103rd Congress rarin' to hit trail

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The 103rd Congress brimming with new faces, prepared to go to work Monday as Democratic leaders awaited President-elect Clinton's plans for fortifying the economy and shrinking record budget deficits.
Lawmakers are to be sworn in today and face almost immediate work on everything from getting the new president's Cabinet in place to handling a series of ethics controversies.
But most of all, Democratic legislators want to get off to a fast, productive start, and they want one of their early targets to be the economy, which remains far from robust and a chief public concern.
"The American people view the economy as the number one priority of business for the new administration and the 103rd Congress," said Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn. "We both have an obligation to move."
Sasser and other Democrats said Monday that they still did not know what programs Clinton would decide to cut or beef up and what tax changes he might make as part of his expected economic revitalization package.
Among Clinton's decisions are whether to seek a short-term stimulus package containing job-creating public works spending and tax breaks for business, and what sort of deficit-reduction plans to pursue.
Clinton studied policy options during his visit to Hilton Head Island, S.C., which he was ending Monday. He has said he will have his proposals ready shortly after his Jan. 20 inauguration. He will discuss his plans with his economic advisers in Little Rock, Ark., on Thursday.
President Bush, in office for barely two more weeks, planned to unveil his own $1.5 trillion fiscal 1994 budget on Wednesday.
Aides have said it will offer no policy changes. Instead, it will simply state what spending and taxation would look like if no changes were made for the next five years.
In the thick of things will be Congress' biggest freshman class since 1949. More than one-fourth of the 435-member House Please see CONGRESS/A2

2 Idahoans among dead at Cancun

Dallas Morning News
MEXICO CITY — U.S. officials said Monday 14 Americans — two of them reportedly from Idaho — were among the 24 people killed Sunday in the fiery explosion of a Cancun tourist bus bound for the Mayan ruins of Chichen Itza.
The process of identifying the victims and notifying their next of kin was slowed by the "buried" condition of the bodies, said Brian Phipps, a spokesman with the U.S. Consulate in Merida, the capital of Yucatan state.
The tragedy came at the height of the tourist season, when thousands of foreigners flock to the Caribbean waters of Cancun — Mexico's most popular and most expensive resort — and take day trips to the ruins of ancient Mayan sites. Another 28 people were injured in the bus crash.
Police said the tour-bus driver, who was injured, had been speeding along a road made slippery by rain. The bus hit an electric pole that housed a high-voltage transformer, which fell on the bus and set it on fire. The fire spread, causing an explosion of diesel fuel within minutes.
U.S. consular officials pushed to the scene to try and help identify the dead so that next-of-kin could be notified. That task was handled by U.S. State Department officials in Washington.
State Department spokesman Gary Sheffer said late Monday afternoon that two American victims still had not been identified because their bodies were badly buried and because no personal documents were found in the bus, which was gutted.
He identified nine Americans who were killed, including seven from Wisconsin. The Wisconsin victims were James, Joanne and Stephanie Junk of Eau Claire; Jean and Tiffany Holtz; Nanette Waldman and Darla Daroff of Neenah. Sheffer said that Graham Kulus of Garfield, N.H., and Mark Bradford of Leeds, Mass., also were killed.
Two victims from Idaho and one from Minnesota have been identified, but their relatives have not yet been located so their names cannot be released, he said on Monday. Ages and some Please see BUS/A2

Washington court refuses to block Dodd hanging

The Associated Press
WALLA WALLA, Wash. — The state Supreme Court on Monday refused to halt the execution of Wesley Allan Dodd, apparently clearing the last obstacle in the convicted child killer's quest to be hanged for his crimes.
The execution's opponents said they planned no further action on Dodd's behalf.
In a one-sentence order, the court upheld Dodd's death sentence, which was to be carried out shortly after 1 a.m. MST today.
"In doing so, the justices rejected a motion brought by 26 Washington residents that had argued that hanging was cruel and unusual punishment banned by the state and U.S. constitutions.
"It's over," said Timothy Ford, a lawyer who represented those opposed to the hanging. "He's going to be executed to morrow. He's going to be hanged."
Dodd, who killed three children, has waived all appeals. He has said he chose hanging over lethal injection because he hanged his youngest victim's body in a closet after killing him. He has said he must die because "I know I will kill again."
The court voted 7-1 not to halt the hanging. It would be Washington's first execution since 1963.
Death penalty opponents staged prayer meetings, vigils and demonstrations across the state. One group mounted a 24-hour vigil in the snow outside the prison.
"We come to pray for justice and not for vengeance," said Magdalena Rosco-Avila, Amnesty International's western regional director.
Dodd was visited by a clergyman Monday morning, said prison spokesman Jerry Davis. Prison officials would reveal few other details.
Dodd, a 31-year-old shipping clerk, was sentenced to death in 1990 for the 1989 sex murders of three boys in the Vancouver area in southwestern Washington. The crimes were so grisly that some of the jurors who sentenced him sought psychiatric help afterward.
Dodd had a long history of indecent exposure and molestation cases, including one in Idaho. In that case, at Lewiston, he pleaded guilty to a charge of "lewd and lascivious contact with a minor" but a possible 10-year sentence was commuted to one year with counseling.
Before the Supreme Court in Olympia, Ford argued that hanging amounts to torture.
"Dodd has chosen hanging because he wants to be treated equally cruel," Ford said. "The question is: Can he consent to being tortured by the state?"
Dodd's attorney, Darrell Lee, responded that the cruelest thing to do, other than delaying the execution, would be to kill Dodd by lethal injection.

U.N. chief calls for conciliation as gunfire echoes

The Associated Press
ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali told Somali warlords Monday the time was ripe for reconciliation, but his presence sparked a demonstration in which at least one person died.
It was the third time in five days that angry crowds have gathered in response to the U.N. chief's presence. On Sunday, Boutros-Ghali took refuge from a crowd in Mogadishu that pelted U.N. headquarters with rocks and garbage. On Thursday, he was jeered and spat at in Sarajevo, the capital of war-torn Bosnia.
In Washington, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said some U.S. troops will be withdrawn from Somalia by the end of January, even though the starving African nation remains a "nasty, dangerous neighborhood."
Monday's demonstration, held four miles from the peace conference site, turned bloody when gunmen — in a crowd of students protesting U.N. involvement in a breakaway Ethiopian province — exchanged gunfire with security forces.
Vice Interior Minister Kinfe Gebre-Medhin said one person was killed, 16 people — including three police officers — were wounded by gunfire and 100 others received other injuries in the melee. Witnesses said four people were slain. The differing figures could not be reconciled.
The U.S. Army sent investigators Monday to Kismayu to probe Saturday's murder of a British relief worker Sean Devereux and the deaths of 15 Somalis found in a mass grave.
Devereux worked for UNICEF, which withdrew its three remaining foreign workers from Kismayu until their safety could be assured. Somali employees kept the agency's Kismayu operation going under U.S. protection, U.N. officials said. Clan warfare and looting have combined with drought to create a famine that killed at least 350,000 Somalis last year. Another 2 million are considered at risk of starvation.
About 11,000 U.S. troops are in Somalia to protect relief supplies, in addition to soldiers from France, Canada, Italy and other countries. The troops have not attempted a widespread sweep to seize weapons, as Boutros-Ghali has urged.
Boutros-Ghali said the peace conference, which continues today, would attempt to prepare for a full-fledged national reconciliation conference for Somalia.
Somalia's two main warlords, Ali Mahdi Mohamed and Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, attended the peace conference.
"I am for reconciliation, unity, justice and development," Aidid told reporters after Monday's session. He said Somalia's armed factions must "prepare the groundwork" before a date and place can be set for a national reconciliation conference.
"We have a great responsibility, and we have to solve our problems," he said.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service issued a winter weather advisory for Monday night, predicting blowing and drifting snow for northern Idaho.

More snow is expected today, with temperatures climbing from the teens to near 30 degrees.

Central Idaho also was expecting snow Friday night and early today, with the mercury dipping to 5-10 degrees overnight. It was much the same for southern Idaho.

A few snow flurries fell over the Magic Valley, where skies were mostly cloudy much of the day. Morning lows in the area were near zero, or below. Afternoon temperatures moderated into the 20s.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 39 degrees at Emmet. Fairfield reported the coldest at 13 degrees below zero.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the highest temperature was 84 degrees at Naples and Sarasota, Fla. The lowest was 21 degrees below zero at Alamosa, Colo.

Visible planets

Evening: Venus, Saturn, Mars. Morning: Jupiter, Mars, Mercury.

Floods, rain from Texas to Michigan; snow over Northwest

The Associated Press

Residents were evacuated from homes along McKenzie Creek in southern Kentucky, low-lying areas around creek in southeast Missouri were flooded, stranding residents in their homes and forcing schools to close.

Up to 2 feet of water covered roads in parts of southeast Michigan.

On Monday afternoon, rain drenched the Great Lakes region, including the Mississippi Valley, parts of the Midwest and the Gulf Coast states.

Heavier rainfall for the six-hour period ending at 1 p.m. EST included 2.50 inches at Little Rock, Ark.

Elsewhere, unseasonably warm temperatures prevailed over the Ohio Valley and the Northeast. In West Virginia, readings of 74 in Charleston and 69 in Parkersburg tied records set in 1950, the National Weather Service said.

The low temperature for the lower 48 states early Monday was 21 degrees below zero at Alamosa, Colo.

— 110 members — will be newcomers. So will 14 of the 100 senators since Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, Clinton's choice as treasury secretary, is replaced.

Among the newcomers are two Idaho Republicans — Rep. Mike Crapo and Sen. Rick Warren.

Despite the preoccupation with the economy, other matters — and battles — awaited the gathering lawmakers.

Minority Democrats have proposed letting the House have nonvoting delegates — cast votes on the floor, with minor restrictions. The five, all of whom are Democrats, represent Washington, D.C., American Samoa, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

If approved Tuesday, the plan would in effect halve the 10-seat gain Republicans made in November's voting. GOP leaders, arguing that the proposal is unconstitutional, say they will challenge it in court if it is approved.

They also said the fight could cause hard feelings that would carry over.

Top House GOP leader quits post

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top House Republican resigned his leadership post Monday, complaining that the GOP hierarchy was becoming more "hard right" and hurting the party.

Rep. Steve Gunderson of Wisconsin, chief deputy whip for four years, said the new GOP House leaders "do not represent mainstream Republicans."

"I support the majority of their agenda, but I do not support their opposition, a strategy that simply does not suit my style of political cooperation," Gunderson said.

Gunderson has been a deputy to House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the number two in party leadership. Gingrich declined comment on Gunderson's resignation.

Others within the GOP's shrinking moderate wing voiced similar complaints a month ago with the election of the new House leadership.

to go to school to learn state law. I'd pick the local man. I know he's a good man and he's locally known."

Councilman Rocky Jackson said he also supported Birmingham.

Council members Janet Burdick and Eric Brooks left City Hall at noon. Ostler adjourned the meeting. Reached by phone later, both said they supported Dahl.

"Both men were qualified, but Dahl is in management now and has been continuously," said Burdick. "I treated police officer who moved to Jerome from California."

"I just can't understand why Birmingham would go from a commander in Twin Falls 16 to a patrolman position in a much smaller town," Brooks said. Birmingham left his Twin Falls job in 1989 and later sued the city, alleging he had been forced to resign.

Burdick cited Dahl's experience, background and education. She said she spent some time in California last week, visiting Dahl's department.

"They were very supportive of him — I couldn't get them, to say one negative thing about him," she said. "Does he have any shortcomings and that is he's not local boy."

Brooks said, "It's that good-old-boy thing again — but a good-old-boy was disqualified. I would have voted for him anyway."

Ostler said he had received many calls from people and they "all wanted a local man." He added, "They wouldn't let an outsider succeed even if I did appoint one."

In a telephone interview, Dahl said, "I certainly will apply again. I was prepared for any decision but this one, but they are the city fathers. I have the Lord on my side, so I'll re-apply," he said.

Birmingham could not be reached for comment.

homeowners were not available.

The Canadian Embassy in Mexico City confirmed that two Canadians were among the dead. Brazilians, Taiwanese and several Mexicans also were among the injured and killed.

Father John Hayes, an American clergyman who lives in Cancun, said those who survived were thrown from the bus on first impact, while those who died were trapped when the transformer fell. Survivors tried in vain to pull family and friends from the wreckage before it was too late.

"The main problem was after the accident," Hayes said. "Many survivors were thrown clear because the roof of the bus came off and the bus landed on its side and they could crawl out. But then the transformer fell and caused sparking and the explosion."

The incident happened on a flat stretch of highway. The bus was described as an older model that had been renovated extensively on the inside.

One Canadian survivor, Jerry Knobel, told Canadian television reporters that he and others tried unsuccessfully to douse the fire before the bus exploded.

"We put it out twice but the diesel fuel kept dripping and it just started bigger fires," he said. "We pulled out as many as we could."

Those with relatively light injuries, such as broken ribs, were taken by passing cars to hospitals in Cancun. Two people with more serious injuries were flown to the United States for treatment.

Yeltsin may have to wait in line for Clinton

Briefly

School decision awaits Clintons' child

LITTLE-ROCK, Ark. — Chelsea Clinton and her mom went school shopping in Washington after the family's South Carolina vacation, but no decision has been made on whether she'll attend a private or public school, Clinton aides said Monday. They want to make a decision that is best for Chelsea, and they will send Clinton communications director George Stephanopoulos. "And we'll have an announcement, I hope, pretty soon on that," Stephanopoulos said. Hillary Clinton and 12-year-old Chelsea stopped off in Washington over the weekend on the way home from a six-day vacation on Hilton Head Island. The two visited Sidwell Friends, a private school in northwest Washington, on Sunday, aides said.

Cleanup crews attack sweet mess

SHELBY, N.C. — Crews cleaning up after a truck wreck sought the advice of state experts, but even they weren't sure how to handle this spill: of chocolate. The truck slid off a road Sunday and struck a fence, spilling about half of its cargo — 85 drums of chocolate syrup and 50 bags of cocoa. Chocolate was made deep in roadside ditches. The driver, who was treated and released, was charged with driving while impaired, according to the state Highway Patrol.

Satellite probes invisible mass evidence

PHOENIX — A new X-ray satellite has detected evidence in seldom-studied galaxies of the invisible matter that astronomers think could make up most of the mass in the universe. The research provides fresh support for the theory that the universe, which astronomers believe has been expanding rapidly since a Big Bang some 10 billion years ago, eventually will become stationary. Four astronomers announced Monday that X-ray studies by a satellite called ROSAT found a huge cloud of gas — with more mass than 500 billion suns — that has been heated to some 18 million degrees amid a trio of obscure galaxies known as the NGC2300 group.

Nevada swears in 1st woman justice

CARSON CITY — Miriam Shearing was sworn in Monday as the first woman to serve as a justice on the Nevada Supreme Court. Oaths of office were administered to Mrs. Shearing and also to Justice Charles Springer, who was re-elected to a third term on the high court. "The position of judge is an isolating one, particularly when you're entering an all-male bastion," Mrs. Shearing said at her investiture, where she received a standing ovation.

FBI joins Florida search in racist attack

TAMPA, Fla. — The FBI joined the hunt Monday for three white men who allegedly abducted a black man, took him to a remote area, robbed him, then doused him with gasoline and set him ablaze. The president of Tampa's NAACP chapter called the attack a "lynching by fire." Investigators said the attackers used racial epithets, but it wasn't immediately clear whether they were racially motivated. Christopher Wilson, 31, suffered second- and third-degree burns over about 40 percent of his body during the assault. New Year's morning he was in serious but stable condition Monday at Tampa General Hospital awaiting skin grafting surgery set for Tuesday. Wilson, who works in New York for a New York Stock Exchange firm and was visiting his girlfriend, went to a shopping center near her home to buy a newspaper Friday morning. Compiled from wire reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boris Yeltsin has made the most aggressive pitch for a summit, but an early 1993 meeting with Bill Clinton is high on the agenda for most foreign leaders. The Russian president may well end up in line behind America's Western allies. "It's clear the U.S. Russia relationship is very important," Robert Hunter, a national security official in the last Democratic White House, said Monday. "It is also clear that there are other relationships that are very important."

No longer, suggested Hunter and other analysts; should the relationship between Moscow and Washington overshadow all others. At the Moscow ceremony Sunday during which he and President Bush signed a historic arms reduction treaty, Yeltsin said he had asked Clinton for an early meeting "because any lull in the bilateral relations between the superpowers would give cause for concern."

The Russian government kept up the pressure on Monday with a spokesman saying Yeltsin and Clinton had talked again by telephone and stressed the need for a working meeting. Clinton had said Sunday that he looked forward "to meeting with him early." But neither side was talking specific dates. When Clinton spokesman George Stephanopoulos was asked on Monday to define "early," he replied: "We hope to do it sometime this year."

Some form of "early" or "soon" is the standard Clinton response whenever he is asked when he might meet with key foreign leaders. For example, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel is pressing for a session with Clinton and the president-elect said he thought it would take place "pretty soon."

Raymond Garthoff, a State Department official in the Nixon and Carter administrations, said there was "symbolic importance to meeting with our old allies before meeting with a new friend and possible future ally."

By that reasoning, British Prime Minister John Major, French President Francois Mitterrand, and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl are all likely to sit down with Clinton before Yeltsin does.

Protestors march against Sen. Bob Packwood Monday.

Demonstrators seek to unseat Packwood

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than two dozen sign-carrying, chanting demonstrators asked Monday that the Senate refuse to seat Sen. Bob Packwood and vowed to keep up the pressure if he's sworn in, as expected, as a member of the 103rd Congress.

The Oregon Republican has admitted making unwanted sexual advances to his Senate employees and others but has resisted calls for his resignation.

The National Organization for Women organized the demonstration outside the Russell Senate Office Building and presented the Senate with several petitions from Oregon residents that request Packwood not be seated Tuesday.

The petitions contend that Packwood defrauded the voters and "submitted derogatory information about his accusers, which delayed publication of a news story about his conduct until after the November election."

Packwood was narrowly elected to his fifth term.

Somalia mission nears 30th day

BALDIA, Somalia (AP) — Moodow Nuurow trudged into town the other morning, a day ahead of George Bush.

She had walked 50 miles, day and night, carrying and leading four small children. She left two dead ones — a boy and a girl — in her village, Odlow.

"There's no life in Odlow," she said at the feeding center, where she finally found help. "It has no water, no food, I didn't know where to go. But I had to leave."

It has been almost one month since the Marines hit the beach in Somalia on Dec. 9, opening a unique offensive to deliver food aid at the point of a gun.

Since then, the international aid agencies and the U.S. military have more than earned the "well-fore" they got from President Bush during his Dec. 17 visit.

Marine escorts have reopened the emergency food pipeline. Relief organizations are planning food distributions in the next few days.

African people are trekking back to their villages, knowing that food awaits.

"We're a little ahead of schedule,"

Bush assured Marines on his visit to Baldia, heart of the starvation belt.

But as Moodow Nuurow's desperate journey showed, the final battle of the Somalia campaign will be a long one.

Somalis are still dying over the horizon — out of reach of the food trucks. Villages are still vulnerable to armed gangs who were driven from major towns by the Marines and other international troops.

And the strategy of Operation Restore Hope still looks patched together, day by day. Although aid groups are laying plans for extending their reach, they are uncertain about how those plans would mesh with the military's.

"The next phase is supposed to be securing the countryside," said Feenell, the U.S. military's international official in Baldia. "But what does that mean? Will the Marines actually base themselves in villages?"

The Somali disaster — drought combined with civil war combined with international looting and extortion — left an estimated 350,000 dead in 1992 and a nation in ruins.

No one knows how many are still dying. The truck that once picked up

Judge finds drifter insane, innocent in church fires

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A drifter who confessed to setting fire to churches in Florida, Tennessee and Colorado was found innocent by reason of insanity Monday and ordered committed to a federal mental hospital.

U.S. District Judge Maurice Paul said the evidence showed Patrick Lee Frank, 47, had set the 17 Florida church fires listed in a federal indictment.

He was charged with burning buildings engaged in interstate commerce. Ministers testified about church materials that crossed state lines.

The fires caused more than $10 million in damages and destroyed some landmarks.

"He meant to burn the churches to the ground. He wanted to burn the churches to stop the people inside from tormenting him," Paul said.

But the judge added that evidence also showed Frank was insane when he traveled around northern Florida setting the fires. Doctors have said Frank suffers from paranoid schizophrenia.

Frank was "unable to appreciate the wrongfulness of his acts," the judge said.

The judge ordered Frank to a federal mental hospital, which will report his condition to the court every six months. The judge said Frank would be a danger to others and to property if he were released.

Frank's attorney, Assistant Public Defender Tom Miller, said it was likely Frank would spend years in federal custody, "unless there is some miracle drug that is not available that would make people feel more comfortable to say that he is cured."

Utah skiers spend cold night on mountain

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Two skiers from Salt Lake City spent a cold, snowy night east of Powder Mountain ski resort after they became disoriented and lost.

Weber County Sheriff Craig Dearden said Scott Stensburg, 28, and James Siehl, 27, were found in good condition Sunday afternoon about a half mile from the ski area after the pair had started hiking back.

more than 150 bodies each morning in Baldia now collects a couple of dozen. But the mortality rate in Baldia does not necessarily reflect what's happening in countless Odloos across southern Somalia.

"There are many people dying in villages that are not being reached because the violence continues," said Mohamed Ali Aden, acting governor of the Baldia region.

The aid networks operating out of Mogadishu, Baldia and six other provincial towns do not cover all the famine-stricken territory.

Food trucks moving out of Baldia and Hoddur under Marine escort leave uncovered a 60-mile swath between the two towns, noted Mohamed Ali Aden, chairman of the Baldia relief committee. Villages on the edge of the aid network are unlikely to share with those farther inland.

One "hungry village" recently attacked another north of Baldia, and food deliveries are still looted sporadically, aid workers say. Some refugees who went back home returned to Baldia because of the continuing violence, they say. "We need help," said Aden, "but in this area the Marines are only in Baldia."

The U.S. military will reach deeper into the countryside through such projects as upgrading the primitive road from Kismayo, on the coast, to the town of Lugh 200 miles north, said Marine Col. Fred Peck, U.S. military spokesman.

But the U.S. forces are not about to

Former All-Pro tackle dons judicial garb

The Associated Press

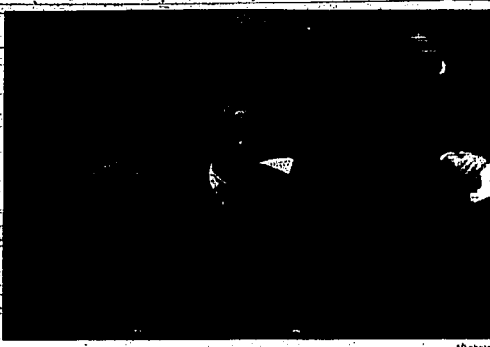

ST. PAUL, Minn. — More than a decade after he hung up his jersey and cleats, pro football Hall of Famer Alan Page put on a new uniform Monday — the robes of a Minnesota Supreme Court justice.

Page, 47, became the first black to serve on the highest court in a state with only a 2.2 percent black population. He won a seat on the state's highest court with 62 percent of the vote in the November general election.

The former star for the Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears stressed the importance of "work" and setting goals before an audience that included political and legal leaders as well as 10 fourth-graders invited by Page. "One of the things I've learned over time is you can never have too many winners," Page said in a brief speech after taking the oath of office.

Gov. Arne Carlson presided over the ceremony. Wellstone and the other six members of the Supreme Court were among the judges, lawyers and public officials who crowded into O'Shaughnessy Auditorium at the College of St. Catherine for the hour-long ceremony.

The oath of office was administered by Judge Damon J. Keith of Detroit, a member of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Minnesota Supreme Court Justice Alan Page speaks after being sworn Monday in as Minnesota's 77th associate justice in St. Paul, Minn.

In an interview before the ceremony, Page played down the significance of becoming the first black on the state Supreme Court. "That's not something I've spent a lot of time thinking out or being concerned about," he said. But Page said the day was important because "I now get to the point where I'm able to serve, which is what I've been looking for all along."

Page said he invited four graduates from a Minneapolis school and a St. Paul school because he wanted youngsters to understand the importance of hard work.

"Success comes with hard work, it comes with preparation. And when you do prepare, then you can achieve your hopes and dreams," he said. "That's something that I think all children need to see — to see that things just don't happen. My having been elected was not a matter of luck."

Page won a spot on the ballot just a month after he successfully challenged a law under which Carlson extended the term of Associate Justice Lawrence Yetka for 22 months so Yetka could serve until he reached the mandatory retirement age of 70.

A native of Canton, Ohio, Page was a first-round draft choice of the Vikings in 1967 after he helped lead undefeated Notre Dame to a national collegiate championship in 1966.

But his greatest fame came in professional football.

An outstanding defensive tackle, Page in 1971 became the first defensive player to win the National Football League's Most Valuable Player Award.

Kings' star expected back on ice Wednesday

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The Great One is returning to the ice, and the timing couldn't be better for the slumping Los Angeles Kings.

Wayne Gretzky, the NHL's all-time leading scorer, has been cleared by team doctors to play and will see his first action this season Wednesday night when the Kings meet the Tampa Bay Lightning in the Forum. "I was announced Monday. I'm obviously pretty excited," Gretzky said at a Forum news conference.

"Yesterday, I went through some tests to see if I was in physical condition to play hockey. The tests were fine. I just feel like I'm physically ready to play."

Because of a herniated thoracic disk, Gretzky hasn't played since the Kings were eliminated from the playoffs by the Edmonton Oilers last April.

Sophomore Ohio State back out for career with NFL

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State sophomore tight end Robert Smith, who had quit the team for a year because he said a coach told him to attend practice instead of classes, left the team again Monday to try for a career in the NFL.

Smith, who holds the school's freshman rushing record, decided to give up his two remaining years of eligibility to make himself available to the NFL.

Underclassmen must notify the NFL by Wednesday of their desire to be eligible for the April draft.

Crusaders rip Eagles

NNC depth proves too much for understaffed CSI squad to handle

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Advantages in depth and experience helped Northwest Nazarene College post a 41-59 win over the College of Southern Idaho women Monday night.

The Crusaders started an all-upperclassmen lineup and went 10 players deep — through the contest.

CSI, with only seven players available to start, had to use its second-highest, Ita Muavui took the floor wearing a knee brace and limped more noticeably throughout the first half. She spent the last 20 minutes of the game on the bench with an ice bag on her left knee.

Without the 6-1 freshman, the Golden Eagles had problems dealing with NNC in the lane. Crusader post players Stephanie Arland and Becky Woods combined for 39 points.

The Eagles outrebounded NNC on a 3-1 clip for the first 10 minutes of play, but lost the battle of the boards overall. "They just had too many people," said CSI Coach Ben Stroud. "When we were fresh, we rebounded with them. When we were tired, they hammered us. It was a physical game under the boards."

The Crusaders, who won the teams' first meeting by more than double Monday's margin, pushed their lead from 11 points to 16 in the second half while CSI built a string of six missed free throws.

Sparked by a two and a 3-point shot from Debbie Dingman, the Eagles scored seven unanswered points to trail 60-57 with 5:48 to play. But NNC collected the next eight tallies for a 68-52 edge with 3:11 to play.

Bills relish comeback against Oilers

The Associated Press

Buffalo Bills kicker Steve Christie is mobbed after kicking the game-winning field goal in overtime Sunday.

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Still savoring the biggest comeback in NFL history, the Buffalo Bills hope their playoff win over Houston buries their reputation for bickering.

"Four years ago, there were some words exchanged between some players on our team and ever since then, we've been the bickering Bills and it ain't true," Levy said after Buffalo's staggering 41-38 victory over the Houston Oilers in the AFC playoffs Sunday.

Levy said Monday he hopes the shocking win erases the image some still have of the Bills as a team with a lot of internal tension. "This is as cohesive a football team as there is in the National Football League and it has been," he said.

Certainly no one could have predicted Buffalo's spectacular comeback from a 32-point third quarter deficit against the Oilers.

Not Levy, who flunked it to winning the lottery; Nat, owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr., who admitted he was just hoping for a few touchdowns to "make it respectable."

Luck obviously played a part in Buffalo's second-half surge, especially when officials missed Don Beebe stepping out of bounds before he caught a touchdown pass that cut the Houston lead to 35-17.

And certainly Houston's utter disintegration set up the Bills heroes that followed.

But Oilers' defensive end Sean Jones pointed to the Bills heroes that followed.

49er edges Steeler back for top honor

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Steve Young, who surged out of the shadow of a superstar to have a super season, was selected Monday as The Associated Press 1992 Offensive Player of the Year.

The oft-maligned Young, a backup to Joe Montana for four years and subject of trade rumors when the season began, led the 49ers to the best record in the league, 14-2.

He also led the NFL in passing with a 107 rating, 25 touchdowns and seven interceptions, completing 66.7 percent of his passes.

Such stats, and Young's unquestioned leadership amidst uncertainty concerning Montana, made him a worthy recipient of the award Montana won in 1989.

"It's a fantastic honor. The funny thing is I feel like, as a team, we can even get better," Young said. "To get something like that, what it tells me is we have 11 guys on the same page. And in football, there's nothing more satisfying than knowing that we've got 11 guys that are going in the same direction as one unit."

Young received 28 of 80 votes cast by a nationwide panel of media members. Running back Barry Foster of Pittsburgh, who tied an NFL mark with 12-100-yard games, was next with 24, and Ermit Smith of Dallas, the league's leading rusher, got 17 votes.

The contrast in Young as a performer and a leader was obvious from 1991, when he replaced the injured Montana and the team played inconsistently, going 10-6 and not making the playoffs. There was sentiment around the league that Steve Bono, the third-string quarterback, might be better suited than Young for the 49ers' offense.

That talk subsided, then disappeared this season as Young played so well.

Touted Cougar leaves school early for NFL

The Associated Press

PULLMAN, Wash. — Washington State quarterback Drew Hedcoe will skip his last year of college eligibility and turn pro. Hedcoe said Monday he has decided that entering April's NFL draft makes more sense than staying in college.

"I just feel like I need a new challenge for my skills," he said in a news conference. "I want to take my skills to the next level and see what I can do playing football at the highest level."

He's expected to be one of the top picks in the April draft. New England has first pick and the Seattle Seahawks are second.

Hedcoe said he would risk injury if he remained another year, which could hurt his NFL draft status.

"This year I feel I have an opportunity to be drafted pretty highly," he said. "I don't feel like I'm leaving the school hanging. ... We have another great quarterback."

Hedcoe said Monday he has a backup quarterback, Mike Pattinson can help Washington State keep winning. The Cougars were 9-3, including a victory over

Remember winter? It's what sometimes follows autumn

During our long drought, some Magic Valley folks seem to have forgotten how to handle winter. Some of us are reacting poorly to the frozen muck that covers every horizontal surface.

For starters, why is that muck allowed to cover so many horizontal surfaces for so long? We don't mean roads; local street and highway crews have labored faithfully to clear the way from here to there, and they deserve praise and thanks.

We're talking about private parking lots. Too many are left in deplorable shape long after the snow has stopped falling. Windblown, packed down by traffic - repeatedly thrown and refrozen, these places become gleaming moonscapes that can dump the unsuspecting pedestrian on his backside - brittle-boned senior citizens barely dare to leave home.

How absurdly a little plowing and sanding?

Of course, no amount of plowing can negate the effects of a full-strength - winter. That means everybody needs a little extra common sense - especially behind the wheel.

We don't want to offend anyone, but some Magic Valley drivers behave as though they just moved here from Bermuda. Naturally, we don't mean you. You're a fine driver. We're talking about other people - like that guy whose car will be sliding sideways toward you today. Here are some tips you can flip out and hand to him while you both wait for the tow truck:

For heaven's sake, slow down. Yes, time is money. But so is body and fender work. So go early and avoid the crunch.

Back off. Tailgating at this time of year is a great way to make new friends - like paramedics and insurance adjusters. Double the normal space between your car and the one in front.

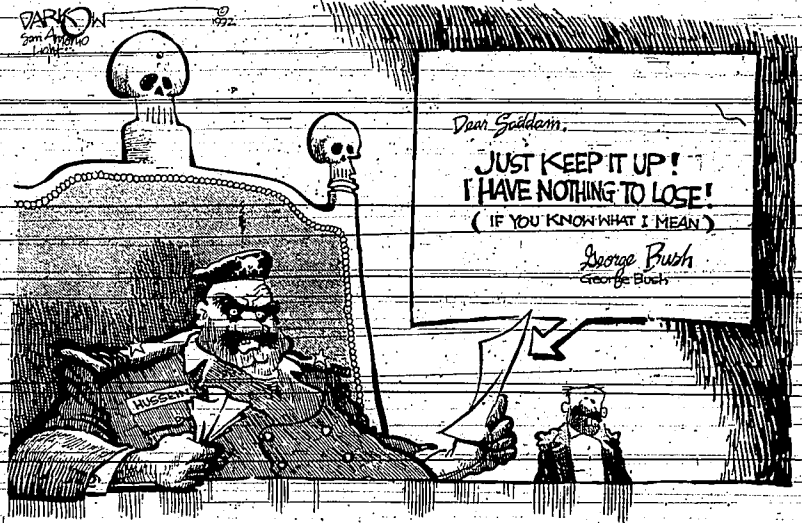

Think ahead. On an icy road, your family jalopy is about as maneuverable as the Titanic. Remember your physics teacher's body in motion tends to land in the ditch. So allow more time for stopping, turning and pulling into traffic.

Signal, for crying out loud. Is it just us, or does it seem as though automakers have been forgetting to put turn signals on the new cars? Unexpected turns and lane changes can make driving a challenge at any time of year, but on icy roads a surprise can be particularly exciting.

Don't be smug just because you have a wheel drive. It's a swell feeling if you want to go, but it's no help if you want to stop.

We're sorry if this all sounds circumlocutory. We don't want anyone to think we don't like the snow. We're delighted to see it. After all, a snowy winter means a beautiful summer.

But that'll be small comfort if you're still in traction in June.

Gun control doesn't work

As deaths from rampant gun violence mount and city-dwellers from Boston to Los Angeles learn to distinguish the pop of a pistol from the blast of a shotgun, Americans rightly insist on action to combat the national crime epidemic.

But the solution put forward by gun-control advocates - a national waiting period or handgun purchases and a ban on assault weapons - will fail.

Opponents of gun control, formerly limited to basing their argument on the Second Amendment's right to bear arms, now can cite a large body of recent social science research that dispels the myth that gun control cuts down on crime. Much of this research has been produced by scholars who once believed that gun control was an obvious solution to crime.

The Carter administration, for example, provided a major research grant to sociology professor James D. Wright and his colleagues Peter Rossi and Kathleen Daly in the hope of building a case for comprehensive federal gun restrictions. When the researchers produced their report for the National Institute of Justice in 1982, they delivered a document quite different from the one they expected to write. Carefully reviewing all existing research, the three scholars found no persuasive evidence that America's 20,000 gun-control laws had reduced criminal violence.

The most thorough study of the efficacy of gun control has been performed by Florida State University's Gary Kleck, who analyzed data for all 170 U.S. cities with a population of more than 100,000, testing for the impact of 19 different types of gun control on suicides, accidents, and five different types of crime. Kleck, a liberal Democrat and a member of the American Civil Liberties Union, found the only control that reduced crime was a strict penalty for carrying an illegal gun, which seemed to lower the robbery rate. Waiting periods, licensing systems and registration had no impact.

In another National Institute of Justice study, this one involving the habits of America's felons, Wright and Rossi interviewed felony-prisoners in 10 states. They found gun-control laws had no effect on the ability of criminals to obtain guns. Only 12 percent of criminals, and only 7 percent of the criminals specializing in handgun crime, had acquired their weapon at a store.

Of those, about one quarter had not brought the gun but stolen it, and a large number of the rest had probably procured their guns through a surrogate buyer or on the black market. Waiting periods, because they now are the most-discussed method of deterring gun crime, deserve special attention. Although the waiting-period initiative is often called the "Brady Bill," it would not have prevented John Hinckley from shooting Ronald Reagan and his press secretary James Brady.

When Hinckley bought two handguns in October 1981, he had no felony record and no public record of mental illness. The routine background checks proposed by the Brady Bill would have turned up nothing on him. And since Hinckley bought the guns more than five months in advance, a one-week wait would not have made any difference.

Waiting periods can cost lives, too, preventing people from protecting themselves against criminal attack while they wait. In September 1990, a mail carrier named Catherine Hett of Charlotte, N.C., went to the police to obtain permission to buy a handgun. Her ex-boyfriend had previously robbed her, assaulted her several times and raped her. The clerk at the sheriff's office informed her that processing a gun permit would take two to four weeks. "I told her I'd be dead by then," Latta later recalled. That afternoon, she bought an illegal $20 semiautomatic pistol on the street. Five hours later, her ex-boyfriend attacked her outside her house. She shot him dead. The county prosecutor decided not to prosecute Latta for either the self-defense homicide or the illegal gun.

A Wisconsin woman, Bonnie Elmarsi, wasn't so lucky. On March 5, 1991, she called a firearms instructor worried because her husband - who was subject to a restraining order to stay away from her - had been threatening her and her children. When she asked the instructor about getting a handgun, the instructor explained that Wisconsin has a 48-hour waiting period. Elmarsi and her two children were murdered by her husband 24 hours later. Gun-control advocates claim their only concern is bringing to a halt the violent crime plaguing America. If this is the case, the evidence should lead them to conclude that gun control is not the answer - and can in many cases make matters worse.

David B. Kopel is director of the Second Amendment Project at the Independence Institute, a Colorado-based think tank. This essay is adapted from the Winter 1992 issue of Policy Review, the quarterly journal of The Heritage Foundation.

Giving Quayle presidency has its advantages

Jeffrey A. Frank

Much has been made of George Bush's behavior as he exits the office he has cherished. Those who know him best, and admire him most, insist he is working now to leave his name on history. This explains the relief operation in Somalia, the rush to sign an arms agreement with Russia, and what may be in time explain other Bush deeds that need charitable interpretations. No doubt, Bush's able advisers have presented all sorts of suggestions intended to make the outgoing president look like a splendid, thoughtful human, whose instincts lead him to do what is proper and generous. But they probably overlooked the most obvious idea of all - a way for Bush to give the greatest gift he can bestow on another human; his office.

The idea is to surrender the presidency to his faithful companion, Dan Quayle. At first, Bush might exclaim, "No way, buck!" His fabled patriotic demeanor might crack as an aide timidly suggested that on, say, Jan. 15, Bush simply scribble a one-line note to secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, requesting the presidency.

If someone - no names! - were to need a pardon for a certain lapse in the Iran-Contra affair, or perhaps for not telling all about passports belonging to Bill Clinton, Ross Perot and Clinton's mother, a President Quayle might be far better equipped to grant it than a President Bush.

No doubt, Bush would miss things during the Quayle era. He would experience the premature loss of his Washington house, big plane, ruffles and flourishes. He would no longer be able to retort, "If you're so smart, why aren't you president?" It will not be difficult for Bush; adjustments could be made. After all, President Quayle would need a vice president of his own and, under the Constitution, would be entitled to appoint one. What better choice than an experienced, reliable hand like George Herbert Walker Bush?

Keep editorials coming

Your Dec. 17 and Dec. 20 editorials on civil rights and political realities deserve wide reprinting and discussion. Your paper has identified a principal concern about our state's reputation for bigotry and the prospect of an ugly initiative campaign like Oregon suffered this year. I am always frustrated, but seldom able to find Idaho being run down by Americans who have heard only bad news about our tiny handful of mostly non-native bigots. We have much to be proud of in our attitudes about diversity. Unfortunately, as you correctly note, bad reputations are hard to shake.

Keeping editorials that remind us of why we have come as civilized citizens, and how far we still must go. KARL BROWN Boise

Bush compares to Hoover

The following letter was written before the election. I forgot to mail it. President Bush relates to Hoover more than he does to Harry Truman. In 1928, Hoover ran for president. Hoover ran against Al Smith. He was in much the same spot that Bush is in today. We were in a recession and everyone was worried about the future. President Hoover didn't really want to run but the party machine... For a while it looked as if Al Smith would win, the polls were all for him, but President Hoover won. Then the recession went into depression and things went from bad to worse. In 1929, the stock market went broke and believe me it was bad. But after about a year, people settled down and did what Americans have always done in a depression; they bootlegged their way through it. It was tough but we made it. It was never really over until World War II. We do have a choice. I don't think we can have another depression as long as we have Social Security. It is just possible that President Bush can hold things together for another four years and things would get better. We have all enjoyed spending other people's money. Let's keep it up. But history didn't repeat itself. Bush didn't win. Everyone knew after the 1928 election that if the Democrats had won, that we would not have had the Depression. So now we have a chance to see if they were right. Good luck. Bill. ELMO LEE Twin Falls

Nation
Some U.S. troops to head home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Monday that some U.S. troops will head home from Somalia by the end of this month, even though the surviving African nation remains a "hostile, dangerous neighborhood."

Most of the forces will remain beyond that time. The continued violence and unrest in Somalia make it difficult to predict when the operation will end.

Cheney

"There's still a lot of work to be done to provide for the kind of secure environment that we would like to be able to pass on to the U.S.," the secretary said in a forewell interview with several reporters.

Assessing the world's hot spots as he prepares to leave the Pentagon, Cheney warned Iraq's "aggression" against the U.S. President-elect Clinton's resolve. And he cautioned Clinton against deeper involvement in Yugoslavia without allied support.

Cheney denied a report that plans had been made to hand the Somalia operation over to U.N. authorities by Jan. 20, the day Clinton is sworn in to replace Bush.

"It's fair to say that by the end of the month we will have begun to reverse the flow... and begin to bring back to the U.S. some portions of the U.S. forces that have been deployed over there," Cheney said. "But that will be a beginning. We will by no means have a large number redeployed by then. It will start the process."

Queried about Iraq's continued testing of the U.N.-mandated, postwar sanctions, Cheney said, "It would be a big mistake for the U.S. to assume that there's going to be any change of policy" under a new administration.

Cheney pointed out that his designated successor, Rep. Les Aspin, had been in the White House at Capitol Hill in support of Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm, and predicted the incoming Democratic administration will take a "hard line" against any Iraqi violations.

Last week, a U.S. F-16 fighter jet downed an Iraqi MiG that had flown 20 miles inside the zone that had been established to protect Iraq's Kurdish minority from air attack.

Clinton can expect Saddam to continue, "pushing right up to the edge as he has from time to time since the end of the war," Cheney said.

"I think it would be a mistake for him to assume that things are going to be any different under Clinton than they've been under President Bush," Clinton said of Saddam Hussein.

On Yugoslavia, Cheney said he continues to oppose the notion of putting U.S. ground troops among the warring republics.

Since last summer, Clinton has denounced the Serbian policy of ethnic cleansing and has called for a tougher U.S. approach to help end the fighting.

But Cheney said the complexity of the region's problems and the consequences they hold for Europe means finding a solution for the regionally collective effort.

"This is not a unilateral U.S. effort."

"We are constrained to some extent because we are operating as part of an international coalition. That can be frustrating, but it can also be a source of great strength," Cheney said.

Mediators say Serbs hold up talks

GENEVA (AP) — Talks on ending the ethnic war in Bosnia-Terzegovina abruptly recessed Monday, and international mediators said the Serbs were holding up a compromise peace plan.

Cyrus Vance, the former U.S. secretary of state who represents the United Nations at the talks, said leaders of Bosnian Muslims, Serbs and Croats would resume negotiations Sunday.

A meeting had been planned for today. But Vance and Lord Owen, representative of the European Community, said Radovan Karadzic, leader of Bosnian Serbs, asked for time to review the mediators' proposal with other Serb leaders.

Karadzic appeared earlier in the talks that the Muslims were becoming dissatisfied with the Croats, their nominal battlefield allies, but increasing pressure was put on Karadzic as the day progressed. He spent most of the afternoon in talks with Vance and Owen.

At midday, Alija Izetbegovic,

U.N. chief feels heat of abuse

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — What began as a holiday field trip to support U.N. relief workers and peacekeepers in Bosnia and Somalia has turned into a nightmare for U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali.

The world's top diplomat, who personifies the renewed hope of a new world order, was jeered and spat at in Bosnia and forced to take refuge from garbage-throwing protesters in Somalia.

On Monday, at least one person was shot to death at an anti-U.N. demonstration in Ethiopia, where Boutros-Ghali is presiding over a peace conference of Somali leaders.

The violence capped a whirlwind tour of some hotspots where the U.N. is working on the front lines. Boutros-Ghali's apparent goal was to step away from the usual diplomatic circles and meet some of the people affected by U.N. policies.

It is a scapegoat for the United Nations' problems or a legitimate target for blame?

U.N. Ambassador Andre Erdos of Hungary and David Scheffer of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace had this advice for Boutros-Ghali: Don't take the protests too personally, but take a peek at the complaints behind them.

Erdos, a member of the Security Council, said the U.N. is paying the price for the increased profile it has assumed since the Cold War ended and the superpowers began concentrating to tackle regional conflicts.

"This should not be surprising or shocking, because we are dealing with much more complex situations than before," Erdos said.

But he urged Boutros-Ghali to look into the merits of the complaints he is hearing on the streets of the world's hotspots.

In Bosnia, Boutros-Ghali was criticized Thursday for hesitating to back foreign military intervention to protect Muslims from Serb attacks. Protesters in the capital Sarajevo shouted, "Ghali fascist! Ghali Hitler!"

Freezing cold kills in France

PARIS (AP) — Freezing Siberian air paroled over France for the past two weeks has killed at least 100 people, and doctors on Monday demanded more action from the government to deal with the cold wave.

For the first time this season, Paris' main subway station open for the homeless all night Sunday. The government announced a toll-free number for the homeless and Education Minister Jack Lang called on school and university administrators to throw open their doors for overnight lodging.

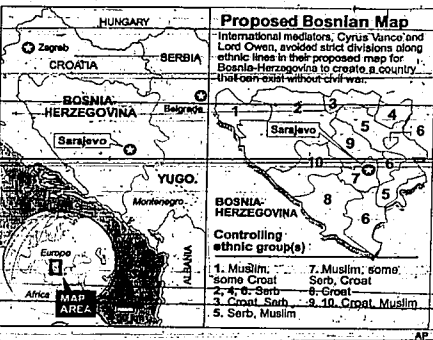

The Sorbonne university offered its corridors Monday night.

The efforts came too late for Jean-Luc Bier, 72, who froze to death Sunday in his plastic shelter in the village of Comoun.

Winds rip Australia

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Thousands of homes were homeless Monday as officials surveyed the damage from a cyclone that killed 13 people, flattened crops and cut telephone and electrical service.

Damage from cyclone Kina, which struck Fiji on Saturday, was expected to exceed $50 million, the Disaster Management Council said. Thousands of homes were destroyed in the second cyclone to hit the South Pacific republic in three weeks.

president of Bosnia's Muslim-led government, warned that the talks would collapse unless Serbs accepted Bosnia as a single state within its current boundaries and put all their heavy weapons under U.N. supervision; Otherwise, he said, Muslims would find ways to get more arms and launch new offensives.

On Sunday, President Bush and President Francois Mitterrand of France said a failure of the talks to produce an agreement would bring a quick U.N. vote on military intervention against Serb forces.

Leaders of Bosnian Serbs and Croats had urged the division of Bosnia into autonomous "ethnic nations." Karadzic also demanded the right of self-determination for ethnic groups and a Serbs-only state within Bosnia.

Muslims, the largest ethnic group in Bosnia but who control only a small part of the former Yugoslav republic, fear such an arrangement would result in Serb and Croat areas seceding and joining neighboring Serbia and Croatia.

Vance and Owen have proposed that Bosnia be divided into 10 autonomous provinces that would be based largely but not solely on ethnic divisions. But they also said they would not allow Bosnia to be broken apart and said the state should retain a central government with some power over the provinces.

Owen said at a news conference that the Bosnian government indicated it was willing to accept the mediators' plan for a cease-fire and a new constitution but had problems with some of the boundaries of the proposed provinces.

"He said Mate Boban, leader of Bosnian Croats, had agreed to the plan.

Vance and Owen said they would travel to Belgrade, capital of Serbia and Yugoslavia, this week in hopes of getting the federal government to pressure Bosnian Serbs to compromise.

"There are some serious differences among us but we can overcome it," said Dobrica Cosic, president of Yugoslavia, who took part in the conference along with Croatian President Franjo Tudjman. "I am an optimist."

Owen said the biggest stumbling block was the insistence by the Serbs on a Serb state within Bosnia. He said the international community would find it "impossible to deliver such a demand."

Izetbegovic said there was no point in continuing talks if the Serbs did not agree to the indivisibility of Bosnia and to ending control of their heavy weapons.

Salvation Army buys Krenzel's store

By Craig Lincoln, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Krenzel's True Value Hardware, a fixture on the Twin Falls downtown business scene in one form or another since 1907, has sold its Twin Falls building to the Salvation Army. The Salvation Army and Krenzel's owner Jean Cilek announced the sale Monday. The Salvation Army will move its third store from its current location at 561 Main Ave. E. to the Krenzel's store on Second Avenue.

The move will triple the Salvation Army's retail space to about 10,000 square feet. No sales price was disclosed.

The date for the transition hasn't been set, but Krenzel's will start a sale next week. Manager Jerry Fischer said. Merchandise that isn't sold will be moved to Krenzel's Jerome store, which is also for sale but will continue operating.

Salvation Army Capt. Roger Davis said he hoped the move would bolster business at the organization's thrift store, which provides about 65 percent of the Salvation Army's annual local revenues.

"Our customers deserve the best we can give them, without being extravagant," Davis said.

The Salvation Army had been at its old location for 30 years, Davis said, and was simply outgrown. It. Davis had been shopping for a new store for some time. Krenzel's fit the bill.

The business has been for sale since Joe Cilek died in 1988.

"This was a decision made as a family," she Jean Cilek, current owner and Joe Cilek's widow. The Cileks' three sons were "all doing their thing away from Twin Falls," and Jean Cilek wanted to retire.

Please see KRENGEL/B2

History of this Twin Falls fixture

The history of Krenzel's True Value Hardware:
1907: E. B. Krenzel opens Krenzel's Hardware and Machine Co., a combination blacksmith shop and hardware store at 210 Second Ave. S., where the current Twin Falls store now stands.
1912: E. B. Krenzel dies of typhoid fever.
Charles Harwell Krenzel, his son, takes over the company. Charles Krenzel patents 76 inventions during the decades he operates the blacksmith and machine shop.
1924: Household fixtures, dishes and lamps are added to hardware store inventory.
1952: Machine shop is made into a separate business.
1955: A gourmet bar with imported cheese, soup, canned rattlesnake meat added to the store, attracting national attention.
1962: The store is sold to Joe and Jean Cilek. Over the years, the Cileks also operate Krenzel's stores in the Lynwood Shopping Center (1965-1969) and in Jerome. The Twin Falls and Jerome stores are still open.
1966: The machine shop is sold to Acme Manufacturing of Filer.
1988: Joe Cilek dies at age 58, apparently of a heart attack.
Monday: The Twin Falls Krenzel's store is sold to the Salvation Army. The Jerome store, which is also for sale, will remain open.

Council raises legal drinking age to 21

TWIN FALLS — The City Council upheld the legal drinking age from 19 to 21 Monday night.
The council changed the drinking age to 21 after a November sting operation caught several local stores selling beer to a 19-year-old man. The sting revealed that the city did not update its code when Idaho's legal drinking age was changed from 19 to 21.

The council also denied a variance but agreed to a deferral agreement in a street improvement project that a Twin Falls couple said threatened the historical designation of downtown lights.

George and Corn Lee Detweiler want to expand their house at the corner of Lincoln Street and Shoup Avenue. City policy requires them to improve the streets in front of their home with curb, gutter and sidewalks.

But doing this would threaten the historic street lights on 100 and 200 blocks of Lincoln Street, the Detweilers say. The council agreed to a deferral agreement so that the Detweilers will not have to widen Shoup until sometime in the future.

Senior citizens advocate may attend Clinton's inauguration

HANSEN — A second Magic Valley resident has been invited to attend President-elect Bill Clinton's inauguration on Jan. 20.

Mildred Howard, 80, a long-time advocate for senior citizens and the disabled, received an invitation to attend the inauguration ceremony, the parade and one of the 11 inaugural balls.

"I don't know whether I'll go or not," Howard said Monday. "It will depend on the weather. Washington, D.C., can be an unpleasant place to visit in January."

Howard has made many trips to the nation's capital in her capacity as an officer with the Idaho State Council of Senior Citizens and as a board member of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

She hasn't met Clinton, but she voted for him. She described herself as a friend of the late Idaho Sen. Frank Church and his wife, Bethine.

Last week, the Clinton Inaugural Committee announced that Idaho Democratic committeewoman Diane Joseph Peavey of Carey had been invited to the inaugural festivities.

Court rejects appeal from Gooding man on rape charge

BOISE — The Idaho Court of Appeals on Monday rejected an appeal from Henry William Smith Jr., convicted of lewd conduct and rape in Gooding County.

Smith contended his sentences of up to 25 years were excessive, and urged the court to compare his sentence with those given others in similar cases. The court declined that invitation.

"It is well settled that not every offense in like category calls for identical punishment; there may properly be a variation in sentences between different offenders, depending on the circumstances of the crime and the character of the defendant in his or her individual case," the court said, in an opinion written by Chief Judge Jesse Walters.

Police expect 1992 felony stats to rise above 1991 mark

TWIN FALLS — Reported felony crimes in the city of Twin Falls almost surely increased last year over 1991, city police say. The final numbers haven't been tallied, but Jim Kistler said he expects them to increase.

"I'd almost bet money on it," he said. "Here is a final look at last year's felony crime reports:

Car burglaries:	9
Home burglaries:	9
Business burglaries:	2
Total burglaries:	20 638
Grand thefts:	6
Child abuse:	1
Aggravated battery:	1
Rape:	1
Robbery:	1
Aggravated kidnapping:	1
Aggravated assault:	1

Permit delay inexcusable, man claims

By Phil Salim, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A local businessman says the Twin Falls Building Inspection Department treated him unfairly in getting a building permit for a new furniture store.

Rick White, whose family owns Wilson-Bates Furniture and Appliance Store, told the City Council that he waited 2½ months and was charged too much for a building permit — more than $11,300.

White plans to build a 42,000-square-foot facility at Pole Line and Canyon Springs roads, near the new Comfort Inn.

Costco Wholesale plans to build an outlet three times larger than his building and yet was charged "only a couple of thousand dollars more for a permit," White said. Costco's building permit lists a 120,000-square-foot building and the permit cost $13,600, White said.

"We've been shafted from the get-go," he told the council at its afternoon work session.

The city contracts its building inspection work to J-U-B Engineers — a conflict of interest and one reason for the delay in his permit, White said. "You'll never convince me otherwise."

But Building Inspector Jim Leichter told offense to that remark.

"I take pride in trying to be fair. To be attacked like this is a low blow," Leichter said.

The delay in getting a permit to White stemmed from the "non-response" of White's own organization, he said. The building department needed information about the site plan and never received it, he said.

White also said that Building Department workers valued the building at $2.6 million when it will only cost $1.2 million to build. He also told the council that city building inspectors asked White's own engineering firm to inspect the structure — an inspection that the city is supposed to do.

"I'm going to pay the bill for my

Finishing touches

At the new Idaho State Health and Welfare Regional Offices in Twin Falls, US West employee Trula Stone works on the building's phone system. Workers spent portions of last week moving to their new building on Pole Line Road and began working from their offices on Monday. The new site will help consolidate the locations of Health and Welfare's various agencies.

Burley city councilman plans to quit

By Eric Goodell, Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Although the Burley City Council has found a new home, it will soon need to find a new member.

Council Chairman Clay Handy said Monday night that he will resign because he's building a home east of Burley outside the city limits.

The house, he said, should be completed by the end of the month. He said he wasn't able to find a suitable lot within city limits, and chose to build a house elsewhere.

"It's been fun," said Handy of his experience as being a council member. "I get bored." He said he might run for a county office if he got bored.

Handy, elected to the council in 1989, has been chairman for the past two years. Monday's meeting was the first held in Burley's new City Hall, located directly east of the old site.

Although the city hasn't officially moved into the new building, the council chambers were completed to allow for the meeting. Because the old City Hall was not accessible by the disabled, the council has been meeting for the past two years in the Cassia County School District office on 19th Street.

Mayor Frank Bauman said he hopes the new structure holds the city.

Several officials, including former councilman, attended the first meeting. "I wouldn't miss this," Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce Executive Bill Schaffer said.

Bauman said there are no definite plans for the demolition of the old City Hall.

He added that officials are wondering what should be done to the land once the demolition is complete.

Some have suggested that a park be placed there to gain some benefit from the area.

In other business, the council unanimously approved the firefighters' contract, which has been a topic of discussion for about two years.

Cross-country skiers offer seminar, free ski day

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — There's snow in them "thin" hills, and a local group of cross-country ski enthusiasts wants to spread the word to the uninitiated. The High Desert Nordic Association, a group of four dozen local cross-country skiing enthusiasts, will sponsor the group. "We want to teach people not only how to ski, but how to have an enjoyable experience."

Instructors will talk about where to go to find trails, how to exercise and stretch before skiing, how to dress and what equipment to use.

There will also be discussions of overnight camping, on-the-spot equipment repair, survival tips, first-aid, hypothermia treatment and avalanche awareness.

"Basically, it's everything you wanted to know about cross-country skiing," Billman said. "We want to give them a knowledge basis to take with them to the ski day so they can have a better time."

Please see SKIING/B2

SKI club's membership, activities snowballing

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — About five years ago, Blaine Billman and a group of his friends and fellow skiers decided to organize a club to promote cross-country skiing.

Membership in the High Desert Nordic Association has gone from about 25 the first year up to 45, depending on how much snow falls each year. Dues for the HDNA are $15 for singles and $25 for families, and the money goes to maintain trails and to build new ones. The group also has a ski hut in the South Hills for members to use.

Organized activities include trips to Craters of the Moon, telemark clinics, ski lessons and the annual ski day at Magic Mountain. Members also are volunteer coaches for Special Olympic events.

Billman said he enjoys the freedom of being able to ski for an hour around the College of Southern Idaho campus, or snapping on his boards for a moonlight glide.

"You can't do that with downhill skis," he said.

Kempton wants to cap growth in state budget

By Drew DeSilver, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The first bill filed for the 1993 Idaho Legislature's consideration would impose a cap on how much the state budget could grow each year.

Rep. Jim Kempton (R-Blaine) hopes the measure will "bring some fairness" to tax levies like last year's 1 Percent Initiative, and tell lawmakers and the public how much of the state budget is driven by federally mandated expenditures.

The legislation, House Bill 1, would amend an existing but neglected provision of Idaho law, limiting the General Account, which represents about half state government's total expenditures, to 5-1/3 percent of the state's total personal income.

Kempton would change that to either 5-1/4 percent of personal income or 4.5 percent growth per year measured in 1988 constant dollars, whichever is lower.

Costs associated with federal mandates would be exempt from the cap, and the governor would have to identify those costs in the proposed budget he presents to the Legislature.

Kempton's bill comes as many state officials, in both the legislative and executive branches, are complaining about the growing burden of federal mandates. Some predict that those mandates will force the state to seek a new revenue source, such as an expanded sales tax or a broad service tax.

Idaho Legislature 1993

situation with federal mandates. Let's find out how much those mandates are costing us — the way our lawmakers said they would in 1980, but has never been enforced. Kempton says that because budgets were below the cap until the late 1980s, and by that time most lawmakers had forgotten that the cap even existed.

"It just dropped out of the sight of everybody," he said. "It should either be amended or pulled out."

If Kempton's caps were in effect now, next year's General Account budget would be limited to a maximum of $1.026 billion, excluding the costs of federal mandates.

The General Account budget for the current fiscal year equals about 5.8 percent of Idaho's total personal income, Kempton said.

Tightening the caps, he added, would tie in with requiring performance audits for state agencies. The idea has been pushed for years by Rep. Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, Kempton's colleague in District 25.

Laws makers can pre-file bills before the Legislature officially convenes on Jan. 11. Kempton said GOP leaders have looked at his bill and support the concept. "It wouldn't be House Bill Number 1 if they didn't," he said.

Police track fugitive to barn Permits

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 19-year-old female man and his 14-year-old companion face misdemeanor charges after leading police on a chase through snowy fields east of Twin Falls Sunday night.

Tringo D. Padilla and a Twin Falls girl were arrested after Idaho State Police and sheriff's deputies followed their footprints to a barn. They were found hiding in loose straw.

ISP Cpt. Stanley F. Edwards said the chase began when Edwards spotted an eastbound BMW on U.S. Highway 30 with a headlight and taillight out.

When Padilla was arrested, officers found a pair of brass knuckles, Edwards said.
Padilla pleaded innocent Monday to carrying a concealed weapon, obstructing and delaying officers and attempting to elude police.

He was being held at the Twin Falls County jail in lieu of $1,500 bond.
Cassia County authorities have not charged anyone with the crime yet. Police also learned that the car involved was stolen, Edwards' statement says.

The girl will face juvenile court misdemeanor charges of eluding police officers, according to court records. She has been released to her parents.

engineers to do the city's work.

The city uses a nationally accepted formula in figuring permit costs and charges 75 percent of that rate, Leichter said. Costo's permit was based on the building being defined as a warehouse, he said.

Wilson-Bates falls under the definition of a store and that's why the permit cost about as much even though the Wilson Bates facility is only one-third as large as Costco, Leichter said.

City Council members said they would look into why the building permit took 2 1/2 months to get and said White should be given an avenue to appeal his permit fee.

"It was a very difficult decision for me, but at some point in everybody's life there comes a time to simply move down, when you're with the help of the Salvation Army, I came to the conclusion that the time was right for me."

The Krengel's store has nine employees.

"I guess, a sad time," said Krengel, who has worked there 19 years. "We had a lot of people come out and say, 'You're leaving?'"

The Cileks have long been active in community affairs. Joe Cilek was active in pushing the downtown Business Improvement District in the late 1960s. He was president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and was active in several other organizations. The Cileks recently stepped down from the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's board, its director on the Chamber of Commerce and its active in the Republican Party and the United Way.

Ski

On Saturday, the group in cooperation with the Idaho Departments of Parks and Recreation, will sponsor a ski day from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Magic Mountain Ski area south of Hansen.

The public can try cross-country skiing with free skis, boots and poles, and association members will be taking a lesson.

"It's probably one of the best lifetime sports there is for mental and physical health, and it's a relatively inexpensive one too," Billman said. "If people come with the right clothing, they should wind up being very pleased."

300 people have attended the ski day. Interest is up this year because of the abundant snow and new groomed tracks.

But if you show up Saturday, don't dress too warmly. Billman said. "They're used to downhill skiing or snowmobiling," he explained. "They're not used to doing an aerobic activity in the cold. They think, 'I'll be a lot warmer in this snowmobile suit, and they will.' They'll sweat like a dog and be miserable."

Body heat provides warmth, he said, so a cross-country skier should wear a thin layer of clothing next to the skin to transfer moisture to a second layer for evaporation.

The second layer, usually pile or wool, also insulates the body from the cold. A third layer, usually a thin nylon shell, keeps the wind away.

People may think cross country skiing is hard work because they overdressed or were otherwise unprepared when they tried it before, he said. "But if their first experience is good, they will try it again."

Craig: Kostmayer, Jontz choices say Clinton doesn't care about us

By N.S. Nekkewitz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Sen. Larry Craig Monday lamented the possible appointment of two "retrograde" congressmen to posts influential on land-use issues that affect the state.

Reps. Tom Kostmayer, D-Penn., and Jim Jontz, D-Ind., last year introduced a controversial five-state wilderness wilderness plan. Two are reported to be under consideration for posts in the Interior and Agriculture departments.

"I certainly hope President-elect Bill Clinton does not appoint people like Congressman Kostmayer and Jontz to those important positions," Craig said in a Monday press release.

Craig said their bias could be damaging to Western states. "But supporters, of designating more wilderness in Idaho say the two could help Western states.

"I'm glad they're on the list," said Craig Gehrke, Wilderness Society representative in Idaho. "They know about public lands issues."

About two-thirds of Idaho is public land managed by Interior Bureau of Land Management and Agriculture's Forest Service.

Kostmayer, a seven-term Democrat who lost a reelection bid in his suburban Philadelphia district in November, may be appointed assistant interior secretary for fish, wildlife and parks.

And the co-sponsor of the Northern Rockies wilderness package, Jontz could become deputy agriculture secretary.

"The appointments, Craig said, would be telling Idaho that 'you don't matter to this administration.' These two positions, though influential over what happens on public lands, do not automatically have to go to Westerners, Gehrke said. It is more important that they go to people knowledgeable about public lands issues in the West, he said.

Kostmayer and Jontz know those issues well and that may be scaring Craig, Gehrke said.

But no matter who takes the jobs, they will have a tough time overcoming an agency mind-set against doing anything that loggers and ranchers don't like, he said.

Craig said he is not certain the appointments would affect wilderness legislation for Idaho. But he wants to discuss the wilderness issue in a Jan. 15 meeting in Boise with Gov. Cecil Andrus and other members of the Idaho congressional delegation.

"Idahoans just have to come together," he said.

Minidoka commissioners expect judge's decision on special prosecutor Monday

By James Prichard, Mini-Cassia News-Service

RUPERT — The magistrate examining Minidoka County's special prosecutor situation will make his recommendation next week to county commissioners.

The county wants to avoid a situation like the Jerry Fino murder case, Haley told Burdick. A 5th District Judge ordered the county to hire a special justice drafter to represent Fino, who will go to trial in February on the killing of Rupert pawnbroker Randy Walker.

Magistrate Roger Burdick from Jerome met Monday with Commissioners Norman Seibold and Lyle Barton, Commissioners-elect John Rensburg III and Larry Harper, Prosecutor David Haley and newly appointed Public Defender Douglas Whipple. Commissioner Clarence Burt was ill and did not attend the meeting.

Fifth District Judge J. William Hart appointed Burdick to study the county's need for a special prosecutor and make a recommendation to commissioners.

Both Haley and outgoing Assistant Prosecutor Rick Bollard said they would accept the job if offered.

Whipple a two-year contract. Newland defeated Haley in the November race for prosecutor.

Newman will be prohibited from prosecuting defendants she has represented. When this occurs, another attorney, a special prosecutor, must be brought in to prosecute the case.

Burdick could recommend that a special prosecutor be put on a monthly retainer or be paid on an hourly or case-by-case basis. He is expected to offer his opinion at Monday's regular commission meeting.

The county wants to avoid a situation like the Jerry Fino murder case, Haley told Burdick. A 5th District Judge ordered the county to hire a special justice drafter to represent Fino, who will go to trial in February on the killing of Rupert pawnbroker Randy Walker.

Minidoka County is paying Twin Falls attorney Randy Stoker $100 an hour to represent Fino — a situation that irritates commissioners.

Burdick will meet this week with Newman, Haley, Whipple and Hart before offering his recommendation to commissioners.

Coping with the cold: Extra work, overalls help construction workers fight frigid temperatures

By Eric Goodell, Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — When the temperature goes down, the people putting buildings up find ways to adapt.

"You dress like a goose hunter," said Cal Jones, office manager of Jones Construction in Burley.

Jones said that the cold weather and blowing snow has hampered some construction projects.

"Sometimes there's a lot of wasted time in shoveling snow and putting out equipment that's been stuck in the snow," Jones said.

Despite the cold, blowing weather on Monday, which caused the temperature to register about 5 degrees above zero with the wind chill factor, Jones said he was glad that Idaho is getting some snow this winter.

"The farmers wouldn't build any buildings if we didn't have water," he said.

He said construction workers, just like other people who have outdoor jobs, try to get by with warm clothing.

"We don't whine about (cold temperatures) a lot," he said. He said workers have warm footwear, gloves and lots of warm clothing including insulated overalls.

"One of the greatest inventions is overalls," Jones said.

Jones said the construction company has some projects under way in which workers have a roof to work under. But that's not the case in all the projects.

"Not everything is that convenient," he said.

Walter Bradshaw, owner of Bradshaw Construction in Burley, said he doesn't have any significant projects under way right now, probably because of the cold.

"I think there's plenty of work to do if you can just get to it," he said.

When the temperature dips to bone-chilling temperatures, productivity drops proportionately, he said.

"You can keep on working if you want, but you don't get as much accomplished," Bradshaw said.

Dave Coats, dispatcher for Triple C Concrete in Rupert, said Idaho's mild winters in recent years have allowed for some concrete pouring outside. It would be difficult to pour concrete outside in cold temperatures because it would need to be covered while drying, he said.

However, he said his company is doing some indoor projects right now.

Bevan's hiring of legal aid lawyer rounds out new staff

By Brad Bowlin, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A legal aid attorney will round out the staff of lawyers working for the new Twin Falls County prosecutor who will take over on Monday.

Henry Madsen, a 1991 graduate of the University of Idaho Law School, probably will handle child-protective cases and may help on juvenile issues. Prosecutor-elect Richard Bevan said.

Madsen will join Jerome County Deputy Prosecutor John B. Loehrsch and holdover E. Scott Paul as the office's only full-time deputies.

Kandace Kemp, a former deputy prosecutor, will serve as a part-time senior deputy, and former Twin Falls police chief Tim Qualls has been hired as the office investigator.

Now that he has filed all of his legal positions, Bevan said he hopes grant money will enable him to hire a victims' rights coordinator for the office.

"It looks like we're going to sleep right into the frying pan the first week with some cases going to trial," Bevan said.

Madsen is a native of northern Idaho with strong ties to Twin Falls. Bevan said. He will be paid $27,500 a year.

Madsen could not be reached for comment Monday evening.

While working for Idaho Legal Aid Services, Madsen has handled domestic violence and family-law cases and landlord-tenant disputes, Bevan said.

He also has served as corporate counsel for the local homeless shelter task force and is a previous board member of Volunteers Against Violence.

Paul will be the only lawyer to remain when outgoing Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter leaves office next week, but the rest of the office staff will remain, Bevan said.

"We will be relying pretty heavily on them" during the transition, Bevan said. All members of the office will be given periodic performance reviews, he said.

Benson improves; may go home soon

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson, hospitalized last week with pneumonia, continued to improve Monday and may be released from the hospital later this week, according to a church spokesman.

The 82-year-old former Eisenhower administration agriculture secretary stood with assistance Monday morning in his private room at LDS Hospital, said church spokesman Don LeFevre.

Benson remained in serious but stable condition.

LeFevre said Benson, considered a prophet, seer and revelator to the 8.4 million-member church's faithful, has not had a fever for 46 hours and was taken off oxygen Tuesday. He is responding to antibiotics and his white-blood-cell count was reduced, LeFevre said.

1st aircraft hijacking was in '48

In 1948, a gang of bandits took over a Cathay Pacific Catalina flying boat named the "Miss Macao" in the air between Macao and Hong Kong. They demanded ransom for the passengers. The pilots resisted. They freed their captives and plane went down. Only survivor was the gang leader Wong Yu Man. It was the world's first aircraft hijacking.

Police statisticians report that the hijackers who got caught in Washington, D.C. have studied in college. Not shopping lists. [Editorial comment: Other subjects.]

Report is one of the promtheses makers has come up with an artificial leg that can get a ton to match the real other.

A lady who loves her dog says she had to be away from home for a couple weeks over one Christmas. So she sent her sorrowful pet a handkerchief she'd carried for the purpose in her bra. The canine keeper said the pup clearly was overjoyed by the scent of the mistress, and constantly kept the handkerchief at paw.

No, n'rad, the "Old Farmer's Almanac" was the first published for old farmers. When it came out in 1792, it was just the "Farmer's Almanac," and didn't get the "old" until 1832.

Q. Can you explain why New Englanders eat almost twice as much ice cream as people in other places around the country?

A. Best guess links it to all the college and university students thereabouts. You'll note the statisticians indicate beer drinking is mighty high there, too.

The older part-time worker, the more likely said part-time worker will stay on the job, according to the statisticians.

Horse sense make no sense when burning barns

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you implied that horses lacked horse sense... then cited the fact that horses have been known to run into a burning barn.

Dear Abby Abigail VanBuren

As a horse breeder, I thought you might like to know what prompts this seemingly bizarre behavior... especially since the instinct to survive should tell the horse to flee.

regarding a woman's maiden name. You said, "Many professional women have retained their maiden names after marriage."

her husband's name, and those who do not are "stony." What she has chosen to do was to keep her own name... If you are interested in some trivia, Lucy Stone (1818-1893) was an early American woman who kept her own surname, and other women who followed suit were called "Stoners."

There was no receiving line, and the bride and groom did not circulate to chat with the guests as is customary at most weddings. We were terribly disappointed, but we didn't react... DEAR HURT: The wedding may have been "posh" and "very expensive, but somebody dropped the ball."

Idaho GOP lawmakers rip Gem auditors' report

BOISE (AP) — The new state auditor's annual report is thick with information on budgets and pictures of the auditor's staff. It is a waste of taxpayer money, Republican legislative leaders say. But Democratic Auditor J.D. Williams says the 124-page publication is sent to banks and firms that rate state bonds, and that other state auditors prepare similar reports.

Williams disputes those allegations and says the report is "not a waste of money." He said the annual reports "really tell a story about the state. It's a real opportunity to tout your own."

The last 75 pages consist of the auditor's official summary of the state government's financial picture. Moody's Investor Service and Standard & Poor's use the data to rate the risk of bonds issued by state agencies.

This year's theme is "Education." It has 10 pages of descriptions and pictures of public and private Idaho colleges and universities, including the Albion State Normal School, which closed in 1951.

Investigators eye Sho-Ban for keeping eagle feathers

FORT HALL (AP) — A federal investigation has been launched into the possible illegal possession of federal protected eagle feathers by a member of the eastern Shoshone-Bannock Tribes.

Coby was arrested for driving while intoxicated. There was enough in his car to warrant a search, Davis said.

Ellsworth, whose office is working with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, also refused to discuss details of a search conducted last week of Goby's home in connection with the investigation.

The purchase offer came after tribal leaders decided to close down the company because it failed to earn a profit.
