Baghdad blusters, then blinks

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration said Friday the crisis with Iraq may not be over despite intelligence reports that Saddam Hussein's anti-aircraft missiles in a no-fly zone had been "broken down" and moved from a hostile position.

The destination of the missiles remained unclear, U.S. officials said.

"We're still watching this very closely. We are still in a position to take action should we find that we need to do so," said a senior Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Another administration official said it was "not conclusive whether they're leaving or not." This official said, "We're prepared to respond at any time we feel they've had enough time and haven't done it."

In addition, the Iraqi jets that had darted in and out of the zone in southern Iraq have been removed from the Al-Jarrah air base near the 32nd parallel, said the official.

It was the anti-aircraft missiles, however, that spurred the latest Iraqi confrontation with the West.

On Wednesday, allies demanded that Saddam move the missiles north of the zone set up to protect Muslim Shiites in southern Iraq. Since then, Saddam has played a cat-and-mouse game with the missiles, and foul weather has complicated intelligence efforts to pinpoint the location of the batteries.

A senior Bush administration official said there were two factors in the decision not to act as soon as the deadline passed.

"One is the weather and its impact on our ability to effect whatever's going on. The other is that there is movement by the missiles, but you can't tell whether they're just being hidden or being moved to camouflage sites or they're just being moved in a habitual fashion to try to throw us off track," he said.

Pilots of U.S. fighters, bombers and radar-jamming jets returning from a sweep of southern Iraq on Friday night reported the weather at least temporarily had im-

Heidi Deters of Twin Falls buys several sheets of Elvis Presley stamps from clerk Jim Mills. She said she plans to save a sheet and use the rest for postage. Below, these are a sample of the plentiful supply of Elvis stamps for sale at the Twin Falls Post Office.

Elvis stamps a bust in Twin Falls

By Jim Wildie
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Don't worry if you haven't seen the King's postage stamps yet.

Postal clerks were surprised that more people weren't coming in for the Elvis Presley commemorative stamp Friday.

"There were not as many as we were expecting," said Jerry Williamson, a Postal Service clerk.

Sales were reported brisk at the Burley, Rupert and Heyburn post offices on Friday, which would have been Presley's 58th birthday.

The stamps went on sale at noon, but in Twin Falls the lineup was back to normal about 15 minutes later, Williamson said.

The first day of Elvis stamp sales attracted new and old stamp collectors.

Sheri Willis of Twin Falls said she bought the stamps because a friend in Kansas City, Mo., is a big Elvis fan.

"I bought enough stamps to mail her a letter every year," Willis said. "Plus I collect stamps."

Ed McLaughlin of Twin Falls bought 80 stamps for himself, his business and for his wife.

"I thought there would be more people here," McLaughlin said, glancing around the quiet post office.

Although they expected more customers, Williamson said other commemorative stamps don't sell as quickly as the Elvis stamp is selling.

He said about 70,000 Elvis stamps remained from the original 92,000 sent to Twin Falls, and it will take some time to run out.

"It will be a while," Williamson said.

Weather boosts jobless rate

By The Times-News
and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley unemployment rate climbed to 6.4 percent in December and closed out a year of slowing-down growth in the area.

The Magic Valley jump was similar to the rise in the statewide jobless rate, as widespread layoffs followed the onset of winter weather. The nation's labor report only proved the national economy is still having problems generating jobs.

The 6.4 percent rate in Jerome, Gooding and Twin Falls counties, which the Department of Employment defines as the Magic Valley, for its labor-market surveys, is up from 6 percent in November and 5.6 percent in December 1991.

More job hunters, including people who moved to the Magic Valley, kept the average unemployment rate higher in 1992 than in 1991. In 1992, the average rate was 6.6 percent, a full percent higher than 1991's 5.6 percent.

Weather-driven layoffs pushed the state's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate to a five-year high of 6.8 percent in December.

Employment Department analysts were unshaken by the six-tenths of a point jump from November as the state's strong economy continued to generate jobs.

"Employment is expected to continue to grow, and the outlook for 1993 is bright," they said.

Higher unemployment rates in the Gem State are due mostly to an increasing number of job hunters. The state had about 15,000 more people in the work force in December 1992 than it had in December 1991, and 13,000 found jobs.

The national unemployment rate held at 7.3 percent in December, the government said Friday, underscoring the difficulty of generating jobs in a weak economic recovery. The jobless rate for the year was 7.4 percent, worse than the 6.7 percent rate in the recession year of 1991 and the highest since 1984.

"This is the last big report before the inauguration and it did not show enough strength to turn off the idea of fiscal stimulus. In fact, just the opposite," said economist Allen Smit of the Boston Co.

An eight-month recession officially ended in March 1991, but the jobless rate continued to climb. It began 1992 at 7.1 percent and peaked in June at an eight-year high of 7.7 percent before falling.

Before the recession, it had hovered at about 5.3 percent.

Separately, the department reported a gain of 64,000 jobs on employers' payrolls in December. Most of the increase came in service industries. The latest advance was held back by the elimination of 45,000 temporary election jobs.

Idaho taxes only a part of potential

The Associated Press

BOISE — An Andrus administration study shows so many exemptions working their way into Idaho's tax system over the years that only two-thirds of the general taxing potential is now being used.

In the first compilation ever of all the breaks in the Idaho tax code and how much each costs, the Division of Financial Management said it was not assessing the value to government or society of any of the more than 100 exemptions or other forms of tax breaks.

But what the administration called the state's "Tax Expenditure Budget" was released Friday, just the day before a state lawmaking session opens a 1993 session against a backdrop of anti-tax campaign rhetoric and spiraling demands for substantially increased government spending.

The 58-page report found that during the current spending cycle, the government will raise about $1 billion from its tax structure while failing to see another $500 million or more materialize because of exemptions.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said little about his legislative and spending agenda for the coming session. But his penchant for doing something beyond just maintaining the status quo would require more cash than the current tax system can generate.

"It is right, in light of today's demands on government services, to give special treatment to certain industries or to exclude from our sales tax the biggest and fastest growing component of our economy — the service sector," Andrus said.

"It's important that we fully recognize how much selective exemptions affect the balance of Idaho's tax system," he said.

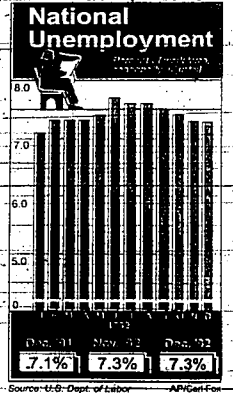

The report found that the cost of the exemptions will continue rising steadily, hitting nearly $700 million three years.

Not included in the list are any of the federal income tax deductions that the state automatically includes in its income tax code for administrative efficiency. That would mean the impact of deductions like home mortgage interest and charitable contributions was not included.

The exemptions have been adopted over the years to foster certain tax policies or provide relief to particular interests. Administration analyst pointed out that in most cases a budget expenditure could achieve the same thing, making administrative cost and efficiency the key factors in deciding whether a tax break or a budget expense should be used.

The biggest difference between the two in many cases is that spending generally has to be approved annually while tax breaks, once enacted, go on unchecked.

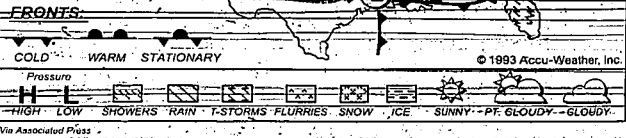

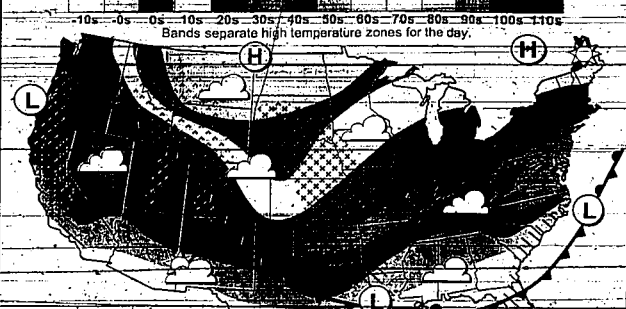

"Appropriations are made in an open public forum and the beneficiaries are known to all," the analysis said.

Snow, rain, tornadoes spread across most of nation

The Associated Press

Rain caused flooding Friday in the Southwest, with snow at higher elevations, and a tornado touched down in Florida.

Rain abated in Southern California but moved eastward into Arizona, southern Utah and Nevada, causing scattered flooding that forced evacuations in Arizona.

Snow fell from the Sierra Nevada across Nevada into Utah and northern Arizona. Up to 2 feet of snow had fallen in the Utah mountains.

Rain also fell along the northern Pacific Coast.

Snow extended from the Rockies across the central and northern Plains to the middle Mississippi Valley.

Winter storm watches were in effect through Saturday over southwestern Montana and west-central Nevada, south-central and southeastern Kansas, and much of western and central Oklahoma.

Thunderstorms reached from northern Florida across eastern Georgia.

In northern Florida, a tornado uprooted trees and caused roof and powerline damage in Union County during the morning, but no injuries were reported, the Union County Sheriff's Office said.

"Snow showers were scattered over the upper Ohio Valley, and a winter storm watch was posted through Saturday over extreme southeastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey.

Rain extended across the southern Plains and showers extended from the Carolinas across the central Atlantic Coast states to New Jersey.

Coastal flood watches were in effect through Saturday over New Jersey and southeastern New York. Flood warnings were in effect for the next several days along the Lumber River near Lumberton, N.C.

Iraq bans U.N. planes for checks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Iraq has banned all flights by U.N. arms inspectors on U.S. planes with fuel and the Security Council warned late Friday that Baghdad would face unspecified "serious consequences" unless it drops the ban.

In reporting the ban, a U.N. spokesman cited it as "a very serious breach" of U.N.-Iraq agreements. Under terms of the Gulf War ceasefire, Iraq agreed to let a U.N. commission inspect and eliminate its weapons of mass destruction.

The order banning U.N. aircraft was effective immediately and came in a letter delivered Thursday afternoon in Baghdad.

"We were informed that we were no longer able to use our own aircraft and if we wanted to use aircraft in the country we had to use Iraqi-registered aircraft," said Jim Trevan, spokesman for the U.N. commission charged with eliminating Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

"This is a very serious breach of Iraq's obligations and of four rights and privileges," he said.

Trevan said weapons inspectors normally have two or three flights a week entering Iraq. The next flight was due Sunday, he said. "The commission usually operates at a U.S. U-2 spy plane inside Iraq."

proved. They said there was a nearly full moon and clear skies, and no significant wind gusts, air force surface-to-air missiles.

At the Pentagon, Friday night intelligence reports indicated the missiles had been broken down, meaning "they are no longer up and in a position to shoot," the senior defense official said.

President Bush earlier in the day said Iraq was challenging the United States. President-elect Clinton said Bush had "contained him" about the action that the president proposed to take and I agreed with the action.

But officials at the White House, Pentagon and State Department all indicated there was no reason to expect a quick military response.

White House Press Secretary Martin Fitzwater said there had been "a good deal of movement involving these missiles," but their exact location was not clear. "We continue to keep the situation in Iraq under close scrutiny," he said in a written statement shortly before the deadline.

Gen. Colin Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Iraqi planes had not penetrated the prohibited air space below the 32nd parallel since the United States and its allies delivered their warning Wednesday. "We are pleased about that," he said.

However, the general also said in

Jobless

The unemployment rate is derived from a survey of households; the job figures come from a survey of businesses.

Overall, employers added 557,000 workers in 1992, bringing their payrolls to 108.7 million. But economists said that was one-fourth of the gain that normally would be expected early in a recovery.

And the payroll total remains well below the 110.3 million peak reached in June 1990, just before the recession began.

But many believe the economy is poised for better job growth this year. They cited new claims for unemployment insurance, which spiked during Christmas week to the lowest level in nearly four years.

The regional jobless rates for December in December, November and December 1992 were:

- Alaska, 10.7 percent, 9.3 percent, 8.9 percent.
- Lewiston area, 5.8 percent, 5.6 percent, 5.4 percent.
- Canyon County, 8.7 percent, 7.2 percent, 8.4 percent.
- Ada County, 4.2 percent, 4 percent, 4.3 percent.
- Magic Valley, 6.4 percent, 6 percent, 5.6 percent.
- Pocatello area, 6.5 percent, 6 percent, 6.7 percent.

Clinton to move swiftly over trade

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President-elect Clinton assured Mexican President Carlos Salinas on Friday that he will move swiftly to clear up U.S. concerns over jobs and the environment that are obstacles to a sweeping free-trade agreement.

"I look forward to having a strong partnership and a good personal friendship with Clinton," Salinas said after 90 minutes of talks, also attended by Vice President Al Gore.

Clinton promised to respect Mexico's sovereignty — a touchy point since the 1990 kidnapping of a Mexican doctor in the case of a Mexican drug agent.

Speaking less than an hour before a Pentagon official said Saddam Hussein backed down in the face of an ultimatum to withdraw anti-aircraft missiles from southern Iraq, Clinton expressed strong support for President Bush's threatened use of military force. "I don't think they had any choice," Clinton said of the Bush administration.

At a news conference, Clinton said he was delighted by the Bush administration. "There is no daylight between our two positions."

The meeting with Salinas, 12 days before Clinton takes office, marked the incoming president's debut in international diplomacy.

The centerpiece of the U.S.-Mexican agenda is the North American Free Trade Agreement to eliminate trade barriers among the United States, Mexico and Canada. Clinton supported the agreement during the campaign, but called for side agreements to clean up environmental problems in Mexico and to protect American workers, who fear losing jobs to low-paid Mexican laborers.

Clinton promised to put a single individual in charge of overseeing efforts to address U.S. concerns. He said he would act quickly after his inauguration "so that we could move forward in building a strong relationship between our two countries and in concluding a successful trade negotiation."

"I would like to see this wrapped up in a prompt fashion, but I want these other issues addressed," Clinton said, standing alongside Salinas outside the mansion of Texas Gov. Ann Richards, who loaned her residence for the meeting.

"We have established the foundations for a useful relation, positive relations, and respectful as well," said Salinas.

AP photo President-elect Clinton and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari walk across the lawn of the Governor's Mansion in Austin, Texas, Friday.

nas, a Harvard-educated economist who shares Clinton's fascination with domestic policy problems. "We also have the will to be friends and to respect our principles, mainly that of sovereignty and self-determination."

As Clinton and Salinas answered questions at the news conference, several dozen people demonstrated outside the grounds, shouting opposition to the free-trade agreement.

On the question of Mexican sovereignty, Clinton repeated Bush administration promises not to abduct Mexican citizens, as happened in 1990.

"I believe that when another nation is willing to obey the law and in the absence of information that the government itself has willfully refused to obey the law, that the United States should not be involved in kidnapping," Clinton said.

Salinas said he was interested in reviewing the existing extradition treaty "to make sure that it carries through with the intention that it was established for."

Clinton squeezed in a bit of domestic politics, meeting over lunch at a beer garden with incoming Sen. Bob Krieger and other prominent Texas Democrats. Krieger was appointed by Richards — to replace Treasury Secretary-designate Lloyd Bentsen.

Clinton's visit with Salinas followed a pattern of pre-inauguration meetings set by Ronald Reagan and George Bush with Mexican leaders.

The centerpiece of the U.S.-Mexican agenda is a sweeping trade agreement to eliminate barriers to free trade among the United States, Mexico and Canada. The pact, awaiting approval by lawmakers in each country, would create the world's largest and richest trade bloc.

To Clinton's call for side agreements on jobs and the environment, Mexico has countered with suggestions that the United States help finance the environment cleanup.

Mexico also wants an end to abuse of Mexican immigrants in the United States. Tens of thousands are in the United States illegally, and human rights groups complain of beatings, killings and other rights violations.

Clinton said in advance that the Austin meeting was not the place for major negotiations on the North American trade agreement, since it involves Canada as well.

Describing his priorities in the talks, Salinas said he hoped they would help resolve "with full respect to our sovereignty, the differences that separate us."

Mexicans remain angry about U.S. bounty hunters' 1990 abduction of a Guadalajara doctor charged with involvement in the death of a U.S. drug agent. The doctor was subsequently acquitted.

The abduction, and a Supreme Court decision upholding it, threw U.S.-Mexican relations into a brief lull, resulting in a temporary suspension of joint U.S.-Mexican drug control efforts and spurring Mexican demands for renegotiation of U.S.-Mexico extradition treaties.

Clinton criticized the Supreme Court ruling. While Salinas was the first foreign leader on Clinton's post-election appointment calendar, the incoming president has intent on fostering good relations with the United States' other neighbor, Canada.

Clinton says that Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney will be the first foreign leader he meets after becoming president.

Bush defies judge, names friend to postal board in mail rate feud

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush defied a federal judge's injunction Friday and named a lifelong friend to the Postal Service's board of governors in a fight over who has authority to set mail rates.

Bush used a so-called recess appointment while Congress is not in session to put Thomas Ludwig, a former Democratic congressman from Ohio and a lobbyist for the nation's largest banks, on the 11-member Postal Service Board.

Six members of the board, engaged in a legal battle with Bush over a proposed 27-cent stamp for mass, machine-prepared mail, won a court order Thursday barring Bush from firing them.

But one of the six is Crocker Nevin, whose term expired last month and whom Bush replaced Friday with Ashley. Since Nevin was a Democrat, Bush was required by law to replace him with another Democrat.

The recess appointment could turn the Postal Service's governing board from 6-5 against Bush to 6-5 in favor of his demand to drop a suit in the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here challenging the 27-cent stamp.

The administration says the postal board lacks authority to fight that discount rate in court without permission from the Justice Department.

Bush on Friday also asked the appeals court to overturn a federal judge's preliminary injunction prohibiting him from firing the other five postal governors who are fighting him.

The administration said U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer's exceeded his authority in issuing the injunction.

"The president has attempted to resolve this matter within the executive branch," Justice Department attorneys said. "The district court has now prevented the president from exercising his constitutional authority."

Anticipating a move to replace Nevin, both Oberdorfer and an attorney for the postal governors urged the Senate to remain in session Friday.

But shortly after 8 p.m. Thursday, the Senate recessed until President-elect Clinton's inauguration on Jan. 20. That opened the way for Bush to use his recess appointment power to replace Nevin with Ashley without Senate approval.

As a recess appointee, Ashley can take office immediately and serve until the Senate returns.

Despite belonging to different parties, Ashley and Bush have been close personal friends since they attended Yale together.

Foley replaces House Intelligence head

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Thomas S. Foley has decided to replace Rep. Dave McCurdy as the chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

Disclosing the decision to reporters on Capitol Hill, the Oklahoma Democrat said the move reflects Foley's desire to place his own team on the committee.

McCurdy had been rumored as a candidate for CIA director or Defense secretary in President-elect Clinton's administration, but others got those jobs.

The lawmaker said Foley informed him of the decision Thursday. McCurdy said the speaker made no mention of a report last year that Oklahoma lawmaker was considering a challenge to Foley's leadership position.

The speaker attributed his decision to my nine years of service on the committee, longer than any member in the history of the committee.

McCurdy said McCurdy had expected to be kept on as committee chairman, apparently believing his friendship with Clinton would shield him from any attempt by Foley to remove him, said a source close to the Oklahoman who declined to be identified by name.

McCurdy's appointment by Foley as chairman two years ago generated some resentment, in part because it represented what some saw as stretching House rules.

McCurdy had taken himself off the committee five years into a six-year term; then was reappointed in 1989 by then-Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, for another six years. That also gave McCurdy seniority on the panel, and he used that to persuade Foley, D-Wash., to appoint him in 1991, congressional sources said.

Russia defaults $20 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia has defaulted on payments totaling $20.1 million for U.S.-backed grain loans, bringing the total amount owed to $147.2 million, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

USDA spokesman Cameron Brummer said the department ceased work Thursday from four banks that Russia had missed the payments.

Russia first went into arrears on its USDA-guaranteed loans in November and has been failing to make payments for a total of six banks since then. USDA won't identify the U.S. and overseas banks making the loans.

None of the banks has asked USDA to cover the loans, and Brummer said the department believes a repayment plan will be worked out with the Russians.

"We are still discussing the situation with them regularly," she said. "We are still getting indications that they expect to begin repayment soon. We still see this as a temporary situation."

USDA has authorized credit guarantees totaling $3.75 billion to Russia, the former Soviet Union and Ukraine since January 1991 to buy U.S. wheat, corn and other farm products. Russia owes $4.2 billion and has repaid $887 million.

U.S. releases tape of shootdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon released tapes Friday of the Dec. 27 downing of an Iraqi fighter by an Air Force F-16 in the "no-fly" zone over southern Iraq.

Officials said it was coincidental that the tapes were released on the day of the deadline set by the United States and its Persian Gulf War coalition partners for Iraq to move air defense missile batteries out of the zone.

The tapes, both video and audio recordings from inside the F-16's cockpit, did not provide any new information about the circumstances of the confrontation. But they indicated that the Iraqi plane was flying inside the zone when it was hit.

The only moment of drama in the tapes is when the F-16 pilot asks for permission to fire on the Iraqi MIG. It is unclear if he did, and then another voice is heard on the radio, indicating a nearby AWACS

Jets make sweep of southern Iraqi skies

ON BOARD THE USS KITTY HAWK (AP) — A patrol of 33 fighters, bombers and radar-jamming jets took off for a sweep over southern Iraq hours before an allied deadline for Baghdad to remove its missiles from the area.

No bombing mission was announced and senior officers would not say if an order was expected. But combat was on everybody's mind.

"You are a little more edgy because you don't know what your reaction is going to be," said Lt. Cmdr. Dale Bruecting, 41, of Norwood, Ohio, the lead pilot of the 14th Tactical Fighter Squadron that flew over Iraq earlier Friday.

"With every launch you wonder if this is going to be the thing that trips the wire, the thing that starts them shooting," said Bruecting, a veteran of the Gulf War.

The 75 planes on the Kitty Hawk, deployed in the Persian Gulf since Jan. 1, share responsibility for patrolling the no-fly zone with other U.S., British, and French planes stationed in Saudi Arabia.

The patrol of 33 aircraft took off several hours before the 3:15 p.m. MST deadline set by the United States, Russia, Britain and France for Iraq to get its missiles out of the south. That is about double the normal 17-plane patrol of fighters, bombers and radar-jamming aircraft.

Officers said the patrol included F-14 Tomcat fighters, F-18 Hornet fighter bombers, A-7 Intruder bombers and radar-jamming EA-6B Provosts.

As usual, the jets were fully armed with Phoenix air-to-air missiles, HARM anti-radar missiles and 1,000-pound bombs, pilots and crew said. Officers said the patrol would be back before the deadline, but military refueling could keep them in the skies for six hours or longer.

"Most of the squadron thinks that Saddam Hussein will move everything back north, but you can't really rely on that," said Lt. Jg. Paul Aentney, 26, a Hornet pilot from Kansas City, Mo.

Although rain hammered on the deck of the aircraft carrier, pilots said the skies above the no-fly zone below the 32nd parallel had cleared.

They said the Iraqi MIG's and other aircraft appeared fewer in number than on previous days and remained north of the no-fly zone. The pilots that flew early Friday said they did not detect any "back-show" but occasionally refer to a second Iraqi MIG that was flying in the area. The second plane escaped unharmed. Most of the video is an electronic recording of the radar display inside the F-16 cockpit.

Tensions over location of the Iraqi anti-aircraft missiles began after the Saudi Arabian, shot down the Iraqi MIG.

The "no-fly" zone was established to protect the Shiite population of southern Iraq from air attack by Saddam Hussein's forces. Iraq doesn't recognize the restricted zone, saying it is not directly authorized by the United Nations.

At the time of the shootdown two days after Christmas, the Iraqis had no air defense missiles in the area.

Shortly after the shootdown, the Defense Department said the Iraqi plane had been warned before it was fired upon. No verbal warning could be heard in the tapes.

Saddam risks little in face-off with U.S.

By Ed Blanche The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Saddam Hussein may lose more of his military machine in the confrontation in southern Iraq, but the crisis could provide him a much-needed diversion at home.

The loss of some aging anti-aircraft batteries and a few of the warplanes that survived the Gulf War would be a small price to pay if it bolsters Saddam's authority in Iraq, where U.N. sanctions are causing food shortages and rampant inflation.

Renewed hostilities by the United States, Britain and France could also deepen the fissures in the wartime coalition that President Bush stitched together in August 1990.

Egypt, Syria, Turkey and others are distinctly lukewarm on new military intervention, because they fear it will precipitate the disintegration of Iraq.

The Soviet-made SA-2 and SA-3 missile batteries Saddam moved into the "no-fly zone" in southern Iraq following the Dec. 27 U.S. downing of an Iraqi MIG-25 are expendable.

His best anti-aircraft missiles, including later-model SA-11s and SA-13s, are apparently deployed above the 32nd parallel, the northern limit of the no-fly zone imposed by the United Nations Aug. 27 to protect Shiite Muslim rebels.

The real danger to Saddam lies in continuing to defy the West and having valuable military assets hit.

If the Americans and their allies limit their strikes to taking out the militarily significant and controversial actions of the Bush administration, the decision to leave Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein in power at the end of the Persian Gulf War.

In an interview with the Los Angeles Times this week as he prepared to leave office, Gates, deputy national security adviser at the White House before and during the war against Iraq, acknowledged that he had not fully considered the possibility of making the capture of Hussein one of America's war aims.

In the end, Gates said, U.S. officials rejected the idea, largely because they feared that the Iraqi leader would go into hiding, as Panamanian strongman Manuel A. Noriega had done during the 1989 U.S. military intervention in Panama, and that U.S. troops occupying Iraq would be unable to find him.

In the nearly two years since the end of hostilities in Operation Desert Storm, President Bush, who once branded Hussein as "worse than Hitler," has had to live with some of the unhappy consequences of not fully considering the possibility of Hussein's continued hold on power.

During last year's presidential campaign, President-elect Bill Clinton and Ross Perot cited Hussein's continuing presence in Baghdad to diminish theuster of Bush's victory in the Gulf War. Even now, in the final days of his at the West, and by implication the United Nations, and lives to fight another day.

Saddam took the West to the brink of military action last August when he refused U.N. weapons inspectors access to the Agriculture Ministry in Baghdad — while quietly removing incriminating data.

He stepped back when Bush threatened retaliatory action. But when the dust had cleared, the United Nations was no closer to bringing Saddam to heel than it was before the crisis.

So long as he can keep on speaking terms with the United Nations, Saddam can claim legitimacy — even while his government is viewed outside its borders as an outlaw regime.

Domestically, an allied attack would in all likelihood intensify Iraqi hostility to the West.

Many of Iraq's 18 million people, despite their silent antipathy for Saddam's repressive regime, blame the West for the misery caused by the sanctions.

Baghdad last month banned the import of 146 consumer items, ranging from cheese to electrical appliances.

That was one of several austerity measures aimed at conserving dwindling foreign currency reserves and curbing widespread profiteering, mainly by a favored commercial elite.

The execution last July of 42 "profiteers" underlined the degree of economic strain.

The West failed to support Kurdish and Shiite Muslim rebellions in the spring of 1991. So far the West has failed to change political conditions inside Iraq, and Saddam can only draw strength from that.

Deep-rooted fear of Saddam's seemingly all-pervasive security apparatus has stifled the revolt the Americans have been seeking to dislodge the Iraqi leader.

CIA chief Gates says U.S. decided against trying to capture Saddam

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — CIA director Robert M. Gates has provided a new, detailed account of one of the most historically significant and controversial actions of the Bush administration: the decision to leave Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein in power at the end of the Persian Gulf War.

In an interview with the Los Angeles Times this week as he prepared to leave office, Gates, deputy national security adviser at the White House before and during the war against Iraq, acknowledged that he had not fully considered the possibility of making the capture of Hussein one of America's war aims.

In the end, Gates said, U.S. officials rejected the idea, largely because they feared that the Iraqi leader would go into hiding, as Panamanian strongman Manuel A. Noriega had done during the 1989 U.S. military intervention in Panama, and that U.S. troops occupying Iraq would be unable to find him.

In the nearly two years since the end of hostilities in Operation Desert Storm, President Bush, who once branded Hussein as "worse than Hitler," has had to live with some of the unhappy consequences of not fully considering the possibility of Hussein's continued hold on power.

During last year's presidential campaign, President-elect Bill Clinton and Ross Perot cited Hussein's continuing presence in Baghdad to diminish theuster of Bush's victory in the Gulf War. Even now, in the final days of his challenging U.S. warplanes in the U.N. "no-fly zone" over southern Iraq.

At the time of the war, Gates said, most top-level U.S. officials involved in discussions about Hussein remembered their frustration in Panama.

"You were dealing with some people (administration officials) who had some experience in trying to find the leader of a country where the U.S. military had taken action in Panama," Gates said. "And I don't know how long it would have been before we found Noriega, if he hadn't turned himself in to the Papal Legate."

After the invasion of Panama on Dec. 20, 1989, Noriega vanished, prompting American officials to offer a $1 million reward for information leading to his capture. Four days later, Noriega sought asylum with the Papal Legate in the Vatican's diplomatic mission in Panama City, and after another 10 days, he surrendered to U.S. authorities.

"We were all a little shamed by that experience, and Iraq's hell of a lot bigger country than Panama and we knew a lot less about it than we did Panama," Gates said. "I think there was a general feeling that it would Bosnian seeks help from U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of Bosnia-Herzegovina, frustrated in his call for U.S. military intervention, appealed Friday to the American people to support what remains of his country against Serbian ethnic cleansing.

In halting English, and with his daughter, Sabina, serving as his interpreter, Alija Izetbegovic said some 200,000 people may have died in the former Yugoslav republic during nine months of unrelenting war by Bosnian Serbs. But he said it is hard to tell because some villages, where he claimed thousands were murdered, are also cut off from outsiders.

The Muslim leader met with National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft at the White House after a scheduled session with Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger was canceled because Eagleburger took sick.

Last summer, Eagleburger tried in a series of conferences in Europe to gather support for providing Bosnian Muslims with weapons. Only Turkey, a predominantly Muslim country, supported him, and Eagleburger abandoned the campaign.

Eagleburger managed to persuade the North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers to call for a new U.N. Security Council resolution to enforce the no-fly zone.

The Council had imposed over Bosnia in October.

Marines round up cache of weapons

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. Marines stepped up their operations in lawless Mogadishu on Friday with an assault on a major gun market and new food-for-guns rewards.

The 450-man exercise met no opposition and netted 250 assault rifles and machine guns, said Col. Michael W. Hagee, a spokesman. "This sends a message we're after any weapons we can find," Hagee told reporters. "You'll see more patrolling. We are increasing our presence in Mogadishu."

"This may be Dodge City, but Wyatt is in town," he said. "The intensified operations are designed to bring some semblance of security to threatened international famine relief workers, and allow the withdrawal of the first American troops since U.S. Marines landed Dec. 9."

In Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, negotiators signed an agreement Thursday ending a cease-fire, a national reconciliation conference and cooperation with aid agencies, offering some hope of future peace in their homeland. Hagee said Marines used armored personnel carriers and helicopters in their sweep of the gun market. Besides the assault rifles and machine mortar shells. "One shot was fired to take the lock off a door," said Hagee, and no arrests were made.

Two trucks filled with grain accompanied the Marines. Psychological operations officers announced over loudspeakers that anyone turning in his weapons would get a bag of food. "They gave away all the food," said Hagee. "Based on its success, I would not be surprised to see it again."

Marines based in Baidoa, in an unusual move, airlifted 16 1/2 tons of food by helicopter to the villages of Shimo and Libate, which relief officials said could not be reached by road because of mines.

In the southern port of Kismayu, U.S. Army elements were reported planning a pull out and begin operations in a band of forested river valley 80 miles away. Indian and Belgian troops were expected to take over peacekeeping duties in Kismayu. U.S. Brig. Gen. Lawson Magruder said conditions have improved markedly in Kismayu. But some residents said the local warlord, Col. Omar Jess, and his militia were only waiting until the Americans left to return to the city.

Troop drawdown could start end of month

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Somalia's lawless capital should be secure enough within three weeks to allow some American troops to leave for home, U.S. military officials said Friday. U.S. Marine Lt. Gen. Robert Johnston, in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press, said he is pressing the United Nations to speed its takeover of the U.S.-led mission to make Somalia safe for international famine relief.

Johnston

Johnston was vague on the timetable for U.S. troop reductions, but said Operation Restore Hope was proceeding ahead of schedule because more nations were joining the effort. He said U.S. forces, who hammered two clan bases Thursday in a show of firepower, hope to make Mogadishu peaceful enough to allow the first reduction of U.S. forces since the operation began one month ago. "I think we will clearly see a change in Mogadishu in the weeks ahead," Johnston said. "At that point it would be reasonable to even draw down our forces. You need more forces to impose a secure environment than you do to maintain one."

In the first sign U.S. forces were getting together, Marines on Thursday used a huge barrage of tank, helicopter and rocket fire against two clan arsenals in northwest Mogadishu where snipers had been firing at U.S. convoys — including at Johnston's Humvee six days ago. Seven Somalis were killed in the attack.

Johnston called the raid, the biggest so far, "a very useful message that we are prepared to use, quite frankly, overwhelming force to reduce any threat to our coalition forces."

He defended his operation against complaints by some relief agencies that say looting of international aid shipments still exists — and in some cases has worsened — in areas outside U.S. control.

"That is the economy; it's based on looting," Johnston said. "It is not yet possible to guarantee that there will be no robbing and looting. But if you look at ... the systematic looting that was going on prior to the U.S. presence, then I think we have made rather dramatic improvements."

Johnston's remarks came on the eve of the one-month anniversary of the U.S.-led mercy mission aimed at feeding this violent, famine-plagued Somalia.

Somalia sank into chaos and civil warfare after dictator Mohammed Siad Barre was overthrown in January 1991. President Bush ordered in troops on Dec. 9 to protect international relief shipments, which were being plundered by murderous rival clans and ruthless bandits.

Johnston gave few details but said he expects a U.S. withdrawal corresponding to the number of troops from other nations arriving in the next two to three weeks. U.S. military officials said those numbers were classified, but it is known at least 4,000 Australian, Moroccan and other troops are arriving soon.

The 20-nation force under Johnston's command now consists of 31,427 troops, including 21,725 Americans.

Significant U.S. troop reductions depend on U.N. willingness to take over the operation. U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros Ghali would like to broaden and prolong U.S. involvement to include rebuilding the government.

Name proves key to sale of village

AMERIKA, Germany (AP) — The name of this tiny village in eastern Germany is about the only thing going for it.

But it was enough of a selling point to convince a company to buy the land for a sanatorium.

Amerika, whose 108 residents are almost entirely jobless, was put on the block last year by the Treuhandsanstalt, the agency selling off former state assets of Communist East Germany.

A lung clinic in nearby Colditz recently decided to buy the village for $3.1 million — half the original asking price — to build a sanatorium, said Gerald Merkel, Amerika's mayor. He said the future is looking up, with plans for a hotel, swimming pool and a bar with a Wild West theme. The Saxony state government has guaranteed financing.

Amerika's village chronicler, Hans Friedrich, says the name originated in the 19th century when people had a hard time finding the town and its wool-spinning plant, which lies about 140 miles south of Berlin. The village at the time was part of the town of Ansdorf. "Business travelers used to say that to find this factory was harder than discovering America," Friedrich said.

Serb rebels kill Bosnian leader

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serb gunmen pulled Bosnia's deputy prime minister from his U.N.-escorted vehicle Friday and killed him with seven gunshots in front of French peacekeepers, U.S. and Bosnian officials said.

The slaying of Hakija Turajic occurred after two Serbian tanks and 30 soldiers stopped his conveyance at a checkpoint between the city and the airport, said Sanella Mujadzic, a secretary at the Bosnia's U.N. mission in New York.

After about 90 minutes of talk, the Serbs pulled Turajic and five French peacekeepers out of an armored car, said Mustafa Hajralahovic, the Bosnian army commander for Sarajevo.

The killing "is not only an attack on our government but ... an attack upon the United Nations," said Aljbi Izetbegovic, the president of Bosnia-Herzegovina, in Washington. "It shows very clearly that U.N. convoys are not protective ..."

Colorado finds itself polarized as Amendment 2 goes into effect

DENVER (AP) — Lorna Wheeler and Frank Serafini have much in common and nothing in common.

Both own cafes, both work long hours in hopes of making a good living in a small town.

But ask about Amendment 2 and you will find them poles apart in the debate over the state's new anti-gay protection law.

Wheeler and Serafini epitomize the polarization of Colorado residents since voters in November approved the amendment, which would forbid state or local laws that protect homosexuals from discrimination.

"We're worried that this state is saying it's OK to discriminate and it's OK to hate," said Wheeler, a lesbian.

"Before it hadn't been written down and it hadn't been counted how many people hate us," said Wheeler, whose cafe has a sign reading "hate-free zone" at the front door.

"Homosexuals should not have any special rights," said Serafini. They should have equal rights like everybody else.

"They weren't born this way. They absolutely weren't born this way. Black was born that way," he said.

On Monday, a Denver judge will decide whether Amendment 2 becomes law Jan. 15, the measure's effective date. District Judge

Jeff Bayless will hold a hearing on a request for an injunction in a lawsuit filed by the measure's opponents.

Bayless' decision will be the opening salvo in what promises to be a long court battle. A group called the Colorado Legal Initiative Project filed the lawsuit, which questions the constitutionality of the measure. And a state lawmaker has drafted a repeal bill that would rescind the ballot until 1994.

Amendment 2 was approved by 54 percent to 46 percent.

It was boosted by voters in the traditionally Republican Denver suburbs, Colorado Springs and western and rural areas of the state, but also won Adams and Pueblo counties, traditionally blue-collar Democrat bastions.

Basil's Cafe, which Wheeler co-owns with another lesbian, is in downtown Denver, which is mostly liberal and where Amendment 2 was overwhelmingly rejected.

Serafini's Pizzeria, owned by Frank and his father, Gene, is in Brighton, a rural town of 12,772 in Adams County about 25 miles north of Denver.

Denver, Aspen and Boulder already had gay-protection ordinances — which will be superseded if Amendment 2 if it is upheld.

The negative national attention the state has received because of the amendment, has only angered residents, not changed many minds.

In a recent Denver Post-KCNC poll, 94 percent of respondents said they would vote the same on Amendment 2, 4 percent said they would change their vote, and 2 percent were undecided.

Just 15 percent said Colorado is less tolerant of gays than other states; 48 percent said Coloradans are more tolerant.

Serafini and Wheeler say the amendment dominates conversation in their cafes.

14 months later, man goes free

PHOENIX (AP) — A man held on a murder charge for 14 months has been released because a teen-ager who pleaded guilty to nine deaths at a Buddhist temple admitted he participated in that killing, authorities said.

George Peterson, 46, of Sanders was released even though at one point he claimed he had killed Alice Marie Cameron, 50, of Cave Creek. His lawyer said the confession had been coerced from the man, who has a history of mental illness.

"I'm outraged," Maricopa County Attorney Rick Romley said of Peterson's having been facing trial largely on the strength of a false confession.

Cameron was shot to death at Mesquite Campground, along the Verde River north of Phoenix near Horseshoe Dam, on Oct. 18, 1991.

Peterson was released from jail Wednesday after authorities corroborated a sworn statement from Alessandro "Alex" Garcia, 17, Romley said.

In a plea bargain, Garcia pleaded guilty Wednesday to the Aug. 10, 1991, slayings of nine Buddhists at a temple west of Phoenix. In return, prosecutors said they wouldn't seek the death penalty.

As part of his agreement to cooperate with authorities, Garcia described having been involved in Cameron's slaying, Romley and Sheriff Joe Arpaio told reporters late Thursday.

Garcia also is required to testify against co-defendant Jonathan Doody, 18.

Garcia and Doody, former high school classmates in suburban Avondale, were arrested Oct. 26, 1991, after ballistics tests linked the temple killings to a rifle belonging to a friend.

Romley wouldn't release details about the Cameron slaying.

The Arizona Republic, however, reported that Garcia told authorities he and a 15-year-old girl killed her.

The newspaper said Peterson had given deputies conflicting versions in saying he had killed Cameron.

The Republic also said Peterson's court-appointed attorney, Kimberly O'Connor, told the court in September that Peterson's mental state was mentally ill and had coerced a confession by first giving him information and then accusing him of lying when he didn't recount their version.

O'Connor told the Republic that part of Peterson's 1987 plea is an "obsession with pleasing others."

Peterson, staying at the Veteran's Administration Medical Center since his release, said Thursday he was "going to try to pick up the pieces."

Montanans may be facing 2 gas taxes

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — State transportation officials plan to give Congress a package of funding options, including two gasoline taxes that add up to 10 cents a gallon.

"What we want to do is determine the best we can do to get the federal (highway) funds and maintain a balance in the state program," Racicot told a reporter.

The present state tax on gasoline and diesel fuel is 20 cents a gallon and has increased in 1987. The federal tax is 14.3 cents a gallon.

Each penny that the state fuel tax increases raises $4.9 million a year.

In budget proposals submitted to the 1993 Legislature, former Gov. Stan Stephens recommended a nickel-a-gallon increase in fuel taxes. The proposals destined for Racicot included plans for an increase of 5 cents one year and another 5 cents the next. Racicot said he hadn't decided the merits of that plan.

"I may not take a five-and-five," he said.

In his gubernatorial campaign last year, Racicot said he would support a fuel-tax increase to attract matching federal highway funds, and to support the state highway program.

Telecommunications plan calls for rate equity, long-distance education

BOISE (AP) — The state's new telecommunications plan takes some long strides, such as recommending US West merge its northern and southern Idaho branches into a single entity with one rate structure.

The blueprint, called "Telecomm '92: Connecting Idaho to the Future," also includes a state board of Education to support providing the first two years of college through electronic technology in each Idaho rural community by the year 2000.

US West North's 19,000 customers between Lewiston and Grangeville currently pay higher long-distance rates than US WEST South's 265,000 customers in southern Idaho, said a three-member committee that developed the plan.

For example, a 10-minute, 25-mile, daytime long-distance call costs $2.49 from northern Idaho and $2.38 from southern Idaho, said Rick Hays, public relations director for US West Communications.

US West North's long-distance rates are higher than the South's rates because of differences in the way they allocate costs and their Increasing northern Idaho local exchange rates to southern Idaho levels would cut Panhandle long-distance and access costs to that of the southern tier.

Hays said the capabilities of US West North and South are closer than in years past, and merging them is inevitable. But he said US West has no plans to move to a single rate structure.

The plan generally calls for lower intrastate long-distance charges to reduce the costs of access to government and other services. It says lawmakers and the Idaho Public Utilities Commission should encourage lower intrastate long-distance rates through increased interexchange competition.

"Intrastate tolls that make calling the state capital or the county seat more expensive than calling Spokane or Salt Lake City are simply the balkanization of Idaho," the 121-page report concludes.

The plan calls for the state Board of Education to rewrite the role and mission statements of its public universities to give them responsibility for improving schooling through telecommunications.

"It's possible you can have a university without walls," said Richard Gardner of the Idaho Division of Financial Management.

All communities without a university or college should select people to organize distance learning classes, the plan says, and the education board should encourage each school to offer courses based on the needs of rural residents.

Thomas Matney, director of Lewis Clark State College's Educational Technology Center, said the college has formed its own task force to study the report.

"LSC is moving fairly rapidly in case the state Legislature wants to move on this," he said. "We have a lot of people who are absolutely place-bound who want access classes and programs."

The plan calls for expanding the capacity of the Idaho Educational and Public Broadcasting System's microwave system so the universities can reach out with courses and instructors.

But the Idaho Department of Administration should be responsible for expanding this caplan by merging the IEPBS and Idaho Bureau of Communications microwave networks into a single digital system and seeking bids from private companies, according to the report.

The plan also recommends creating technology centers throughout Idaho to help people understand telecommunications.

"If back a system in which routine medical consultations could be conducted by telephone between health care providers and specialists, so patients can be spared from visiting the specialist. Gardner said there is room in the plan for the public and private sectors to accomplish its goals. He conceded the state's tight budget this year precludes hefty expenditures, but predicted the report will become more visible in years to come.

Port of Lewiston reports best year ever

LEWISTON — The Port of Lewiston had its best year ever in 1992 despite a controversial Snake River drawdown that left its docks high and dry for a month.

After receiving record volumes of freight, the port plans to incorporate the drawdown — which it opposed — into its marketing strategy.

"They were on Dan Rieker. Everybody knows us now," port manager Ron McMurray said Thursday. "We're going to capitalize on all this recognition."

Year-end figures released Thursday showed container traffic was up 44 percent from 1991 and grain shipped was up 44 percent. Revenues from rents and tariffs rose 22 percent to a record $210,854 for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1992.

Most of the gains were from new customers in Chicago, Montana, Canada and other ports that learned from all the drawdown publicity that there was an inland port 465 miles from the Pacific Ocean, McMurray said.

Commissioner gives county refund

BOISE — A 120-year-old law, dating from Idaho's territorial days, forbids paying county officials when they serve in the military.

That's why Ada County Commissioner Gary Glenn has given the county a refund check for $2,653.

He spent six weeks of military leave for training last fall. While he was on leave, he was paid his full county salary, minus the $1,500 he received for military duty with the Idaho Army National Guard.

That's standard practice, as covered by the county's policy. But Glenn said county attorneys found an 1873 law forbidding elected or appointed county officials from being paid during periods of absence due to military service.

Donor to administrate State School

BOISE — John R. Doner, a 14-year veteran of the Department of Health and Welfare, is the new administrator of the Idaho State School and Hospital at Nampa.

He was appointed Friday by Jerry Harris, new director of Health and Welfare, who previously held the position.

Doner has served as assistant administrator of the Nampa facility since 1981. The State School and Hospital serves about 150 severely disabled people for whom community resources are not available.

Chaplain speaks against gay parenting

BOISE — With the clamor dying down about the discussion three lesbians had with Meridian High School students in November, a local chaplain has spoken against gay parenting to balance out the debate.

The Rev. Chris McGreer of the Valley Bible Fellowship in Meridian on Thursday talked to 80 juniors and seniors about "medical, psychological and sociological" disadvantages of the lifestyles of homosexuals. The discussion went smoothly, said McGreer and the students.

Senior Josh Graham said he supported having McGreer speak, although he disagreed with him.

City scales down skating rink proposal

COBURG, ILL. — Enthusiasm has cooled at Cour d'Alene City Hall over building a first-rate ice skating rink downtown.

Members of the mayor's ice skating rink committee agreed Thursday not only to scale down the proposal, but to hand the project off to someone else.

City administrator Ken Thompson suggested the panel take the plan for a $600,000 outdoor, uncovered facility to groups that have expressed an interest.

Those organizations, such as the YMCA and Chamber of Commerce, could then decide whether to spearhead the project, he said.

Book shows how Hispanics shaped Gem history

BOISE (AP) — A new study on Hispanics in shaping Idaho today fills in what current textbooks don't show, say promoters of "Voices from the Past: Hispanics in Idaho's History Project."

"Twenty-two people were interviewed for the project, coordinated by the Idaho Commission on Hispanic Affairs and funded by grants from the Idaho Humanities Council and the Idaho Centennial Commission."

The book will be distributed to public school and college libraries statewide.

"This is a significant form of recognition of the Hispanic community because it focuses on individual lives in different regions of the state," said Rudy Pena, chairman of the Idaho Commission on Hispanic Affairs. "It's about the only resource of its kind."

The book also will be especially helpful in migrant education programs, Pena said. "And it will show students that not all Hispanics are migrant farm workers, said Tony Rodriguez, president of the Idaho group promoting civil rights and education for Hispanics.

"I think it's important to have a history that shows Hispanics as activists in politics and the community," Rodriguez said. "For kids in history class, they can see how Hispanics have shaped their roots are not from the Mayflower. This history shows how we became Americans."

"A person must know we're all one team. Hispanics should take away from their minds the idea that discrimination will always block their way," said Tony Rodriguez Sr., one of the Idaho Hispanics interviewed. He owns Nampa's El Charro Cafe and is a former chairman of the Nampa Civil Service Commission.

Rodriguez moved to Nampa in 1946 with his family. He remembers signs posted in Nampa bars read "No Mexicans," "No Negroes" and "No Dogs."

"But the whole community wasn't prejudiced against us," he said. "Prejudice comes from certain people."

With an Hispanic student population of 26 percent in Boise, 14 percent in Nampa and 30 percent in Caldwell, multiculturalistic teaching is important, school officials said.

"Our next curriculum revision will re-examine texts and classes to make sure that the history of Americans is not too narrow," said Steve Tyree, social studies supervisor for the Boise district.

But expanding the curriculum does not mean focusing on only one race or ethnic group, Tyree said.

INEL staff

to clean up old shells

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Workers at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory will start a project next summer to clean up potentially dangerous military shells and mines dating from World War II when the land was used as a Navy ordnance range.

Sciencetech, Inc., Idaho Falls, already is at work reviewing old military records to locate the explosives, leftovers from the time when the Arec desert was used as a Navy firing range.

"Energy isn't certain how many explosives are left, but it knows some are near INEL roads and buildings. Federal officials hope Sciencetech can provide a map for the cleanup."

"It gives us good information and it will be really helpful," said Dorina Nicklaus, who's managing the explosive cleanup.

Sciencetech's record search takes in all of INEL, and for the short run, that's more information than the Energy Department needs.

The first stage of cleanup will be small scale. This year, and possibly into 1994, the DOE will focus on about 180 acres where unexploded mines and shells pose a threat to site workers.

Cleanup teams will look for explosives near an INEL fire station, buildings at the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant and the Central Facilities Area, a gravel pit, and a commonly used site road.

Workers will blow up the unexploded shells and mines, followed by another team to clean up TNT and other explosives at artillery sites. The cost for clearing the 180 acres should be just over $2 million.

Judge to decide on plea bargain

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — A 6th District Court judge will decide this month whether to accept a plea bargain involving a man accused of killing his brother.

Dale Summers, 43, is charged with first-degree murder. He's charged with shooting his brother, Roy, 42, Nov. 15 in Soda Springs after an argument.

In a plea bargain agreement, the charge could be reduced to second-degree murder. The recommended sentence would be 10 to 20 years in prison, Caribou Prosecutor Clyde Nelson said.

An enhancement charge, using a finding that the crime would be dropped if the judge accepts the agreement. District court arraignment of Summers is scheduled Jan. 15 at 10 a.m. in Soda Springs.

Dale and Roy argued about another brother, Jerry, at a Soda Springs trailer court. Court records say the Arkansas residents were staying in Soda Springs while working on a natural gas pipeline expansion project.

Court records say Dale Summers fired a shot at his brother as he was running toward him.

"He couldn't believe it," said Dale Summers' wife, Carol, who lives near Judsonia, Ark., northeast of Little Rock.

"He was a good person," she said. "He was a good father to my two children, his stepchildren."

State, canal companies settle suit

Settlement likely will halt groundwater development upstream from Milner Dam

By N.S. Noken
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The state of Idaho and two canal companies Friday settled a historic suit that likely will halt most new groundwater development in eastern Idaho.

The settlement will affect every groundwater user in the Snake-River-Basin upstream from Milner Dam, Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Keith Higginson said.

The Twin Falls and North Side canal companies have long sought to limit development of eastern Idaho groundwater. Eastern Idaho irrigation wells, say the companies, have reduced the flow of springs at American Falls, on which their natural flow rights depend.

The companies have asked for a moratorium on groundwater development since 1988. In July they resorted to a lawsuit.

The suit asked the court for an injunction against the Idaho Department of Water Resources to halt processing, approving, issuing "or taking any affirmative action" on permit applications for new ground or surface water uses upstream from Milner Dam.

The settlement requires the department to continue a moratorium on water development imposed earlier this year because of the extended drought. The moratorium would continue while the state studies the exact relationship between surface and groundwater in southern Idaho.

In exchange, the canal companies dropped the suit. The settlement allows for new permits for domestic, commercial, municipal and industrial development as well as the possibility of emergency drought irrigation wells.

Idaho's earliest water-laws dealt only with surface water. Higginson said. Not until the 1950s did irrigators begin using groundwater.

In recent years it has become apparent that surface and groundwater are a single inter-related resource, he said. But the effects of groundwater development are often remote and delayed. In some areas, the effects of groundwater pumping cannot be seen from year to year.

The study will identify areas where groundwater pumping affects surface water and quantify that effect, Higginson said. It doesn't make sense to deny access to a large public resource in an area where it doesn't affect other water rights, he said.

But in areas where groundwater pumping can be shown to affect senior surface water rights, those pumps may be shut off or made to return some water to the river.

Educator: Success depends on procedures

By Jim Wilcox
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Harry K. Wong is on a mission to help make teachers become the best they can be.

"Whatever you expect of yourself is exactly what will happen," Wong told some of the 1,800 educators who attended the Fourth District Superintendent's Association Education Day on Friday.

The teacher from Sunnyvale, Calif., stressed how raising positive expectations will help build better teachers and students.

"My mother asked me every day, 'What kind of kid, when you grow up, what kind of doctor, what kind of lawyer, what kind of doctor will you go to be?'" Wong said at the College of Southern Idaho Auditorium.

Examples of encouragement are a part of Wong's classroom management ideas that have made him a successful teacher.

Wong has written a popular book in education, a science textbook series, a video and audio tape series and numerous magazine and journal articles.

"After 35 years of teaching, you too can look as healthy, handsome and happy as I do," Wong said waving his arms and jumping around the stage.

The sprightly 60-year-old told the packed auditorium that becoming a successful classroom manager depends on establishing procedures and routines, not discipline.

"If you don't have a plan, then you're planning to fail," Wong said.

Wong explained that after defining classroom procedures and routines, effective teachers must spend a good deal of time the first weeks of the school year introducing, teaching, modeling and practicing procedures until they become routine.

"I want you to let students know how the class is run and they eventually follow the procedures without anyone telling them.

By following routines, students get to work immediately and they learn responsibility.

"I don't work, my kids do all the work," Wong said.

Along with the routines, Wong stressed

ANDY ARENZ/The Times-News

care and a family atmosphere to help children obtain self-esteem.

"Love them and they'll love you in return."

"They say Chevrolet is the heart of America," I say you and I are the heart of America," Wong said in conclusion to a round of applause.

Wong's exuberance and energy seemed to rub off on the educators in the crowd.

"He's great," said Ann Simmons, who teaches music at Gibbons Elementary in Gooding.

Jody Brown, who teaches English to grades nine through 12 at Richfield High School said Wong's speech was inspiring.

"(He) discussed a lot of simple common-sense things to apply to the classroom," Brown said.

Common sense, Wong said after his speech, is what made him successful and it is what supports his methods.

"Common-sense things are there, you just have to look for them," Wong said.

He explained how he was in a common stage for teachers — survival — when he began reading journals and started attending seminars on his own. He stole ideas from others and encouraged local educators to steal from him.

The desire to learn and improve makes better teachers, Wong said. More money or more training aren't the keys to successful teaching if a teacher is just in a survival mode and becomes an "overpaid, high-priced baby-sitter."

"The tragedy is we've got a bunch of idiots teaching this way and we know it."

"I'm here to take you beyond survival," Wong told the audience.

Kempthorne wins seat on Armed Services Committee

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Freshman U.S. Sen. Dirk Kempthorne on Friday became the first Idahoan in almost four decades to gain membership on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

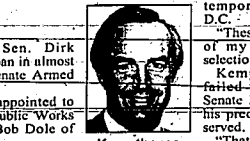

Kempthorne, elected in November, was appointed to the Armed Services and Environment and Public Works committees by Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

"I'm excited about my committee appointments," Kempthorne said in a telephone interview from his temporary office in Washington, D.C.

These assignments were at the top of my list when we began the selection process."

Kempthorne said he tried and failed to win appointment to the Senate Finance Committee on which his predecessor, Sen. Steve Symms, served.

"That turned out to be impossible," he said. "Everybody wants to be appointed to that committee."

Symms was also a member of the Environment and Public Works Committee.

The complicated formula that the Senate uses to determine seniority, Kempthorne ranked 100th after the November election. That, however, was before special elections in Georgia and North Dakota installed two new senators.

Idaho's other senator, Larry Craig, did not announce Friday what committees he would be appointed to. Craig, a first-term Republican, served on the Energy and Natural Resources and Agriculture committees during his first two years in the Senate, and was seeking a seat on the powerful

BLM restricts predator control to emergencies

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Predator control on Bureau of Land Management land is being restricted to emergency actions only this winter as the federal agency weighs in with the legal ramifications of the controversial practice.

Several district plans for the trapping and killing of problem predators by Animal Damage Control were appealed by environmental groups last year, bringing the activity to a halt.

Only an administrative move by Secretary of Interior Manuel Lujan to take over jurisdiction of the plans allowed predator control programs on BLM land to continue in 1992.

But in reviewing the adequacy of the environmental assessments conducted by local districts on their Animal Damage Control plans, Lujan found several deficiencies and remanded them back to the districts for additional work.

"The Secretary's decisions have implications for all BLM district statewide and probably throughout the nation," said Alan Sands, BLM's predator control coordinator in Idaho.

Two Magic Valley districts of the BLM, the Burley and Shoshone, have already issued proposed decisions on their 1992 damage control plans.

But the Burley District has been notified by the Committee for Idaho's High Desert that it plans to protest its decision, according to Sands, and it appears likely that the Shoshone District will have to amend its decision or conduct a supplemental environmental analysis.

In a draft decision issued last month, Shoshone District Manager Mary Gaylord announced a plan that would emphasize non-lethal measures in controlling troublesome coyotes, bear and cougar on the 1.5 million acre district.

"Before any lethal methods will be authorized, Animal Damage Control must incur substantial livestock losses," Gaylord explained.

"Substantial" losses, according to the environmental assessment for the control program, would be based on the assumption that 0.5-percent losses are expected when running sheep on public range. A band of 400 sheep, for instance, would have to lose more than two animals to predators before lethal action by Animal Damage Control would be authorized.

These thresholds were not adequately discussed in the district's environmental analysis, Sands said, and will either have to be addressed separately or edited out of the district's final decision.

In a legal memorandum issued late last month, Lujan concluded that the Boise District, in particular, failed to demonstrate a

Dispose-All petitions public support by mail

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dispose-All Inc. has taken steps to build a landfill in Twin Falls County to the public.

The company mailed a "newsletter" to county residents urging them to call the Twin Falls County Commission in support of the company's project.

The letter arrived in Friday's mail and includes information about Dispose-All's proposed $5 million landfill and solid waste management facility in south Twin Falls County.

County Commissioner Norma Hlass said Friday she was not aware of the letter until a resident called to talk about Dispose-All's proposal. This person, however, opposed the company's plan, Hlass said.

Commissioner Jim Friley said he also heard from a resident who opposed Dispose-All's plan.

These were the only calls so far, the commissioners said.

Besides calling the commissioners, residents can fill out a coupon saying they support Dispose-All's project and would volunteer to join the company's citizens' advisory committee.

Dispose-All says it can build and operate a landfill more efficiently than the county and Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District. County and regional district officials have placed the public good behind their egos, the letter says.

"Say no to new taxes. Say no to more bureaucracy. We need your help," the letter states.

The company promises to build a landfill that will exceed new environmental requirements. The facility will create jobs and pay taxes, the letter says.

Dispose-All is willing to lock in a landfill rate for 25 years and the county can control where trash in the landfill comes from, according to the letter.

Company President Doug Lomow told the Twin Falls Rotary Club on Wednesday that neither county nor regional district officials will talk to him about his plan.

But Twin Falls County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said Friday that the county has never refused to meet with Lomow. The director of the regional district, Terry Schultz, said that Lomow never asked for a meeting but that the district has shared solid waste information with him.

Dispose-All's request for a zoning change for the landfill comes before the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission on Thursday, Jan. 14.

State department of transportation cancels Downard Bridge replacement

By James Prichard Mini-Cassia News Service

DECLO - An Idaho Department of Transportation official says this year's planned construction of a new bridge would not be built until at least 1994.

He added that independent studies conducted by a Washington-based biological consultant, the Idaho Department of Fish & Game and the Idaho Farm Bureau indicate the creatures apparently do not live in that portion of the river, and instead favor cold water springs.

Based on my knowledge, the project has been canceled for this year and is not likely to get going again until at least next year, Bob Rohrer, senior environmental planner for the department, said Friday.

Heberger said his agency is still examining the Transportation Department's report. It has 30 days in which to either accept the report or challenge its findings and demand more study, Rohrer said.

On Wednesday, the Transportation Department completed a biological assessment and submitted it to Fish & Wildlife. The department found that the Downard Bridge project "should have no impact" on the species, Rohrer said. He added that independent studies conducted by a Washington-based biological consultant, the Idaho Department of Fish & Game and the Idaho Farm Bureau indicate the creatures apparently do not live in that portion of the river, and instead favor cold water springs.

Johnson stars in Eagles' win

By Larry Hovey
The Times-News

EPHRAIM, Utah — Sophomore Clayton Johnson was the difference Friday, when College of Southern Idaho shook off the holidays and a long layoff to beat Snow College and run its record to 17-0. Johnson hit eight points in the first 72 seconds of the game, as CSI jumped ahead 11-0. But it was never that easy again in the ahead Eagles' 88-67 victory.

CSI women lose - B7

The result brings CSI to its major test of the season thus far. The Eagles will play 11th ranked and similarly undefeated Dixie College in St. George tonight. "It's 17-0 against 16-0 to see who is going to be No. 2 in the country, because I'll guarantee you that if Dixie beats us, they'll jump to No. 2 in the rankings next week," Coach Fred Trinkle said.

Trinkle noted that CSI "could have made it a little easier on ourselves by hitting our free throws, but that just seems to be the way it is in this gym, where it's always so hot. They blame it on the swimming pool, but it's that way every year. I've always said Ricks, North Idaho and here settle the conference championship every year. Each of them gets two or three home wins against leading contenders. It isn't our place, and it isn't Dixie and

Reeves says he'd settle for less with Giants

DENVER — Dan Reeves wants to be head coach of the New York Giants, and is ready to push for it.

Reeves, fired last week by the Denver Broncos, earlier said he would not actively seek the Giants' job. But now he feels he must dispel the perception that he insists on complete control of the club's day-to-day operation. "I've got to do something to let them know that's not the case," he said Thursday. "There's a lot of different ways to do it."

"It would be dumb for me to go into a situation like New York, where George Young has won a couple of Super Bowls, and say, 'You don't know anything about personnel.'"

Reeves said rather than wait for Young to call him, he would have to call the Giants general manager.

Lewis-Clark baseball coach nabs coach-of-year honors

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics on Friday chose Ed Cheff of Lewis-Clark State College in Idaho as its 1992 National baseball coach of the year.

Cheff guided Lewis-Clark to its sixth consecutive NAIA baseball title last season. The school compiled a 55-10 record in 1992 and claimed the national crown by going 5-0 in the tournament held in Des Moines, Iowa.

Recruiting violations place Blue Raiders on probation

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. — The NCAA on Friday put Middle Tennessee State's basketball program on probation for two years and barred the Blue Raiders from postseason play this year.

The penalties were levied because of recruiting violations during 1987-90 and overlap five sanctions the university imposed upon itself after its own investigation.

Enduring a soggy opener

Love, Azinger end 36-hole day in lead of 1993's 1st event

The Associated Press

CARLSBAD, Calif. — Davis Love III and Paul Azinger shared the lead Friday after one long, wet day accounted for half the holes in the Tournament of Champions.

“Whether the last half will ever be played is still open to question. “Who knows what will happen the next two days?” Love asked after spending a little more than eight hours in a 36-hole trek over the soggy, sudden, rain-soaked La Costa Resort course.

During the afternoon, on the second 18 holes of the day, “I kept thinking this may be the last round of the tournament.” Love said.

“I thought about that, too,” Azinger said. “I wanted to birdie the last hole, just in case.”

The double round of 36 holes was necessitated when a killer storm battering the West Coast flooded the course Thursday and forced a day-late start to the opening event on the PGA Tour.

The tournament now is back on schedule. But intermittent showers continued through the day and another storm is expected late Saturday.

“I wish we could play 27 tomorrow and have a 9-hole finish,” Love said, tongue in cheek, after plodding through mud and muck, through and around pools and puddles of casual water that forced officials to allow players to lift, clean and place balls in the fairway.

“If we hadn't been able to lift, clean and place we couldn't have played,” Love said after a pair of 5-under-par-67's and a 134 total. He said he frequently had to move the ball 20 yards or more to find dry land and once went as much as 40 yards.

Azinger, who qualified for this winners-only event with a victory in the 1992 season, the Tour Championship, scored six consecutive birdies in an opening round of 65 and closed with a 69.

Ray Floyd, the only man to qualify for both the PGA Tour section and the Senior PGA Tour portion of the separate but simultaneous competition, was unable to capitalize on his unique opportunity to double dip from two purses in the same tournament.

Floyd, who won the Doral Open before his 50th birthday last year, then won three times on the senior tour, could do no better than rounds of 71-72 and, at 143, was nine shots back of Love and Azinger and four behind Jim Dent, the leader of the senior section at 139. Dent had a 70 in the morning and came back with a 69 that included a last-hole birdie in the afternoon. Two previous winners of the Senior of C, defending champion Al Geiberger and George Archer, were a single stroke off the pace at 140. Geiberger had a pair of 70's and Archer, the 1990 winner, shot 71-69. ## Soggy San Francisco would favor Redskins; O'Donnell receives start

The Associated Press

First, they had to endure muck that they backed into the playoffs. Then, they devastated Minnesota. Still, the Washington Redskins are considered a questionable commodity.

Game-day weather - B7

But a victory Saturday over San Francisco — given the 49ers' playoff record at home and Washington's dismal experiences at Candlestick Park — would stamp the Redskins a definite threat to win the NFC crown and defend their Super Bowl title. And the 49ers — despite being 7-2 in the playoffs at home since 1981 and 4-0 there against Washington (including a postseason victory two years ago) — are wary of the Redskins.

“Given a forecast of rain that could favor the running game, and a peek at the Minnesota game film, who can blame them?” “I've seen that film many times,” San Francisco defensive coordinator Bill McPherson said of Washington's 24-7 victory a week ago. “They just want to knock you off the ball.”

In that game, the Redskins' ground-control offense held the ball for a playoff record 42 minutes, 43 seconds. “Washington has a big power-type running game, so in weather like this, that would be to their advantage,” coach George Seifert said. “But don't expect the pass-oriented 49ers to change their approach, especially if rain makes a quagmire of the always-soft Candlestick turf.”

there's a certain advantage also because it's more difficult for the pass rushers to get untracked,” Seifert said. “At the same time, the receivers know exactly where they're going. The defensive backs don't.” Their NFC semifinal matchup is one of four NFL playoff games this weekend. Buffalo visits Pittsburgh in an AFC game Saturday. On Sunday, Dallas entertains Philadelphia in a meeting of Washington's NFC East competitors, and San Diego is at Miami in the AFC. Rain notwithstanding, the Washington

Baseball winds up signings

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Toronto re-signed shortstop Alfredo Griffin and Minnesota reshored outfielder Randy Bush before Friday's midnight deadline, and outfielder Chris James left San Francisco to sign with the Houston Astros.

Pitcher Dave Smith also went back to the Chicago Cubs. Only one player, went past the deadline, pitcher Mark Grant, who now can't resign with the Seattle Mariners until May 1.

The four who agreed to contracts Friday technically got minor league deals, but they also agreed to side letters for major league contracts they will sign if they are moved to major league rosters at the end of spring training. Griffin agreed at $500,000, of which $100,000 is guaranteed, and has the chance to earn another $400,000 in performance bonuses.

Bush gets $250,000 with the chance for $150,000 in performance bonuses, and James gets $500,000 with the chance to make $200,000 in bonuses. Smith gets $250,000, with about $50,000 guaranteed, and the chance to make $50,000 in bonuses.

Minnesota also agreed to a minor-league contract that brings back 41-year-old pitcher Bert Blyleven, who has had two stints with the Twins. Blyleven, who has 287 career victories, would get a $300,000 major league deal if he makes the team and the chance for $1 million in bonuses based on innings and roster time.

In other moves, pitcher Chuck Cary agreed to a minor-league contract with the

Philosophical differences do in Pats coach

The Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — Dick MacPherson was fired as coach of the New England Patriots on Friday night, two years and a day after taking the job, he called a “limitless” opportunity.

“I dreamed of coming here and putting this thing together,” he said at a news conference. “I didn't stop dreaming until right now.”

The dream died because of what chief executive officer Sam Jankovich called “philosophical differences” between himself and MacPherson over ways to rebuild the Patriots after their 2-14 season.

Both said at a news conference they wouldn't collaborate, although MacPherson reportedly resisted Jankovich's idea that some of the 12 assistant coaches be fired. None of the assistants was fired Friday, and Jankovich said some could be kept on the new coach.

Charger allegedly head-butted cop
 SAN DIEGO — San Diego Chargers safety DeLano Hall was arrested Friday for investigation of drunken driving and faces charges for allegedly head-butting a sheriff's deputy, authorities said.

Team officials, heading for Sunday's AFC divisional playoff game at Miami, had little comment. General manager Bobby Beathard said he didn't think Hall would make the trip. However, a spokesman at the county jail, who declined to give her name, said Hall posted $8,600 bail at 10:10 a.m. and was released one hour later so he could catch a plane.

Bears defensive coach steps back
 LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Vince Tobin, defensive coordinator for the Chicago Bears the past seven years, said Friday he is removing himself from consideration as the team's next head coach.

Tobin said he withdrew as a candidate to replace fired head coach Mike Ditka because of circumstances beyond his control.

In his statement, released by the Bears, Tobin did not detail the circumstances he mentioned. But he later said he did not believe his appointment would go over well with the public because it would leave the impression that his brother, Bears personnel director Bill Tobin, gave him a boost into the position.

Schott will respond to allegations
 CINCINNATI — Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott will speak with baseball's ruling executive council on Jan. 22 to answer allegations that she made racial and ethnic slurs.

Her lawyer, Robert Bennett, had asked to have until Jan. 25 to respond to evidence collected by the four-person committee appointed in December to investigate Schott. The executive council can fine her up to $250,000 and suspend her.

Jackson runs following hip surgery
 CHICAGO — Bo Jackson ran for the first time this week since undergoing hip replacement surgery last year, Chicago White Sox officials said Friday.

Jackson ran every day this week on a running pad placed in a service tunnel at Comiskey Park. Trainers said Jackson's pace was between a jog and sprint. He ran 20 seconds at a time in a fairly straight line and took 20-second rest periods.

Crum reaches 500th milestone win
 LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Denny Crum's stopover at Louisville has resulted in 500 victories.

Crum registered his 500th career victory Thursday night at Tampa, Fla., where the Cardinals beat South Florida 98-75 in their Metro Conference opener.

"I'm glad it's behind us," Crum, 55, said. "It's a nice feeling to be there, now we can concentrate on other things. When you start the season knowing it's close, you wonder how long it's going to take."

It took eight games to his 22nd season, making Crum the second-fastest coach to reach the milestone.

Crum's Cardinals, who won his 500th game in the 30th game of his 20th season while at UNLV, did it quickly.

Williams grabs lead in Delco Classic
 TORRANCE, Calif. — Two-time PBA titlist Ron Williams won seven of eight matches Friday to take a commanding lead with just one match-play round remaining at the AC-Delco Classic.

Williams, whose last title came here in 1990, averaged 252 during Friday's early round of match play, raising his pinfall to 8,535. Williams, who rolled 27 consecutive strikes during the round, including a 300 in his sixth game, has a 224-pin lead.

Racing issues rules for new cars
 PAMPAS, Fla. — The International Motor Sports Association has issued rules and specifications for World Sports Cars, the new open cockpit cars that will eventually replace the existing GTP prototypes in IMSA's Slingship Camel GT Series.

The rules announced Friday emphasize contemporary safety protection and the prohibition of expensive, costly air conditioning, electric engine variations and turbocharging. Fuel capacity will be limited to 70 liters, or 18.5 gallons, comparable to a street car.

The GTP cars currently in use cost upwards of $500,000 to produce. IMSA officials say they hope the WSC cars will cost less than half of that total.

Washington Post — Americans increased their borrowing in November for the third consecutive month, the longest string of advances in two years, the government said Friday.

Consumer installment credit outstanding rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2 percent to $723.9 billion, the Federal Reserve said, its rise from 1.9 percent in October and 2.4 percent in September.

The last time outstanding credit increased three months in a row was September-November 1990. Before the last gains, outstanding credit had shrunk for seven consecutive months.

Mutual funds

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Advanta Mutual Fund Group of New York announced that it will acquire the Fidelity and Investment Management Co. mutual fund business, including 13 equity funds and 13 bond funds, in a $1.5-billion deal.

The deal, which is subject to regulatory review, will allow Advanta to expand its investment services and provide a more comprehensive offering of equity and bond funds. Fidelity, a well-known mutual fund manager, has a long history of successful fund management.

Advanta's acquisition of Fidelity's equity funds will include such funds as the Fidelity Divers. Intl. Portfolio and the Fidelity Growth Portfolio. The bond funds include the Fidelity Div. Bond Portfolio and the Fidelity Bond Portfolio.

The deal is expected to close in the second half of 1993. Advanta's Chairman, James J. Dowling, said the acquisition would significantly strengthen Advanta's position in the mutual fund industry.

Fidelity's Chairman, William G. Green, said the sale would allow Fidelity to focus on its core business of managing investment services for institutional investors. He also expressed confidence in Advanta's ability to manage the equity and bond funds successfully.

The deal is part of a larger trend of consolidation in the mutual fund industry. Several large mutual fund managers have recently announced acquisitions of smaller fund companies to create larger, more diversified entities.

Advanta's mutual fund business will be integrated with its existing equity and bond funds. The company has a strong track record of fund performance and a large client base, which will provide a solid foundation for the new equity and bond funds.

The acquisition is expected to add over $1 billion in assets under management to Advanta's mutual fund business. This will allow Advanta to compete more effectively with other major mutual fund managers in the industry.

Advanta's mutual fund business is one of its key areas of focus. The company has a strong commitment to providing high-quality investment services and to the long-term success of its investors.

The deal is a significant milestone for Advanta and represents a major step in its growth strategy. It will allow Advanta to continue to expand its mutual fund offerings and to provide even better investment services to its investors.

Advanta's mutual fund business is well-positioned to benefit from the growing popularity of equity and bond funds. As investors seek to diversify their portfolios and achieve long-term growth, Advanta's equity and bond funds provide an attractive alternative to traditional investments.

The acquisition of Fidelity's equity and bond funds is a key part of Advanta's strategy to become a leading mutual fund manager. The company has the resources and expertise to manage these funds effectively and to ensure the success of its investors.
