each and about 600 commercial or other businesses paying $160 each, about $540,000 would be raised, Montgomery said.

School officials left the commissioners' meeting with no solution to their funding problem.

Most snowpacks about normal

BOISE (AP) — Snowstorms continue to cross into Idaho, but state officials caution the precipitation to date is far from reversing the long-running drought. Three months into the water year, Idaho has a spotty set of snow, moisture and reservoir levels, the state Water Supply Committee said Friday in its first report for the season.

Most snowpacks around the state are nearly normal. But the reservoirs remain nearly empty, with some at record low levels, said Hal Anderson, committee spokesman. "Some are the figures are really encouraging but others still give us concern. Last year at this time, we were looking good, then it just stopped snowing and ended up being a terrible water year," he said.

Snowpacks in Idaho's six major river basins are about 80 to 90 percent of average, according to the Soil Conservation Service's automated monitoring sites. The statewide average for snowpack stands at 96 percent of normal, while the moisture level is 88 percent. Individual basin snowpacks range from 162 percent of the norm in the Southern Snake River Basin to 82 percent in the Snake River and Upper Snake drainages.

Trout

Continued from B1 They mysteriously appeared in upper portions of creek in 1981. That led Griffith and other researchers to set out recently in a rubber raft in the calm waters of Silver Creek. They catch, study and then release the fish they find. "These fish are more easily captured at night, the recent work at Silver Creek started at 7 p.m. and ended at midnight. The group slowly floated downstream, using electricly to stun fish through a metal sphere connected to a portable generator. It was effective for about 20 feet around the boat. Stunned fish were easily netted and when a full cooler of fish piled up, the group pulled to the bank and collected data. Tags were attached to a few large brown trout. Fishermen here are encouraged to report to Griffith at Idaho State if they catch a brown trout. Researchers have been using a variety of ways to find out what the browns have been eating without killing the fish. ISU graduate student Rick Wilkinson, who is part of the research project, will observe interaction between brown trout and other fish next summer by snorkeling in the creek. Extra care has been taken to preserve the fish. "This is a concern because we are dealing with large fish, it takes about 15 to 20 years old, it takes a long time to grow a brown trout," Wilkinson said. The two-year research project is adding to studies Griffith conducted in the same area five years ago. The Nature Conservancy, which owns the 840-acre Silver Creek Preserve, is funding the research for $31,000.

Election

Continued from B1 pays for both party conventions, provides matching funds for primary candidates and gives grants to the party nominees in the general election.

Last year, 20 percent of all taxpayers marked the check-off, providing $32 million for the fund according to FEC records.

Unless Congress agrees to appropriate money or agrees to raise the amount on tax forms from $1 to $2.50 or $3, FEC officials said no public funds will be available to primary candidates in 1996 and candidates in the general election will receive fewer dollars than President Bush and Gov. Bill Clinton did this year.

The fund drying up "could edge, presumably, the way people run for president," said Bob Biersack, FEC statistician, adding that candidates will have to spend more time fund-raising.

"Some people might even decide not to run."

The $1 check-off of tax forms was one of several sweeping post-Watergate reforms to campaign financing. The idea behind publicly financing campaigns, which Republicans have long opposed, was to free candidates from constant fund-raising and the influence of large donors.

Unlike in the Watergate years, when individuals could give millions of dollars to candidates, Congress also limited to $2,000 the amount individuals could donate to a candidate, $1,000 for primary and $1,000 for general elections. The ceiling is $5,000 for interest groups.

Taxpayers in Idaho fell to the bottom in the ranking of campaign generosity in this form. The nine percent of all Idaho taxpayers who agreed to the $1 check-off sent $53,000 to the fund this year, a drop of $7,000 from last year.

The state joined Oregon, Montana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Alabama and Kentucky in the survey's lower ranks, where no more than 10 percent of all filers in each state marked the $1 check-off.

New York, New Jersey, Hawaii and Connecticut were the only states where about one-fourth of all taxpayers checked the $1 box. Hawaii ranked first in both 1991 and 1992, the only years that state-by-state information is available, with 32 percent of all taxpayers agreeing to publicly finance presidential elections.

FEC officials said they don't know why more taxpayers are shunning the $1 check-off. Some taxpayers don't understand that the check-off does not affect how much they pay — $1 more or less in taxes — but that checking the box diverts $1 from the taxes they pay to the general fund into the presidential fund.

FEC officials said they also do not understand why some states give more than others.

"Urban areas appear to check off more than rural areas, so it may be that more information is available or that there's a lot more coverage of campaigns," Biersack said. "But the pattern of decline is fairly consistent over time. I don't think geography explains that."

And many taxpayers, he said, simply do not remember Watergate.

Letters

Continued from B1 Healy said he tries to teach his students how to write a good response letter. "I tell them they are not Santa, but they are one of Santa's elves," Healy explained. "They personalize the letters with magic markers and colored sprinkles, whatever suits their fancy."

The teacher said his students have to spell everything correctly, and be careful not to promise anything in their letters.

"They say, 'Santa is busy; there's a lot of kids that want a lot of things, and so he will do his best to get you GI Joe or doll or whatever, but don't be disappointed if it doesn't happen. Enjoy Christmas, and we're working on a response letter," Healy said.

Each reply from the writing class is addressed to the child and mailed back.

Sometimes, Healy said, a child's letter has only a first name and no address, so the reply is taken to the post office where it is put on display for a parent to find for the child.

"Santa doesn't know everything," Healy said.

Donations fill coffers of Christmas Council

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Almost 500 boxes await needy families today as the Mini-Cassia Christmas Council begins its distribution of goods.

"We've had overwhelming support," said Council President-elect Renee Mai.

Donations were down during the first part of the Council's drive, she said, but when word got out that more items were needed, "my phone rang off the hook for three days."

The council's goal is to provide all the needy families in the area with a Christmas meal and presents.

Today's distribution for families which have been signed up by various organizations will take place at the Burley armory from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Each box will contain a meat certificate, 10 pounds of potatoes, peanuts, dried beans, rice, ingredients for a pie or cake, and other items.

In other words, "everything to make a Christmas dinner," Mai said. Kraft USA was a recent donor of supplies to the Christmas Council.

giving 20 cases of macaroni and cheese and a case of caramels. The contribution was a big help in allowing the group to put together 473 boxes, Mai said.

Two presents will also be included for each family member.

Because there always seems to be a lack of gift donations for men, the Christmas Council bought 171 pairs of men's socks and some boxes of chocolates. Purchases were made possible by the cash donations given to the organization.

Besides helping these needy families, the council has assisted with other projects.

A Rupert family whose home burned down recently have been assisted by the council and various area organizations and businesses.

The six children in the family ranged from two-months to a 10-year-old girl, Mai said.

Mai said she's also trying to help a woman who has two children.

"They are basically homeless, and we are trying to find a place for her to live," she said. She is wanting to gather cash donations for the effort.

Helping the needy has been a "real boost," Mai said. Many people from both counties participated.

Holiday sales boom for variety of goods

By James Pritchard
Mini-Cassia News Service

Toys, Tater Twisters and trustworthiness are among what Mini-Cassia residents are buying during this gift-giving season.

Chuck Hoenes, manager of the K mart store in Burley, says he can't stock enough spangly Nerf toys. Old favorites like Nerf bow-and-arrow sets are selling out as soon as they arrive, he says.

Another children's favorite for many years, Lego building blocks, are also moving quickly, Hoenes says.

"We did extremely well with these this year," he says.

Older children and adults might expect to see other games under the Christmas tree on Friday.

Board games by Milton Bradley, Parker Brothers and others are doing well, Hoenes says, as is Jenga, a game of nerves in which players try to keep from tumbling a tower of wooden blocks.

Jigsaw puzzles, a traditional gift, are selling briskly at K mart, as are Super Nintendo systems. Since last season, the 16-bit video game units, a more technologically advanced version of the original Nintendo system, have dropped in price nationally from $200 to about $140, Hoenes says.

At Wal-Mart, store manager Larry Shipp says dolls, trolls and bicycles are moving out the doors as parents wrap up shopping for their children.

The most successful department in the entire store, however, has been electronics, Shipp says. Televisions are being purchased "like they're going out of style," as are VCRs.

Wal-Mart's electronics department has had tremendous success with compact discs and cassettes, he says, especially Spanish recordings, which the store recently started carrying.

Shoppers are also buying men's and women's sweaters and sweat-pants, and underwear for all ages.

"We're really pleased with the way this town has accepted us" since the 100,000-square-foot Burley unit opened in November, Shipp says.

At the Ace Hardware store in Rupert, toys stocked for the holiday season are doing "pretty well," manager Quinn Montague says, as are collectible porcelain buildings and figures.

Sales for housewares in general are strong as are such varied items as touch lamps and juicers, Montague says.

Wanda Couch of Ace Hardware in Burley says Tater-Twisters, which make curly-Q potatoes for French frying, and Souketers, which grill sandwiches and other treats, are among the store's best-selling kitchen appliances.

Also popular this year, Couch says, are bread-making machines, toasters and coffee makers.

At Roper's Rupert store, manager Russ Holland says Christmas sales there of virtually all clothing is strong. Selling particularly well are ski parkas by Columbia and Pendleton, woolen coats and shirts; Roper's is also having success with its insulated, cold-weather footwear.

"His customers are looking for more durable goods this year, Holland says.

"It's quality that's selling," he says. "They want something that's going to last, brand names that they trust."

LaRocco said the Clinton transition is analyzing the operation, both in terms of the way it has been run and whether it should be under the Department of Energy.

"What the governor is saying is that if you are going to fill this position, that Richard Stallings is a very capable of doing it," LaRocco said.

As the only Democrat in the Idaho congressional delegation, LaRocco will come up with nominations for the federal positions filed by the president. He said they will be Idaho residents.

LaRocco said he has applications from 15 people for an upcoming federal judge appointment, and about 10 each for U.S. attorney and U.S. marshal.

LaRocco: Make Stallings waste negotiator

BOISE (AP) — Lame duck Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings would be a good choice to head the federal nuclear waste negotiation office, Rep. LaRocco says, if the agency is continued.

"If it's kept, I think Richard Stallings would be an excellent candidate for that job," LaRocco said Friday. He was interviewed for the "Viewpoint" television program to be aired on Sunday.

Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus also supports Stallings, who lost to Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne in Idaho's U.S. Senate race last month.

Both acknowledged there's some inconsistency in the fact Democrats criticized the office as a waste under the direction of Republican David Leroy, but now are pushing Stallings to head it.

When asked about the inconsistency, Andrus said, "You could say that with a certain amount of accuracy."

The Boise-based agency has a budget of $2.5 billion per year. Legation and Pendleton woolen coats and shirts; Roper's is also having success with its insulated, cold-weather footwear.

"I think that seems like a full-time salary to me," LaRocco said. "I

Andrus wants panel on federal compliance

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus is proposing a special task force of governors to develop a state strategy for bringing federal facilities into compliance with state environmental laws governing mixed wastes.

Andrus said on Friday that the task force would be composed of at least the governors of the 10 states, including Idaho, where the largest waste-generating federal facilities are located, and he said the governors of the other half dozen states with smaller federal operations would also be asked to participate.

The governor, who has been in the forefront of the campaign to force federal action on nuclear waste disposal and federal compliance with state waste management laws, said the task force was the result of discussions with the governors earlier this month in Denver.

And in a letter, Andrus asked Colorado Gov. Roy Romer, chairman of the National Governors' Association, to support the effort and authorize association staff members to begin negotiations with the Energy Department on the environmental compliance strategy.

Under the Federal Facilities Compliance Act approved earlier this year with the strong backing of the nation's governors, states have significant power to force government agencies to abide by their environmental laws on wastes that are a mixture of hazardous and radioactive materials.

But Andrus said that the governor proposed to replace the top-down approach contemplated by the law for developing an implementing strategy with a bottom-up approach in which site-specific plans would be drawn up simultaneously with — if not before — any national plan.

The Energy Department has agreed to finance the state effort.

Inquest continues despite death of suspect

PAYETTE (AP) — Although the suspect died in a shooting at the Payette County Courthouse, authorities continue their investigation into allegations — Bobbie Kessler, raped and sexually abused minors.

Kessler, a reserve police officer with training in martial arts, died Monday night at the courthouse when law enforcement officers tried to arrest him.

County Prosecutor Bruce Birch said the case probably is moot because Kessler died. He faced three counts of lewd behavior with a minor, two counts of statutory rape and two counts of forcible rape.

"No arrest was made," Birch said. "If the file on the court, I'm sure we'll be closed."

Kessler was reportedly called to the courthouse to perform his duties as a police officer, but county authorities and Idaho State Police were there to arrest him. Kessler had a handgun and refused to surrender, dying in a hail of gunfire.

The rapes allegedly occurred "back over a period of time," Birch said. Four incidents reportedly Nov. 7-10.

Kessler had served as a Green Beret in the Army, Sheriff Bob Barowsky said that was considered when Kessler's arrest was being contemplated.

"I believe" — and "I want" involved in all of the planning — that to my knowledge, every aspect of how to handle this situation, dealing with man with his expertise in the martial arts and his proficiency with weapons, was well thought out."

Matt Kessler, Bobbie Kessler's son and a county jailer, expressed concern that his father's body was left at the scene of the shooting in the sheriff's office for a period of about eight hours.

"Anytime, there's deadly force used by a police department, every expert we know of is summoned," Barowsky answered. "In a normal case, the body may have been moved much a little sooner, but in a police probe, there's a little bit more time delay with the extensive investigation."

Cloud-seeding may miss this wave of storm systems

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A cloud-seeding project targeted for the Upper Snake River drainage has been postponed and that has Bingham County Commissioner Dale Arave worried it will miss the current storms through Idaho.

Bingham teamed up with other counties, cities and agencies last month to purchase the services of a Utah cloud-seeding company. The project was slated to begin Dec. 15, but now has been pushed back to Jan. 1.

The county kicked in $6,300 and the city of Blackfoot contributed $1,000 to the effort. Other counties chipped in as well and $12,500 was collected from the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

The $12,500 was half of $25,000 designated by the department for county-sponsored cloud-seeding projects. Boise-area counties were given the other half.

Arave is unhappy with the late start because December has been a stormy month and opportunities have been missed. Clouds miss the chemical "seeds" blown into the air by burners.

Now the project will run from Jan. 1 to the end of April. Towards the end of April rain usually falls instead of snow.

"We're having good storms right now and we wanted to target storms up until the middle of April, not the end," Arave said. "We don't want them to just run the propane burners to use up our money."

Spirit of season shouldn't give way to commercialism

By George W. Conell The Associated Press

Ever since its beginnings, Christmas has been a mixture of the holy and the gaudy, the mucus and reverent, with accompanying discord about it. That sort of combination, and disturbance over it, marks the current season.

The streets and stores swarm, the packages pile up, bills accumulate and holiday travel clogs the terminals and airways, while almost everywhere the air throbs with tooting horns, bells and jingles.

For far too long we have witnessed the spirit yield to the commercial, with the spirit of Christmas reduced to a carnival of mass marketing, said a coalition of 25 Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders.

Their December date simply was taken over to commemorate Jesus' birth, since its exact date isn't known. Consequently, the fusion of the sacred and profane characterized the celebration from the start.

The Protestant-Catholic coalition, in protesting what was termed present-day "excessive commercialization of Christmas," said: "Massive and alluring advertising crusades have waged war on the essential meaning of the spiritual life, fostering the belief that the marketplace can fulfill our highest aspirations."

Many people, "with earnest intentions," are driven into "obsessive spending as a way to fill the spiritual vacuum left by an overconsumptive society," the statement added.

The religious leaders, including numerous bishops and various denominational heads, urged giving of simple, personal and thoughtful gifts based on need rather than impressiveness.

Christians should resist the idea that "to be happy is to buy things," implying "human worth is wrapped up in personal and material consumption," Parham said, adding: "The Peace Child's message is that all God's children have value because of who they are and whose they are."

On Christmas, accept gifts from God

Not many days from now, Christmas morning will arrive, and with it the laughter and excitement of children. Chances are, they've slept little the night before and yet find themselves rested enough to arise quite early on this special day.

Fred Barton
Clergy's corner

Rubbing their eyes and forgetting the usual combing of hair and brushing of teeth, they typically burst in upon unsuspecting parents who are less than enthusiastic about being awakened at the crack of dawn. Everyone is quickly ushered into the family room and the attention turns to the brightly wrapped packages under the tree.

Excitement builds as each gift is passed to the proper child and sounds of ripping paper fill the air. Then the moment of truth — with mouths agape, the child views the treasure for the very first time! The wonder, the joy, the pride and the tenderness of this moment are, for the child, the very heart of Christmas.

As an adult poring over the meaning of Christmas, I come with a somewhat different orientation than the expectant child. I think of a tiny baby born years and years ago in a far away place called Bethlehem. They called him Jesus. God in human flesh. By far the most precious gift ever, given to sinful men!

As I think on the theme of Christmas morning around the Christmas tree, I quickly draw a spiritual parallel. I envision spiritual gifts that God himself has wrapped and placed beneath his tree with the names of every one of us upon them. The largest and most brightly wrapped gift is the gift of "Salvation," but there are many others.

"There's one in beautiful white paper marked 'Baptism in the Holy Spirit.' Another package by its shape gives away the fact that it is a book; it's labeled "Holy Bible." A tall package with silver paper reads "Gifts of the Holy Spirit." I see many other gifts under God's tree, too numerous to mention.

Children never leave any gifts unopened. They have an intense desire to receive all that is intended for them. Shouldn't we adults have that same intense desire to receive all God intends for us? Would this Christmas perhaps be a good time to unwrap some gifts which have been lying unopened far too long?

How 'Silent Night' came to be

By Paul Hertelendy
Knight-Ridder News Service

It's not the divas and stars and headliners who make Christmas a unique feast. It's the rank outsiders. The nobodies. The people of modest talents rising to the occasion, like a flash, making that one Christmas unforgettable before receding back into the crowd.

However briefly, the spirit of the season has a way of evoking the best in all of us.

Consider Josef Mohr, an obscure Austrian priest whose 200th birthday is celebrated this year. Throughout his career, he was shuttled from one humble parish to another, never making a name for himself, never rising to higher positions in the church.

His moment of greatness was brief as a flash of lightning when in 1818 the 26-year-old showed a five-stanza Christmas poem to the church organist, Franz Xavier Gruber. Both men were still in their late 20s, and the village of Oberdorf was not exactly on a musical plane with nearby Salzburg or far-off Vienna.

Gruber had a crisis of his own. It was Dec. 24, and the church's pipe organ had broken down. Folk legend contends to this day it was because of a tiny mouse nibbling the leather bellows.

Gruber took out pipes, tried to patch up the bellows, worked at some valves — to no avail. The organ was down, and nothing could get it going for the evening's long-awaited candlelight services.

In Oberdorf, it was not a matter of this church or that church. There was a village church, a village priest (Mohr), a congregation. No service, and the villagers would have nowhere to go.

Christmas wouldn't be Christmas. So Gruber wrote out an unadorned tune to fit the lyrics. He worked out a guitar accompaniment to stand in for the organ. And he scored it for two solo voices plus chorus.

Stand up and fight, only with good reason

Look, I don't want you to get the idea that I was a wimp or anything. I just didn't believe in fighting. Which sort of made my friend, Albert, nervous.

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

"I don't know why you're afraid of fight," Albert said after I pinned him — again — during one of our regular Indian wrestling matches (and no, that isn't a racist slur; Albert was Navajo, so it really was a neutral term, Native American wrestling). "You're the biggest guy in our school. I don't think anybody could beat you."

Chris could, I bet, I said. "And Chuck. I wouldn't want to fight Chuck either."

"Yeah, but Chuck's your friend, Albert argued. "You wouldn't have to fight him. Chris is the only one you'd have to worry about, and I think you could take him if you could get him down on the ground and sit on him."

"I don't know," I said. "I don't like Chris, but I don't have a reason to fight him."

"Who needs a reason? Fight him because he's a creep."

Albert had a point there. Of course, in retrospect, I think I can see why Chris was the way he was — you know, the only thing that mattered was what he saw and understood. And whenever we looked at Chris, we saw and understood that he was a creep. But somehow, that wasn't enough for me. At least, it wasn't enough to risk the possible pain and humiliation of fighting him.

"OK, let's say I fight him and beat him," I said. "Chris will still be a creep. Only now he'll be mad. I don't think that's going to help any."

"Maybe not," Albert said, "but at least he'll know you're tougher."

And that's what it always boiled down to: who's tougher? I guess that's important to some boys. But it wasn't important to me. I don't know why. It just seemed like a stupid reason to get your nose bloody, you know what I mean? The way I saw it, even if Chris was tougher than me — so what? I didn't care. Which is why I never got around to fighting Chris. In fact, I made the way through grade school without fighting anyone.

Well, OK — almost.

Albert and I were walking home from school on the very last day of sixth grade when we saw David pushing around a third-grader, who was why. It just seemed like a stupid reason to get your nose bloody, you know what I mean? The way I saw it, even if Chris was tougher than me — so what? I didn't care. Which is why I never got around to fighting Chris. In fact, I made the way through grade school without fighting anyone.

was taking out his frustrations on someone half his size. But I didn't stop to think about the sociological implications of what David was doing; I just reacted — quickly and physically.

It wasn't much of a fight, really. Although we were the same age, I had about the same size advantage over David as he had over the third-grader. I pushed him off the smaller boy and pushed David to the ground. He stood up and I pushed him down again.

He stood up again and I pushed him down again. This process was repeated several times until David finally got the point. He stayed on the ground and told me to leave him alone.

"OK," I said. "But if I ever catch you picking on little kids again, I'll ..."

I didn't even have to finish the threat. He understood.

"I thought you didn't believe in fighting," Albert said as we walked away.

"I don't," I said. "But I don't believe in letting little kids get picked on either. And I guess I don't believe in that more than I don't believe in fighting."

I still feel that way — about fighting and about helping defenseless people. While I hate conflict, it's unfortunately true that we live in a world where you have to be prepared to take a stand from time to time — physically and otherwise. Don't get me wrong — I'm not talking about going after people just because you don't like them or forcing your will upon others when they happen to disagree with you. What I'm talking about here is helping people — especially those who are incapable of helping themselves.

Of course, we all have our own ideas about when and how far that help should be extended. History is filled with examples of well-intentioned abuses of power. But when people are starving, something has to be done — even if that includes a little judicious muscle flexing here and there.

It seems to me that if we are truly going to be a civilized people, these are the kinds of things upon which we have to take a stand — not because we are powerful or because we want to prove that we're tougher than everyone else.

But because it is simply the right thing to do.

Letters

Christianity defined

This is in reply to the lady from Burley who wrote the letter published in The Times-News Nov. 28. She questioned whether Latter-day Saints are Christians.

I would like to give you my definition of a Christian. To me, anyone who testifies that Jesus is the Christ, the Messiah, the Son of God and our Savior and Redeemer is a Christian. A Christian is one who looks like the teachings and commandments of Christ.

Anyone who bashes anyone else because of their religion, race or ethnic origin and who bears false witness about another's beliefs couldn't hardly call themselves Christian.

the Doctrine and Covenants, the Pearl of Great Price and the Bible insofar as it is translated correctly.

The reader should keep in mind that the two definitions of Christian are different. Each side has a different Jesus and a different salvation.

Jesus worked for us

I would like to respond to all who took time to answer my letter of Nov. 28.

When I responded to Ms. Heiner's letter, my intention was not to attack the Mormon people but to answer her contentions in light of the doctrines taught by Joseph Smith, Brigham Young, Orson Pratt, Bruce McConkie, etc., for it is the prophets and general authorities that speak for the church; and if they are wrong, the people are lost. I will send the documentation to anyone requesting it.

Adam rebelled, lost everything including life and sentenced us all to judgement, death and slavery to sin. For this reason, Jesus set aside his radiant glory as God, took on flesh, was willing to be humiliated, rejected, cruelly beaten and suffer death. On the cross, he was victorious over sin, paying the penalty for us, allowing us the opportunity to enjoy the warmth of God's love and escape from death through his resurrection.

If we admit we are sinners in need of forgiveness, asking him to be lord over our lives and come into our hearts, our debt to God is wiped out. I pray that everyone can experience the change from death to life eternal through trust in Jesus Christ's work on our behalf.

that started them.

Like evolution, which changes ever so slowly, religions and the gods people worship also change as the people and their customs change.

We read that Moses' god was a jealous god and seemed to enjoy destroying life but often repented and changed his mind after Moses talked to him, sometimes face-to-face.

Jesus, on the other hand, had a much more loving and forgiving god that wanted a better life for the people.

Jesus claimed he was a prophet and that the god he worshipped dwelt inside of him. He informed his god that the people didn't know what they were doing when they nailed him to a cross and told his god to forgive them.

Jesus believed in forgiveness, instead of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, as ignorance and superstition fables like it states in the Book of Revelation 10:7. "The mystery of God should be finished."

Hopefully, people in the future will worship gods that will compel them to make the world much more peaceful than what it has been in the past, for idols can neither see, nor hear, nor walk (Revelations 9:20).

What Christianity means

The word Christian was first applied to the disciples of Christ at Antioch in Syria about A.D. 43 (Acts 11:26) encompassing the following teachings of Jesus Christ:

- One God, eternally existent in three personalities — Father, Son and Holy Spirit. One God, who is a spirit.
- Jesus's virgin birth, atoning death, bodily resurrection and ascension. He was God in the flesh.
- The Bible has God for its author and salvation for its truth, with no errors in its contents.
- The LDS definition of Christian was put forth by Joseph Smith from 1820 to 1844, encompassing the following teachings of a different Jesus Christ:
  - God and Jesus Christ have bodies of flesh and bones. The Holy Ghost is a personage of spirit, three individual Gods.
  - Birth of Jesus by the literal union of God the Father and Mary. Atoning death of Jesus for the general salvation which is merely the resurrection of all men. No knowledge of Jesus is necessary.
  - A belief in the Book of Mormon.

Spurs give Tark the boot

The Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO — Jerry Tarkanian was fired Friday after losing more games in less than two months with the San Antonio Spurs than he did in three years at UNLV.

"Coach Tarkanian has been terminated," team owner Red McCombs said during a hastily called news conference. "We have a different level of expectation for this team. I appreciate all that the coach has done."

John Lucas, who played for seven teams, including San Antonio, from 1976-1989, was named to replace Tarkanian. Lucas, the first overall pick in the 1976 draft, was in and out of rehabilitation for cocaine addiction during his playing career, and has devoted his recent life to fighting drug abuse.

Tarkanian, 62, coached UNLV to the 1990 NCAA championship and compiled a record of 625-122 (83.7 percent) in 24 seasons, five at Long Beach State and 19 at UNLV. The Spurs, expected to contend in the NBA Western Conference this season, were 9-11 after Thursday night's 121-109 loss to Houston.

Tarkanian didn't attend the news conference, but said later Friday that his firing "boils down to what Red expected the team to do and what I expected the team to do."

Assistant Rex Hughes handled the team

Friday night in a 122-101 victory over Dallas. Lucas was named as coach immediately after the game.

Tarkanian was named coach on April 15, after leading the Runnin' Rebels to records of 35-5, 34-1 and 26-2 in his last three college seasons. He was in the first year of a three-year contract that pays him $500,000 a season.

Tarkanian said losing had been bothering his health.

"The losses have been really painful," he said. "It's really been hard on me. I've been taking medication for high blood pressure and I've never done that before."

"I'll never coach again. I'm all done," Tarkanian said. "I probably shouldn't have please see TARKANIAN/B7"

Car loaned to Husky tied to sports agent

SEATTLE — A car loaned to University of Washington fullback Beno Bryant was registered at the address of a Los Angeles sports agent, a newspaper reports.

Bryant received a loan of a late-model Ford Mustang last spring from a childhood friend, Chris Wims, who plays for the San Diego Chargers. But the car is registered at the Los Angeles home of sports agent Harold "Doc" Daniels, Mims' agent.

The report was carried in Friday's Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

There is no evidence Daniels paid for the car. But a possible link between a professional agent and Bryant has been investigated by university officials. NCAA rules forbid college athletes from accepting gifts, loans or favors from agents.

Track officials ban athlete for life following drug test

INDIANAPOLIS — John Billingsley, the 10th-ranked hammer thrower in the United States in 1989, has been banned from competition for life, USA Track & Field announced Friday.

Billingsley, 26, of Placentia, Calif., was suspended for two years in June 1991, after testing positive for high levels of testosterone. He would have been eligible to return to competition June 16, 1993, provided he passed further drug tests.

He was selected for testing the week of Oct. 19, but failed to appear.

CSI, Snow nab early wins

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho and Snow College upheld the reputation of the Scenic West Conference with easy victories in the opening round of the Arctic Circle Holiday Classic Friday night.

Snow smashed past Red Deer 119-58 in the opener, and the second-ranked Golden Eagles dropped Grand Prairie 120-64 in the nightcap.

The teams will switch opponents tonight. Snow playing Grand Prairie at 6 p.m. again from Grand Prairie from the opening tip; going five minutes to a 10-point lead and eventually leading 55-23 at intermission.

That, of course, set up the possibility of an involuntary co-sponsor of the tournament but a short jump shot off the baseline by Greg Sale in the final 90 seconds sent the crowd home hungry.

It was a tough way to end a long day for Grand Prairie which flew into Salt Lake City Friday morning and drove rented panels into Twin Falls.

"They had a long trip getting here. I'm certain they will show better tomorrow night," said CSI Coach Fred Trenkle. "One thing, they do play hard."

The Eagles put seven men in double scoring figures — headed by Clayton Johnson with 22 — as they racked up their 14th victory in as many tries.

Early in the first game it appeared Red Deer was going to give Snow a game. With six minutes gone the Kings had stayed within 15-12. But the Badgers then took total control.

They had the Kings doubled at 26-14 with 8:28 left in the half and pushed that out to 50-24 at intermission.

BYU party will eat up bowl bucks

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Brigham Young expects to lose money on its trip to the Aloha Bowl, while the University of Utah stands to make a bundle playing in the Copper Bowl.

A Western Athletic Conference team other than Hawaii playing in Honolulu "is going to lose its shirt," said Glen Tuckett, BYU athletic director. "We're not going to make any money, that's for sure."

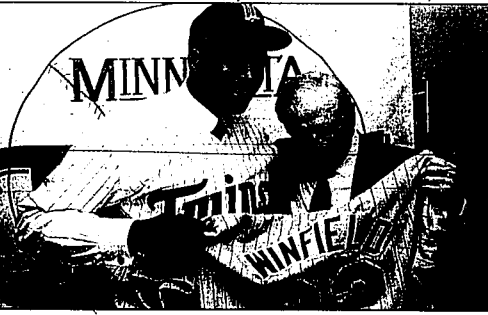

Flying to Tucson for the Copper Bowl will cost Utah about one-third the cost of going to Hawaii, and the school expects to sell the required 10,000 tickets.

BYU will receive $675,000 from the Aloha Bowl and its share of other WAC Bowls. That will not cover the expenses of the 340-member traveling party, partly because BYU is being charged about $70,000 for unsold tickets.

The Salt Lake Tribune figures BYU will end up with about a $500,000 loss while Utah will make about $220,000 from the trip to the Copper Bowl. The figures are based in part on the WAC's revenue-sharing formula, in which a team receives the first $500,000 of a bowl's payout and a percentage of the rest, with shares going to other conference schools and the WAC office.

A school can appeal to the WAC office for extra compensation. Jeff Hurd, associate commissioner said, "Maybe there will be a way for us to do a little better, but we're not going to complain or hold out for it."

Tuckett said, "It's a traveling party will be about 300. It's a long-range benefit to us to have people down there and we have to reward the people who have spent 30 years working to make this happen," said Utah Athletic Director Chris Hill.

Minnesota Twins owner Carl Pohlad greets his newest player, Dave Winfield, who left Toronto for a $5.2 million, two-year deal with the Twins.

Free agents flood market as Twins lure Winfield — at 41

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chicago Cubs outfielder Jerome Walton, Baltimore pitcher Bob Milacki and 36 other players joined the largest free agent class ever when teams failed to offer them 1993 contracts by Friday's deadline.

Chicago White Sox catcher Carlton Fisk, Boston outfielder Ellis Burks and Los Angeles first baseman Todd Benzinger also were in the group. They are now free to deal with any team.

By letting the players go, teams avoid having to go to salary arbitration with them. Some weren't offered contracts to avoid the rule limiting pay cuts to 20 percent.

The White Sox hope to re-sign Fisk, while Oakland is thought to already have worked out a deal with pitcher Kirk Dressendorfer. Minnesota is believed to have agreed with first baseman Gene Larkin.

Among the group who filed for free agency in November, five more signed on Friday, while Minnesota formally announced its $5.2 million, two-year deal with 41-year-old outfielder Dave Winfield.

"I'm at the point where it wasn't just the dollars," Winfield said. "I wanted to be happy. I've come from good places, I went to a better place last year and I think this may be the best."

Faldo edges Kite, Norman in World Championship

The Associated Press

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica — Nick Faldo worked his way to the top of the leaderboard Friday as extremely difficult conditions continued to frustrate and infuriate the select field in golf's World Championship.

But that leaderboard surrendered the last trace of red — the color indicating subpar scores — to the strong winds, hard fairways and deep rough of the windswept, 6,920-yard Fryatt Golf Club.

Faldo, ranked the top player in the game, matched par 70 and reached the halfway point of the season-ending, $2.7 million tournament at 141, one over par. The tournament, which pays the winner $550,000, is the game's most lucrative.

"I don't know that we've had one as tough as this for a while," the British Open titleholder said of the conditions that continued to embarrass some of the game's great players. "It's tough, just hard work," he said.

Faldo, the winner of five European titles this year, has a reputation as one of golf's best wind players.

And, under the conditions, it seemed appropriate that the two men immediately behind him after 36 holes — Tom Kite and Greg Norman — also play—the wind extremely well.

Norman, the Australian who snapped the longest non-winning string of his career with a victory in Canada last fall, shot another 71.

"The wind is playing havoc with everyone," he said. "It's very, very difficult."

Kite, who won the U.S. Open under similarly extreme conditions at Pebble Beach, Calif., had a 69 and a tie with Norman at 142.

"The conditions, with the wind, are kind of like a U.S. Open, British Open setup," Kite said.

Nick Faldo watches his shot off the third tee Friday in Jamaica.

"There's disaster waiting for everybody out there."

And it found Seve Ballesteros, the Spanish ace who owns three British Open titles and a pair of Masters green jackets.

He was subjected to double digit humiliation with a "10" on the par-4 10th hole, where he hit his tee shot out of bounds and eventually took five putts from 12 feet.

And that was far from the end of his troubles. He also took an "8" from the water on the 14th hole, played the back nine in 44 and had one of the highest scores of his career, an 82. He was last in the field of 28 at 158.

Late strike downs Nevada

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Erik White hit Dave Hankins on four-yard down with a 2-yard touchdown pass with 22 seconds left Friday night as Bowling Green spoiled a huge Nevada comeback to beat the Wolf Pack 35-34 in the inaugural Las Vegas Bowl.

Bowling Green, which led 28-3 at halftime, fell behind 34-28 in the fourth period. But with 1:48 left, Nevada punter Steve Lester bobbled the snap and Bowling Green recovered on the Wolf Pack 15.

After Mark Salacheic caught a pass to put the ball on the 3, the Falcons stalled on three plays before White found Hankins alone in the end zone.

The win was the ninth straight for Mid-American Conference champion Bowling Green, which finished the season 10-2. Nevada, which won the Big West in its first year of Division I play, finished 7-5.

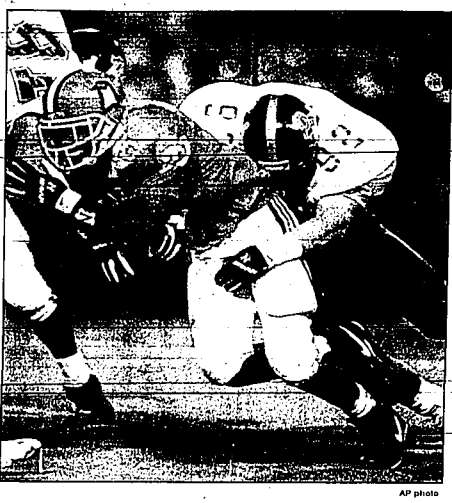

A series of three horrendous Bowling Green punts helped Nevada bounce into the game in the third quarter, when backup quarterback Chris Vargas threw for two scores, and the Wolf Pack scored three touchdowns with a 4:27 period.

Vargas, taking over from starter Fred Gattin, led the Wolf Pack to four straight second-half touchdowns.

The comeback was sparked by two successive Bowling Green punts that totaled 13 yards and a third botched punt attempt in which backup punter, Rob Donahue scrambled for only five yards. Nevada scored touchdowns after all three punt attempts.

Donahue had come into the game in the second half as a replacement for starting punter Andy Tracy, who sustained a concussion.

Bowling Green dominated the first half and appeared to have the game in hand after stopping a Nevada drive on the goal line with four seconds remaining in the first half.

But Vargas, who led Nevada to two remarkable second-half comebacks in the last two years, came out throwing in the second half, completing 12 of 21 third-quarter passes to put the Wolf Pack back in the game.

Following a 5-yard punt by Donahue into the wind with 10:14 left in the third quarter, Vargas took Nevada 55 yards, capping the drive with a 5-yard touchdown pass to Mike Senior.

Chiefs' Thomas misses chance at game against idol Taylor

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Derrick Thomas has been unhappy this season, and his outlook is not expected to change Saturday.

This was supposed to be the week Thomas got a chance to play in a regular-season game against New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor, his football idol.

However, Taylor ruptured an Achilles' tendon last month against Green Bay and is out for the season.

It's another setback in a season that has been a bit of a disappointment for Thomas despite an impressive 116 sacks, eighth best in the AFC going into Saturday's game between the Chiefs (9-5) and Giants (5-9) at Giants Stadium.

The Chiefs can clinch a playoff berth with a victory. They also could win the AFC West by winning their final two games or winning one and having San Diego (9-5) split its final two games.

Overall, a good year, but not a Derrick Thomas-type year.

Shoulder problems bothered him early, then came the change that has been the biggest adjustment for Thomas — the Chiefs' decision to switch from a 3-4 front to a 4-3.

In the old defense, Thomas was a pass-rushing' linebacker, the position in which Taylor revolutionized the game. Under the new system, Thomas' responsibilities have included pass coverage and less rushing the quarterback.

The new job is less glamorous, and can take away from a great player's performance. Former Giants coach Bill Parcells said putting Taylor in a 4-3 defense would make him an ordinary linebacker.

"I'm having to do some things on a regular basis that I did on few occasions in the past," Thomas said. "It's different."

"Now that we've been in it for a few weeks, we're having different variations that are giving me the ability to rush, pursue and be aggressive off the back side. The defense is becoming fun again. It wasn't fun in the beginning."

Since the change was made against Dallas Oct. 18, Thomas has six sacks in eight games, four against San Diego.

"Derrick is having a good year," Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer said. "It's in transition from a guy being involved in rushing the quarterback to one involved in coverage. To Derrick's credit, he has continued to work hard developing those things."

The change has helped the team. The Chiefs have won five of their last six.

Bucs, Wyche hope winning ways rub off in matchup with 49ers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers are hoping to pick up a few pointers on the art of winning Saturday, when they play the San Francisco 49ers.

"We're still learning some of these lessons," said Sam Wyche, in his first season as Tampa Bay coach. "I've got our players watching the 49ers, just watching the managements, watching the way they warm up. You learn just as much from other good players and other bad teams as you learn from a coaching meeting or a coach's lecture."

Tampa Bay got off to a promising 3-1 start but has lost nine of its last 10. "It's been a tough, long year," Wyche said. "We thought it might be this way but hoped that we would have a Cinderella year. It didn't happen ...

The club has a tradition of not winning for nine straight years now — 10 — and it takes more than one year to change that thinking."

The 49ers (12-2) have the league's best record and a chance to clinch their sixth NFC West title in seven years and a home field advantage through the playoffs by beating the Bucs (4-10).

"It seems like the 49ers have been winning forever," Wyche said. "Their record is one of the most remarkable in NFL history and they appear fully capable of adding to it with this year's team."

The 49ers, winners of six straight games, are ranked first in eight of 17 offensive categories, including scoring, total yards per game and average gain per play.

Steve Young also leads the league in passing efficiency.

Tampa defensive back Ricky Reynolds said he likes need to play error free against the 49ers, who led the series between the teams 9-1. "We would probably have to play our best game of the season," he said. "That's the only way we see it. They have so much talent ..."

Wyche said Vinny Testaverde will start at quarterback.

Meanwhile, San Francisco coach George Seifert doubts that Joe Montana will play his final game.

Even if Montana were activated, as expected, Seifert said Steve Bono would be the first quarterback off the bench and Montana would be designated as one of the team's two inactive players in game day that would mean Montana could play only if Young and Bono were injured.

Oregon college takes unmatched record into Portland against Findlay of Ohio

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Linfield is not for losers.

The tiny school in McMinnville, Ore., isn't had a losing football season in 38 years, a record unmatched at any collegiate level.

Saturday, the Wildcats go after their fourth NAIA Division II championship since 1982 when they met Findlay of Ohio at Civic Stadium.

Not bad for a college with 2,100 students that offers no athletic scholarships.

"It's a combination of things," Linfield coach Ed Langsdorf said. "Obviously tradition and reputation play a big part. Kids like to play on teams that have been successful."

Findlay, enrollment 2,900, is in its 100th year of college football and is no stranger to success, either. The Oilers have won 20 of their last 24 games and have appeared in two national championship games. They won the title in 1979.

"They've been in big games before and they've been in the playoffs before," Langsdorf said. "Their team has a good understanding of what it takes to win at the championship level."

Linfield (12-0) has been unbeaten during the regular season eight times in the last 18 years.

"It doesn't take a genius to figure out how good they are," Findlay coach Dick Strahm said.

The Wildcats set school records with 662 total yards and 492 rushing yards in last week's 47-12 semifinal victory over Minot State of North Dakota.

Quarterback Shannon Scills directs Linfield's quick, balanced attack. He rushed for 147 yards and three touchdowns and passed for another score last week.

Teammate Gary McGivern, one of a season-high 152 yards last week and is the school's all-time leading rusher for a single season with 1,270 yards.

Langsdorf took over as head coach after 12 seasons as an assistant to Ad Rutschman, one of the nation's most successful small-college coaches who retired after the 1991 campaign.

This season's success has come as a surprise, Langsdorf said.

"We had some good players returning but we had some big question marks on the offensive line and on defense," he said. "We lost 10 starters on defense from last year's team."

Findlay (11-1) runs a wishbone attack under the direction of quarterback DeMoya Wimberly, a 5-foot-7 senior from Hollywood, Fla. Wimberly, a four-year starter, has 628 yards rushing and 929 yards passing this season.

When it pitches the ball on the option, it often goes to Nate Sprunger, the team's leading rusher with 989 yards and an average of 6.1 yards per carry.

Defense is a strength for the Oilers, who have allowed only 11.7 points per game.

The leading tackler is linebacker Bob Heikamp.

"He's a very quiet guy," Strahm said. "He's a farm boy that loves to play football."

Promax, a promotion company headed by former NFL quarterback Bill Lomax, submitted the bid that brought the game to Portland. The company has sold 10,000 tickets to local corporations. Most of the tickets have been given to youngsters in area youth football programs.

Ex-Eagle owner faces huge debts; says Atlantic City made him do it

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — An Atlantic City casino cited former Philadelphia Eagles owner Leonard H. Tose with five million dollars in gambling debts amassed at the Sands Hotel Casino. Between June 1981 and April 1986, Tose lost $146 million at the casino, records show. That was repaid, and the casino is seeking to recover an additional debt of $1.3 million.

Tose, 77, of Villanova, Pa., said casino officials fed him an endless supply of drinks. On some occasions, he needed assistance to get to the men's room and was unable to legibly sign markers — casino IOUs — his lawsuit contends.

"The law says they should not allow a person to gamble when he is not in his right mind and allow him to come to drink," said Philadelphia attorney A. Charles Peruto Sr. "It's his contention they didn't follow the law and as a result he got floored."

Tose also is seeking punitive damages.

Sands spokesman Jim Wiese declined comment Friday on the legal dispute which began in January 1991 when the gaming hall filed suit to recover $1.3 million in unpaid debt.

The case is scheduled to go to trial Jan. 4 before U.S. District Judge Joseph Irenas. Former Eagles executives and former head coach Dick Vermeil are expected to testify.

Tose isn't the first high-roller to dispute gaming losses, contending an Atlantic City casino took advantage of him.

In 1989, a federal jury rejected a lawsuit from a New York City gambler who contended the Golden Nugget plied him with alcohol and pain killers, causing him to lose $165,000. The casino was later sold, and is now Bally's Grand.

But in a ruling stemming from that case, U.S. District Judge Mitchell H. Cohen said casinos can be held liable for money lost by drunken gamblers. The judge, sitting in Camden, said gaming halls, like taverns, have a responsibility to their customers.

"In court documents, the Sands said Tose was a 'poor blackjack player' who did not use any basic strategy. He usually simultaneously played seven hands, wagering $5,000 a game, according to a memorandum filed this week by his attorney."

Losses were the result of the house advantage" or his poor playing skills," the casino said in its lawsuit.

But Peruto contends casino officials knew Tose was a compulsive gambler and "intentionally and maliciously enticed" him to gamble by providing him with extensive lines of credit, free rooms, meals, entertainment and limousine service.

Dealers and cocktail waitresses ignored his bloodshot eyes, slurred speech and staggered gait and continued to give him Scotch, the lawsuit said.

"The more Tose drinks, the more he wants and needs to gamble," Peruto said in his lawsuit. "He has been a gambler all his life."

Casino officials ignored pleas from friends accompanying Tose to shut down gaming tables when he became intoxicated, the memorandum said. One friend grabbed the "playing" cards and ripped them up, but the dealer got a fresh deck, the document said.

Dr. Richard Saul, a psychiatrist who examined Tose, said he suffers from major depression, pathological gambling and alcohol abuse.

Coach's wife contends CSU gag order

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — The wife of fired Colorado State University football coach Earle Bruce has accused school officials of instituting a gag order to keep CSU employees from discussing the controversial dismissal.

In a two-page letter submitted to the (Fort Collins) Coloradoan, Jean Bruce, 42, said she was angry about Corey Johnson warned CSU's athletic staff not to speak out against Bruce's dismissal.

The letter alleges that coaches were told they would be fired if they voiced loyalty to Bruce.

Mrs. Bruce told the Coloradoan she learned of the alleged gag order from university employees, including several coaches, who have remained loyal to Bruce.

The popular coach was fired Nov. 22 after CSU officials claimed he had mistreated players and staff, broken NCAA rules and allowed other violations to occur.

CSU President Albert Yates denied Thursday that he had told anyone to not discuss the firing and promised to investigate the charges.

Johnson denied Mrs. Bruce's allegations.

He did say, however, that coaches and athletic department staff were told that Bruce's dismissal was a personnel issue and that the details of the decision couldn't be released.

Trainer Fred Oglesby told The Coloradoan he had been told not to discuss the allegations.

He declined to say who gave the order.

"I have been directed — that's all I can say," Oglesby said.

Assistant head coach Steve Loney said Johnson and CSU lawyer Brian Snow had told athletic department employees not to discuss Bruce's firing.

Loney said Snow told the coaches that their loyalties were to lie with CSU and not Bruce, in accordance with their contractual obligations. The coaches were told not to contact any players on Bruce's behalf, he said.

Olympic hero skates way to championship

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Paul Wylie raced his way up to his potential as an amateur skater. As a professional, he owns two straight victories over the man who defeated him for the Olympic gold medal.

Wylie, the unexpected silver medalist at the 1988 Olympics, earned seven 10s for artistic merit and defeated Viktor Petrenko by one-tenth of a point to win the Challenge of Champions event Thursday night.

"This just makes my professional career sweet, and the decision to turn pro sweeter," he said.

Wylie defeated Petrenko in the World Professional Figure Skating Championship last week at Landover, Md. Wylie earned $40,000 for Thursday night's victory at the Forum.

Always gracious, the soft-spoken Wylie wasn't seeking revenge.

"I don't look at it that way," he said. "I was happy to skate my best. I was, and am, satisfied with my amateur career from the day I left Northville, Mich., Feb. 16, 1992. It was a wonderful day for me."

Wylie won the hearts of underdogs everywhere with the performance of his life to win the silver behind Petrenko, the gold medalist from Ukraine.

It was the final routine in an amateur career that had been lackluster at best. "I wasn't expected to win anything, so for me to come through, it symbolized something for people," he said.

Wylie is the first skater to the axiom that no one remembers who finished second.

"I feel like people understand what I went through to get where I am," he said. "People can identify with my struggle."

Nearly a year later, Wylie is still greeted with standing ovations in arenas around the country. He enjoys an intimate connection with his audiences. "It's almost worth more than winning," he said. "It's so genuine when you feel that warm glow of a hand of applause when you skate out. I get tingles every time it happens."

Since the Olympics, letters have poured in to Cambridge, Mass., championing Wylie as king of the underdogs.

"I've gotten mail from people who are going through a tough time in their life that when they saw me triumph over the demons of the past and get the silver, they were inspired by that," he said.

According to Harvard Law School, Wylie is taking a two-year deferral to skate professional competitions and ice shows.

He has no desire to join Brian Boitano and possibly Kristi Yamaguchi in regaining amateur status to compete in the 1994 Winter Olympics.

Like Wylie, Yamaguchi repeated her first pro victory last week with a win Thursday night. Boitano, who had won four straight Challenge titles and never lost in 11 pro competitions, stumbled twice and wound up with no medal.

"As a professional, I'm growing and I'm skating well and things are coming my way," Wylie said. "That's great, but I'm not going to think that I need to come back for that reason alone."

At 28, Wylie wonders whether he's already lived the highlight of his life. "Most of the sports figures that I've met have told me that their Olympic experience reigns supreme, but that there are other more modest and very gratifying moments in their life," he said.

"I'm sure when I pass the bar and graduate from Harvard Law School, those things are going to be tremendous moments to, and when I win my first contract, that's going to be a tremendous moment to, and when I don't think that's going to clean those personal victories if it's not shared with the multitudes, but I can't envision many things coming up to that."

Crash that killed ski racers' brother linked to alcohol

BETHLE, Maine (AP) — Jean Paul Parisien, brother of ski racers Julie, Anna and Robbie Parisien, was killed in a car crash that police think might have involved a car driven by a man charged with drunken driving.

Parisien, 24, of Auburn, was driving to Vermont when his car was forced off the road by another car along state Route 26 and slammed into some trees. He was killed instantly, state police said.

Derek M. Bonney, 29, of South Paris, Maine, was arrested a short time after the accident and charged with drunken driving. Police identified him as the main suspect in the search for the driver of the other car.

"We at this point have not directly linked Bonney to the accident," Stephen McCausland of the state Public Safety Department said. "The car that he was driving is believed to be the car that is involved."

The investigation was expected to continue through the weekend, said Joseph M. O'Connor, an assistant district attorney for Oxford County. Witnesses were being questioned by police Friday night.

McCausland said both vehicles were traveling north when Parisien's car was sideswiped on the icy highway, careened off the road and crashed into three trees.

McCausland said the driver of the second car stopped at a nearby house and asked the occupant to call the police.

"At that point, the car sped off," he said.

McCausland and a passenger, neither of whom was injured, were stopped "within a half-hour" in West Paris by Oxford County sheriff's deputies, McCausland said.

Both men were taken into custody. Bonney was released on bail and the passenger wasn't charged, McCausland said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Of sentences that stir my bile,
Of phrases I detest,
There's one beyond all others vile,
He did it for the best."
— James Kenneth Stephen.

"With three obvious trump losers staring me in the face, I had to take the spade finesse," alibied South.
Study the play to see if you can spot a way for South to make the game.
North had a problem at his second turn to bid. Should he bid no-trump to emphasize his strong spade holding or should he show his strong preference for hearts? Given today's layout, the no-trump game would have been best. Nevertheless, it's difficult to fault North's actual choice.
Giving it less than his best effort, South ducked the opening spade lead and lost a trick to East's king. East returned a spade to dummy's queen and South played dummy's heart/jack in a try to crash the missing trump honors. East didn't fall into the trap by covering, and the game went one down.
The spade finesse was not the only chance for declarer. If his table presence tells him that the spade finesse will probably fail, he has another shot at making game. He wins the spade ace and plays three rounds of clubs, forcing East to ruff. When East ruffs, South discards his losing spade. With luck on his side, the remaining trumps split 2-2 and South loses no-trumps to only three trump tricks.
