GOP set to rebut economic address

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — After 12 years of fleeing a president from their own party, Republicans will be in the unfamiliar role Wednesday night of rebutting a Democratic president's televised address to Congress.

House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, Ill., who will give his party's official response to President Clinton's economic message, said his remarks will be "deliberately civil."

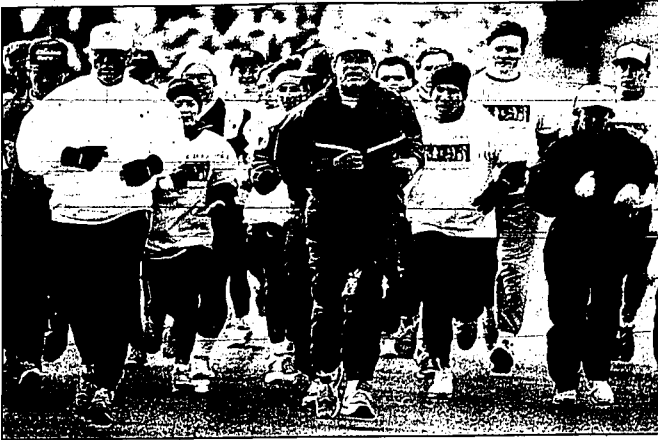

He said that while he will raise questions about the Clinton economic program and other presidential decisions, including the effort to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military, Michel acknowledged he is cognizant of public perception.

"It would be wrong and politically stupid to launch an all-out attack on a new president," said Michel, whose speech will be broadcast live after Clinton's 7 p.m. MST talk.

As Republican leaders continue debating how to be constructive opponents, House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, Ga., said the party's response should "offer our thesis of where America has to go rather than try to be the antithesis of Clinton." Senate Minority Leader Robert J. Dole, Kan., said that when Americans leave their television sets Wednesday night they should have a sense that "the Republican Party is alive and well" and can be an influential voice for the 57 percent who did not vote for Clinton.

While televised opposing-party rebuttals have become tradition even as presidents deliver a State of the Union address or some other message to a joint session of Congress, some Republicans are not eager to carry on that tradition.

"I think they're always kind of flopped," said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla.

President Clinton, joined by Vice President Al Gore and Tipper Gore, right, leads runners in a Valentine's Day 2-mile fun run in Washington, D.C., Sunday.

Clinton celebrates St. Valentine's Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton promoted "American Heart Month" with a Sunday morning jog, accompanied his wife to church and planned to take her out for a fancy evening dinner to celebrate St. Valentine's Day.

Clinton refused to reveal what he gave his wife. Hillary Rodham Clinton, for St. Valentine's Day. "It's a secret," he told reporters at the beginning of a relaxing day.

Questions about the president's scheduled speech to the nation today and the unveiling of his economic plan Wednesday also went unanswered.

Clinton began his day with a two-mile run on Sunday at the Point along the Potomac River sponsored by the American Heart Association. He signed a proclamation designating February as "American Heart Month," then urged the field of about 50 fellow runners to stay in shape.

"One of the reasons we have one of the most expensive health care systems in the world is we create a lot of the problems ourselves," said Clinton, a regular jogger.

Breathing heavily and his face red from the wind, the president appeared bothered by the bitter-cold weather. Vice President Al Gore appeared to have less trouble with the run. His wife, Tipper, lagged well behind the front of the pack.

Mrs. Clinton did not attend the event. Still wearing his sweat suit, Clinton ducked into the Oval Office for a few minutes after the run.

The Clintons later attended a First Baptist Church of the City of Washington D.C.

The Rev. Everett Goodwin asked God to "grant us your vision and courage to the president and Mrs. Clinton, that in these days of urgent need they might lead us on."

Halfway into the service, Clinton gently wrapped his arm around his wife.

After church, the Clintons walked across the street hand-in-hand to greet well-wishers. One man pleaded with Mrs. Clinton to improve the nation's health care system. "If I do the best I can," said Mrs. Clinton, who heads Clinton's health care task force.

She wore bright red coat and carried a single red rose. The Clintons planned to eat at the Red Sage, a trendy Washington restaurant with a long waiting list for reservations.

Clinton eyes energy tax based on heat production

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton appeared Sunday to be moving toward a broad energy tax based on how much heat a particular fuel produces, a levy that will increase the cost of electricity, heating oil and gasoline.

The tax would be calculated according to "heat" — heat is produced by a particular type of fuel. The tax would have the biggest impact on the cost of coal, heating oil and natural gas.

Virtually all Americans would be affected in some way by additional costs.

Some Republican lawmakers called the proposal an "across-the-board tax on middle class Americans and of businesses trying to emerge from a recession. They predicted it would not easily be accepted by Congress.

A direct gasoline tax has been ruled out in favor of a much broader and less visible "tax on all energy sources in order to spread the impact," said an administration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

It was unclear how much of a tax levy is being envisioned, or whether some specific environmentally friendly fuels — such as solar, wind power — might be exempted or given compensating tax credits as environmentalists have urged.

Analysts have estimated that a 12-cent tax per British thermal unit (Btu), across the board could generate about $10 billion in tax revenue. A Btu is a measure of the amount of energy needed to raise the temperature of one pound of water by 1 degree Fahrenheit.

Such a tax would fall most heavily on coal as well as natural gas and a lesser extent oil, nuclear and hydroelectric power, according to Adam Sieminski, an energy analyst for NatWest Securities Corp.

The energy tax proposal will be announced this week as part of Clinton's overall "economic package."

Clinton was expected immediately to launch a major effort to sell the package, including the new energy taxes.

House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., said that while he personally favors a direct gasoline tax, he is optimistic that a broad-based tax pegged to energy content, or Btu, could win congressional approval.

But while the "Btu tax" does not have the same kinds of regional opposition as a direct gasoline tax or a tax on oil imports, it has a wide range of detractors — including both business leaders and environmentalists.

"Because such a tax would have more of an impact on the price of coal and natural gas, compared to oil, critics fear it could heighten the country's dependence on foreign oil."

Environmentalists have been cool toward a Btu tax because it would cover renewable energy sources such as wind power and perhaps inhibit their development.

They favor a so-called "carbon tax," which would be an excise tax on fossil fuels based on carbon content.

Various business groups including the electric power industry, which relies heavily on coal and nuclear, said many broad-based energy tax would energy tax, including one based on energy content.

"Economic ... growth will be lowered, jobs will be lost, and productivity dampened. All manufacturing industries and agriculture in the U.S. will suffer," a group of energy and manufacturing executives said in a recent letter to Clinton.

Some consumer groups also have raised concern about an energy tax, saying it could have the most severe consequences on the poor.

"Low income families shouldn't have to pay higher taxes to deal with a deficit problem that they didn't create in the first place," said Robert Heston, director of the Washington-based Citizens for Tax Justice.

Congress members: Are these '93 comeback kids?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, one of the most criticized of American institutions, may be edging toward a modest public opinion comeback.

The improvement isn't much, as registered by a recent poll. But after the battering Congress took over incidents such as the House bank and post office scandals, any tick upward is noteworthy.

The apparent improvement "results from the fact that the temperature has been lowered in terms of conflict between the Congress and the president," said Thomas Mann, a congressional scholar at the Brookings Institution.

"Failure sometimes creates success. When people fall down, they have to try to stand up," said James David Barber, a professor of political science at Duke University.

"The country is optimistic," said Larry Sabato, professor of government at the University of Virginia. "A large percentage believe the country is on the right track. And therefore a larger number give higher approval ratings to just about everything."

Earlier this month, an Associated Press poll showed Congress' approval rating climbed from a lowly 17 percent last April to an improved but still low 22 percent.

Around the valley

Victims remain stable after head-on collision

TWIN FALLS - Four victims of a head-on collision west of Twin Falls on Friday night remained in stable condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, a nursing supervisor said Sunday.

The accident happened just before midnight near the intersection of U.S. Highways 93 and 30.

Brian Edwards, 19, of Twin Falls, was driving eastbound on Highway 30 when he lost control of his vehicle and swerved into oncoming traffic, according to the Idaho State Police. Edwards might have been driving too fast for the existing conditions, said the ISP.

His vehicle hit a car driven by Scott Lynch, 20, of Filer, head-on near the intersection of the highways 30 and 93.

Edwards, Lynch and their two passengers were taken to the regional medical center. As of Sunday, the names of the two passengers had not been released.

Jerome mayor to recommend new police chief Tuesday

JEROME - The mayor of Jerome is scheduled to appoint James Dahl from Huntington Beach, Calif., as chief of police Tuesday.

The appointment must have the approval of city council members before Dahl can have the job.

Rejecting a bid for a computer, deciding on a regulation governing curbs and gutters and paying for the annual audit are other items on the agenda.

The meeting is open to the public and will begin at 7 p.m. in city hall. A work session, also open to the public, will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Twin Falls County seeks comment on $50 landfill fee

TWIN FALLS - Residents and business owners will get the chance this week to say what they think about a $50 fee proposed to help build a new landfill.

The Twin Falls County Commission plans a meeting Thursday night to hear people's thoughts about the fee. The meeting starts at 7 p.m. in Rooms 117 and 118 of the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

A group of citizens recently studied the issue and recommended a one-time $50 fee for homeowners and businesses alike.

The fee could raise $1 million toward building a landfill.

When the commissioners proposed a fee last November, public outcry over the fairness of the bills prompted the commissioners to reconsider the issue.

Idaho road crews build new canal bridge west of Buhl

SHOSHONE - The Idaho Transportation Department has begun work on U.S. 30 northwest of Buhl on a Twin Falls Canal bridge upgrade project.

Crews will be replacing the existing culvert with a box culvert and putting in new pavement on the approaches to the bridge at Milepost 196 on U.S. 30.

The reconstruction is necessary due to the age of the existing culvert and to widen the bridge for better traffic flow.

During this work, traffic will be restricted to one lane across the bridge.

Idaho Construction Co. Inc. of Kimberly is the main contractor for the $96,000 project, which is expected to be completed by the end of March.

Malicious destruction:	3	4
Forgery:	1	6
Stolen car:	1	5
Bomb threat:	1	1
Total felonies:	21	131

Intersecting concerns

State transportation engineers say Highway 30 needs improvements sooner than Highway 93.

Cut in federal funds won't wreck Highway 30 improvement project

By Phil Sabm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Plans for improving U.S. Highway 30 from Filer to Twin Falls and the interchange with U.S. Highway 93 are on schedule, according to an Idaho Transportation Department official.

The $14.7 million project involves widening Highway 30 from Filer to the junction of highways 30 and 93, building the interchange and widening Highway 30 to the edge of Twin Falls.

Loren Thomas, the department's district engineer in Shoshone, said work on the Filer end of the project, at an estimated $3.3 million cost, is scheduled to start in the fall. Design and right-of-way work is slated to start this spring, he said.

Idaho recently took a 10 percent cut in its federal transportation funds and construction on Highway 30, but Thomas did not expect this to delay the project.

After the Filer-end work is finished, the interchange will be built at an estimated cost of $5.8 million, Thomas said. Work on the interchange is scheduled to start in 1994, he said.

"The high-accident junction" merits an interchange, Thomas said.

From a safety standpoint, an interchange is the most cost-effective use of dollars, he said.

Lastly, Highway 30 will be widened from the junction into the edge of Twin Falls for an estimated $5.4 million.

The widening will include putting in a full-length left turn bay, constructing roadway shoulders, which Highway 30 does not have now, moving power poles back from the road and putting in a bicycle path along the highway.

Project plans would disrupt family farm

By Suzanne Huxbold
Times-News correspondent

FILER - Joe Krepsik has owned an 80-acre farm on the southeast corner of the junction of U.S. highways 93 and 30 since 1959, but he says if the exchange project is approved, he wants out.

"I'm 64 years-old now. I don't need all this trouble," Krepsik said. "I want 'em to buy the whole farm and let me out of it."

Krepsik's whole farm, for which he's asking the state to pay $250,000, includes one of Twin Falls county's landmark homes - a grand, bright yellow Sears-Roebuck mail order house built on site by the Bowers family in 1917.

Joe Krepsik, whose farm sits as the junction of U.S. highways 93 and 30, fears its impact and hopes the project would be scaled down.

"If we can just make them be smart with our money, I'll feel like we've done our job," Drake said.

Drake, Krepsik and his son, Louis Krepsik, want the state to consider a smaller-scale project, perhaps just a redesign of the existing junction, Louis Krepsik said.

In any case, Louis Krepsik said he would like to see the house where he grew up continue to stand as it has for 76 years on the Filer property.

He added the family is considering asking the state to move the house back from the exchange onto the remaining farmland.

Glenns Ferry legislator dives into the fray

The Associated Press

BOISE - Freshman state Rep. Robbi King, R-Glenns Ferry, says she has the perfect background to be a legislator - flight attendant, car saleswoman, teacher's aide, hay baler and small business owner.

"I think the people of my district wanted someone who would represent the entire district," the 34-year-old wife and mother said. "I have a rural background, but beyond that I have done a lot of things. That's my strength."

Behind King's youthful enthusiasm and engaging smile lies a gritty determination to accomplish goals. That determination helped her defeat incumbent Rep. Leanna Lauen, D-Mountain Home, in last November's District 20 election.

Last year, while working as a secretary during the legislative session, King was disheartened by what she considered Lauen's liberal views. Rather than complain on the sidelines, she decided to enter the political fray.

Lawmakers eyeing new programs ponder payment through more taxes

BOISE - About midway (one hopes) through the Idaho Legislature's 1993 session, lawmakers are realizing that if they want new programs, they really will have to raise taxes somewhere.

Woman battles abuse of handicapped parking

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — A Rupert woman is fed up with people parking in handicapped parking spaces when they don't need to for health reasons.

Janice LaFrance, who uses an oxygen tank, said she's reached the point of exasperation.

She was recently trying to use the handicapped parking spots at a Rupert grocery store and says, both times she wasn't able to find a free space.

"Instead, motorists who didn't have handicapped stickers or license plates had parked in the specially marked spots."

"Frustrated, she chased after some people who broke the law. 'I told them what was what,' she said. 'I owe the store manager an apology.'"

Earth Tribe seeks to join coalition

Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — An official of area human rights group Earth Tribe has announced that it is networking with the Northwest Coalition Against Malignant Harassment and has submitted a membership application to join the coalition.

In addition, the group is striving to create a support group for victims of hate crimes or malicious harassment.

Earth Tribe Ambassador Steve Thompson said Northwest Coalition is a non-profit umbrella organization encompassing a broad mosaic of organizations in Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming. Its purpose is to address the problem and threat of malicious harassment and violence based on race, religion, gender and sexual orientation.

Idaho's Marilyn T. Shuler of the Idaho Human Rights Commission, Eric Anderson, Jesse Berain and Kootenai County Prosecuting Attorney Bill Douglas all serve on the coalition's board of directors.

In addition to networking, the Burley-based Earth Tribe will be organizing a victims' support group for the Magic Valley.

It will include an Earth Tribe committee to support any victims of hate crimes or malicious harassment and will develop a reward program to help facilitate the arrest and conviction of offenders of such crimes.

Thompson said he has heard of a few small cases of what can be called "malicious harassment" and the group will help in emergencies.

"That would allow us to have quick response instead of trying to put something together as an afterthought," he said.

Anyone interested in working on the support group can contact Thompson at 678-4526 or writing to Earth Tribe at 1214 East Main Street, Burley, ID 83318.

Agencies Sign 3 Records of Decision for No Remedial Action

The U.S. Department of Energy, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare have signed records of decision for three waste sites at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory:

- Chemical Evaporation Pond at the Auxiliary Reactor Area,
- Perched Water System at the Test Reactor Area, and
- Motor Pool Pond at the Central Facilities Area.

The agencies agreed to take no remedial action at each of these three sites. A record of decision outlines the agencies' decision and includes a responsiveness summary prepared by the agencies to address public comments received during the comment period. The agencies will conduct periodic reviews to ensure that future uses at the Test Reactor Area, Auxiliary Reactor Area, and Central Facilities Area do not change from the assumptions used in the No Action decisions.

Basis for No Remedial Action

The potential at all three sites for an excess risk from exposure to contaminants from all routes of exposure was within or below EPA's acceptable risk range.

Perched Water System at the Test Reactor Area

This system includes two zones of water that have "perched" on relatively impermeable layers of clay 330 feet (100 meters) above the Snake River Plain Aquifer. The system was formed over time because of seepage from several wastewater disposal ponds at the Test Reactor Area. To ensure protection of human health and the environment, the DOE will monitor and conduct periodic reviews of all three sites.

Chemical Evaporation Pond at the Auxiliary Reactor Area

This pond is an unlined surface impoundment that was used to dispose of wastewater. From 1971 to 1988 the pond received small releases of organic chemicals, mineral acids and concentrations of radioactivity. Data collected during a remedial investigation of pond sediments revealed the presence of metals, volatile organic compounds and radionuclides.

Motor Pool Pond at the Central Facilities Area

This pond is an unlined evaporation pond that received wastes from two sumps from 1951 to 1985. One sump collected wastes from bus washes and floor drains while the other collected wastes from the steam-cleaning bay and roof-downspouts. The pond has not been used since 1985 and is currently dry with the exception of runoff resulting from storms and spring thaws. Soil samples collected from the pond sediments in 1989 indicated the presence of metals, volatile organic compounds and radionuclides.

Hill shoots 2 under to win The Challenge

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Mike Hill, who has found success on the Senior tour, shot a final-round 2-under-par 70 on Sunday to win The Challenge championship and $75,000. Hill finished the three rounds at 14-under-202.

Dave Stockton, who shot a 6-under-par 66, closed to within two shots at the end. Lefty Bob Charles had a final-round 66 to finish at 10-under-par 206 for third place.

Hill, with his lead evaporating, still managed to hang on after being eight shots at one point in the afternoon at the Vineyards.

"I think the turning point came for me at 10, when I missed a three-foot putt. I think if I would've made that shot, I would've shot two or three under on the backside. Instead of struggling after that," Hill said.

Hill went into Sunday's final round with a six-shot lead, built on his 7-under-par 65 in Saturday's second round.

"I've never had a six-stroke lead, so I didn't know how to act with it ... and it even got up to eight. It's almost like the ball starts snowballing, and you don't know whether you're able to stop it or not."

Hill shot 32 on the front nine, eagling the par-5 second hole and registering a birdie on the first and ninth holes. But some tentative play on the back nine yielded a 2-over-38.

Stockton, meanwhile, was shooting duplicate 33s on the front and back nines. He birdied the first, seventh and eighth holes on the front side; then got birdies on the 10th, 13th and 16th holes.

"If I would've made that putt at the 16th hole, it wouldn't have brought me to within one shot, and then I think (Hill) would've taken notice," Stockton said.

Stockton closed with three straight pars to finish at 204. Tied for fourth at 207 were Lee Elder, J.C. Snead, and Gibby Gilbert.

Kite earns 6-stroke, Bob Hope Classic victory

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Tom Kite played 90 holes better than anyone ever did before and scored a six-stroke victory Sunday in a record-setting performance in the Bob Hope Classic.

The 43-year-old U.S. Open champion had 37 birdies and two eagles in the five-day tournament and set a PGA Tour record for 90 holes at 325.

That's a dizzying 35-under-par and four better than the old record of 29 set by Andrew Magee and D.A. Weibring in the 1991 Las Vegas Invitational.

Saving his best for the last, Kite closed the greatest spring bling of his 22-year PGA Tour career with a course record, 10-under-par 62 on the Arnold Palmer course at PGA West. It included a decisive 29 on the back nine.

"I don't think there's any question about it," Kite responded when asked if this was the best he'd ever played.

He closed it out with birdies on the last four holes, marching up the 18th fairway to a standing ovation from the gallery that included the 89-year-old host comedian.

Hope, a life-long golfer, wore a dazed expression and pursed his lips in amazement at Kite's front-running exploits that left the rest of the field strung out far, far back.

"Rick Fehr, with Kite among the playoff losers for this title a year ago, shot 67 and matched the old tournament record of 331."

"It doesn't matter what you do when you run into a buzz saw," Fehr said. "My hat's off to him. I just wish he'd picked another week to do it."

His score, good enough to win all 34 of the previous Hope Classics, was a distant second against Kite's record exploits that included scores of 67, 67 and 64 on Bermuda Dunes, Tamarisk and Indian Wells, respectively, and scores of 65 and 62 at the Palmer course.

The victory, the 18th of Kite's career, was worth $198,000 from the total purse of $1.1 million and lifted him into the top spot on the year's money-winning list at $292,361.

It also put the game's all-time money-winning leader within reach of the $8 million plateau. He now has $7,900,279.

Scott Simpson was third alone at 335, 25-under-par, with a final round of 66.

The only others within 10 shots of the run-away winner were Jim Gallagher, Keith Clearwater, Jay Haas and Bob Lohr, tied at 336. Gallagher had a closing 63, Clearwater 64, Haas 68 and Lohr 70.

Masters champion Fred Couples, playing with Kite and Fehr in the final threesome, had a 3-putt bogey on the final hole, could do no better than match par 72 and finished 13 shots back at 338.

Kite held a one-stroke advantage when the day's play started, birdied the first two holes and never looked back.

After playing the front in 33, he birdied the 10th, held a bunker shot for eagle-3 on the 11th hole, rest are listed only as white males by the USOC.

Two USOC officers are black or female — Walker and treasurer Sandra Baldwin. And half of the at-large openings coming on the executive board coming into this meeting had been given to blacks or women — Andrew Young, the former UN ambassador and now chairman of the organizing committee for the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta; Arthur Ashe, the tennis star and human rights advocate who died last week of AIDS-related pneumonia; and Tom Kite, left, and tournament host Bob Hope share a laugh after Kite birdied a final round, course record 10-under-par 62 to win the Bob Hope Classic by six shots Sunday.

Merrick wins gold

ZAKOPANE, Poland — Skip Merrick, a Ketchum native now in his sophomore year at Brigham Young University, won the gold medal in the men's giant slalom at the Winter World University Games here Wednesday.

In 14th place after the first run, Merrick got to ski in the second position for his next run. With improved conditions, he recorded a time of 1:44.15 to win by 0.06.

"I was surprised to do so well. My goal was to finish in the top 10," Merrick said after the race.

In the team medal standings, the U.S. won five golds, four silvers and six bronzes, to finish fourth. Japan took the top spot (six-golds, eight silvers and four bronzes) followed by Russia and China.

Merrick is in his first season as a member of the BYU alpine ski team. He spent the last three winters as a member of the U.S. C Team.

Street takes silver medal at World Championships

MORIOKA-SHIZUKUISHI, Japan — Picabo Street of Sun Valley won the combined downhill on Mt. Kotakakura to earn the silver medal in combined to open the World Championships at the Shizukuishi Ski Resort on the northern end of Japan's main island of Honshu.

"Everything was good for me today," said the 21-year-old Street after earning her medal.

"The fact that I won just proves that I do have a really good feeling about my skiing."

It was the first U.S. World Championship medal since Tamara McKinney won the combined and was the bronze medalist in slalom in 1989 in Vail.

Valezia, a junior transfer at Seattle Pacific, scored a season-high 18 points to go with five rebounds in the Falcons' 94-76 win at Alaska Fairbanks.

U.S. Olympic Committee discusses racial, sexual bias

PHOENIX (AP) — Warnings of racial and sexual bias in policy-making posts and questions about wasting money on unnecessary meetings capped a two-day session of the U.S. Olympic Committee's board of directors Sunday.

After adopting a record $388 million budget and hearing glowing reports on organization of upcoming events, the USOC listened as two of its most senior members said all was not as rosy as it seemed.

Eric Dennis, a former USOC vice president and special assistant to the president, complained that too few positions of power — committee chairs and executive board posts — were filled by women, blacks and Hispanics.

"We are turning back 20 years," said Dennis, a black woman. "I look around and see fewer women and fewer blacks than I have in a long time. We need to pay particular attention to that."

Dennis' statements came at the first board meeting in USOC history presided over by a black president, Leroy Walker, elected president last October, called on delegates to come up with minority and female candidates for committee leadership.

Dennis said that of 24 committees, four were headed by women and one by a black, with no Hispanics. The USOC, however, said there are only 15 current committees or subcommittees, with five chaired by women including one black woman.

Overall, of 99 voting members on the board, 24 are women and 11 are black, according to committee figures. The rest are listed only as white males by the USOC.

Two USOC officers are black or female — Walker and treasurer Sandra Baldwin. And half of the at-large openings coming on the executive board coming into this meeting had been given to blacks or women — Andrew Young, the former UN ambassador and now chairman of the organizing committee for the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta; Arthur Ashe, the tennis star and human rights advocate who died last week of AIDS-related pneumonia; and Sandy Knapp, the board chairman of USA Gymnastics.

Prior to Dennis' remarks, George Kilian, the president of FIBA, the international basketball federation, said the USOC was wasting money on things such as this meeting, held at a posh resort in the Arizona hills.

"We haven't taken a single vote," Kilian said. "To have this thing the way we have it set up now is ludicrous. It seems we could break off half these meetings, take the money we save and give it to the development of sports."

After a half-hour debate in which opponents stressed that they, indeed, need to gather more often to exchange ideas.

Weather, injuries dominate World Ski Championships

SHIZUKUISHI, Japan (AP) — What had been eagerly anticipated as two weeks of great racing in the World Alpine Ski Championships quickly degenerated into an endurance event dominated by bad weather.

To say the weather was awful was to miss the point. Day after day, snow and wind combined to make racing hazardous at best. The tops of twin mountains Kotakakura and Takakura were to be the starting points for the men's and women's downhills, the glamour events on the racing schedule. But the peaks were more suitable for a polar weather station and the racers never got up that far.

It was supposed to be a meeting of the world's best skiers, but several of the stars never appeared. Sweden's Pernilla Wiberg was sidelined for the season by a ruptured Achilles tendon, and German downhill standout Katrin Gutensohn and Michaela Gerg were laid to knee in races, as was the top American downhiller, Olympic silver medalist Hilary Lindh.

Women's World Cup overall champion Petra Kronberger of Austria abruptly retired, and men's overall champion Paul Accola was limited to one race because of a knee injury.

Austria's Sabine Ginter, a threat for a medal in the combined, was knocked out by a knee injury on the second day of downhill training, and Switzerland's Dawn Bellisimo, a favorite for the women's downhill gold, broke her right ankle playing volleyball on one of the many days off forced by weather trouble.

Eric Schlopy of Park City, Utah, training for the super-giant slalom, broke five vertebrae in his back in a nasty spill during downhill practice.

And the biggest personality in the sport, Italy's Alberto Tomba, spent more time in a sickbed than on the race course. He came down with the flu and was sidelined for three days. His only start was in the slalom and he lasted only about 30 seconds before straddling a gate.

Aside from the physical carnage, the memory of Shizukuishi is the weather. It was awful and unrelenting, to the point that when a bright sunny Alpine day dawned, spectators were moved to stare silently at the blue sky.

Government panels flood Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every now and then a government needs a little advice...

Distribution of Federal Advisory Committees by functional groups work is done, the panel goes out of existence. That's not always the case.

"Like the Energizer bunny, they keep running and running and running and running," said Light...

"I have no doubt that some of the commissions are redundant, have outlived their purpose," said J. Michael Farrell...

Some advisory committees were created to solicit advice from outside experts on complicated issues.

for example, often draws on specialists from the academic, industrial and consumer health areas.

"I don't know of any other way the process could work," said Robert Niles, vice president and director of engineering for Capital Cities-ABC Inc.

The 1796 portrait of George Washington by Gilbert Stuart, at left, could be the least similar to his actual likeness.

Which is more likely the real Washington?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The image of George Washington on the dollar bill in your pocket may be the most familiar likeness of America's first president...

canon. The head has an oval shape, narrow jaw, thin nose and a small mouth.

Researchers at Mount Vernon, Washington's colonial home, say that, among the numerous likenesses of the first president...

It's not thought to be the most accurate, but it got into the public domain because (Stuart) was considered one of the best portrait painters of his day.

"People have this one image burned into their brains, and this is the image they see being made fun of in February, chopping prices with his hatchet," said Ann Rauscher...

Stewart attributes the disparities between the two well-known paintings to the 17 years Washington aged, plus different lighting and angle of the face...

In Washington's day, artists clamored to do his portrait, eager to make money by reproducing it either by hand from the original or on engravings, Rauscher said.

A reason the cheeks bulge in the later painting was likely the result of Washington's well-known dental problems.

Through the years, painters had Washington standing at his bucolic Mount Vernon estate at the "White House" of Princeton...

Washington took like? For the most definitive version of Washington, experts suggest the 1784 bust by French sculptor Jean Antoine Houdon.

Charles Willson Peale is credited with the first authentic rendering of the general. He painted seven versions, starting with a 1772 portrait of Washington at 40.

Chances are, that version is in your pocket, too. It's on the U.S. quarter.

Official's ouster prompts turmoil in school system

New York Daily News — NEW YORK — The ouster of New York Schools Chancellor Joseph Fernandez has triggered turmoil in the public school system...

controlled-state Senate — two board members who opposed Fernandez. Ninfa Segarra of the Bronx and Irene Impollizzeri of Brooklyn, are not expected to be reappointed when their terms expire in 1994.

Even the future of the Board of Education that board Fernandez said must select his successor — is unclear.

The stakes are painfully high for a system of 1 million school children racked by $750 million in budget cuts, overwhelming social and academic problems and an exploding student population.

The effort to replace Fernandez, whose $195,000-a-year contract will not be renewed after it expires in June, will be played out in a volatile tumult is the move to draft state legislation that would give the mayor control of the Board of Education and dismantle the central school administration.

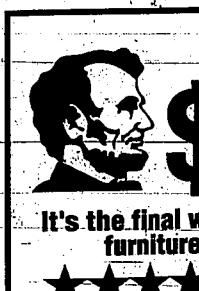

"Fernandez was just chewed up and spit out," State Education Commissioner Thomas Sobel said.

Even if that legislation fails — it faces opposition in the Republican

"Anyone who would take this job under these circumstances should be disqualified, because they obviously have poor judgment," said Felix Rohytyn, chairman of the Municipal Assistance Corp.

Niger holds free elections for 1st time

NIAMEY, Niger (AP) — Citizens voted Sunday for their first democratic government in a ballot brought about by violent strikes but delayed by a shortage of money and shaky security in the north. State-run radio said turnout among the more than 4 million voters was higher than expected, despite threats of disruption by nomadic Tuareg rebels. Authorities imposed an overnight curfew in the Tuareg region of Tahoua, 340 miles northwest of the capital, Niamey, to ward off possible attacks by the nomads, who seek autonomy or secession. Twelve parties have 619 candidates contesting 83 national assembly seats. Early returns were not expected until today.

Vote backs separation in Cyprus

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A candidate opposed to a U.N. plan to reunify Cyprus won the presidential election Sunday, according to computer projections. The projections by state radio gave Glafcos Clerides 50.7 percent of the vote to 49.3 percent for President George Vassiliou. Final results were due late Sunday. This Mediterranean island has been cut in two since Turkish troops invaded and occupied the north in 1974. Clerides, a 73-year-old right-wing businessman making his third bid for the presidency, calls the proposals a blueprint for disaster in their current form and wants them changed. The plan calls for the creation of a federal state comprising Greek and Turkish Cypriot zones, Turkish Cypriots in their breakaway state did not vote.

Lithuanians choose leader

VILNIUS, Lithuania (AP) — Lithuanians voted Sunday in their first popular presidential election, a contest that could decide whether the Baltic country looks to the East or West as it struggles to rebuild its economy. Pre-election polls indicated that Lithuania's former Communist Party leader and acting president, Algirdas Brazauskas, had a comfortable lead of 10 percent to 30 percent. But, his chief challenger, Stasys Lozraitis, may have narrowed the gap during televised debates this month. He urged Lithuania's 2.6 million voters to look past their current hardships to a Western democratic future, rather than romanticizing the socialist past. Turnout appeared to be heavy on a sunny day after a light snow. Election officials said preliminary results would be announced today. During a gentlemanly campaign, both candidates for the five-year term supported a free market, introduction of Lithuania's own currency and withdrawal of all Russian troops.

Israeli proposal draws criticism

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Jordan and Syria condemned the U.N. Security Council on Sunday for accepting an Israeli proposal to end a standoff over its expulsion of some 400 Palestinians. In Jerusalem, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin told reporters he was confident the Palestinians would join the Middle East peace talks now that the compromise had been endorsed by the Security Council. The compromise calls for 101 of the deportees to be returned now and the rest later. Palestinian spokesmen have said they will boycott the talks until Israel repatriates all the Palestinians. The deportees have been living in a camp in southern Lebanon since being expelled in December for alleged links with Muslim fundamentalist groups.

Armenia could run out of wheat

YEREVAN, Armenia (AP) — Armenia could run out of badly needed wheat this week, deepening the crisis caused by an economic blockade stemming from its 5-year-long war with Azerbaijan, officials say. Shortages of fuel and other basic commodities have forced Armenia's 3.7 million people to close down virtually all factories in the former Soviet republic. Electricity is off throughout Yerevan, and there is little traffic. Most shops are closed, and residents spend their days scrounging for food and fuel to heat their house. Small children use twine to pull bundles of sticks home through the snow-covered streets, stopping every few yards to rest their undernourished bodies. "The diet has been reduced basically to bread and potatoes," said Cassia Apkarian, head of the Yerevan office of the Armenian Assembly of America, which is helping coordinate an international aid effort. The average elderly Armenian has lost 11 pounds over the past three months, and autopsy reports show the fat layer on the average corpse has dropped from 2.4 to 3.6 inches to 0.8 to 1.2 inches over the past year, Apkarian said.

Despite the very visible suffering in Yerevan, most Armenians appear committed to continuing their war with Azerbaijan over Nagorno-Karabakh, an ethnically Armenian region inside Azerbaijan. Armenian forces now control most of the enclave and have opened up a land corridor to Armenia, through which they ship food, supplies and see-saw fighting. Armenian fighters occupied several more villages in an offensive last week. Azerbaijan has blocked all traffic across its border with Armenia, a land-locked mountainous country that also borders Georgia and Turkey.

Observers head for Haiti as part of democracy plan

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The stalled effort to restore democracy to Haiti gained new momentum on Sunday with the dispatch of about 40 human rights observers to the Caribbean nation. After months of resistance, Prime Minister Marc Bazin's military-backed government acceded to the mission last week after the United Nations agreed to reduce the observers' autonomy and guaranteed that Haitian sovereignty would be respected. A chartered airliner carrying the first group of observers was expected to arrive Sunday evening from Miami. The group included 15 Americans, the U.S. State Department said. The mission has the cautious blessing of both ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and his foes in Haiti's military.

For a healthy marriage, set aside playtime

You've probably heard over and over again — "You need to work at your marriage." But — hey — how about playing at your marriage? That sounds a lot more fun.

You've heard the old adage: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." It has the same effect on marriage.

JoAnn Larsen
Psychology

So think about working less — and playing more — in your relationship. Here, designed for you, are ways of doing just that:

• Laugh more together. In a Gary Larson "Far Side" cartoon, four cavemen are using a blanket to bounce a cow up and down high in the air. The caption reads, "Early attempts at the milkshake."

Think about sharing a cartoon like that and laughing. In your courtship and early years you probably laughed a lot together — that's probably a reason you ever married. So do things that bring back the laughter by, say, choosing or renting a humorous (rather than grim) movie, by reading the comics together, or by sharing a funny story you heard during the day.

• One study indicates that those couples who laugh at the same jokes are more likely to remain together (now, how's that for incentive to play instead of work).

• Sharing a common sense of humor (which reflects shared values) is an investment in the marriage. The "culture of two" that develops over the life span of a pair is illustrated by a couple, married for 65 years, who always chuckle over an incident that occurred years ago when they were traveling in Egypt.

The husband, who likes to tell the story, says, "I turned to my wife, whose purse was open, and I saw this guy sidling up to her purse. Now, we talk pig Latin and I said to her, 'Oneeey, oneeey, usee pay sly pennyah.' She understood and she reached out and closed her purse. The would-be purse-robbler looked at me like, 'Boy was I wrong. I thought you guys were Americans!'"

• Use pet names. Affectionate names also reflect a culture of two.

One wife calls her husband "Dogwood" years after the incident that inspired it. After noticing him building a too-high-to-bite, classic Dogwood sandwich out of his English muffin, scrambled eggs and cheese, she laughed and said, "Look at you making a Dogwood sandwich for breakfast." Her slip of the tongue cracked them both up, and "Dogwood" has gotten a chuckle ever since.

• Touch each other playfully. "The affectionate pat, the sudden hug, the teasing tickle can say, 'I love being with you' more effectively than words," observes an author. Another says, "Tickling, poking, rubbing, patting all feel good for the giver and the givee when the intent is loving. One woman rubs her husband's nose." Please see LARSEN/B2

KIMBERLY, 7, Don Arrington's of Kimberly and Ray Clark of Jerome, have some things in common. They are farmers; they patronize the same implement company — and both of them have Parkinson's disease.

Clark, 63, has had the condition for 10 years. At first he felt like he had the flu all the time, and he noticed his right leg dragging as he walked across a field. His fine motor movements were giving him trouble, too. He couldn't press hard enough to make a carbon copy when writing a check, and his handwriting got smaller.

He says one of the things that causes a lot of distress with this condition is tearing of the eyes and drooling while talking.

Dr. Richard Hammond, a Twin Falls neurologist, says this goes along with decreased movement in the later stages of the disease. People who have Parkinson's don't blink enough to clear their eyes, and they do not move their lips enough to prevent drooling. Nor do they swallow very often.

Hammond says those with the disease also develop what is called "masked faces," because of a loss of expression. The primary symptom can be a "pill-rolling" side-to-side tremor of the hands that occurs at rest, goes away during movement and is worse when the person is nervous. Some people do not develop this tremor.

A number of clues are subtle. One arm may swing less than the other. Short steps are common, as is stooping while walking. The voice may become soft, known as "hypophonia."

Clark has this problem, and so does Arrington, 64, whose speech is slurred first thing in the morning and, if he exerts himself, after taking his medication.

Arrington says there are times when, though his mind is functioning properly, he can't say what he wants.

"Your mind tells you to say a certain thing and you say, 'Oh, can't I say that word now,'" he says. "As a result, you have to sit and wait till your tongue and your mind coordinate back and forth long enough to where you can get out the word."

Hammond says folks with Parkinson's should be treated like anyone else. "Most of them are very bright," he says. "They're just slow in getting their thoughts out."

The disease is rather insidious, according to Hammond. It can go on a while before the person seeks medical attention.

"Most of the people say they're dragging a foot a little bit more, or they're having a little trouble turning over in bed or getting out of a car," he says. "But the older folks tend to just accept that as being normal aging, and they usually come in complaining of the tremor in the hand as being insignificant. It can go on a while before the person seeks medical attention.

Although Parkinson's can occur in people in their 20s and 30s, the age of onset is generally in the 50s and 60s. And there is a slight male predominance.

Hammond defines Parkinson's disease as a loss of certain neurons (nerve cells) that come out of the part of the brain called the substantia nigra — a little black area in the brain stem. The neurons are found in a vast number of areas in the brain, and they produce a type of chemical called dopamine. People with Parkinson's have decreased dopamine.

Consequently, the patient's whole range of fine motor tasks is decreased. So are the

Support group meets Feb. 23 at KMYT

TWIN FALLS — The first meeting of the Magic Valley Parkinson's Support Group will be held at 6:30 p.m. Feb. 23 in the KMYT Community Room.

The group, affiliated with the American Parkinson's Disease Association, is designed to help participants learn and share as they discuss new medications and procedures. Ray Clark and Don Arrington will serve as group coordinators.

For the last five years, Clark and Arrington have been a two-man support group. When Clark first suggested starting a group, Arrington dismissed the idea. Then one morning, Arrington says, he decided it was his responsibility as a citizen of this community to help start the group.

"So I called Ray and I said, 'How would you like to start a support group?' and he said, 'It's about time you came around.'"

It's important for people to know what to expect after they have been diagnosed with Parkinson's, Clark says. That, as well as getting together with people who have a common problem, is what the group will be about.

For more information, call Arrington at 733-8868 or Clark at 324-5013.

gross motor tasks, such as walking. All of the muscles are firing at once.

Clark says he thinks the toughest part of having Parkinson's is the frustration of not being able to do something you have been doing all your life. "It takes so terribly much longer to accomplish a task," he says.

Medications called Sinemet, Parlodel, and Eldepryl can alleviate a lot of the symptoms, Hammond says, "but the disease itself still goes merrily along."

The therapy is if you can slow down or prolong the need for Sinemet, but Sinemet can actually cause the disease to get worse, Hammond says, though Deprenyl or Eldepryl help protect against that.

As Parkinson's disease progresses, Hammond explains, Sinemet can cause the patient to experience too much movement (usually in the arms and trunk). "That's bad; and that's what we're trying to prevent these days by keeping people on as low a dose of Sinemet as possible," Hammond says.

Parkinson's disease seems to be more prevalent in rural areas than in inner cities.

Hats: A headstrong statement
Knight-Ridder News Service

Church ladies never gave them up. Nor did the church gentlemen, for that matter. The rappers popularized them for a new generation. And the ravers and rockers turned them into flamboyant street fashion that designers have transformed into pricey millinery.

Hats not only are back, they're coming at fashion-conscious shoppers from every possible direction.

Hats are streaming in from the Northwest on the grunge tidal wave. Rave dance parties have spawned hats inspired by Alice in Wonderland, Dr. Seuss and psychedelic pop art. Hip-hoppers made baseball caps ubiquitous and now offer up knotted knit caps, acrylic caps and hats that defy labels.

But that's only one side of the newfound hat mania. Famous names like Frank Olive are producing and selling $200 and $300 hats for the ladies — who lunch, Hillary Rodham Clinton and Tipper Gore had heads bobbing in enthusiasm or shaking in dismay — when they turned out for the inaugural in eye-catching headwear. Some are even wondering if the first and second ladies will give the hat business the kind of boost not seen since the era of Jackie Kennedy.

And to top it all off, young designers are flocking into the millinery business.

A big-brimmed tinted straw hat makes a dramatic counterpoint to soft summer styles.

Health notes

BRINGING UP BABY: A new baby will cost you $2,690 to $5,834 in the first year, not including day care. So says "The Baby's Budget Book," which, according to the Chicago Tribune, also estimates that a four-year education in the years 2007 through 2010 will cost more than $72,000 at a public college, more than $149,000 at a private college and $231,000 at an Ivy League school. "As you can see, there is a need for a substantial amount of money in the future," the authors write in an extreme understatement.

FLY-BY-NIGHT PETS: Looking to feather your nest with a pet bird? Beware of a bird for sale whose price seems too good to be true: "If a pet bird is for sale at a cheap price, it is likely the bird was smuggled into the U.S. and has not met federal health requirements," a U.S. Department of Agriculture official warns.

KNOW YOUR FAMILY'S HEALTH HISTORY: There are many illnesses that run in families including heart disease, strokes and cancer. One way to prevent these diseases is to know what disease patterns exist within your family. In fact, heredity is the second most important factor affecting your health next to lifestyle. Talk to both sides of your family, starting with parents and siblings to learn about disease patterns. Then ask your grandparents, uncles, aunts and first cousins.

TAKE A CPR CLASS: Cardiopulmonary resuscitation is used to revive a victim whose heart has stopped due to heart attack, drowning, electric shock, etc. Each year CPR is responsible for saving over 100,000 lives. Classes are offered regularly through the Red Cross and American Heart Association.

CLIMB INTO EXERCISE: Although climbing the stairs in a stadium has been used as exercise by baseball players for years, it has recently gained acceptance in fitness clubs. One reason is because it's one of the best activities to burn calories. In fact, climbing stairs for 10 minutes burns 2.3 times as many calories as walking for an equal length of time. If you don't have access to a stair climbing machine, simply walk up and down the steps in your home or office.

WHERE THERE'S SMOKE: Those of you who smoke are up to four times more likely to develop gum disease than people who have never smoked. Researchers at the Tufts University School of Dental Medicine and the Forsyth Medical Center found that 46 percent of smokers aged 19-30 had gum disease compared with only 12 percent of nonsmokers. Among older subjects, those 31 to 40 years old, 88 percent of the smokers had gum disease compared with 33 percent of the nonsmokers.

Cricket making a comeback?

"Who is croquet now making such a spectacular comeback?" asks a client. One of the several reasons why practitioners of the pastime, is it's the first outdoor game in which women competed on equal terms with men.

Curious, is it not, how so many famous personalities wind up known by only one name? Bluebeard, Kismet, Gertrude.

A man named City Allison has been described as one of the Old West's worst psychopathic killers. Among history's men of ill repute, an account of a duel opponent. They fought with Bowie knives. In an open grave. So the winner wouldn't have to bury the loser.

Q. Your Love and War man said it's not good enough for a husband to treat his wife like a queen. Why not?

A. Depends on which Queen you're talking about. The Queen of the British Empire, Elizabeth II, has only three general rights: 1. To be consulted, 2. To encourage, and 3. To warn. Not every wife would settle for that, but she.

Q. Willie Nelson supposedly worked at the oldest country-music radio station in Texas. Which one's that?

A. KBOP makes the claim. It's in Pleasanton, a place once known, before the world got wlier in traffic, as about one beer south of San Antonio.

Remember, approximately 99 percent of the universe is nothing.

Q. What does a fish do when it dies in an aquarium, sink or float?

A. Sink first, then rises a little later to float. That's typical, reports a pet fish authority.

What in your opinion is most likely to spur a pair of romantic partners? The philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche said, "It's not lack of love but lack of friendship that makes unhappy marriages."

Q. Who found the Dead Sea scrolls?

A. An Arab boy looking in a cave for a lost goat. In 1947, that.
