U.S. may offer Bosnia peace forces

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration, in a major U.S. policy shift, is prepared to offer ground troops as peacekeepers in Bosnia-Herzegovina as part of a broad proposal to end a year of bloody conflict in that former Yugoslav republic, administration and diplomatic officials said Tuesday night.

President Clinton's highest-ranking, national security advisers reached consensus in a 24-hour meeting Friday, one official said, that such an offer was "the price of admission" if the United States wished to force further negotiations among Bosnia's warring groups on a peace accord.

The prospect that U.S. troops would be sent to Bosnia was said to be contingent on conclusion of a peace accord among the Serbs, Croats and Muslims who remain far from agreement on terms for helping the fighting between them. U.S. officials also made clear that any U.S. military involvement would be as part of a multinational force to ensure enforcement of any peace accord.

A senior administration official, responding to an ABC News report about the U.S. troop offer, first denied Tuesday night that Clinton was considering deployment of peacekeepers into a conflict that top U.S. military officers have long regarded as a quagmire.

But the official withdrew the denial an hour later, saying the "use of U.S. military force to enforce a peace settlement is under consideration."

"No decisions on committing such forces and no commitments" to other countries have been made, the official said, but added there has been "general discussion of the need for enforcement of an agreement and a U.S. willingness to participate in such enforcement."

Use of U.S. military force, the official said, "is implicit when (there is) a discussion of enforcing a settlement."

The Clinton administration intends to push for a peace accord along the general lines worked out by U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance and European Community envoy David Owen.

The Vance-Owen plan would divide Bosnia into ten largely autonomous ethnic cantons.

Rolling home

A historic Twin Falls home took up much of Blue Lakes Boulevard Tuesday morning on its way out of town. The five-bedroom home, built in 1918 on Blue Lakes Boulevard North, is being transported to a new foundation south of the Twin Falls Sun Valley Regional Airport by its new owner, Bob Cheyney. The ten-mile journey will continue today on Blue Lakes Boulevard South as utility crews make sure the 100-ton house squeezes around power lines and tree branches.

California cop heads Jerome police force

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Mayor Gerald Osterler appointed Huntington Beach, Calif., police Sgt. James Dahl as Jerome's new chief of police Monday.

"There's a lot of folks who'd just as soon that I'd have nothing to do with those mean and ornery Californians," Osterler said. "We wanted the person we felt could do the best job for the city, and Jim is the kind of person we want to hire."

Dahl will succeed George Silver III, who was elected Jerome County sheriff in November.

"Our decision was based on qualifications, not adhering to any type of race, color, creed, or place of residence," Osterler said. "Some might wonder if he's from Costa Rica, Maine or California."

Dahl, 54, will retire from his job as jail commander with the Huntington Beach Police Department on March 15 and expects to be on the job in Jerome within a month after that.

"I am not the typical Californian person that people are afraid of," Dahl said Monday. "I am small-town at heart. If it hadn't been our belief in God and knew it was his will to come to Jerome, we wouldn't be here."

Dahl was chosen over two others finalists, Kimberly Peterson and Patrick Bermingham, and Kent Heady of Wilder. A fourth finalist, Hall Dunn of Elko, Nev., withdrew earlier.

The appointment won't be official until the City Council approves it at its next regular meeting Feb. 16. Osterler said Monday he'd polled the four members of the council, and that with the exception of Councilman Elza Hall, they

White House staff hit by initial Clinton cuts

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Keeping a campaign promise, President Clinton on Tuesday announced a plan to cut the White House staff by 350 jobs or 25 percent, and to cut the pay and perquisites his aides enjoy.

"We in government cannot ask the American people to change if we will not do the same," Clinton said, laying political groundwork to set up his long-awaited economic-policy speech on Feb. 17, when he is expected to ask the nation for "shared sacrifice."

"Our White House will be leaner but more effective," Clinton said, adding that he soon will order similar cuts throughout government.

Clinton's plan, effective Oct. 1, would:

• 1,044 jobs — 350 fewer and 25 percent less than on Election Day.

• Save at least $10 million.

• Cut about 10 percent of senior staff positions while reducing staff at all levels.

• Cut White House salary levels by 6 percent to 10 percent, except for the president and the vice president, whose salaries are set by law.

• Slash the Office of National Drug Control Policy to 25 employees, down from 146 under former President George Bush, while promoting its director to Cabinet rank.

Clinton prefers to fight the drug war by boosting education and treatment programs, aides said. Even at this reduced level, the drug control office would retain as much staff as White House councils on economic and domestic policy.

Network apologizes for rigging crash

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — NBC News announced Tuesday that it had settled a defamation lawsuit brought by General Motors Corp. over the network's "demonstration" of a fiery pickup truck crash on its "Dateline NBC" program.

"We ... take responsibility for the problems GM has identified in the demonstration crash," said Stone Phillips, the program's co-anchor.

"We deeply regret we included inappropriate demonstration in our Dateline NBC report. ... We apologize to our viewers and to General Motors."

Earlier, media watchers had commented that NBC News made a mistake in not telling viewers it had rigged a pickup truck with incendiaries for the report on the gas tanks.

NBC's report on GM's "sidesaddle" tank design aired Nov. 17. Last week a jury awarded $102.5 million in a suit over a crash death. GM denies its design is unsafe.

General Motors filed a defamation lawsuit Monday against NBC.

14-year-old girl crusades against 'huffing'

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sara Friel understands how inhaling gasoline fumes can change a kid's life. It changed hers.

Sara, 14, was high on gasoline fumes on Sept. 9 when gas in a milk jug she was holding slashed onto her clothes just before someone pushed her into a flaming cigarette lighter.

She might have died if not for a passerby, a refugee Romanian doctor named Titus Safciu.

Safciu tackled Sara — with flames raging three feet over her head into the night — while she ran in circles in a downtown supermarket parking lot. Her arm was burned so badly that skin melted off of it like plastic.

"huffing" hasn't seemed the same to Sara since.

Sara's accident, which left her with second- and third-degree burns over 23 percent of her body, was only one of several in the Magic Valley last year. Two other teen-agers died after inhaling cleaning fluid and gas.

That prompted state Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, to introduce a bill in the Idaho Legislature that would make sniffing gasoline and other inhalants illegal.

The legislation would make it a misdemeanor for anyone under 18 to inhale aerosol sprays or other volatile substances in order to cause "intoxication, inebriation, excitement, stupefaction or the dulling of the brain or nervous system."

The Senate unanimously approved the bill last Thursday and it's awaiting action by the House, Darrington said. The legislation is aimed at keeping kids in school by making them accountable for using intoxicants, he said Tuesday.

But Sara shook her head when asked about the bill.

"I don't think the law will work," she said. Laws prohibiting teen-agers from drinking and from using drugs have already failed, she said, and gas is a lot easier to get.

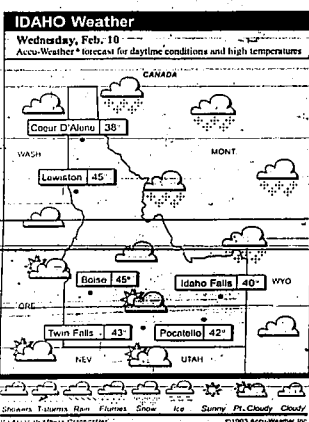

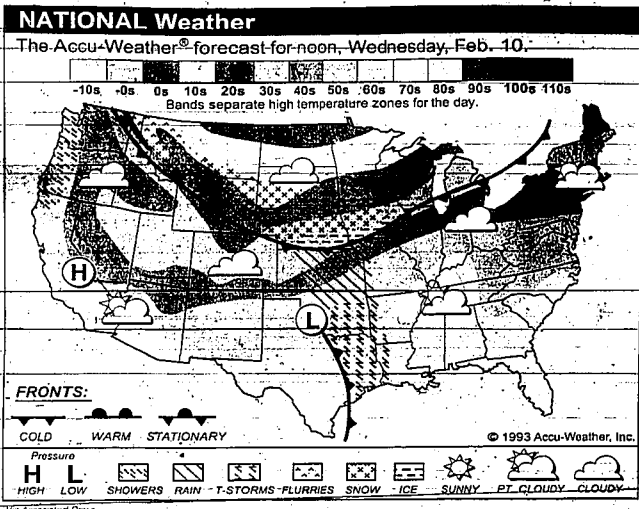

But what happened to Sara has influenced several of her fellow students at O'Leary Junior High School, because Sara doesn't make it easy for them to forget.

During a recent interview, she smiled when her grandmother, Beverly Brannon, said that Sara purpose-

Six months ago, Sara Friel, 14, sustained near-fatal burns while 'huffing.'

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says a mixed bag of weather covered Idaho Tuesday.

Light snow was falling in the mountains and the southeast while scattered light rain was reported elsewhere. Some patchy fog was also observed throughout the day. A trough of low pressure was producing this pattern as it drifted northeast across the western states.

Cloudy skies covered the state in the afternoon and the winds were mostly light except in the extreme southeast. Precipitation amounts were generally 10 inches or less.

The afternoon temperatures were in the 30s and 40s. Twin Falls high of 44 was the warmest reading for the year.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 49 degrees at Hagerman. Dixie reported the coldest at 1 degree above zero.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 83 degrees at McAllen, Texas. The lowest was 20 degrees below zero at Saranac Lake, N.Y.

southern Utah on Tuesday. Between 2 and 5 inches of rain fell in northwest and central Arizona during a 24-hour period that ended Tuesday afternoon.

Heavy rain from thunderstorms produced urban flooding in parts of southern Texas. Rain was scattered along the Pacific Coast from northwest Washington state to south-central California. Areas of light rain prevailed over northwest Texas, the middle Mississippi Valley and southern Florida.

Light snow covered much of North Dakota.

High pressure over New England was providing much of the northern and middle Atlantic Coast states with mostly sunny skies.

The low temperature for the Lower 48 states Tuesday was 23 degrees below zero at Allagash, Maine.

Senators push Idahoan for post

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Attorney General Larry EchoHawk held out little hope Tuesday that President Clinton would make him the nation's first Indian cabinet member.

But EchoHawk acknowledged that Democratic Sen. Daniel Inoué of Hawaii and Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah had been lobbying the White House to make him U.S. attorney general.

"On one list, but they're pretty far down the road," EchoHawk said. "I think it's a long shot. I don't expect to get a call from President Clinton, but it's flattering and I'm honored to be on the list."

The Democrats, who announced last week that he would not run for governor in 1994, said he had talked to no one in the Clinton administration. He said lobbying on his behalf began Saturday with Inoué's chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, who called EchoHawk for permission to nominate him.

"He's very serious," EchoHawk said. "He knows my background as a prosecutor and as a state attorney general and thought that it all fit."

In Washington, Florida prosecutor Janet Reno moved up the list of attorney general prospects Tuesday.

The White House officials say Clinton is considering men for the top Justice Department post, but hopes to appoint the nation's first female attorney general.

Clinton's consideration of being pushed by administration officials — include: Nebraska Court Appeals Judge Lindsey Miller-Lerman, a college classmate of Mrs. Clinton at Wellesley; Boston Federal judge Rya Zobel; former Virginia attorney general Mary Sue Terry; former transportation secretary and longtime Clinton friend William T. Coleman Jr.; former Virginia Gov. Gerald Baliles; and Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau.

EchoHawk said Hatch, a Senate Judiciary Committee member, then joined the effort. EchoHawk, who knows Hatch from practicing law in Salt Lake City early in his career, said he talked to the senator four times during the weekend about becoming attorney general.

"He got very enthusiastic about it and called the White House himself," EchoHawk said. "He gave me the message that 'I'll be with you step by step all the way through the process; and we'll assure your confidentiality.'"

Gov. Cecil Andrus and Congressman Larry LaRocco called administration officials on Monday.

But on Tuesday, EchoHawk said he was convinced. "It's not going to happen."

supported Dahl's appointment.

"I thought they were pretty equal in the interviews," said Hall, a retired Jerome County sheriff. "The only thing is Patrick would not have to go to law school. He knows all the law enforcement people in the county and wouldn't have to learn his way around — this would give him an advantage. So I hold my own standard and would vote for Patrick."

The council's four members deadlocked between Dahl and Birmingham on Jan. 4, and Osler declined to break the tie, reopening the application process.

Dahl and Birmingham were among 11 candidates who applied for the job the second time around.

Huntington Beach Police Department for 27 years, has served as commander of the department's canine unit, was a police helicopter pilot for three years, a detective supervisor for three years and worked patrol jobs.

Huntington Beach, which is located in Orange County southeast of Los Angeles, has about 200,000 residents.

"I want everybody to know I'm available — everybody will have my home phone number," Dahl said. "I like to meet people face to face — look at someone's eyes and you can tell — you gotta have that personal relationship."

Dahl and his wife, Deborah, have three children, 15, David, 6, and Matthew, 5. Deborah's father, Val Ashton, lives in Shoshone.

Acting Chief Jay Gardner, who applied for the job, said he could work with Dahl.

"I'm willing to work with anybody," he said. "We have a good department and good officers. I'm sure the City Council made the right decision."

lly wears short-sleeved shirts and shorts so that scars on her legs and left arm that look like red tire tracks are plainly visible.

"Kids have come up to me in the mall and said they've got it, but they don't let it irritate," she said.

But not all the youngsters who know Sara's story have been frightened away from huffing, she said.

When Sara returned home after three weeks of excruciating skin grafts at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center's Burn Trauma Unit in Salt Lake City, she went to a friend's house to get her school books.

When the front door opened, Sara smelt a strong odor of gas. Sara had skipped school, run away from home and huffed gas with this friend, and Sara didn't have much to say.

"I figured it wasn't worth it if she was there when I caught on fire," she said.

But on the day before Thanksgiving — shortly after returning home following more skin grafts — she learned that another friend, a 12-year-old boy, was huffing in his basement. Sara called the police.

Her friend was later sent to the Idaho Youth Ranch, she said.

Sara said she hopes his experience will keep him out of harm's way in the future.

Sara has also fulfilled a vow she made to her family — she's still undergoing treatments.

She has visited the Port of Hope, which has a residential drug and alcohol rehabilitation program, and spoken with two teen-agers who were caught drinking alcohol and huffing.

"I showed them my scars and told them what caused it," Sara said. She told them that when she awoke at the hospital after her skin graft operations she looked at her legs to see why they were hurting.

"I kept repeating to my grandma that my legs looked like hamburger," she said.

Although the skin on her legs has mostly healed, she still feels pain and has horrible itching spells, Sara said.

"No one has taken her up on an offer she made to bring her message about the dangers of huffing to area school children."

But she got a chance to keep another promise.

In December, her mother, Cindy Brannon, took Sara to the medical laboratory where Safeway works.

"I told him, 'Thank you for putting me out of fire...'" she said. "If you wouldn't have I don't know if I would be alive."

"All her said was, 'You guys were stupid,'" she said. "I hope you learned your lesson."

Sara did, but she said she worries about other teen-agers.

"I know they're doing it," she said.

Gay activists clash with tea company

DENVER — Colorado's anti-gay-rights law is on hold, but the fight against it is dividing activists over whether a tea company based in the state is living up to its progressive reputation. A New York group began a boycott of Celestial Seasonings on Tuesday — and said it planned a tea party in New York Harbor — because the company won't publicly condemn Amendment 2, even though its products are popular with the gay community. The company's founder and chief executive, '70s business wonder Mo Siegel, countered that the group New York Boycott Colorado is targeting him because he refuses to give them $100,000 for the campaign against the law.

Prosecutor says KGB aided smuggling

MIAMI — The KGB helped a Miami man smuggle orangutans to Eastern Europe, a prosecutor said Tuesday after a hearing where the dealer pleaded guilty. "The use of these Eastern European countries has been a major problem in smuggling endangered animals," said Shirley McCreel of the International Primate Protection League. The league has helped draw widespread attention to the case of primate dealer Matthew Block. U.S. District Judge James Kehoe received 500 letters from environmentalists asking the judge to help protect the dwindling primate population. Block, 31, owner of WorldWide Primates Inc., initially agreed to plead guilty to a misdemeanor. Kehoe rejected the plea.

Immigrants with AIDS to be allowed

WASHINGTON — President Clinton will lift immigration restrictions on foreigners infected with the AIDS virus, but the timing is uncertain, White House officials said Tuesday. White House Press Secretary Dee Myers said Clinton promised during the campaign to "lift the ban on travel and immigration for people with HIV, and he will do that. There's no particular timetable at this point." Clinton shares the view of medical experts "that it's not a public threat," she said. The Department of Health and Human Services, for the third time in the past two years, has recommended removing AIDS from a list of contagious diseases that bar entry to this country, sources said.

Ethics office sends report on Sessions

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department's ethics office is sending the White House a follow-up report on FBI Director William Sessions, this one focusing on whether he received a "sweetheart" mortgage on his home, a department source said Tuesday. The new report, likely to be forwarded this week, is an addendum to the Jan. 19 report by the Office of Professional Responsibility that accused Sessions of several improprieties — including the mortgage deal.

Infant dies in fire caused by brother

SAN ANTONIO — A year-old boy died in a house fire started accidentally by his 4-year-old brother after the children were left at home unsupervised by their working mother, authorities said. A neighbor said Tuesday the Linda Gonzalez, 24, often left the children at home because she couldn't find affordable day care. "She was trying to find a day care center, but it was hard on her," said Beverly McLemore, 47.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton has plenty of options for taxing the rich but will find it tough to shrink the budget deficit without other taxes and spending cuts that could anger the public, new congressional estimates show. The Congressional Budget Office's annual menu of ways to trim the shortfall shows that billions of dollars can be raised by boosting the top income tax rate, raising the minimum tax the rich pay, and limiting their deductions. Since his election campaign, Clinton has repeatedly spoken of making the wealthy "pay their fair share" of deficit reduction. But the budget office's list, made available Tuesday to The Associated Press, also says that raising such levies would probably raise little money compared to the size of the deficit. Clinton and his aides have already acknowledged this by warning about the need for "shared sacrifice" by all segments of the public.

The list is important because budget writers often use it for deficit-reduction ideas, and because the Congressional Budget Office is widely respected in Washington as a bipartisan source of information. Here's the problem: Clinton is thinking about trying to reduce federal red ink by $145 billion in fiscal 1997. Getting there will likely require a phased-in, four-year increase in the top marginal rate on income tax, containing total savings of much more than that — probably $300 billion or more.

Clinton is further constrained — at least for the moment — by White House budget chief Leon Panetta's comments that for every $1 in tax increases, he would like to find $2 in spending cuts. Many congressional Democrats have complained that the formula emphasizes spending cuts too heavily, and the president has made no final decision on the ratio.

In the face of such figures, the budget office's options show that deficit-reduction will have to be borne by more than just the rich.

Boosting the top income-tax rate for individuals from its current 31 percent to 33 percent would raise $24 billion over the next four years. Clinton is expected to try to raise the top rate, paid by the most affluent Americans, to 36 percent.

Raising the top rate on corporations from 34 percent to 35 percent would garner $11.3 billion for the government over four years. Clinton is considering a 36 percent upper rate.

Increasing the alternative minimum tax paid by the wealthy from 24 percent to 28 percent would raise $17.1 billion over four years. The tax is designed to ensure that wealthy people pay some tax, no matter how many legitimate deductions they have.

The report lists other tax options for Clinton, many of which could end up hitting the middle class. Some, including their four-year savings, are:

- Reduce the current $1 million cap on mortgages on which taxpayers can deduct interest to $300,000; $9 billion.

- Let employer-paid health insurance premiums exceeding $400 per month for families and $165 monthly for individuals; $79 billion.

- Tax capital gains at death. Currently, no income tax is owed on the increased value of an inherited asset if that appreciation occurred before the previous owner's death; $23.1 billion.

To raise the money he needs, Clinton is considering other tax options. Along with their four-year savings, these include:

- Higher taxes on alcohol and tobacco products. Doubling the 24-cent-per-pack cigarette tax would raise $14.3 billion. The government could raise $17.9 billion by increasing the tax on a six-pack of beer from 33 cents to 81 cents, the tax on a bottle of wine from 21 cents to 70 cents, and the tax on a bottle of hard liquor from $2.14 to $2.54.
- Energy taxes. A 5 percent tax on energy would raise $71.4 billion.

Spending-cuts options and their four-year savings include:

- Scale back nuclear weapons research and halt testing; $600 million.

- Reduce from 14 to 10 the number of aircraft carrier battle groups; $8.4 billion.

- Reduce military and economic foreign-aid; $4.2 billion.

- Cancel the space station and superconducting super collider; $9.7 billion.

- Reduce anti-drug law enforcement efforts; $6.8 billion.

- Reduce deficiency payments to farmers; $7.1 billion.
- Reduce federal interest subsidies for Stafford loans to college students; $2.4 billion.
- Increase the monthly premium Medicare recipients pay for doctors services by 5 percent; $20.1 billion.

Loophole remains in immigration law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Right from the start, Congress recognized a loophole in the 1986 immigration law that covers household help. But nothing has been done to plug it.

The law requires employers to prove they are eligible to work, and fines employers who hire people who aren't. But the documents used as proof are easily counterfeited.

The law played a key role in the withdrawal of Zoe Baird as President Clinton's nominee to be attorney general. But her case did not involve the use of phony documents. She knew that she was hiring an illegal alien as a babysitter and did not pay Social Security taxes on the worker's behalf. The controversy has focused renewed attention on the employer sanctions provision of the 1986 law.

If a Social Security card, driver's license or birth certificate presented by a worker "reasonably appears its face to be genuine," the employer has met his burden and cannot be fined even if the worker is in the country illegally.

Immigration officials readily admit the widespread availability of counterfeit documents.

"Has anything been done to shore up or to gain credibility in our documentation? No it hasn't," said Duke Austin, spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"The law recognized that our system was faulty, yet any effort whatsoever to shore up the loophole is fought by the Hispanic caucus," Austin said.

Hispanic and other groups fear that a national worker authorization card could lead to police-state tactics — discrimination against foreigners in this country legally and an invasion of privacy.

"The Latino community has experience with ID cards being misused against our community," said Cecilia Munoz, senior immigration policy analyst for the National Council of La Raza.

Other proposals to shore up the system have been rejected as well.

"An effort to set up pilot programs in three states to produce tamper-resistant driver's licenses was dropped in 1990 by the sponsors of immigration legislation after the proposal threatened to derail the whole bill."

Suspect arraigned after bomb threat

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A man who threatened a Mormon Church leader with a bogus bomb at Brigham Young University was arraigned Tuesday under tight security.

Cody Robert Judy, 27, was charged in Fourth Circuit court with one count of second-degree kidnapping and one count of second-degree aggravated assault, both felonies. He also was charged with simple assault, a class B misdemeanor.

Fourth Circuit Judge E. Patrick McGuire ordered Judy transferred from the Utah County Jail, where he was held in lieu of $100,000 bond, to the Utah State Hospital. He will undergo mental competency testing at the hospital.

A competency hearing will be held, but has not been scheduled. Judy was jailed after holding what he claimed was a briefcase bomb.

Netherlands adopts euthanasia rules

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — The Netherlands adopted the most liberal euthanasia guidelines in Europe on Tuesday after years of keeping the widely accepted practice in legal limbo.

Although the legislation approved by parliament stops short of legalization, it guarantees physicians immunity from prosecution if they follow strict guidelines for mercy killing.

The compromise was an attempt to placate right-to-lifers opposed to repealing the ban on euthanasia entirely, while giving legal protection to physicians performing the thousands of mercy killings believed to occur yearly.

Euthanasia is still punishable by up to 12 years in prison.

Radioactive material kills 3 in China

BEIJING — A man who found a shiny gold ball not knowing it was radioactive material has died along with his brother and father in China's worst accident involving nuclear waste, an official report said Tuesday.

More than 90 people got sick from the radioactive substance, cobalt 60, said the China Disaster Reduction News (Zhongguo Jianzai Bao).

Zhang Yaobang, 29, was cleaning a well in November in Xinzhou, in northwest China's Shanxi province, when he found a piece of cobalt 60. The substance is used in radiotherapy, metallurgy and materials testing.

The paper said Zhang was attracted by the shiny gold ball and put it in his pocket.

Car bomb kills Afghan governor

KABUL, Afghanistan — A car bomb exploded Tuesday on a road south of Kabul, killing provincial Gov. Nasrullah Mansouri, and Turkey closed its embassy in the embattled capital.

Three weeks of fighting between government forces and rebels that has killed about 1,000 people forced Turkey to shut its embassy Tuesday and send its 12 diplomats to New Delhi. Three days earlier, India shut its mission and called its staff home.

"It's the first time the Turkish Embassy here has ever been closed," said charge d'affaires Aykut Cetirge, Turkey's highest ranking diplomat in Afghanistan.

Yeltsin backs away from referendum

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin offered to drop his demand for a constitutional referendum Tuesday in a conciliatory move aimed at placating foes in parliament.

Yeltsin accepted proposals by speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov and other parliamentarians to call for presidential and parliamentary elections in exchange for movement on the economic front.

"Let's declare 1993 the year of a moratorium on all political battles and focus our attention fully on the economy," Yeltsin said. "I am ready to extend a hand one more time to our political opponents and take the first step toward stopping this conflict."

The move appeared less a retreat than maneuvering by Yeltsin, whose supporters say he may have enough backing to prevail in a nationwide ballot on who should be more powerful: the president or parliament.

MOGADISHU, Somalia — As U.S. forces marked two months in Somalia on Tuesday, their spokesman expressed impatience with the United Nations' slowness in taking over the operation.

"We have solved the humanitarian side of the equation," the spokesman, Marine Col. Fred Peck, said in an interview. "It's police blotter stuff now, and we're not trained to be beat cops."

However the streets remain dangerous. Car thieves killed a UNICEF doctor in the capital.

In another incident, two Somalis died in a clash between rival groups on a highway outside Mogadishu involving U.S. troops.

Mitterrand ties Vietnam aid, human rights

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand on Tuesday became the first Western leader to visit Vietnam since 1975 and promised to double aid to the former French colony as long as Hanoi improves human rights.

Mitterrand also expressed hopes at a state dinner that the U.S. economic embargo against Vietnam would be lifted, saying it has "no raison d'etre."

France normalized relations with Vietnam in 1989, ending a U.S.-led boycott imposed after the Communist North took over the South nearly 18 years ago. France took the action after Vietnam withdrew its troops from Cambodia, which it had invaded in 1978 to overthrow the royal Khmer Rouge regime.

Despite the bitter colonial legacy, economic and cultural ties between Vietnam and France run deep. Many older educated Vietnamese speak French, and France is a preferred destination for Vietnamese studying abroad.

Mitterrand brought businessmen from France to help Vietnam emerge from its economic isolation.

On the first day of a four-day visit, he stressed the need for this nation's economic opening to the West to be accompanied by increased liberties.

"The respect for human rights has become a universal demand. With its inseparable companion, economic development ... democracy and development are inseparable," the 76-year-old French leader said at the dinner, hosted by President Le Duc Anh.

"A day like today marks the reunion of two nations, two peoples," Mitterrand said.

France, he announced, is prepared to double aid to Vietnam this year to $65 million.

Vietnam has allowed foreign investment to spur a sluggish economy at last the West has acknowledged Vietnam's open-door policy, the policy of renovation, and its will to join the mainstream economy. A 200-member delegation accompanied Mitterrand.

Haiti agrees on monitors

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haiti's government agreed Tuesday to allow U.N. monitors to investigate freely human-rights conditions in the country for at least a year.

Diplomats said they hoped the accord would lead to a restoration of democracy.

The announcement from the office of army-backed Prime Minister Marc Bazin called the monitors' mission "only the first step toward the normalization and democratization of political life."

The key question is whether the Haitians will cooperate with the rights monitors, who would seek to protect Haitians from harassment.

"We do not know that right now," said the U.N. special envoy for Haiti, Dante Caputo.

Sixteen observers from the Organization of American States have been in Haiti for months, but their movements have been restricted by the military.

Caputo told reporters he would send several human rights and technical experts to Haiti this week.

Why our $59 eyeglasses are worth more than theirs

Lately there's been a lot of hoopla from our higher-priced competitors about their new low prices.

The new "low prices" take up a huge portion of the ads. Yet, if you get to the stores, how many frames do you think you'll find at that price? Would you be disappointed if there were only 12 or 13?

Unfortunately, it makes it even harder for you to believe that our low prices are really on the level.

Few companies operate with the cost-cutting efficiency required to succeed at prices this low.

Our $59 price is complete—including frames and single vision plastic lenses. Additional pairs, same prescription and visit, are just $39. Most bifocals just $20 more. So two pairs cost just $98. And no extra charge for oversize or almost all high power lenses.

You don't wear the price tag

Still, the biggest difference between us and them is our selection. Our $59 and $39 prices include a choice from over 400 fashionable frames—the vast majority of frames in our store.

From the fashionably conservative to the cutting edge of today's styles; these include designs from St. Moritz, Converse, REM, Zimco, Renaissance, Enrico Biaggi & more. For $20 to $90 more, we can specially designers like Liz Claiborne, Anne Klein, Ray Ban, Valley of Paris, Cheryl Tieg & others.

Doctor's Comment

"Working with the Portland Trailblazers, I learned how important correct eyewear is in sports.

"If you wear contact lenses, you should be fitted for a larger lens size for sports. This will decrease the chance of losing one during physical activity.

"Or if you play a sport in which a ball can hit your eyes, you should wear protective sports goggles, whether your vision needs correction or not."

Environmental concerns mustn't eclipse economics

President Clinton, who completed during the election campaign that the cards were stacked against the environment, shuffled the deck at the White House this week.

At a news conference announcing the creation of a new Office of Environmental Policy, Vice President Gore, Clinton's unofficial environmental adviser, declared that henceforth the environment would be considered "at the earliest stages in the development of every policy that the president and his staff and Cabinet look at."

That, Gore said, would redress the balance from the Bush years, when economics came first, politics came second, and environmental considerations were an afterthought.

We think it's appropriate that the environment is a front-burner issue, again, but if that's the new litmus test for federal policy, the president and the country are headed for trouble.

The truth is, no action that affects the environment can be made independent of economic and political considerations.

The trick is to find a balance, and on environmental issues balance has long eluded the people who pass the laws and those charged with enforcing them.

The Endangered Species Act, which is up for reauthorization by Congress this year, is the classic example.

The basic premise of the law is that science, not economics, should drive the determination of whether a species should be preserved.

That's practically impossible. The decision to save any species, from the spotted owl to the snail darter, unavoidably involves painful economic choices.

And political concerns as well. Anyone who thinks the Snake River sockeye salmon, for example, is going to be saved without fundamental compromises among Idaho, Oregon and Washington on larger issues like water and public power is deluding himself.

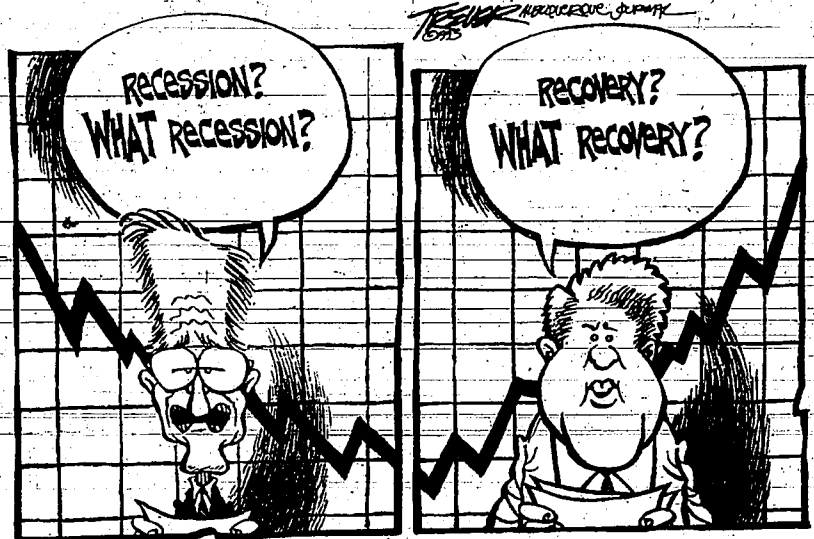

These are not questions for the Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service; they're questions for the people who have to live with the consequences.

Two years ago, the spotted-owl issue came down to a group of cabinet-level bureaucrats - the so-called "God squad" - deciding from Washington which areas of the Pacific Northwest should be logged and which shouldn't.

That's ludicrous. The problem with the federal government trying to save the environment is that nobody in Washington can do the job better than ordinary people working to make their own communities better.

The danger is that the federal government will resort to its favorite tool - mandates - which are both bitterly resented and chronically ineffective.

It's good news that the Clinton administration has committed itself to environmental problems. It would be better news if it would commit itself to environmental solutions.

Further generational battles lie ahead

When Americans cast their votes last November, they decreed many changes in Washington. The most important one, some of us guessed, was the change in generations in control of the government. Already, we are beginning to see signs of the strain that change puts on both the leaders and the nation.

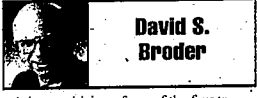

For 40 years, from Dwight Eisenhower through George Bush, the presidency was monopolized by men who had worn the country's uniform during World War II. All of them had personal memories of the Great Depression. All of them had been part of the bonding experience of the national mobilization against Nazism, fascism and imperial Japan.

When a new generation, led by 46-year-old Bill Clinton and 44-year-old Albert Gore Jr., won last November, the nation's leadership passed to a set of people who were formed in a very different crucible. The shaping events of their lives - the civil rights revolution, the struggle over women's rights, the battle over abortion and, most of all, the Vietnam War - were unites which polarized Americans, rather than united them.

The divisions within that generation delayed its succession to power. And now that it finally has arrived, those same generation-related problems are causing Clinton headaches. His missteps do not approach the seriousness of the Bay of Pigs disaster in the first weeks of John F. Kennedy's presidency. But they offer a glimpse of the tricky course ahead.

The difficulty of finding an attorney general, for example, stems from a "boomer" phenomenon - the pattern of professional spouses employing elite careers and remit them to the government; it is easier to police thousands of companies than more than 100 million workers.

The two women Clinton picked for the Justice Department job were a Ivy League corporate lawyer married to an Ivy-powered professor, in a magazine, and a federal judge married to a magazine columnist, in the other.

David S. Broder

It is not criticism of any of the four to suggest that they - and many of their contemporaries - were more prepared than most in their parents' generation to turn over child-care to someone else. That lie people they hired were illegal aliens came as no surprise to their contemporaries; many of whom had done the same thing for the same reason.

It is also characteristic of that generation that the reaction has been sharply split, with some saying that Zoe Baird and Kimba Wood got their rightful competence and others saying they were victims of a double standard.

A similar split has begun to emerge about Hillary Rodham Clinton's role as a major arbiter of policy and personnel in her husband's administration. It is not inevitable that one of the World War II vets' wives could have aspired to, or undertaken, such a White House role. But in fact, none of the last eight First Ladies did so.

Lady Bird Johnson, a woman of uncommon abilities, lobbied for the highway beautification bill. But that is a far cry from Hillary Rodham Clinton's becoming head of the administration's health care task force and exercising a decisive influence on such key appointments as attorney general. Lyndon Johnson was not going to rise or fall on the billboard bill, but Clinton will be crippled if the White House fumbles the health care initiative as it did the search for an attorney general.

Some can't believe this crucial task has been given to the First Lady; others think she's perfectly qualified for the task and it would be stupid not to use her. I'm in the second group myself; but I still want to know how she's going to be held accountable for her work. Will the White House allow her to be interviewed on this subject, or restrict questions to the planning of White House parties, as was the case when she recently granted her first post-election audience to The New York Times?

Her activities raise the whole issue of gender and role stereotyping, which is - one has to say - an unsettled and, for many, unsettling question.

But the clearest cause of the challenges this generation raises - and faces - is the issue of gays in the military. The World War II vets left it alone, probably out of embarrassment, ignorance or, in some cases, prejudice. But in Clinton's generation, homosexuality has come out of the closet and gays are far more assertive of their rights - including the right to join the military.

Conditioned by the civil rights movement to react strongly to almost any claim of discrimination, Clinton moved fast to give gays their rights. In so doing, he triggered an unanticipated response - laden with echoes of the Vietnam debate of the '60s.

Just as they did 25 years ago, when Clinton was participating in anti-Vietnam War demonstrations, the opponents of the Clinton gay-rights initiative postured themselves as protectors of the military. Colin Powell became William Westmoreland, and Clinton, to his apparent surprise, was cast as Abbie Hoffman.

That battle has been postponed for six months, but it will surely be back with us again. Indeed, my guess is that these three generational controversies in the first three weeks of the administration are just the tip of the iceberg.

A lot more fun, and friction, lie ahead. David S. Broder writes for the Washington Post.

Legislation governing taxation of child care lacks logic, fairness

The laws that toppled Zoe Baird and Kimba Wood hide a regressive income tax surcharge targeted directly at working families. It's time to repeal it.

The tax is premised on the government's right to regulate "employment" in business. And if one has an "employee," then one must comply with laws bearing such notorious names as the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, the Federal Unemployment Tax Act and the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986.

About a dozen factors determine if a person working for you is a true employee. They include the right to control the means to accomplish a task, the right to assign or refuse additional tasks, the right to set hours and working conditions and others too boring to detail.

Clearly these factors, the law (and Wood's) explicitly consider Baird's and Baird's ex-baby sitters to be their "employees." But examined closely, there is no logic behind the law. What's worse, the same principles might also, in some situations, make a baby-sitting relative an "employee."

The burdens of complying with tax, immigration, labor and insurance laws are simply inappropriately imposed on families, since maintaining their home is not any working couple's occupation or trade. Rather, it is their private affair. Indeed, it is because each working parent holds a real job that causes them to need child care.

The law has long maintained a justifiable distinction between the business and the personal. Business enterprises exist to make or raise money, at least in theory, to create capital and compensate labor. For administrative convenience, they are required to withhold their workers' taxes and remit them to the government; it is easier to police thousands of companies than more than 100 million workers. The government subsidizes those efforts through a matrix of deductions, depreciations and only to commercial concerns. That is one of the reasons why businesses are willing to put up with the costs of their own existence, including costs of complying.

By contrast, no household has yet made a nickel keeping the home operating. That is not the reason it exists nor as to make it so.

Social policy does, of course, incur expenses and suffer losses, sometimes greater than they can sustain. But we recognize that when such events occur in pursuit of one's personal life, they are not "business" expenses under the tax code.

With few exceptions, therefore, we do not expect the tax code to subsidize our cost of living. The basic freedom in our personal lives from governmental intrusion is the quid pro quo for this arrangement.

The child-care quandary isolates single-parent and two-wage-earner households for discriminatory treatment merely for the government's own administrative convenience.

The law then compounds the inequity by effectively imposing on this population the 15 percent to 33 percent income tax that these same people, if they were truly in business and could deduct the same expenses, would not have to pay.

Of course, we have the opportunity to make a rational policy choice. We can recognize that families, in the conduct of their personal affairs, are incapable of having "employees" in a legal sense and therefore ought not be subject to the myriad compliance obligations imposed on business. That approach, which would take a minimal statutory revision, would place a baby sitter, American citizen or otherwise, on a par with other self-provisioning purveyors of personal goods and services, such as painters, electricians, doctors and lawyers.

On the other hand, if we accept the premise that homemakers should do the IRS' job and collect income taxes from babysitters and that babysitters ought to have workers' compensation insurance and Social Security, then we should at least be intellectually honest and truly treat child-rearing as a business - and perpetually money-losing, but nevertheless a recognized business.

But then consider the ramifications: A family could deduct all of its ordinary and necessary business expenses. Just think of it: Tax-deductible toys. Baby food. Telephone bills. Electricity. Car pooling.

Most of the authority to do this is already right there in the tax code, just waiting for some arduous legislative tinkering. Or some fed-up taxpayer may simply choose to claim the deduction first and fight for it in court.

If that should ever happen - after the IRS has had its fit, the federal government will have to defend its antediluvian anti-family policies, the ones that culminated in the Baird/Wood witch hunt. Ironically, the attorney general would be in charge of the case. I wonder how either woman would have handled it?

Solar power is needed to bypass special interests

To Sen. Craig:
The recent strike by coal workers and the extraordinary dependence on coal by eastern public utilities magnifies the terrible problem America faces in energy production. The solution is simple - solar power.
Solar is the world's answer for meeting its energy needs. There is no strip mining of the environment, zero pollution in the production of solar panels and it's free - daily. Let's get Congress out of the business of bowing to special interests in the energy industries (coal, natural gas, nuclear, oil, hydroelectric, etc.) and have politicians start serving for a responsible America.

For the last 12 years America has seen how irresponsibly its leaders have been controlled by moneyed lobbyists. This bedroom romance is soon to be ended as President Clinton waffling on his campaign pledge to end politics as usual because the American people are sick of providing "tax breaks for investment" only to see CEOs earn interests in the energy industries in scandalous business arrangements.

Witness the criminal savings and loan and "leverage buyouts" dealings that made so many wealthy people healthier and put so few people, including members of Congress, in prison. The recent inducements by Idaho Power to build a new coal-fired power plant for homes is a tremendous boost for promoting the safest, most cost-effective route to curing energy production in the U.S.: solar power.

Thank you for addressing the need for solar power.

Oppose ODDM now, before it's too late

Wake up to ODDM. Parents need to open their eyes to the "Outcome Driven Developmental Model" method of education introduced into the Twin Falls school system. Why does Dr. Donahut want the survey teachers? What is he afraid of?
I understand that ODDM brings the academic achievement of our students down, it does not show up because every student receives A's and B's, and no one fails. Questions on tests are minimally academic and the majority of questions are about attitudes; and you will answer the way ODDM wants. If you don't then they will be remediated and retested. Time is not of the essence, you will keep retesting until you pass. Those that do pass the first time become "peer teachers"; if they are teaching they are stuck at that level. ODDM will not send kids to school to teach, but to be taught. This method takes the top off of education and brings achievement down. ODDM states: "Schools will not teach - students will demonstrate" - demonstrate attitudes! You "must go with the flow" and exhibit emotional change without protest. This sounds like behavior modification.

Why do teachers have to be "retrained" if they have graduated from college and have a teacher's certificate? Shouldn't that be sufficient? We do have good teachers in Twin Falls, and the criticism is not of the teachers, but of a non-academic psychological mind-altering method that has failed in many states and cost the taxpayers millions of dollars before being tossed out as ineffective.

Wake up parents, get involved, if you think a $50 fee is exorbitant, investigate how much it is costing to retrain teachers and principals and for substitutes to fill in for those being retrained. Our properties have already been reassessed and property taxes raised.
So let the School Board know how you feel before it is too late and they run the district into financial bankruptcy and our children into academic bankruptcy.

It's time to worry about vegetarians in the military

Received some papers. Find Steve Crump's column getting better. (California bashing should be part of every column.) But the Old Timers find that our country's hate of gays is of the greatest interest. The gay fight has brought on a most interesting conflict.
Vegetarians... Should they be banned from the military?

The concept is spreading. The military chow is primarily a meat-eating macho diet. These cut-throats are now demanding more... and more rights. In full view of others, they have been seen sipping beans, peeling cucumbers and stroking zucchini.

We true Americans (Veterans of Foreign War members and all) have consulted with our respective religious and political leaders and hope to nip in the bud the concept of vegetarians in our military.

As former military (lions and tigers), we know the problems of allowing those (lambs) to find a place in our country's military. If the meat-eating diet is allowed to be moderated by grass chewers, our fighting ability will suffer. Morale will drop and many will resign.

The laws are in place to enact such a ban. We must get Congress to expand the present anti-gay laws to include vegetarians.

Even the liberal media should see what is happening to our America. Such American institutions as McDonald's serving vegetable burgers. Offering meatless meals in many of our American cafes.

If such a practice should extend to our military, we can see mass migration of Army cooks.
Please join our movement to ban vegetarians from the military, or if you prefer, keep them out of McDonald's.

Idaho doesn't need more bunny-bashing

What a lovely article Mr. Murrell wrote about killing jackrabbits. Perhaps this is the year Idaho residents will make the big-time news media again. Remember all those wonderful photos of kids bashing bunnies with baseball bats?

I know Mr. Murrell thinks of animals statistically - numbers that need to be controlled, re-routed, enlarged, diminished, etc. But that one animal that the gun (or baseball bat) is looting in on is just one fragile animal-like you or me, and I don't think anyone should kill it.
Stay home, Mr. Murrell, and "get flabby from too much TV."

Family's cherished dog will be missed

To whom it may concern:
This letter we wish we didn't have to write. We were a family of six before the night of Feb. 1. Now we are only five. Someone took our Sissy from us before she could come home. Now we will mourn our little curly-haired shadow who will never again get to play with us in the deep snow or get to go camping and snore or vomit morning. Sissy loved the outdoors and barked only when things weren't right.
We never heard her bark Monday night. I guess she didn't know she'd done wrong. And now I guess I'll tell the kids that life can be extra cruel when no one cares enough to say I'm sorry, it was my fault. I'm sorry-I was wrong.

I hope the tears end as quickly as our Sissy dog did.
Sissy, dance pretty for Gd.

Alternative High School serves its students well

This is in regard to Mary Cook's letter concerning the Alternative High School.
The school is the hope of a bright future for many students, not only young mothers but also others that have run into difficulties. It's true they have room for only 100 students and the waiting list is always long, but they are the least crowded school in Twin Falls. The staff members are very caring and dedicated. The classes are small. Some are seven to 15 in number. The teachers can work closely with each student and solve most problems before they are too hard to overcome.

My daughter attends the Alternative High School by her choice. At the Twin Falls High School, she got off on the wrong foot, and by the time we were aware of what happened, it was too late to turn things around. Jana wanted to try the Alternative School. She has improved her grades enormously, thanks to the teachers and friends. She has the hope for a bright future.

Take positive approach to INEL, nuclear work

I would like Gov. Andrus to look at the DOE, INEL, and radiation in a different light.

The used fuel rods of nuclear reactors are really very valuable recyclable assets. They are much more valuable than paper, plastic or glass. They are also more valuable than the metals recovered from old cars, beer cans and what have you.

Dangerous? Yes, but so are arsenic, lead, mercury and many compounds of the stable elements. Many of the later are carcinogenic, mind altering, poisonous, and/or explosive. They can be much more damaging to people and the environment than the low-level radiation or the highly radioactive transuranic elements and isotopes.

Idaho has an industry in place and capable of safely processing this material. Instead of prohibiting and discouraging and berating this industry, you as governor, should be encouraging the advancement of it.

Instead of building fear of radiation and resentment against the federal government and distrust of the Department of Energy, it would be much better to encourage the people of Idaho to take a patriotic stance and help solve this national problem of radioactive residue.

Nowhere in the state of Idaho has radioactivity harmed the public through the air, or water, or transportation. Compare that, if you will, with the other major industries of Idaho.

From the viewpoint of the environmentalists, nuclear power and research also show advantages over the other major industries of the state. There are no silt or chemicals washed into any stream. No fish or wild animals are endangered. No dust or smoke has made the adjoining land uninhabitable. No travelers are endangered by trucking or tourists. No streams or towns are endangered by spilled oil or gas from recklessly operated autos and trucks. No one is drowned in the canals or reservoirs. How good can it get?

Please, Gov. Andrus, push INEL. Do not push against the DOE or the federal government. We people of Idaho of Idaho are also citizens of the United States.

Faith in system shaken by failure of court case

I had my day in court. It only took six months, but I was still ready to go.

As long as I came to remember, I was taught to obey and uphold the law and that the law was set up to protect the people who were honest and told the truth.

As I found out there are a few court judges who are not as honest as I was taught. I was assaulted by a woman, Non-provoked, she hit me and left. I went to the police station and filed a complaint. As usual against the law. I got my car and the woman who assaulted me had continuously and she was believed instead of me.

What's the point then? The only thing that came out of this hearing was a lot of name calling and a sore mouth and bad feelings for and the state. My constitutional rights were legally not available in this case.

This woman claimed she didn't understand our system. So where can I go for someone to understand?

Phil Batt will explore run for governorship

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Republican Party Chairman Phil Batt, widely credited for turning the GOP around after a 1990 election debacle, said Tuesday he will decide by May 1 whether to run for governor in 1994.

"The former state Senate leader and lieutenant governor, who narrowly lost a 1982 bid for governor to Democrat John Evans, said he hopes to announce formation of an exploratory committee for next year's race by April 1."

"I've had a lot of people asking me to run," Batt said. "There's quite widespread support."

Batt

Batt, who is stepping down as state GOP chairman after this year's session of the Idaho Legislature, took the party's reins in early 1991 after Republicans lost the 1st Congressional District seat they had held for nearly a quarter century and Democrats pulled even in the Idaho Senate.

Until last week, Attorney General Larry Echolhawk was considered the strongest potential Democratic successor to Gov. Cecil Andrus, who does not plan to seek a fifth term in 1994.

But Echolhawk announced that he would not run for governor, giving Republicans more hope of retaking an office Democrats have held since 1971.

Batt backed away from challenging Andrus a friend in 1992.

"The thought of being governor, even though a great honor, does not have an overwhelming appeal to me," he said at the time. "There's another world out there besides the one we have in the Statehouse."

On the Republican side, Batt pointed to Ron McMurray, head of the Port of Lewiston; Gerald Tyler, president of Continental Life Insurance Co.; Li Gov. Butch Otter, political consultant Larry Eastland and House Speaker Michael Simpson as potential candidates.

Cigarettes cause fatal blaze

BOISE — Investigators blame smoldering cigarettes in a plastic garbage can for the fire that killed two children who were alone in a Boise duplex.

Boise Fire Capt. Dan Templeman said Sunday's fire — determined to be accidental — started near the back door of the one-story duplex. That's where he found the remains of a melted plastic garbage can.

The children's mother, Lisa Tuck, told investigators she had emptied ashtrays into the 3-foot-tall container about two hours before the blaze was reported.

Illness remains a mystery

CATALDO — The state's search for the cause of a mysterious illness plaguing residents of the Cataldo-Rose Lake area has yielded no conclusive answers.

It did, however, reveal a common thread. Nearly half of the 71 people who participated in last June's health survey are possible sufferers of fibromyalgia — a pain disorder affecting the muscles.

"That's the only real focal point we have, and it's shaky at best," Panhandle Health District director Larry Belmont said.

Judge rejects suit by dog owner

COEUR D'ALENE — A judge has tossed out a lawsuit by the owner of three pit bulls against the Coeur d'Alene municipality.

Dog-bite victim Randy Watson suffered 26 puncture wounds in the Sept. 24 attack. The dogs also bit a police officer before being shot to death.

Michael Joyce, the dogs' owner, claimed in his suit Watson illegally chased the dogs and should pay him damages.

First District Magistrate Neil Walter has dismissed the case in a small claims court hearing.

Businesses lose bid to increase fees

BOISE — Business interests have lost a round in their attempt to more than double sewer fees in rate cities before the Public Utilities Commission.

A 1985 law allows groups that take part in rate cases to recover part of their costs, if they contribute significantly to the final decision. Since it was enacted, just over $200,000 has been awarded. Up to $20,000 per case can be granted.

Lobbyists for two business groups asked the Legislature Tuesday to increase the limit to $50,000.

Stubbs pushes for term limits

BOISE — Idaho voters may get a chance to vote whether they want to impose term limits on legislative and state officials.

Although the idea doesn't appear to be attractive to legislators, Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, says it's what the public wants.

At his urging the House State Affairs Committee introduced a proposed constitutional amendment Tuesday. If it clears both chambers of the Legislature by a two-thirds majority, it would go before voters in the next general election.

Tribe names bingo hall manager

WORLEY — Former Coeur d'Alene Tribe Chairman Dave Matheson has been elected to manage the Panhandle tribe's $2.2 million bingo hall, which is scheduled to open in April.

Matheson most recently was deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, where he supervised 14,000 federal employees and a $1.5 billion budget.

"Dave has tremendous knowledge of Indian country and in the management and handling of large budgets and dealing with people," Coeur d'Alene spokesman Bob Bostwick said.

Congressmen develop own wilderness bills

BOISE (AP) — With Democratic Rep. Larry LaRocco focusing on a wilderness bill for Idaho's 1st Congressional District, GOP Rep. Michael Crapo hopes to develop separate legislation for his own area of the state.

Crapo, spokeswoman Susan Hawkes said Tuesday that the freshman Republican expects to announce the schedule by the end of February for a series of town meetings on wilderness throughout eastern and southern Idaho.

After hearing comments from about 2,000 people at two rounds of town meetings in northern and western Idaho, LaRocco said he still plans to introduce a bill by March 31 aimed at breaking a 12-year impasse over how much of Idaho's 9.3 million roadless acres to set aside as wilderness.

But Hawkes said Crapo had set no deadline for introducing wilderness legislation for the 2nd Congressional District.

"I don't think that Mike wants to be pinned down to a specific time," she said.

LaRocco said Tuesday that he welcomed Crapo's action and would not interfere with development of the Republican's bill.

Unibase blames dirty filters for illnesses

By N.S. Nokkenivd
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dirty filters and the lack of an outside vent in rooftop heating and cooling units may have been the culprits in a mysterious January outbreak of illnesses at Unibase Data Entry.

Air quality tests have turned up nothing to indicate what might have caused the Jan. 9 incident at the mail-sorting operation that sent dozens of employees to area hospitals. Unibase believes the problem may have resulted when circulation fans pulled a plugged air filter out of its housing and onto heating coils, Kent Veenendaal of Unibase said Monday afternoon.

"(No) air contaminants were identified in concentrations that could present a health hazard for employees," said a report written by Harry J. Beaulieu of Industrial Hygiene Resources Ltd., a Boise company that inspected the premises for Unibase. "It is my opinion that this work environment should pose no health risk for your employees at this time."

Tests by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration also failed to find any contaminants that might have caused people to get sick.

But vents have been installed in the heaters to circulate fresh air, Veenendaal said. The company also has arranged to have filters changed monthly instead of quarterly, he said. The structure, part of the American Plaza shopping center on Blue Lakes Boulevard North, is owned by First Resort Inc. of Salt Lake City.

Workers complained of dizziness, nausea and breathing problems on Jan. 8, and the next day at least 42 workers were taken by ambulance to area emergency rooms.

Unibase evacuated the structure and called the city fire department, which ventilated the building with fans.

The heating and air-conditioning system was inspected, and air-conditioning units were checked for Freon leaks. The dirty air filters were the only problem discovered. Salt Lake City-based Unibase opened the mail-sorting facility in October. Its 200-250 workers use video screens to sort mail whose addresses can't be read by Postal Service computers.

Hagerman 'super' says he'll retire at year end

HAGERMAN — Hagerman School District Superintendent Kenneth Black told the School Board this week that he plans to retire at the end of the school year.

Black has been superintendent of the Hagerman schools for 23 years and has served as principal of both the elementary school and the high school during that time.

District secretary Carol Ainsworth said Black had been planning to retire this year and the announcement was not a surprise. The trustees will begin a search immediately for a new superintendent, she added.

Woman survives after car rolls off Clear Lake Grade

BUHL — A Wendell woman survived an accident Tuesday in which her car rolled four times off the side of Clear Lake Grade.

Debra Ann Nichols was had driven to within 100 feet of the top of the grade at about 8 a.m. when she lost control on the icy road, the Gooding County Sheriff's Office reported.

Nichols' car rolled off the south side of the grade and rolled four times. She was wearing a seat belt, and was able to crawl to the top of the ravine where she was spotted by a passing motorist.

She was taken by ambulance to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center where she was reported treated and released.

The Clear Lake Grade, with its steep climb and narrow road, has long been considered one of the areas' most "dangerous stretches of pavement."

The Idaho Transportation Department plans to widen the road up the grade and make several safety improvements this year.

ISP, UP work to keep drivers from moving in front of trains

TWIN FALLS — Don't pull out in front of that train—it's dangerous, and you could get a traffic ticket.

The Idaho State Police, working with Union Pacific Railroad, will be watching Magic Valley railroad crossings Tuesday morning to make sure drivers are obeying the law, ISP Sgt. Steve Jones said Tuesday.

Using its "Trooper on the Train" program, the ISP will put an officer on the train who will use a radio to notify nearby patrol cars of any drivers who pull out in front of the train.

Avoiding accidents like the one near Curry Crossing last week, in which two people escaped with only minor injuries after their car was hit by a slow-moving locomotive, is the purpose of the program, Jones said.

Jerome Council votes to raise yearly irrigation bills 21%

JEROME — Jerome residents were handed a hefty increase in their irrigation bills for the 1993 water year Monday night.

The City Council voted unanimously to raise the assessment 21 percent.

"It has been approximately 10 years since we had an increase in the irrigation assessment," Mayor Gerald Oster said.

The mayor said the increase would amount to about $6.30 for a normal-size lot. Last fall when the city budget was put together, the council proposed to raise irrigation rates by 43 percent.

"That would be too much for the people at one time," Oster said.

Total costs for the city irrigation department in 1992 were $62,510. Projected costs for 1993 are $75,892. A portion of the irrigating costs will continue to be paid from the street department budget, Oster said.

Buhl Council members accept city's annual audit

BUHL — The city's annual audit was accepted by City Council members this week in Buhl.

Of the $1,229,225 spent by the city, expenses are broken down accordingly: capital outlay, 22.3 percent; debt service, 4 percent; culture and recreation, 10.1 percent; street lights, 2 percent; highway and streets, 15.6 percent; general government, 11.5 percent; law enforcement, 20.9%; fire, 12 percent; and other public safety, 1.8 percent.

An overview of the audit was presented by the city's auditor Raymond Ware of McCullen McPhee on Tuesday.

Sen. Dirk Kempthorne says he will not apologize for his Utah ski trip.

Craig says he's attended 'free' ski weekend

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Larry Craig said he is "embarrassed" for his fellow Republican senator, Dirk Kempthorne, who is being criticized for doing what Craig did in the past.

In fact, Craig said he told Kempthorne to accept an invitation to an expense-paid ski weekend at a charity fund-raising event at Park City, Utah.

Kempthorne's expenses were paid for by corporate contributors, including some corporations that will be donating to Kempthorne as a member of the Armed Services Committee.

"I'm embarrassed for him because I'm the one who encouraged him to go," Craig said Tuesday during an interview at The Times-News. "We went to this and nobody said anything."

P&Z Commission allows commercial development near Washington, Pole Line

By Phil Salm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city Planning and Zoning Commission voted 5-2 Tuesday night to recommend amending the comprehensive plan and allow a zoning change for a commercial development on Pole Line Road east of Washington Street North.

Residents of the nearby Los Lagos subdivision had asked the commission to restrict commercial development to east of the Perrine Coulee and to consider the planned-unit development as part of a large, 130-acre development.

The six-lot, 44-acre commercial PUD will stretch toward the corner of Washington and Pole Line from near Harrison Street. The commission recommended that the lot closest to the corner be restricted to a residential zone to allow four-plexes and professional offices instead of outright commercial development.

Vollmer proposed the project. To develop it they asked for a change in the comprehensive plan map from residential to commercial and open space and a zoning change from residential one-acre lots to commercial planned unit development.

Nearby residents worried that the project could start the march of development in the area.

Fran Taylor, who lives in Los Lagos, urged the commission to take a stand and reject "you've-seen-one, you've-seen-them-all" developments. The city does not need another commercial strip like those in Pocatello, Boise and on Blue Lakes Boulevard North, she said.

"This is a chance to redirect the city's burgeoning growth in a positive manner," Tanner said. Another resident, Roy Strawser, asked the commission to consider the commercial PUD with the entire 130 acres. But Chairman J.E.H. Gooding said the commission can consider only the proposal that the developers put before it. He urged the city to develop Pole Line

Kempthorne defends ski trip to Utah

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Dirk Kempthorne found a supportive audience at Tuesday night's Twin Falls County GOP Lincoln Day Dinner as he adamantly defended his recent expense-paid ski weekend at a charity fund-raiser in Utah.

Kempthorne's senior partner in the Senate, Larry Craig apologized for advising Idaho's freshman senator to attend the event, which raised $250,000 for Primary Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City.

The trip has drawn public criticism because it was paid for by corporations. Kempthorne must deal with a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"You don't owe anybody an apology," Kempthorne said. He was invited to the ski weekend by former Utah Sen. Jake Garn who began the charity event seven years ago.

Garn donated a kidney to save the life of his own daughter, who underwent treatment at Primary Children's Hospital, Kempthorne said.

"I did it for Jake. I did it for the kids, and I think it was right," Kempthorne said, drawing applause from the GOP faithful.

Kempthorne said he was not told which corporations sponsored the fund-raiser.

But the senator, who campaigned on a platform of cutting out special privileges for politicians, also has come under fire for using campaign money to take his family and staff along.

"Our reading of the law is that it was a legitimate use of campaign funds," Kempthorne said before the banquet.

He didn't want to use taxpayer money for the trip, and said he went as an invited guest.

"I don't just preach family values, I practice it," he said.

Kempthorne said he will ask the Federal Election Commission whether he can accept a change in Craig's approach to such trips.

From now on, he said, he will send a press news to media outlets when he accepts invitations to events like Kempthorne's ski weekend. That way, provided the media print or broadcast his intentions, his constituents can let him know if he shouldn't go.

Ex-prosecutor sues county for overtime

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Former Chief Deputy Prosecutor Dan Mink says Twin Falls County owes him more than $7,500 for overtime and unused vacation and sick leave.

Mink, who left office when new Prosecutor G. Richard Bevan was sworn in on Jan. 1, has filed suit in 5th District Court to recoup $7,582.98.

"This is a dispute over whether the county is obligated ... to pay overtime," Mink said.

County Commission Chairman Jim Friley declined to comment Tuesday, saying the matter has been referred to Boise attorney David Sasser.

In his complaint, Mink says he has not been paid for 13 1/2 hours of overtime, worth $3,670. "These hours piled up after Jan. 1," he said.

Mink was paid $39,000 per year as chief deputy prosecutor. He was appointed by Prosecutor K. Ellen Bakter in February 1991.

Mink said he delivered a letter to the commissioners Jan. 8 demanding payment of the overtime pay and unused leave time.

He received instead a check for $3,870.66, which covered his unused sick leave and 19 days of vacation, Mink said.

At a Jan. 20 appeal before the county commissioners, Mink returned the check.

Two days later, Mink was advised that the commissioners intended only to pay the $3,870.66, and the check would be given to him on the condition that Mink accept it as payment in full. This complaint says.

The county's written answer to the complaint is due Feb. 16.

Although the county's employee handbook provides for overtime compensation for employees who work more than the standard 40 hours per week, prosecutors are not included in that category.

Except for those two provisions, "chief deputies shall be covered by the provisions in this manual," the employee handbook says.

Currently, no attorneys in his office are allowed to work overtime, Bevan said.

According to the county's employee manual, "county police officers time off rather than payment for non-exempt employees."

The manual also provides that the chief deputy is a political appointment made by the elected officials and his position ends at the end of each term of office, and chief deputies can be demoted to the highest classification for which they are qualified.

Except for those two provisions, "chief deputies shall be covered by the provisions in this manual," the employee handbook says.

Bill would give church variance

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Last year, the Reformed Church of Twin Falls took heat from the city over whether it had to hook up to city water line for fire protection.

When the city turned down its request for a variance, the church appealed to the state fire marshal. He also turned them down.

Now, still-feeling a bit burned by the whole episode, the church has enlisted the help of state Rep. Ron Black.

Black, R-Twin Falls, introduced a bill Tuesday intended to encourage the fire marshal to give the church its variance.

The problem began last summer, when the church, located at the corner of Pole Line Road and Grandview Drive North, decided to add a gymnasium and more classrooms to its existing building.

The church is outside the city limits, but inside the city's area of impact (a mile-wide ring around the city subject to city zoning laws). That meant it had to get a building permit, which meant it had to be connected to the water system.

But the church is 4,400 feet — eight-tenths of a mile — from the nearest water, at the corner of Pole Line Road and Washington Street North. Running pipe that far would cost the church at least $100,000, said Mike Hutchings, chairman of the church's building committee.

House panel approves bill to add 1 judge to 4th, 5th, 7th districts

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE—Twin Falls County moved closer to receiving another district judge Tuesday, as a House panel approved a bill to add one judge each to the 4th, 5th and 7th judicial districts.

The extra 5th District judge would take over the caseload of Judge Daniel Harbut of Twin Falls, who is working full-time on the massive Snake River Basin adjudication.

The House Judiciary, Rules and Administration Committee also approved measures raising state judges' salaries and increasing court fees to pay for the raises and new judges.

The measures now go to the full House.

Under the first bill, the 5th District comprising Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Lincoln, Blaine, Camas, Cassia and Minidoka counties would gain a seventh district judge as of July 1.

The 4th District (Ada, Elmore, Boise and Valley counties) would gain one judge, and the 7th District (Bonanza, Bingham, Madison, Jefferson, Fremont, Teton, Clark, Butte, Custer and Lemhi counties) would gain a fifth judge, both on March 1, 1995.

Each additional position will cost $125,000, said Carl Bianchi, chief court administrator. That figure includes the salaries, benefits and expenses for a district judge and a court reporter.

The new 5th District judge would have his chambers in Twin Falls, along with Harbut and Judge Daniel Meehl. The other 5th District judges have chambers in Hailey, Gooding, Burley and Rupert. Twin Falls attorney John Hohnhorst, president of the Idaho State Bar, told the committee that court activities in Twin Falls County, where most of the 5th District's cases are, have slowed to a crawl since Harbut began concentrating on the adjudication.

The adjudication was created by a 1985 state law. It aims to sort out the 160,000 or so water rights in the Snake River Basin over the next decade.

Because Harbut is unavailable, his other cases have been assigned to other district judges and magistrate judges—what Hohnhorst called "a Band-Aid, patchwork solution."

He said Judge J. William Hart, normally based in Rupert, is presiding over the Salmon Falls lawsuit in Twin Falls and Judge George Granata is taking Hart's place presiding over the Jerry Finn murder trial in Rupert.

As a result of such shifts, Hohnhorst said, it recently took him 90 days to amend a complaint—a simple legal maneuver that normally should take no more than five or six days to schedule.

"We have judges literally driving from 100 miles away to hear simple law and motion calendars," he said.

"It's about as inefficient a use of judicial resources as it's possible to conceive," he said.

Rep. Pam Ahrens, R-Boise, asked why the 4th District should have to wait two years to get an extra judge when it has nearly as many pending cases as the 5th and 7th districts combined.

Hohnhorst replied that many of the pending cases in the 4th District are relatively simple matters, such as habeas corpus filings, from state prisoners and proceedings arising under state agency regulations.

Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, himself a lawyer, added that the 5th District's situation was different from those of the other two judicial districts.

"We had two judges in Twin Falls County," said Stubbs. "The Legislature—when I wasn't here—took one of them away, and I want him back."

Under a separate bill approved by the House, district judge salaries would rise from $70,014 now to $76,823 in the 1994 fiscal year. Magistrate judges would receive a percentage of that, based on their experience.

Salaries for Supreme Court justices would rise from the current $74,701 to $81,966 over the same two-year period. Court of Appeals judges would make $80,966, up from their current salary of $73,701.

Idaho pays 18 Supreme Court justices less than any neighboring state except Montana, Bianchi said, and its

District Court judges less than any neighboring states except Montana and Oregon.

Former House Majority Leader Gary Montgomery, a Boise attorney said, the pay raises would help maintain the quality of Idaho's judicial system.

"I've never addressed the theory that there is a first correspondence between high salary and high performance, but I do think in this unique area that adequate salaries make a difference," Montgomery said.

"This is an area of enormous responsibility in our society. (Judges) need to know we care and about appreciate the enormous effort they're putting forward."

The pay raises and the costs of the raising court fees, Bianchi estimated, the fee increases would generate $660,000 a year.

Stubbs introduces resolution on term limits

BOISE—Idaho voters may get a choice vote whether they want to impose term limits on legislative and state officials.

Although the idea doesn't appear to be attractive to legislators, Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, says it's what the public wants.

At his urging, the House State Affairs Committee introduced a proposed constitutional amendment Tuesday. If it clears both chambers of the Legislature by a two-thirds majority, it would go before voters in the next general election.

It imposes a limit of 12 years of service. That would be six terms of two years each for lawmakers or three four-year terms for state officials. There is no current limit on service for either group.

Gov. Cecil Andrus is midway through his fourth term, schools superintendent Jerry Evans has been in office since 1979 and Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa has served in that position since 1967.

Committee members expressed opposition, although the measure eventually was introduced.

Rep. Ruby Stone, R-Boise, said experienced legislators provide valuable guidance and "an institutional memory" of the past. She mentioned Rep. Jim Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, first elected to the Legislature in 1968, and Harold Reid of Craigmont, who served a record 32 years before his death last year.

"I think some of that experience needs to be retained," Stone said.

"The public has the right to limit any terms," through elections, said Rep. Pam Ahrens, R-Boise.

Stubbs acknowledged the opposition, but said his term limit proposal would be more acceptable than others. "There are some unreasonable proposals out," he said.

One committee member said there is no need for term limits because there has been a 91 percent turnover in the Idaho Senate in the last 10 years and 75 percent in the House.

"The number of people whose political career would be curtailed, would be very few," Stubbs said.

Rep. Judi Danielson, R-Council, said she felt the problem was with incumbents, "those people who don't have to stand for election." She said most of the complaints about government she receives are over what people feel is a bureaucracy that doesn't respond to the public.

She suggested some attempt to limit the length of service of state employees.

broke the law by spending campaign money on plane tickets for his family and staff.

State Democratic Chairman Mike Wetherell said last week he was considering filing a complaint over the issue.

While Kemphorne was updating his trip to Utah, several of his Republican brethren were considering a move to the Statehouse in Boise via the 1994 gubernatorial election.

Party Chairman Phil Bat led the list of GOP movers, shaking using the statewide string of annual Lincoln Day dinners to build party support for a run at the governor's office.

Attorney General Larry Echolsaw opened the door for the demonstration on a wide open when he announced last week that he won't run for Governor in 1994.

Judging by the would-be candidates at the Lincoln Day dinner, GOP voters likewise will have a long list of candidates from which to choose.

"We can't call ourselves a Republican state until we get back that seat which has eluded us for 23 years," Bat said, referring to the stronghold Democrats have had on the governor's seat since 1970. Bat lost the governor's race to Democrat John Evans in 1982.

Boise businessman Larry Eastland stopped just short of formally announcing he will run.

"I expect to be in the race," he said. His six-page campaign flier was the only one floating around the Turf Club Tuesday night.

House Speaker Mike Simpson of Blackfoot said he's starting at 10 and added that 1994 will be the GOP's best opportunity in two decades to wrest control of the Statehouse from the Democrats.

Another Boise "businessman," Gerald Tyler, said he expects to run. "I expect to win," he added, promising quick changes if elected.

The man who has been within spitting distance of the governor's seat for more than five years said he will be running for office in the near future, but he hasn't decided on a race yet.

Lt. Gov. Butch Otter said he's leaning toward running for governor, but he also has been asked to consider running against 1st District Congressman Larry L. Roemer.

Critic: IPC plans ignore environmental costs

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Idaho Power Co.'s plans for meeting future electricity demands disregard the environmental costs of energy production, one critic said Monday evening.

"Environmental protection must have a high priority today, or we will pay for it tomorrow," said Rod Rees, ICP critic.

Rees said that in many homes and buildings electrically operated climate control systems could be replaced by simply opening a window.

Idaho Power's current generating capacity is 2,042 average megawatts—1,036 from hydro power and 1,006 from coal-fired plants in Wyoming, Nevada and Oregon.

A megawatt is 1 million watts or enough to light 10,000 one-hundred watt light bulbs.

About a quarter of the new 584 megawatts the utility will need would come from a variety of sources including rebuilding and expanding existing hydroelectric facilities, gas-fired generators, non-utility generating plants, improved distribution efficiency and from energy conservation.

On a per-capita basis, Idahoans use more residential energy than anyone in the country, but the state ranks 10th in the use of renewable energy largely because of its abundant hydroelectric projects.

Copies of the plan are available at Idaho Power offices. Written comments may be sent by Feb. 19 to Idaho Power Co., Resource Planning Department, Box 70, Boise Idaho 83707.

But critics can't blame it all on the utility

Chisholm said, if people oppose hydroelectric plants on the Snake River they can fight back by cutting their own electric consumption, he said.

The utility can provide some leadership by encouraging the use of more efficient appliances and block rates that increase when a customer uses more than the set amount, he said.

Chisholm also suggested that in many homes and buildings electrically operated climate control systems could be replaced by simply opening a window.

If the church has to pay the connection costs, Hutings said, he wouldn't be able to occupy the building for a year or more.

"We weren't really comfortable with what they were doing, because of the potential fire load and the horror stories you can envision," Twin Falls City Attorney Fritz Wenderlich said.

But church members aren't too concerned about living without fire protection, Hutings said.

"We've been doing that for the last five years, and nobody's felt any risk," he said, referring to the existing structure. "We've already protected ourselves from loss of property with our fire insurance."

The church appealed to the state fire marshal to grant variances from the state fire code for, among other reasons, "unnecessary hardship." But the marshal denied the church's appeal.

It then asked the 5th District Court to overturn the fire marshal's decision.

Black's bill seeks to boost the church's chances of winning a variance by adding "financial hardship" to the criteria the fire marshal can consider. It also states that the church can bring suit if any damages result from granting a variance.

Idaho Youth Ranch worker beaten with boards, nails

Mini-Cassia News Service

MINDOKA — An employee of the Idaho Youth Ranch was in a Barley hospital Tuesday night after being beaten with boards with protruding nails and a stocking containing a piece of marble.

A spokeswoman for Cassia Memorial Hospital said Java Szyko of Barley is in stable condition. He suffered a broken hand, according to a Cassia County Sheriff's Department report.

No charges have been had been filed in the incident as of Tuesday night. It was reported at 12:16 a.m. Tuesday.

According to the report, Szyko was beaten in the corridor of a building at the ranch, an alternative treatment facility for troubled youngsters.

Four boys briefly escaped from the facility after the incident, but were found by a staff member and returned them to the Idaho Youth Ranch. Fifth District Magistrate Larry Duff ordered two of them transferred to the Mini-Cassia Juvenile Detention Center in Rupert Tuesday.

Washington man faces $500,000 bond following assault charges

By James Prichard Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — A 24-year-old Lacey, Wash., man charged with kidnapping, assaulting, raping and robbing a Burley woman last Thursday was in a Burley jail Tuesday night facing a half-million-dollar bond.

William Lonnie Bryant was arraigned Monday afternoon in the courtroom of 5th District Magistrate Roy Holloway, who set Bryant's bond at $500,000. After his arraignment, Bryant was returned to the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center.

Holloway will schedule a preliminary hearing within 14 days, according to a court spokeswoman.

Cassia County Prosecutor Stephen Bywater has charged Bryant with rape, kidnapping, aggravated assault, robbery and an infamous crime against nature.

In addition, because Bryant allegedly used a gun, Bywater has charged him with four counts of enhancement.

According to Bywater, the victim was driving home in her van on Idaho Highway 77 near 250 North at about 7:30 a.m. Thursday when a pickup passed her and forced her to stop.

Bryant, armed with a gun, jumped out of the pickup, ran back to the woman's van, pointed his gun at her and forced her to move over into the passenger's seat, according to court documents.

He then climbed behind the wheel, the documents say.

Bryant then pointed the gun at the woman's chest, moved the barrel and fired a single shot, which singed her coat, according to court documents, the bullet lodged in the side of the van.

Bryant drove off in the van with the woman, and eventually raped her near the Raft River Store, the court documents say.

Afterward, he robbed her of her wedding ring, her watch and her earrings. Then he drove back to the Declo area, left the woman in her van and drove off in his pickup, the court documents say.

Witness says she was attacked in pawnshop

By Eric Goodell Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — A Burley woman testified Tuesday that she was attacked when she walked into the middle of a fatal confrontation between Rupert pawnbroker Randy Walker and a someone-with-brown-hair.

"I thought I don't belong here," Beulah Knutsen said during the second day of testimony in the Jerry Fino murder trial Tuesday. "I've got to go out and get help."

She told jurors that she was assaulted when she entered the Rupert Pawnshop the morning of April 13, the day Walker was killed.

Fino, 18, is on trial for first-degree murder in the death of Knutsen. Fino also been charged with the attempted murder of Knutsen.

Another witness, former Rupert resident Thad Stevenson, testified that he saw a man who looked like Fino, his hands coated with blood, running from the area of the crime.

Knutsen told jurors that she went to the pawnshop in search of a silver-and-turquoise cross to replace one she had lost. Upon entering the shop, she said someone grabbed her from the left and thrust a knife or other sharp object at her face.

The blade glanced off her glasses, leaving her only a cut, she said.

Falling to the floor, she said she looked up and saw someone with brown hair in a confrontation with a bleeding Walker in the corner of the pawnshop, behind his desk.

"I couldn't figure out what was going on," Knutsen said.

She said she pivoted while still crouched on the floor and tried to get out of the building, but was stopped by someone who slapped her, hand away from the doorknob.

Knutsen said someone pulled her back from the door and struck her a second time, the knife hitting her face.

"I said, 'No you don't,'" Knutsen testified. She struggled out the door and her assailant followed her.

Knutsen said she went to passenger side of her 1978 Chevrolet Nova, parked in front of the pawnshop door.

She said she fled in a westerly direction. She crawled into her car, and saw Walker stumble out of the store with what looked like a cellular telephone in his hand.

Knutsen said she didn't see the face of the person who attacked her, but by the build and height of the individual, guessed that it was a man.

Walker slumped by the side of the door, she said.

Shortly afterward, a second man came out of the pawnshop, she said.

"He was a younger man, a more youthful man, probably in his late teens," Knutsen said.

She said the man had short, dark black hair and dark skin. She could give no further description.

Knutsen said the man stopped and looked at Walker, then fled.

"He hid an unopened, unearring, look," she said.

Knutsen, who had twice tried unsuccessfully to start her car, got the vehicle running the third time. The black-haired man looked back at her when the car finally started, the woman said.

She drove to a nearby hardware store, where she received first aid.

During cross-examination by Fino's attorney, Randy Stoker, Knutsen had trouble identifying objects in the pawnshop as well as a diagram of the store and surrounding buildings.

She told Stoker she was unfamiliar with the buildings, being from Burley. She said she had to ask directions to get to the pawnshop and that she just hadn't been back since.

"Stoker wanted Knutsen to identify the table behind which she said she saw Walker, but she couldn't, saying the photograph Stoker showed her was taken from a different angle than she saw it.

The brown-haired person, she said, didn't appear to have a weapon in his hands, but was moving his arms back and forth.

"He was slapping at him (Walker), like he was trying to keep him in the corner," Knutsen said.

Stevenson admitted that he could not positively identify Fino as the man who ran past him. Earlier in the murder investigation, however, he picked Fino's picture from a photo lineup, saying he looked like the man he saw.

Stevenson testified he was talking to a neighbor of his sister's on a patch of grass located between the sidewalk and the street. His sister lives about two blocks from the pawnshop.

He said he saw a man running from the direction of the pawnshop.

"He kept looking over his shoulder and looked nervous," Stevenson said.

When the man came within 10 to 15 feet of where Stevenson was standing, he raised his arms and covered his face with a brown-paper bag he was carrying, Stevenson said.

"Blood was smeared on the individual's hands and forearms," Stevenson said. "He looked like he had been getting an animal."

The man wore dark clothing and looked about high-school age, Stevenson said.

He said he heard sirens a few minutes after the incident, but didn't find out about Walker's death until that night. He then called the police and told them what he saw.

Stevenson said "from his best recollection," Fino looked like the man who ran past him that day, but Stoker reminded him that he had testified at Fino's preliminary hearing that he could have been mistaken about the identification.

Stevenson said he got only "a brief glance" of the individual's face.

Craig blasts delay of Downard Bridge replacement

By James Prichard Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — Endangered species list. The Idaho spring snail, the Snake River physa snail, the Utah valley snail, the Bliss Rapids snail and the Banbury Springs limpet were listed as endangered or threatened last year. As part of the federally required consultation process, it's up to the Transportation Department officials to prove the construction of the bridge would not disturb possible habitats of the five species.

Fish and Wildlife has "no good reason" for the geographic distribution of the species, Roy Heberger, an assistant field supervisor with the agency's Boise office, said last month.

Cassia County's three state legislators asked Craig's help in getting the bridge project cleared.

Crapo also took some jobs at President Clinton Tuesday.

"The Dalles cowboys were able to win this year's Super Bowl by learning from the successful Clinton campaign, Craig joked. They faked right, ran left and won."

"Don't be caught by the illusion," he advised. "Keep your eye on the ball."

Craig also referred to the presidency of "Billary Clinton," a reference to First Lady Hillary Clinton's considerable involvement in her husband's administration.

"That's a negative, as I'll get today," he said. "I don't wish him wrong. I don't wish him failure. We can't afford that in a presidency."

Craig said he hopes the Democratic-controlled Congress will provide Clinton with debt-ceiling legislation and a line-item veto amendment to the Constitution.

Clinton promised to focus his attention on the country's economic problems, Craig said, but has instead dealt primarily with other issues during his first three weeks in office.

He urged the president to "reunite the way the money is spent — that's the test — not to spend more but to spend it in the way it works."

Others at the luncheon included Congressman Mike Crapo, R-Idaho; Larry Eastland, a Boise political consultant and the GOP's first announced candidate for governor in 1994; Phil But, chairman of the Idaho Republican Party; and a possible candidate for governor, Cassia County Commissioner Norm Dayley; Burley City councilmen Wendell McMurray and Brent Kerbs; and Tim Preston, Chairman of the Cassia County Republican Central Committee.

Extension employee charged with taking 4-H funds

By James Prichard Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — A Minidoka County Extension office secretary has been charged with forging and cashing checks for thousands of dollars of 4-H Club money.

The county prosecutor's office has charged Sarah Wright of Declo with 12 counts of forgery. Wright, who has worked in the office for five years, has been suspended from her job with pay since Jan. 19, according to Ivan Hopkins, the county's Extension agent.

In a document filed Monday afternoon, Prosecutor Gara Newman said that Wright, between July 21, 1992, and Jan. 3, forged checks drawn on various Extension accounts totaling $8,674.64.

Newman said that nine of the 12 checks totaling $6,022.61 would have normally required co-signing by both Wright and Hopkins, but that Hopkins' signature was forged by Wright.

Another check for $798.69 would have required co-signing by Wright and Steven Young of the Extension greenhouse control committee. Newman has charged Wright with forging Young's signature too.

Wright was also charged with signing Hopkins' name on two checks totaling $1,653.34 that required only Hopkins' signature. Newman alleges that Wright cashed checks made out to herself and to companies and organizations — including 4-H — as their representative.

Newman said Tuesday that several of the Extension office's financial records are missing.

David Haley, Wright's attorney, could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

The missing money was generated by "Lemon" fund-raising events, by the 4-H Fat Stock sale during last year's Minidoka County Fair and by dues from the Minidoka County Growers Association and the Cassia County Wheat Growers Association.

Bruins storm back to edge Pocatello

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

The Bruins, with only six points in the third quarter, appeared doomed as Pocatello held a 12-point edge going into the last period and still had 11 to spare with just over five minutes left. Although the Indians had 13 turnovers and missed a couple of close-in shots late, fouling Brady at that point was its big mistake. The three-point shooter was scoreless but he regained his touch and confidence with the cherries.

"I feel that if I make a shot, I can make some more," he admitted of the confidence he found at the line. He immediately came back with a three-pointer, then canned a jump shot.

Pocatello sophomore Kevin McCarthy interrupted with a field goal but Brady came right back with two free throws. The Indians missed a driving crippler and a point-blank follow shot before Twin Falls could regain possession and Brady tanked his second three-pointer. On Twin Falls' next possession, Brady-Krahn and his layup gave Twin Falls its first lead since midway through the second quarter at 45-44.

Pocatello ran the clock down from 50 seconds to 23 before Kory Iones missed a close-in shot. Krahn grabbed the rebound and the Bruins wasted 18 more seconds before Brady was fouled and added the final two points from the line.

In the fourth quarter, Brady came up with 14 points and an assist and Krahn's junior classmate added 18 more. "It was a great comeback," said Coach Ben Allen. "Brady got the points but the fact we held them to five points in the last quarter was a big reason for the win. And I can't single out anyone on defense. They all played well."

Six turnovers kept Twin Falls from anything close to a fast start but Pocatello wasn't scoring much. Greg Herzog hit eight points to provide a 12-9 lead. Early in the second period, Twin Falls

Bobcats' defense stops Jerome, 61-49; Indians rally to overcome Wolverines

By Jeff Hoskisson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Call it playoff basketball. The excitement that surrounds post-season play was never more in evidence Tuesday night as the Burley Bobcats met the challenge of the Jerome Tigers and the Buhl Indians pulled out a big come-from-behind win over the Wood-River Wolverines in the District 4, Class A-2 boys tournament being played at the College of Southern Idaho. Bobcats won the region over the Tigers, advances them to the championship game of the tournament next Tuesday night. Burley's opponent will be the winner of the

Burley 61, Jerome 49

Burley's defense, which caused the Tigers to shoot 0 of 9 from the floor in the final 3:36, proved the difference. "We kept them out of the paint," said Bobcat Coach Bill Cowell.

"The Tigers, known for trying to get the ball to the inside, had trouble getting the ball through the Bobcats defense in the second half. When the Tigers did, they had difficulty making the shots.

"We missed too many shots," said Tigers Coach Jim Stauffer. "We got some inside but they didn't fall."

With the game tied at 48-48 and 3:36 remaining, Burley struck for 13 unanswered points to put an end to any hope the Tigers had of pulling an upset. During that same stretch, Jerome was able to score only one point.

Chad Clark and Tom Ruffell paced the way for the Bobcats with 13 points each.

Win tonight will make Golden Eagles regional host

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's payoff time for College of Southern Idaho men and crunch time for the Golden Eagle women tonight when they host Treasure Valley in a critical Scene West Conference showdown.

CSI wraps up the region over the Treasure Valley men's team. The CSI women virtually have to beat TVCC to make their way into the regional playoffs. The women's game is set for 6 p.m., the men's at 8 p.m.

CSI Coach Fred Trenkle says there will be two dangerous teams on the floor in the men's team. "Treasure Valley is dangerous because it's played everyone close all year and has beaten Eastern Utah and Snow. The only time they've really been out of it was when we played them up there — and that was one of our best nights," Trenkle said. "We got on a roll early and stayed there."

"But the team that really could be a danger to us is ourselves," Trenkle said. "We haven't been coming out ready to play and I think I'm seeing some dangerous dips in our intensity and effort. If we don't correct those things before they become a habit, we can take ourselves right out of everything we've won up to now."

Treasure Valley has two fortes: it rebounds very well on both ends of the court and statistically is one of the best three-point shooting teams in the league.

They average 95 points a game so they don't stand around," Trenkle said. "They play a lot of people. They have some quickness and ball handling to take care of the perimeter and they crash the boards."

Crig Nelson, 6-5, is the top scorer and 16 points per game and Daryl Apel, 6-8 center, is their top percentage three-point shooter. Shawn Pinn is averaging 17 points per game. Orrin Houston, Salt Lake City, led the team in scoring and rebounding last year and stands at 15 points and 7 rebounds now.

"They like the 2-3 zone and will play some man," Trenkle said. They are in a fight for the eighth spot in the tournament and must win for something like that to happen, probably."

Kimberly, Gooding victorious

By Ron Gates
Times-News writer

WENDRILL — Like a popular line of batteries, the Canyon Conference leaders keep on going, and going, and going.

Co-runners-up Kimberly and Gooding set up a rubber match during Tuesday's first round of the District 4, Class A-3 playoffs. The Bulldogs knocked last place Glens Ferry into the loser's bracket 62-55 and the Senators handed fifth-seeded Filer 68-48.

A-3

The Pilots and Wildcats put their respective seasons on the line in today's varsity opener at 6:15. A junior varsity contest between Wendell and Kimberly, set for 4:30, provides Thursday's championship opponent for Declo, a 63-47 victor over Glens Ferry on Tuesday.

Tuesday's victors take a day off while Valley takes on No. 5 Declo at 8 p.m. this evening.

Jerome Stokes, who finished with 19 points, tallied six of Kimberly's 12 unanswered points over the first five minutes. The Bulldogs advantage never dipped under two digits until Jeff Blankens' foul shot six seconds before the end of the foul-plagued contest.

Kimberly, which shot 55-percent to the Pilots' 38 and held a 31-24 edge on the boards, was whittled for 29 fouls. One less than Glens Ferry.

"I don't think we were nervous. We just played with absolutely no emotion," said Kimberly's Randy Potter. "This time of the year, if you're not ready to play you're in trouble. I guarantee you we'll be ready on Thursday."

As was the case in game one, the nighttime featured the good, the bad and the ugly.

To the Wildcats' credit, Gooding required 9½ minutes to get to a 20-10 lead and the spread didn't match the final until the very end.

Ryan Mai finished with 19 points and Roger Sutherland had 10 for Filer. Bill Squires and Travis Thompson paced the Gooding attack with 14 and 11, respectively.

Olympic television rights could hold for higher margin

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Negotiations on U.S. television rights to the 1996 Olympics could be postponed until late this year if a delay would mean a richer contract, IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said Tuesday.

Samaranch said he expected the rights for the centennial Games in Atlanta to bring in more than the $401 million NBC paid for the U.S. rights to the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona.

Atlanta has put a price tag of more than $500 million on domestic TV rights, but network officials have publicly scoffed at that and placed their target closer to $350 million, exceeding cable rights.

Negotiations among the IOC, the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games and the bidding networks remain set for summer or fall of this year, Samaranch said.

But he said that, with the economy improving, it may be wise to delay the talks and wait for a boom in spending.

CSI hasn't lost to TVCC since Tom Wierich's season in 1978-79.

A quick glance at the standings show why CSI women have to win. Fighting for the eighth spot in regional A TVCC with one win, Colorado Northwestern with two and CSI with three.

TVCC beat CSI for the first time ever earlier this season.

"We expect them to come after us. That win gave them some confidence and they know it's a must for them," says Coach Ben Stroud. "We have to meet their emotion and effort to win. If we have any kind of letdown, TVCC is good enough to beat us."

Dallas celebration turns unruly, violent

DALLAS — A downtown celebration by 200,000 Dallas Cowboys fans dissolved into sporadic violence today as groups of teen-agers fought with each other and police.

Parkland Memorial Hospital said it had been informed by police to expect some injuries, spokeswoman Michelle Ragon said. Police spokeswoman Eva Romero advised people to stay away from the area, where officers were outnumbered by revelers.

"Right now there's too much going on," Romero said. "Bottles are being thrown, but we just don't have any details."

An estimated 200,000 people came out for the parade celebrating the Cowboys' victory over Buffalo in the Super Bowl. The rally was held about a half mile from where most of the fighting occurred.

Pro Bowl TV viewership increases; highest for ESPN

NEW YORK — Sunday's NFL Pro Bowl was watched by 4.9 million households, the most in six years ESPN has televised the game.

The cable network said Tuesday the game got an 8.0 cable rating based on ESPN's 61.6 million households, that translates to a 5.3 overall rating based on the 93.1 million television households in the United States.

The rating was the Pro Bowl's highest on ESPN since an 8.3 in 1989, but ESPN was available in fewer households four years ago. Last year's Pro Bowl got a 7.3 rating and was watched in 4.3 million households.

Oral Roberts coach Trickey will resign at end of year

TULSA, Okla. — Ken Trickey Sr., who coached Oral Roberts to national prominence in college basketball in the 1970s and was charged with restoring the glory after a financial fallout, is resigning at the end of the year.

Trickey, the winningest coach in the Titans' 28-year basketball history, said Tuesday he agreed to resign as head coach and athletic director at the behest of incoming president Richard Roberts.

"I saw no problem with that," said Trickey, 213-108 at ORU and 362-253 overall.

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — David Robinson had 25 points and 13 rebounds and Dale Ellis scored 20 points as the San Antonio Spurs beat the Los Angeles Clippers 121-97 Tuesday night for their 15th victory in 16 games.

Sean Elliott added 18 points for the Spurs, who claimed their 12th consecutive homecourt victory.

Danny Manning led the Clippers with 25 points, but only seven came in the second half. Ron Harper added 17 points.

The Spurs, who have won by 10 points or more 11 times during the current hot streak, led by 11 going into the fourth quarter.

An 8-2 run, with all the points coming on the foul line, gave San Antonio a 100-80 lead with 6:30 to play. The Spurs' largest lead was 21 later in the period.

Ellis made three 3-point shots, giving him a single-season San Antonio record of 68. Mike Dunleavy had 67 3-pointers in 1982-83.

Cavs 107, Hornets 103

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Brad Daugherty had 28 points and 7 rebounds as the Cleveland Cavaliers won their fifth consecutive game Tuesday night, 107-103 over the Charlotte Hornets.

With the Hornets trailing 105-102, Larry Johnson was fouled with 1.1 seconds left. After making the first, he intentionally missed the second, but his airball gave the Cavaliers possession.

Larry Nance's foul shot with 0.8 seconds left made it 106-103, and Cleveland was awarded a technical foul shot when Charlotte called a timeout when it had none left. Mark Price made the free throw to complete the scoring.

Price finished with 20 points and Nance 18 for the Cavaliers.

The Hornets, who had their four-game winning streak snapped, were led by Johnson with 29 points and 14 rebounds and Dell Curry with 24 points. Curry set a team record with five 3-pointers and tied another with five straight.

Celtics 104, Bucks 92

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Reggie Lewis scored 20 points and Boston out rebounded Milwaukee 48-26 to hand the Bucks their fourth straight loss.

Lewis, who scored 14 in the first quarter, hit four free throws, in the final 1:45 and Xavier McDaniel, who had 18 points, added six free throws during that span as the Celtics won for the 13th time in 17 games.

Six Celtics in double figures overcame a career-high 29 points by Todd Day and 27 points by Frank Brickwood for Milwaukee.

Boston broke away from a 79-76 lead with a 10-2 fourth-quarter run capped by Robert Parish's 6-foot baseline shot that gave the Celtics an 89-78 lead with 4:21 left.

Heat 106, Pistons 105

MIAMI (AP) — John Starks led the Miami Heat and came up with the key defensive play, helping Miami beat Detroit for the Heat's first-ever victory at the Palace.

Grant Long, who scored Miami's final five points to finish with 24, gave the Heat the lead when he hit a hook shot with 4.7 seconds remaining.

After a timeout, Orlando Woolridge tried to rebound the ball to Frank Thomas, but Starks intercepted and held the ball until the buzzer ended the game.

Steve Smith added 23 points for the Heat, who lost their first three games against Detroit. Miami played without Ron Sobush, out with the flu.

Carey, Shoshone will meet for spot in final

By Brad Brundage
Times-News writer

GOODING — The top two teams from the Northside Carey and Shoshone, will meet today in the contest to determine who will go to the championship contest Friday.

The win for Carey was easy. The victory for Shoshone wasn't in the second day of the District 4, Class A-4 Northside sub-district tournament.

Carey, the top seed and fourth-ranked in the state, sent Richfield to the losers bracket with a 67-55 win. Shoshone, which didn't make a field goal in the second quarter, made a furious comeback to pull out a 48-43 win over third-seeded

Northside A-4

Carey 67, Richfield 55

Carey started slowly, finding its first game was a little rough against a Richfield team that had played the previous night.

Trailing through most of the first and part of the second quarter, Carey bolted to a 29-24 lead at the half. It was 45-31 at the end of three quarters and it was over for the Tigers.

In the fourth quarter, the Panthers threatened to make it a 20-point lead, but two Jason Ward buckets cut the lead to 41-29. Richfield would get the closest shot at Richfield would get.

Eleven free throws stretched the lead to 45-29. "It was a little physical. They played us hard on the boards," said Carey Coach Les Cook. "We had four or five double figures. That was our strong point."

The Tigers out-rebounded the Panthers 40-26, had less turnovers, but still dropped a 12-point decision.

"I got the monkey off our back," said Coach Cook. "We haven't done that well in district. Last year we were the top seed and we were out in two games."

Camas County 69, ISDB 34

The Musers, who barely beat the Redskins twice during the regular season, took out their frustration Tuesday. Holding ISDB to a pair of points in the fourth quarter, Camas won the game handily.

Camas pulled away to lead by 20 to their own worst enemy shooting 3-of-16 from the free throw line.

Meanwhile, Joe Rice had 23 points and launched four 3-pointers in the contest.

Indiana survives 2 overtimes at Penn State

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Top-ranked Indiana survived a scare from Big Ten newcomer Penn State Tuesday night, winning 85-84 in double overtime on a baseline jumper by freshman Brian Evans with 6.5 seconds left.

After Evans made the shot, Penn State's Greg Bartram threw a long inbound pass that was intercepted by Indiana's Damon Bailey. Bailey was quickly fouled and made two free throws with 1.4 seconds remaining to clinch the victory.

Indiana, which beat Penn State at 48 points at Bloomington on Jan. 9, improved to 21-2 overall and 10-0 in the Big Ten. Penn State fell to 6-1 overall and 1-8 in the league.

College basketball

No. 6 N. Carolina 77, Maryland 63

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — North Carolina coach Dean Smith moved into a tie for third place on the all-time victory list Tuesday night, notching win No. 759 as the No. 6 Tar Heels beat Maryland 77-63.

North Carolina overcame an early 11-point deficit to move a half-game ahead of Florida State into the Atlantic Coast Conference standings.

Smith pulled even with former coach Ed Diddle, who won 759 games in 42 seasons, with Western Kentucky, and moved within eight wins of second-place Frank Iba. The NCAA list only includes head coaches with at least 100 years at Division I schools.

St. John's 73, Providence 64

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Shawnelle Scott scored 15 points, including 7-of-10 from the field, to lead St. John's past Providence 73-64 Tuesday night.

St. John's is now alone in first place with 13-6, 8-3 Big East, while Providence drops to the basement at 10-9, 3-8 in the league.

No. 19 Seton Hall 91, No. 17 Pittsburgh 73

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The usual news in a Seton Hall victory had off nights, so Arturs Karnishovs and Luther Wright stepped right up.

As Terry Dehere and Jerry Walker struggled, Karnishovs had a career-high 32 points and Wright's 16 points were his most ever in a Big East game as the 19th-ranked Pirates beat No. 17 Pittsburgh 91-73 Tuesday night.

The Pirates (17-6, 7-4) needed the win badly as they had lost five of seven and dropped to their lowest ranking of the season.

Oakley upends Hansen; Raft River thrives

The Times-News

THE RAIN RIVER

Trojans and Oakley Hornets, who opened in the first round of the District 4, Class A-4 southside sub-district tournament will clash once again today.

Oakley surprised and ousted Hansen 58-48 and Raft River easily beat Hagerman 56-40 in the loser consolation games Tuesday. Oakley and Raft River will start out the action today at 6 p.m. in a loser out match, while Castelford and Murrough will decide which team will advance to the championship game.

Hansen, the team seeded second in the tournament, dropped five

Southside A-4

Spencer Mullen had 16 and Brad Archibald added 15 in the game for Hansen. Craney, Archibald and Mullen combined for 49 of Oakley's 54 points.

In the second contest, Raft River had Hank Higley and that was too much for Hagerman.

Higley, the scoring machine in this tournament, had 15 points in a first-half as Raft River built up a 34-22 lead at the break.

Higley finished with 18 points with very little play in the second half. Dustin Harper helped the team with a dozen points in the contest for Raft River.

The Trojans built a 20-point bulge in the third quarter and were never threatened.

Randy Owsley had 17 for the Pirates in a losing effort.

first quarter.

The Bobcats called timeout and when they returned to the floor they looked like a different team. Over the final two-and-a-half minutes of the first quarter and the first two minutes of the second quarter, the Bobcats outscored the Tigers 15-0 to take a 10-3 lead.

Burley maintained a six-point lead to half, going in up 29-23 at intermission.

Three-point shooting by Justin Robison early in the third quarter knotted the game at 33-33. Both teams then swapped baskets over before the Bobcats were able to game a little breathing room, taking a 41-38 lead into the final quarter.

After Ruffell hit one of two attempts from the foul line to open the final quarter, baskets by Spencer

Loft and Josh Bay tied things again at 42-42.

The score went back and forth on the sidelines.

Kevin Beck's jumper from inside the paint started the Bobcats on their final run.

Robison led the way for the Tigers, scoring 11 points.

Buhl 68, Wood River 62

With 4:25 to go in the third quarter, it appeared the Wolverines were headed for their fourth and biggest win of the season.

When Matt Nelson's layup put Wood River up by 17 points at 47-30.

From that point to the quarter's end the Wolverines would score only four more points and end the period with a 62-47 lead.

Craig Goff, who had 16 points at half, went wild in the second half. He tossed in 20 points, including four treys.

Goff and Lucas were the keys to the Indians comeback. Lucas added 12 points over the final quarter and a half, including a 15-foot jumper from the right side of the lane to tie the game at 38-38.

Goff then put the Indians ahead for good with one of his six three-pointers on the night.

"They stepped it up and refused to lose," said Indians Coach Lloyd Garcy.

The Indians were able to tie the game in the final minutes by going 5 of 6 from the charity stripe.

The Wolverines used a balanced attack in the first half to jump out to a surprising lead on the Indians.

Bryan Burrell led the way for Wood River in the first half with 11 points. He ended the night with 15. Nelson and Josh Berens each added nine points in the first half.

went ahead 15-14 and then 17-16 but the Bruins managed just 10 points over the next 11 and one-half playing minutes.

"Early in the game we were wanting to get the ball inside but we were going too hard and too quickly," Allen said. "I thought we were finding our tempo in the second quarter but we lost it again and never got it back until Brady picked us up."

Allen said the game plan had been to pressure Pocotello as much as possible.

"I think our full court pressure would affect them a little — but you have to score to set up the press and for a long time we didn't do that," he said.

The Indians scored their last seven points of a low-scoring third quarter to lead 39-27 and set the stage for the Bruin comeback. They assisted the Bruins with six turnovers during it.

Minico caught a bad case of tournament jitters, managing just two points in the first quarter and falling back 18-2.

Highland 72, Minico 42

Pocotello — Pre-tourney favored Highland opened its quest for another Region III Class A-4 basketball title Tuesday night with a 72-42 decision over Minico's Spartans.

Minico caught a bad case of tournament jitters, managing just two points in the first quarter and falling back 18-2.

Highland's offense blazed with a 66 percent shooting average.

The Rams will host the Twin Falls Bruins in the championship semifinals at 7 p.m. Thursday. Minico will play the first loser bracket game Thursday at Pocotello.

Bowe, Lewis fail to agree on fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiators for Riddick Bowe and Lennox Lewis met for three hours Tuesday, but still could not reach agreement on a heavyweight championship fight.

A day after representatives of the unbeaten boxers took turns rejecting four proposals, they again failed to reach a settlement. There had been talk that Bowe and Lewis were close to setting a June 18 match in Las Vegas.

David Duva, one of Lewis' promoters, disputed a report that Bowe's manager, Rocky Newman, had offered Lewis a $10 million

"Rock is telling people that he offered $10 million to Lennox, but that's not true," she said. "But if he means it, and he comes tomorrow with a contract, Lennox will take it."

She said that if Newman on Wednesday presents a Nevada State Athletic Commission contract calling for Lewis to get a $10 million purse, a deal will be signed by Lewis' manager.

Duva said several more proposals were made Tuesday, including one for a winner-take-all bout.

Lewiston tops prep poll; Twin Falls moves from 3rd to 4th place

The Associated Press

Three victories last week helped Lewiston take places with Skyline of Idaho Falls, which won one and lost one, in the season's final Associated Press boys high school basketball poll.

In the closest vote of the four divisions, Lewiston received nine of 14 first-place votes and took over the top spot among A-1 teams. Skyline dropped to second and Madison of Rexburg moved from fourth to third. Twin Falls from third to fourth and Borah of Boise returned to the rankings at fifth after a week's absence.

With few exceptions, rankings in the other three divisions remained the same as last week. Sugar-Salem remained No. 1 among A-2 teams. The Diggers were followed by Bishop Kelly, Priest-River and Marsh Valley, and American Falls knocked Burley out of the rankings at fifth.

With decisive wins over Gooding and Shoshone, Wendell capped off a perfect 19-0 regular season and again was a unanimous pick for No. 1 among A-3 teams. Kamiah, Malad, Firth and Lapwai again trailed.

In A-4, Wilder, Troy, Notus and Carey were joined in the top five by Salmon River, while Thurston dropped out of the rankings.

Boston, Los Angeles miss All-Star game

NEW YORK (AP)—Imagine the NBA All-Star game without a Boston Celtic nor a Los Angeles Laker. Since the first game was played in 1951, it has never happened. Until now.

The Celtics and Lakers, with a combined 27 NBA championships, were left out Tuesday when the league announced reserves for the Feb. 21 game at Salt Lake City. And none of their players were elected by the fans to the starting teams announced earlier this month.

Among the 14 players selected as backups by coaches in the East and West Conferences were five players making their All-Star debuts, including Delet Schrempf of Indiana, who is the first European player selected.

And while a European plays in the game for the first time, it is the first all-star game ever in which both the Celtics and the Lakers have been left off the team. In fact, the only times just one of the two teams was represented on the all-star team were in 1978 when the Lakers were named and 1979 when no Celtics were selected.

There has always been someone to carry the torch for each team. The string began with George Mikan, Jim Hollard and Vern Mikkelsen of the Lakers and Ed McAuley and Bob Cousy of the Celtics in the first game, March 2, 1951 in Boston.

It continued through the Laker one of Jerry West, Elgin Baylor, Wilt Chamberlain, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Magic Johnson. The Celtic run was marked by Bill Russell, John Havlicek, K.C. Jones, Dave Cowens and Larry Bird.

Boxing promoters make sport a fraud

By Shirley Povich
Special to The Washington Post

Commentary

It is proper now to say that boxing is for the birds — the vultures. And the public is being picked clean by the managers, promoters and TV hustlers who are in control, moving from one sucker to the next.

The "Riddick" Bowe-Michael Dokes thing was merely the latest fraud, and before the fight was over they already had plotted the next — Bowe against some available low-risk, stiff-in-waiting, along with the hype to coax the public to pay $400 ringside again as in Bowe vs. Dokes.

The goings-on in the heavyweight division smell of the fish wharves. And backing is the semi-charm of the mackerel in the moonlight. No shine, it only stinks. In-Bowe vs. Dokes, Bowe's manager, Rick Newman, and HBO, which underwrote the fight, were proceeding on the one constant promise of boxing promoters — the public is out there to be suckered. It was.

What the public got from Bowe vs. Dokes was 2 minutes 19 seconds of nothing before the referee stopped it. Bowe, ready for battle, found himself in the ring playing solitaire against a Joe, er, Michael Dokes, who shouldn't have been in there; who didn't come to fight, was an overweight, rehabbed cocaine addict, took a passing from the opening bell, got one standing eight count and, when he was about to be half-killed, complained the ref stopped it too soon.

It had been a travesty anyway for almost a week leading up to the fight. On Monday before the Saturday sham, Dokes simply stopped training in a to-hell-with-it gesture.

The $750,000 he would get for stepping in the ring was guaranteed. Just before the fight, he philosophized, "What happens will happen."

After the fight, Newman said he recognized the need for "stronger opposition" for Bowe. It was tacit admission that Bowe-Dokes was an appalling mismatch. But who arranged it? Newman, that's who, with the eager participation of Time Warner, HBO's parent company, which may end up paying Bowe $100 million for a six-fight package that would be mostly on pay TV. There was a caveat to the $100 million: Time Warner was offering Bowe. He had to win every fight leading up to the finale. "Big deal. The types Newman and HBO were lining up for Bowe — impotent retards and their wannabes — were in a frontal warranty that nothing serious could happen to him.

Newman had arranged for Dokes, a latter-day version of a Joe Louis "Bum of the Month."

Typifying their announcement that the public would accept anybody as Bowe's opponent was the promoter's announcement that his next opponent would be Ray Mercer. Among Mercer's credentials was his four-round knockout — by, not of — Rector Riddick, who himself was recently kayoed by Lennox Lewis. However, a Bowe-Mercer travesty was averted when, on the undercard Saturday night, a passive Mercer was badly thrashed in 10 rounds by the same Fernando a heavyweight entirely best described as a career sparring partner.

Food facts

Reuse ground beef fat and you'll still be lean

Finally, a truly easy way to shave off fat: Rinse your ground beef after cooking it and reduce the fat content by up to 50 percent.

That means you can buy the cheaper, fattier ground beef and still come up with a leaner meal.

An Iowa State University study reports that there's a slight reduction in flavor when you do this, but once you combine the meat with other ingredients (for spaghetti sauce, say, or chili), you can't tell the difference.

You don't need any special equipment: hot water, a strainer and some plain white paper towels (colored paper towels contain dye and so are not a good choice).

Just cook the ground beef in a skillet, breaking it into large, crumbly bits. Remove the bits with a slotted spoon to a plate covered with three layers of paper towels. Blot the top with more paper towels. Then put the ground beef in a strainer or colander and rinse by pouring hot (but not boiling) water over it; drain for five minutes. Proceed as the recipe directs. (If you are adding onion and garlic, the Meat Board recommends adding them after rinsing.)

USDA report: Food additive exports from U.S. doubles

Haven't we already shipped the world enough of our quirky habits?

Now, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reports, American exports of food additives have more than doubled in the last five years, amounting to more than $1.5 billion.

The growth is largely attributed to the spread of Western eating patterns, which emphasize convenience and ease of preparation, according to USDA.

Everyone knows that means more frozen, packaged processed foods—and a raft of preservatives, emulsifiers, stabilizers, thickeners, flavorings, enzymes and bulking agents.

New bimonthly publication reviews books about food

It's difficult to conceive of anything more self-explanatory than the title Cook-Book... The Food Book Review for Cooks Who Read.

The bimonthly publication is a typewriter-sized, get-up-on-the-cranker-barrel newsletter about books on food. Those familiar with Simple Cooking, the first newsletter from John and Matt Lewis-Thorne, authors and publishers of Cook-Book, might only suggest amending the subtitle to "cooks who read without moving their lips."

The Thomes, "frustrated" at missed opportunities to comment on books within the Simple Cooking format, started the new publication to provide "brief, timely, but also articulate and—at times—passionate reviews of books" that deserve special notice. The focus is on "food books" that are meant to be read, not just leafed-through-for-cooking-ideas.

Cook-Book is available by subscription for $18 a year or $3 an issue, from Cook-Book, Box 88, Steuben, Maine 04680.

Clear beverages make those who drink them feel lighter

Beverage makers are turning to colorless liquids to attract buyers. Why? Well, that isn't quite as clear, but many industry insiders say it's because clear liquids seem lighter to people, and perhaps even more healthful.

Industry giant Pepsi-Cola has rolled out Crystal Pepsi in diet and regular formulas. Crystal Pepsi has no caffeine and a lighter taste than the other Pepsis. Also new on the market is Crystal Bay, a line of sparkling-water-based soft drinks featuring a cola flavor, plus Peach, Cherry, Blackberry and Raspberry.

Of the two colas, both of which had less cola taste than their darker brethren, tasters preferred Crystal Pepsi. It had more bite, more bubbles and was less sweet than the Crystal Bay cola, which had a strange aftertaste—a bit like fryin' cinnamon. Tasters liked the fruit flavors of the Crystal Bay line better—the flavors were intense and refreshing.

Crystal Pepsi will be available at supermarkets soon and is priced comparably to Pepsi. Crystal Bay is available at convenience stores and Kmart for about 59 cents for a 20-ounce bottle and 89 cents for a liter.

Brownie Lover Hearts and Valentine Dipped Strawberries say 'I love you' with every bite.

SWEETS

FOR YOUR

SWEETHEART

And don't forget about the children

Sharing sweets with loved ones on Valentine's Day is a longstanding tradition. And who is more deserving or appreciative of Valentine goodies than children.

This year, say "be my valentine" to the special children in your life with a party planned just for them. Treat your party guests to sweet sensations like Brownie Lover Hearts and Valentine-Dipped Strawberries.

Both of these treats are so easy to prepare. That's because they start with favorite familiar baking ingredients, including cake mix, fudge brownie mix and ready-to-spread frosting. Heart-shaped sweets, luscious chocolate snacks and candy-coated goodies—all of these delightful confections from Pillsbury are for sharing with your favorite "Valentines."

BROWNIE LOVER HEARTS

Brownie
1 (21½-oz.) pkg. fudge brownie mix
¼ cup water
½ cup oil
1 egg

Glaze
1 can swirl vanilla or milk chocolate frosting with fudge swirl

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Line 13 by 9-inch pan with foil; grease bottom. In large bowl, combine all brownie ingredients; beat 50 strokes with spoon. Spread in greased pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 33 to 35 minutes or until set. Do not overbake. Cool completely. Freeze brownies 1 hour.

Lift foil to remove brownies from pan; place on cutting board. Using 2½-inch heart-shaped cookie cutter, cut out 8 to 10 brownie hearts. In small saucepan, melt frosting over low heat, stirring occasionally until smooth. Keep warm. Line cookie sheet with waxed paper. Place wire rack on waxed paper. Place brownies on wire rack. Quickly spoon frosting over brownies, covering completely. Refrigerate 15 to 20 minutes or until frosting is set. Decorate brownie hearts with swirl from swirl packet as desired. Makes 8 to 10 brownies.

High Altitude - Above 3500 feet: Add ¼ cup flour to dry brownie mix. Bake as directed.

VALENTINE DIPPED STRAWBERRIES

2 pints (about 30) fresh strawberries with stems
1 cup Funfetti Pink Vanilla frosting

Wash strawberries; pat dry. In 1-cup microwave-safe measuring cup, microwave frosting on HIGH for 30 to 45 seconds or until melted, stirring once or twice. (Or, in small saucepan, melt frosting over medium heat, stirring frequently.) Spread frosting over cookies. Immediately drizzle swirl from swirl packet over frosted cookies in heart shape. Marble swirl and frosting together with a toothpick.
Makes 30 cookies.
High Altitude - Above 3500 feet: No change.

CANDY-COATED POPCORN TREATS

Line 16 muffin cups with paper liners. In small microwave-safe bowl, microwave 1 can Funfetti-Pink-Vanilla-Frosting on HIGH for 45 to 60 seconds or until melted, stirring frequently. (Or, in small saucepan, melt frosting over medium heat, stirring frequently.) In large bowl, pour frosting over 8 cups popped popcorn. Stir until popcorn is well coated. Generously mound into muffin cups. Immediately sprinkle decorator sprinkles over top of each popcorn treat. Allow to set at room temperature for 1 hour. Store loosely covered.
Makes 16 popcorn treats.

Valentine treats for everyone to share

Surprise your "valentine" with a special lunchbox treat or an after-school snack. Or pack a big box of sweets and send them to school for everyone in the classroom to enjoy.

KISS-ME-QUICK COOKIES

In large bowl, combine 1 pkg. Funfetti Cake Mix, 1/3 cup oil and 2 eggs; stir by hand until thoroughly moistened. Stir in candy bits. Shape dough into 1-inch balls. Place 2 inches apart on ungreased cookie sheets.

Bake at 375 degrees for 6 to 8 minutes or until edges are light golden brown. Immediately place chocolate candy kiss (1-inch size) or milk chocolate candy kiss in center of each cookie; press lightly. Cool 1 minute; remove from cookie sheets.
Makes 3 dozen cookies.

High Altitude - Above 3500 feet: Add flour (¼ cup) to dry cake mix. Bake as directed.

MARBLE-FROSTED CHOCOLATE COOKIES

In large bowl, combine 1 pkg. Devil's Food Cake Mix, ½ cup margarine or butter, softened, 2 tablespoons water and 1 egg at low speed until thoroughly moistened. Stir in 1 cup (6 oz.) semi-sweet chocolate chips. Drop by rounded tablespoonfuls onto ungreased cookie sheets.

Bake at 350 degrees for 9 to 12 minutes or until set. Cool 2 minutes; remove from cookie sheets.
Remove swirl packet from 1 can Swirl

'All-American' cook goes beyond her Dutch heritage

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — On Page 10 of the premiere issue of a magazine called Taste of Home is a picture of Gladys DeBoer of Castleford. DeBoer received a letter last fall asking for recipes and input on cooking topics for the new magazine.

"I thought, 'Oh well, as a reward they give you a year's free subscription,'" she says. "You're not paid, although you're considered a contributing editor."

DeBoer is an old hand at this, having had two recipes printed in Country magazine, which, along with Country Woman, Country Extra and Country Handicrafts, are Reiman Publications.

She points out there was a mistake in her biography in the new magazine. It said she grew up on a dairy farm in Holland, but it wasn't until after her family immigrated to California when she was 19 years old that she lived on a farm.

Dutch cooking, she describes as basic meat and potato fare and says some of her cooking goes back to her heritage. "But otherwise I'm all-American, because I like Italian, Mexican, Chinese and steak and hamburgers."

DeBoer's husband, Harold, also came from Holland, and she says he, too, likes everything and is easy to cook for. However, both are watching their cholesterol. So, whatever the cuisine, she tries to put down on the fat. The following recipe which DeBoer contributed for the first issue of Taste of Home, originally had heavy cream and bacon fat on the list of ingredients.

About Taste of Home - C7

HEARTY POTATO SOUP

Serves 8-10
6 medium potatoes, peeled and sliced
2 carrots, diced
6 celery stalks, diced
2 quarts water
1 onion, chopped
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
6 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
About 1½ cups milk

In a large pan, cook the potatoes, carrots and celery in the water, until tender — about 20-30 minutes. Drain, reserving the liquid and setting the vegetables aside. In the same pan, saute the onions in butter until soft. Stir in the flour, salt and pepper. Gradually add milk, stirring until thickened (like a cream sauce). Stir in cooked vegetables and add 1 cup or more of the reserved cooking liquid, until the soup is of desired consistency.

"It's creamy," DeBoer says. "The vegetables are not mashed. They're still in little chunks."

The next recipe is one DeBoer discovered while on a visit to Holland when she was 19. On excursions to town with her cousins she often ate this salad, which was sold in coin operated glass door automat type dispensers.

Donning dress as punishment scars man Anniversary

DEAR ABBY: I winced when I read the letter from the man who recalled that when he was a youngster, his mother punished him by making him wear a girl's dress.

I experienced the terrible unhappiness of being placed in an orphanage six weeks before my 11th birthday. The Sisters who operated the orphanage also resorted to that kind of punishment. Although I do not recall the exact nature of my misconduct, I was forced to wear a girl's dress, and parade back and forth in the corridor on the girl's side of the building.

Needless to say, I shed copious tears at the humiliation and public embarrassment I endured. You can see what a profound impression that left on me, since at age 73, I recall the episode as if it happened yesterday. To this day, I wonder what prompted the nuns to use such a perverted form of punishment.

(REV.) BASIL R. JANASIK, FRANCIS CAN FRIAR, GREEN BAY, WIS. DEAR BASIL JANASIK: What prompted the

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

nuns to punish you in that manner more than 60 years ago is the same thinking prevalent today: The ultimate humiliation for a boy is to be stripped of his masculinity and forced to appear girlish.

DEAR ABBY: A recent letter in your column from "Teen-age Twin" brought back memories of my youth as an identical twin. My brother and I both experienced the frustration of relatives who couldn't (or wouldn't) take the time to tell us apart.

In our early teens, my brother and I decided to get our revenge at the next family gathering. I believe it was Thanksgiving when we got our first chance. Whenever we were called by the wrong name or referred to as "whichever one you are," we would respond politely and with total respect — but with a totally incorrect name. For instance, if Aunt Ruth asked for the sugar bowl, we'd pass it to her with, "Here you are, Aunt Mary." If Uncle Fred wanted the footstool, we'd place it in front of him and ask, "Did you need anything else, Uncle Bob?"

This only occurred a few times until people began to realize what we were doing. Nobody's feelings were hurt, and we got our point across. Soon all our relatives began calling us by our correct names.

Even today, almost 40 years later, my brother and I still start the "name game" at family gatherings, and it never fails to bring back wonderful and funny memories of the past.

— THE "OTHER ONE" IN COLUMBUS
DEAR OTHER ONE: Thanks for sharing a precious memory — and an ingenious solution, if carried out with obvious good humor and a twinkle in the eye.

The Butlers

GOODING — Mr. and Mrs. K. Dwain Butler of Gooding will be honored at an open house Sunday in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 2 to 4 p.m. at Gooding City Hall, 308 Idaho St. The couple requests no gifts.

Butler and Alberta L. Redington were married Feb. 12, 1943, at the home of her parents west of Gooding. Just four days later, he left for a tour of duty with the Army Air Force during World War II. Upon his release at the end of the war, they ranched north of Gooding for 20 years before moving to an acreage in 1965. In 1969, they moved into town and opened Dwain Butler Realty, which they have operated together for the past 22 years.

Alberta and K. Dwain Butler both of Gooding and Doug Butler of Richfield and their spouses as well as Carmal Johnson of Idaho Falls. The couple has 18 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Contests prove you never get something for nothing

At the mailboxes the other day, a neighbor opened a letter: "Oh, I've won a prize," she said. "I wonder how much it will cost me."

I know the feeling. I once received a similar prize — a check for $300. But the only way to use the check was to apply it to merchandise that cost $339 to $500. And I would have to report the check to the IRS, of course. I declined. Saddy.

I felt like I lost money I never had. It was my own silly fault for breaking my longstanding rule — never enter a contest. Moral: You never get something for nothing. The contest was begun by the chance to win a shiny new car. I know just the person who could use one. And if not the car, maybe the cruise. All that dancing. All that flirting. All that food promised in the ads. And if not the cruise?

Aging
Lucille S. deView

Oh, the lure. Oh, the temptations. And I was weak.

So I sent in the coupon. Alas, I should have remembered how I came to take my anti-contest pledge. Times were especially tough then. In my family, we scrambled to hang on to our jobs. We drove jalopies to work. Mine needed new front tires. Quick! Then I received a letter saying I had won one of three prizes to be given at the open house of a new business-in-town. I had won either a new car, a television set or a pair of diamond earrings.

I didn't fool myself that I had won the car, but figured I could sell the TV or the earrings for enough to buy new wheels. If not, either the TV or the diamond earrings would make a nice gift. I would enjoy being Lady Beautiful.

But I was embarrassed at the idea of claiming my prize. After all, I had been a snob about not depending on prizes to solve problems.

Never went to Vegas. Didn't even buy lottery tickets. But what if? And didn't everyone? Yes. Still, I blushed with guilt when I walked into the open house. I walked out with a pair of earrings made with bits of glass embedded in hanks of what-looked-like steel from a wrecked automobile. I threw them in a field on the way home. And in my humiliation, took a vow to never, never ...

Then came that coupon and the picture of that luxurious car and that glamorous cruise ship and ... and ... I lost the car, the cruise and my pride. Again.

So no more contests. Like my neighbor, I can't afford them.

Lucille S. deView, the writing coach for The Orange County Register, writes a weekly column on aging.

Magazine's 10 greatest musicals

Ten greatest Broadway musicals are "The King and I," "Show Boat," "West Side Story," "Gypsy," "Follies," "Carousel," "Guys and Dolls," "Pal Joey," "Candide" and "The Music Man." Or so contends American Heritage magazine's John Steele Gordon.

Not likely you think of Richard Nixon as an extraordinarily successful author, but in fact, seven of his nine books have been bestsellers.

Q. Certain music gives some people brain seizures. What's that called?
A. "Musogenic epilepsy." One patient suffered attacks at the sound of rock-and-roll. Another convulsed whenever he sang or recited in rhythm. A third - this was a minister - lost control anytime he played "Now Thank We All Our God" on the organ. Fairly rare. The condition was first identified in 1937.

An authority on cosmetics says most women in their 40s who wear perfume apply it daily in a ritual to satisfy no one but themselves.

41 says it's a way of declaring: "I'm ready. Ready for what?" For the day, the night, for the good times and the bad," he says. "For anything."

That dating-service matchmaker quoted earlier says: Men want slender women who aren't aggressive. Women want tall men who aren't egotistical. Our Love and War man softly says: But what you want and what you get are... etc.

Boys tend to be more aggressive than girls, but as the boys grow up, they usually tone down that drive while girls are inclined to become increasingly aggressive as they age through womanhood. So report researchers at The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C.

You and I call it a sand dune. Scholars describe it as a thin circular echinoderm on sandy ocean bottoms. Curiosity is that when it goes somewhere it can't change direction without stopping and pivoting on its axis.

Master chefs must endure 10-day test for culinary success

By Mary MacVean
The Associated Press

HYDE-PARK, N.Y. — On their 10th 15-hour day in the kitchen, five tired, tense chefs each get two plastic milk crates filled with ingredients and a few hours to prepare four courses that could make or break years of effort.

And that was just the second half of the day. Starting as early as 6 a.m., the chefs had prepared another meal, this one a relative piece of cake. Each had been given a menu the night before — either classical French or some other nationality — and could forgo some precious sleep-to-plan, including diagramming plate arrangements.

The five chefs, along with three pastry chefs, were slogging through the final day of tests to become masters certified by the American Culinary Federation. Four colleagues already had dropped out and, by the end of test, only five of the eight could call themselves certified masters.

In Europe, the master chef certification long has been essential for salaries, to take on apprentices and, in some places, to open a business.

The American Culinary Federation has given the test since 1930 at the Culinary Institute of America, the country's premier cooking school. The federation sees the designation as part of its effort to improve the status of culinary professionals. So far, there are only 67 masters in this country.

Fewer than half the candidates usually pass, said Stephen C. Fernald, director of education for the Culinary Federation.

The pressure is enormous. Even a candidate's garbage is scrutinized. One overcooked spaghetti fillet, one salty stock, one burned crust that should have been golden could mean failure.

"It's probably the ultimate challenge in our profession," said judge Richard Schneider, food and beverage director at Harrah's Casino Hotel in Atlantic City, N.J. He became a master chef in 1981. Over the previous nine days, the chefs had taken written and practical exams in American and international cuisines, baking, nutrition and sanitation. The pastry chefs were tested in frozen desserts, international classics, nutritional baking and breads, for example.

But Sunday, the last day, counts for half the score. "Everybody is totally different today. Everybody's so stressed out. It's a big tension day," said Corey Pavuk, a CIA student from Hillsborough, N.J., one of 40 students working as apprentices for the tests.

Stress sometimes won out. Kevin Gawronski forgot to include the garnish with his borscht and sent a student tearing down the hall to the judges' room. Later, he asked a student to taste his brieche (a salmon dish baked in brioche dough) with the plea: "Tell me it's perfect. Please." She did.

In the afternoon, Edward Jones sent an appetizer of hedgehogs — mushrooms-stuffed-on-leilits-out to the judges two minutes early. Seconds later, the students returned with the plates. Dieter Doppelfel, an instructor at the CIA, and organizer of the testing, followed yelling, "How could you go before the time?"

Still, Janos was certified a master. Gawronski was not. "I wanted to see if I could do it, if I could cook with the best," Janos said. "It's been 10 long days. I'm glad it's over."

Klaus Friedreich, director of culinary arts at the Art Institute of Fort Lauderdale in Florida, also was certified a master chef. He had studied and practiced for a year and a half but found the exam "just as hard as I had heard."

Throughout the test, one judge watched the chefs, cavedropping, poking around, studying technique and stamina.

"There are no garbage cans. Whatever a chef intends to discard goes into aluminum baking pans so he can be judged on whether he's wasteful. —Woe to the cook who tosses what might better go into a stock or sauce."

Chefs can bring along notes or books. "We believe if you don't know the basics, if you don't know how to cook, the book won't help you," said judge Harmut Handke of Handke's Cuisine in Columbus, Ohio.

Catfish Amandine: A heart-healthy recipe

If the way to your loved one's heart is through the stomach, there may be no better way to show Valentine how much you really care than by serving up a romantic meal that's easy on the heart.

Healthful, easy-to-prepare and available fresh now and throughout the year, farm-raised catfish is a fitting centerpiece for any meal that celebrates the heart.

These recipes, from the American Heart Association, are consistent with the AHA's dietary guidelines when used as a part of a total-balanced diet that is less than 30 percent fat.

Among the recipes features in the brochure are:

Catfish Amandine is a heart-healthy recipe perfect for Valentine's Day.

CATFISH AMANDINE
2 tablespoons margarine, divided
¼ cup sliced almonds
1 teaspoon lemon peel, grated
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Parsley
Lemon wedges or slices
1½ lbs. catfish

In a large skillet, over medium heat, melt 1 tablespoon margarine. Sauté the catfish fillets, turning once, until fish just flakes when tested with a fork. Transfer to platter and keep warm. In the same skillet add remaining 1 tablespoon margarine, almonds, lemon peel and lemon juice. Sauté 1 minute, reducing heat if necessary to avoid burning. Pour sauce over fillets and garnish with parsley and lemon.

Makes 6 servings.
Per serving: 183 calories; 60 mg.

cholesterol; 2 gms. saturated fat; 1 g. carbohydrate; 11 gms. total fat; 20 gms. protein; and 770g. sodium

CHEESEY CATFISH
¾ cup Parmesan cheese, grated
¼ cup yellow cornmeal
¼ cup flour
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon Spanish paprika
2 lbs. catfish fillets

Pour melted margarine into baking pan. Combine Parmesan cheese, cornmeal, flour, pepper and paprika in a paper bag. Place catfish fillets in bag and shake to coat each fillet. Place fish in baking dish, turning once to coat with margarine. Sprinkle remaining cheese/cornmeal mixture over fish. Bake at 400 degrees until golden brown and fish flakes when tested with a fork (approximately 10-15 minutes).

Makes 8 servings.

DeBoer is 1 of 1,000 contributing editors

TWIN FALLS — A new magazine, called Taste of Home, a Reiman publication, has 1,000 contributing editors scattered throughout the United States and Canada. Four live in the Magic Valley.

In a variety of profiles you will meet them and have the opportunity to try a few of their recipes. Today Gladys DeBoer shares one that was printed in the premier issue, plus two more.

She was asked to contribute recipes and ideas to the magazine, because a couple of her recipes had been used in Country, one of the publisher's other magazines.

Many of the country cooks were selected that way; others were contacted through their areas' home-economics.

Regular features in the magazine include cooking for two, a complete meal in a matter of minutes, what's cooking across the country, brown-bag luncheon, meals-on-a-budget, potluck pleasers, good food that's good for you and much more. Contributors choose the topics they are comfortable with.

Taste of Home is an answer to the many requests the publisher received for a magazine devoted entirely to food. And, it is all sharing, with no advertising.

For more information about the magazine, contact Taste of Home, P.O. Box 986, Greendale, Wis. 53129. Subscriptions run $16.98 a year.

DUTCH POTATO SALAD
(Huzarensla)

1½ pounds cooked roast beef, diced
3 Granny Smith apples, diced (or any sour apple, such as Pippin)
3 hard-boiled eggs, chopped (reserve a few slices, if desired, for garnish)

6 cold boiled potatoes, diced
¼ cup cooked beets, diced (or substitute dull pickles)
¼ cup sour pickles, diced (or substitute dull pickles)

¼ cup cocktail onions, quartered (depending on how big they are)
3 tablespoons oil (DeBoer uses canola)

3 tablespoons white wine vinegar or white vinegar
Salt and pepper, to taste

Mix ingredients together. Taste, and add more vinegar if needed. On a platter put a bed of lettuce.

But up a mound of the potato mixture on the lettuce, and cover it lightly — you would frost a cake, with:

Mayonnaise (light or low cholesterol is OK)

Garnish with any or all of the following:

Tomato wedges or cherry tomatoes
Parsley
Slices of boiled eggs
Sliced pickles

For a family dinner DeBoer sometimes leaves out the lettuce bed and puts the salad in a bowl.

She says this is not as soft and heavy as most potato salads, because the mayonnaise is not mixed in. It stays together in cubes.

"And with the vegetables and roast beef in it, you could use it as a main dish," she says. "Or you can use it when beef you would use a regular potato salad."

Next is a simple to make cookie recipe.

BUTTER OATMEAL COOKIES
¼ cup butter, softened (can use margarine, but tastes better with butter)
¼ cup sugar

½ teaspoon soda
1 cup flour
1 cup oatmeal

Cream butter and sugar together. Add flour, soda and oatmeal. Mix well. Roll in balls approximately the size of a walnut. Place about two inches apart on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 10-15 minutes or until gone brown.

"They're real crispy and taste like buttery oatmeal," DeBoer says.

Home/gardening

If 1 method fails, then try another

Q. We have a cherry dining table that has developed a couple of white stains, apparently from moisture. We tried rubbing with toothpaste, which lightened the marks a little, but they are still very evident. What now? — C. Rudolph

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

A number of manufacturers say that their wood-putties are stainable. While it is true that the putties can be stained, I have yet to find one that will give an exact match with wood if cured putty and wood are stained at the same time.

A. White stains on furniture, which are often circles or rings left by the bottoms of glasses or cups, can sometimes be removed with toothpaste. Some toothpastes, however, work better than others. Most effective are those that contain whiteners, which are actually very fine abrasives. If a toothpaste has a whiteners, it usually says so on the container.

The putty generally turns out much lighter because it does not absorb stain as well as plain wood.

The usual procedure is to moisten a soft cloth with water, squeeze a little toothpaste on the cloth, and rub the stain gently with a circular motion. Some furniture experts recommend mixing the toothpaste with an equal part of baking soda. If the stain vanishes, buff with a dry cloth to help restore the luster. If the spot still appears dull, rub on a little furniture wax.

The best bet is to stain the wood first, then experiment with small quantities of putty that are mixed with stain while still in putty form. When a putty-stain formula is found that makes a good match with the wood when cured, mix a batch and fill the gaps.

There are a number of other remedies for white stains, some using common household items. I have heard of white stains being removed by rubbing with mayonnaise, ketchup, plain salad oil, camphorated oil, peanut butter and rubbing alcohol. The secret of these remedies appears to be in the warmth generated by rubbing, which causes the moisture that created the stain to evaporate and oil from the rubbing compound to penetrate the finish.

Incidentally, wood putties often do not work well for filling gaps in floors. Since the boards in the floor shrink and expand with moisture changes, the putty can loosen or crumble. An alternative is to cut narrow strips of the same type of wood used in the floor and glue the strips into the gaps, planing and sanding them flush with the surface.

Some hardware stores, home centers and paint stores also sell special white-ring removers.

Q. I heat my house with an oil heater. After I change the engine oil in my car, can I put the old oil in the house oil tank? — B. Port

The key to successfully removing white rings is gentleness. Hand rubbing or use of harsh abrasives can damage the finish.

A. Some special oil heaters are designed to burn old auto-engine oil and other waste oil, but you should definitely not attempt to burn it in a standard oil burner of the type used in most homes.

Q. I recently replaced some pine flooring in our dining room. There are some gaps between boards in the repaired areas, which I would like to fill with wood putty that will stain so there is an exact match with the wood. Can you recommend anything? — J. Valley

Most residential oil burners are designed to use No. 2 heating oil; a thin, relatively refined type of oil that is a step below kerosene in grade. Special-waste-oil burners are used by some industrial plants or businesses such as auto-repair shops and gasoline stations, where there is a steady supply of waste oil.

Cold winter weather can do permanent damage to plants

'Snow is one thing, but it's been cold this winter. Really cold. We won't know what the cold did to our plants until spring, maybe not even until June.

Green Thumbprints
Cathy Walworth

Some of the signs of cold damage will be a split bark and cambium all the way around the stems or trunk, brown or black leaves, leaf drop, twig or branch death, flower bud drop or dead or damaged buds that remain on the plant. Needed evergreens that have weathered a very cold winter will sometimes change from a healthy bright green to a very dark, water-soaked green, or even brown to purplish or red.

Plants in containers on top of the ground or on decks, patios and walkways probably didn't survive the cold temperatures. All roots are less hardy than plant tops. When we expose roots to air temperatures, many species roots are killed when the thermometer dips into the teens.

Not to worry, says George Pinyuh, Washington state extension agent. Pinyuh says that when the weather warms up a bit those evergreens usually return to their normal green color. If they don't, permanent damage may have been done.

Plants in containers on top of the ground or on decks, patios and walkways probably didn't survive the cold temperatures. All roots are less hardy than plant tops. When we expose roots to air temperatures, many species roots are killed when the thermometer dips into the teens. As on the plants with the split bark, these plants won't look dead until next spring when the warm weather starts taking lots of water from the leaves that the dead roots can't replace. That's when we see homeowners flocking to garden centers and extension offices to find out why their plant "suddenly died."

Those plants with bark and cambium split all the way around are dead from that point up, even though they may not appear to be. Those parts won't actually be dead leaves to transpire their moisture that roots cannot replace in frozen ground. Leaves will turn brown when that happens.

What to do? Nothing. Plants whose entire above-ground portion has been killed may still sprout from the crown, since the roots are likely to still be alive. Don't dig anything out until you're absolutely sure it's dead. If by June nothing new has grown, you can assume it's dead.

Shrubs and trees that have suffered damage should be fertilized with a nitrogen fertilizer at about the time new growth appears, advises Pinyuh. He also warns you to be sure your damaged plants will not suffer further stresses next summer. Make sure those plants are kept well watered and several inches of a loose organic mulch is used to preserve moisture in the soil during the drought season.

CARD OF THANKS

Thanks so much dear relatives, friends, Dr. Emory, Dr. Huggins, Dr. Holman, & your staffs, for your kind expressions of love for my dear husband Ivan Molyneux, during his long illness and passing. Thank you all for the visits, calls, cards, bouquets, flowers, plants and delicious food. Ivan was a wonderful husband, father, grandpa and Uncle. He loved to joke & tease. He was a loving and caring man and always in our hearts. Some of the words from a favorite song he sang were "a beautiful rose has no repro, since you went away I will be missed forever, and always in our hearts." ## THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"We must select the illusion which appeals to our temperament, and embrace it with passion, if we want to be happy."

- Cyril Connolly.

"I make the game if I duck the first spade," confessed South in an attempt at self-flattery. "I'm not so fast," offered West. "Two can play the same game; and I would not have let you escape so easily."

East's spade jack was captured by South's queen-and South could see that West's king of diamonds ace were with West, he could safely score overtricks. But what if it was East who had the diamond ace?

Hoping to catch East napping, South led a club to dummy's ace and sneaked a low diamond from dummy. Wide awake, East hopped up with his ace to lead a spade, and West "took" four "quick" winners "for" down one.

Would a first-round "duck" of spades have allowed South to score the game? It would if West had taken the next spade. But, as West pointed out, this West would also have ducked, and South would have been in the same boat. He would have lost the spade suit as soon as a defender won the diamond ace.

Should South have ducked the first spade to test the defense? An emphatic "no" is the answer. If he had done that and it was West who had the diamond ace, he would have thrown a cold game (with overtricks) out the window. South's actual plan was a good one. He was lucky to play this deal against a defender who remained alert.
