Snow buries Magic Valley

Heavy wet flakes, wind-accompany storm into area

By Craig Lincoln and Brad Bowlin
Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS - Cars and pedestrians sloshed through a heavy wet snow Tuesday that toppled trees, blanketed ski slopes and made life just a little more difficult, and happily so, in our sixth year of drought.

A Pacific storm system crept over Idaho Tuesday night. Winds gusted between 35 mph and 45 mph in the Magic Valley before the storm and ushered the snow Tuesday. Depending on the locale, snow depths varied from 2 inches to 14 inches in south-central Idaho.

"It's a variety of systems - one moving in, one dropping on us and one laying off the coast," said Bill Galkin of the National Weather Service in Kimberly.

The weather service is predicting dustings of snow through New Year's Day, and even into the weekend. Although storms should taper off, there is "lots of moisture available," Galkin said.

An arctic front that is lying in wait to the north will probably sag into the area as the week goes on, dropping temperatures, Galkin said.

The storm, inflicted numerous mishaps on the Magic Valley. Power outages plunged parts of the valley into darkness, cars slid off roads and radio stations went silent.

Although area law enforcement agencies reported no major accidents, officers hustled from fender-bender to slide-off all day long.

The trouble began not long after midnight, when a ground blizzard made a stretch of U.S. Highway 93 between Twin Falls and Jackpot nearly impassable, sheriff's deputy Perry Bamhill said.

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office handled about 30 reportable accidents Tuesday, but that doesn't include the numerous cars who slid off county roads.

The city fared much better, with only four accidents by Tuesday evening, traffic officer Dennis Pullin said.

The most serious accident - a head-on collision near the Magic Valley Mall - sent two children, ages 2 and 7, to the hospital where they were treated for minor injuries. "If it freezes, it's going to make it very slick," Pullin said.

"Drivers seemed to be driving more cautiously than during the winter's previous storms, he said.

By 7 p.m., the second wave of accidents began to come in as melting snow and slush turned to ice.

The Idaho State Police reported no injury accidents, but dispatchers frantically tried to keep up with all the minor calls.

The sheriff's departments in both Jerome and Twin Falls counties were asking people to stay off the roads unless necessary.

Idaho Power Co. customers were plagued with isolated shortages that started with wind damage in the night.

"We had things that weren't anchored down properly going through our wires, like sheds and things like that," Division Operating Supervisor Barry Knoblich said. When the snowstorm hit, "it kind of started all over again."

The heavy, wet snow broke some lines, and also broke off tree limbs that fell on lines, he said.

On a normal day, the company's service calls for its local division would be "fill a fraction of a page," Knoblich said. By mid-afternoon Tuesday, nine pages were filled. Knoblich didn't have time to count the number of service calls.

Idaho Power service representatives may have been kept busy by the wintry weather, but it's a welcome sign if it means the drought is coming to an end. It isn't certain the storm is precisely what the area needs. "It's too early to say what this particular

Overmatched street crews snowed under by storm

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Armed with two road graders, a snow plow and four sanding trucks, city crews battled a major snowstorm Tuesday.

"They must have felt a little like General Custer at the Little Big Horn."

"We are overwhelmed, to put it mildly," City Manager Tom Courtney said. "We are not equipped to handle this much snow."

City Engineer Gary Young said crews first would work on the downtown area - Shoshone Street and the Second avenues and other streets.

After that, they would target major roads such as Washington and Locust Streets at Eastland, Falls and Filer avenues. Last, crews can work on state roads such as Blue Lakes Boulevard and Kimberly Road, Young said.

The Idaho Transportation Department is concentrating on major routes. Snow plow s will work Interstate 84, U.S. Highway 93 and Idaho Highway 75 near Ketchum, said District Maintenance Engineer Jon Schieffman.

U.S. Highway 30 between Twin Falls and Duhl also will receive prompt attention, but plowing the road beyond Duhl will be delayed until snow plows get major routes cleared.

The state highways connecting Paul, Burley and Rupert also are 1981 on the state's list.

Twin Falls Highway District Director Clyde Burney said the district hoped to have one-way traffic through almost all of its roads by late Tuesday. The district had plowed major routes, such as Addison Avenue outside the city limits, the road south of Hansen and Rock Creek a couple of times.

Snow plows were making it onto most of her roads late Tuesday, but all bets are off if the wind blows, Burney said.

Arms accord will enable Bush to step down on an upbeat note

By George Gedda
The Associated Press

Analysis

More on treaty - A3

WASHINGTON - A new accord on reducing long-range nuclear weapons will cap a historic era of arms treaties between Washington and Moscow and usher President Bush out of office on a note of achievement.

The agreement Bush and Russian President Yeltsin will sign as early as this weekend is the third major arms control accord in two years. Bush, in office only four years, can lay claim to being the disarmament president.

All previous efforts at arms control, dating back to the 1960's, pale beside what has been carried off under Bush. Last year, Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev agreed to cut strategic nuclear weapons by one-third, a feat that seemed almost tame compared to the one achieved last June when he and Yeltsin agreed to cut them by two-thirds.

The final details of that agreement were worked out this week in Geneva by Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger and Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev.

Ironically, Bush did not start out with arms control high on his agenda. "Status quo plus" was the way analysts dubbed Bush's approach during his early months in office.

But he and former Secretary of State James A. Baker III began to see the possibilities for progress in that area based on changing attitudes in Moscow.

That point was driven home during a watershed meeting in the Wyoming bush that Baker had with former Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in September 1989.

Just over a year later, leaders of NATO and the Warsaw Pact signed an agreement to reduce tank, artillery, combat aircraft and other conventional forces in Europe.

At the time, it was the most ambitious arms control accord in history, coming after 17 years of stalemate.

And the agreement announced Tuesday, once implemented, will reduce nuclear weapons stocks to where they were in the 1960's, when the nuclear age was roughly in its adolescence.

The agreement will strengthen the hand of the incoming Clinton administration as it seeks to discourage other countries from joining the nuclear club.

It also will help Bush make a more decorous exit from the White House.

Presidential visit talk of Mogadishu

The Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia - If President Bush happens to rub elbows with some ordinary Somali citizens when he visits the capital on Thursday, odds are good he may get an earful from somebody like Ahmed Abdullah Hussein.

"We need jobs, schools open, electricity, communications so we can telephone New York for business," said Hussein, 42, who said he worked at the Mogadishu airport.

Bush's tightly controlled visit is unlikely to allow such exchanges, but the fact that he's coming is the talk of the town. Some people are expecting a pocketful of miracles to pull Somalia out of misery and lawlessness.

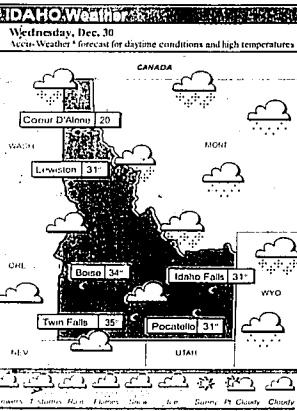

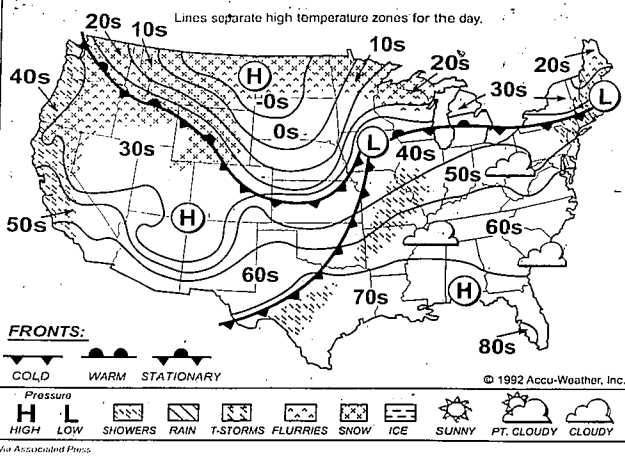

"Bush is the president of Somalia now," said Mohammed Abdi Farah, 25, who said he was a former clothing salesman.

Bush, who ordered U.S. troops into Somalia to protect aid deliveries to its starving people, has resisted U.N. pressure for Washington to expand its mandate to

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says the storm system which was located over central and southern Idaho Tuesday morning moved slowly eastward through the day. From 4 to 10 inches of snow was reported in the Magic Valley southward to the Utah-Nevada border. Southeast sections of the state also reported snow. The advisories for southeast Idaho were upgraded to a winter storm warning with additional snow and blowing snow expected Tuesday night. In the north the snow lessened as the edge of the Arctic air moved south.

The storm system was expected to reach the Wyoming border early today. The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 48 degrees at Grangeville. Dixie reported the coldest at 3 degrees above zero.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 84 degrees at Kingsville, Texas. The lowest was 27 degrees below zero at Browning, Mont.

Americans unhurt in Yemen blasts

ADEN, Yemen (AP) - Two bombs exploded Tuesday at hotels where U.S. Marines were staying, killing one person and injuring eight, the government said.

The Pentagon said no U.S. personnel were harmed.

A Pentagon spokesman, Army Maj. Bryan Whitman, said in Washington that "no U.S. military personnel were involved." He would not elaborate or give details on the mission of any U.S. forces in Yemen.

Yemen, a republic of 12 million at the southern end of the Arabian peninsula, is allowing U.S. forces working in Somalia to use its air and sea facilities.

Yemen was one of the main Arab critics of the U.S.-led coalition during the Persian Gulf War and has been badly hurt economically and politically by its stance.

On Tuesday, one bomb exploded at the Goldmore Hotel, where Marines were staying en route to Somalia, said a Yemeni Interior Ministry official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The bomb exploded at about 9:15 p.m. (12:15 p.m. EST), on the hotel's seventh floor, where Marines were eating dinner in a restaurant, the official said.

The official said one person was killed and five were injured, but none were Yemeni. He did not elaborate.

The second bomb exploded under a car in the parking lot of the Aden Hotel, which also houses Marines, said the official. He said the two occupants of the car and a passer-by were injured, but none were Yemeni.

Col. Dave Garner of the Armed Forces News at the Pentagon said, "apparently something blew up in a parking lot. I don't know how close it was to a hotel."

He did not immediately know how many Marines were staying at the Goldmore Hotel or the Aden Hotel.

Yemen lies across the Gulf of Aden from Somalia, where U.S. forces leading a mission to help the starving and recently begun fighting the country was formed in May 1990 by the merger of conservative North Yemen and Marxist South Yemen.

During the Gulf War, Saudi Arabia expelled nearly 1 million Yemenis, who sent home about $300 million a year.

include disarming the heavily armed, lawless nation and helping rebuild its shattered society.

About the only people who aren't either expectant or happy about the Bush visit are the bandits largely forced underground in the towns U.S.-led troops have set up openly and recently begun seizing trucks with mounts to which guns can easily be fitted.

"The gun holders don't like him," he said as he walked through a marketplace on a typically sweltering day. "Not only Bush, but all the Marines. If the Marines were here, the bandits could come and take food and kill people."

"He said a man on the bus grabbed a newsmagazine with the headline 'Welcome Bush' and ripped it to pieces. Omar, however, was overjoyed about the visit by a U.S. president to Somalia, and to Africa in general.

"The world is talking about Somalia now," he said. "Somali people are optimistic. Bush is trying to help the Somali people."

Less happy was Abdi Rahman, a "Toll Bush to give me back my trucks," he said.

storm might do," said Mike Beus, a Bureau of Reclamation hydrologist in Burley. "It's another illustration of how our perception might be misled because of local weather."

The bureau oversees the system of storage reservoirs that supply southern Idaho with its irrigation water. Although December is "the best time to turn out to be a good month almost everywhere," Beus said the snowpack that feeds the reservoir ranges from 80 percent to 100 percent of normal.

Idaho Power wasn't the only business to fall victim to the storm: A couple of radio stations went silent for about 20 minutes when a car slid off the road and hit a power pole, said Kelly Klaus of KEJZ, and again for two or three minutes after power was initially restored.

KLIX went silent when the base of its transmitting tower froze after it was rained on, said Sandra Brostrom of KLIX. She was uncertain Tuesday afternoon when the tower would be fixed.

"Skiers, however, should be delighted and wary. While snow fell on alpine ski slopes, it made backcountry travel hazardous."

Scott Alexander, general manager Clark Berg said that 6 inches of new snow fell during the day. Sun Valley opened Bald Mountain with about 8 inches and snow continued through the day.

But the storm also sent the avalanche danger soaring. The Sawtooth National Forest reported high to extreme avalanche hazards in the back country Tuesday as the heavy wet snow landed on a weak snowpack.

The Forest Service recommended staying out of the back country until the snowpack stabilized.

Rahman said the U.S. Marines confiscated his two trucks because they had gun mounts. Marines have been confiscating guns they see openly and recently begun seizing trucks with mounts to which guns can easily be fitted.

Asked why he had guns mounted on his trucks, Rahman said: "To protect myself from bandits." A group of his friends laughed.

Scott Alexander, general manager Abdi Shoubayh said Bush-Asis, welcome only if he gets the guns out of Somalia. He said even the troops haven't made the capital safe.

"I doesn't make any sense to come here and not take guns away," he said. "He is not welcome here; he doesn't take the guns from the bandits and pirates."

Lussien, the seaport worker, was asked if he expects President-elect Clinton to pursue the broader goal of restoring law and order in Somalia.

"Who?" he said.

Massive storm brings heavy snow, high wind to West

The Associated Press

A strong storm system spread heavy snow and high wind Tuesday through the mountains of the West, with up to 3 feet in the Sierra Nevada.

The low pressure system was off the Washington and Oregon coasts and was expected to remain nearly stationary through Wednesday, the National Weather Service said.

Winter storm warnings were posted for mountains of Oregon, Idaho, California and Nevada, with winter storm watches in effect for parts of Wyoming, Washington and Colorado.

Two to 3 feet of new snow was reported at higher elevations of the Sierras north of Sequoia National Park.

Kings Beach, Calif., on the north shore of Lake Tahoe, reported over 2 feet of new snow, with 2 feet at Kingsvale, Nev., Donner Summit, Calif., South Lake Tahoe, Calif., and Echo Summit, Calif., the weather service said.

Over 10 inches of snow fell at Tuscadero, Nev., during the morning, with 5 to 8 inches in the Reno area.

Blowing snow closed a 60-mile stretch of Interstate 80, the main east-west link through the Sierra Nevada for Northern California, between Applegate and the Nevada line. About 50 miles of U.S. 50 running through the Sierras to Lake Tahoe was closed because of avalanche danger, the State Transportation Department said.

Snowfall amounts in Idaho in 24 hours ranged from 1 to 5 inches across the northern part of the state to 3 to 12 inches over the central mountains.

In Southern California, Big Bear Lake reported 6 inches of snow with 2.33 inches of rain fell at Mount Wilson in six hours. Mount Baldy reported 3.58 inches of rain.

A few thunderstorms were reported across Northern California.

Haviest rainfall amounts during the six hours up to 10 a.m. PST was 2.02 inches at Crescent City, on California's northern coast.

High wind blew through some mountain areas Automated sensors on the crest of the Sierra Nevada in California reported wind approaching 100 mph, the weather service said.

Wind speeds at one mountain location in Utah were sustained at 66 mph with gusts to 96 mph, the weather service said. In the valleys, sustained wind speeds were reported between 30 and 40 mph with gusts to 61 mph.

The city of Twin Falls rarely gets more than one or two heavy storms a year - not even that the past several years - so snow removal equipment is not a high priority in the city budget, said Courtney said.

Clearing roads was made even more difficult with cars parked along the city streets, said Courtney. He added that the crews would be able to clear all the streets.

"We just don't have the equipment to move all that snow," he said.

U.S., Russia will cut nuclear arms

GENEVA (AP) — The United States and Russia agreed Tuesday on a treaty deeply reducing their nuclear arsenals and setting in motion plans for a New Year's weekend summit between President Bush and Boris Yeltsin.

"We now have a text we can put to the two presidents," Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger told reporters after he met with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei V. Kozyrev Monday and Tuesday to wrap up the treaty.

Bush and Yeltsin laid the foundation for the START II treaty last June when they signed an agreement in principle to cut each side's warheads to between 3,000 and 3,500 by the year 2003, about one-third the current total. It follows on the first Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, signed by Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in 1991.

"Please wait now for news from our capitals from President Bush and President Yeltsin," Kozyrev said. Eagleburger said he hoped the presidents would announce "within the next few days" plans to sign the treaty.

Bush, bird-hunting in Texas, was informed of the agreement but had no immediate comment. In Moscow, Yeltsin was informed by telephone by Souchi, a Russian city on the Black Sea, to make plans for a summit in early January.

Kozyrev, who said he was sure enough of success to bet a bottle of liquor when the final agreement was signed Monday, joked after the agreement that "Eagleburger has lost his bottle of whiskey."

"Two bottles of whiskey, my friend, spashko (thanks)," laughed Eagleburger, but he conceded that if the two leaders suggested changes in the final text, "obviously, we'd have to come back together again."

The two negotiators, who worked until midnight Monday, declined to give detail on how they resolved the issues that were still open when they began their final round.

The two sides had already agreed that the treaty would ban land-based missiles, including the longest-range Russian rockets, the 10-warhead SS-18s.

Negotiations on the details that would turn the June agreement into a treaty had bogged down before the United States made a renewed push this month. The Bush administration wants the outgoing president to be able to sign the treaty before he turns over the White House to Bill Clinton on Jan. 20.

Among outstanding issues were: • The number of SS-18 missile silos the Russians could retain. The Russians wanted to use the silos to protect single-warhead SS-25 missiles, apparently as a cost-saving move, but Washington wanted all of them destroyed to keep any future hard-line government from using them.

• How many of the 170 SS-19 missiles the Russians could keep after converting them from six warheads to one.

• Whether the United States would have to cut B-1 bombers under the treaty once it removes their nuclear weapons.

The United States wanted to reserve the right to remove the planes for nuclear weapons after it retires its B-52 bombers.

Eagleburger was returning immediately to Washington, and Kozyrev was left for Moscow by way of a brief stopover in Geneva.

Attending the talks for the first time was Russian Defense Minister Pavel Grachev, whose presence was widely interpreted as signaling Moscow's willingness to reach agreement.

It would be the start of a major arms control agreement with the Soviet Union and Russia. In 1990, he signed an East-West agreement to cut troops and tanks in Europe. Last year, he signed a treaty with Russia to cut strategic nuclear weapons by about one-third.

The United States and Russia also are part of a global treaty to ban chemical weapons that is to be signed next month.

The START I treaty of 1991 set ceilings of 8,500 strategic warheads, using lenient counting rules for bombers, for the United States and 6,500 for the Russians.

The left for Moscow, former Soviet republics with nuclear weapons — Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Belarus — are required to give up their strategic nuclear weapons under provisions of START I.

Russia would leave Russia as the only former Soviet republic with nuclear weapons. The other three therefore were not involved in START II talks.

Russia and the United States together now have about 20,000 warheads.

Razing of Seuss-inspired home outrages officials

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — And to think they saw it on Mulberry Street — a giant hole where a house had stood for 160 years on the street that inspired A. D. Seuss' book.

Now, the top whos in this Who-ville are hooting and hollering over what they say was an unauthorized wrecking.

"This is unforgivable," said Frances Gagnon, chairwoman of the city's Historical Commission. "In losing this house, we've also lost a part of Dr. Seuss' history."

The Greek revival house, built around 1830 and razed Monday, graced a neighborhood immortalized by native son Theodor Geisel.

Mulberry Street, though he lived in another neighborhood. His father, also named Theodor, went to a private kindergarten in a Mulberry Street home, possibly the one that was razed, Gagnon said.

Geisel's 1937 work, "And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street" takes place on a fanciful Mulberry Street inspired by the real one. Its hero is a child who tells tall tales that turn "mimwos" and "whakes" about what he saw on Mulberry Street, like a zebra pulling a chariot.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning author, who died last year at age 87, wrote six Dr. Seuss classics: "The Cat in the Hat" and "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," and the story of a Scrooge-like creature who steals all the trappings of the season from the Whos in Who-ville.

Springfield officials are trying to establish a Seuss museum and walking tour, which would include Mulberry Street. The demolished two-story, wooden home, assessed at $80,000, was listed on the National Register of Historic Places, as well as a city-designated historic district.

"Here we are trying to ... get support from the federal and state governments for a Dr. Seuss memorial exhibit," said Mayor Robert Markel. "Now we have a scar in the middle."

Building owner Dr. Philip Stone of Longmeadow and Zane Meekin of Associated Building Wreckers did not immediately respond to phone messages seeking comment.

The house sat on a commercially zoned lot next to Stone's office for his plastic surgery practice.

Stone knew a demolition permit from the Department of Code Enforcement or approval from his Historical Commission were needed because he saw the Mulberry Street, like a zebra pulling a chariot.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning author, who died last year at age 87, wrote six Dr. Seuss classics: "The Cat in the Hat" and "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," and the story of a Scrooge-like creature who steals all the trappings of the season from the Whos in Who-ville.

Cuban pilot diverts plane to Miami

MIAMI (AP) — The pilot and passengers of a Cuban airliner overpowered the flight crew members Tuesday, dumping one with chloroform, and diverted the plane to Miami to seek freedom, authorities said.

All but five of the 53 people aboard requested asylum when they reached Miami International Airport.

"They were very happy. They were all jumping and giving high fives to each other," said Mario Miranda, a spokesman for the Cuban American National Foundation, which will represent the defectors before immigration officials.

One passenger, a young boy, ripped up his Cuban identification card in front of reporters.

The pilot, Carlos Cancio Porcel, who brought his family with him, gave a thumbs up and yelled "Positivo" when asked whether he felt free.

"I feel very happy ... to have been able to ridde the communist system of Cuba," he said. "It was a very complex maneuver, a year in the planning."

The pilot may have been the same man the Cuban government sent in January to fly a hijacked helicopter from and after about a half-hour U.S. air trailing, said Miami flight controllers received a radio message saying it would land in Miami.

Just as the plane approached the airport, Cuban air controllers called their Miami counterparts, Eldridge said.

"They told Miami that the pilot called them and said he was being kidnapped," he said. She could not say if the call to Havana was a ruse by the pilot or a call from another crew member.

Police and FBI customs and immigration agents surrounded the plane as passengers and crew members got off.

FBI spokeswoman Julie Wollenhafer said the agency was investigating the case as a possible hijacking but had made no arrests.

The Soviet-built Aero Caribbean twin-engine turboprop took off at 8:30 a.m. Monday and landed in Miami at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday. The plane was apparently hijacked by the pilot, who flew to Miami with 53 people, 40 adults, eight children and five crew members, aboard. All but a handful have reportedly requested asylum. Above, two unidentified women carrying a small child are led by U.S. Customs agents from the Miami International Airport early Tuesday.

Police and FBI customs and immigration agents surrounded the plane as passengers and crew members got off.

FBI spokeswoman Julie Wollenhafer said the agency was investigating the case as a possible hijacking but had made no arrests.

"We have to get the facts and turn them over to the U.S. attorney's office to determine if a crime was committed," she said.

Reports of guns aboard the plane had not been confirmed, Sheehan said.

The angry co-pilot was handcuffed by police. The drugged security officer was placed on a stretcher and taken to Pan American Hospital. He was treated and later released to immigration officials, said hospital spokeswoman Michelle Gibson.

Census Bureau will not adjust 1990 count

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau announced Tuesday that annual updates to the 1990 census will not be adjusted to account for an estimated 1.6 percent undercount in that benchmark population estimate.

"This decision was difficult to make," Census Bureau Director Barbara Everett Bryant said in a statement submitted to the Federal Register.

Bryant said that while adjustments would improve the count in such categories as racial-ethnic and owner-renter groups, "because the 1990 total undercount is so small, it is impossible to accurately adjust for the 44,055 substitute areas for which population estimates are produced."

The decision was made more agonizing, she said, because the 1990 count — which Census officials have admitted was flawed — is the basis for each annual update between now and the year 2000, when the next comprehensive national count is scheduled.

In July 1991, then-Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher overrode the recommendation of a panel of experts and decided not to adjust the 1990 national count.

His decision came after Census officials admitted that residents of urban areas, particularly the homeless, African-Americans and Hispanics, while the actual basis for the awarding of federal money remains unchanged, unofficial estimates will be released for use in analyzing trends among various demographic groups.

Bryant's decision "strikes the proper balance in allowing the use of adjusted numbers only for the most defensible purposes," said Rep. Tom Sawyer, D-Ohio, who chairs the House Census and Population subcommittee.

"By adjusting one standard of measurement but not the other for program purposes, we risked serious policy distortions in the distribution of funds," Sawyer said. "Dr. Bryant's decision precludes that outcome."

FDA approves injectable drug to relieve migraines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration on Tuesday approved an injectable drug to relieve pain from migraine headaches, a condition that affects millions of people.

In clinical trials the drug, sumatriptan, relieved pain in 80 percent of the patients within two hours of injection, the FDA said in a statement.

The manufacturer, Glaxo Inc., said it will collect information on what happens to women who get pregnant while on the drug.

Although there is another treatment for migraines, Cafergot, not everybody can use it, said Carol Schenken, deputy FDA commissioner for external affairs. Sumatriptan also appears to take effect more quickly than Cafergot, she said in an interview.

"Sumatriptan should improve the quality of life for many of the millions of people who suffer from these debilitating headaches," said FDA Commissioner David Kessler.

The agency said the drug is not a cure for migraines and warned that it

FDA approves use of taxol for treatment of ovarian cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxol, a drug drawn from the bark of a rare tree, received approval Tuesday as a treatment for ovarian cancer. But the Food and Drug Administration said the drug can only slow — not cure — the fatal disease.

"We hope that the drug used in combination with other drugs will prolong survival," FDA Commissioner David Kessler said in an interview.

Some 21,000 women are diagnosed with ovarian cancer each year in this country, and many are in advanced stages because the disease is hard to detect, Kessler said. While chemotherapy is an option for these patients, "the vast majority fail," he said.

"It is a very important treatment option for women with ovarian cancer, which is a very difficult disease to treat," Kessler said.

The drug, which is extracted from the bark of the Pacific yew tree in the west, works by disrupting the mechanism cells use to divide, Kessler said.

In clinical trials the drug produced a response in 25 percent to 30 percent of the women who took it, and the average response lasted five to seven months, Kessler said. After that, it became ineffective.

Scientists don't know why.

"If you could answer that question, you could cure cancer," Kessler said.

Taxol was discovered years ago as part of the National Cancer Institute's search for cancer treatments derived from natural sources, such as plants and sea creatures. And while it showed promise in the lab, getting it into a soluble form usable in humans had been a problem until recently.

Compounding the trouble was the source of the drug itself: the Pacific yew tree. It's rare, and the fear is that harvesting the tree for its bark could cause its extinction. It takes about 60 pounds of bark — the amount that can be harvested from four trees — to make enough taxol for one patient.

Final approval of the drug was held up while an environmental impact statement was prepared, and Kessler said that the plan approved by the U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management would permit harvesting that would provide for "moderate protection" of the yew.

Even with the time spent on examining the environmental effects of harvesting the trees, taxol sailed through the FDA. Taxol made it through the government's mill in five months and two days, compared to years for most drugs, Kessler said.

"We have made a commitment to accelerate review of drugs for life-threatening and serious diseases," he said.

Taxol also shows promise in treating breast cancer, and trials are under way to examine that. In addition, the National Cancer Institute says it and the manufacturer, Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., are testing the drug for effectiveness against cancers of the lung, head and neck. Earlier tests have shown it to be ineffective against melanoma, a lethal skin cancer, and colon cancer.

It has side effects similar to other anti-cancer drugs; such as hair loss and lowering of blood counts, the FDA said.

Minutes after approval was announced in the United States, the Canadian government approved it, Kessler said. It was the first time the two countries had cooperated on simultaneous approval of an anti-cancer drug although they have done so before on AIDS drugs.

The other effect was almost as swift — Bristol-Myers stock started going up. Within an hour of the announcement, it was trading at $68 a share, up $1.

Bristol-Myers said the average cost of taxol per patient would be $695 for the duration of an individual's therapy.

The discovery and much of the development were done by the National Cancer Institute, which started experimenting on extracts from the bark in the late 1960s.

The active ingredient was isolated in 1971 by private chemists working under contract to NCI.

The unprocessed bark costs between $2 and $10 a pound, said Mike Trumbull, general manager of Hauser, Northwest Inc., which harvests the trees for Bristol-Myers.

Patients who are interested in information on taxol and other treatments for ovarian cancer may call NCI's Cancer Information Service toll-free number at 800-4-CANCER (800-422-6237).

Cuomo grants slayer of author clemency

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Jean Harris, the former girls' school headmistress serving 15 years to life for killing "Scarsdale Diet" Dr. Herman Tarnower, was granted clemency Tuesday by Gov. Mario Cuomo.

The clemency was issued shortly before Harris was scheduled to undergo heart surgery, said Cuomo spokeswoman Ann Crowley.

Ms. Crowley said Harris was notified of the decision, but Michael Kennedy, her attorney, said he had not heard of it until he was contacted by The Associated Press.

Cuomo cited her age — she is 69 — and medical condition, and her efforts to help fellow inmates, as reasons for granting clemency. It makes her immediately eligible for parole.

Harris suffered a heart attack last Wednesday night in the Bedford Hills Correctional Facility, her second heart attack since she was sentenced in March 1981. She was to undergo quadruple bypass surgery this afternoon at Westchester County Medical Center in Yonkers.

The former head of the exclusive Madeira School for Girls in

Harris

Melcan, Va., was convicted of murdering Tarnower, her long-time lover and author of the best-selling diet book, in his home in Purchase on March 10, 1980. She maintained she meant to kill herself because Tarnower had taken up with another, younger woman.

She wound up shooting Tarnower four times and said it was an accident.

Ms. Harris had had prior bids for clemency rebuffed by Cuomo. In June, a federal judge denied her request for a new trial.

In announcing Tuesday's decision, Cuomo said in a statement that "despite her advancing age and emerging medical problems, Ms. Harris consistently sought to apply her skills as a teacher and educational administrator for the benefit of other inmates and their children."

Officials project traffic deaths to hit 30-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials estimated Tuesday that traffic deaths will drop below 40,000 in 1992, the lowest annual figure in 30 years, as fewer Americans mix alcohol with driving and more buckle up their seat belts.

While the year is not over and official figures won't be available for months, Transportation Secretary Andrew H. Card Jr. said the department expects it would continue a steady decline in fatalities since 1988, when the toll was 47,087. The 1992 total, if it holds up, would mark a 5 percent decline from last year's 41,462 deaths.

Part of the decline may be attributable to the recession, as people tend to travel less in tight times, transportation officials acknowledged.

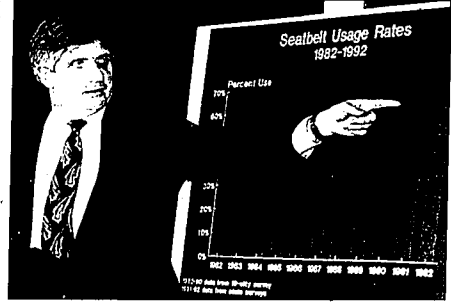

But the overall fatality rate, based on deaths per miles of vehicle travel, is also projected to continue to decline.

The projected rate of 1.8 deaths per 100 million miles of vehicle travel this year is down from 1.9 in the previous year and well below the 2.8 rate of 1982.

"We're talking about the lowest fatality rate in history. It's something we're all going to celebrate," said Marion Blakey, administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

The annual toll hasn't been below 40,000 since 1962. The record high was 54,589 in 1972.

In releasing their projections, officials attributed much of the decline to increased use of seat belts, encouraged through new state laws and stepped up police enforcement, and a decrease in the incidence of alcohol-related traffic deaths. They did not find any decrease in speed.

In 1991, alcohol was involved in 48 percent of fatalities. Transportation officials estimate the figure will be 45.8 percent in 1992. That also continues a decline from over 57 percent in 1982.

The rate motorists and their passengers used seat belts increased to 62 percent nationally, based on the findings of surveys within each state. That was up from 59 percent in 1991 and just 10 percent a decade ago.

"There truly has been a sea change for the better on seat belts," Card said.

Seat belt use increased by 10 percent or more in 22 states, and total use now exceeds 70 percent in 14 states.

"It means more crash-prone, high-risk non-belt users have changed their habits," Card said. "These recent gains should prevent a proportionally greater number of deaths and injuries."

Officials estimate the rate of non-fatal accidents involving personal injury also declined in 1992 but by a smaller rate of about 3 percentage points.

The following states were listed as having recorded increases of 10 percentage points or better in seat belt use in 1992: Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, South Dakota, Kansas, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Alaska.

Figures credit 53 percent of Idaho drivers with using seat belts.

Transportation officials projected the 1992 death toll based on figures from the first six months of the year. Final figures won't be available until spring, but Blakey said that in the past such projections generally proved accurate.

The rates for overall fatalities and alcohol involvement were similarly projected from six-month figures.

As a result of the improving safety figures, Card said Americans are generally less at risk in their automobiles than in the past.

Had the overall fatality rate remained at its 1982 level, an additional 22,000 people would have died in motor vehicles this year, Card said.

The reduction in alcohol as a factor just since last year was significant, Card said. Another 1,600 deaths would have occurred if the alcohol involvement rate had remained at 1991 levels, he said.

Government issues 3 patents for lab mice

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government on Tuesday issued patents for three laboratory mice.

The patents, the first since 1988 to recognize ownership of a genetically-altered animal species are regarded by researchers as critical for biotechnology research.

The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office gave notice in its Official Gazette that it was granting patents for laboratory mice strains to Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass., to GenPharm International of Mountain View, Calif., and to Ohio University in Athens, Ohio.

For Philip Leder, a Harvard Hughes researcher at Harvard, the patent is the second species ownership he has been granted. Leder and colleagues developed the first patented animal, the so-called "Harvard mouse," in 1988.

Leder's new patent is for a mouse strain whose males naturally develop enlarged prostate glands, a condition that mimics a serious disorder in human males.

GenPharm was given a patent for a mouse strain that has been altered so it naturally fails to develop a fully-functional immune system.

The Ohio University patent is for a mouse that was engineered to contain a human gene that constantly produces a low level of beta interferon, a protein that attacks virus and prevents infection in the mouse.

All of the mice were altered genetically through a technique in which genes are changed in fertilized eggs that are allowed to gestate within a mother mouse. The resulting pups have a genetic pattern different from either parent. When the pups mature and mate, they offspring carry the new genes. The changed animal is called a transgenic mouse.

Lisa Raines, vice president for government affairs at the Industrial Biotechnology Association, said in a statement that the new animals patents are significant for the industry.

"Since Harvard University received the first transgenic animal patent in 1988, there has been continued debate about whether or not additional animal patents would be granted," said Raines' statement. "This PTO decision marks a positive step forward for protecting important U.S. research."

Leder said the prostate mouse, which he said may be called Harvard II, will be important in research on the enlargement of the prostate in older men. The prostate, a gland that produces seminal fluid, is located below the bladder and around the tube that drains urine from the bladder. The gland grows larger as men age and often can retard or block urinary flow. Surgical correction of enlarged prostates is one of the most common operations on men.

Couple arrested for abandoning their 2 children

CHICAGO (AP) — In a real-life "Home Alone," the parents of two young children returned from an Acapulco vacation Tuesday and were arrested about their plane on charges of leaving behind their daughters.

David and Sharon Schoo of suburban St. Charles were charged with felony child abandonment and read their rights on the plane after it landed at O'Hare International Airport.

Eight police officers then led the lightly tanned couple, who were away about nine days, through the terminal. Passengers lining the corridor along the way yelled insults at the couple, who remained silent. The couple said nothing to reporters.

The Schoos were taken to the county jail and held on $50,000 bond each, police said. They were scheduled to go before a judge Wednesday.

"This is a very bizarre case," said David Clark, administrative chief for the Kane County state's attorney's office. "I've heard some people say that 'Home Alone' only belongs in the movies."

Boeing company settles dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Boeing Company subsidiary has paid the government $3.8 million to settle a civil case involving allegations of cost and testing irregularities for U.S. Navy electronic systems.

The settlement with ARGOS Systems Inc., of Sunnyvale, Calif., resolves potential liability for damages and civil penalties that could have been brought against ARGOS systems under the False Claims Act.

In a statement, the Justice Department said that in August, 1988, ARGOS systems disclosed to the Department of Defense that the company's employees had failed to perform a series of tests under one of three spare-parts contracts and had overcharged for labor or provided inaccurate cost information to the government during negotiations on the contracts.

The settlement was reached after the Defense Contract Audit Agency and the Defense Criminal Investigative Service investigated the matter.

Lance Cpl. Chuckie Monroe, of Wellsville, Ohio, center, and other Marines discuss field hardships near their foxhole in Baidoa Mondray. Soldiers in Somalia must carry bottled water because the local water supply is contaminated.

For the Marines, the trek across Somalia is 1 big non-stop swallow BAIDOA, Somalia (AP) — Here's the Marine poster for the Somalia campaign: A sweaty-browed, weighted-down, dust-choked lance corporal doing what he does most these days, chug-chugging from a long liter bottle of cool, clear water.

Like a camel caravan crossing the desert, the U.S. military has to carry its water along as it treks ever deeper into Somalia. It's a formidable task.

In a place just above the equator, where the temperature often hits 100, the grit and dust cling, and shade can be as scarce as rain, the Marines and GIs are finding that the pause that refreshes has become one big non-stop swallow.

"I guess I'm up to four liters a day," said Lance Cpl. Michael Koch, 19, of Jeffersonville, Mo., as he brandished a nearly empty bottle at a guard post in this inland town.

Koch and the other troops are drinking bottled water from in from neighboring Kenya. Officers say four 1-liter bottles — about 4.2 quarts in all — per day per Marine gets about average.

Water was a problem in the Persian Gulf War, too. But in Saudi Arabia two years ago the Americans could rely on sophisticated, high-volume Saudi desalination plants for supplies.

In Somalia, the water has to be churned out by low-volume military Reverse Osmosis Water Purification Units, called ROWPUs.

Two of these units sit seaside in Mogadishu, the Somali capital, converting seawater into 1,000 gallons of purified water each hour. The water is loaded into 900-gallon tanks, three of which fill atop a semi-trailer truck that hauls it in convoys 150 miles northwest over the potholed road to Baidoa, temporary home to some 800 Marines and other U.S. military personnel.

"We've got an ample supply of water. Just yesterday, 8,100 gallons came in by road," said Marine Maj. Steven R. Peters, 35, of Shoemaker's Mill, Pa., a support services officer.

The military medical team here can attest that the water pipeline is working fine. It reports only two cases of dehydration since the Marines rolled into Baidoa on Dec. 15 in pursuit of their objective of making routes secure for delivery of food to starving Somalis.

The ROWPU water is drinkable, but the lingering hint of chlorine makes it unpopular with the canteen set. Instead, the Air Force flies in two pallets of bottled water to Baidoa every other day.

Why not use Somali well water for some needs? Patrick Malone, hospital corpsman 2nd class and preventive medicine technician, peered deep and hard into a local well recently and concluded, "No way."

As part of his regular tests of water quality, Malone checked a "control" petri dish of water taken from a Marine latrine against a sample of local well water. The contaminated latrine water showed a grayish smudge of bacterial growth; the local water grew a bacterial stain as black as an ink blot.

"No wonder there's so many sick people around here," said Navy Lt. Rafael J. Del Vecchio, 2, of San Diego, a preventive medicine officer.

The Americans are so wary of the native water that they're washing equipment with the water trucked in from the coast.

Not that it's being wasted.

The Marines have had to learn the art of the two-minute shower: Standing under jury-rigged pipes, 10 Marines at a time are given a 30-second soak, a waterless 30 seconds to lather up, and 60 seconds of rinse.

That's once a week — max. And that's more than enough, says Cpl. Koch.

"You just get dirty again anyway," he said, and he took another gulp.

Taking Somalia, Italian style

GAILALASSI, Somalia (AP) — With espresso in their canteen cups and cognac in their metal rations, the Italian army cut a stylish if rather leisurely swath through Somalia, an old colony with a long memory.

As part of the U.S.-led force trying to feed the African nation's poor, the Italians were assigned to journey to this town, secure it and make sure food and medicine can be safely delivered.

Part of the convoy got lost on the way. A truck driver fell asleep, and sparked into a fire. Vehicles broke down. There were more than a few rest stops in the blazing heat, as well as dips into rations including pasta, pate and cognac.

Small contingents of U.S. Air Force, Marine and Army assigned to help out grimed, gripped and grinned under the blazing sun as the 45-vehicle armored convoy lurched from Mogadishu to Gailalassi, spanning the 100-mile trip in a numbingly tedious 14 hours on Sunday.

"Geez, this is the slowest convoy I've ever been in," said U.S. Army Spec. 4 Kevin Buckner, during one of innumerable delays along the rutted, bumpy road to Gailalassi.

During one delay, Italian Maj. Gunnaro Fucio skipped up to a reporter and offered a sip from his canteen cup of the richest espresso this side of Sicily.

"We'll get there, if my men don't kill me first," laughed the officer, a grin splitting a jaw covered with three days growth of beard.

The convoy slowed to another halt as it neared Gailalassi, this time so two truckloads of Italian media could zoom to the front to capture the "taking" of the town, where residents waved and offered no resistance.

The Italians were the most controversial addition to the multinational force trying to make eight Somali regions safe for food deliveries after widespread clan fighting and looting.

Italy colonized much of what is now Somalia in the 19th century. It relinquished the territory in 1960 in the face of an independence movement that was broad-based compared to the fractured chaos reigning now.

"The Somalis hate the Italians," said Abdi Sulaym, 26, as the convoy snaked through his village of Garsolo.

The journey was a bit of a chore for U.S. Army Lt. Jim Worthington, a platoon leader of a Military Police contingent providing convoy security.

He said his unit spent two days before the march waiting for the Italians to decide how to go about it. Worthington, a stocky, no-nonsense bulldog of a man, said his unit had to counsel the Italians on spreading out the convoy so they wouldn't be an easy target.

"They couldn't fight their way out of a wet paper bag," he said.

Kenyans elect leader peacefully

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Kenyans voted peacefully Tuesday in their first multiparty election in 26 years after enduring months of politically motivated violence and widespread charges of campaign fraud and intimidation.

President Daniel arap Moi, 68, was expected to win re-election against an opposition split by personal differences and power struggles.

At stake is the continued stability of Kenya, once considered an exception to the autocratic rule and economic collapse that have afflicted much of the rest of Africa.

The East African nation faces its worst economic crisis, and may fear that political and ethnic rivalries sharpened by the campaign in which scores of people were killed and thousands driven from their homes could escalate into widespread civil conflict.

Seven candidates challenged Moi, who has held power since 1978, and his Kenya African National Union, which has ruled uninterrupted since independence from Britain 29 years ago.

The opposition candidates included two former vice presidents, a former Cabinet minister and former dissidents.

In addition to the presidency, voters cast ballots for parliamentary and local seats. At least 16 of the National Assembly's 188 seats went directly to government party candidates who either were nominated unopposed or whose opponents dropped out or were eliminated.

Scandal-plagued president Collor resigns

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Dogged by an influence-peddling scandal, Fernando Collor de Mello abruptly resigned Tuesday as head of Latin America's largest country and was replaced by his vice president.

Tamar Franco was sworn in to serve the remaining two years of Collor's term. Stamping a "Mr. Clean" image on his administration, Fran presided at the podium, to the laughter and applause of the gallery.

The 62-year-old Franco broke with Collor in May and was untouched by the scandal that surrounded Collor — Brazil's first democratically elected leader in 29 years and the first ever to resign under a cloud of scandal.

Collor, 43, voted into office on a clean-government platform, was accused of taking $6.5 million from Paulo Cesar Farias, and using it for his private inquests like waterfalls at his private mansion.

He was impeached by an overwhelming vote of the Chamber of Deputies on Sept. 29, and the case proceeded to trial in the 81-seat Senate, which appeared nearly unanimous in its decision to remove him from office permanently.

Twenty minutes after the trial began, Collor's lawyer, Jose de Moura Rocha, read a terse note informing lawmakers of the president's decision to quit.

Collor's spokesman, Etevaldo Dias, dismissed as "nonsense" the rumors circulating in Brazil that Collor would leave Tuesday night for Paris, where he has an apartment.

Japan still to use plutonium as fuel

TOKYO (AP) — Resource-poor Japan is sticking to its plan to use deadly plutonium as nuclear fuel, but has decided to begin research on a more efficient plutonium-fueled reactor, officials say.

Japan's nuclear energy program has drawn fire from environmentalists and other critics concerned about the risks from plutonium, which is highly toxic and can be used to make nuclear weapons.

Environmentalists are planning protests for the expected arrival Jan. 5 of a shipment of plutonium from France.

In addition to its plan to develop fast-breeder reactors that would produce more plutonium than they consume, Japan wants to develop a high-conversion reactor to absorb the excess plutonium, officials at the Japan Atomic Energy Research Institute and the Power Reactor and Nuclear Fuel Development Corp. told The Associated Press. Both spoke on condition of anonymity.

A high-conversion reactor consumes plutonium and uranium, whereas a fast-breeder both consumes plutonium and changes uranium into plutonium.

Officials should learn from E-911 experience

Of all the troubles Magic Valley counties have had with cooperative efforts, the petty politicking that has hampered the enhanced 911 system is among the most foolish.

The joint operating agreement that created a regional E-911 authority last year contained a clause requiring the system's dispatch center to be located in either Jerome County or the Wendell area. As the story goes, this clause was dictated by Gooding County's fear that Twin Falls would dominate the program.

The result of this sop to parochial jealousy may well be that all residents of the region - including those in Gooding County - will pay too much for an E911 facility.

E-911 is a plan under which technology will enable a central dispatching center to send emergency personnel to your home more quickly and surely than they can now. They'll be able to pinpoint your location even if you're hurt and unable to tell them your address.

If you live in Twin Falls County, Jerome County, Gooding County or Lincoln County, you've been paying $1 a month for the past two years to finance the project. You've been paying its director's salary for a year.

The system surely could have been up and running by now, if not for the dithering and dawdling of the four-county board that's in charge. But now the board appears on track for construction of a building in Jerome, and the job should begin progressing smartly.

(If it doesn't begin progressing smartly, the board will answer to some angry taxpayers.)

From a practical standpoint, the dispatch center's location doesn't make much difference. Modern electronics could make a site in Pocatello perfectly suitable. So putting the new building in Jerome doesn't do any harm.

In any case, changing the joint agreement now is probably impossible, Jerome it is.

What's irritating is that a new building may not be needed at all. The board reportedly exhausted other options on the north side, but it has been forbidden to look south of the Snake River since the strike.

We don't know, but we'll bet that somewhere in Twin Falls a suitable building could have been had for less than the new one will cost.

Perhaps that doesn't matter to taxpayers in Gooding County. Perhaps they'll be thrilled to pay extra, just so the center won't go to Twin Falls.

Perhaps, but not likely.

The lesson in all this is obvious. Elected officials need to think more about what benefits citizens, and less about carving up the goodies.

What would honest Abe have thought?

George Weigel

Thus the real question is not whether entrance into the Republican (or Democratic) Party requires checking one's moral convictions at the door; the question is what moral convictions are going to shape a party's platform and policies. And further, whether the moral boundaries of a political party will be determined by argument.

George Bush's tent was big enough for Pat Robertson and Lynn Martin; but there was no room in Bill Clinton's inn for Bob Casey.

One also wonders what the first Republican president, Abraham Lincoln, would think of attempts to build a "Republican majority" by excluding "issues of morality and conscience" from party deliberations.

The Republican Party began as the party of conscience on the central moral-political question of the mid-1850s: Was there a constitutional right to hold property in human beings? The Supreme Court, in the Dred Scott decision, said that there was. Believing that a fundamental injustice threatening the very legitimacy of the constitutional order had been perpetrated by Chief Justice Roger Taney and the court majority, millions of Americans - incrementalists as well as abolitionists - organized politically to press the moral argument against slavery in Congress and in presidential politics.

For the heirs of these Republicans to now declare "issues of morality and conscience" out of bounds is, to say the least, an act of exceptional historical insouciance.

It is also dangerous - for the Republic, not just the Republican Party. The 1992 election was not decided by the "family values" issues; they were rarely engaged at any level of sophistication.

Yet millions of Americans believe that the lifestyle liberation movements of recent decades threaten them, their children, their communities and indeed the American democratic experiment.

To tell these people that the party in which such concerns could be aired is now going to "exclude issues of morality and conscience" from its deliberations is a prescription for even more cynicism, polarization and divisiveness than we have seen in 1992.

George Weigel is president of the Ethics and Public Policy Center in Washington. He wrote this story for the Los Angeles Times.

persuasion and democratic deliberation, or by the ukase of party leaders enforcing the demands of various interest groups.

At its convention in New York in July, for example, the Democratic Party made clear that its tent was not big enough to include the liberal Democratic governor of the nation's fifth largest state, Robert Casey of Pennsylvania, who happened to hold views on abortion that the party's managers regarded as inconvenient.

George Bush's tent was big enough for Pat Robertson and Lynn Martin; but there was no room in Bill Clinton's inn for Bob Casey.

For all that they handled the argument clumsily (and, in the case of President Bush, sheepishly), the Republicans at least had a debate on issues at the intersection of morality and public policy. The Democrats laid down litmus tests on feminism, abortion and "gay rights" and enforced them rigorously. (A pro-life Democratic Senate candidate in 1992 was, for example, simply inconceivable.)

Navy could have helped

This letter is in response to the Dec. 23 editorial. Why is the Air Force responsible for Navy aircraft? Why wasn't the Navy's disaster response team on the scene? If the Air Force can take their time to travel from Mountain Home to Hollister to search for a Navy aircraft and pilot, why couldn't the Navy help?

The Air Force did a very, very good job and shouldn't be cut down because they took a little extra time to gather and transport the equipment and manpower needed to the crash site. It takes time to get from Mountain Home Air Force Base to Hollister.

Even if the plane would have gone down in say July, it still would have taken Air Force search teams at least two to two and a half hours to travel to Hollister. Last week's storm had left the route from Mountain Home to Hollister very hazardous to travel upon; thereby adding onto the travel time.

In closing, I would like to say to you, the editor, put yourself in the Air Force and military's shoes before you start complaining about them.

ISDB appreciates inclusion

Thanks to the school officials in the Magic Valley for including the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind in your conference. They may not ring the bell at the ticket office, but they generate an intense competitive spirit, which has high priority in the sports field.

Our granddaughter, Andrea, has attended ISDB since age 3, except for a short spell in public school where they could not be met. Our daughter, Joyce, and her husband, John, have attended nearly all activities; and my wife and I have attended many of them over the past several years.

We are personally acquainted with many of the kids and they have been to our homes. I am continually amazed at their communication skills. Their hand, arm, eye and facial movements reflect their emotions and feelings, which I feel far exceeds communication in the hearing world. The fact we don't understand sign language, or any foreign language, is our problem - not theirs. I am sure these kids are far more proficient in their language than we are in our language.

Thanks to coaches, teachers, officials and especially Carl Peterson at ISDB; you are doing a fine service to our community.

Thanks to The Times-News and South Idaho Press for the fine coverage of these sporting events.

My 37 years as a junior/senior high principal reflected the need by most teenagers to "ring a bell." Let's push academic, athletic and other achievements and diminish publicity given to teen-age rapes, drugs, crime, etc. To do so will help the public restore confidence in these teenagers. They are probably better than they ought to be, considering the environment provided by our adult community.

Bad rap on Chatterton?

I recently read with great interest an article in your paper detailing charges against Officer Dan Chatterton. I had dealings with Officer Chatterton when he came to my home in response to a complaint. I found him to be courteous and professional in every way.

Officer Chatterton is accused of the unprovoked beating of a suspect. Is this the same officer? Is Twin Falls harboring policemen similar to those we all saw wielding their nightsticks against Rodney King? My Twin Falls? I couldn't believe it!

Then I read the comment by Officer Chatterton's attorney, Mark Stubbs. Mr. Stubbs contends that Officer Chatterton is the victim of constant and calculated harassment by his superiors.

I read further that the case against Officer Chatterton had been referred out of the county for review as appears to be standard procedure. However, our prosecutor's office recalled the case to Twin Falls before any determination had been made, saying that it should not have been referred to another office.

There were questions about "prosecution shopping." Who was doing the shopping and what were they hoping to buy? Was it those who would be rid of Officer Chatterton at any cost or those who seek to protect him from a punishment he deserves?

Who is right and who is wrong in this case? If Officer Chatterton is a hot-head who abuses his authority as a policeman, the citizens of Twin Falls have a right to know that and to be rid of him. However, if Mr. Stubbs is right and Officer Chatterton is a scapegoat and whipping-boy for the department and if there is, indeed, a conspiracy against him, the citizens have a right to know that also.

Whichever is the true case, I greatly fear for our safety. How can we trust in a police department run by men who use their offices to harass and intimidate?

What is being done by the Idaho Bureau of Investigation, the prosecutor's office or the Times-News to follow up and report on these accusations? When will the citizens be given the results of these investigations and know the truth of the matter?

We have a right to know what is happening. Anyone out there who has a conscience similar to mine, please let your voices be heard. Let's demand some answers and demand that justice be done.

Hey George, where's the beef?

The most embarrassing thing I ever did happened in 1968. I voted for Richard Nixon. I have my excuses. I was just turned 21 that year. My parents had always voted Republican. It was the first time I had ever voted. I was politically ignorant. I was in college and hadn't developed an opinion about the conflict in Vietnam until the guys started coming home in 1969.

The main problem with Nixon: He believed in manipulation over leadership. The problem with Jimmy Carter: He was a diplomat instead of a leader. I even had hopes when Ronald Reagan took office that this country had lucked out and found a leader.

At the time of his election, I predicted that they (George Bush and company) planned that Reagan would die in office and the ex-head of the Central Intelligence Agency (George Bush) would be running the country. I have been watching the mess this great nation of ours is presently in develop ever since. You see now that George Bush was a manipulator and not a leader.

Bush started his move when he was head of the CIA under Carter. The oil fiasco, the hostages in Iran and the interest rates were all manipulations. Just like the mess in the Middle East with Iraq, all of Central America, Somalia and Israel are errant foreign policy and CIA manipulations.

You are kidding yourself if you think the drop in interest rates before the election was an accident.

Ronald Reagan was a puppet. So were Oliver North, Casper Weinberger and Manuel Noriega.

It goes on and on. Someday, I hope a book will be written. I don't care about prosecution for criminal intent and I don't care about the morals, for I think Bush and company felt they were doing the right thing. I just think the public should know.

It is just too bad that Congress and the voting public can be so dumb as to let them drive the military industrial complex so hard that we are desperately weak on schools and infrastructure. So dumb as to exploit cheap foreign labor to the point that buying anything made in the United States of America for a Christmas present is next to impossible.

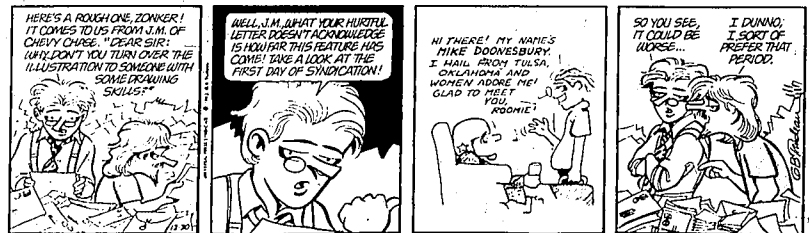

So callous as to ignore the plight of agriculture and the inner cities at home. Tell me, George and all you bozos in Washington, D.C., where did all the money go and what do we have to show for it?

Well, I voted for a winner and I hope I don't get embarrassed again.

'Toys for Tots' a success

KMVT's "Toys for Tots" campaign has come to another remarkable close. For me to simply say thank you seems a bit glib, but thank you, indeed, for your most generous contributions to the 1992 campaign.

Each year the need grows, and each year you respond with your time, your toys, your money, and your warm wishes to help young Valley children have a little hope and a belief that they live in a place where people really care about them.

KMVT Television is proud to be the moving force behind the annual "Toys for Tots" program, but without good folks like you, this project would not be possible. Thank you again for responding to the need and for entrusting us to help foster a difference.

On behalf of the staff and management of KMVT Television, let me wish each of you a most prosperous 1993!

No preferential treatment

Referring to an incident on Dec. 15 in which a friend was involved: My question is to the four city police officers whom I have been led to believe acted unprofessionally. I was told that a 100 percent disabled Vietnam veteran was, in his opinion, assaulted by police officers. Is all the force you used necessary? I don't believe so. I've known this man for 20 years. I know he's much smarter than to attack four police officers. I've always known him to be a law-abiding citizen. I believe the officers acted hastily with excessive force that was unnecessary.

Gentlemen, in my opinion, you made a mistake.

Citizens of Twin Falls, when a police officer makes a mistake, do we let them go because they are police officers or are they subject to the same laws we are?

Speak up! Avoid bullying

This off-to Bob Goertgen for having the courage to write about our brave boys in blue! It's too bad that the only way one has to bring a halt to harassment and brutality is to write a letter to the editor.

Three years ago, I was forced to do the same thing.

We made the mistake of reporting a major drug dealership and the resulting harassment of my family by the police would churn your stomach.

They were too spineless to harass a man. Instead, they abused a woman and girl for months. The mayor and City Council would not help. Instead, empty promises to help were made, and not kept. Some of you may remember my letter to the editor in August of 1989, cautioning against reporting drug dealers to the Twin Falls police.

Perhaps if everyone who has been harassed, brutalized and bullied were to complain, the powers that be would be forced to make a change - if for no other reason than to keep themselves from looking bad.

Citizens have no other avenue of assistance than to turn to the media, and that is deplorable in a so-called democracy.

Fun counting birds

Stuarne Huxhold wrote an excellent article on the Hagerman Valley Christmas Bird Count, which took place Dec. 20.

Our 16 birds found a total of 48,091 birds, representing 53 species, within 7 1/2 miles of Hagerman. Unusual species included a northern shrike, two short-eared owls, a varied thrush, an old-squaw and a house wren.

Included in the total were 17,883 mallards and 1,909 horned larks.

Anyone with a passion for birds, no matter their skill level, is welcome to call me at 536-6796 for information on next year's Christmas Bird Count. The Ketchikan area count will be held on Sunday, Jan. 3, 1993; contact Brian Sturges at 726-2602 for further information.

No free ride to Nationals

I am writing this letter in response to the Dec. 17 article about the College of Southern Idaho's Women's Basketball program. After making one of the toughest decisions in my life, I must publicly defend myself.

It was mentioned in the article that the sophomore enjoyed a free ride to nationals last year. I can't believe that Larry Hovey could write something like this. First of all, I have put in 1 1/2 years of hard work playing two sports at CSI. I played as many minutes as anyone on the team last year and also started in one game at the national tournament. All of that is irrelevant, though, because there was not one player on that team who got a free ride. No one on any team ever does. Every player contributes to a team, whether it be in practice or a game. One would think a sportswriter would know better than that.

The article also mentioned that I quit because I couldn't handle the pressure. This was definitely not the case. As for my reasons for quitting the team, I submitted a list to my coach. If anyone cares, and I hope someone does, to know why the other players quit, they should ask them personally.

That was a low blow, Larry. You would never have the guts to say things about a player from the men's program. I even doubt that you would have the guts to say whether it be in practice or a game. One would think to your call.

Questions remain in wake of Bush's Iran-Contra pardonings

'Lackeys' told lies to Congress

President Bush pardoned former Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger and the Iran-Contra lackeys to do what he wanted them to do that Bush "didn't know about" - since he was out of the loop at the time.

Charles Levandosky

There is really nothing humorous or compassionate about the pardon. Bush did know. And the Iran-Contra lackeys lied to Congress and the American people. And the Reagan administration thought it could have its own government not ruled by a balance of power - where the people have a say through their elected representatives.

A dangerous presidential philosophy emerged during the Nixon administration. It postulated that the president is above the law. That imperial philosophy only changed slightly during the Reagan years to mean that the president is the law.

We cannot hope that this pardon will ring down the final curtain on a mournful drama that jeopardized American democracy. A recent succession of Republican presidents have flirted with the creation of a shadow government outside the rule of law and outside the checks and balances of the U.S. Constitution.

Unless a sharp outcry erupts from the citizenry, there will be no pressure to curtail these anti-democratic tendencies. Unless the sharp focus of an investigation continues and the results are made public, other despots and their lackeys will seek to undermine the balance that the Constitution demands between the executive branch and the legislative branch of government.

We cannot hope that what began in the Nixon era will end here with these shameful pardons. These pardons will shield those involved. They will throw a blanket over the truth. A cover-up will not help dissuade other power mongers who may someday haunt the halls of the White House.

The Iran-Contra affair was a serious threat to democracy - more serious than any fifth column of communist infiltrators we have had to worry about in our history.

The president and some cabinet members ignored the votes and censures of Congress, dismissed the checks placed upon the executive branch by the Constitution and played havoc with our foreign policy.

If it wasn't an imperial presidency with a shadow government under its control, it was perfectly close. And it would have made a mockery of any so-called democratic traditions.

These presidential pardons come less than two weeks after Independent Prosecutor Lawrence E. Walsh, who has investigated the case for six years, found out about the existence of diary notes taken by Bush during the Iran-Contra affair - dating from November 1986.

Casper Weinberger had lied about taking notes during that period. The notes - 2,000-some pages - were uncovered two years ago. Weinberger was to go to trial for lying to Congress.

Bush had also denied taking any notes during that period. He denied ever knowing any details about the arms-for-hostages deal. He was out of the loop, he claims.

Now, the president has pardoned Weinberger for lying to Congress - and has said, in effect, the law doesn't matter. Congress doesn't matter, the American people don't matter.

But Bush has descended even lower, despicably lower - for by pardoning Casper Weinberger, the president has, in essence, pardoned himself. He too, denied the existence of Iran-Contra notes. They exist. He wrote them. He knew.

The presidential pardon halts two impending trials: Casper Weinberger's and the trial of the former head of the CIA's Western European Division, Dewey Clarridge.

The pardon also wipes out the convictions of four other Iran-Contra lackeys: Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams and former National Security Advisor Robert McFarlane, both members of the Reagan administration. And it erases the convictions of former CIA officials Clair George and Alan JJ. Piers Jr.

President Bush's pardon is another attempt to cover up Reagan's and his own involvement in the Iran-Contra affair. Pure sleaze - handed to the American public on Christmas Eve with a plate of cookies and warm milk. As if it were a part of the season. Good cheer and charity. It stinks.

It will be a long time before we see the last dirty scam of that scandal swirl down the drain of history. And we shouldn't forget.

Charles Levandosky writes for the Casper Star-Tribune in Casper, Wyo.

Weinberger and Walsh both right

In the flush of his pardon, Casper Weinberger proclaimed that the special prosecutor was not prosecuting but persecuting, searching for legal technicalities as an excuse to indict.

Jon Margolis

In the fury of his frustration, the object of this contempt, independent counsel Lawrence Walsh, proclaimed Weinberger a liar.

They're both right. The nation is in Weinberger's debt for reminding it to be wary of prosecutors. They are dangerous people, not least because we too often forget to be wary of them.

A prosecutor's job is to prosecute criminals. But his quickest route to success is to get the bad guys, or perceived bad guys, criminal or not. Bylighting bad guys, the prosecutor becomes famous as a scourge of villains, the kind of fame easily pathed into high elected office or a very lucrative private practice.

In this pursuit, no one better serves the prosecutor's ambition than the bad guy who is also a politician. The seemingly honorable and independent lawyer (preferably young and handsome, but at any rate impeccably dressed) who brings a politician to heel wins a place of honor. For some reason, those who put him there tend to forget that the prosecutor, too, is a politician, no less ambitious than others, and no less likely to abuse power. And the prosecutor's power is terrible indeed. A skillful attorney can indict anyone, and once indicted the innocent as well as the guilty face the shame, and the expense, of a trial.

Worse, a prosecutor is likely to be a

On the other hand, when a man sitting near his notes tells an official criminal investigator that he never took notes, he has probably obstructed justice. Weinberger explained that he "had a different understanding of what they meant by notes."

This being a free country, anyone has the right to accept that account, and also to purchase the Brooklyn Bridge, the only difference being that the bridge costs money.

Then there is Weinberger's wonderful refutation of his own notes, which show that both he and then Vice President Bush knew that the sale of weapons to Iran was in exchange for hostages. They didn't really know that, he said, because President Reagan later said it was also to improve relations with Iran. This resembles nothing so much as the punishment from the gods whose wife catches him with another woman: "Who you gonna believe? Me or your eyes?"

At 75 and in shaky health, Weinberger probably deserves his pardon and some pity, if not honor. His pardoner deserves neither, not because of the pardon but because of the ignorant, dishonest statements that accompanied it.

When he dismisses the Iran-Contra proceedings as the "criminalization of policy differences," George Bush trivializes crime by senior officials. Disagreeing about what should be done is a policy difference. Lying about what has been done can be a crime.

When Bush claims that the conspirators were motivated by patriotism, he reveals only that he does not understand that what they did was fundamentally unpatriotic, even treasonous.

Whether or not the conspirators violated the statutes enough to warrant prosecution, they surely violated the Constitution, and the very idea of democracy. When a government alters its officials to do as they please despite the law, that government will not remain a republic.

Not a partisan Democrat, but Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said over the weekend that "there were crimes committed," and that the Iran-Contra plots amounted to "a constitutional crisis."

It's comforting to learn that some people understand. What a pity that the president isn't one of them.

Burglars strike school, home in Fairfield

FAIRFIELD - Authorities Tuesday were investigating a pair of costly burglaries.

Someone broke into Camas County High School early Tuesday and stole two new computers valued at more than $10,000, Camas County Sheriff's dispatcher Linda Martin said.

Burglars also made off with $6,000-$7,000 from a home in Fairfield, Martin said. There were no suspects Tuesday night, she said.

Rupert man faces charges for alleged obscene conduct

TWIN FALLS - A 39-year-old Rupert man has been charged with three counts of obscene conduct after several women reported seeing him publicly exposing himself in Twin Falls.

Kenneth E. Swearingin was ordered held in lieu of $50,000 bond after pleading innocent to all three misdemeanor counts Tuesday.

"There appears to be an ongoing pattern of conduct in which the defendant violates the public decency on public streets on a regular basis," Twin Falls detective K.C. Dudley said in an affidavit in Swearingin's court file.

A Twin Falls woman told Dudley that she saw a man exposing himself twice during August while driving on Blue Lukas Boulevard North. Three Jerome women reported similar incident in the same area in late October.

All the women said they took down the number of the automobile, which turned out to be registered to Swearingin.

Retirement party honors outgoing Sheriff Munn

TWIN FALLS - A retirement party for retiring Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn is scheduled today from 2 p.m.-5 p.m. in the county commissioners' office.

The public is invited to honor Munn, 62, who has served as sheriff for 13 years. His successor, Wayne Tausley, will be sworn in Jan. 11. The county commissioners' office is on the fourth floor of the Twin Falls County Courthouse at the corner of Shoshone Street and Fourth Avenue North.

Madrona Street extension to be discussed Jan. 18

TWIN FALLS - The City Council plans a Jan. 18 hearing on possibly extending Madrona Street.

The council and the Twin Falls School District are talking now about who should pay to extend the road when a new auditorium and gymnasium are built at Twin Falls High School.

City policy requires developers to pay for improvements. But school district officials say the bond issue passed last May does not include money for extending Madrona between Stadium Boulevard and Filer Avenue.

District Superintendent Terrell Donich told the council recently that the district board of trustees do not think Madrona needs to be extended and that to do so could create a safety problem for students.

The city's 1964 Master Street Plan designates Madrona as a collector street between Pole Line Road and Addison Avenue.

City officials say that building the auditorium would increase traffic in the area and that would make the Madrona extension necessary.

The Jan. 18 public hearing starts at 6 p.m. in the council chambers in City Hall.

Nevada senator weathers cold during cattle rescue

ELKO, Nev. - Christmas Eve started on a bitterly cold note for state Sen. Dean Rhoads after he and a ranch hand became snowbound in a remote area of Elko County.

Rhoads and Trague Cuthbert, 35, heard some of their cattle were stranded in the snow and took off on Wednesday from the senator's Tuscarora ranch.

Because of the snow, Rhoads said a 15-mile trip ended up to be a 210-mile ordeal before they were in a cabin. They made a fire from a supply of wood in the cabin and shared a can of peaches they found.

As darkness began to fall and the horses started to tire, Rhoads and Cuthbert took refuge in a cabin. They made a fire from a supply of wood in the cabin and shared a can of peaches they found.

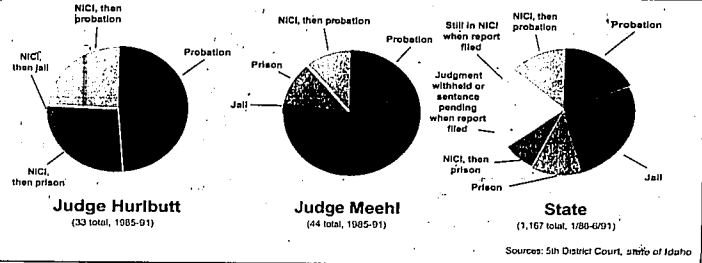

With the temperature around 10 below zero outside, Rhoads said they stayed close to the fire.

Judges strike delicate balance

Hurlbutt, Meehl likely to put molesters on probation rather than in jail

By Kirk Mitchell and Phil Sahm
Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS - The two district judges in Twin Falls release convicted molesters on probation in six out of every 10 cases.

A miscarriage of justice?

Not at all, say Judges Daniel Hurlbutt and Daniel Meehl. The figures show the upside-down logic that rules in sexual abuse crimes, Hurlbutt said.

"How can anything so horrendous require anything less than sending them away for life? The fact is, it does," Hurlbutt said in an interview with The Times-News.

Varying sentences - B3

From 1985 through 1991, Meehl and Hurlbutt handed down 77 sentences for lewd and lascivious conduct with a child, statutory rape or sexual abuse of a child, all felonies; and for sexual battery, a misdemeanor.

Of those 77 sentences, 48 defendants - 62 percent - received probation.

That compares with 188 of 1,167 defendants statewide - 16 percent - who received probation from January 1986 to Judge Daniel Hurlbutt says each sex abuse case demands its own analysis.

Men who have molested children: 3 stories

How the story unfolded

When psychologist Paul Ives asked the reforming child molesters seated around the room how many of them had considered suicide, all but one raised his hand.

That response contradicts a common perception that men who sexually abuse children need to be sent to prison or they won't grasp the seriousness of their crimes, said Ives, who runs the support group.

The group, which meets every Sunday night, is made up of about 40 men, most of whom are required to attend as a condition of their probation or parole on convictions for sexually abusing children.

Last Sunday, about 20 men took turns talking about their lives. After the session, three of them agreed to tell their stories to Times-News reporter Kirk Mitchell. The paper did not use their real names so that their victims could not be identified.

Bob's story

A 36-year-old former Air Force security officer, Bob said he once thought child molesters deserved a bullet in the head. His perspective changed when he became a molester himself.

It's difficult to say why it happened, he said.

When a series of his affairs soured his marriage, Bob said he turned to his 9-year-old daughter for affection and understanding.

A lifetime of using pornography broke down natural barriers, he said. He justified molesting the girl by convincing himself that she was inquisitive and that he was teaching her about life, he said.

"Pretty sick logic, huh?" he said.

His misdeeds caught up with him one night.

As Bob opened his front door, his wife struck him in the face with her fist and ordered him out. Her daughter had earlier told her about "three molestations."

The next day she started police with his confession, fully expecting that it would lead to life in prison, he said.

Instead, 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl gave him probation.

His home for the next two years was a camper shell.

In some ways, Bob said, it would have been easier to go to prison. He would not have had to face people or struggle to pay counseling fees.

But prison would have been devastating to his family, forcing his wife out of the home to get a job when their three children needed her most, he said.

Bob's daughter, interviewed Monday, said she didn't want her father in prison.

"He was my dad," she said.

Through counseling and treatment, Bob said he has learned the pain he has caused his family. He also understands more about himself and can recognize thinking errors that lead to trouble.

After two years of legal restrictions, his visitation privileges were restored, and two days before Christmas, Bob moved back home.

"Just because there is sexual abuse doesn't mean it's the end," Bob's wife said Monday. "Families can get back

Dispute sends immigrant to jail

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - An Armenian immigrant has been charged with beating his estranged wife and trying to kidnap her as part of a dispute over the couple's possessions.

Seryj Gazaryants, 35, of Twin Falls, was arrested Tuesday on felony charges of burglary, robbery, attempted second-degree kidnapping and battery with the intent to commit a serious felony.

Gazaryants was ordered held on $20,000 bond. The hearing will continue today with an interpreter present to assure that Gazaryants fully understands the proceedings, deputy prosecutor E. Scott Paul said.

Gazaryants was arrested Monday afternoon not long after his wife told police that he had attacked her in her home.

Olga Gazaryants told Twin Falls police officer Michael Hottman that she had received a restraining order against her husband earlier this month.

On Monday, he showed up at her doorstep at 1203 Twin Villa Loop demanding to be let in. Hottman said in an affidavit included in Gazaryants' court file.

When Gazaryants tried to break in, his wife opened the door; he demanded that she give him all her clothes and personal possessions, but she refused, the affidavit says.

Hospitals continue to seek building site

By Florence Blanchard
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - Fifteen months after Blaine County Hospital and Moritz Community Hospital agreed to affiliate, the marriage is working but there's no end in sight for the house-hunting.

"We still have a lot of work in front of us," said Michael White, chairman of the 10-member Wood River Medical Center board of directors. "But what we've accomplished so far is very positive."

White says the tension that characterized the months leading up to consolidation has all but evaporated.

"The combined staffs and administration are working well together," he said. "The main issue we still have to resolve is where a new hospital would be built and I've come to the realization that you can't make everyone happy."

The decision to merge the Hanley and Sun Valley hospitals, the result of 60 public meetings and hundreds of hours of discussion, was marked by contention that still plagues the site-selection process.

Although eight different potential sites have been identified, no one site has generated much enthusiasm in the community.

The consolidation process was initiated to cut costs and increase quality care by eliminating the duplication of services and equipment.

"We are just starting to see some of the economies we projected, but it's going to take a period of time," White said. "We've gone about as

Jerome deputy prosecutor to join Twin Falls office

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - An experienced prosecutor from Jerome County will join the Twin Falls County prosecutor's office next month, newly elected prosecutor G. Richard Bevan said Tuesday.

John B. Lothspeich, a deputy prosecutor in Jerome County since 1990, has agreed to fill one of the two vacant Twin Falls positions, Bevan said.

Lothspeich brings much-needed courtroom experience to the office and has received high marks for his work in Jerome County, Bevan said. He earned his law degree from the University of Idaho in 1990 after receiving a bachelor's degree in political science there.

Bevan had hoped to have both deputy spots filled by Christmas, but offers to two other attorneys were rejected when the firms they currently work for offered to pay them more money to stay, Bevan said.

The deputy prosecutor job pays about $25,000, but Lothspeich will earn about $29,000 because of his experience, Bevan said.

E. Scott Paul will be the only deputy prosecutor to remain in the office when Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter wraps up her second full term on Jan. 11.

Deputies Barbara Blalock and Traci Post have accepted jobs in the Kootenai County Prosecutor's office. Chief Deputy Prosecutor Dan Mink also is leaving.

In addition to Lothspeich and Paul, former deputy prosecutor Kandace Kemp will work part-time as senior deputy prosecutor. Former Twin Falls police chief Tim Qualls has signed on as the office investigator.

Bevan said he hopes to round out his staff of attorneys within the week.

Jerome Council near choosing police chief

By H.R. Weikel
James-News Correspondent

JEROME—The City Council has narrowed down the field from 14 applicants to two for Jerome chief of police.

"We have two finalists, both from out of town," City Administrator Larry Payne said.

The council and Mayor Gerald Ostler will select between Patrick Bermingham, a member of the Kimberly Police Department, and James Dahl, senior sergeant with the Huntington Beach, Calif., city police department.

Officials could decide on the new chief during a special council meeting scheduled for 5 p.m. Monday.

"It could be done at the regular meeting on Jan. 5," Payne said.

"It's a tough decision to make, and I don't want to be put in a position of appointing someone the council won't approve," Ostler said.

He added Chief of Police George Silver III wasn't consulted in the selection process "because it's the council and mayor's job to select the chief."

Dahl, 54, has been with the Huntington Beach police department for 27 years and now is the jail commander.

Dahl has served as commander of the canine unit, was a police helicopter pilot for three years, detective supervisor for three years and worked parrot jobs, Ostler said.

Huntington Beach has a population of 200,000. Ostler added Dahl said he would have to make some adjustments, "but the same laws must be enforced in a large city like Huntington Beach as in Jerome."

"My wife and I have been coming to the Jerome area for five to six years," Dahl said. "We've always commented on the nice, little town Jerome is. If I am selected, it will be the answer to a life-long dream."

Dahl's wife, Deborah, was born in Peacote, Her father, Val Ashton, lives in Shoshone. The Dahls have three children, Kathy, 15, David, 6, and Matthew, 5.

Bermingham, 46, has served with the Kimberly Police Department since 1989.

Bermingham was on the Twin Falls police force for 21 years. He resigned in 1989, and then sued the city and City Manager Tom Courtney for allegedly forcing him to resign.

The suit claimed Bermingham was given "the option of being immediately terminated or of resigning voluntarily."

Later, the case was settled, and Bermingham said he signed papers that he would not discuss the matter.

In 1986, he was indicted by a federal grand jury for making false statements on an expense account when he claimed $132 in expenses for appearing as a witness for the U. S. government at a trial in Boise.

That indictment was dropped by a U.S. District Court judge.

"I didn't seek reinstatement with the Twin Falls department because within a few days of my leaving, Kimberly contacted me and I went right to work with them."

"I applied for the Jerome job because I've always liked Jerome and would like to get back into management."

Bermingham has two daughters, Ronette Garcia from Filer, and Becki Carlson, Twin Falls. He has three grandchildren.

Domestic dispute sparks deadly fire

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—A 42-year-old father died in a house fire Tuesday after a domestic dispute involving his four children, one of whom was struck on the head, authorities said. The children fled the home before the fire.

The incident began shortly before 9 a.m., when Salt Lake County sheriff's deputies were summoned to a neighbor's home on a domestic dispute call and found a boy with a head laceration, said Sgt. Mike Robinson.

A deputy went to the boy's home and found it engulfed in flames. He tried to enter but was driven back and later treated for smoke inhalation, Robinson said.

Firefighters controlled the blaze, kicked in a sliding glass door and found the body of Howard Brian Gibson in a bedroom. He apparently suffered smoke inhalation and burns, but the state medical examiner was to conduct an autopsy.

Force equals Einstein-like educator in Washington

CHIMACUM, Wash. (AP)—Educator equals motivated plus certified would be a success equation for Chimicum technology specialist Robert Force.

Though it is not the same as Albert Einstein and his formula for relativity, Force did share a common analogy with the scientist. Neither could teach their genius in America's public schools.

That was until last month when the Washington state board of directors approved Force's instructional specialist certificate, also referred to as the Einstein certification.

Robert Force, a technology specialist, poses by video equipment recently in Chimicum, Wash.

'He started the program on a shoestring. It was his vision.'

— Supt. Marcia Harris.

"Thanks to this law, Force can now teach classes that pertain directly to his video production and communications expertise, rather than act only as a technology resource for students. He wants students to learn to analyze the material presented to them on TV and not become 'victims of the media.'"

He is relieved to have obtained the certification. Without it, Force said he would have had to give up his job and go to school "to learn what I already know how to do." He estimated that would have cost him $20,000 to $40,000.

Officials from the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction said this type of certification is uncommon. Since the law was approved two years ago, only one other person has received the certification.

A musician, Force spent many years touring the country performing with his dulcimer, a three- or four-stringed instrument used most often to play folk music. He wrote a book about the dulcimer in Appalachia. And he wrote about Force and his music. Finally, he began producing his own music and, later, for other musicians.

"That experience and a desire to get out of performing led him into the world of video production, a passion that has developed into a profession."

That is when he began working at Chimicum school as a resource person for students wanting to create video projects related to school work. He did that for five years during which he helped expand the technology and equipment department.

He set up and monitors the equipment necessary for the school to run its Star School program, including beginning Japanese classes. He also helped students form a television crew that covers local events, including a cable TV elections forum.

Supt. Marcia Harris said: "He started the program on a shoestring. It was his vision."

School officials agreed with his ideas and initiated the request for the certification. His extraordinary talent or expertise was recognized in public records such as newspaper articles or awards. Proof of those accomplishments were attached to the district's request form.

"Robert Force had a ton of stuff," said Debbie Culwell, certification specialist in the state schools chief's office. "He was a really good candidate. They submitted a file of his stuff about 2 inches thick."

Harris said the district supports Force's ideas, which she believes will create a "tremendous new awareness" for students and help them recognize such things as how music in video builds moods.

"The new certificate boosted Force's excitement for his projects. His enthusiasm is only matched by the students and school officials."

The news of his success, however, has tipped off some celebrity and a little teasing for Force.

Said Harris: "We call him Al now."

Weather wreaks havoc on Howell Canyon Road

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

ALBION — Tuesday morning skiers wishing to get to the best trails on Pomerelle had to first make it past the biggest hump of all, on Howell Canyon Road.

High winds and lots of snow temporarily blocked the road near the base of Mount Harrison. Motorists wanting to get to the ski area were backed up onto Highway 77.

"The problem with the road was very indicative of our heavy snow and weather patterns," said ski area Manager Jodi Burrow. "It has been blowing from the south at lower elevations, which helped drift roads shut, Burrows said.

"It was blowing like a buzzard from below, but up here we were OK," she said.

The result was causing a "wall of snow" that required three graders and a snowcat to clear. She said the road was opened by noon.

To help alleviate the problem, Burrows said a ski resort employee would work 4 a.m. Tuesday removing snow.

Snow has been harder to keep off the canyon road than last year, Neal Thomas of the Burley Highway District said. Burley shares responsibility with the Albion Highway District in keeping the road maintained.

Thomas said that communication is kept between the ski area and highway districts to know if the road needs to be plowed in the morning.

During snow days, a grader operator tries to be at the bottom of the hill "at about daylight" to begin clearing snow, Thomas said.

"The county has been great," Burrows said.

June 1991, the period for which state statistics are available.

Overall, molesters coming before Twin Falls County's two judges are much less likely to get jail or prison time than molesters statewide.

The reasons for the difference hinge on philosophy. Unlike some judges, Hurbutt and Meehl contend that locking molesters up is often the worst solution for society and for victims, partly because it will not end the cycle of abuse.

Hurbutt said each case is different and demands its own analysis. "That takes more time, but he takes the safety of children, including his own, very seriously,"

To understand the punishment of child molesters, people must understand the many sides to the crime, Hurbutt and Meehl say.

The abuser is often a close family member, such as a father, whom the victim loves.

Fathers who molest their children often are otherwise law-abiding, good providers, imprinting them could imperish the family.

State law requires judges to release a person on probation unless certain conditions are met, including the accused is a repeat offender.

Punishing child molesters often becomes a task of damage control. The case of Edward M. is an example.

At age 67, he admitted molesting three girls, ages 5, 7 and 8. Hurbutt could have sent him to prison.

Instead, he orders him to get treatment. This way, he held down a job and paid more than $1,100 in therapy bills for two of the girls he molested.

He was a first-time offender, and with treatment at his age he was unlikely to re-offend, Hurbutt said.

He served his five-year probation without incident. (For that reason, The Times-News chose to protect his identity. He no longer lives in Twin Falls.)

Sending child molesters to prison can give society a false sense of security, Meehl said. Most child molesters get no treatment in prison, he said.

In addition, a hard-nosed approach could have a chilling effect on the number of cases reported, Meehl said. If children know their father is likely to be imprisoned, they may not want to tell. If abusers know a tough prison sentence is likely, fewer will confess, he said.

Hurbutt said victim's rights advocates have asked him to end the cycle of abuse by emphasizing treatment rather than prison. He and Meehl almost always require treatment as part of sentencing.

One woman who said she was abused as a child agrees that prison is not the answer for molesters.

"Sending them to prison won't do any good. Perpetrators come out more angry," said Janis Quinn, director of Volunteers Against Violence.

Twin Falls psychologist Paul Ives, who treats many of the child molesters released on probation in Twin Falls County, said Meehl and Hurbutt are fair.

But some psychologists and judges contend treatment is no substitute for hard time, particularly for repeat offenders.

"I think it is a crock," said Donna Rossi, a Stevensville, Mont., psychological nurse who is treating three former Buhl children who were molested. "I don't think for 95 percent of the people it does any good."

Two Boise judges interviewed by The Times-News said incarceration is a critical part of sentencing child molesters.

If nothing else, I have to send a message that we won't tolerate sexual abuse in the home," 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse said. "I think some incarceration is mandatory."

Gerald Schroeder, administrative judge of the 4th District, said at least a small jail sentence is important to show the molester the seriousness of his crime and show victims that they are not responsible for what happened.

Idaho sex abuse sentences vary

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — State officials recognize that sentences of sex offenders vary widely across Idaho.

A state report comparing sentencing records of judges throughout the state in 1988 and 1989 made this observation:

"It is clear that jurisdictions within the state have different philosophical approaches to disposition of child sex abuse offenders. In some jurisdictions, there is obviously a concerted effort to punish the offender and protect the victim and other children in the community by convicting the abuser and putting him behind bars."

"In other jurisdictions, the preferred approach appears to be an attempt to rehabilitate, rather than incarcerate the offender. Moreover, if the offender has a responsible job, these jurisdictions are likely to give a sentence less likely to cut the family onto the welfare rolls and to deprive the victim of treatment and counseling."

"The non-incarceration approach also attempts to reunite the family if this is possible and in the best interest of the child. Given the uncertainty about effectiveness of rehabilitation treatment for child sex abusers, however, the non-incarceration approach may create a risk for child victims and other children in the community."

However, other Idaho judges are more willing to give probation, Schroeder said.

Meehl laid out his personal strategy on child abusers in a 1984 sentencing memorandum:

"The court in this case, and in future cases, intends to accept a prosecution recommendation of leniency in all child sex abuse cases," if the defendant meets four standards:

- He is amenable to treatment.
- The abuse did not occur over an extended time or did not include infliction of pain.
- He has no prior convictions.
- He doesn't try to pressure the victim not to testify.

"The strategy we intend to give the prosecutor 'clout' in arranging plea negotiations, Meehl said he still uses it."

As a result, he rarely gives a criminal sentence together than Twin Falls County's prosecuting Attorney K. Ellen Baxter recommends, he said.

Of 33 sex abusers who received probation from Meehl, 27 had made deals with the prosecutor, promising to stay out of prison for more lenient treatment.

But Baxter said that, though Meehl and Hurbutt follow state sentencing rules, they often give weaker sentences than she recommends.

One example was Thomas Earl Shouse, a career criminal who molested three children. Baxter recommended a 3- to 15-year prison sentence. But Judge Meehl sent him to the North Idaho Correctional Institution at Cottonwood and then released him on probation.

Shouse promptly left town and hasn't been heard from since.

"It can be very frustrating," Baxter said.

Sending child molesters is a tough call for judges, said Judge William Hart, administrative judge for the 5th District.

"Because we don't fully understand the offender, I don't think we have a set policy for dealing with them," he said. "I believe there is not yet a formula."

Although Hart said he doesn't know much about Meehl's philosophy, he knows that Hurbutt takes each case into account individually and stays involved with them.

"It seems to me that Judge Hurbutt has a very good system for dealing with these types of cases," Hart said.

"It seems to me that Judge Hurbutt has a very good system for dealing with these types of cases," Hart said.

Hurbutt pointed out that he throws some molesters — typically repeat offenders or career criminals — not on probation for sex offenses.

Terrence Martin, 36, of Kimberly was an example. Sentenced this year for fondling a 10-year-old girl, Martin was obsessed with the child. He wanted someone to force her to marry him and had bought expensive gifts for her, including stocks and bonds and a car. Once, out of jealousy, he choked her until she turned blue in the face.

Hurbutt gave Martin a 15-year sentence. He must serve at least 10 years of that time.

"I think you are a grave risk of committing other offenses," Hurbutt told Martin.

In 1986, Hurbutt sentenced a man with a long criminal record to life in prison for repeatedly raping his daughter. (The Times-News is withholding the man's name to protect the victim's privacy.)

Hurbutt also noted that if an offender on probation steps out of line, he often responds with a tough prison sentence. One child abuser on probation was caught drunk. Hurbutt gave him 40 years for violating his probation by drinking.

Indeed, statistics show Hurbutt sentences more child molesters to prison than any state average. In the seven years from 1985 to 1991, he sentenced 8 of 33 defendants, or 24 percent, to prison, after sending them to Cottonwood for evaluation.

Statewide, only 22 of 1,167 defendants, or 19 percent, were sent to either Cottonwood or to prison directly.

How can it be that Hurbutt sends a larger-than-average number of defendants to prison, while also putting a larger-than-average number on probation?

One reason is that some judges send sex abusers to local jails, but Hurbutt and Meehl almost never do that option. In seven years, each of them sent only one child abuser man to the local jail.

Hurbutt said jail is designed to deter future sex crimes, but "these crimes defy deterrence. These people have serious problems. Deterrence is not a good way to deal with at the sentencing stage."

Meehl agreed. In sexual abuse cases, "deterrence is not a factor in jail time," he said.

Mini-Cassia/Magic Valley Lost snowmobilers rescued

ALBION — After spending a bitter cold night near the Lake Cleaveland area on Mount Harrison, a Utah couple was rescued Tuesday morning by a search team, officials say.

Tim and Melinda Orton were found by searchers at about 10 a.m. when Tim was discovered walking back to the snowmobile parking area by Pomerelle Ski Area, said Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal.

The couple apparently was unable to get their snowmobile up a gully they had gone down.

Crystal said a search for the Ortons began at about 7 p.m. Monday after the couple were reported missing by Tim's father.

Crystal said he wasn't sure where the Ortons were living, or if they were just visiting the area.

About 25 searchers combed the area until about 2 a.m., when the search had to be called off because of bad weather.

"It was too dangerous to be out," Crystal said.

Searchers resumed their search early Tuesday morning.

The Ortons spent the night on the mountain, "but I don't know under what circumstances," Crystal said.

People from the Mini-Cassia Search and Rescue, Mt. Harrison Snowmobile Club, U.S. Forest Service, Idaho Fish and Game and the sheriff's office participated in the search.

The Civil Air Patrol also flew a plane over the search area this morning before visibility deteriorated, Crystal said.

The Ortons were expected to return to a friends' home in Burley Tuesday evening.

Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — The 10 inches of snow the Mini-Cassia area received Tuesday, along with the accompanying slick roads and downed power lines, caused plenty of havoc, said a law enforcement official.

"It's been a mess," Lt. Jim Higgins of the Cassia County Sheriff's Department said.

Minidoka and Cassia county officials reported numerous minor accidents after cars slid off roads, which both officials urged motorists to stay home.

Besides slick roads in the county and city, visibility was also reported low on Interstate 84, while several power outages were reported in the Burley area, Higgins said.

Some power lines also had fallen in the Rupert area because of the weight of the snow, and a police dispatcher said Idaho Power was making repairs as quickly as possible.

Christmas decorations didn't escape the wrath of the snow, and the "Christmas City" banner north of Rupert also came tumbling to the ground.

A break in the snow occurred at about 5 p.m. and a spokesman at the Burley Airport said 1/2 inches of snowfall had been recorded.

Filer saves by switching insurance carriers

FILER — City officials in Filer will broaden their insurance coverage while saving money by switching insurance carriers in January.

More than $5,000 will be saved in premiums, and some deductibles have been lowered, which will also save the city money.

The new coverage for the city includes all buildings and property damage, as well as coverage on all city vehicles and liability for all departments, employees and volunteers, according to Lori Bergsma of Douds Stroberg Contracting, which won the city's contract.

Bergsma's proposal for the Idaho County Reciprocal Management Program based in Boise cost $22,467, while the city's current carrier, the Clear Lakes Agency, was $28,135 for 1993. This saves the city $5,668 in premiums.

The city has not determined total savings yet and is considering coverage for spraying chemicals. Filer has not carried this type of coverage before and will make a decision soon.

DNA testing won't be performed in Fino case

By Eric Goodell

RUPERT — DNA testing of blood samples won't be performed in the Randy Walker murder case.

Tom Watkins of the Idaho Attorney General's Office in Boise said he was recently notified by the laboratory in Reno, Nev., that there wasn't enough blood in the sample to be DNA tested.

Minidoka County Prosecuting Attorney David W. Haley had asked 5th District Judge George Granata in September to allow DNA testing to identify some blood samples. The trial date was extended from November to February to allow for the testing.

Haley said he hoped DNA testing would clear defendant Jerry Fino's fingerprint in Walker's blood. Fino was arrested in connection with the April 13 slaying of Walker, a Rupert pawnshop owner.

Coincidentally, Fino, Walker and stabbing victim Leah Kuhn-ten all have the same blood type.

Haley said Tuesday that although the announcement comes as a disappointment, it shouldn't hurt prosecution of the case by the attorney general's office.

"It would have been an icing on the cake-type thing," Haley said. "I don't know if it has much of an impact with the state attorney general's office."

The attorney general's office has been assigned to the case since incoming prosecutor Gara Newman served previously as a public defender and is familiar with the case.

When Granata allowed the DNA testing, he added results may be controversial because DNA analysis is still new.

to take revenge of his wife after she told him another man made a pass, at her.

"At the time, I didn't understand I had other choices," Jim said.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurbutt gave Jim a suspended prison sentence in May 1988 and placed him on probation.

Prison was the recourse for some people who keep repeating their mistakes or refuse to admit them, he said. But for him, prison would have done no good, he said.

The therapy he has received from Ives and the things he has learned from his peer group sessions have taught him how to make positive choices, like going into nature photography.

"I know I am a different person," Jim said.

Since his conviction, Jim has only caught glimpses of his wife and daughter at stores or around town.

"I would like a normal relationship," he said. But he knows it won't happen. In May, when his probation term expires, he could legally see his daughter.

But his estranged wife is opposed to that and Jim said he will honor her wishes and not try to see the girl until she is an adult.

Henrys Fork bill protects basin

BOISE (AP) — Thirteen conservation groups are carrying to the Idaho Legislature their own bill protecting 279 miles of the Henrys Fork of the Snake River, which they claim will accommodate agricultural interests.
>Last year, we compromised early and found ourselves working to pass legislation that fell way short in protecting the basin's riparian rivers," said Idaho Rivers United board member Jerry Sehlike from Idaho Falls.
>This year we have our own bill, and it protects the most outstanding rivers while allowing new reservoir storage and protecting all existing water rights," he said.
>We know exactly what it includes and why, and we've been able to gather support from around the state for the last month," said Jan

Brown, executive director of the Henrys Fork Foundation.
>By presenting a bill that thoroughly protects the basin's most outstanding qualities, we are giving the Legislature a clear choice of action."
>A comprehensive basin plan from the Idaho Water Resource Board won approval from the state Senate last winter but was bottled up in the House.
>Early this month, the water board adopted a revised Henrys Fork plan which protects about 200 miles of rivers, an increase over the 146 miles favored last winter. The Henrys Fork 279 bill will compete with the board's blueprint this legislative session.
>The board missed the boat on the Lower Henrys Fork," Brown said. "The stretch of the Henrys Fork below St. Anthony abounds with birds and wildlife. The fishery between Chester and St. Anthony is, rated as outstanding. It deserves state protection without a doubt."

>Proponents said the 279-mile option gives a recreational designation to two critical areas left unprotected by the water board: 38 miles of the Henrys Fork below the confluence with the Fall River and 12 miles of the Fall River below the Kirkham Bridge.
>Sehlike said the 279-mile alternative recognizes the important of irrigated agriculture to eastern Idaho. It protects all existing water rights and diversions, and recommends no changes in water law. It also allows for the development of a new Teton Dam and a site on lower Conant Creek for storage.
>Henrys Fork 279 differs from the Water Resource Board version by providing interim protection for Henrys Lake tributaries and the lake outlet while water quality studies are completed. It would ban new diversions to off-stream storage for irrigation on the Falls and Teton rivers.

>The basin has 3,100 miles of rivers and streams and less than 10 percent are protected. The remaining 90 percent remain available for current or new use allowable by law," Sehlike said.
>We put a lot of thought into developing our list of protected rivers," he said. "We didn't just add our personal favorites to the protected rivers list; we reevaluated the board's 1992 protected river designations.
>Using their own criteria, we added deserving sections and deleted sections that fail to rank as outstanding."

Union Pacific admits it was slow identifying chemical NAMPA (AP) — Union Pacific Railroad blames clerical errors as the reason it could not immediately identify the chemical spilled in a Nampa derailment.

>The contents of the railroad car were improperly billed so a physical inspection had to be done before any determination could be made," UPRR spokesman John Bromley said.
>About 200 Nampa residents in a half-mile radius were forced to evacuate their homes Dec. 15 when a ruptured 55-gallon drum leaked an unknown substance in a 21-car derailment.
>The chemical was later determined to be ethyl acetate, a foul-smelling resin that was not lethal in that exposure.
>Local emergency teams were critical of Union Pacific's slow response in determining the nature of the spill. Team members must determine whether state or local agencies should be called in.
>"This type of occurrence is not as rare as we would like it to be," Bromley acknowledged. "It shows the importance of maintaining good paperwork, and we're working on a program to alleviate these types of problems."
>Accusations the railroad believed it did not need to identify everything were not true, Bromley said.
>"We are quite well aware what we are responsible for," he said.
>But Bromley agreed with Nampa officials Union Pacific may face stiff fines from the Federal Railroad Administration.
>"Obviously the railroad apologizes for any inconvenience, but under the circumstances we did everything possible," Bromley said, noting the company followed through with accommodating claims.

Man guilty of DUI twice since killing 2

MURPHY (AP) — A Boise man has pleaded guilty to drunken driving for a second time since completing a prison term for killing a mother and her daughter while driving under the influence of alcohol in 1985.
>Angel Martinez Puga, 47, will be sentenced on the latest misdemeanor drunken driving charge but was free on his own recognizance. With still another drunken driving conviction on his record from 1979, Puga was supposed to report to an alcohol rehabilitation center the day before the fatal crash.
>We are going to let the judges know that we hope he is sentenced to the full extent of the law because he shows very little regard for life," said Bonnie Bonger, president of the Canyon County Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.
>But despite Puga's his lengthy record that includes a drunken driving conviction in July 1991, just 15 months after his release from prison, Homedale City Attorney Chris Nye said state law precludes charging him with a felony. That is limited to a third drunken driving charge within five years.
>Nye, however, said he wants the law changed to exempt time spent in prison from being counted in calculating that five-year period.

>Zangrafi's 31-year-old girlfriend suffered multiple bruises.
>She told police Zangrafi became upset because she had not bought enough Christmas presents for their children. When she returned from the store, he knocked bags of groceries from her hands and began throwing the groceries at her, a police report said.
>He then allegedly slapped her in the face and grabbed a knife on the kitchen counter, stabbing at her and hitting her in the stomach. He then allegedly attempted to stab her in the chest, but hit her elbow when she lifted her arm to protect herself.
>Zangrafi was released from the jail Tuesday without bail and was scheduled to return to court Jan. 11 for a preliminary hearing.

BOISE — A 28-year-old Boise man will serve at least 15 years in prison after pleading guilty to a second-degree kidnapping charge involving a 7-year-old boy.
>Leslie Stanley Walker could serve up to 25 years under a sentence imposed by 4th District Judge Gerald Schroeder.
>Walker pleaded guilty Oct. 26 to the kidnapping charge after Ada County prosecutors agreed to drop charges of first-degree kidnapping and felony injury to a child.
>Walker was accused of attacking the boy in a Boise park restroom on Memorial Day. The boy suffered a cut lip and severe bruising on his arm and back, police said.

Health department acts against business

LEWISTON — The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare is taking legal action against the owners of a Lewiston business for allegedly violating hazardous waste regulations.
>Bernard and Linda Schatz of Bernard's Towing and Complete Repairs are accused of failing to characterize and then improperly dispose of hazardous waste at their business.
>In a complaint filed in 2nd District Court Monday, Deputy Idaho Attorney General Kevin Beaton contends the couple was notified last May of alleged violations of state hazardous waste regulations. But since then the state and the Schatzes have not been able to resolve the situation.
>Linda Schatz had no response to the state's action Monday and her husband was not available for comment.

Jet with smoke in cabin aborts takeoff

BOISE — A jetliner carrying 109 passengers aborted a takeoff from the Boise airport after smoke began filling the jet's cabin.
>The United Airlines Boeing 737-200 — bound for San Francisco — returned to the Boise Air Terminal Monday afternoon, and passengers left the aircraft at the terminal gate. No one was injured.
>We were at the end of the runway about to take off, and then smoke started coming into the plane at about the midpoint of the cabin," said Verne Anderson, who was en route to Las Vegas.
>Passengers described the smoke and fumes as having a distinct electrical odor.

Sen. Reid won't discuss bribe allegations

LAS VEGAS — U.S. Sen. Harry Reid has declined comment about allegations in an FBI affidavit that one of the senator's friends plotted to bribe Nevada Supreme Court justices.
>Reid is responsible for recommending to the president who will be nominated as Nevada's next U.S. attorney. That selection is likely to inherit the bribe investigation.
>The Las Vegas Review-Journal reported last week that the FBI is investigating allegations that Las Vegas lawyer Jay Brown and others plotted in 1990 to pay bribes to guarantee the outcome of a civil case involving former owners of the Tropicana Hotel.
>The allegations are contained in a recently unsealed affidavit. The affidavit does not say a justice was bribed, but describes a series of discussions of how money could be paid to various people to influence the court.

Training school student dies in avalanche

LANDER, Wyo. — A student at an outdoors training school was killed after being buried in an avalanche, officials said Tuesday.
>Richard Samoff, 36, of New York City, was one of three National Outdoor Leadership School students caught in an avalanche Monday afternoon in northwestern Wyoming's Teton Wilderness. NOLS operations director John Gans said Tuesday. The other two students were rescued safely.
>The students were involved in a day ski trip in the remote area with 10 other students and three teachers. It was part of a two-week winter ski course at the school's international headquarters in Lander that teaches backcountry skiing, avalanche awareness and leadership skills.
>The course itself did not trigger the avalanche," Gans said. Police said it was somehow triggered from above.

Daly leaves PGA tour, seeks alcohol treatment

The Associated Press

John Daly's career hit bottom on Tuesday, almost as quickly as it took off.

One of pro golf's most popular and controversial figures, the 26-year-old Daly withdrew from the PGA Tour while he seeks help for an alcohol-related problem.

"I will check into an alcohol rehabilitation facility and will return to tournament play only when I am comfortable my life is in order," Daly said in a prepared statement.

The statement, issued jointly by Daly and PGA Tour commissioner Deane Beman from tour headquarters in Ponte Vedra, Fla., did not identify the treatment center or its location.

Daly, the tour's 1991 rookie of the year after winning the PGA Championship and one of the world's longest hitters, was quoted as saying Tuesday that he would immediately return to the tour.

After winning only once in 1992, at the B.C. Open, Daly was scheduled to start his season at the Tournament of Champions in Carlsbad, Calif., Jan. 7.

"There is no timetable on this," Tour spokesman Sid Wilson said. "It'll just be as long as it takes."

The announcement follows an apparent brawl at a party at Daly's home in Castle Rock, Colo., on Dec. 20 resulting in Daly's arrest on charges of third degree assault. He was free on $1,000 bail.

The Douglas County sheriff's arrest report said the fight occurred after Daly's wife, Betty, complained that the girl friend of one of the guests was "hitting on John."

The report quotes Betty Daly as saying John "just lost it." Betty told sheriff's officers Daly slammed her against a wall and pulled her hair.

Arresting officers said liquor bottles were strewn around the house, broken glass was on the floor, a large TV set was overturned and there was a hole in a basement wall.

"I deeply regret the incident at my home over the holidays," Daly's statement said.

"My first priority is to create the kind of home atmosphere for my family that we all want. I realize the importance of seeking professional help and, therefore, I will pursue counseling immediately for an alcohol-related problem."

Beman said Daly's withdrawal from tournament play was voluntary. "We all wish John the best in solving what is clearly a difficult situation for him and his family, and we hope that a successful rehabilitation will lead to a return to the tour," Beman said.

The tour said neither Beman nor Daly would have further comment.

The fight was the latest in a series of alcohol-related incidents that have plagued Daly since he leaped to prominence with his first tour victory in the PGA, one of golf's four Grand Slam tournaments.

Daly admitted he had been drinking before a confrontation with an airline stewardess which resulted in him leaving a New York-bound plane in Denver last June 22. He was forced to withdraw not only from the Buick Classic at Westchester Country Club after missing the plane but also from a charity event the day before.

John Daly will check into an alcohol treatment center and withdraw from PGA tour.

Elway schedules bone spur surgery next week

DENVER — Broncos quarterback John Elway, plagued by injuries this season, will have a bone spur shaved from his left shoulder next week.

Elway said the surgery will be next Tuesday. The injury had no effect on how he played this season, he said. "I guess I'm getting old," Elway said. "But hopefully this is the last thing that I have to have done for awhile."

The Broncos quarterback injured the shoulder against the Los Angeles Raiders in Denver's first game of the season.

"It did not hamper his play at all," Broncos spokesman Jim Succomano said.

Denver defensive coordinator wants Broncos' top position

DENVER — As Dan Reeves cleaned out his office Tuesday, speculation started on just who would be the next head coach of the Denver Broncos.

At least one candidate threw his name in the hat.

Broncos defensive coordinator Wade Phillips announced at a news conference Tuesday that he was officially a candidate for the head coaching job and that he wants it. Owner Pat Bowlen asked him to interview for the job, Phillips said.

"I've said all along this is the best job I've ever had, and the only job better here is the head coaching job," Phillips said.

The other name most often mentioned as Reeves' replacement is San Francisco assistant coach Mike Shanahan, a former Broncos assistant Reeves fired last winter. Shanahan still has close ties with Bowlen and quarterback John Elway, and some have said Shanahan and Elway played a part in Reeves' firing.

BEREA, Ohio — Doctors at the Cleveland Clinic placed two screws in Bernie Kosar's broken right ankle Tuesday, and the Cleveland quarterback is expected to recover completely.

Kosar initially broke the ankle in September when he was sacked in the second quarter of a loss to the Miami Dolphins. Thinking it was only a sprain, he played the rest of the game but was sidelined for the next 10 weeks.

He broke the ankle again in the same spot in the second quarter of Sunday's season finale at Pittsburgh. He stayed in the game for about a dozen more plays before sitting out the second half.

Giants may fire Handley later today

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — On the second day of the Ray Handley wait, New York Giants general manager George Young had nothing to say.

Young was not returning telephone calls from the media Tuesday, said Janice Gavazzi, his secretary.

But Madison Square Garden TV reported Tuesday night that the Giants would hold a news conference Wednesday to announce Handley's firing. MSG said a new coach would not be announced at that time.

Handley

The Giants said no news conference was scheduled and declined additional comment.

Giants owners Wellington Mara and Bob Tisch have given Young responsibility for deciding whether Handley should continue as coach of the team after failing to make the playoffs in his first two seasons.

Handley, who has a 14-18 record including a 6-10 mark this past season, has one year remaining on his contract.

Handley said Monday night that he wants to return and he knows what to do to turn the Giants around. He met with Young on Monday afternoon to discuss the situation.

There have been numerous reports that the Giants will fire Handley, but Young and the owners have insisted that a decision would not be made until after the season ended.

WFAN radio reported last Tuesday that Handley told his entire coaching staff on Dec. 21 that they would all be fired. The Giants denied the meeting took place.

The Giants ended the regular season on Sunday, dropping a 20-10 decision to the Philadelphia Eagles. They finished with six losses in seven games.

Twin Falls beats Capital

Trenkle sinks 3-pointer for 48-47 win

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Concerning the old crack-out it not being over, check Twin Falls' 48-47 last-second victory over Capital Tuesday night.

Brady Trenkle's three-point swisher with three seconds left brought the Bruins from a 42-29 deficit going into the final period.

It was a game of non-scoring. Twin Falls hit 15 points in the first six minutes of the game — and didn't get another 15 until Brady's three-point goal early in the fourth quarter. In between, the Bruins, plagued by passing and catching turnovers, managed eight points in the second period and sunk to six in the third.

By that time, Capital seemed to have things well in hand. But the Eagles then went six minutes and 55 seconds into the final quarter with just a free throw.

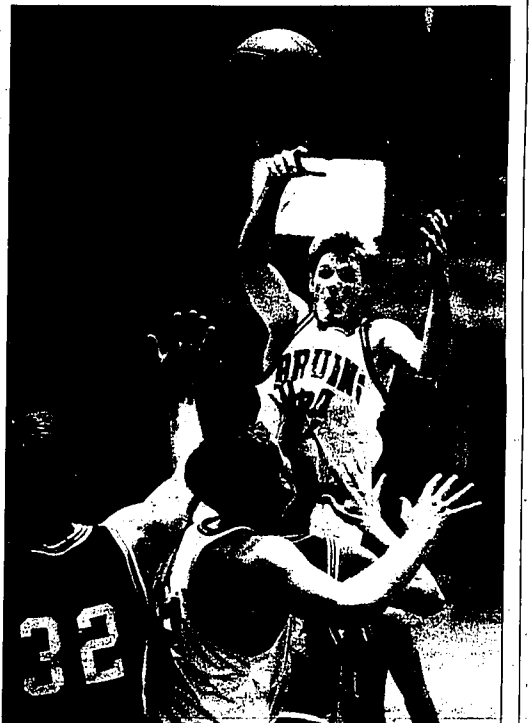

Trailing 42-29 as the last quarter began, Twin Falls took the lead at 45-43 with 1:37 to play. Chris Lords then collected Capital's first field goal and with 22 seconds left, Dave Heffner restored the Eagles' lead with two free throws.

With 13 seconds left, Twin Falls set up the play that turned Brady loose for his three-pointer from atop the key — behind a triple Bruin screen.

It was a gutsy call by Coach Ben Allen but he felt he could take advantage of Capital's aggressive defense and recent history.

"The first time we scored to go up we ran that play to (Jason) Ringenberg," Allen said. "The next time we tried it, Lords doubled up on Ringenberg. So I felt Brady would be open if we tried it again and he was. Also, we felt that Capital would be thinking we were going to J.J. (Astorsquia), who had three three-

Missed goal, extra point costs Utah Bowl win Fresno State

The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Drew Bledsoe passed for a Washington State-record 476 yards and Aaron Price kicked his second game-winning field goal this season at Arizona Stadium as the No. 18 Cougars withstood Utah's second-half comeback for a 31-28 Copper Bowl victory Tuesday night.

Chris Yergensen's 20-yard field goal attempt with 3:19 remaining was wide left and the Utes had reached Washington State's 5-yard line on a 70-yard pass play from Frank Dolce to Sean Williams.

Bledsoe broke his school record of 413 yards while throwing touchdowns of 87 and 48 yards to Phillip Bobo as the Cougars amassed 636 yards' total offense.

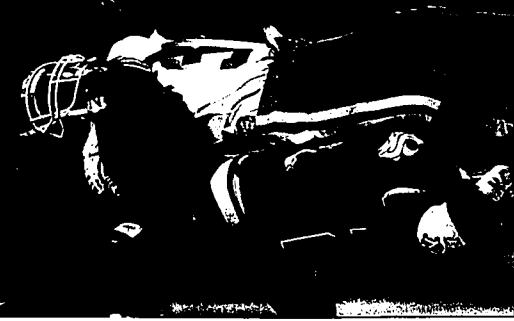

Signor Mobley recovered a fumble by Utah's Henry Lusk after a pass reception and returned it 9 yards to the Utes' 21-yard-line to set up Price's field goal with 5:08 left.

Price, son of Washington State coach Mike Price, kicked a tie-breaking and game-winning 47-yard field goal here against Arizona early in the season.

He missed a 42-yard tie-breaking attempt after Dolce had pulled Utah into a 28-28 tie with a two-point conversion pass to Scott Murry after Pierre Jones' 8-yard run with 9:35 gone in the third quarter.

Dolce completed 21 of 40 passes for 315 yards and two touchdowns, including a 49-yarder to Henry Lusk.

Bledsoe, who completed 30 of 46 passes, led the Cougars to a 21-0 first-quarter lead and what appeared to be a romp in the making. Bledsoe, a 6-foot-5 junior, had 300 first-half passing yards and gave the Cougars a crucial lifeline just before halftime.

coverage for a 48-yard score with 31 seconds to go in the second quarter.

The play came 2:20 after Utah pulled within 21-14 on Keith Williams' 25-yard touchdown run.

It took the Cougars all of 4:35 to score on Shaumbe Wright-Fair's 3-yard run in the first possession.

Before the end of the first quarter, Wright-Fair had his second touchdown, on a 3-yard run, the Cougars had a 21-0 lead and 242 total yards on offense and an apparent run under way.

Dolce hit Sean Williams for a 10-yard touchdown in the second quarter, and Keith Williams added a 25-yard run.

surprises Southern Cal

The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The fired-up Fresno State Bulldogs, playing what coach Jim Sweeney declared the biggest game in the school's history, upset No. 23 Southern Cal 24-7 Tuesday night in the Freedom Bowl.

The victory by the Bulldogs (9-1) over the favored Trojans (6-5-1) in the first football game between the schools was no fluke.

The Bulldogs' defense, which ranked 98th in the nation by allowing an average of nearly 30 points a game this year, limited the Trojans to 183 yards of total offense. Nose guard Zack Nick, middle linebacker Chris Peters and end Nick Serfas spearheaded the Fresno State defense.

The Bulldogs' offense, which led the nation in scoring for the second straight year, averaging 40.5 points a game, scored on a 1-yard run by Lorenzo Neal in the second quarter, a 43-yard field goal by Derek Mahoney in the third and put the game away with a pair of touchdowns in the final 3:25, on a 2-yard run by Anthony Daigle and a 5-yard run by Ron Rivers.

Fresno State drove 65 yards to Daigle's score, then, after James Barron's interception of a Rob Johnson pass, quickly went 56 yards to Rivers' score with 1:11 remaining.

Rivers gained 104 yards on 19 carries for the Bulldogs, who rolled up 405 yards of total offense.

NEW YORK (AP) — Pittsburgh's Bill Cowher, at 35 young enough to still be playing football, beat a strong field of fellow coaches to win The Associated Press 1992 Coach of the Year Award, announced Tuesday.

Cowher, the second youngest coach in the NFL, received 23 of 79 votes from a nationwide panel of media members, edging San Diego's Bobby Ross, who got 20. Cowher guided the Steelers from a 7-9 record last season to 11-5 and the AFC Central title, Pittsburgh's first division crown since 1984 and its best record since winning its last Super Bowl after the 1979 season.

"When you have team success, the personal accolades will come," said Cowher, who was hired to replace Chuck Noll, the most successful coach in franchise history. "You can't have success merely as individuals, you've got to do it as a team. That was proven with us having four players selected for the Pro Bowl and four others that were runners-up and are alternates."

"To me, the recognition I've received is an extension of our staff. I feel very proud of the job we've done."

He should. The Steelers were a moribund, sometimes bickering team that was not responding to Noll. So they turned to the Pittsburgh native, whose defensive instincts in Kansas City always played with fire.

Although a high level of success was not projected for the Steelers this season, Cowher talked about winning championships from the outset. And the team went after the AFC Central title from the outset, upending the favored Oilers in Houston in the opener. The Steelers had two three-game winning streaks and a four-game string.

"Here's an (Oilers) team that many picked to go to the Super Bowl," he said. "Not many picked us to even begin contention for the division. We went down there as very heavy underdogs and pulled out a win. Maybe that gave credit to what we were trying to do, and gave us a sense of confidence that maybe we didn't have before; maybe people talked about having it, but this really gave it to us."

Surprisingly, Cowher is the first Pittsburgh coach to win the award since it first was given in 1957. That's right, Noll never won it.

Ross took the Chargers to the AFC West championship after they opened 0-4, the first time any team has made the playoffs after such a slow start. In his first NFL head coaching season, he led San Diego to an 11-5 mark.

Two more first-year head coaches, Mike Holmgren of Green Bay and Dennis Green of Minnesota, were next in the voting. Holmgren received 92 votes and Green was named on eight ballots.

San Francisco's George Seifert was selected by seven voters, followed by Ted Marchibroda of Indianapolis with six, Jimmy Johnson of Dallas with five and Jim Mora of New Orleans with one-half.

'To me, the recognition I've received is an extension of our staff ...'

— Bill Cowher

"You've got to be able to handle it delicately," he said. "You're dealing with a lot of egos and yet you're still trying to keep everybody headed in the right direction. We've been able to do that and that's allowed us to handle some success."

Mavs, Nuggets among 8 NBA teams with early losing streaks

The Associated Press

The Dallas Mavericks, in a pace to become the biggest losers in NBA history, are by no means the only team struggling this season.

The Denver Nuggets, one of three teams to endure a double-digit losing streak, have lost 11 straight, the latest a 41-point rout by the Phoenix Suns, who have a 13-game winning streak.

"I wouldn't go as far to say that it's the worst I've seen any team play," Denver coach Dan Issel said after Sunday's 129-88 loss that tied the franchise record for consecutive defeats. "Someplace in professional basketball, sometime, someone has played worse."

Issel wouldn't have to look far to find a team playing worse than his. After all, the Nuggets are in fourth place in the six-team Midwest Division, ahead of Minnesota and Dallas.

Although the season is barely one-quarter over, eight NBA teams have had losing streaks of seven games or more. The Washington Bullets straggled a nine-game skid on Monday night, 97-96 at home against Atlanta.

Milwaukee, 31-51 last season, was the surprise of the NBA in the early weeks with a 10-1 record. Then came the 11-game losing streak that the Bucks finally snapped on Saturday with an overtime win over New York.

"I don't like to lose," Bucks coach Mike Fratello said before end of the streak, which also tied a franchise record. "This is the longest losing streak of my life. Last year, with our team (the Lakers) beat up, we're

'I wouldn't go as far to say that it's the worst I've seen any team play.'

— Denver Nuggets' coach Dan Issel had a seven-game losing streak. So it happens."

"We're being too casual with losing," forward Fred Roberts said. "We've just been too comfortable with it. At some point, you've got to hate it. It has to upset your stomach."

Of the eight teams with seven-game losing streaks, only the Detroit Pistons have turned it around, winning 10 of 11 games after a 2-9 start. Leading the way on the haplessness scale are the Mavericks, who took a 2-20 record into Tuesday night's game at Sacramento. That winning percentage of .091 is worse than the full-season record-low of .110 by the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers, who finished 9-73.

The failure to sign first-round draft pick Jim Jackson set back the rebuilding plan that Rick Sund, the Mavericks' vice president of basketball operations, calls "losing with a purpose."

"We knew we'd be bad this season because we've got the youngest team in the league. We're real thin NBA talent-wise," Sund said. "We have a lot of guys who want to play in the NBA, but who may or may not be NBA talent. There's a difference."

"Losing with a purpose means you're losing, but you're also developing the Jim Jacksons, the Doug Smiths and the Terry Davises, so that three or four years down the road, you've got something to show for it."

Sund said getting nothing to Jackson could mean several years before the Mavericks are playoff contenders again. Jackson was viewed as a piece of a massive rebuilding puzzle. His loss leaves Dallas five starters short of a playoff team.

"The biggest thing about this season was investing heavy minutes in people who would be here in three or four years," and Jim Jackson topped that list," general manager Norm Sonju said. "Jim Jackson was priority No. 1."

During their 12-game losing streak, that lasted from Nov. 17 to Dec. 16, the Mavs lost by an average of 20.3 points.

Since a 102-95 victory over the Lakers that snapped the streak, Dallas has started another one, losing six straight.

Minnesota has the second-worst record at 5-18. The Timberwolves' 114-95 loss at Utah on Monday was their seventh straight and 11th in 12 games.

"It's not fatal," coach Jimmy Rodgers said.

Sacramento, which has won three straight games after losing eight consecutive times, and Philadelphia, 3-10 at home but 5-6 on the road, have had frustrating seasons after starting with hopes for improvement.

"I've never experienced anything like this," 76ers coach Doug Moe said after a recent loss. "I'm so mad, I don't know who I'm mad at."

Reich to lead Bills in AFC playoff against Oilers

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The last thing Frank Reich wants to do is think too much, which may be more easily said than done for a football player who was a graduate student during his final season at Maryland.

"I don't want to become a robot out there. I think that sometimes, that's one of my weaknesses," Reich said. "I try to be so mechanical and disciplined in what I'm doing that I just don't go out there and play football."

Reich's first serious action of the season comes Sunday, when the perennial backup to Jim Kelly leads the Buffalo Bills into their AFC playoff game against the Houston Oilers.

With Kelly out for the Oilers game — and possibly any other playoff games that would follow — because of a sprained knee, Buffalo's chances of a third straight Super Bowl trip revolve around Reich.

"I may not have the talent that Jim Kelly has, but I think God has given me enough talent to be a good NFL quarterback," he said.

Reich's performance in the limited number of opportunities he's had to play back up that self-assessment.

The eight-year veteran has had six starts with the Bills and won four of them, including two memorable games over the past four seasons. Both of his losses came in games at the end of irregular seasons in which Buffalo had already clinched home-field advantage in the playoffs.

Two games in his first NFL start against the Los Angeles Rams on a Monday night in 1989 and a late-season game the following year against Miami — helped Reich establish himself with the Bills.

In the first, Reich led Buffalo to a shocking, come-from-behind victory over the Rams with two long, fourth-quarter touchdown drives. With Reich at the helm, the Bills then beat Indianapolis and the New York Jets in their next two games.

Buffalo Bills backup quarterback Frank Reich will fill in for injured Jim Kelly in this week's AFC playoff game against the Houston Oilers.

"The Rams game was the focal point," he said. "I didn't play well until the last quarter, but in the next two games I played really well."

The victory against Miami in 1990 came the week after the Bills lost Kelly in a victory over the

New York Giants, whom Buffalo would later meet in the Super Bowl.

"We had been in the playoffs the two previous years and both times we had lost on the road," Reich remembered. "It was very clear in 1990 that we wanted to get the home field advantage. We won that game (against Miami) and got the home field advantage and ended up in the Super Bowl."

Reich has seen little action this year. Before Kelly went down in last Sunday's 27-3 loss at Houston, he had appeared in three games, completing 13 of 23 passes for 122 yards, with no touchdowns and no interceptions.

"I had pretty much got to the point where I really hadn't gotten much practice time at all," he said. Earlier in the season, Reich said he would get 6-8 out of the 35 plays the Bills would run in any given practice. "Lately, I've been pretty much not getting it."

His first prolonged playing time came with the Bills trailing Houston and needing to pass to get back in the game. As they did to Kelly, the Oilers' pressured Reich, sacking him six times and forcing two interceptions.

"Despite the fact that we lost the way we did, I still saw a lot of good things," Reich said. "I'm excited about this week."

Reich said that getting some playing time last week will make a big difference this week. Coach Marv Levy agreed.

"Frank has always done very well when he's gone into a week and known he's had the full week to prepare, and takes the snaps in practice and is able to fathom his game plan and not (play) on the spur of the moment," Levy said.

Reich said it also helps that both he and his teammates know he is capable of leading the Bills to victory in a big game.

"That's important to me going into this game, knowing that they're behind me and they have confidence in me," he said.

Flyers' Lindros aggravates injury

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Eric Lindros of the Philadelphia Flyers sat out Tuesday night's game against the Los Angeles Kings after aggravating a sprained ligament in his left knee. But he practice and will miss at least one more game.

The injury occurred during the Flyers' morning skate at the Forum when Lindros twisted his knee pushing off while doing skating drills. He was taken to Cennella Hospital and examined by Kings orthopedic surgeon Dr. Ron Kvintz, who suggested that the Flyers' celebrated rookie also sit out Wednesday night in San Jose. "He went to make a right-hand turn, caught his foot in a rut and twisted his knee again," coach Bill Dineen said. "He went to the doctor this afternoon, and it didn't look like there was any further damage. But it was pretty tender. Hopefully, he'll be ready for Calgary (on Jan. 2), but we're not sure."

Lindros originally was injured on Nov. 22 at the Spectrum when he collided with two Buffalo players behind the net. This kind of ligament injury normally takes three months to heal completely, according to Flyers spokesman Mark Piazza, but Lindros was healthy enough to resume playing after missing nine games.

Consumer confidence increases sharply

NEW YORK

Stock prices zigzagged to a mixed finish Tuesday, responding erratically to signs of a stronger economy and increasing consumer confidence.

NEW YORK — Consumer confidence in the economy surged to the highest level in more than 1½ years—but forecasters questioned how long the good mood in the monthly survey would last.

Tuesday's report was the second straight monthly leap in the consumer sentiment index compiled by the Conference Board, a New York business research group. The news added to other modest signs of strength in the economy and fueled a mild holiday rally in stocks and bonds.

"This is a report that shows the economy moving ahead in the right direction," said Dan Seto, an economist at Nikko Securities International in New York.

Still, Seto and others said that unless critical measurements of economic vitality such as employment and income show substantial improvements in coming months, the consumer euphoria likely will evaporate.

"You can't spend confidence," said Anthony Karydakos, senior financial economist at the First Chicago Capital Markets Inc. investment firm. "The confidence is nice if it's there, but the hard reality is you need income gains."

The Conference Board said its monthly index of consumer confidence jumped nearly 13 points in December to 78.3, following an 11-point gain in November. It was the highest level since a 79.4 reading in April 1991.

The index, calculated on a 1985 base of 100, is derived from answers to a survey sent to 5,000 households nationwide, with questions that cover topics ranging from home-buying plans to local business conditions. It is considered a useful gauge for measuring consumer psychology.

Higher consumer willingness to borrow and spend is important to the economic recovery's stamina because it triggers more orders for goods and services.

Economists had anticipated some rise in consumer confidence following the November elections, figuring the incoming Clinton administration would inspire more Americans to believe the future would improve.

A key reason for Clinton's victory was discontent over President Bush's handling of the economy, which in recent years has been marked by tight fiscal layoffs in a range of industries, stagnant incomes, heavy debts and some of the slowest growth since the Great Depression.

Against that background, many Americans saved their money. But it has since become clear that in the last half of 1992 the economy has strengthened.

The Commerce Department, for example, said last week the economy grew at a 3.4 percent annual rate in the July-August quarter, the best showing of the Bush administration.

Even before the Conference Board index was released, there were other solid signs that consumers had started spending and borrowing more freely. Many merchants say this Christmas season was their best in four years.

Credit card companies have reported big gains in holiday card use compared with levels a year ago.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up almost 20 points at midday, was down 22.42 points at 3,130.84.

But — advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume came to an estimated 213.67 million shares as of 4 p.m. EST.

Pre-owned home sales reach high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of previously owned homes jumped 5.8 percent in November to the highest level in nearly six years as buyers rushed to beat rising mortgage rates...

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. reported that 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages rose to an average of 8.31 percent in November from 8.09 percent in October.

The Realtors said sales totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.85 billion in November, compared to 3.64 billion a month earlier. It was the second straight advance.

Wealthy scramble to avoid tax crunch

NEW YORK (AP) — The new year brings a new fear for companies, executives and other big earners...

Anticipating higher personal income taxes and reduced corporate deductions under the Clinton administration...

Beating the Tax Bite

Wealthy people and companies are adopting year-end strategies to avoid possible tax increases under President-elect Bill Clinton...

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF
"If I do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces."
- Shakespeare.
South thought he had nine sure winners all he had was the freebies. However, when the clubs didn't break, he discovered he had more work than he could handle.
South won his heart Jack and cashed the club ace, intending to run all five club tricks. West's diamond discard slowed the proceedings and South tried a diamond to dummy's king, losing to East's king. Back came a heart to South's ace, and after a club was conceded to East, another heart established West's suit. South was left with only eight winners, as he could no longer stop West from winning a spade and two hearts.
"Since West doubled, I played heart for the diamond king," South said. It was not a legitimate excuse. When South discovers an unexpected club loser, he can build a cinch trick safely in spades regardless of where the spade queen or diamond king might be. In today's layout, it's easy. He leads a low spade at trick three and he has nine tricks quickly. West wins his queen, but South wins the heart return and leads another spade. If West takes his ace, South takes two spades, three hearts, three clubs and a diamond. If West doesn't win his spade ace, South gives East an early club trick, and he wins three hearts, four clubs, a spade and a diamond.

A guide to beautiful buffets

Food facts

Advertising sometimes blends with real life

Sometimes advertising just can't beat real life. Consider McDonald's and its most prominent loyal customer.

President-elect Bill Clinton's regular stops for a cup of decaf after his daily jog have provided the chain with "more than $7 million" of free TV time and newspaper spots, estimates an advertising executive quoted in a recent issue of Advertising Age magazine.

But sometimes real life can't beat advertising, particularly when television commercials involve a mystery couple and their budding love affair.

The infamous Taster's Choice ads, which began six years ago in England and two years ago in the United States, feature a couple who just can't seem to get together. They have elicited such fascination that now a romantic novel about the two is about to be published in Britain.

According to Advertising Age, the book will tell us who the two love birds are, "where they are from, what cars they drive, what romantic relationships they have had in the past and what they do for a living."

No word on whether he pops the big question (Will you drink decaf?).

Group looks for recipes suitable for life on the road

Cooking in a recreational vehicle is tough — most RVs have cramped kitchens, limited storage and a persistent shortage of water.

If you have RV-tested recipes, the compilers of an RV users' cookbook would like to hear from you. They offer no prizes or payment but promise to give you a copy of the book if they use your recipe (which will be credited). Send recipes for snacks, beverages, soups, entrees, sandwiches and desserts to Randeil Knight, Chief Cook & Bottlewasher, Highway Gourmets, P.O. Box 2069, Belfair, Wash. 98528.

Dinner by mail: Mail-order company provides meals

Need some cooking help? Now you can call on your Extended Family.

That's the name of Gretchen Cryer's intimate mail-order food company out of Hudson, N.Y.

Three years ago, when Cryer's parents became suddenly incapacitated, her New Yorker started packing up 25 pounds of food every Sunday night to mail to her folks 1,000 miles away in Indiana. One night, her mother called to say, "Gretchen, you should go into business."

And since Mother knows best, Gretchen did. Now you can send a week's worth of food to your folks, your friends or yourself for $64.95, plus shipping. (That's for one person, but Cryer says many couples find the amounts generous enough for two.) Four seven-day menus range from Cornish game hens with dressing and brown rice, creamed peas and strawberry-orange salad to stuffed cabbage leaves with potato pancakes and applesauce. Each menu includes breads and desserts.

Everybody knows what college kids eat, right? Pizza and burgers from the local fast-food joint. Not!

A recent survey of 1,000 students on 10 campuses across the country puts a dunce cap on that stereotype. In the survey, sponsored by McIlhenny Company (makers of Tabasco), eight in 10 college students say they cook about five times a week, with more than half describing themselves as "decent cooks."

Campus is the most popular place to eat lunch, but dinner is most often eaten in an off-campus house or apartment, especially by upper-classmen.

And what do they like to fix for dinner? Pasta was mentioned most often by both sexes, with women likely to have veggies and salads and men opting for meats.

Compiled from wire reports

For those of us who consider ourselves unaided party givers, the leap to arranging buffets and throwing dinner parties may seem impossible, but it's really only a small, logical step.

Light and easy entertaining won't wreak havoc on your time, budget or your waistline if you know a few secrets. Here's a quick and easy course in the art of light entertaining to help you prepare a hassle-free buffet.

With a little planning, entertaining can be a breeze, especially when you choose a simple, flexible menu. For example, focus on the food by choosing a centerpiece dish around which you can plan your menu.

For a real showstopper that won't keep you in the kitchen all day, try Sausage-Stuffed Pork Loin with a spicy Apricot-Mustard Glaze. This elegant-but-easy main dish makes a great partner with satisfying side dishes like Orzo Risotto with Apples and Pasta Tossed with Butternut Squash and Parmesan.

Part of the pleasure of entertaining comes from a beautifully decorated table. And often, simplicity and economy are key. Choose dinnerware that feel equally at home in the microwave or on the table, in the dining room or in the den.

Remember, beautiful buffets provide for light and easy entertaining throughout the year. Simply keep in mind the key elements for successful entertaining: plan ahead to take advantage of the season's offerings, create a flexible and healthy menu, and take your time to enjoy good company and great food.

SAUSAGE-STUFFED PORK LOIN WITH APRICOT-MUSTARD GLAZE

4-5 pound boneless pork loin, trimmed of any fat

- 1 pound smoked pork sausage, wrapped tightly in foil and frozen
- 6 tablespoons apricot jam
- 2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon crushed red chiles

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Insert slicing knife into center of face of pork loin, piercing pork loin clear through center. Withdraw knife and insert knife again into center of pork loin, at an angle perpendicular to the first cut (creating an "X" in the face of pork loin).

Unwrap frozen smoked sausage; holding pork loin in one hand and sausage in other, force sausage into pork loin through the "X" cut in the face of the loin. If sausage is longer than loin and protrudes out of loin, trim off excess sausage and discard.

Place sausage-stuffed loin on rack in shallow pan. Roast in 350 degree oven for 45 minutes. Meanwhile, in small bowl stir together well the remaining ingredients for glaze. After loin has roasted for 45 minutes, pour glaze over pork and continue to roast for 15-20 minutes more, brushing pork occasionally with glaze mixture from bottom of pan. Roast pork to an internal temperature of 155-160 degrees.

Remove pork from oven; let rest 10-15 minutes before slicing to serve. Serves 16.

New labels leave out some information on vitamins

By Diane Duston
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — You may wonder where all the vitamins went when you see the new nutrition labels on food packages. They'll still be in the foods, but they're no longer considered essential health information.

And that's because diseases like beriberi and pellagra haven't been a threat to American health since anyone can remember.

It's cancer, diabetes, heart disease and a myriad of ailments caused by overeating and poor nutrition that health experts worry about now.

So the label is being retooled to discourage diets of excess rather than guard against diet deficiencies — emphasizing fat, sodium and cholesterol instead of B-vitamins like niacin, thiamine and riboflavin.

The new labels aren't out yet, but they should begin appearing next year. The government is giving food manufacturers until May 1994 to phase them in.

The National Academy of Sciences recommended removing some vitamin information after surveys showed that even Americans suffering from hunger are not at risk of diseases caused by lack of vitamins such as those seen in the Third World.

Vitamins A and C will still be listed along with iron and calcium, because there's an interest in them for other reasons, says the Food and Drug Administration, not because people are suffering from scurvy, a Vitamin C deficiency, for example.

It's mostly the B-vitamins that have been eliminated from the label.

This family of nutrients is essential to overall good health, but found in a wide variety of foods regularly consumed by most Americans, including whole grains, dried beans, eggs, meat and leafy green vegetables.

Additionally, during food processing, vitamins and minerals are routinely added, said Regina Hildwine of the National Food Processors Association.

Americans eat abundant proportions of processed foods from white bread and cereal to microwaveable dinners.

Hildwine said enough vitamins and minerals are spread through the American food supply that people can quit worrying about them.

Dietary deficiency "hasn't been a problem in this country for the last 20 years," she said.

Nancy Schwartz of the American Dietetic Association says it's been a lot longer than that.

Beriberi and pellagra are nervous disorders associated with a B-vitamin deficiency originally observed in Asia. Please see LABELS/D8

Old World traditions Brumbach keeps family recipes alive

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — For New Year's dinner Janie Brumbach will prepare Eastern European recipes handed down through the generations in her family.

Because her father's parents came to this country from Hungary, and her maternal grandmother was of Slovenian descent, their ethnic dishes were standard holiday fare in her parents' home. And Brumbach has carried on this tradition in hers, putting aside for the holidays, concern about eating rich and fatty foods.

"This is not eating light," she says. "This is the time of the year you just generally decide you're going to gain the national average of seven pounds, along with everybody else, and enjoy it and not worry about it — and worry about it later."

Brumbach says the only concession her family makes to light eating is to have fruit salad on New Year's morning, along with homemade cinnamon rolls. "That's as sensible as we get," she says.

Fixing this ethnic fare is time consuming. One traditional Hungarian dish, called "pigs in the blankets" (meatballs in cabbage leaves) is an example of this.

"Any time you say meatball, that's the same as saying 'This is going to take time,'" she says. Another tradition Brumbach is keeping alive came from her Slovenian grandmother. At midnight on New Year's Eve, a dollar bill is placed on the front porch and then swept back into the house with a broom.

"If you swept the dollar bill into the house then the house would be blessed with prosperity and money coming in the door throughout the year," she says. "If you're lucky you'll do it on the porch that faces on the west side of the house, so you get a little gust of wind to help sweep it in." Now, let's try Brumbach's recipe for...

HUNGARIAN STUFFED CABBAGE

(Pigs in the blankets)
Makes 3-4 dozen

4 pounds ground pork - not sausage. (Brumbach buys a lean pork roast and grinds it up) Ground chuck may be used as a substitute

- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 2 cloves garlic, chopped fine
- 1 teaspoon of salt
- 1/2 teaspoon of pepper
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 large head cabbage
- 1 (32 ounce) jar sauerkraut, drained and rinsed
- About 2 tablespoons bacon drippings
- About 1/2 cup flour
- About 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- salt and pepper, to taste

Combine first seven ingredients in a large bowl. Boil cabbage leaves until slightly soft. Or, remove core, put cabbage on a plate with a little water, cover with plastic wrap and microwave for about 1-2 minutes. This way the leaves do not get saturated and they are easy to peel off. This can be done ahead and the leaves frozen. They may be defrosted slowly, or in the microwave.

Make meatballs golfball size or larger, and place each on a cabbage leaf on the heavy vein. Then fold the right side of the leaf over, then the left, and roll up. If you run out of leaves, use the meatballs as they are. Wash sauerkraut and make a thickening using the bacon drippings, flour, paprika, and salt and pepper to taste. Mix this thickening into sauerkraut.

In a roasting pan, alternate layers of sauerkraut and cabbage rolls. Cover with water. Simmer about 2 hours.

Brumbach says the meatballs have a smooth texture with a definite garlic flavor. If any are left. Please see TRADITION/D8

Affectionate couple gives mother visions of unplanned pregnancy

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my 16-year-old son, "Ryan" is a wonderful young man - everything a mother could ask for in a son: handsome, smart (honor student) and an all-around great guy. He seems to be obsessed with a 16-year-old girl I'll call Beth. When he is not at her house, he's on the phone with her. I finally told him that he had to be off the phone by 11 p.m. - of course, by that time he's already been on the phone for at least two hours!

I can't understand what they can talk about for that long. I know they talk about marriage, but Ryan has such a bright future, I can't see him tying himself down to this one girl - at age 16.

There seems to be such an intense physical attraction - Beth hangs all over him, sits on his lap, and he can't understand that kind of behavior is not acceptable in public. I am so afraid that he will mess up his life with an unplanned pregnancy. We've talked about it, and he keeps assuring me that he isn't doing anything "wrong."

Dear Abby

Abby, I realize that he is human and he could get carried away and ruin his life. It's happened to other terrific kids, and I'm worried that it might happen to him.

His father and I have been divorced since Ryan was 3, and his father has since remarried. His support checks help, but Ryan rarely sees him, so he's no help. Have you any suggestions?

—RYAN'S MOM

DEAR MOM: If you and Beth's mother aren't friendly, I suggest you become friendlier, because you have a common problem. Limiting the time Ryan and Beth spend together will help, but it's not the total solution.

Keep the lines of communication open so your son will be open and honest with you.

Discussing birth control with young people who are on the verge of becoming sexually active does not necessarily give them the green light, and when hormones are raging, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

DEAR ABBY: I laughed out loud when I read about that idiotic woman from Beloit, Wis., who is "proud" of her 13 sets of wind chimes. She said, "Someone else must also like wind chimes because a thief stole three sets from my porch!"

Wake up, Beloit! That "thief" is probably a neighbor whom you have driven to the brink of insanity with the relentless, irritating sounds of your stupid wind chimes.

A neighbor in our suburban neighborhood apparently thought every body on the block should enjoy the racket of his large metal cowbell that would wake me up in the middle of the night when the winds were gusty.

I politely asked that it be taken down. After two weeks of no response to my polite request, I sneaked over there in the middle of the night and jammed a rag in the bell to silence it.

Finally, the cowbell was removed. Peace at least. Thank God!

—STEVE HORNER,
APPLE VALLEY, MINN.

DEAR STEVE: Now, a word from another reader concerning wind chimes:

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations to the bird lady in Beloit who has 13 sets of wind chimes, fine wind ornaments and a bird feeder on her front porch. May the bluebirds of happiness "decorate" her deck chairs.

—GRANDMA IN CEDAR RAPIDS

DEAR ABBY: On behalf of the Marine Detachment, USS Ranger (CV-61), I want to thank all of the readers who have taken the time to write to us. To date, we have received hundreds of letters! Each one has boosted the morale of the Marines on board, and gone a long way in easing the difficulty of being deployed during the holiday season. Marines are known for taking care of their own. In this case, you and your readers have taken care of us. Thank you, Dear Abby, very much indeed for your support! Semper fidelis.

Finding the poet in oneself can be rewarding in all walks of life

When I moved a few years ago, the young man who did the moving figured me out quickly. After dozens of trips carrying cartons of books and files up two flights of stairs, he said: "You must be a writer."

I admitted it. "I'm a writer, too," he said. "I write poetry."

Time hangs heavy on cross-country hauls, he said, so he keeps a notebook and pen at his side. As he

Aging
Lucille S. DeView

spins across the prairies or spirals up mountain roads, he scribbles poems about things he sees and feels "so they won't get away from me."

He is in good company. A young man who read his verses at a recent literary gathering proved to be a soldier on furlough. A group of stevedores once published a book of its writings. So did some homeless women.

A poet, I suspect, lurks in all of us.

Dr. Howard Rolfe, 80, of Seal Beach, Calif., compiles his poems into handmade books for relatives and friends - a whisper of immortality, he calls it. He heads a literary club of like-minded retirees at the

Mary Elizabeth Harding, an executive secretary in Irvine, Calif., often writes long into the night after her young daughters are asleep. Here's a fragment from a poem about her grandmother, Helen Hutchison, 92, of Burke, S.D.:

"Oh, Helen, what did you see there in your garden, speaking to you, soothing you, forcing your worries to evaporate as you watered and hoed? ... Grandmother, you tell me you've never been to California and I remind you that all the world is in your yard."

In her poem, "Circle of Life," Harding writes:

"I want to drive to the home where older people live, drive there on a warm spring morning in a huge bus, and load everyone up and take them to the beach, and sit them right down in the sand and have a picnic all day long."

"They will fall asleep on the way home and we'll carry them into their rooms and tuck them gently into their beds and kiss each one's cheek."

A poet in all of us.

So pick up your pen. Find the poet in you.

Lucille S. DeView, the writing coach for The Orange County Register, writes a weekly column on aging.

Anniversary

The Thralls

HEYBURN - Mr. and Mrs. Charlie M. Thrall of Heyburn will be honored at an open house Thursday in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Barkley First Christian Church, 1410 Oakley Ave. Refreshments will be served. The couple requests no gifts.

Thrall and Winnie P. Ward were married Nov. 21, 1942, in Jerome.

The event is being given by their children and their spouses, Virginia Thrall of Seattle, Leon Thrall of Adelanto, Calif., Don Thrall of Apple Valley, Calif., Ted Thrall of Burley, Fred Thrall of Eagle River, Alaska, and Monica Thrall of Heyburn.

The couple has five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Letters of thanks

Alternative School gives thanks for donations, time

This fall, there has been an outpouring of community support for the students at the Magic Valley Alternative High School.

Various groups have donated new and used clothing, gift certificates for food, food baskets, car repairs, money for specific needs and endless volunteer time to ensure our students have a nice holiday. We would like to thank the following groups for their time and effort in helping us accomplish so much for our students.

Christian Women's Fellowship of the Valley Christian Church, Valley Christian Church Outreach Fund, Elf Fund, Deacons of the Presbyterian Church, Action Committee of the Presbyterian Church, Girl Scout Troop 640, Kmart Giving Tree, Filter High School Parenting Class, Valley High School Adult Living Class, Donna and David Wultrich of Wultrich's Magic Gardens and several Secret Santas.

Mental Health Minute

Teenage Drug Users - They Usually tell on Themselves

Teenagers who use alcohol or other drugs always tell their parents. Not in words, but by changes in their behavior.

While some behavioral changes are a normal part of the maturation process, dynamic changes, especially in school performance or physical appearance, may be signs of a drug problem.

Drug and alcohol use by teenagers is especially destructive because it interferes with normal development and maturation. Therefore, it is important they get help as soon as possible.

Check The Symptoms That May Apply To A Teenager You're Concerned About

- Sudden drop in grades/attendance
- Loss of interest in normal activities
- Changes in personality
- Moodiness/irritability/secretness
- Sudden change in friends
- Sudden weight loss
- Disappearance of money or valuables
- Inability to express complete thoughts
- Discovery of drug paraphenalia

If you check three or more symptoms, call us for information about the help available or to arrange a free, confidential consultation.

Sydney Omarr Horoscope

IF DECEMBER 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are sensitive concerning appearance, body image. You possess unique sense of humor, are sworn enemy of "stuffed shirts." You travel more than most persons, have intellectual curiosity, are capable of writing for profit. You are drawn to areas of communication, advertising, publishing. You'll enter new field in 1993. Love plays prominent role throughout year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Areas that had been dark, dank will receive benefit of greater light. You'll feel renewed, the glow that comes from affection, romance, love. Period of introspection is over - replace by action.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Focus on direction, motivation, serious consideration of marital status. Don't equate delay with defeat. Promise made by Pisces native will be fulfilled in two weeks. Property settlement imminent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your natural talents surge to forefront, including writing, humor, sparkling displays of wit, wisdom. Attention also revolves around promotion, production, dealings with the "high and the mighty."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Those who thought you were a "bummer" are proven wrong. Focus on idealism, travel, ability to communicate abstract concepts in entertaining, palatable manner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spotlight on writing, entertainment, showmanship. Ability to be at right place at crucial moment. Unless you blow your own horn, there will be no music.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasize harmony, diplomacy, concentrate also on restoration of credibility. Publication is a stake - fight for cause that you know is right. Legal agreement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Psychic capabilities are much in evidence - some accuse you of being a "human lie detector." You'll learn more about possible inheritance, financial status of partner, mate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Focus on time utilization, organization, added responsibility, legitimate chance to hit financial jackpot. Love relationship admittedly controversial, is durable. Don't permit misdeeds to deter progress.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent universal appeal, refuse to settle for "second best." Study real estate notices - fast-talking, career native. Does have your best interests at heart. Burden, emotional, financial, is lifted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You'll be saying, "I do see the light!" Scenario features humor, versatility, different modes of transportation, accelerated social activity. You'll add to apparatus.

Caterpillar frozen most of life

L.M. Boyd
What's what?

Let me tell you about the Arctic Woolly Bear. It's a caterpillar for 14 years. No other in the caterpillar category lives that long. Sadly, the Woolly Bear remains frozen solidity of that time. There goes the "quality of life."

No society has ever existed without the institution of marriage. That's what the scholars say. It also can be said about the common rind of that time.

Here's to the lady named Merilita Benz - clink - who in 1909 made a filler out of her son's notebook paper and invented the world's first drip coffee maker.

It has been written that the real "Turn of the Century" occurred in 1901. Queen Victoria died in England, and in Texas, Spindletop blew. Out went the age of industrial grace. In came the age of combustible oil. What changed was the a speed of things. A history professor, who explained it sometime back, asked, "What in the next Turn of the Century were to be marked by something that makes everything slow down again?"

Security measures need to work during daylight

By David O'Reilly
Knight-Ridder News Service

Night is when most of us think about burglars and ways to thwart them. We lock the doors and check the windows before climbing into bed, yet still we shudder at every creak from the kitchen.

But experienced burglars prefer to work in daylight, when a home is least likely to be occupied. For that reason, security measures against intruders are just as important in daytime as at night.

"A burglar looks for visual clues that a home is unoccupied," says Joe Mele, assistant professor at the Crime Prevention Institute in Louisville, Ky. "A morning newspaper on the porch, mail spilling from the mailbox, an open garage," are ways of saying "rob me."

Favorite targets, says Mele, are the homes of working couples, who often spend more of their dual incomes on the stereo, CD players, computers, VCRs and TVs and other electronics that burglars prize. And best of all — from a burglar's point of view — working couples are usually gone all day.

An oversized mailbox that closes to conceal its contents is one way of discouraging a burglar, according to Mele, who also recommends that the garage be kept closed.

The best protection against burglars is to be at home when they call, says Mele, a former Orlando, Fla., police lieutenant. A thief typically rings doorbells and knocks vigorously from front and back to ensure that no one is home, and departs quickly, often on a pretext — "Sorry, wrong address" — if someone answers.

But every home is empty sooner or later. That's when the home is most vulnerable.

If burglars get no answer, they usually go around to a back or side door; these are often flimsier than the front door and abused from neighbors' views. Most burglars hate to break glass and avoid windows, but an obstructed back door with flimsy hardware is no obstacle. Using a prybar, a wrench, or a shove, an experienced thief can force a door open in seconds, and is usually out in three to five minutes.

The best protection, says Mele, is a solid door with solid, well-placed locks. "A lot of people use flimsy door hardware and the burglar is in and out," he says.

Install deadbolts:

The simple push buttons or turn-knobs found on some doorknobs are not adequate for perimeter doors. The National Crime Prevention Institute recommends that all perimeter doors — into the house, including those from the basement and garage — be equipped with deadbolt locks.

A deadbolt lock usually is drilled into the door above the knob and equipped with a steel shaft that moves deep into a strikeplate on the doorjamb when the key is turned. That shaft should be no less than an inch long and preferably 1½ inches, according to the institute. A shaft-rod shaft may not penetrate deeply enough into the doorjamb to stay secure if the door is kicked.

The strikeplate, which is cut into the doorjamb, should also be secured with screws that are not easily dislodged, usually 2½ inches. Lock manufacturers sometimes provide screws as short as ¾ inch, says Mele, but these might not even penetrate past the thin wooden-rod strip that surrounds most doors. The 2½-inch wood screws fasten deep into the timbers around the door, keeping the strikeplate secure.

And if the deadbolt's cylinder juts out from the door's exterior, it should be mounted within a solid, round piece of steel with sides that slope at a 45-degree angle. These sloping sides make it nearly impossible for thieves to grip and twist off the cylinder with a wrench.

Deadbolt installation is best done by a reputable locksmith, but some manufacturers retail deadbolts that handy homeowners can install. Take your time and be careful, though. Errors in installation can be unsightly and provide inadequate protection.

Alarm backlogs:

"We recommend formidable locks and hardware 'backed up' with an alarm," says Mele. This requires burglars to waste precious time trying to force open the door, thus triggering the alarm while they're still outside.

Lights and television sets on timers are effective deterrents, says experts; so are barking dogs. Responses in England showed little fear of the best watchdogs of all: "They don't shut up," Mele says.

Even if somebody's usually at home, that doesn't mean a burglary is out of the question. Intruders rarely enter a home knowing it is occupied; but it happens usually if the locks are inadequate or if doors or windows are open.

If the motive is simple theft, the intruder will usually flee if he or she sees lights or hears yelling from upstairs or down the hall. Confrontations can turn very dangerous, however, and occupants who attempt to corner an intruder and block the exit do so at great peril.

Even if you're sleeping and hear burglars enter your bedroom, you should feign sleep and allow them to steal what they want. "Discretion," says Mele, "is the better part of valor."

"But the best protection is to lock the house up tight at night," according to Mele. "He can't afford to risk discovery by kicking the door or using a sledge, so he's going to look for an open door or window. Just locking down prevents him from hitting your house."

Malfunctioning gutter system can cause flooding in basement

Q. After storms, we get a lot of water in our basement. We cleaned the rain gutters, but still get the water. Can you help?

A. It's important to keep rain gutters clean, but other problems with the gutter system could be causing the basement water.

Check to make sure that the water collected by the gutters is being taken well away from the house. Some gutter downspouts dump their water on the ground near the foundation or into snail, tray-like splash blocks that carry the water only a short distance away. In either case, the water can seep into the soil and eventually work its way into the basement. Installing downspout extensions or leaders can help take the water away from the foundation.

"The gutters also might not be sloped properly," says Gene Austin. "Regrading the entire damaged panel would be the best repair. Removing and installing panels of vinyl siding requires a so-called zipper tool, available from some siding dealers. This simple tool has a hook on the end that is used to unluck and lock the horizontal joints of siding panels."

A siding dealer should be able to demonstrate how to use the zipper tool or a siding contractor can be hired to make the repair.

Any effective repair requires matching siding and illustrates why it is wise to save a few extra pieces when having siding, roofing, flooring and wall coatings installed. The alternative is to try and obtain matching material from dealers and contractors.

Q. We have a beach house with solid-brass doorknobs and door plates. They are very tarnished. We've tried polishing, but the objects only stay bright for a short time. Is there a simple solution?

A. There is no easy way to keep brass bright, especially in a seashore location where the air can have a corrosive effect on metals.

The usual treatment for a lasting shine is to spray newly polished brass with clear lacquer, but this is a tricky procedure and the brass must glue a scrap piece of matching siding over the damaged area. Cut a patch about a foot long from a new siding panel and carefully trim off the top edge, which has nail holes, and part of the lower edge. The siding can be cut with heavy-duty scissors.

When trimmed, the patch should fit flush against the existing siding.

Glue the patch over the hole with a waterproof adhesive suitable for vinyl. Liquid Nails construction adhesive or Gop, sold at some home centers and hardware stores, are examples of suitable adhesives. Hold the patch in place with tape while the adhesive cures.

Replacing the entire damaged panel would be the best repair. Removing and installing panels of vinyl siding requires a so-called zipper tool, available from some siding dealers. This simple tool has a hook on the end that is used to unluck and lock the horizontal joints of siding panels.

A siding dealer should be able to demonstrate how to use the zipper tool or a siding contractor can be hired to make the repair.

Any effective repair requires matching siding and illustrates why it is wise to save a few extra pieces when having siding, roofing, flooring and wall coatings installed. The alternative is to try and obtain matching material from dealers and contractors.

Q. I took your advice and bought a low-flow shower head for each of the bathrooms in our house. They seem to be working. Am I really saving money?

A. I saw an estimate recently that says one 10-minute shower every day with a low-flow shower head can save about 10,000 gallons of water every year. Based on typical water and fuel costs, this can mean an annual water and energy savings of about $88. Further, by putting a flow restrictor in the faucets, you can save another 10,000 gallons of water annually for each faucet.

"Another dramatic savings can come from putting a dam in each toilet in the home to cut three to five gallons per flush. An average family of four can save as much as 14,000 gallons of water each year.

RATINGS

PG - Parental Guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13 - Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for children.

NC-17 - No one under 17 admitted.

be absolutely clean of any contaminants. Even oil from fingerprints will prevent lacquer from adhering properly, so wear clean rubber or plastic gloves while spraying.

Clear lacquer is sold by some auto-supply dealers. A lacquer called Staybright is available by mail from Leichtung Workshops in Cleveland (telephone 800-321-6840).

Tung oil, used in wood finishing, will also protect brass if properly applied. This procedure requires heating the brass for 20 minutes in an oven at 150 degrees before rubbing on multiple coats of oil with a soft cloth. Again, the brass must not have any contaminants on the surface.

Some metal polishers contain ingredients designed to help produce a copper-lasting shine. Flit and Lescite, sold at some home centers, are examples.

Q. I recently spilled some Miracle Water Stain Remover on a quarry-tile floor and haven't been able to remove the spots. Do you know of a remedy?

A. I'm not familiar with this product or its ingredients. Probably the best bet is to contact the stain remover's manufacturer, whose name and address should be on the container.

Readers' questions and comments should be sent to Gene Austin, The Philadelphia Inquirer, Box 8263, Philadelphia, PA 19101.

Spice up dips for parties

By Ellen Creager Knight-Ridder News Service

Having a New Year's Eve party? Meet the five-minute dip. No, not the guy doing the lambada. These dips are on the buffet table, next to the crackers. We all like to hang around dips at parties, because dips are such good friends. They're familiar, they're fast and they have a comfy informality. Dips go with everything, and they don't require

... However, not all dips are good dips. "Many of the snacks created for such occasions are excellent, and many of them are garbage. One can't eat it to his guests to know the difference," the late cookbook author James Beard snuffed. So, for this New Year's Eve, leave behind the gummy sour cream dip with chips. Dump that neon orange dip that leaves your crackers standing up. Avoid anything purple. Embrace dips that are cheesy, chillish, beany and gourmet - dips to delight the eye and comfort the palate.

We looked for dips you could make in five minutes or less, because who wants to be in the kitchen cooking when 1993 arrives? Serve with crackers, chips, vegetables or fruit. Our recipes are Fast Chili Dip (from "365 Snacks, Hors D'oeuvres and Appetizers," by Lonnie Gandara and Peggy Fallon (HarperCollins, $16.95); Cucumber Garlic Dip from "Mating Well," by Burt Wolf (Doubleday, $20), and Bean Dip A la Fudd's, from Gloria Pitzer's Secret Recipes bimonthly newsletter (order from Box 152, St. Clair, Mich. 48079, $12 a year or $2.50 a single issue).

BEAN DIP A LA FUDD'S (Makes about 2 1/2 cups) 1 pound ranch-style or pinto beans in chili gravy, not drained, or pinto beans with jalapeno, drained 1 teaspoon chili powder 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin 1 tablespoon dry taco or fajita seasoning mix 1/2 cup sour cream 2 cups teaspoon picante sauce 2/3 cup queso cheese powder 1/2 cup Velveta cheese, shredded or cubed

Corn chips In a blender or food processor, place beans, chili powder, cumin, taco or fajita seasoning, sour cream, picante sauce, garlic powder and cheese. Blend at high speed a half-minute or till smooth. Serve with corn chips.

FAST CHILI DIP (Makes 3 cups) 15 ounces chili con carne without beans 8 ounces Cheez Whiz 1 tablespoon taco or fajita seasoning In a medium, microwave-safe dish, place chili, Cheez Whiz and taco or fajita seasoning. Microwave on medium 2 minutes or until cheese spread is melted. Remove from microwave and stir. Serve immediately.

CUCUMBER GARLIC DIP (Makes 3 cups) 1 medium cucumber, peeled, ends removed, seeded, finely chopped 8 ounces feta cheese, crumbled 1/2 cup green onions, washed, ends removed, thinly sliced 1/2 cup light (reduced calorie, cholesterol-free) mayonnaise 1/2 cup plain low-fat yogurt And here is a recipe that is not of Hungarian origin, but is a family favorite. OHIO LEMON PIE (Makes one 9-inch pie) Prepare dough for a double crust pie. 2 lemons 1 1/2 cups sugar 4 eggs Grate lemon to make 2 teaspoons lemon rind. Peel the lemon, removing all the white. Then slice the lemon as thin as possible. Take all the seeds out. Add sugar. Mix the lemons and sugar and let stand 20 minutes. Beat egg well. Stir eggs into the lemon mixture. Pour lemon mixture into the pie shell. Put top crust on. Cut slits in top crust, and bake at 400 degrees for 40 minutes.

over these are even better a week later. "I had to have a lot of people over on New Year's. I'm careful to have a lot of other foods," she says. "And I really like people love it. Here is another of Brumbach's old country recipes. It's called... HUNGARIAN NUT ROLL Makes 4 rolls, approximately 17-18 inches each. 5 cups flour 1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 teaspoon baking soda In a large bowl, crumble in 1 cake yeast or 1/2 packages dry yeast.

Add: 1/2 pound butter or margarine Work as for pie dough. Combine and beat. 5 egg yolks 1/2 pint of sour cream 1 teaspoon lemon rind (optional) Add to flour mixture. Knead until the dough falls off your hands. The dough will be quite stiff, and you might think it needs more moisture, but it doesn't. Form into 4 balls. Wrap in plastic and refrigerate at least 24 hours. When the dough is removed from the refrigerator it is very stiff, so Brumbach microwaves at about 20 seconds. Roll it out between 2 pieces of plastic wrap sprinkled with sugar, as thin as possible - to about 12-by-17-inches. Do not use flour for this. Spread with filling (recipe follows). Roll up and seal edges. Brush with egg whites and sprinkle with sugar. Cover jelly roll pan with vegetable spray, and place seam side down. Bake at 350 degrees for 35-40 minutes.

Homemade or ready made fillings may be used for this. Here is a... HOMEMADE FILLING 5 egg whites 1 cup sugar 4 cups ground walnuts 4 dollops of maple syrup (optional) Beat egg whites until stiff. Add sugar, walnuts and maple syrup, if desired. Spread onto rolled out dough. A timesaver, and one Brumbach says she usually prefers, is Solo brand poppyseed and apricot fillings. She spreads half of a can over each roll. So she uses one can of poppyseed filling for two rolls, and apricot filling for the other two. Let cool before cutting rolls into one-inch slices.

She says this is just slightly crisp and sweet. "I make it all up at once, but it doesn't last," she says. "I put it out and I have little mice with knives that start cutting pieces off." And here is a recipe that is not of Hungarian origin, but is a family favorite. OHIO LEMON PIE (Makes one 9-inch pie) Prepare dough for a double crust pie. 2 lemons 1 1/2 cups sugar 4 eggs Grate lemon to make 2 teaspoons lemon rind. Peel the lemon, removing all the white. Then slice the lemon as thin as possible. Take all the seeds out. Add sugar. Mix the lemons and sugar and let stand 20 minutes. Beat egg well. Stir eggs into the lemon mixture. Pour lemon mixture into the pie shell. Put top crust on. Cut slits in top crust, and bake at 400 degrees for 40 minutes.

"It's tangy and has lots of rich pure lemon flavor - very much a lemon custard," she says. "It's much richer than what you taste in a lemon meringue type pie. It's almost like a lemon pudding pie."

Labels

when the staple diet became white rice instead of brown. They never were overriding health concerns in the United States, said Schwartz. Vitamins A and C, however, are believed to minimize cancer risk; calcium is important in the fight against osteoporosis and iron helps prevent anemia, health officials say. So they'll stay on the label. Here's what else you'll find: • Serving size • Servings per container • Total calories and calories from fat per serving. • Total fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium, protein and total carbohydrates in sugars and dietary fiber. • Amount of Vitamin A, Vitamin C, calcium and iron. • How the nutrients fit into a daily diet of 2,000 calories and 65 grams of fat. • Exactly how many grams and milligrams of total fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium, carbohydrates and fiber comprise a 2,000-calorie diet and a 2,500-calorie diet. • How to convert one gram of fat, carbohydrates and protein into calories. As a whole, the new labels will tell consumers twice as much about nutrition as currently on foods and likely will seem more complicated at first.

Schwartz said her organization already is preparing educational materials and programs to help people use the label to plan healthier diets. The government also will be providing information to consumers, promised Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan. • So will industry groups. "This new label is a graduate degree in nutrition," said Jeff Nedelman of the Grocery Manufacturers of America. "Your children may be the first consumers who will be able to understand it, and that may make it worth doing."

Former cook for Clinton tells her story

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) - Don't blame Eliza Jane Ashley for those extra pounds President-elect Clinton is juggling around with these days. Ashley, who cooked at the Governor's Mansion for 36 years, said Clinton was keeping his weight down before she retired in 1990 - his wife had her cut down on desserts and add stir-fry dishes to the menu. "I guess he's eating in all those fast-food places," she said. Her recollections and recipes for seven Arkansas governors are contained in her book, "Thirty Years at the Mansion," which is enjoying renewed interest. Her publisher, Ted Parkhurst of August House at Little Rock, said the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Arlington, Va., is planning to feature her recipes during inauguration week and Ashley has interviews scheduled with four television networks. "I tell you, I'll be the most thought-of, uneducated woman you ever seen," she said. Parkhurst said last week that the book was in its sixth printing and might require a seventh to keep up with the demand. In her book and in conversations, Ashley, 75, reveals only a few tidbits about her relationships with the governors. "I was treated fine by all of them," she said. "They all seemed like they liked me. I guess they did." Ashley said Clinton always invited her to his Christmas open house at the mansion and was in the habit of taking her to church on Christmas Eve and to dinner on Easter. She said that since Clinton was only 32 when he moved into the mansion, she thought of him as her adopted son. In her book, she says she suggested to Clinton one day that he and Hillary Clinton have a child. "I said to the governor, 'It's time for you to have some children before you get too old.' And he said, 'If the Lord sees fit for us, we will.' Sure enough, after they were there a few months the governor and Miss Hillary told me they had something to tell me. They said, 'We're going to have a baby in the Mansion. We were all on Cloud Nine.' With both of the Clintons working, Ashley said she didn't see much of them. "They were gone to work when I would get there in the morning," she said. "We would serve them at night. Sometimes, they wouldn't even be there. We'd just leave their meals."

She said Chelsea, their daughter, was just as active and she would see her between school and after-school activities. She also recalled mansion life under earlier governors. During the racial tension of Gov. Orval Faubus' years, when he resisted the integration of Little Rock Central High School, Ashley said she felt comfortable working as a black woman for a white man who represented the Old South. "He was nice to me," she said. "He had to do what the people wanted him to do." She added, "I had to work so there wasn't no use to me quitting on that account to go hunting a job somewhere else." A cook since she was 15, Ashley is more comfortable talking about food. Faubus, she says, liked chicken and dumplings and roast beef. Winthrop Rockefeller, the wealthy Republican who succeeded Faubus in 1967, had his own unique "Northern" tastes, Ashley said. "First time I ever heard of artichokes was when the Rockefellers lived here. That gentleman could eat a million of them, and they had to be arranged so pretty on the plate," Ashley says in her book.
