Recycling firm wants to handle county waste

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A local company offered the Twin Falls County Commission another private-sector plan Friday to solve the solid waste problem — but this one could eliminate the need for a landfill.

American Recycling proposes building a $5 million facility to recycle and recover 80 percent of the county's trash. The company would ship the remaining 20 percent of the trash to a federally approved landfill and the county could forgo building one of its own.

Company co-owner Tamara Harney estimated a cost of $36.25 a ton for the county to take its trash to the facility and avoid building a landfill. If the county wanted to be responsible for the 20 percent of trash not recycled or recovered for fuel, the cost would drop to just under $26 a ton, Harney said.

Under the latter plan, the county must build its own landfill or contract to take its trash to another federally approved one.

"This is a very common-sense approach," Harney told the commissioners. "We want to re-use our natural resources and we don't want to bury them."

Harney estimated an annual cost to the county of $1.3 million if it chose not to build a landfill and pay the $36-a-ton rate. If the county paid the lower rate of $26 a ton, the annual cost would be $930,000.

she estimated.

J-U-B and EHM Engineers recently estimated for the county to build a landfill on Hub-Butte-south-of-Twin-Falls, the annual cost for the landfill, roll-off sites and management of the facility would range from $1.3 million to $1.5 million.

Building the landfill would cost an estimated $5.6 million. Costs will go down considerably if the county does not have to place a liner system under the landfill, said engineer Steve Freilburger.

Neither this plan nor Harney's includes the cost of trash pickup, such as that provided by PSI for the city of Twin Falls.

County Commission Chairman Jim Fraley said Friday he liked Harney's plan but was not sure if the county can afford it.

"I was encouraged, but we need to find out if it is feasible. Realistically, I still think the county needs a landfill — just for a backup," he said.

Harney offered to post a performance bond in case something went wrong. This way, the county would have money to find a landfill for its trash while the problem was being corrected.

Commissioner Norma Blass said she'll look at the bottom line of Harney's proposal. But the plan might give residents a chance to show how much they are willing to pay for recycling, she said.

"The concepts are good. Are the people willing to pay this much for recycling?"

Judge blocks new Colorado anti-gay law

The Associated Press

DENVER — A judge blocked Colorado's anti-gay-rights amendment from taking effect Friday, saying it may well be unconstitutional.

Denver District Judge Jeffrey Bayless judge blocked the measure until a lawsuit challenging it is decided — probably not before late this year.

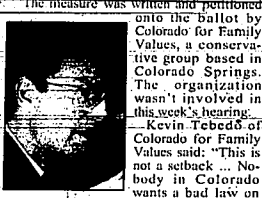

Bayless issued the preliminary injunction on the day Amendment 2 was to have taken effect, after hearing four days of testimony. Gov. Roy Romer had said he would sign the measure unless blocked.

Amendment 2, approved by voters on Nov. 3, prohibits state and local governments from passing laws that protect homosexuals from discrimination. Such laws already on the books in Boulder, Denver and Aspen would be invalidated.

The measure has provoked an outcry by gay-rights supporters and has spurred several major cities and national organizations to boycott Colorado. Several conventions have been canceled and celebrities have shunned Aspen as a vacation spot.

An attorney for the amendment's opponents, Jean Dubofsky, was delighted by Bayless' ruling. "I believe it will slow the effort to obtain similar state constitutional amendments," she said.

The state attorney general's office, which defended the amendment, would study whether to appeal, said state attorney Tim Tynkovich.

Bayless

The measure was written and petitioned onto the ballot by Colorado for Family Values, a conservative group based in Colorado Springs. The organization was not involved in this week's hearing.

Kevin Tebbs of Colorado for Family Values said: "This is not a setback ... Nobody in Colorado wants a bad law on the books. This is an opportunity for the courts to check and balance and make sure they are doing the right thing."

Denver Mayor Wellington Webb, who opposed the amendment and since its passage has tried to blunt the boycott movement, said he hoped the injunction would help ease tensions.

"It is my hope that we will be able to bring people together," he said. "We all live in one state and we need to respect the amendments."

U.S. forces seem set for another Iraq raid

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration signaled on Friday that it remained "the right to strike without notice" after Iraq appeared to defuse temporarily another showdown with the White House.

President Bush demanded that Saddam Hussein allow U.N. weapons inspectors to fly into Baghdad, but no further military action appeared in the offing — even after Iraq said it couldn't guarantee the inspectors' safety.

The administration withheld an official response to Baghdad's claim but officials from the White House to the Pentagon expressed frustration with the new showdown, which came just two days after allied warplanes bombed targets in southern Iraq.

A senior Pentagon official said, "We reserve the right to strike without notice. That hasn't changed any."

In remarks at the White House before flying to Camp David, Md., for the weekend, Bush said the United Nations had informed Iraq that if it did not grant flight clearance by 2 p.m. MST Friday, it would be considered in noncompliance with terms of the U.N. resolutions that ended the Persian Gulf War.

Shortly before that deadline, a spokesman for Iraq's U.N. mission said U.N. inspectors had been told they can re-assert their rights, with the caveat that Baghdad would not guarantee their safety.

Officials at the White House, Pentagon and State Department — none willing to speak on the record — said the administration considered Iraq's response unsatisfactory.

By early evening, the U.S. military appeared poised to launch another air assault on Iraq with aircraft based in Saudi Arabia and aboard the aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk in the Persian Gulf. But a few hours after the deadline passed, a U.S. statement offering Iraq another chance seemed to delay the action.

Stranded woman faces surgery

The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Doctors will partially amputate the feet of a woman who survived eight days huddling with her infant son in a snow cave while her husband tried to find a way through a blizzard for help.

Surgeons said Friday they hope to preserve enough of Jennifer Stolpa's feet to allow her to walk without prostheses, said Denise Yoximer, spokeswoman for Washoe Medical Center. The operation is scheduled for Monday morning.

Mrs. Stolpa, 20, and her 21-year-old husband, James, remain in satisfactory condition. Five-month-old Clayton wasn't injured.

The couple's truck became stranded in a snow drift in the extreme northwest corner of Nevada on Dec. 29 when they tried to take a shortcut from Castro Valley, Calif., to attend a funeral in Pocatello, Idaho.

They walked 12 miles through snowdrifts until they found shelter under a ledge Sunday. There, Mrs. Stolpa breast-fed the baby for at least two days in a makeshift snow cave while her husband waited for 22 hours for help. They were rescued Jan. 6.

Report: Disturbed Harral's patient assaulted others

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

BUHL — Over a two-week period last fall, an emotionally disturbed Harral's Nursing Home patient repeatedly screamed at other patients, slapped and bit them, before state regulators finally intervened to stop the abuse.

That's one of the reasons the Buhl long-term care facility was barred this week from receiving Federal Medicare and Medicaid payments, said Jean Schoonover, chief of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's Bureau of Facility Standards.

The "severely disturbed woman" and the other patients she allegedly assaulted were unharmed in a Dec. 16 Health and Welfare survey report, obtained Friday by The Times-News. The report lists dozens of other deficiencies, ranging from neglect of patients to medication errors.

The bureau and the federal Department of Health and Human Services together decided to decertify the nursing home effective Feb. 1, meaning that it will no longer be paid for services to Medicaid and Medicare residents.

Under the sanction, Harral's can be paid for 22 Medicaid and Medicare residents until March 2.

Harral's, owned by Beverly Enterprises, of Fort Smith, Ark., has a month to appeal the decision. The company, the largest long-term nursing home chain in the country, has yet to do so, Schoonover said.

Rather than appeal, Harral's administrator Richard Marcotte said Friday that the nursing home's staff will address all of the deficiencies before Jan. 25 and then invite the state inspectors to return so they can see the changes for themselves.

"I don't stop the decertification process," Marcotte said. "Harral's still believes in quality of care and will attack every deficiency."

Marcotte declined to comment on the disturbed woman's case.

Schoonover said Health and Welfare would not ignore Harral's efforts to get back into compliance, but currently the department is preparing to support its decision for any future appeal hearing.

"I can't tell him he can't make that assertion, but I think everyone needs to keep in mind we've had that same assertion twice last year," she said.

According to the Health and Welfare survey report, the nursing home began documenting problems with the disturbed woman in early October.

"Resident No. 1 had multiple drug orders between Oct. 3 and Dec. 16 for agitation, verbal/physical abuse of staff and other residents and continuous screaming" according to the report, written by Health and Welfare nurse Jan Zimmerman, Betty Vivian and Celeste Rush.

The facility's staff gave the woman four different psychoactive drugs, with multiple dose changes, during a 60-day period, the

Weather summary

Bright sunshine prevailed in the Magic Valley Friday, with temperatures moderating into the 30s during the afternoon.

Winds were light, making for a generally enjoyable day although slushy conditions from thawing snow and ice made footing and driving hazardous.

Dense fog blanketed the Treasure Valley of southwest Idaho Friday with visibility near zero in many places, the National Weather Service said.

Dense fog was also reported at Malad at midday.

The rest of southern Idaho was sunny except for some clouds at Idaho Falls and cloudy at Spencer. The central and northern part of Idaho was mostly cloudy to cloudy with fog at Grangeville reducing the visibility to one-half mile.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 41 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley reported the coldest at 7 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 83 degrees at Comi Springs, Hollywood, and Miami, Fla. The lowest was 21 below zero at Williston, N.D.

More rain drenches Southern California, Idaho eastward

A flood watch was in effect through Saturday for much of Southern California, the National Weather Service said.

In the storm's path to the east, a flood warning was posted along the Gila River in Arizona, from Coolidge Dam to Painted Rock Dam. Flows from Coolidge Dam decreased slightly but hundreds remained flooded out of their homes downstream.

Flows into San Carlos Lake, behind Coolidge Dam, had never topped 5,000 cubic feet per second until this week—the rate Friday was 16,240 cubic feet per second, federal officials said.

To the north, a winter storm watch was in effect through Saturday over west-central Nevada and higher elevations of southern Nevada.

In Oregon, icy roads delayed school openings Friday in the Willamette Valley and dense fog delayed some flights and made driving difficult in some areas.

rights of all people." Eight homosexuals, a heterosexual with AIDS and three cities filed the lawsuit challenging the measure's constitutionality. The opponents asked Bayless for the temporary ban until the lawsuit went to trial.

Bayless on Thursday blocked the law until Friday afternoon so he could review four days of testimony this week on the injunction request. He then ruled that the opponents had a reasonable chance of proving that the measure violates equal-protection clauses of the U.S. Constitution.

Some homosexuals challenging the amendment testified this week that they feared for their safety if the measure took effect.

Dubofsky, the opponents' attorney, said 175,000 to 455,000 homosexuals in Colorado would be relegated to second-class citizenship. He would restrict homosexuals from participating in the political process and would deny them freedom of expression.

Recycling

Under American Recycling's plan, county trash would be hauled to 23,000-square-foot building outside the Twin Falls city limits.

Recyclables — cardboard, aluminum, ferrous and non-ferrous metals — which generally make up 20 to 30 percent of the waste stream, would be recovered from the trash, she said.

Up to 60 percent of the remaining waste would be turned into a fuel to sell to businesses that burn coal for energy as part of their operations. Trash not recycled or turned into fuel, approximately 20 percent of the amount that initially enters the facility, would go to a landfill, Harney said.

American Recycling would use proven technology to separate recyclables and recover materials, Harney said. She showed the commissioners videos of operations in Michigan, Illinois and Utah where the technology is used.

For the facility to be running by the October when the new federal landfill rules are scheduled to take effect, the company needs a decision from the commission by March 1. The company has arranged short-term financing through a division of the J.R. Simplot company and First Security Bank will provide long-term financing, she said.

If the county wants to own the facility or the property, American Recycling would negotiate to manage the enterprise. But if the county owns the facility, it would have to fund the $5 million cost of building it.

American Recycling is the third private-sector party to offer a plan to help the county meet new federal rules on landfills. The rules, called Subtitle D, are set to take effect in October.

The staff failed to prevent pressure sores on six of 10 patients the inspectors checked. Five residents who died between October and December had deep pressure sores on their bodies at the time of their deaths.

Several residents had bruises and skin tears that were related to the quality of care they received. One had several unexplained bruises on her arms and legs.

Another patient's two head injuries from falls were not discovered until a nurse's aide saw blood on her pillow. Four days later, the woman had a fractured toe and a sprained ankle.

Six residents, including the disturbed woman, received antipsychotic medicine, but were not evaluated for a possible reduction in medications.

One man, diagnosed as manic-depressive, had been on Haldol, an anti-psychotic drug, for 14 months by October. The medicine was to control "aberrant sexual behavior" and "pacing, hitting and slapping." Shortly after a pharmacist suggested the nurse home consider reducing his medication, the facility stopped giving him any drug at all.

Report

Harrah's failed to identify the causes of her behavior, and did not initiate a program to curb the problems other than continuing to give her the medications, the report says.

Between Nov. 30 and Dec. 12, the nursing home documented multiple incidents of the woman shouting at other patients and slapping, striking, shoving and scratching them.

On Dec. 13, the woman beat her head against a wall, and that afternoon entered another patient's room, grabbed her arms and struck her. The victim became "very frightened," the report says.

After this incident, a doctor ordered the woman restrained.

Although she assaulted other residents 11 times within two weeks, the Harrah's staff did not consult social workers or psychiatrists about the woman's problems, while allowing her "the greatest amount of freedom," the survey report says.

"It was determined that the facility failed to protect other residents from physical abuse and from a severely disturbed resident," the report says. "This resulted in the residents living in an atmosphere of fear and intimidation."

After the state inspection, the woman was transferred to another facility equipped with a special-care unit.

According to the survey, the state inspectors also reported that:

- Residents rarely received baths.
- One patient had four baths in 3 1/2 months.

Gays believe Clinton administration will bring in a new era

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hours after Bill Clinton is sworn into office, some 1,500 people will attend the first gay and lesbian inaugural ball, a celebration of what the gay community sees as a new era of inclusion in American society.

Gay leaders say Clinton got more than 70 percent of the gay vote, and perhaps no group has higher expectations of change when the new administration takes office Jan. 20. "It marks a turning point, and I call it a rite of passage," said Robert Bray of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, a sponsor of the inaugural gala at the National Press Club. "We're going from political outsider and social pariah to part of the governing coalition of our nation."

Gays look to Clinton for support in three areas — an end to the ban on gays in the military, federal protection of their civil rights and a greater government role in the fight against AIDS. They also expect to see more openly gay and lesbian people in high government jobs.

Bush scoffed at reports of Iran-Contra ties

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House released excerpts of President Bush's diaries and other records on the Iran-Contra affair Friday.

They show Bush in 1986 dismissed early news reports alleging his involvement in the scandal as "crazy information."

The White House also released the transcript of Bush's five-hour videotaped deposition to Iran-Contra investigators on Jan. 11, 1988, in his vice presidential office.

A written transcript of Bush's tape-recorded diary for Nov. 9, 1986, the week after the scandal came to light, read: "Sunday the papers are all full of Iran. A lot of crazy information — some of it that the arms dealers that were arrested felt I was involved."

President-elect Bill Clinton, right, is the man from whom much is expected by many segments of American society. Here, he and Vice President-elect Al Gore listen to appointees' comments during a news conference Thursday.

Victory Fund, which supports gays running for political office, will honor David Mianer, a gay Los Angeles corporate consultant and Clinton friend who helped shape the president-elect's policies toward gays.

Among the Clinton hires expected to attend are Secretary of State-designate Warren Christopher, Secretary of Commerce designate Ron Brown, senior strategist James Carville and transition communications director George Stephanopoulos.

Bray noted that Clinton mentioned the fight against AIDS only 26 seconds into his acceptance speech on Nov. 3. King recalled Clinton's call to the family of Ricky Ray, the 15-year-old Saratoga, Fla., boy who recently died of AIDS, leaving two hemophilic brothers with the disease. Clinton has invited the family to the inauguration.

"People feel they've come out of the darkness of the last 12 years," said Bob Hatoy, an AIDS-infected man who spoke at the Democratic National Convention last summer and now is on the Clinton transition team.

Clinton supports appointment of an AIDS czar and full funding for the Ryan White Care Act, which distributes federal money to cities to combat AIDS. He said he would sign an executive order prohibiting discrimination in federal employment, contracts and government services.

He does not believe gay and lesbian couples should be allowed to marry and receive the legal and tax benefits available to heterosexual spouses. He also opposes job quotas or affirmative action plans to make up for past discrimination.

Hatoy said policies now being pulled together will clear up the doubts of any who worry that Clinton won't find the money to combat AIDS or will give in to Pentagon pressure and postpone lifting the ban on gays in the military. Hatoy said it was unlikely, as suggested in some reports, that Clinton might decide on a roundabout approach rather than issuing a "definitive executive order rescinding the ban."

Clinton has endorsed a federal civil rights act to outlaw discrimination against gays in housing and employment, an important issue because of regional setbacks like the passage of an anti-gay rights referendum in Colorado.

"The anti-gay concept is being exported to other states, and the ultimate strategy (for blocking that) is federal legislation," said Tony Ogden, acting director of Equality Colorado, a Denver civil rights group.

Passage of a gay civil rights bill could take several years, but "the president can address the civil rights issues inherent in this type of vitriolic legislation. He is in a position to demonstrate strong leadership," Ogden said. William Waybourn, executive director of the Gay and Lesbian Victory Fund, said gays have every president makes campaign promises he can't keep. "We're not taking anything for granted," he said. "This is not going to be a perfect union by any stretch of the imagination."

But Waybourn agreed with others that so far the Clinton people "have done everything they said they would do." And that's cause for celebration.

"We have to keep Mr. Clinton to his promises," said Bray, who is helping organize the inaugural ball. But for now, "just the idea of gay people dancing bow-tie-to-bow-tie and cumberbund-to-cumberbund is an exciting moment for us."

"A lot of misinformation," Bush, then vice president, wrote, expressing concern also that a frustrated Secretary of State George Shultz might resign. "His people are not dealing from a full deck here in the State Department," Bush wrote.

The following day he wrote that Reagan "is very suspicious of the State Department bureaucracy."

A separate Nov. 9, 1986, entry said, "all in all, a troubling weekend. People running for cover, blaming the right wing, who is normally on Shultz's case, rallying behind him because of the trading arms for hostages policy. At least the policy they see as trading arms for hostages."

The transcripts of Bush's taped comments weren't turned over to Iran-Contra prosecutors because of their "overly broad document, request," former Attorney General Griffin Bell said in a 14-page report. The White House announced the hiring of Bell the week after Bush's Christmas Eve pardons of Caspar Weinberger and five other Iran-Contra figures.

Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh disclosed hours after the pardons that the White House hadn't disclosed the existence of Bush's notes until Dec. 11, 1992. Walsh said Bush's notes had been improperly withheld.

"It became necessary for outside counsel to investigate Judge Walsh's allegations," Bell said in the report released by the White House. The transcript of Bush's videotaped testimony showed the then-vice president to be vague about events at the White House surrounding the Iran arms sales.

Earlier today, White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the material "clearly establishes the vice president had no particular involvement in the Iran-Contra situation."

Bush has maintained that as vice president, he did not know the 1985-1986 U.S. arms sales were part of a swap-of-weapons-for-the-release-of-American-hostages held in Lebanon. Bush, under oath, answered questions in 1988 in his vice presidential office from lawyers for Walsh and FBI investigators.

Court bars destruction of White House records

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court on Friday ordered departing White House and National Security Council officials to make portable backup copies of records stored in their personal computers before deleting the materials from the machines.

Only after the millions of E-mail and other electronic records are preserved in full on backup disks or tapes can officials erase them from the original hard drives of machines that will be inherited by their replacements in the Clinton administration, the court ruled.

The order by a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia partially overturned a lower court judge's rulings Thursday and last week forbidding the White House from cleaning out or writing over the computer data before President Bush leaves office.

Defendants may remove, delete or alter such information as they see fit, so long as the information is preserved in identical form, the appeals court panel headed by Chief Judge Abner Mikva and including Circuit Judges Stephen Williams and David Sentelle.

The White House had said earlier Friday it would hold off destroying any electronic records while awaiting the results of its appeal.

U.S. sets up naval barricade to stop Haitians

MIAMI (AP) — The United States ordered an unprecedented naval barricade to block a feared exodus of refugees, saying it was necessary to prevent a "massive loss of life at sea."

Twenty-two U.S. Coast Guard and Navy ships, along with a dozen aircraft, will ring the Haitian coast outside its 12-mile territorial limit and patrol the 600-mile escape route to Florida, said Adm. J. William Kime.

The Coast Guard commandant said he launched Operation Able Manner after consulting both the Bush and incoming Clinton administrations.

"We hope our efforts... will greatly deter the numbers who will venture out in what is inherently a very unsafe effort," Kime said.

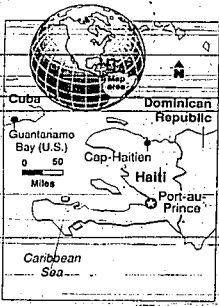

State Department historian William Shroy said the scope of the mission is unheard of, adding, "I don't know of any precedent for the United States coming out trying to turn aside so many people on the high seas."

Coast Guard intelligence has spotted 200 boats in the Gulf of Mexico in Haiti, and more than 1,400 already in the water could be used in a massive boatlift, Kime said.

About 900 Haitians already have been stopped this year, and Kime said a worst-case scenario would send 100,000 to 200,000 refugees toward Florida.

But recent broadcasts by ousted Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and President-elect Clinton asking Haitians to stay home and help demoralize the country should keep many potential immigrants at home, he said.

The U.S. ships will stop rickety, overcrowded sailboats and small freighters that have sailed thousands of miles from Florida — or sometimes to their deaths, he said, citing the recent reported sinking of a freighter off Cuba with 400 people aboard. Normal shipping will be allowed through.

"This is not a blockade," Kime said. "The concern we have is for the potential massive loss of life at sea."

The commander repeatedly refused to call the mission a blockade, a term with hostile overtones when used to describe actions aimed at stopping shipments of goods or weapons during a war.

Haitian refugee advocates in Miami were quick to condemn the plan, saying 3,000 of those forcibly returned so far have been executed by the military government. They cited no immigration officials will be on the U.S. boats to consider political asylum claims.

"They cannot put up a blockade at sea and say they are concerned for the lives of the people when they are not giving safety and security inside the country," said Rolande Dorney, head of the Haitian Refugee Center in Miami.

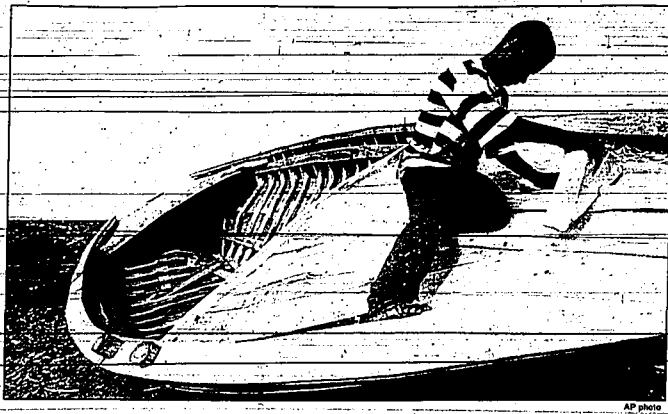

"Donay said if the United States is serious about saving lives, it also should intercept Cuban rafters who cross the Florida Straits."

"Why a blockade for Haiti and none for Cuba?" she asked.

Clinton had promised during his election campaign to reverse a Bush administration policy of forcibly returning Haitians en masse to their sea to the United States. But on Thursday, six days before he takes office, Clinton said in his first foreign-policy initiative he would temporarily continue the policy to avoid a "humanitarian tragedy."

Clinton transition communications director George Stephanopoulos said the "patrolling off Haiti was a contingency plan" that had been worked out with the Coast Guard.

"It was part of the discussions" between Clinton and Bush teams, Stephanopoulos said. "We've been very closely involved on both Haiti and Iraq."

A Haitian wood worker fits a piece of wood onto the nearly finished hull of a 40-foot boat on the beach near Ca Ira, 20 miles southwest of Port-Au-Prince Friday.

coincidentally filed a federal lawsuit Friday in Miami aimed at protecting the rights of refugees who reach the United States, criticized Clinton for breaking the campaign promise.

"I agree with candidate Clinton that the use of the Coast Guard to send people back without any kind of hearing is morally outrageous — I don't know what has changed," he said.

Kime said although there are some risks, Able Manner should ultimately save lives.

He pointed out the Coast Guard's record since the interception effort began in 1981.

"We have safely interdicted and rescued at sea over 40,000 Haitians — men, women and children — without the loss of a single life," the admiral said.

Able Manner, which will include planes and helicopters from the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo, Cuba, will enlist about 12 heavy and medium Coast Guard cutters, five patrol boats and five Navy ships, Kime said.

The 378-foot cutter Gallatin from New York will be the command ship. Four ships already are on their way, and the entire task force should be in place sometime next week, he said.

Bush presses for nuclear treaty ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) President Bush asked the Senate on Friday to ratify the new nuclear missile reduction treaty with Russia, saying it is "the capstone" of a long-term arms control effort.

"The START II treaty is clearly in the interests of the United States and represents a watershed in our efforts to stabilize the nuclear balance and further reduce strategic offensive arms," the president said in a letter to the Senate.

The treaty signed in Moscow Jan. 3 would reduce the two nations' arsenals of long-range nuclear weapons to about one third of current levels by the year 2003. All land-based, multiple-warhead missiles would be cut in half.

Bush signed the agreement with Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Bush said that acceptance "serves as a clear indication of the ending of the Cold War."

preliminary round of reductions over seven years, but Ukraine and Belarus, the two nuclear-armed former Soviet republics have delayed ratifying the accord.

"It was part of the discussions" between Clinton and Bush teams, Stephanopoulos said. "We've been very closely involved on both Haiti and Iraq."

The treaty signed in 1991 called for the elimination of heavy ICBMs and the effective elimination of all other multiple-warhead ICBMs within an end to the most dangerous weapons of the Cold War, he said.

The treaty spells out procedures for neutralizing ICBM silo launchers and for inspections of heavy bombers to verify compliance.

Bush called the treaty a milestone in the U.S.-Russia effort to reduce the nuclear threat, especially that of long range missiles with multiple warheads.

The president called a provision for elimination of the feared SS18 missiles "a major accomplishment."

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — A 10-year-old girl escaped with only minor cuts and bruises after being dragged more than 1,000 feet because the driver of her school bus got caught in a school bus door, police said.

The ordeal for fifth-grader Bobbiann Hoffman started after school Thursday as she was getting off the bus in front of her home.

Health-designate promises anti-smoking move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health Secretary-designate Donna Shalala pledged Friday to be an avid campaigner against smoking, with a focus on "turning young people off" the habit.

Shalala, breezing through her second and final day of confirmation hearings, said she was known for two things during her tenure as chancellor at the University of Wisconsin's flagship campus: "Firing the football coach and ending the use of public buildings," she told the Senate Labor Committee.

Clinton's pick to head the Department of Health and Human Services didn't directly address any potential action that might stem from an Environmental Protection Agency report last week on the dangers of secondhand smoke.

But she said she would work to find "powerful incentives" to help turn people off smoking, and noted that her ban on smoking on the Wisconsin campus was accompanied by programs to help people break the habit.

Shalala appears headed for easy confirmation: the Senate Finance Committee is expected to endorse her early next week.

At Friday's hearing, she said that more money for the Head Start preschool program and children's immunizations would be among the first items she presses in Congress.

"Unless this nation is prepared to invest now in the poorest and weakest among us, this nation will pay in the future," Shalala said.

Under an expanded Head Start program, which would cost $2 billion a year through 1995, the program would become a full-day, year-round program.

The hearing had its lighthearted moments. Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., warmly welcomed Shalala, who is just 5 feet tall. Mikulski, who likewise isn't very tall, said she was pleased with the appointment of "short, chunky Democrats... I feel that a new day has come."

And Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., noted that because Clinton hasn't settled yet on the specifics of some programs, such as a health care package, there wasn't much for Shalala to do but "bill and smile" since she couldn't provide answers.

Crash survivors say bystanders offered no help

APPLETON, Wis. (AP) — At least two tour buses drove past a deadly bus crash near Cancun, Mexico, without stopping to help, three survivors say.

Twenty-five people were killed Jan. 3 when a bus carrying 52 passengers, most of them foreign tourists, skidded off a rain-slicked jungle road, slammed into a power pole and burst into flames.

The bus was on a day trip to Mayan ruins when it crashed about 25 miles west of the Caribbean resort of Cancun. Officials have said the bus was speeding and that the driver may be charged.

Among the victims was Ellenor M. Velasquez, 71, of Twin Falls, and her daughter, Beverly M. Austin, 44, of Springfield, Va.

Mari Schramm, 26, Nancy Beck, 21, and Jetna Webster, 25, described to reporters in Appleton on Thursday a lack of assistance from other tour buses, bystanders and Mexican hospitals. "I think lives were lost in transit, and others could have been saved if (the hospitals) were set up for this kind of tragedy," Schramm said.

Several people gathered near the accident, but did not help the victims, she said. "I screamed for people to help, but nobody did anything."

Mrs. Schramm said she, Ms. Beck, Ms. Webster, and about seven others were given a lift by a truck driver.

One hospital refused to admit them, Ms. Webster said. At a second hospital, she said, she was "shoved into a corner" a couple of hours before being treated.

Sports world mourns loss of basketball great Iba

The Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — Hank Iba began playing basketball on dirt courts in rural Missouri, wearing uniforms sewn by his mother. He became one of the great coaches in history, a man whose influence is still felt amid the glitz of today's multi-million dollar game.

Iba died of heart failure early Friday. He was 88. He had been hospitalized since Wednesday. Funeral services are scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday at Gallagher Arena in Stillwater.

"Of all the shadows that cast over the game of basketball, his was the biggest," Indiana coach Bob Knight said in a statement.

Knight was one of the many coaches Iba influenced with his preachings of sound defense and a patient, ball-control offense. Iba won 767 games in 41 years, second most in history, and led Oklahoma State — then called Oklahoma.

Please see IBA/A6.

Henry Iba, left, greets Oklahoma State basketball coach Eddie Sutton in 1990. Iba was the second-winningest coach in basketball history.

Coach inspired defense, discipline

The Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — Hank Iba left a legacy of winning and a legion of college basketball coaches who patterned themselves after a coach whose passions were defense and discipline.

Iba, who coached more college basketball games than anyone in history, died Friday of heart failure. He was 88.

"I've always tried to do everything like he did," said Texas-El Paso coach Don Haskins, a player and later an assistant to Iba on the 1972 U.S. Olympic team.

Fourteen others who either played at Iba at Oklahoma State or were assistants under him later went on to head coaching jobs, many of them successful.

Eddie Sutton, a player and assistant under Iba during the 1950s, returned to Oklahoma State in 1991 and became the first coach to take four teams to the NCAA tournament — Creighton-Arkansas, Kentucky and Oklahoma State.

"Everybody recognizes what a great coach he was, but I don't think people, unless you were around him, realize what a great person he was," Sutton said.

"He tried to teach us what it would take to be successful when we left school by showing us how to win on the basketball court — discipline, hard work, and things like that,"

Jack Hartman, who had a career coaching record of 436-226 and took Kansas State to seven NCAA tournaments, played for Iba during the late 1940s and was a graduate assistant from 1951 to 1954.

"He was the most impressive person I've ever met, impressive in terms of strength and authority and determination," Hartman said. "He was such an overpowering person that I knew the minute I was around him, I wanted to be like him. There was no doubt."

Sam Aubrey, who lived down the street from Iba in Stillwater, replaced him as head coach at Oklahoma State in 1971. Bud Millikin spent 16 years as head coach at Maryland, and Wilbur Stateup coached 15 years at Missouri.

Sense of immediacy drives Bills, Dolphins along

The Associated Press

MIAMI — Here and now, if not, maybe never.

The Buffalo Bills and Miami Dolphins, teams on entirely different courses throughout most of their existences, meet Sunday in the AFC championship game. Both feel a sense of immediacy, as if a slight opening leading to another dimension — a Super dimension — has appeared. Seize it!

"For me, it's 'Let's get it done now,'

Dolphins receiver Mark Clayton said. The 10-year veteran played in the Super Bowl this season and in the AFC title game the next year.

Since then, all but one season ended before New Year's, and Miami hasn't gotten as close to the big game as it is this year.

"I would have been willing to bet there was no way for 7-8 years there'd be a hiatus from the championship game for us," Clayton said. "As I look up and down the room and the roster, there are not too many guys who've played in a championship game." There are five — Clayton and fellow receiver Mark Duper, quarterback Dan Marino, punter Reggie Roby and offensive lineman Jeff Ballentine.

"Two years ago, we could have been up there because we could have beaten the Bills," Clayton said.

But the Dolphins lost 44-34 in a second-round playoff game in the snow at Buffalo. Now, they have the Bills at Joe Robbie Stadium.
"The guys, especially the younger ones, know it's an opportunity,"

Clayton said. "This is what you play and work hard for all year. The goal you make for yourself is to get this chance."

Perhaps nobody feels the need to get to the Super Bowl and prove something more than the quarterbacks, Marino and Jim Kelly, Marino lost in his only Super Bowl appearance against San Francisco in the 1985 game. Kelly, who has recovered from a knee injury and will start for the first time since the season finale, was the losing quarterback in the last two NFL title games.

Miami skies sunny

The Associated Press

MIAMI — The Buffalo Bills and Miami Dolphins will play for the AFC championship Sunday under mostly sunny skies with 70-degree temperature and a tropical breeze, forecasters said.

"It should be ideal football weather," Bob Ebough of the National Weather Service said Friday.

The afternoon will be partly cloudy to mostly sunny, with the temperature in the mid 70s. A 15 mph wind is not expected to affect the passing game but may cool the crowd, Ebough said.

Rain dampens S-F

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers likely will have to contend with rain and a slippery Candlestick Park turf on Sunday when they play for the NFC championship.

"Rain is likely Sunday, possibly heavy at times," said Duane Dykema of the National Weather Service. "It looks like more of what we've had all week."

He said forecasts put the likelihood of rain Sunday at 90 percent.

Miami coach Don Shula talks to reporters Friday. The Dolphins play the Buffalo Bills Sunday for the AFC Championship.

No matter who wins, each team stands to lose coach

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — This is what coaching winners will get you:

If the Dallas Cowboys lose to the San Francisco 49ers Sunday, defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt is likely to begin preparing for the head coaching job with the New York Giants.

If the 49ers lose, their offensive coordinator, Mike Shanahan, likely will be sent back to Denver to coach the Broncos.

"I'm concentrating on this week's game," Wannstedt said although spending an hour talking to a group of New York reporters.

"I'm concentrating on this week's game," Shanahan echoed.

Shanahan coached the NFL's No. 1 offense this season and Wannstedt coached the NFL's No. 1 defense, making this what's being called a "classic matchup."

"It was more likely to be a gooey matchup."

After an 18 hours without precipitation, rain fell overnight and Friday and more is forecast for the rest of the weekend. So while George Toma, groundskeeper extraordinaire, spent the break re-sodding Candlestick Park with Bermuda grass, it's still likely to be mushy Sunday, thwarting some of the best-laid plans Shanahan and Wannstedt can devise.

"Still, both insist they want to do much differently than they did all season."

"You have to see what happens during the game," Shanahan said. "If it gets bad, at some point you may have to modify your game plan, but it depends on what the conditions do to you."

Bill Shanahan and Wannstedt also have to be thinking ahead.

Both are 40, but their careers have been quite different. Shanahan already has had one stint as a head coach — with the Los Angeles Raiders in 1988 and for the first four games of 1989. His record was 8-12 when he was dismissed by Al Davis, in part because he insisted on changing the old Raiders system.

He's also had two stints as the offensive coordinator of the Broncos, and was John Elway's favorite tutor.

A-4 Southside Sub-District Tournament

league wins in nine outings came at the expense of Castleford's Wolves. The Red Devils, however, managed a winning (5-1) record against nonconference opponents.

Amber Rovic, a 5-10 senior, has maintained a two-figure scoring average through most of her four-year career at Murtaugh, hits the boards hard and is one of her team's most effective defenders. Carmen Alcalá, however, is the only other senior while Coach Dennis Lee's Trojans are both taller and more seasoned.

The first-round plunk for the Hansen-Castleford victor is a spot-opposite-MVC champion Oakley, 8-1 and 8-7, at 7:30 p.m. Monday. Hagerman, 6-2 and 10-6 and the other team to earn a bye on opening night, awaits the Raft River-Murtaugh winner in Monday's opener.

Sisters Darcie, a junior, and sophomore Eric Cranney have around-double figures as do two other Oakley starters, Freshman Catherine Hale, 5-9, moved up to the varsity after the Christmas break to aid the scoring and senior Ginger Love, 4-9 ppg, handles point guard duties with poise.

"What really helped us, and would help any team, is the scoring that's come off the bench," Piper said. "When one is off, another is hot and they keep it going for us."

As in previous years, familiar names dot the Pirate roster. Gone are Keri Andrus and Toni Eichelberger, replaced in more than adequate fashion by likes of younger sisters Dawn Andrus and Diana Eichelberger.

"We would have liked to complete the conference season because if Hansen had beaten Oakley and we won our last two we would be seeded first," said Hagerman Coach Denny Edwards. "Our girls feel like it (the weather) kind of messed us up, but if we just take care of business, we'll be okay. To get to district you have to beat everyone anyway."

MURTAUGH — Qualifying for the state basketball championship tournament is a tad more difficult for schools in Idaho's smallest — A-4 — classification.

The first step in that quest begins here this evening, when Hansen opens the Southside Sub-District — Tournament against Castleford at 6 p.m. Raft River and Mt. Murtaugh, seeded fourth and fifth, respectively, follow at 7:30.

The 9-6 Huskies completed their Magic Valley Conference with a 6-3 record to earn the No. 3 seed. A green Castleford crew failed to achieve a victory in the regular season, thus are seeded sixth for the week-long event.

In a season shortened by inclement weather, virtually any one could prevail.

The Huskies managed a split with Hagerman. A fourth-quarter rally let Oakley come from eight points down after three quarters on the Hansen court in December.

Murtaugh, which handed Oakley its lone loss, provided Hagerman with a real challenge at Malta and the Trojans picked half of their MVC victories against Hansen.

Murtaugh saw a four-game win streak end at Hansen earlier this week, but are gaining momentum and a post-season triumph would give Castleford the momentum it needs to boost a rebuilding campaign.

"It's a high school phenomenon, but Hagerman, Hansen and Raft River scare Oakley when we play away," said first-year Homet Coach Ron Piper of the favorites. "One of the best things we have going for us is that we have beaten everybody."

Skiles notches 23 for Magic

BOSTON (AP) — Scott Skiles had 23 points and 15 assists as the Orlando Magic won their first game ever at Boston Garden and snapped the Celtics' seven-game winning streak, 113-97, Friday night.

Shaquille O'Neal added 22 points and 12 rebounds, and Anthony Bowie scored 23 points for Orlando, which lost five of its previous six games but led by at least eight points the entire second half.

The Celtics, who won their first six games at home against the Magic, were led by Robert Parish with 19 points and Reggie Lewis and Kevin McHale with 15 each.

Bulls 122, Warriors 101

CHICAGO Michael Jordan scored six of his 26 points during a 12-2 spurt at the start of the fourth quarter that lifted the Chicago Bulls past Golden State.

The Bulls, who led by 25 points in the third period, only took a 91-81 advantage into the fourth quarter before Jordan keyed the run that gave them a 103-83 lead.

Scottie Pippen, who scored 19 points, gave Chicago its largest lead, 82-57, with 7:53 left in the third quarter.

Nets 110, 76ers 105, OT

FAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. Kenny Anderson and Drazen Petrovic keyed a late rally in regulation, then led a 10-2 start in overtime that carried New Jersey over Philadelphia.

Anderson, who finished with 21 points, and Petrovic, who scored 19, each had three baskets in the final 2:22 of regulation and then combined for six points as the Nets started the overtime with the 10-2 spurt. The victory was New Jersey's fourth straight home win.

Cavallers 132, Pacers 120

INDIANAPOLIS — Craig Ehlo scored 16 of his 22 points in the third quarter, rallying Cleveland from a 17-point deficit against Indiana.

The win maintained the Cavs' mastery over the Pacers, giving them their seventh victory in as many meetings over the past two seasons.

Ehlo added 25 points and 10 rebounds. Larry Nance added 24 points, while Mark Price had 23.

Reggie Miller scored 29 points and Detlef Schrempf had 19 points and 11 rebounds for Indiana, which led 66-49 early in the second half.

Timberwolves 99, Nuggets 89

MINNEAPOLIS — Chuck Person snapped out of a 12-game slump with 19 points as Minnesota snapped a five-game losing streak and handed Denver its 12th consecutive road loss.

Orlando Magic Shaquille O'Neal, left, slams one over Boston Celtics center Robert Parish.

The Timberwolves won for the first time in two tries since interim coach Sidney Lowe replaced Jimmy Rodgers, who was fired on Sunday. The Timberwolves lost 17 of their previous 19 games, beating Dallas, the NBA's worst team, twice in that span.

Knicks 107, Mavericks 93

DALLAS — Rolando Blackman scored 18 points in his first Reunion Arena appearance against his former team Friday night, leading the New York Knicks to a 107-93 victory over Dallas, the Mavericks' 14th consecutive defeat.

John Starks also had 18 points for the Knicks, who dropped six of their previous 10 games to see their Atlantic Division lead trimmed to 1 1/2 games.

Blackman, the Mavericks' leading career scorer after 11 years in Dallas, was traded to New York last June 24 for a first-round pick in the 1993 draft.

115 file for salary arbitration

NEW YORK (AP) — A total of 115 players filed for salary arbitration Friday on the most dreaded day of the year for baseball management.

Eight eligible players agreed to new contracts, including St. Louis Cardinals catcher Tom Pagnozzi, who got a $10.5 million, four-year deal, Chicago White Sox catcher Ron Karkovick got the day's other multi-year agreement, a three-year contract with an option for a total of $4,125,000 guaranteed.

Players who haven't settled with their clubs by Tuesday will exchange salary numbers with their teams that afternoon, and those unable to reach agreements before hearings will have their salaries picked by impartial arbitrators during the first three weeks of February.

Owners say they want to eliminate arbitration, which has existed since 1974, in the current round of labor negotiations. Although owners hold a 46-154 advantage in cases decided by arbitrators, almost all players get large increases, an average of 100 percent last year. Only nine decisions have given players salary cuts.

Joining the 115 who filed Friday are Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Jim Gott, offered arbitration by the team in November to prevent him from becoming a free agent, and Seattle outfielder Henry Colto, who became a free agent before accepting the Mariners' arbitration offer last month.

UW's Hobert leaves state for Arizona

SEATTLE (AP) — Billy Joe Hobert, whose suspension over improper loans brought unprecedented scrutiny to the University of Washington football program, has moved to Arizona, saying he no longer felt safe in the Seattle area.

Hobert, who played his high school ball less than an hour's drive south of here, is in Phoenix, working under the eye of his agent.

"We're getting out of the area because it's just too scary," he said Thursday. "With my family being in jeopardy, I think it would be in my best interest to move down here where people don't know me."

Hobert, 22, lost his college eligibility last fall for receiving $50,000 in personal loans in violation of NCAA rules. That, in addition to the drug-related arrest of another team member and allegations that players were set up with cushy summer jobs prompted the university to hire special investigators to scrutinize the program.

Hobert's relatives and friends have received telephone threats. Hobert had one vehicle vandalized, and a 1992 Chevrolet Camaro that he bought with the loan money was stolen, shot full of holes and spray painted with the message, "You can't afford this, B.J."

Senior Bowl best of 'Canes, Tide

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — They were taunting each other a couple of weeks ago. Now they are teammates.

Six players from Alabama and two from Miami are on the NFC team which will meet the AFC in Saturday's Senior Bowl at Laud Stadium.

"It's nice having them on our team rather than against us," said running back Derrick Lassie, the star of Alabama's national championship victory over Miami in the Sugar Bowl.

That wasn't the case prior to Jan. 1. Miami launched a war of words at the Sugar Bowl, questioning the Crimson Tide's manhood among other things. There was even a confrontation on Bourbon Street between the teams.

Alabama got the last word by beating the Hurricanes 34-13, ending their bid for a second straight national championship and a fifth title in 10 years.

"It was disappointing, but life goes on," Miami linebacker Darin Smith said Friday. "When people come up to me here and I tell them I'm from Miami, they always say, 'I'm sorry.' Then I show them my two championship rings."

Half the battle is unifying teams, Hula coaches say

HONOLULU (AP) — While college football fans enjoy all-star games and the matchups they bring, the coaches of the East and West teams in the Hula Bowl have more immediate concerns. Like the huddle and the snap.

"You have people coming from all over and everybody uses a different cadence," said Notre Dame's Lou Holtz, coach of the East team in Saturday's game at Aloha Stadium. "The average person just takes it for granted that the center is going to get the quarterback the ball."

"Look at the kicking game. You've got to cover kickoffs and kickoff returns, punts and punt returns, personnel, who's out there and the concept. People just think it's an all-star game and all you've got to do is show up."

UCLA's Terry Donahue, coach of the West team, spent a lot of time getting his players to learn the offense.

"It's difficult because you're so limited in your practice time," Donahue said. "You've got guys from so many different systems, but they learn quickly, they want to do well and they're motivated. So that's half the battle."

Gender inequality in funding threatens to polarize NCAA

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Money, sex and power. It's not the theme of Madonna's new video. It's the underlying cause behind gender equity, an issue which could rip apart the NCAA.

Veterans of such volatile issues as division restructuring and freshman eligibility say that if some compromise isn't reached during the 1994 NCAA convention, there could be a battle to rival any ever waged in college athletics.

"It all has to do with money and power and sex," said Nora-Lynn Finch, associate athletic director at North Carolina State and the first chairman of the NCAA women's basketball tournament. "People who have power do not want to give it up. As a woman, I can understand that. If I were a minority, I could understand it better. If I were poor, I could understand it better still."

On the surface, the issue appears simple: How much of the athletic dollar should go to women's athletics? Surveys indicate most Division I schools allocate about 70 percent for men, which includes football, the biggest consumer and producer of money on most campuses.

But a special task force is preparing legislation for schools to vote on next year that will change that ratio, giving women a much bigger slice of the pie. "There are people on both sides who would like to make it a bloody battle to the death," Finch said. "I don't think it has to be that way. But any time the have-nots, or those who feel discriminated against, want to move up, the people in power are going to do what they can to suppress it."

Added Finch: "I'm not afraid of a little bit of a battle."

"It doesn't matter to some of them whether women want sports or not," said A. White of Arkansas, a former NCAA president. "There are some people who say we're going to see women's yachting teams in Montana and women's ski teams in Miami."

Twitty continues to master long holes

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — Howard Twitty, continuing his attack on the par-5's, stayed two shots ahead of the field Friday in the second round of the Hawaiian Open.

"On this course, the par-5's are a big key," the 44-year-old veteran said after a 4-under-par 68 in brisk trade winds. "You look back in this tournament, and I think you'll find anyone who has played well has played well on the par-5's."

"You can play the par-4's and 3's here a long time without making a birdie. You just have to play the 5's very well."

Twitty for two trips over the Waialae Country Club course.

Using domination of the long holes as his game plan, Twitty reached the halfway point of the tournament at 131, 13 under par for two trips over the Waialae Country Club course.

More than half that total came on played them in 7-under and failed to birdie only one — the 508-yard 13th in Friday's second round.

"And I should have made a birdie there," Twitty said. He missed a 4-foot putt.

"It was one of two putting lapses that, he said, made the difference between a 68 and his opening-round 63.

"In the first round, I didn't miss any I should have made," he said. "Today, I missed two."

Big 5 take 1st steps into wilderness

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE— Idaho's congressional delegation and Gov. Cecil Andrus reached broad agreement Friday on how to revive the long-stalled negotiations on an Idaho wilderness bill.

The five men — Andrus, U.S. Sens. Larry Craig and Dirk Kempthorne, and U.S. Reps. Mike Crapo and Larry LaRocco — agreed that such a bill should specify in greater detail how the Forest Service would manage non-wilderness land. They also endorsed the principle of an intermediate category between wilderness and non-wilderness land. They agreed that any Idaho wilderness bill would not contain a federal reserved water right; would protect the rights of private property owners within wilderness study areas; and would contain some provision for making up any timber jobs lost because of wilderness designation.

And they agreed to field-test the new concept on a parcel of roadless land to be chosen by the Forest Service. Participants and observers at the 90-minute meeting said it was one of the most productive ever in the long, frustrating history of Idaho wilderness negotiations.

the part of the federal delegation and the governor, but also on the part of the various interest groups, to get this issue settled," said Crapo, a freshman Republican.

"We haven't gotten to the hard parts yet, but when was the last time you saw all these guys at the same table?" asked Mike Medberry, public lands director for the Idaho Conservation League.

For years, 9.3 million acres of roadless land has been considered for protection under the federal Wilderness Act. However, disputes over what land to protect and how

Should Twin Falls library extend hours?

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Public Library wants to know if patrons think the library should extend its hours.

Until Feb. 4, the library will conduct a survey on the question, library Director Arlan Call said Friday.

The Idaho Library Association reports libraries in cities of 10,000 people or more are open an average of 60 hours a week. The Twin Falls library is open only 54 hours a week, said Call.

The library cut back its hours after the first 1 Percent initiative in 1978, Call said. Before then, it was open 63 hours a week, he said.

Patrons who wish to take part in the survey can pick up forms at the library through Feb. 4.

The Times-News will print copies of the survey in next week's paper. Residents can fill out the copies and send or take them to the library.

Twin Falls man will stand trial on charge of rape

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man was ordered Friday to stand trial for rape, but a charge of second-degree kidnapping was dismissed.

Robert L. King, 20, remained in jail in lieu of $20,000 bond after a preliminary hearing. No trial date has been set.

Fifth District Magistrate R. Barry Wood agreed to a defense request to drop the kidnapping charge because of a lack of evidence, but ruled the state can take the rape case to trial.

Bellevue decides to join new governing council in valley

BELLEVUE — Bellevue city officials agreed Thursday to join in the creation of a Wood-River Valley Council of Governments.

The City Council unanimously passed a resolution to participate in the formation of the group. Councilwoman Marsha Riemann was absent.

The purpose of the Council of Governments is to promote and facilitate a cooperative, coordinated approach to common areas of governmental concern among the four cities and the county, according to the resolution.

The council will be an excellent opportunity for all four cities and the county to be able to sit around one table and talk and share ideas once a month, Mayor Dennis Wright said.

"Participating in the council can't but help to further Bellevue," Wright said.

ISU student government seat applications available at ISU

POCATELLO — Any full-time Idaho State University students interested in running for student government can pick up applications at the ASISU office beginning today.

Petitions must be returned to the office by Friday, Jan. 29. The general election for student senators, president and vice president will be held Feb. 17. For more information, call 236-2700 and as for the ASISU office.

Agencies close snow trails to help wintering elk

STANLEY — The Forest Service and the Idaho Department of Fish and Game have posted elk winter ranges on the Sawtooth National Recreation Area closed to snowmobiles and other motorized traffic.

The closures, which will remain in effect until April 30, have been posted in the following locations:

• The east side of the Sawtooth Valley between Pole Creek and Fourth of July Creek.

• The area north of Fisher Creek to Sunny Gulch on the east side of the Salmon River.

• The area south of Decker Flat on Forest Service lands between Road 210, and the Salmon River west of the Idaho Rocky Mountain Range.

• The Joe's Gulch drainage northeast of Stanley.

Other areas may be posted as the winter progresses, the Forest Service warned. Persons violating the closures may be prosecuted.

The wintering elk are also congregating on Idaho Highway 75 roadbed between Obsidian and Sunbeam Dam.

King dream powers U.S. prosperity, official says

Economic health depends on understanding variety of races, native Idahoan tells students, others

By Jim Wilkie
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Embracing Martin Luther King Jr.'s dream will be key to the United States' prosperity in a shrinking world.

Holiday closures — B2

Les Purce, executive vice president of the Evergreen State College in Olympia, Wash., said Americans must also get over their ambivalence toward the slain civil rights leader.

"Martin Luther King Jr. symbolized the deep wounds that continue to fester in this country," Purce told a crowd of about 60 people during his speech Friday in the College of Southern Idaho Engle's Nest.

Purce, a third-generation Idahoan, tried to bring his message home to students and faculty as a part of the school's Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Day observance. The CSI Student Senate announced Purce's speech and his visits to several classes in conjunction with Monday's holiday.

Purce is a former director of Idaho's departments of Administration and Health and Welfare under former Gov. John Evans. He was the first black elected official in the state when he served as city councilman and later mayor of Pocatello from 1973 to 1977.

After he left state government in 1985, Purce lived for two years in Hailey, where he was a partner and CEO of Power Engineers Inc.

Purce was also an assistant professor of counselor education and executive assistant to the president at Idaho State University. At Evergreen State, Purce has been vice president for college advancement and served as interim president for almost two years.

Looking toward the next millennium, Purce said Americans must accept King's message of justice, freedom and hope for one another. Then they can more easily understand the cultures of other countries in the competitive global marketplace.

"Re-envision the dream," Purce said. "We are our brother's keeper because of the interrelated field of existence."

Americans must accept and adapt to their immediate field because the demographic reality shows minorities becoming the majority. Purce said the country's 25 largest school districts have minority majorities and California has a majority of minorities in elementary schools.

Purce said the nation's average age for a white male is 31, a black male's is 25 and Hispanic male's is 22. He described it as population momentum for people of color.

"People of every race must work together for a common cause, Purce said.

"The liberation of black people would also lead to the emancipation of white people," Purce said.

Hailey Library, Fox Building owner near deal on new permanent location

By Florence Blanchard
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Stefanie Marcel could write a book about the Hailey Library's frustrating two-year search for a new location, but now the story may have a happy ending.

At a library focus group meeting Thursday, Marcel, the Library Board president, said that the city has resumed negotiations with owner Janet Brown to purchase the 8,000-square-foot Fox Building on Main Street for a library.

"We are definitely involved in negotiations," said Mayor Keith Roark. "We have reached an acceptable purchase price, and everything looks good."

"The building is a real possibility now," said Marcel. "And it couldn't happen at a better time."

She said that library circulation has doubled over the past two years to 28,000, and that two part-time librarians have been added to the staff.

The current library on Bullion Street next to City Hall is 2,000 square feet.

She said that group programs like the children's story hour takes up so much space

Want to comment on library plans?

HAILEY — The Hailey Library has scheduled a focus group meeting to give the public an opportunity to comment on its future plans, including its possible move to the Fox Building on Main Street. The meeting is set for 7 p.m. Monday at the library.

that other patrons have difficulty using the library at the same time, and overcrowding practically excludes improvements.

"When you walk into the library, what you don't see is what we don't have," Marcel said. "We don't have a quiet, secluded reading area, a computer room, a meeting room, another typing room, a CD Rom work station or a storeroom."

"Every time we try to improve the library, we have to eliminate something else," said librarian Karen Lukes. "We would lose two study carrels in order to add a CD Rom work station. To put up new shelves in the children's area, we'd have to remove the reading table — or cut it in half."

Negotiations by the city to purchase the Fox Building stalled last October when Roark announced that the city's plans included charging rent to the College of Southern Idaho, which has occupied the upstairs space rent-free for the past three years through a donation by the Hughes Brown family.

CSI officials said the extension center would be forced to move. Janet Brown, widow of the late Hughes Brown, subsequently decided not to sell the building for various business reasons.

"I have met with CSI," said Roark. "I have assured them that we value their services to the community, and that we want to do everything possible for them to stay there as long as they wish. We would not set rent so high that they couldn't afford it."

Jerry Beck, vice president of instruction at CSI, said that the mayor had been very supportive.

"He assured us that rent would be

Twin Falls landfill tipping fees going up

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County cannot set a fair landfill fee until it knows which cities are in on the plan, members of a group looking into the fee said Friday.

But the county looks for ways to raise money to build a landfill, group members agreed on one step to take soon — increase tipping fees at the current landfill.

The group met Friday morning to talk about the fee.

One solution discussed was charging an equal one-time landfill fee to residents and businesses in conjunction with increasing the tipping fee. Through this the county could raise money up front to partially pay for building a landfill.

Once the landfill is built, businesses and residents can pay the operation costs through tipping fees based on how much trash they generate, group member Mike Love said.

Love does not want to see larger fees levied on businesses with larger initial fees just because they are bigger. These businesses pay taxes and provide jobs, he said.

"Let them pay the same start-up fee and then the tipping fees will make it equitable," Love said.

Other group members agreed this might be a fair way to charge the fee.

The group urged county Solid Waste Director Darrell Heider to increase the tipping fee soon so that the county can start saving money to pay for the landfill.

In the meantime, the group will wait for Twin Falls, Buhl, Filer and other cities to decide if they will stay in the county landfill plan.

"The group meets again next week. Among the issues it will face is ensuring that renters and trailer court tenants are assessed the fee as well as businesses and homeowners. Group members might also consider spreading out the fee payments if it would be easier for some residents to pay it that way."

The Twin Falls County Commission set up a $50 solid waste fee last November to raise money for a new landfill. But when residents and businesses said the fee was not fair, the commission rescinded the fee and agreed to let a group look into setting a fee structure.

Officials glimpse ski plans

By Stephen Schowengerdt
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Sun Valley Co. defended its need for a new ski lodge, but took so long to do so before Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission members Thursday, the presentation was continued until another session in February.

The resort is seeking three conditional use permits to build in the 100-year flood plain at the base of River Run on Bald Mountain.

"I feel like the opening act for the Michael Jackson show," said Doug Clemens, a local landscape architect speaking to the commission on an earlier agenda item.

And well he should. Sun Valley Co. prepared its case to build the $10 million River Run Project with a well-studied cast of professionals, numerous architectural plans and full-color renderings.

The resort was so prepared; in fact, the show ran long in conjunction with the public comment period in which 14 area residents spoke on the matter.

Just short of 11 p.m., commission Chairman Cindy Mann halted the public comment period, and the commission decided to continue at a special meeting at 7 p.m. on Feb. 4.

The Sun Valley team included architects Jim Ruscitto and Nick Latham, attorney Ned Williams, Galena Engineers' Dick Fosbury and traffic engineer Gary Finkhauser of Bell Walker. They were backed up by resort owner Earl Holding and general manager Wally Huffman.

An overflow crowd of valley residents and resort employees were also on hand at the Old Blaine County Courthouse.

Burley firefighters battle trailer blaze

BURLEY — A mobile home received extensive fire damage Friday afternoon after a kitchen stove was left on first when the owner left. The mobile home, located at 300 West 25 North in Cassia County, was owned by Gary Clark and rented by Glen Roberts, a North Cassia Rural fireman said. The fire was reported at about 2:50 p.m. No injuries were reported. No dollar loss was placed on the damage.

Juveniles charged with taking beer

BURLEY — Four juveniles were charged with first degree burglary and three others with petty theft in connection with beer stolen from a Burley store early Friday morning. According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, a deputy pulled over a pickup at 1:10 a.m. shortly after four juveniles were reported for taking four 12-packs of beer from Circle K in Burley. The deputy said he found the beer in the back of the pickup, and the descriptions of the people inside the pickup matched those who had taken the beer. Others not in the pickup at the time were later arrested, deputies say.

Burley man arrested on Oregon charge

BURLEY — A 38-year-old man residing in Burley was arrested Tuesday on drug charges out of Oregon, a law officer said. According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, Jesus Cota Barron, who was wanted on charges out of Oregon on possession of drugs, delivery of drugs and child neglect, was found by law officers to be residing at the Helping Hands Mission at 1250 Miller Ave. Detectives said that although Barron wouldn't give them identification, his fingerprints matched those of the wanted person. On Wednesday, Barron signed extradition papers and was returned to Oregon to face charges, detectives said.

Witness reports gun fired at pickup

BURLEY — A parked, empty pickup was reportedly shot at by someone in a car early Friday morning, deputies say. According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, a witness said he saw a two-door car slow down at a pickup parked at 1549 Oakley Ave. in Burley, and someone inside fired two shots at the vehicle. Damage to the vehicle, which belonged to Fred and Donna Mills, was reported at $50. Deputies are currently following leads.

Former Heyburn chief hires on in Rupert

By James Prichard
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — Minidoka County Sheriff Paul Fries has named former Heyburn police chief Robert Vasquez as his chief deputy. Vasquez will begin his duties on Feb. 1.

Capt. Randall White submitted his resignation as chief deputy on Jan. 8. Fries said he will remain with the department at the same salary.

White held the position for about three months after Robert Nevarez retired in October as former sheriff Ray Jarvis' second-in-command.

Last March, Heyburn Mayor Glen Loveland fired Vasquez as police chief without an explanation. Fries said he talked with Loveland about the dismissal and "didn't find anything that would hinder (Vasquez's) working ability with this department."

Vasquez served 18 years as Heyburn's police chief. Fries said: "The sheriff said he and Vasquez forged a relationship to go on. When Fries was a detective with the Rupert department and Vasquez served in that capacity in Burley.

"I feel really good about Bob coming to work for us," Fries said. "He's a fair-minded, honest and his integrity is unquestionable."

Vasquez could not be reached for comment.

In a related matter, the sheriff said he has asked his employees to evaluate their own job performances within a few months. He and Vasquez will perform their own evaluations. Fries' top priority over the next six months, he said, will be to root out and resolve any existing problems within the department.

"I'll insist on doing the most we can for the public as far as following up on an investigation and keeping the public as informed as possible," Fries said. "We plan to work closely with other departments in the county — the schools, the highway departments — so we can assist each other."

After reorganizing the department, Fries said, he will have a better idea of what duties he and Vasquez will routinely perform.

Fries, who served the last 10 years as Rupert's police chief, was sworn in as sheriff on Monday.

'Miracle baby' birth shocks family

By James Prichard
Mini-Cassia News Service

PAUL — A 26-year-old Paul woman, whose severe abdominal cramping led her to believe she was seriously ill, instead gave birth Wednesday in the bathroom of her home.

Melissa Fetzer, 115 N. Second St. W., was unaware she was pregnant until the birth of her auburn-haired, 7-pound, 1-ounce son, Joshua Aaron. Both mother and child are well and resting comfortably at home.

About a week ago, Melissa started experiencing some minor abdominal pain. She reported to her job at Heyburn's J.R. Simplot Co. plant on Monday, but by Tuesday she was too ill to work. Her mother, Arlene Kerbs, scheduled a doctor's appointment for Melissa on Wednesday afternoon.

By Wednesday morning, however, Melissa's pain which was later identified as contractions, became too intense for her to handle. She waited in the bathroom while her husband, 20-year-old Matt, called for an ambulance.

At 11:30 a.m., at the height of her agony, she sat down on her bathroom toilet and bore the couple's first child. "I picked him up out of the water and wiped off his face, and he was just looking at me," Melissa said. "I said, 'Matt, it's a baby, and it's alive!' He just about passed out on me."

Paramedics soon arrived to take the new mother and her son to Cassia Memorial Hospital, where Arlene — who works in the nursery — was waiting. Matt had called ahead to inform his mother-in-law of the amazing news.

"It was a great surprise," Arlene said. Hospital physicians examined Melissa and Joshua, and after an overnight stay, they returned home late Thursday morning.

While most expectant parents have several months to examine their feelings about bringing a child into the world, the Fetzers have had only a few days. But they already know how they feel about Joshua, their miracle baby. "Once we got over the shock of this actually happening, we were really happy about it," Melissa said. "It's amazing." Matt added, shaking his head in disbelief.

Questions arise over use of park services

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Some Mini-Cassia area residents wonder if some of the state's resources near parks are being overused. But an official with the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation said at a public hearing on park use that abuse can't be prevented.

The parks system — its waterways and recreation areas — are used by local sheriff departments to watch for violators, but they are already over-taxed, said Director Yvonne Ferrell.

Law enforcement officers put a higher priority in stopping serious crimes, and let park use slide, Ferrell said Thursday in Burley. The town meeting was one of 17 being held at various cities throughout Idaho to gain public comment on which direction the department should take in the next 5 to 10 years. "We are wide open to every suggestion," Ferrell said.

guide to programs and activities the department will take part in the future. Burley resident Lex Kunau, who has been involved in the improvement of waterways in Cassia County, thanked Ferrell for the department's cooperation in development of boat docks. "It's been a great cooperative effort," he said. Ferrell said people who use state parks should be aware that money paid for snowmobile or boat registration go into a dedicated fund to be spent for that particular spport. For example, money spent to register trailbikes will be used for maintaining motorbike trails, said Ferrell. There is no "pay to play" system for horse trails, she said, a matter that sparked discontent in the Boise area. She added the department is trying to keep camping fees low, which should draw more out-of-state campers. Idaho currently charges an $11 base fee per day, while some nearby states charge $18, she said.

U.S. will list Bruneau snail as endangered

By N.S. Nokenvred
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says it will list the Bruneau Hot Spring snail as endangered.

John Faye, director of Fish and Wildlife Service, said the listing is a candidate assessment branch said Friday that the final decision to list the snail under the Endangered Species Act has been signed.

The Endangered Species Act requires a decision within a year of a recommendation to list a species. The deadline can be extended six months. Even with extended deadline, the Bruneau snail decision should have come in February, 1987. But it is not in time for the service to miss deadlines, Faye said.

that brought a federal lawsuit forcing Fish and Wildlife to make a decision on the Bruneau Snail. The group also filed suit to force a decision on five Snake River snails, listed late last year. "Stewart is concerned that Fish and Wildlife appears to be making endangered species listing priorities based on litigation rather than biological necessity. If that's true, it shows the process is broken," he said.

by the listing, but it still holds that "there is not sufficient hard scientific evidence" to support the listing. "No new evidence has been presented that would cause us to change our minds," department spokesman Dick Larsen said in a Friday news release. Faye said he had reviewed the documents from Idaho and expressed concern about the decline in the snail population over the past two years.

The snail's habitat, in hot springs along the Bruneau River in Owyhee County, is threatened by a long term decline in the groundwater that feeds those springs, officials say. Idaho Conservation League Director Glenn Stewart said he is troubled that it takes a lawsuit to complete the listing process. The league was part of the group that brought a federal lawsuit forcing Fish and Wildlife to make a decision on the Bruneau Snail. The group also filed suit to force a decision on five Snake River snails, listed late last year. "Stewart is concerned that Fish and Wildlife appears to be making endangered species listing priorities based on litigation rather than biological necessity. If that's true, it shows the process is broken," he said.

And the snail disappearing means something is broken in the aquifer that feeds the hot springs where the snails live, he added. He can't understand why when people are sinking wells and not getting any water nobody is making the connection that something is wrong, he said. The Idaho Department of Water Resources said it was not surprised.

The snails have disappeared entirely from their most secure habitat, the former hot spring known as Indian Bathub, he said. The service as yet has no plans for recovering the snail. The Endangered Species Act gives Fish and Wildlife two years from the date the snail is officially listed to come up with a recovery plan.

Bringing Buhl City Hall up to codes too expensive

By Bertilia L. Redfern
Times News correspondent

BUHL — Several Buhl residents lost their bid to save the historic City Hall building from the wrecking ball. The residents appealed to the City Council recently, asking for a 90-day delay in demolition of the building. Resident Jan Wimberly said the delay would allow time to explore other options and possibly save the old building that has historic value and noteworthy architecture. City officials are planning to tear down the 1920s building soon, saying it is not structurally sound. City engineer Scott Bybee said to delay demolition could be costly for the city. He added to save the building it would also have to be brought up to current building codes, and although it may be possible to do so, it would not be fiscally prudent. Councilman Dean Gillett said Wimberly's comments were "a wonderful tribute to the old building," and he thanked her. Meanwhile, the council's recent meeting was held in the city's new temporary offices in the old Pioneer Floors building on Broadway Street. Public Works Director Gary Winn said everything will be ready for the demolition to begin the week of Jan. 20. City officials made their selection for a contractor to remove the asbestos Monday. The contract was awarded to the low bidder, Pacific

UI student performance hits high

MOSCOW (AP) — The average fall semester grade-point average for University of Idaho undergraduates hit a 30-year high of 2.79 in 1992. And the fall semester grade-point average for all students at the Moscow school reached its highest point since 1965 — 2.85 on a 4.0 scale. The colleges of agriculture and education led the way with averages of 2.94 and 2.93, respectively. "All-in-all, I'm pretty satisfied with the performance of our students," George Simmons, vice provost for teaching and undergraduate studies, said Friday. Fall semester grades, typically lower than the spring semester marks, Registrar Matt Telin said. But he was particularly pleased with the marks of freshmen directly out of high school last semester. The average cumulative grade-point average for that group was 2.51 in the fall, continuing a steady improvement since 1985, Telin said. Part of the reason is that the University of Idaho has improved its support system for freshmen. Simmons said, with an emphasis on advising and instituting an early warning system for freshmen in academic trouble. Simmons said improved admittance, grading and academic policies also have contributed to better student performance. A 1985 study showed University of Idaho freshmen ranked in the top quarter of their peer group on college board tests and high school grades.

The Ritter legacy: Less money, same kids

NEW YORK (AP) — The kids — homeless, drug-addicted, pregnant, HIV-positive — never stopped coming. The money to help them well, that's another story.

Three years after the Father Bruce Ritter sex scandal, the disgraced priest's legacy is twofold: Covenant House, his haven for troubled teens, endures. But its fund-raising remains hampered by his sexual misdeeds with the charity's male clients.

"The fact that we survived is nothing short of a miracle," said Denise Scelzo, senior vice president for development at the Manhattan-based agency.

The numbers bear her out. In fiscal 1990 — the last year before the Ritter scandal exploded in an endless stream of headlines and investigations — Covenant House had a $98 million budget, more than 90 percent of it from public donations.

The next year, donations dropped nearly 25 percent and the budget was slashed by $22 million. For fiscal 1992, the budget was up slightly to $80 million, still millions below the Ritter-era Covenant House; thousands of past donors have written the agency off permanently.

"We're hopeful. We're going to make it now. We know that. We're very careful how we spend money," said Sister Mary Rose McGeady, who wasn't so sure about the future when she replaced Ritter on Sept. 1, 1990.

The 64-year-old nun recalls her first days at Covenant House. "When I came on board, we were really in the doldrums. I came on in September, after the summer had been kind of scary."

McGeady immediately went to work on two fronts: trying to boost donations while working to repair public relations.

"There were two aspects of the scandal. There were a cadre of people who were just disenchanted, and very angry at Father Ritter; so they just left," recalled Scelzo.

"And then there was the other group of people that needed convincing. They needed to get to know Sister Mary Rose, they needed to know that the organization was back on its feet."

The scandal never affected the number of kids who turned to Covenant House for help: There are still more than 22,000 housed each year around the world. Every night in Manhattan, an average of 309 youths show up unannounced seeking food, shelter and medical care.

The charity was the creation of the charismatic Ritter, who founded and tirelessly promoted Covenant House for 22 years. He started the group's primary fund-raising pitch: a monthly letter, written and signed by Ritter, personally appealing for donations.

But the foundation of Covenant House began to crumble in December 1989, when reports surfaced of Ritter's sexual impropriety with a youth who came to the agency for help. Although Ritter denied the allegations, the number of accusers grew; Ritter finally resigned on Feb. 27, 1990.

Sister Mary Rose McGeady poses last December in the chapel of Covenant House.

Bible's words are truth

Most people without preassumptions who read from line one John 3, instead of being "spoon-fed" the mis-explanation, say it seems to be a Christian message of redemption. The priests of old didn't accept this, and I guess they don't today. Was he of "immaculate conception"? Pivotal to the question is Isaiah 7:14, for nowhere else in the vast periphery of Jesus' resurrection tribute mentioned. Curious. The context and events of Isaiah 7 and 8 tend to indicate it's not a "Messianic prophecy" but an immediate event of Isaiah's time. Further, there's little evidence it means to be a "virgin birth." Seeing the details of his manifestation to another mortal life-time, I say the Bible says no. These things don't destroy belief, it establishes it: God chose to teach, intermediately and represent him on earth. David is fully human, eternal and reimagines as you all do.

The Bible reports a much more positive, friendly and gentle change over coming the earth and "flooding the refuge of lies" than is usually relayed.

"O Lord, thou preserves man-and least (and earth). How excellent are (Psalms) "I have the power to lay down my life, and the power to take it up again." (John 10:18).

Unitarian-Universalist Association fellowship might be in the offing

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two local women want to organize a Unitarian-Universalist Association fellowship in the Magic Valley.

Monica Tognetti and Julie Fanselow have contacted the group's headquarters in Boston and have been charting the names of potential members. So far, between 15 and 20 people have expressed interest.

"It would take 20 people to get any kind of fellowship officially established," said Tognetti, who moved to Twin Falls last August, and found that no UU fellowship exists in the area. A Unitarian-Universalist church is located in Boise.

The Unitarian-Universalist Association is a worldwide community of religious liberals. UUs believe in freedom of religious thought and expression. All UUs are encouraged to develop and live by their own personal theology, drawing from the world's great religions, including — but not limited to — Christianity. Emphasis is put on social action, which is why Tognetti was first attracted to the church.

"My grandfather was Lutheran, my father was Catholic and my mother wasn't sure," said Tognetti, who grew up in San Francisco. "I don't know if it was my mixed-up background or other reasons, but I told my father I couldn't join the Catholic church." She added, "There was too much theology and structure and answers for everything."

When Tognetti moved to Massachusetts, she became friends with some Jewish people who told her she sounded like a Unitarian. Ever since she was 8 years old, she felt the need to help others. So when she left Massachusetts and moved to Hawaii, she "adopted" a family of Chinese refugees.

That's when Tognetti discovered a Unitarian fellowship, in Honolulu, and the church supported her work, even providing her with sheets and towels.

"When I first walked into that church and heard the minister talk, I thought, 'I'm home,'" she said. "Sometimes he talked about political topics, other times about book reviews, but it was always open and interesting."

Approximately 180,000 Unitarian-Universalists now meet throughout the United States. Tognetti and Fanselow are holding their first meeting at 7 p.m. Feb. 7 at Tognetti's Twin Falls home, 1135 Starfire St. Anyone is invited, Tognetti said, but she would like for those interested to call ahead.

Tognetti's number is 734-6551. Fanselow's number is 733-0802.

New Dead Sea scroll makes mention of Israelite king

JERUSALEM (AP) — A new fragment of the Dead Sea scrolls has been put on display after researchers deciphered an unexpected mention of an Israelite king, officials said recently.

Few historic figures are named at all in the ancient documents found in the Qumran caves by the Dead Sea in 1947, said Magen Broshi, curator of the Israel Museum.

But a Jewish king from the 2nd century B.C. known as King Jonathan, or Alexander Jannaeus in Latin, is mentioned three times in a scroll that contains a prayer for his well-being, Broshi said.

He noted the find could challenge the beliefs of historians who say that kings of the Hasmonean dynasty, such as Jonathan, persecuted the Essenes. "This could start some controversy in the world of scholarship since this isn't something we've actually expected to find in Qumran," Broshi said.

The Essenes, a cult with an austere lifestyle founded in the 2nd century B.C., lived in Qumran and are believed to have composed the Dead-Sea scrolls, which contain mostly prayers and biblical portions.

Broshi said the prayer to King Jonathan was deciphered by Ady Yardeni, an Israeli expert in ancient script writing, and that her findings were published last Spring in Tarbiz, a Hebrew magazine on Judaism.

The scroll was put on display at the Israel Museum in Jerusalem on Jan. 7. Also found on the same parchment is a rare Hebrew version of what scholars believed was a lost apocryphal psalm, Broshi said.

Beesting mice to drive from hive

Q. If a mouse gets into a beehive, how do the bees get it out?
A. Sings it to drive it out. But if sings kill it before it can escape, they coat it with propolis. That "bees glue." It hardens into a tough brown coating, so is tightly sealed in its own varnished coffin, just another piece of hive furniture.

Q. "Quarter-pound cheeseburgers" with fries and a big soft drink at last report cost $7.30 in Paris, $2.57 in Hong Kong.

Q. Who said, "All children know it's easier to get forgiveness than permission"?

A. A San Antonio sage named Dennis Gittinger was my source. It was he, too, who asked "If you are as frascible in debauchery, can you be asible when baunched?"

Q. Impoverished people of Peru, Mass., didn't know how they could survive in the early 1800s. So according to the historical footnotes, the town's leaders, held a public auction, and sold off the poor people as servants.

Q. Which states have no income tax?

L.M. Boyd
What's what?

A. Alaska, Florida, Nevada, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Texas, Washington and Wyoming.

It was most common among early teachers to insist pencils shouldn't have erasers, so students wouldn't allow themselves to make mistakes.

Q. Didn't Christopher Columbus think he'd discovered the Garden of Eden?
A. Not quite. But on his third trip when he landed in what's now Venezuela, he believed the Garden of Eden was near.

Q. Name the only U.S. vice president to commit murder while in office.
A. By his own hand? Duelist Aaron Burr was so accused. Publishers say they have to sell at least 4,000 rightly priced books to break even.

West
Sect trial acquittal
bid denied

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has refused to acquit the people accused of gunning down former members of their polygamous sect, but he questioned prosecutors' contentions that the case involves murder for hire.

U.S. District Judge Sim Lake rejected a motion from defense attorneys to acquit Patricia LeBaron, 27, William Fisher LeBaron, 29, and Douglas Barlow, 32, of 14 counts of federal charges Thursday after prosecutors rested their case.

Lake said he would allow the jury to decide the case. Defense attorneys say they will present a single defense witness when the case resumes on Tuesday.

But after the jury was out of the courtroom, Lake told attorneys he was concerned about federal prosecutors' contentions that the case involves murder for hire.

Prosecutors have claimed the slayings were contract killings because the defendants, all members of the Church of the First Born of the Lamb of God, believed they would inherit all earthly goods as rulers of the kingdom of God.

But defense attorneys argued that the killings were prompted by a desire for revenge and not material gain.

The three defendants are accused in the July 27, 1988, slayings of Duane Chynoweth, 31; his daughter, Jennifer Chynoweth, 8; and his brother, Mark Chynoweth, 36, in Houston and Ed Marston, 32, in the Dallas area.

Big Utah snow
increases level of Salt Lake

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The National Weather Service reports the Great Salt Lake has risen 2.4 inches in the past 10 days, thanks the copious snowfall along the Wasatch Front.

That almost equals the amount the lake generally rises in the entire month of January, said meteorologist Brian McInerney.

The lake level as of Friday was 42.00 feet above the 1963 level, 11.65 feet below the record sent in April 1987, he said. It was 8.85 above the record low sent in October 1963.

McInerney said the lake began its seasonal rise in the first two weeks of December. It should peak between mid-April and late June, depending on the spring runoff.

He said most precipitation stations report above-normal levels. And, from a water-supply standpoint, McInerney hopes it keeps snowing.

Utah is in its seventh year of drought.

Some exceptional precipitation levels included 166.2 inches of snow at Alta in Little Cottonwood Canyon.

Jet engine shatters window, injures 3

PASCO, Wash. (AP) — The blast from an airliner's jet engine shattered a window at an airport terminal gate, slightly injuring three people who received glass cuts.

The mishap occurred after Delta Airlines Flight 1805 was leaving a gate at the Tri-Cities Airport on Thursday for takeoff to Salt Lake City.

The Boeing 727-200 slid on ice and snow as it left the gate, and the pilot was forced to apply additional engine power to turn the aircraft so the wing would not hit the terminal building, Delta officials said.

After the plane turned, the blast from the rear of an engine came in line with the closed door on a neighboring terminal gate, shattering a window in the door, said Ron Foraker, assistant airport manager. People sitting inside the terminal were hit by glass particles.

In Somalia, handful of thieves survive inside crumbling prison

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — In a city ruled by the gun and overrun by cutthroats, pickpockets and thieves, Yasin Ahmed is a small-time crook who figures he was just unlucky.

The 21-year-old two-time loser is one of just a dozen inmates at Mogadishu's central prison, a faded relic of white crumbling walls and turrets built by Italian colonizers on a sandy bluff overlooking the sea.

"It is very strange. We are in prison in a city where there is no law and no order. Everyday there are crimes, there are thefts. But the 12 of us are the only ones unlucky enough to get caught," said Ahmed, who is doing his second term for theft.

Hours earlier, almost in the shadow of the prison, members of one clan tried the hands of a rival behind his back and shot him once in the head. There were no arrests, no investigation.

On the busy port road, guards set trucks used lengths of rope to whip looters who jumped on the moving trucks to steal sacks of grain.

"We know there are murderers and big criminals out there. But they have guns and are backed by clans and nobody is going to punish them," said Abraham Abdikader, 23, who awaits trial for a theft he admits.

"I feel better in here. If I was in the town, I could get killed. I feel safer here than I do in the city," said Abdikader.

Guards, volunteers who work for food, outnumber inmates almost four to one at the prison run by the forces of Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, the major warlord controlling south Mogadishu.

The prison commander, Abdul Gen. Xusein Farah Mollamud, said there are only thieves in the prison because inmates convicted of murder had been executed by firing squad. He declined to say how many.

He insists all prisoners had a defense attorney and a trial before one of 14 district judges in Mogadishu.

"You don't want to listen to the prisoners," said Mohamed. "They tell lies."

But the dozen grimy inmates in dingy, littered clothing testified to the pretense of a criminal justice system in city where might makes right.

"There are only 12 because there is no law or government. It is only clan law," said chief jailer Mursal Mose. "These 12 didn't have a gun and the police were able to catch them. They were unlucky. A lot of the criminals have guns and the police are afraid of them."

Just off the prison's hot, dusty central courtyard a guard dressed in a khaki uniform with a bright-red sash watched Ahmed sit a goosy batch of rice, shimmering over an open fire in an iron kettle swarming with flies.

"Rice, it is always the same. All we ever eat is rice and we only get that once a day," complained Ali Abdi Abdullah, 36, who is near the end of a six-month sentence for theft.

"When I was out, I made a got a lot of money stealing wood. I am very well, now all I eat is rice."

But by the standards of impoverished Somalia, the prisoners say they don't have it too bad.

Bundled out of Bosnia, boy still suffers nightmares of shelling

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — He's a handful of energy, a beautiful boy who loves to wrestle and laugh. But he wakes up screaming.

That's what the war in Bosnia did to Igor, who grew up under mortar fire in the cellars of Sarajevo.

"He was sleeping when he had a little fever the other day and some children were playing with cap pistols outside. Igor started crying and screaming 'Chetnik.' That will take a long time to heal," said his great aunt.

Igor, who will be 3 on March 14, is living in Germany with relatives after months of hiding with his mother in Sarajevo, the capital of Bosnia.

The "Chetniks" who frighten him are the Serb warriors — the term comes from the name for World War II-era Serb guerrillas — who began shelling Sarajevo just after Igor turned 2.

When the shelling began, his mother Aidit put a note explaining who Igor was, along with a couple of diapers, in a backpack that she slipped over his little shoulders. She put in a package of crackers and taught Igor how to open it to survive, in case something happened to the adults.

Whenever the shooting started, she made sure Igor had his backpack.

The Associated Press reported on Igor's plight and that of other Sarajevo children last summer, in a portrait of the war's most innocent victims.

"His mother is still alive and has gotten a few telephone calls through from Sarajevo to check on Igor. He left the besieged city in November with his paternal grandmother, Harjija, and arrived in Germany the next month.

Igor is one of the lucky ones, says his great aunt, a long-time German resident. The family asked their name and the location of their house not be given, for security reasons.

"There are thousands of others who aren't so lucky," says the aunt with tears streaming down her cheeks. She still has three brothers and three sisters in Bosnia, and an 83-year-old mother whom she hasn't been able to contact lately.

"I can't even send a kilo of flour to them. The post has stopped accepting packages and letters because

In July, The Associated Press reported on a Sarajevo woman who attached a note to her son Igor's backpack in case she died or they were separated. In November, she sent Igor to Germany. This is his story.

They can't get through."

It's easy to communicate with Igor. His eyes speak more than words — wariness mixed with the kind of hope that only the very young seem to muster.

He watches intently and laughs loudly as he wrestles with his teenage cousin Dino, who did some card tricks in an almost convincing way.

Igor's just a normal kid who happens to have been bombed and shot at during a third of his life.

At least 17,000 people have been killed since the conflict started in Bosnia and a million were made homeless by terror campaigns, mainly by the Serbs, aimed at driving out rival ethnic groups.

More than 250,000 people from Bosnia and other former Yugoslav republics have taken refuge in Germany.

Igor would rather be with his mother. She is a Muslim, his father a Serb. Both are members of the Bosnian force fighting against Serb nationalists.

Dry bread and water was the usual meal in Sarajevo. Igor forgot the taste of vegetables.

His life is different now. He's learning to eat real food, and has put on some weight.

He doesn't hear bullets and bombs, or screams of terror, but he still has nightmares. His aunt, grandmother and cousin are doing their best to help. Sometimes Igor bites his aunt's hands in frustration.

Strong quake shakes N. Japan

TOKYO (AP) — The strongest earthquake to hit Japan in a decade shook sparsely populated northern regions of this island nation Friday, injuring at least 193 people, tearing up roads and toppling power lines.

At least nine small fires broke out and seven buildings were badly damaged on the mountainous island of Hokkaido, police said. There also were reports of a landslide and damage to three bridges and seven sections of road.

Police said there were no reports of deaths from the quake, which the Central Meteorological Agency measured 7.5 on the Richter scale.

No damage or injuries were reported at a low-level radioactive waste storage center in Rokkasho near Aomori, 340 miles north of Tokyo, police said.

Television news showed sections of torn-up roads, damaged buildings, fallen telephone poles and shattered store windows throughout Hokkaido. Some temporary power failures and train delays were also reported.

The quake struck at 8:06 p.m. and was centered about 75 miles below sea level, about 12 1/2 miles off the coast from the port of Kushiro, on Hokkaido.

Kushiro has a population of 17,000, and is on the Pacific coast about 530 miles northeast of Tokyo.

"It was the strongest earthquake I've ever felt," an unidentified man in his 70s said in a televised interview from Kushiro. "I could hardly walk. It must have lasted a whole minute."

The National Police said most of the injured were on Hokkaido. They were hurt, some seriously, mostly by falling walls, roof tiles, signboards, furniture and broken glass.

Hikers, scientists escape volcano

PASTO, Colombia (AP) — Hikers and scientists staged a daring escape from a rumbling volcano Friday following a terrifying flash eruption that killed at least nine people, including volcano experts poking around the crater.

Officials confirmed seven injured in Thursday's eruption of 14,030-foot Galeras volcano, about 375 miles south of Bogota and 133 miles from the city of Pasto. The eruption sent super-hot volcanic debris 1/4 mile into the air.

There were conflicting reports that up to eight people were missing. Police told the radio network Caracol that more than 70 people may have been on the volcano when it erupted.

Ash and rocks continued to spew from the crater Friday as rescuers wearing masks against poisonous gases and debris found the bodies of two Colombians and a portion of another, unidentified body, the radio chain Caracol said.

The search was suspended at midday Friday as the snow-capped volcano began shaking again amid freezing temperatures, high winds and thick clouds.

Six others were confirmed dead on Thursday, including three who had yelled for help from inside the crater. Those victims included Geoff Brown of Open University of Britain, who was attending an international conference in Pasto on volcanoes, and Gorbin Garlov, a Russian geologist, and Nestor Garcia, a Colombian geologist. Three other bodies, of Colombians, were recovered.

Three of the injured were Americans — conference organizer Stanley Williams, an associate professor of geology at Arizona State University; Mike Conway of Florida International University; and Andreus Mathews, whose affiliation or hometown was not known.

Williams was in stable condition in a Pasto hospital for head injuries and broken ankles, said Ed Stump, head of ASU's geology department, in Tempe, Ariz.

"He is waiting evacuation... probably back to the States," Stump said.

All-female expedition reaches South Pole

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Four women skiers attempting to become the first female expedition to cross the Antarctic have reached the South Pole.

Expedition organizers in St. Paul were radioed from a science station at the South Pole that the women arrived Thursday.

"The hardest part is over," said Carol North, director of the American Women's Trans-Antarctic Expedition.

The women, who have been pulling sleds with up to 200 pounds of equipment and supplies, reached the South Pole two weeks behind schedule because of poor weather, frostbite and minor health problems.

The journey began Nov. 9 at Hercules Inlet on the Ronne Ice Shelf.

Business briefs

Company closure hits 55 workers in Pocatello

POCATELLO — U.S. West Communications will close its Pocatello directory assistance office later this year, eliminating 55 local jobs, the company announced.

The late fourth-quarter closure is part of a plan to consolidate 17 of 29 U.S. West operator service offices throughout the company's 14-state territory into 10 operational complexes.

"The consolidations are part of our company's previously announced plan to reduce costs and develop process improvements that will position our company to be more competitive," Barbara Wilson, U.S. West Communications Idaho vice president, said in a news release Friday.

The Pocatello office employs 55 operators and handles directory assistance calls for Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Utah. It will be consolidated with U.S. West's Midvale, Utah, facility, which also has been handling directory assistance calls from the four states since 1987.

The Midvale center also will continue to handle operator assisted long-distance calls for Idaho and Utah, as it has since 1986.

BPA power cutbacks affect aluminum plant employees

SPOKANE, Wash. — Hundreds of Northwest aluminum workers are losing their jobs as a result of Bonneville Power Administration-ordered, electricity cutbacks, but most smelters say they can reduce production without layoffs.

Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. on Thursday announced that 110 employees at smelters near Spokane and Tacoma would be temporarily laid off as three aluminum-making potlines are shut down to comply with the BPA order.

Aluminum Corporation of America announced Tuesday that it would shut down one potline and lay off 75 workers at its Wenatchee Works smelter.

"Basically, the curtailment couldn't come at a worse time," said John Carr, executive director of Direct Services Industries Inc.

UPS strikes deal with Boeing for up to 60 new-model jets

EVERETT, Wash. — United Parcel Service Friday ordered 30 Boeing 767 jetliners and took options on another 30, an order potentially worth $5 billion for The Boeing Co.

The deal launches the 767 freighter, an all-cargo jet based on the 767-300 widebody passenger twinjet that is widely used on transcontinental and international routes, and is the largest all-cargo order ever received by Boeing.

Boeing said the first of the new aircraft will roll off the Everett production line and enter flight testing in mid-1995, followed by deliveries starting in October of that year.

Atlanta-based UPS plans to use the planes on both international and domestic flights. It has not yet chosen engines for the aircraft.

Fixed mortgage rates take slight dip over this week

WASHINGTON — Thirty-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.04 percent this week, down from 8.07 percent last week, according to a national survey released Friday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

It was the lowest since mortgages averaged 8.01 percent during the week ended Oct. 9.

On one-year adjustable rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 5.25 percent, down from 5.28 percent last week.

The rates do not include add-on fees known as points.

Eskimo Pie will soon have chewy Tootsie Roll centers

How many licks does it take to get to the center of a Tootsie Roll pop? It's not clear, but now your tongue may get cold in the process.

Under a licensing agreement announced this week, Richmond-based Eskimo Pie Corp. will introduce a fruit-flavored popsicle with that chewy chocolate center made famous by Tootsie Roll Industries Inc. Based on consumers' widespread recognition of the Tootsie Roll brand, Eskimo Pie officials are expecting the new product line to attract a respectable chunk of the fragmented $1.3 billion business in frozen novelty treats.

Skyscraper in mothballs

The twin towers of the World Trade Center, left, and the One Chase Plaza Building flank the old Woolworth Building, once the tallest building in the world, but now almost 80 percent vacant.

'Prestigious' 40 Wall Street building falls on hard times

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — For a few months in 1929 — until Chrysler pulled a spire out of its hat — 40 Wall Street was the world's tallest building. Today it's the world's emptiest building, a vertical ghost town with floor upon floor of great views that no one sees.

Almost 80 percent of the million-square-foot office building is vacant. At dusk, as neighboring towers glow, 40 Wall is a black hole in the financial district firmament.

Over the past four years, Wall Street has lost tens of thousands of jobs, and firms have left for midtown, the suburbs and points beyond. A fourth of downtown's pre-World War II office space is empty — more than 7 million square feet, enough to swallow downtown Louisville.

Andrew Silberstein, a real estate agent who is trying to find tenants for 40 Wall, admits it's a tough sell. "In New York," he says, "Wall Street doesn't mean what it once did."

Nor does the tower with the familiar green pyramid top. Forty Wall makes some wonder if the prewar Manhattan skyscraper, the signal achievement of American architecture, is obsolete.

Normally conservative people are advancing seemingly radical solutions to the plight of 40 Wall and its generation: Mothball 'em. Tear 'em down. Turn 'em into apartments.

"We know what to do with an old house — cherish it, preserve it," says Joseph Pell Lombardi, an architect who suggests converting the top half of 40 Wall to condominiums. "But what do we do with an old skyscraper?"

No one was asking that question in

Computer wizard struggles as businessman

The Associated Press

WALTHAM, Mass. — His computers can read books for the blind or take dictation from doctors. His music synthesizers can mimic an orchestra and win praise from performers like Stevie Wonder.

But for all the marvels that have materialized from the mind of inventor Raymond Kurzweil, he still hasn't made it big as a businessman.

Kurzweil, 44, has been hailed as one of the greatest entrepreneurial geniuses to emerge from that bastion of science, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is now head — and the brains — of Kurzweil Applied Intelligence Inc., which is helping pioneer the market for computers that recognize human speech.

It's the third stab at business for Kurzweil. He sold off his other two ventures — the reading machine and synthesizer businesses — after concluding they lacked the necessary financial muscle.

But if some of his creations have seemed ahead of their time, Kurzweil believes that his time indeed will come, especially as basic computer technology gets cheaper. "These are cutting edge technologies," he said. "It will take time for the underlying

This futuristic vision also includes self-driving cars guided by sensors and communication devices on roadways. Keys and credit cards could be replaced by systems relying on a person's voice and fingerprints.

All this can be accomplished through advances in pattern recognition — the process where computers memorize, recognize and reproduce patterns, whether they're in print, speech or music.

Kurzweil has so much faith in the power of patterns that he extends it to his personal health. He follows a structured diet that limits fat intake to 10 percent of overall calories, and he even took time out from his busy schedule to write a book, "The 10-Percent Solution For A Healthy Life."

He became immersed in the subject after his father and grandfather both died of heart disease at relatively early ages.

"I... had a vague sense of confidence that somehow I would figure out a way to overcome this problem," Kurzweil wrote in the book.

Without doubt, Kurzweil is proud of his accomplishments. Greeting a visitor to his office recently, he immediately offered a copy of his 1990 tome, "The Age of Intelligent Machines," and autographed it.

Economy ends year on bittersweet note

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy ended the year on a mixed note. Industrial production posted a third straight modest increase in December, and a key inflation barometer fell to a 20-year low.

America's trade deficit continued to rise, hitting $7.59 billion in November as weak overseas economies cut into export sales of everything from soybeans to airplanes.

Put together, analysts said the various reports depicted an economy doing better than it has for some time, but still facing serious questions about the future.

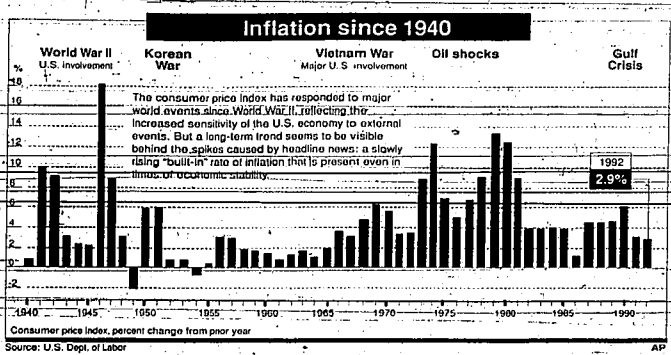

Among the reports Friday:

The Commerce Department said that the 5.1 percent increase in the November deficit reflected the fact that exports dropped 2.8 percent while imports were down a smaller 1.6 percent.

The weakness in exports reflected outright recessions or very sluggish growth in many of America's major overseas markets including Japan and Europe, where the United States saw a trade surplus dip back into deficit in November.

"The widening trade deficit is the result of the worldwide economic slowdown," said Jack Albertine, head of a Washington economic forecasting firm.

Consumer prices rose just 2.9 percent in 1993, the smallest overall advance since a 1.1 percent increase in 1986. Removing volatile energy and food costs from the mix, the so-called underlying rate of inflation was 3.5 percent last year, the lowest showing for this price measure in 20 years.

Analysts said the modest rise in inflation was a direct result of the 1990-91 recession and the extremely weak growth since that time. They forecast inflation will stay low through 1993 and possibly into 1994.

Inflation is lower for economic reasons. It happened because of the weak economy and tremendous downward pressure on costs.

Industrial production rose a modest 0.3 percent in December, a third consecutive gain, that was led by a sizable 5 percent jump in production at auto plants. The increase meant that the nation's factories, mines and utilities operated at 79.3 percent of capacity in December, the highest level in 13 months.

However, economists worried because so much of last month's strength was concentrated at auto factories. They noted that car sales in the early part of this year have taken a nosedive. This trend will have to be reversed for auto production to continue rising.

But other economists said that the huge December boom in consumer spending, which gave retailers their best Christmas in five years, left inventories severely depleted and should lead to even bigger production gains in coming months. Higher production should spur increased hiring and this will be the key to keeping the recovery alive this year, they said.

"We have got to see a pickup in employment in the first quarter if we are going to sustain this expansion," said David Wozniak, an economist with DRI-McGraw Hill Inc., a Lexington, Mass., consulting firm. "The consumer has done his part but until we get increases in incomes we will not see further gains in consumer spending."

Through November, the trade deficit was running at an annual rate of $82 billion, up from $65.4 billion in 1991, meaning 1992 will be the first year the trade deficit has failed to improve since 1987.

Analysts: Figures point to moderate growth

WASHINGTON — The December gain in industrial production shows the U.S. economy is continuing to grow, but only at a moderate pace, economists said Friday.

The Federal Reserve reported that industrial production rose 0.3 percent in December, following increases of 0.4 percent in November and 0.7 percent in October.

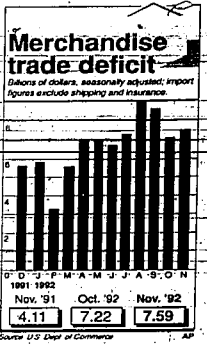

Much of the December rise was concentrated in the automotive industry; production edged up a mere 0.1 percent excluding the output of motor vehicles and parts.

The Fed also reported U.S. industries operated at 79.3 percent of capacity in December, after adjustment for seasonal factors. This was 0.1 percentage point above the revised November rate of 79.2 percent. The November rate originally was reported at 78.9 percent. The December rate was the highest since November 1991.

"It's more of the same," said Robert Dederick, of the Northern Trust Co. "There's still no sign of a full-scale breakout. It's slogging along."

David Wyss, economist with DRI/McGraw-Hill, called the industrial production rise "a decent number but not a great number."

He said it was consistent with his view that the economy was in a "mild recovery." He cautioned, however, that greater output was needed to keep the economy

Method culls more methanol from gas

Knight-Ridder News Service

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Scientists at a Mountain View, Calif., company have devised a new method of turning plentiful natural gas into methanol, a discovery that could eventually make the clean-burning fuel a more economical alternative to gasoline.

The company, Catalytica Inc., cautioned that its research is still in the lab stage and has yet to result in a commercial process. However, industry experts and technicians see an exciting breakthrough, saying it could dramatically increase methanol production.

Catalytica's discovery "has been one of the Holy Grails in this area," said Dr. Enrique Iglesia, a methanol conversion researcher with Exxon Corp. "It's rather tricky chemistry to do."

Methanol repeatedly has been presented as an environmental alternative to gasoline because it burns cleaner, producing fewer harmful gases and creating less smog. But it's not widely available, and while a gallon of methanol costs about half as much as diesel fuel, it also contains about half as much energy, making it no more economical to use.

The main advantage of methanol may be its source — natural gas, a resource the United States has in abundance. Proponents argue that domestically produced methanol could go a long way toward reducing the nation's reliance on foreign oil.

Methanol also can be transported much more easily and safely than natural gas.

Catalytica specializes in pollution-reduction technologies. Its new process, detailed in the journal Science, keys on discovery of a more efficient way to produce methanol from methane, the primary component of natural gas.

The idea of converting natural gas into methanol is not new. But conventional production techniques are complex and inefficient, requiring several intermediate steps to convert, at best, no more than 5 percent of the methane into liquid fuel.

Kurzweil

"He's 110 percent into everything he does, whether it's from his diet to his inventions," said Greg Guldice, marketing director for Xerox Corp. division that bought Kurzweil's reading machine business in 1980.

Kurzweil's creative knack and mental drive have been evident from an early age. As a teenager, he won first prize at the International Science Fair for a computer program that could analyze the musical patterns of Mozart and create new melodies.

"It had everything the Mozart tunes had except the genius," Kurzweil said. "It sounded like one of Mozart's students."

After graduating from MIT, Kurzweil delved deeper into the field of pattern recognition, leading to the 1976 unveiling of the reading machine that could scan books and utter the text electronically.

The first models cost around $50,000, and it wasn't until after Xerox acquired the business that the price has dropped to about $5,500.

By chance, an early user of the reading machine was Stevie Wonder. He met Kurzweil, who is a music enthusiast, and lamented how electronic synthesizers lacked the rich sounds of acoustical instruments such as the violin and piano.

That became the impetus for Kurzweil Music Systems, which produced highly acclaimed synthesizers. But even Kurzweil's technical prowess couldn't crack the dominance of Asian companies in the consumer electronics market. His company filed for bankruptcy protection and eventually was sold to a Korean firm.

Kurzweil hopes to have better luck with his current business, which has been growing quickly and had more than $10 million in revenue in 1991.

The company's computers can transcribe human speech, as long as the speaker pauses for a fraction of a second between each word.

The company has primarily targeted hospitals and several hundred emergency rooms have installed the computers to help doctors record diagnoses.

Kurzweil envisions a hearing machine for the deaf, akin to his reading machine for the blind.

It fits with his philosophy that artificial intelligence is simply a tool to fill in the gaps in human abilities.

"What turns me on is creating some technology that's new and hasn't been done before," he said, "but then having it actually make an impact on the world."

Building

1929, the year when it became clear that the 792-foot Woolworth Building was about to lose its crown as the world's tallest building.

Chrysler Corp. had announced plans for an office tower near Grand Central Terminal. Downtown, another tall office building was planned a half block from the New York Stock Exchange. The race to the sky was on.

It was a grudge match. Craig Severance, architect of 40 Wall Street, and William Van Alen, Chrysler's designer, had until recently been partners. Their split was not amicable, and now each maneuvered to get a leg up.

In the subways and the saloons, New Yorkers debated the towers' styles — Chrysler was gleaming Art Deco, Van Alen was more sober historic limestone and brick — and cheered on their favorite.

Chrysler added 10 stories to its design; meanwhile, plans for 40 Wall grew from 47 to 60 to 70 stories. Finally, Severance — thinking Chrysler would be his — had his architect add a rooftop lantern and flagpole that pushed 40 Wall to 927 feet and, it seemed, to victory.

But Van Alen had a surprise up his sleeve ... and inside his building. He had secretly moved five sections of a 185-foot spire into the building and assembled them on an upper floor; once 40 Wall had topped off, Van Alen pulled the spire out and put it up. Chrysler was No. 1 — until 1931, when the Empire State Building was finished.

Meanwhile, the stock market had crashed and the economy was collapsing. Half-empty and able to get rents at half the '29 rate, 40 Wall limped along for a decade before falling into foreclosure.

Fifty Wall's problems evaporated in the 1950s when World War II, but returned in the 1980s when it was secretly purchased by Philippines dictator Ferdinand Marcos. After Marcos was overthrown, he was forced to give up 40 Wall.

Although a court-appointed receiver continued to collect rents and make routine repairs, there was no money for capital improvements. And then, in October 1987, the stock market crashed again.

A new developer took over in 1989 and announced plans for a $50 million renovation. But Manufacturers Hanover moved out after merging with Chemical Bank, and Morgan Guaranty followed suit. Citibank, which held the mortgage, cut off renovation funds, and the developer defaulted on his mortgage payments.

Most of 40 Wall's floors are empty, their lights turned off and heat turned down. The elevators are programmed to pass by. Down in the lobby, attendants usually outnumber everyone else.

To the high tech financial services industry, 40 Wall looks like an antique. The floors on its upper stories are too small, with too many columns. The wiring is old. There is no freight elevator.

In the last three years 40 Wall's assessed market value has dropped from $123 million to $75 million; although Citibank declines to comment, real estate brokers say the bank would sell its interest for as little as $10 million. Not since the Depression has so large a building lost so much value so fast.

The tower's tax bill is so large that if tenants (or a buyer) are not found, Citibank could have to give it to the owner of the underlying property. The nation's 12th-tallest building might even be abandoned to the city, like some burned out tenement.

Joseph Peil Lombardi, who specializes in renovation and conversion of old buildings, thinks the upper 30 stories of 40 Wall should be broken into 120 apartments and sold, bare-bones, to homeowners who would finish them at their own pace, taste and budget.

Office towers, he points out, have many residential amenities: imposing lobbies; high ceilings; fine vistas; and Wall Street is relatively safe and, at night, quiet. You can walk to the South Street Seaport, to Battery Park, to work.

Although conversion of some prewar office space into residences has been suggested by the Real Estate Board of New York and is being studied by the city Planning Department, brokers point out that the residential market is almost as depressed as the office market.

But Lombardi says something has to give.

"For the first time in history, we're going to have 100-year-old skyscrapers — buildings that were designed for very specific purposes and built, essentially, to last forever. They're monuments. They aren't going to go away."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

When you are describing a shape, or sound, or tint. Don't state the matter plainly. But put it in a hint. And learn to look at all things With a sort of mental acuity.

Lewis Carroll.

NORTH 138-A. K72, 743, 653, 10998. WEST 99933, 99985, 10998. EAST 99933, 99985, 99933.

Anyone can see that today's club suit offers declarer the only chance to score the game-going trick. What remains hidden for many is the proper way to play the suit. South wins his diamond king and counts seven top winners outside the club suit. How best to play the club suit to ensure two more winners? The routine approach won't work against a reasonably good defender. If South leads the queen, East will duck, then win with the second round. With only an ace-ten to dummy's clubs, South cannot score a second-club-winner and he holds himself to only eight tricks. To be assured of getting two club winners, South should consider holding a second-club. And instead of leading the queen, he should first lead small to dummy's eight. What can East do? If East ducks, South continues with a low one back to the queen to get two winners. Alternatively, if East wins his jack, South wins East's exit and leads his queen to dummy's king. Whether East wins doesn't matter. Dummy's suit can be finessed and the spade king remains as the vital entry.

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: North South

ANSWER: Four hearts. No half measures here. Whether it makes or not doesn't matter. This is where you want to play.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 1264, Dallas, Texas 75211, with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.
