President Clinton Explains Friday's order

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton took the first steps toward revoking the 50-year ban on homosexuals in the military Friday, throwing his administration into a risky battle with Congress and sharpening a national debate over gay rights.

After intense negotiations to strike a compromise with Democratic leaders, Clinton announced he was ordering the drafting of a formal order by July 15 to revoke the ban.

In the meantime, he said, military recruits no longer will be asked about their sexual orientation — in effect, letting them enlist if they do not openly declare their status. Yet, members of the armed forces who declare they are homosexuals will be subject to discharge proceedings.

"This is a dramatic step forward," Clinton said at brief news conference at the White House. "Normally in the history of civil rights advancements, presidents have not necessarily been in the forefront in the beginning."

Republicans denounced Clinton's action and promised to fight it. Senate Minority Leader George Mitchell said he believed he had the votes to defeat them.

Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Clinton "has given us a direction to move in, and we are going to be moving in that direction." He declined to restate the chiefs' opposition to the ban.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the influential chairman of the Armed Services Committee, extracted major concessions from Clinton about how to treat homosexuals already in the military. And he said he still opposes lifting the ban.

"I don't have any present intention of changing my mind," Nunn said. However, he agreed not to vote for legislation concerning the ban until after he holds extensive hearings on gays in the military.

The administration could modify its plans further to gain more support for lifting the ban. A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton was open to the idea of barring gays from combat, sea duty and other close quarters if senior Pentagon officials felt that was necessary to maintain military effectiveness.

Under clear blue skies the job of removing snow from roads in Camas County continues. A snow blower driven by Jack Dallin of the county's road and bridge department chews its way through another drift.

In Idaho's high country, winter brings out everyone's best

By Suzanne Huxhold
Times-News correspondent

FAIREIELD — The Camas County Road and Bridge crew has only had three days off in the last two months, and it'll be a couple of weeks before they see another.

But crew chief Pat Funkhouser considers himself fortunate.

"I'm the lucky one," Funkhouser joked. "I got to go to Paul and pick up a part, so I got out of here for a while. That was a nice change."

Even such small blessings count big in the road-clearing business in southern Idaho's snow-choked high country. This time of year, city and county road crews work marathon shifts, and every available body is on the road.

"The county treasurer has been driving the snow plow," Funkhouser said. "We had the deputy sheriff out here, and the city man came in to spell us."

County Commissioners Ray Wolfe and Jack Renfrow rolled up their sleeves and went to work under the hood when some of the plow equipment broke down, and Sheriff Harold Lee hauled fuel to the road crews.

In the city of Hailey in neighboring Blaine County, Street Superintendent Stephan Dick said he pressed into service four city employees who normally spend more time behind a desk than they do behind the wheel of heavy machinery.

Wastewater managers and other city employees filled in for the beleaguered road crew so they could head home for hot showers and furry winks.

"We were hurt for sleep," Dick said. "We were more danger out there on the streets than it was worth." But after a few hours' shut-eye and a home-cooked meal, Hailey's 11-man team hit the streets again.

"We've pretty much been out there around the clock," Dick said.

Little in Camas County. With more than 2 feet of snow falling in a single night last week, and with storm front after storm front dumping more snow since Christmas, Funkhouser's six-man crew has been pulling more all-nighters than anyone at the county shop can count.

Funkhouser said the winter weather, the most severe anyone has seen here since the mid-1980s, is a blessing for this small, dry-farm community at the foot of the Soldier Mountain Range.

Questions unanswered about family tragedy

The Associated Press

FREMONT, Calif. — He was described as a hard-working nurseryman and "one hell-of-a nice guy."

He had marital troubles but seemed to stay friendly with his wife. They were healthy and financially secure.

Friends, neighbors and police were grasping for clues to what drove Steven Page to kill his wife, throw his young daughter from the Golden Gate Bridge and jump to his death after her on Thursday.

"It makes you feel sick to your stomach," said Maureen Hannon, who lives in the same cul-de-sac as had Page and his wife, Nancy.

"We have no answers to this terrible tragedy," police Sgt. Rick Phillips said Friday.

Even the most obvious possible cause, domestic trouble, didn't really fit, Phillips said.

The Pages' marriage had been an on-again-off-again affair, with the couple almost divorcing, trying to reconcile over the holidays and then splitting again last week.

But lawyers indicated there were no custody or financial issues and the couple appeared friendly. Mrs. Page still hoped to salvage the marriage, according to his cousin, Gary Page.

The Pages seemed to be a typical suburban couple. Page, 32, was a buyer at the Owaga-Mune Nursery. Mrs. Page, 37, had recently decided to go back to school and was working part time at a drug store. Both were in good health physically and financially, Phillips said.

Kin Mune, Page's boss, described him as a good worker and "one hell of a nice guy," though he had seemed a little subdued lately.

"You could see he was different. He's normally very talkative," he said.

Still, Mune said that doesn't begin to explain what happened Thursday.

Page called in late to work, then went to his wife's house about 10 a.m., police said. Page had moved to a nearby apartment after the last split.

Sometime in the next hour he put a 12-gauge shotgun in his wife's mouth and pulled the trigger, Phillips said.

About 11 a.m., he was seen driving toward the Golden Gate Bridge, about an hour north. At noon he called his mother-in-law, telling her she would have to pick up his 11-year-old stepson, Nancy Page's child from a previous marriage.

Confused by the message, the mother checked on her daughter and found her dead.

Sometime after 2 p.m., officials at the Golden Gate Bridge approached Page as he walked close to the edge with a bundle in his arms. As they got closer, he threw his 11-year-old daughter into San Francisco Bay. Then, before horrified officers could reach him, he jumped himself.

Investigators found a note from Page to his stepson at the Fremont home that said he was sorry. Beyond that, little is known, Phillips said.

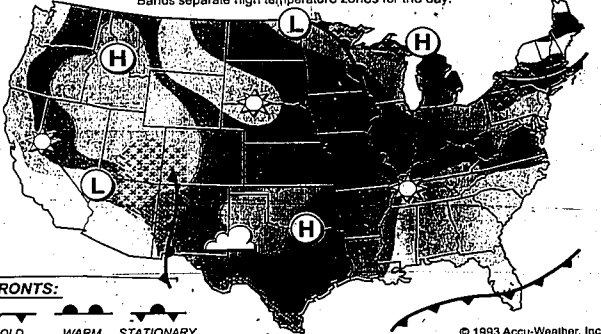

Coincidentally, the boy's father had traveled to Fremont from Alaska to show his son his new baby by a second marriage. The father arrived at the family home Thursday evening, expecting to take his son to dinner. He found police instead.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says high pressure and associated temperature inversions will dominate Idaho's weather for the next several days.

There's a bit of night and morning fog will be the rule in the valleys, and most mountain areas will be as warm or warmer than most low valley stations during the afternoons.

In the Magic Valley Friday, low clouds and fog persisted most of the day, although thinning enough at times to admit some sunshine. Some light snow fell during the morning, but did not accumulate appreciably. Temperatures remained below freezing but winds were light to calm most of the day.

A few traces of precipitation were reported across southern Idaho.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 45 degrees at Lewiston and Riggs. Fairfield and Malad reported the coldest at 4 degrees below zero.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 78 degrees at Fort Myers, Fla. The lowest was 17 degrees below zero at St. Cloud, Minn.

Snow showers whiten Rockies, Northeast; Texas under ice

Snow showers fell Friday in parts of the Northeast and Rockies, while bitter winds chilled the northern Plains and upper Great Lakes. Freezing rain dotted Texas.

Plumetting temperatures in the Northeast were expected to produce wind chills from 30 to 60 degrees below zero overnight in New Hampshire and Maine.

Rain showers fell during the day over southern Louisiana and eastern and central Texas, with freezing rain over northern Texas. Heavier rainfall during the 7 hours

GOP elects Barbour but abortion fight revives

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The departing Republican national chairman revived a bitter party fight Friday by warning that the GOP is on a "sure path to disaster" unless it softens its unyielding opposition to abortion and an image of intolerance.

Rich Bond's parting lecture to the GOP and its powerful religious right overlords followed the action of lawyer-lobbyist Haley Barbour to succeed Bond as Republican National Committee chairman.

In milder terms, Barbour too called on Republicans to reduce their emphasis on abortion.

Barbour, 45, a Mississippi conservative who personally opposes abortion, said Bond was right in saying Republicans needed to settle their abortion disagreement.

They should focus instead on shared economic and national defense views, Barbour declared.

Clear out, U.S. advises Mobutu

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration urged President Mobutu Sese Seku to stop interfering with a peaceful transition to democracy in the strife-torn African country, where violence erupted a gain Tuesday.

The situation that has developed results from Mobutu's failure to cooperate and give authority to the transition government," State Department spokesman Richard A. Boucher said.

The large denomination bank notes have been rejected by the transition government and by most of the population, Boucher said.

Mobutu once enjoyed lavish U.S. support, particularly during the Cold War when he could be depended on for his solid anti-communist stance. But former President Bush urged him to turn over all effective power, particularly over economic affairs, to a transition government selected by the National Conference.

At least eight foreigners, including French Ambassador Philippe Bernard, were killed in shooting in Kinshasa, the capital, Bernard, who had arrived last month, was hit by a stray bullet, the French foreign ministry said in Paris.

There are some 800 U.S. nationals in Zaire, about 220 of them in Kinshasa along with 32 U.S. officials, Boucher said. All were safe and that the U.S. was not planning to evacuate them, although Americans had been advised to prepare should the situation deteriorate.

France and Belgium sent troops Friday to protect their nationals. At least 45 people have been killed and 12 wounded, most of them soldiers, in a rioting and fighting that broke out in Kinshasa on Thursday.

Boucher attributed the outbreak to an attempt by the Mobutu-controlled administration to force the Zairean military to accept pay in the form of notes of 5 million Zaires, the local currency.

"We reaffirm the continuity of this policy," Boucher said. "In particular, we support the transition process that was established by the National Conference."

He said U.S. Ambassador Melissa Wells told Mobutu on Jan. 14 that the transition government must be given full authority to reverse transition to democratic and economic reform and that it should take place "with Mobutu's further interference."

ton's resolve even while expressing disappointment that political pressures allowed only halfway steps.

His action came one day after a federal judge in California ruled that the military's ban on homosexuals was unconstitutional.

White House communications director George Stephanopoulos said it was the initial judgment of the White House counsel that that decision had nationwide effect, but that the ruling was being studied.

Key points in order

The Associated Press

- Key elements in President Clinton's announcement on ending the ban on openly gay people serving in the military:
- Defense Secretary Les Aspin was given until July 15 to draft an executive order that would exclude people from the military solely because they're gay. The order also would establish strict standards of sexual conduct for all members of the military.
- Discharges of gay members of the military will be suspended until the policy question is resolved. In the interim, gay soldiers in the process of being discharged will be removed from active duty and placed in the standby reserve.
- The government will stop legal proceedings to discharge gay members of the military.
- Recruiters will stop asking enlistees about their sexual orientation.

Though it may take them another two weeks before every county by way is clear, Funkhouser said, Camas is in better condition than some of the low-lying communities.

"We're excited for it up here," Funkhouser said. "We're in pretty good shape."

The president's action fell far short of his promise to eliminate the ban. Facing opposition from the House and Republicans, and divisions within his own party, Clinton deemed it was as far as he could go.

"This compromise is not everything I had hoped for or everything that I have stood for, but it is clearly a substantial step in the right direction," Clinton said.

Idaho road report

BOISE (AP) — Fog was reported on some Idaho highways Friday afternoon, the Idaho Department of Transportation said, with some drifting in the southeastern corner of the state.

Road conditions:

Clinton strongly supports. "Regrettably, President Clinton has decided to ignore the overwhelming majority of the American people, military experts, veteran groups and the advice of Senate Republicans and many Democrats on the gay issue," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said.

"It's a big mistake," he said.

Vowing to fight Clinton, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said, "I believe an alternative left to us. Win or lose, it's the right position to take. There's no question where the American people stand."

Gay rights leaders said Clinton did as much as he could.

Clinton says the delay until July 15 would allow time for consultation, study and preparation of "rigorous standards regarding sexual conduct to be applied to all military personnel."

Gays in military: Decision causes discussion

The Associated Press

Whether it was a civil rights victory or a disciplinary defeat, President Clinton's decision Friday to begin lifting the ban on gays in the military served one undeniable purpose: It got people talking.

Gay rights advocates greeted the president's announcement as a limited victory, while military traditionalists predicted dire consequences. Either way, the ruling prompted candid talk about homosexuality — and that alone, some people said, was a victory for the gay rights movement.

"I'm pleased this is being discussed right now," said Rich Bailey, a 33-year-old computer operator in Austin, Texas, who was drummed out of the Navy in 1982 for being gay. "The more open discussion we have about gays and lesbians, the more it forces people to confront their stereotypes and bigotry."

Reaction in the military varied, predictably, with some of those on both sides of the issue expressing relief.

In Columbus, Ga., Army Spec. Eric Kline said a prayer of thanks when he heard that the ban on gays won't be lifted until at least July. He and his roommate at Fort Benning, Spec. Corey Heath, watched the president's news conference on television at Ranger Joe's Barbershop in Columbus.

Clinton announced that he had given Defense Secretary Les Aspin until July 15 to draft an executive order ending the ban. Until then, recruiters will refrain from asking enlistees about their sexual orientation, and discharge proceedings against gays already in the service will be put on hold.

"I'm glad they're waiting," said Heath, a tank mechanic from Mahomet, Ill. "I think everybody is going to talk him out of it. I hope they will because I certainly don't agree with it. If we have gays, I wouldn't want to be in the shower room and have someone look at me."

In Norfolk, Va., Navy Lt. j.g. Tracy Thorne expressed relief for different reasons. Thorne, a former A-6 flier, was recommended for discharge for being gay. Clinton's decision could salvage his career.

"Like many gays, he ridiculed the argument that easing the ban would make heterosexuals uncomfortable in the shower."

"I have grown up my entire life showering with men," he said. "When I get into the shower with another man, as I do every day at the gym, it's not a sexual experience for me. It's just a daily chore called showering."

Greta Cammermeyer, a lesbian who was discharged from the Washington state Army National Guard last year after a 26-year career, said she was "delighted that the first movement has been made," but wasn't sure what it would mean.

A spokesman for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Steve Van Burkirk, expressed disappointment. "The military's primary role is to fight wars, and we're concerned that lifting the ban will impair that," he said.

One retired Air Force officer, Lt. Col. Paul Muehring, said opening the military to gays would be the most profound social change in the service since racial integration in the 1950s.

"Normally, you look at social change as being something for the better. But I'm really not sure about this step," he said.

Gay rights advocates, of course, see the issue as an integral part of their movement to gain equal status in all segments of society.

"Every social change goes through the same revolution, like civil rights for blacks and women's right to vote," said one gay sailor in Honolulu, who declined to identify himself. "There's a lot of homophobic people in the Navy and all branches of the service, but people in the long run are going to accept it."

Former Senate staffer receives probation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Senate Sergeant at Arms Henry K. Giugni was placed on probation for a year Friday after pleading guilty to a misdemeanor charge of accepting a free trip to Hawaii from AT&T. Giugni also was ordered by U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey to reimburse American Telephone and Telegraph Co. $2,722.

Commonly asked questions on directive

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Here are some of the questions being asked about President Clinton's interim directive on homosexuals in military service:

Q. What will change over the next six months?
A. Two things. First, military recruits no longer will be asked before induction whether they are homosexual. Second, those in military service whose homosexuality is discovered will not be punished as severely as before.

Q. What will happen to those on active military duty who have admitted — or will admit — that they are homosexual?
A. Their cases still will go forward. But instead of being discharged from the service, they will be placed in the standby reserve — without pay — at least until the president acts on his proposal to end the ban on gays in the military.

Q. What can they do if the ban is later rescinded?
A. They probably would have a claim for back pay and reinstatement, although that right has not been made clear.

Q. Does Clinton's directive mean that gays and lesbians cannot be discharged even if they commit homosexual acts in violation of military rules?
A. No. Clinton draws a distinction between a person's status as a homosexual and that person's behavior. Those who go beyond simply acknowledging their homosexuality and engage in prohibited sexual conduct are subject to discharge, as in the past.

Q. What will Congress do now?
A. There will be a move to overturn the president's interim directive. It is not expected to succeed. Congress, meanwhile, plans hearings on the consequences of removing the ban.

Q. When does the president expect to issue his executive order?
A. July 15.

Q. How would it change the rules?
A. It would end the current policy barring homosexuals from military service solely on the basis of sexual orientation. At the same time, Clinton said he intends to establish more rigorous standards governing sexual conduct by all military personnel.

Q. Could the congressional hearings change the president's mind about undoing the ban?
A. Unlikely. Clinton said his opponents think that the problems will be so overwhelming everybody with good sense will change their position. I don't expect to do that.

Q. What can Clinton's opponents do to restore the ban after he nullifies it?
A. Congress may enact a law suspending the executive order. However, Congress would need a two-thirds vote of both houses to override a Clinton veto.

Q. What will happen to the hundreds of current court cases that arose from the military ban on homosexuals?
A. Clinton has instructed the Justice Department to seek delays in such cases until he issues a final policy.

Q. On Thursday, a federal judge in Los Angeles ruled the anti-homosexual policy unconstitutional and ordered the Defense Department to stop enforcing it. Does the order legally require the Pentagon to end the ban?
A. Some lawyers believe it is binding on the Defense Department and could be enforced nationwide by a contempt order. But other experts say that the order is binding only within the federal judge's limited jurisdiction. The government is likely to request a delay of the order until the president acts.

Q. How have other federal courts ruled?
A. Mostly in favor of the anti-homosexual policy. For example, in 1990, the Supreme Court let stand federal appeals court decisions that rebuffed the challenges of a lesbian soldier and a gay sailor who were barred from further military duty despite a lack of evidence that they had committed homosexual acts.

Q. What has the Supreme Court said about homosexuality?
A. It concluded 5-4 in 1986 that states may punish private homosexual acts between consenting adults. But the justices have never ruled on the military ban itself or on the constitutionality of other government penalties based on homosexual status.

Family leave: Clinton hears from citizens

WASHINGTON (AP) — With babies squealing in the background, President Clinton and 11 American families held a cross-country chat Friday about the difficulties of getting time off work for family emergencies.

After Kathi Censullo's son Anthony was born with a defective heart, his father was tired for spending too much time at the hospital. Censullo, of Hudson, N.H., told her story to President Clinton Friday.

Oval Office was designed to show-case legislation that would require employers to give their workers unpaid leave to care for a newborn or sick relative.

"I hope I get to sign this bill next week," Clinton told the families. "... If it happens, it will be because of people like you and for people like you."

One by one, the families recounted gripping experiences in which the hardships of family illness were compounded by their employers' refusal to give them time off.

Many lost their jobs in order to stay home with sick-children; several lost their homes. One woman had to quit her job to take care of an adopted newborn. One man was fired when he needed time off to help his wife care for triplets born three months premature.

One of the most touching stories came from James Callor of Helper, Utah, who found out in 1982 that his 4-year-old daughter had cancer. When his daughter was given just a few weeks to live, Callor asked for and was denied leave from his job at a mining company. His daughter died three weeks later.

"I didn't lose my job but I lost my little girl," he told Clinton. "... These people never had a heart."

Callor added that he'd be "more than glad to come over" to Washington to recount his story in person if it would help bring about the enactment of family leave legislation.

"Bless you. Just telling it today will help very much," Clinton told him.

Eva Skubel, of Moodus, Conn., said her family was left without any income or health benefits when her husband, Michael, lost his job when he needed time off to care for a daughter with a rare brain disease at the same time his wife was pregnant.

"When you have to choose between your job and your family you must go with your family," she said. Carmen Maya of Chicago was so excited to talk with the president she told him, "I feel like I won the lottery." She lost her job when she needed extra leave after giving birth to a daughter with Down's syndrome.

"I just can't believe... people still lose their jobs when they have compounding family or medical needs that keep them out of work for a short time," she said.

Squealing babies could be heard sounding off several times during the calls.

"Keep those kids making that great noise. I like to hear it," Clinton told the callers.

Clinton was joined by Vice President Gore for the half-hour group conversation.

Police say forgery suspect swallowed check

TROY, N.Y. (AP) — The evidence is missing in a check-forgery case, but it's whereabouts are secret. Police say the culprit told them he gobbled it up. Frank Grasso, 53, was arrested Thursday after trying to cash an $840 check at a bank.

100,000 workers could strike

The Associated Press

Up to 100,000 workers in the oil and coal industries could strike next week if negotiations fail to produce contracts.

Depending on the duration, walk-outs by 60,000 members of the United Mine Workers Union and 40,000 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union could disrupt supplies of coal and refined petroleum to consumers.

Neither union, however, has disclosed if it would strike, nor if it would be a total or a rotating strike.

Robert E. Wages, president of the oil workers union, scheduled a news conference for Monday. More than 300 contracts expire at midnight Sunday.

"If we can't announce that we've reached a settlement, then we'll be announcing either that 40,000 oil workers are out on strike, or that we've decided to strike certain selected companies who have shown us that they want to take us on," Wages said.

The union negotiating team rejected a third offer by Amoco Oil Co. on Thursday. Wages said in Lakewood, Colo.

Historically, the union negotiates with one major-oil company and that agreement becomes a model for the others.

In the coal industry, there was no sign of a breakthrough in talks between the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, which represents 12-of-the-nation's largest coal producers, expires at midnight Monday.

Negotiations have been held since November under a mutual news blackout.

"What happens on Feb. 17" teases a sticker that's been appearing on coal miners' hard hats. "We know ... do you?"

The UMW's five-year contract with the bituminous association covers miners in Alabama, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

Job security is a critical issue, with the union concerned about company establishment of nonunion subsidiaries. The companies want the miners to pay part of their health insurance premiums. Pay ranges from $11 to about $15-an-hour.

Dewi Sukarno doesn't mind life in county jail

DENVER (AP) — Former Indonesian first lady Dewi Sukarno says serving jail time for attacking another jet-setter with a champagne glass has been like taking a vacation at a country club.

Sukarno, wife of late Indonesian president Ahmed Sukarno, began serving a 60-day sentence at Pitkin County Jail near Aspen this week.

Her 8-by-12-foot cell, which she shares with one other inmate, has a view of Red Mountain, site of some of Aspen's most fashionable homes.

"This must be the most beautiful jail in the world," Sukarno said Thursday in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "It's like having a vacation."

Sukarno, 52, pleaded guilty in Deember to assault and disorderly conduct in the January 1992 attack on Maria Victoria Osmena, who suffered a facial gash that took 37 stitches to close.

Sukarno had no complaints about her treatment at the jail.

"We have ribbons in our hair, we wear makeup. We can wear whatever we want," she said.

Court upholds Hoffman death penalty

BOISE — The conviction and death penalty ordered for a man convicted of killing an undercover drug agent has been upheld by the Idaho Supreme Court.

The court on Friday ruled 4-1 that Maxwell "Mad Max" Hoffman properly received the death penalty for taking part in the murder of Nampa drug agent Denise Williams in 1987.

Justice Stephen Bistline dissented, saying in his opinion, Hoffman did not receive a fair trial. "I fail to perceive how the execution of this man, who was not given a constitutional trial, arises to the level of overhanded administering of justice in Idaho," Bistline said.

But the majority said Hoffman, 35, Nampa, received a fair trial and was properly sentenced to death by 3rd District Judge Gerald Weston. Hoffman still has access to the federal appeals system, so his execution still appears to be far off. Idaho has 22 people on Death Row at the state prison, all in various stages of appeals.

New Mexico BLM will have new chief

SANTA FE, N.M. — A new director for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management in New Mexico will be named by the person President Clinton selects to head the BLM nationally.

The current BLM state director, Larry Woodard, is resigning April 16 to become director of development at Boise Bible College in Idaho.

Woodard said the change of administrations in Washington, D.C., isn't a factor in leaving Santa Fe. "I want a change of pace. ... I just have a general feeling that it's time to move on," he said Thursday.

Agents investigate damage at INEL

IDAHO FALLS — Federal agents are investigating minor damage that occurred earlier this month at a nuclear reactor site on the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory installation.

The FBI and Department of Energy's Office of Nuclear Safety sent their own agents to the eastern Idaho site earlier this week to look into the severed wires and other damage to several electrical units at the INEL's Advanced Test Reactor.

"We're calling it possible vandalism or malicious mischief," said INEL spokesman John Walsh. "Since the investigation is under way, that is not a final conclusion at this point."

Officials expect more poisoning cases

BOISE — Southwestern Idaho health officials are bracing for secondary food poisoning after 10 cases of the bacteria were reported in Ada and Canyon counties.

Three people have been hospitalized in Boise since an outbreak of E. coli — a bacteria found in undercooked beef — has been linked to hamburgers served at Jack in the Box restaurants.

"We think we've identified all the cases contracted in the suspected time frame," said Tom Turco, spokesman for the Central District Health Department. "Now we're seeing people who didn't realize their symptoms were a sign of illness."

Those who ate hamburgers there between Jan. 11 and Jan. 18 are considered susceptible, Turco said.

Senator seeks to limit child labor

BOISE — Sen. Marguerite McLaughlin wants to stop teen-agers from dropping out of school to work.

The Oregon Democrat on Thursday won the support of the Senate Commerce and Human Resources Committee to print a bill that would make the first changes in state child labor laws in 81 years.

Existing state laws now allow children younger than 16 to work up to 48 hours a week while school is in session and up to 54 hours a week during vacation.

McLaughlin's bill would limit 12- and 13-year-olds to working only during school vacations. Likewise, it would restrict 14- and 15-year-olds to 20 hours of work while school is in and 40 hours a week when it isn't.

Corrections wants deficiency warrants

BOISE — The Department of Corrections wants authority to issue deficiency warrants to cover medical costs for inmates and the cost of keeping state prisoners in county jails.

But some legislators say that would be like issuing the agency a blank check.

"It opens the state checkbook with no lid on how much we're spending," said Rep. Pam Ahrens R-Boise.

The proposal will return to the Judiciary, Rules and Administration panel for later discussion.

ACLU suit: Judge refuses to reveal names

BOISE (AP) — A federal judge has refused to make public the identities of plaintiffs in a lawsuit over prayers at graduation exercises in the Madison School District.

But U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge on Friday ordered the names revealed to the court and the attorney for Rexburg schools, with the requirement that they go no further.

A trial is scheduled to begin Aug. 24 in Pocatello.

Lodge said identifying the plaintiffs publicly would make children of the parents who filed the November 1990 lawsuit "particularly vulnerable to verbal and physical abuse."

And since letters published in the local newspaper "suggest the possibility of actual violence or retaliation," he said, it was clear the case had inflamed emotions.

While the judge said the school district's lawyer also has a right to information needed to build a defense case, he warned attorney Kirlan Naylor not to reveal the plaintiffs' names to anyone else — including his clients.

Even other lawyers involved in the defense must file an affidavit with the court swearing to obey the same restrictions, Lodge said.

"That keeps the court, as an impartial, neutral fact-finder, out of the equation," he said.

The lawsuit was filed by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of Madison County residents identified only as Jane Doe and her two children, X and Y Doe, and David and Diane Roe and their child, R. Roe.

The families said the district's practice of allowing student prayers at graduation violates the constitutional separation of church and state. But the lawsuit was put on hold more than a year ago pending a U.S. Supreme Court decision in a similar Rhode Island case.

Last June, the high court ruled 5-4 that prayer at graduation is unconstitutional. But Rexburg school officials contend their circumstances are different and refused an ACLU request that they sign a consent decree banning prayer at graduation.

Naylor said his case was bolstered by a federal appeals court in New Orleans that ruled in November that prayer was acceptable as long as it is initiated and led by students.

On Friday, ACLU attorney Stephen Pevay of Denver said his clients had indicated they would have to drop the lawsuit if their names were revealed. He said the fact that Rexburg is a 95-percent Mormon community where "religion plays a significant and compelling role."

Since his clients are trying to stop a religious practice and evidence shows a number of people are "angry, upset and openly hostile" about it, their children would be "sitting ducks," Pevay said.

"There is no reason to run the risk of setting friend and friend against one another, especially since my clients are outnumbered 95 to 1," he said. "No parent who loves his or her child would feel safe about disclosing his or her name in this lawsuit."

But Naylor cited a similar ACLU school prayer case in Rockland where the plaintiff's name was disclosed. And he said the Madison County plaintiffs had failed to cite any facts or even raise any allegations beyond letters in the local newspaper to indicate they or their children would be in danger.

"Since many of the letters were anonymous, Naylor said, "These statements should not be given a great deal of weight."

Reports on criminals requested

BOISE (AP) — Pre-sentence reports should be done on all criminals before sentencing, the head of Idaho's correctional system says.

Corrections Director Richard Vernon on Friday asked a committee to approve a proposal to add two pre-sentence investigators so all defendants would go through the process.

Judges usually order pre-sentence reports on a defendant's background, family, job circumstance and criminal record.

But the defendants can waive the reports and Vernon said about 300 per year do.

Chinese water deer has large litters

In the swamy rivers of southeastern China, lives the small Chinese water deer. No antlers. Long eumine teeth. Instead of giving birth to one or two, as other deer do, it throws liters of half a dozen or so, in the manner of pigs. But it's really a deer. It's a dandy swimmer, too.

Workers dump tons of rock, earth to plug dam blown by Serbs

PERUCA DAM, Croatia (AP) — Frantic workers on Friday used tons of rocks in an attempt to plug holes and shore up a dam shattered by explosions in the war between Croats and Serbs.

Croatian troops, who took over the dam this week from retreating Serbs, said Serb-laid explosives had blasted holes in the concrete-and-earth dam, which was gushing water. Officials tried to calm fears that it would collapse and flood towns downstream where thousands live.

The dam, deep in Serb-held territory, was the most important gain for the Croats since they launched an offensive a week ago to regain the one-third of Croatia that Serbs captured in a 1991 war.

The resumption of widespread fighting in Croatia has prompted U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali to consider withdrawing the 16,000 U.N. peacekeepers from Croatia.

The fighting has also dimmed hopes of peace in neighboring Bosnia. Negotiators in Geneva reported little progress in Bosnian peace talks Friday.

In Bosnia's capital, Sarajevo, meanwhile, artillery shells fired by Serbs slammed into the old city. Bosnian radio also reported heavy fighting around Srebrenica near the Drina River and said towns were burning and 50 people were killed.

At the dam, visiting expert Petar Stojic said the structure was damaged along its entire 980-foot length and that the engine room of the hydroelectric station was flooded.

Stojin said five explosions Thursday cut craters up to 15 feet deep on both sides and in the middle of the 190-foot-high dam. Croatian radio said the structure sank about a yard and that earth abutting the concrete retaining wall was loosened.

Stojin said workers were strengthening the dam with tons of rock.

"We escaped a catastrophe," he told a reporter for the Slobodna Dalmacija daily in the Adriatic port of Split.

Croatian soldiers captured the dam Thursday after fighting forced about 80 U.N. peacekeepers to abandon it.

Croatians also recaptured an airport and a bridge linking northern and southern Croatia.

Kohl states 'Hitler' can't happen anew

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl, marking the 60th anniversary of Adolf Hitler's rise to power, said German democracy is not in danger.

But Jewish leaders said the ghosts of fascism have yet to disappear.

Hitler was chosen Germany's leader on Jan. 30, 1933, setting the stage for Nazi persecution of Jews and other minorities and a six-year world war that devastated Europe.

Thousands of people across Germany, mainly at newspapers and broadcasting stations, stopped working for 15 minutes to commemorate silently today's anniversary and to protest months of neo-Nazi violence.

More than 2,000 attacks were carried out by right-wing radicals last year, mostly against foreigners but also against handicapped people, Jewish cemeteries and Holocaust memorials. At least 17 people died in the violence.

Mass demonstrations were planned today to protest the attacks, which were sparked in part by a huge influx of refugees — a record 440,000 in 1992 — that has strained welfare funds and public patience.

Neo-Nazis have not announced plans to commemorate the anniversary.

Kohl said the government is succeeding in its efforts "to prevent all violence and protect human dignity." He said reunited Germany is unlike the Weimar Republic, when political and economic hardships paved the way for Hitler's ascent.

Peruvians defy death threats, cast ballots

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peruvians defied guerrilla death threats and voted Friday in municipal elections across this violence-plagued Andean nation.

People lined up by the hundreds to cast ballots in the Villa El Salvador shantytown on Lima's outskirts, where the Shining Path rebels killed a candidate for district mayor and his wife Thursday.

Soldiers with assault rifles stood guard on surrounding rooftops as voters cast ballots in a dusty school yard.

"We got up at dawn in Villa El Salvador to vote and to give our answer to terrorism," said a man in his 40s who, fearing retribution, would identify himself only as Jose.

Walls near the school were smeared with red lettering that said "People's War" and "Don't Vote."

Thousands of voters had to walk to polling stations because a rebel-called strike kept most buses off the streets in Lima.

Shortly before the polls opened at 8 a.m., rebels dynamited two buses on major avenues and shot to death one of the drivers.

The Shining Path has sought without success to sabotage elections since it took up arms in 1980 in a bid to impose a Maoist peasant-worker state.

Woman's choice stirs hot debate

ROME (AP) — A woman's decision to stop cancer treatment might have harmed her fetus has touched a nerve in a country with one of Europe's most liberal abortion laws and lowest birth rates.

The Vatican hailed Carla Ardenghi, who died Monday eight hours after the baby's premature birth, for her decisions not to abort and to stop her treatments. It said her sacrifice gave meaning to "all of our lives."

"Every day in my life is another day for the child I have inside," read an entry from the 28-year-old woman's diary.

Jerome woman still in ICU after accident

TWIN FALLS - A Jerome woman injured in an alcohol-related accident Thursday remained in stable but serious condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Friday night.

Kathleen McKay, 23, was injured when her car was hit by a pickup driven by Chris Kiser, 34, of Twin Falls.

Kiser was arrested and charged with drunken driving.

Police find stolen guns in car, arrest Twin Falls teen-ager

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls High School student was arrested in the school parking lot Friday after police found stolen rifles in his car during a traffic stop.

The student, whose name was not released because of his age, was charged with felony possession of stolen property and numerous traffic citations, Sgt. Bill Hanchey of the Twin Falls police department said.

Twin Falls patrol officer Joanne Loveland stopped the driver for inattentive driving and was writing a ticket when a department chaplain noticed a knife blade in the car, Hanchey said.

When officers retrieved the eight-inch folding knife, they spotted the barrel of a rifle. A scope and two hunting rifles with scopes that had been reported stolen, Hanchey said.

Three other students riding in the car were released. The driver of the car was taken to juvenile detention, but may have been later released to his parents.

Conflicting identification showed the boy is either 17 or 18. He will be prosecuted as a juvenile unless police can confirm that he is older than 18, Hanchey said.

Idaho Power Co. will not release water in February

TWIN FALLS - Idaho Power Co. does not expect to release any water for recreation during February in the 16-mile stretch of the Snake River below Milner Dam.

The reach between Milner and the utility's new Milner Power Plant contains some of the county's wildest whitewater. The 56-mile reach from the power plant to Star Falls contains milder rapids.

Under the terms of its federal license for the new power plant, Idaho Power is obligated to provide up to 12 days of recreational flows during April and May when water is available.

Up-to-date information is available by calling Idaho Power's recreation information number: 1-800-422-3143.

Near the end of February, Idaho Power will issue updated information on recreation flow for March below Milner.

Free help with income tax will be available at mall

TWIN FALLS - Getting free help completing tax forms will be as easy as going to the mall starting Feb. 6.

The Volunteers in Income Tax Assistance will set up shop inside the Blue Lakes Mall and will offer free tax help between 1 p.m.-4 p.m. each Saturday through April 10.

The service is available to everyone. The low-income, disadvantaged, non-English speaking and first-time filers are especially encouraged to attend.

Bring W-2 forms, 1099 forms and other records of income and expenses. No appointment is needed.

Authorities charge juveniles in connection with break-ins

JEROME - Two juveniles have been charged in connection with a series of break-ins at the Jerome High School snack bar, canteen's room and lockers, according to Detective Gerry Martinez, of the Jerome County Sheriff's Office.

A VCR, CD player and candy valued at about $800 were stolen, according to sheriff department records.

Approximately $300 in damage to school property was done. Access to the snack bar was obtained by prying open a door.

About half of the candy, the VCR and CD player were recovered, Martinez said.

Gooding pans landfill plans

By Suzanne Huxbold
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - A standing-room-only crowd at the courthouse Thursday made no bones about opposing Gooding County's participation in a regional landfill.

Citizens asked county commissioners to help them find a better, less costly solution to current landfill problems.

John Infanger, an Gooding insurance agent and founder of Citizens Against a Regional Landfill, told the gathering that county commissioners are spending 15 percent of the annual county budget to satisfy Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District costs, even though the Environmental Protection Agency puts the national average at less than 1 percent of total budget.

And those costs will rise, eventually costing the county $18 million, Infanger contended.

"We can just build this regional landfill and get a truck and haul our garbage, and every month we're just going to go farther and farther into the red," Infanger said.

Or, he said, "we could have a small landfill under the control of our county."

Infanger said the commissioners have been misled by salaried supporters of the eight-county regional landfill, and that those supporters have never given Gooding a final estimate on just how much the county will have to fork over to join.

Stubbs, Donicht clash over teacher survey

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A state legislator says Superintendent Terrell Donicht inappropriately stopped him from surveying Twin Falls School District teachers about the district's new teaching philosophy.

State Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, also said Donicht phoned Stubbs' wife Jan, and was rude and confrontational with her about surveys she had hand-delivered to all district schools.

"He does not have the right to verbally abuse my family on the telephone, and he does not have the right to intercept letters lawfully delivered to the schools," Stubbs said.

Donicht admitted Friday that he was curt to Stubbs' wife. He said he has apologized.

But Donicht said Stubbs, just like other people or organizations wishing to survey teachers, must first receive his permission before circulating surveys in district school buildings.

Stubbs said he decided to do the survey after receiving numerous phone calls from constituents with questions about how his "Outcome Driven Development Model" is working.

"I would appreciate your honest and unbiased opinions so that we can use this information in helping to formulate any state policy that may arise out of the experiences with outcome based education programs," Stubbs wrote in a letter to Donicht.

Bill and Opal Stewart have resurrected the Market Basket, a primary source for groceries and hardware for Camas County. Top, general contractor Shane Sweet finishes up "a few odds and ends" before the market's grand opening.

Fairfield store returns from ashes

By Jim Wilkie
Times-News writer

FAIRFIELD - It took longer than he expected, but determination and love for his family helped Bill Stewart finally reopen the only supermarket for miles around last week.

Last Friday, despite some setbacks, the Market Basket was back in business 10 months after fire destroyed the Camas County store.

"Everybody says why at your age why keep going? I say because of his age I gotta keep going," Stewart, 65, said pointing to his youngest son, Reed.

The elder Stewart explained that when he started in the grocery business 28 years ago, all five of his sons ran around stocking shelves.

Realizing the work involved, Stewart said only Reed stuck around when the other four scattered.

Reed, 36, has been working steadily in his father's store since high school and now serves as general manager for Stewart Enterprises, Inc.

The Fairfield businesses include a cafe and bar, gas station, trailer court and a landlord, real estate company and an armoring operation.

"We couldn't do nothing if we didn't have him," Bill said.

Last March 24 the fire that gutted the Market Basket caused $500,000 damage, and Stewart and his wife, Opal, almost lost everything.

A short-circuit inside a metal electrical conduit in the attic started the blaze that left only the building's foundation. Everything inside was destroyed, including 40 years of Stewart's business records.

Insurance and assistance from the U.S. Small Business Administration allowed Stewart to rebuild a more modern store.

Petition opposes projects on Snake

By N.S. Nakkentver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A petition with more than 800 signatures opposing four proposed hydroelectric projects on the Snake River was delivered to Gov. Cecil Andrus this week.

"These petitions show just the tip of the iceberg," said Lantey of Buhl. The local opposition to more dams on the Snake runs deep.

The six groups sponsoring the petition hope to convince the governor and the Idaho congressional delegation of opposition to further development of the Middle Snake River.

A draft comprehensive plan for the Snake River between Milner Dam and King Hill would block all four projects. A temporary ban on river development until the state river plan is completed expires March 23.

But even when the plan is completed and accepted by the state Legislature, it wouldn't guarantee the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission would not issue a license in the protected stretches.

FERC must by law consider state comprehensive plans, but no law requires the agency to comply with such plans.

An endangered species listing for five tiny snails and a Wild and Scenic River eligibility study may block some of the projects. But the Magic Valley citizens groups opposing the hydroelectric development aren't taking chances.

The effort may not be necessary, but the groups are not giving up the fight, Lantey said.

The petition seeks to stop proposed projects at Star Falls near Murtaugh and at Boulder, Empire and Kanaka rapids north of Buhl.

The petition asks the governor and the delegation to "take all necessary steps under state and federal law to protect these sites for public use and enjoyment."

The persuade also hope to convince the congressional delegation to work on changes in federal law similar to efforts last year to limit the power of FERC, which regulates private hydro projects.

Hearings planned

You can testify on the state's comprehensive plan for the Middle Snake River at:

Productive punishment: Shoplifters go to work

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - If a youngster gets caught stealing video games from a Twin Falls store, he or she may wind up washing windows there for free.

Or the shoplifter may get to shovel snow, mow an elderly person's lawn this summer or pull some weeds on city property.

Community service is part of a new program the city's juvenile detective hopes will slow down a rash of petty thefts.

"It's been really well received" in the two months it has been operating, detective Bill Hanchey of the Twin Falls police department said.

"We'll know in about a year if it reduces the crime rate," Hanchey said.

Junior high and high school students in increasing numbers are swiping small items with big price tags and then returning them to another store for cash, he said.

A recent sting operation nabbed a 15-year-old boy who was pressuring a classmate who worked at Woolworth's to help him steal a Nintendo video game cartridge.

The boy doing the stealing apparently had gotten a set of keys to the store and had taken some items, Hanchey said.

He asked his classmate to place the game cartridge - worth about $75 - in another area of the store where the thief could pick it up without being noticed.

When the boy working at Woolworth's notified his employer and police, Hanchey and two other detectives set up the sting by placing cameras in the area where the boy was to pick up the video game.

Officers arrested him as soon as he walked out of the store with the cartridge.

Expensive items such as video game cartridges, Game Boy hand-held games, compact discs and cassette tapes are prime targets for young shoplifters, Hanchey said.

The youngsters can usually return the items to the store for cash even without a sales receipt, or they can sell the item to a store that buys used items, he said.

"I'm sure this kind of stuff is happening all over town," Hanchey said.

Stores are willing to accept the returned items because they are easily resold and competition among stores is high, Hanchey said.

Often the money is used to buy alcohol, or drugs, he added.

Superintendent Evans tries again for changes in school funding

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — With a mixture of determination and resignation, Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans Friday unveiled his latest plan to change the way the state distributes money to public schools.

The net effect of the changes, Evans said, would be to shift $9 million from 75 of the state's 113 local school districts to the other 36 — generally larger, lower-paying, property-poor ones.

But he stressed that, measured per pupil, no district would receive less state money than the previous year, although many would not receive any new money.

Evans wants to change the complex mathematical formula that determines how much state aid local districts receive each year.

The formula is based on such factors as the number of students and the value of taxable property in each district.

The formula has been criticized for years because of the great funding disparities it allows between districts.

last year, but the districts have applied the dismissal to the state Supreme Court.

Twin Falls District 411 was originally a plaintiff in the suit, but no longer is.

Major formula revisions have been introduced, or at least discussed, in the last three legislative sessions, but none has won enough statewide support to become law.

Some members of the Senate Education Committee were skeptical that this year would be any different.

"If we print this, why do you think we'd be any less likely to be wasting our time than we were two years ago?" asked Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, who nonetheless voted to introduce the bill.

Sen Gary Schroeder, R-Moscow, was one of two senators to oppose introducing the plan, saying it would accomplish "little more than re-naming 'our annual civil war'."

And committee Chairman John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls, asked Evans if "there's any provision in here for hazardous duty pay for members of this committee. That would help."

Evans' plan makes a number of changes in the formula that cumulatively would benefit districts spending less money per pupil or having less taxable property per pupil than other districts.

For example, the plan would guarantee a tax yield for school districts that are below the statewide average in property wealth; the state payments for Social Security and retirement benefits to student population and local property wealth, instead of salaries; and lower the number of students per "support unit" in larger schools.

A "support unit" is roughly equivalent to a classroom, and is a key determinant of how much money school districts receive from the state.

Evans also distributed copies of a proposal to shift $20 million in school maintenance and operations (M&O) funds off local property taxes and onto the state income tax.

The bill would reduce the maximum M&O levy from .4 percent to .34 percent, and compensate by raising income tax rates .2 percent.

That plan is similar to one element in Gov. Cecil Andrus' tax overhaul package. Andrus wants to reduce the maximum M&O levy to .28 percent, or $29.9 million, and raise replacement revenue by eliminating several sales tax exemptions, including the production exemption.

Another difference is that Andrus' plan would replace the M&O districts lose by lowering the M&O cap dollar for dollar, while Evans' bill would distribute the money through the funding formula.

Reactions from Magic Valley schools superintendents to Evans' proposed formula revisions depended largely on whether their districts came out ahead or behind.

"Twin Falls would be treated fairly favorably, but what that shows is how unfairly we're treated under the current system," said Twin Falls Superintendent Terrell Donich.

According to figures prepared by Evans' office, if the revised formula had been in effect for the 1991-92 school year, Twin Falls would have received $646,739 more than it actually did.

The current formula favors districts with higher property wealth and that pay higher salaries than the Twin Falls district, Donich said.

Phil Homer, Blaine County schools superintendent, was less happy about Evans' proposals. His district would have received $342,122 less in 1991-92 than it actually had had the changes been in effect then.

"I don't mind the Legislature or Mr. Evans or anyone else bringing the level up for these folks with less (taxable) value or whatever," Homer said. "But why do they have to bring down folks like Blaine County to do it? We have to pay for the money we are spending too much on education."

Sheriff: Ice-T to blame for cancellation

POCATELLO (AP) — Blaming police refusal to provide security for the cancellation of rap star Ice-T's Feb. 18 appearance at Idaho State University is a "cop out," Bannock County Sheriff William Lynn said.

"There are any number of private security firms they could have hired," Lynn said Friday.

But Bernard McDevitt, editor of the Bengal student newspaper, said police have lost standing with students who believe they shirked their duty.

"The bottom line (is) the police department determined whether Ice-T was coming here," McDevitt said.

The ISU Student Program Board said it was bowing to pressure from local police and opponents by cancelling the appearance Thursday.

Ice-T's 1992 recording "Cop Killer" stirred a national controversy and prompted a number of police organizations and politicians to call for it to be banned.

Ice-T's contract for the Pocatello lecture required "adequate security." But student organizers said their big concern was security for the audience.

Survey

letter to teachers.

Stubb's survey has 18 statements asked-for each of them to respond by checking a box that says they strongly agree, agree, are undecided, disagree or strongly disagree.

The questions include: "I have a good understanding of ODDM." "I feel that the use of ODDM is totally voluntary," and "I have sufficient time to prepare the necessary correctives and extensions."

The reason he hand-delivered the surveys was to save postage for 371 teachers, Stubb said.

Stubb said Donich told him that he had violated district policy by taking the surveys to the different schools.

"I inquired what specific policy I had violated, and he admitted there probably wasn't one," said Stubb, who is an attorney.

"He said I had no right to come on the premises of the school without the prior approval of the School Board, and I had no right to deliver the letter and the survey," Stubb said in news release. "I have a right to communicate with my constituents without being screened."

Donich said it is possible that Stubb will get permission to circulate his survey in the schools, but until that is done, he can't guarantee its validity.

The answers to some questions in Stubb's survey could be misleading, and, unless most teachers respond, the outcome may not fairly represent what all the teachers feel, he said.

For example, one statement says, "I feel that traditional teaching methods have become ineffective and obsolete."

Most teachers would strongly disagree with that question because many traditional teaching methods are effective, Donich said. That may lead people to question why ODDM is necessary, he said.

ODDM is not a program but a process by which teachers are constantly improving their teaching methods, Donich said. If a traditional approach is effective, teachers can use it under ODDM, he said.

Donich said Stubb told him that the reason Stubb's district consultant officials before doing the survey was so he could ensure the results were not tainted by the involvement of district officials.

"Needless to say when my honesty and integrity are questioned I may not act particularly cordially," he said.

But Stubb said he wondered why Donich was so defensive.

"I don't think Dr. Donich likes some of the potential answers to the questions," Stubb said. "It's not a private company that he is running."

"Stores have to be more careful. They have to be sure and get good information, like a sales receipt, or they're just contributing to the problem," Hanchey said.

When caught, eligible juvenile offenders are offered the chance — with their parents present — to sign a contract agreeing to community service in exchange for avoiding the court process.

Going to school and staying out of trouble are also conditions of the contract. If the contract is broken, the young person's case is sent to the courthouse, where he or she can face more traditional penalties, if convicted.

In two months, 60-70 kids have gone through the program and only one has "turned sour," Hanchey said.

Not only does the program ease the burden on the judicial system, but it delivers consequences quickly — usually within two weeks.

In Juvenile Court, the sentence can come five months after the offense occurs. By that time, the impact is lost, Hanchey said.

We do need to make some improvements on how we're doing it, and we could spend days talking on that, but the problem is best handled locally."

Actual expenditures so far are .034 percent of the county budget, below the national average of .5 percent, Gough said.

Nevertheless, Infanger said he wants the commissioners to back out of the regional landfill and set up a task force of local citizens and the commissioners to look into developing a local landfill. A straw vote in the packed courtroom showed almost unanimous support for his position.

"The liability with a large regional landfill will be a nightmare," Infanger said. "We do know we need to make some changes in our landfills. There is no question we need to do some recycling. We do need to make some improvements on how we're doing it, and we could spend days talking on that, but the problem is best handled locally."

Market

should be ready for the store's grand reopening Feb. 6.

Stewart still carries the same grocery, hardware and state liquor store items in his "general store," and the building is the same 8,000-square-foot size. The only thing different is its newness.

"Everybody says it looks bigger, I don't know what it is," Stewart said, adding that the shelves are taller than before.

Whatever the size, many of the 700 Camas County residents are just glad to have a grocery store just a mile to Gooding or 48 miles to Halley for their grocery needs.

Fairfield resident Shirley Grimm said she is looking forward to shorter grocery trips and the market's convenience once all the equipment is set up.

"We'll be doing all our shopping there," Grimm said. "You can just go down the street and you don't have to stock up for a month."

Stewart also relies on customers driving by on U.S. Highway 20 for his business.

Trucker Daryl Ridenour said Billings, Mont., said he hasn't come across as nice a store between Mountain Home and Idaho Falls.

"I think this is a real improvement," Ridenour said. "I hope it really goes the way they want it."

Meeting Environmental Protection Agency regulations for their gas station stalled the market's opening because of gasoline leaks from a storage tank in 1989.

Stewart said the gas leaked underground to the other side of the highway but he had to prove the store site's soil was not contaminated. He continues to pump groundwater to clean the gas.

The process brought cycles of hope and disappointment.

"It looked like it was going, then a big crack," Reed said while waving his hands up and down as if on a roller coaster. "It looked like it was going, then a big crack."

Relieved to put all the red tape behind him, Bill Stewart is looking forward to putting his favorite business back in the black.

"Boy, it's nice to see the cash flow," Stewart said. "We really appreciate the public's attitude. They're really stuck with us."

Blaine B. Murray, of Gooding, potluck dinner for family and friends will be held at 2 p.m. today, American Legion Hall in Gooding, (Demary's Gooding Chapel).

Burglar damages vending machine

BURLEY—Someone tried to break into a pop machine at a Burley business Wednesday night. The machine, located at 110 Overland Ave., was in front of Claus Repair.

Someone broke the glass out of the front of the machine, according to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

Deputies said the burglar apparently didn't get inside the machine. Damage was estimated at $250.

Items stolen from apartment

BURLEY—A bicycle, television and VCR were reported stolen from a Burley apartment on Thursday.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, Penny Garcia, 737 W. 13th St., said someone apparently damaged her doorknob in getting in. Loss was reported at $950.

Bloodmobile coming to Rupert

RUPERT—The American Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Rupert Civic Building from 2 to 6 p.m. on Feb. 15.

Red Cross workers will take a little less than a pint from each donor, according to Norma Pfinghoff of the Rupert chapter.

Afterward, the donor will receive some refreshments and time to rest. The entire process takes about an hour, Pfinghoff said.

Scheduling tie-up leaves court chaotic

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Call it inexperience. Call it "judicial error." Call it learning the ropes. Call it what you want, but confusion was the order of the day Friday morning in 5th District Magistrate Court.

Benighted with eight scheduled preliminary hearings, an unusually high number — new Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan and his senior deputy Kandace Kemp weren't able to get their witnesses to court as fast as Judge Charles Brumbach wanted.

As a result, Brumbach dismissed six of the cases, meaning the prosecutors have to start over again on half a dozen felony cases.

Nobody was released from jail as a result of the mix-up, and the cases will be reset for preliminary hearings.

Three cases were immediately refiled, citing "judicial error" in dismissing them, and the defendants were charged again Friday afternoon.

"Justice delayed is not necessarily justice denied," Kemp said.

Preliminary hearings, where a magistrate hears evidence and decides whether the state can take a felony case to trial in District Court, usually are scheduled at the same time, and the judge calls the cases one after another.

Scheduling hearings in that way keeps cases moving despite frequent cancellations.

Because of the large number of preliminary hearings, set for Friday morning, Bevan said he scheduled witnesses at intervals throughout the day so they would not have to spend all day in court.

But his first hearing ended at 10 a.m., and Kemp's witnesses for the next case, against kidnapping suspect Thomas Carey, weren't ready.

In fact, Kemp was in the courtroom when Brumbach called the case.

By the time she was summoned and arrived from her office on the fourth floor of the building next door, the cases had been dismissed.

When Kemp told Brumbach that her witnesses were on the way, the judge said it was too late.

Brumbach said he waited for several minutes with a defendant and a courtroom full of people before he dismissed the case.

After taking another break, Brumbach returned to the bench at 10:30 a.m. and asked if the state was ready to proceed with any of the cases.

But witnesses for the other cases weren't slated to arrive until later, so the judge agreed to the public defender's request to dismiss the remaining cases.

"Attorneys do not make the best use of the court's time. We cannot afford that luxury" of waiting for witnesses to show up before each hearing, he said.

"I'm somewhat amazed, frankly, that the prosecutors would take the risk of telling their witnesses to wait at home," he said.

If that's the way the judges handle the calendar, that's fine and prosecutors will oblige, Bevan said.

"People are just going to have to come and sit" until their case comes up, he said.

Friday's mix-up was likely nothing more than a new prosecutor's office learning the ropes of the courtroom, Brumbach said.

"I expect the prosecutor will not permit this to happen a second time," he said.

"It won't happen again," confirmed Kemp. "I was seriously embarrassed, but I don't know that I should have been."

Although the court may have saved some time Friday by dismissing cases for which witnesses were not immediately present, refiled the cases will take more time in the long run, she said.

"It seems kind of like a waste of time," she said.

Cassia Hospital unveils plans

By Eric Goeddel
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY—Architectural drawings of the new Cassia Memorial Hospital were unveiled at a preview for area merchants Thursday night.

Construction on the $16 million hospital is expected to start this spring and be completed in December 1994.

"The hospital will feature many updated items to make it more efficient than the present facility in southwest Burley, Administrator Richard Packer said.

Packer said the new hospital will have fewer beds than the old one; 42, compared with the 53 beds in the present facility.

"One main reason is the trend for outpatient care instead of inpatient," he explained. New technologies throughout the years have allowed patients to get well more quickly.

"People are coming in and getting out sooner," Packer said.

Overall, the space for acute care is expanded by about 30 percent from the present hospital, he said. The expansion comes partly from the number of day-surgery rooms, said head nurse Mary Ovit.

There are four in the present hospital, but 10 are planned for the new hospital, with additional possibilities to expand.

The front portion of the building, which will face Hilland Avenue, will have a large skylight to give the hospital a cheery atmosphere, Packer said. A waiting room, as well as a gift shop and snack shop, will also be located in the front portion of the building.

Packer said he wanted to be a good neighbor to nearby businesses. "We hope we are an asset," he said.

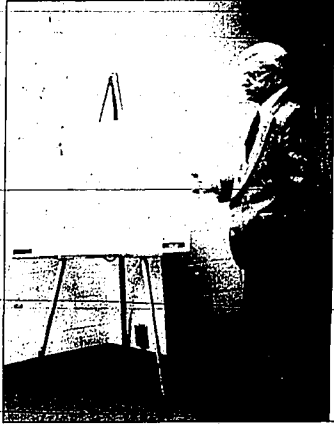

The hospital will be financed through Intermountain Health Care, the Salt Lake City-based health care company that manages Cassia Memorial. The project drew proposals from 52 architectural firms bidding for a part in the hospital's design.

"Two firms—one from Denver and one from Utah—will work on the project.

Earth tones will generally be used for the structure, Packer said.

"We thought that would be better than bright blue," he said.

The building's layout has been generally set, but there will be some changes to get everything in the best locations, Packer said.

ERIC GOEDEL/Mini-Cassia News Service

Richard Packer, administrator of Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley, displays drawings of the new hospital.

Many features of the hospital will make it more convenient, he said. For instance, women who come to the hospital to give birth will stay in the same room from the time they are admitted until they go home, Packer said.

Because the building won't belong to the county, the hospital's name probably will be changed. He said a hospital committee charged with finding a new name is leaning toward having a contest.

The land is being leased to HHC by the county, in an arrangement that will give the county a voice on the hospital's board of directors.

Religion

The church is the anvil; people are hammers

What we are at the end of life is determined by the multitude of choices we make during life. Many of the most important choices are made early in life, choices that will get us started in the right or wrong direction. However, it is never too late to change.

Many young people today have a real struggle making right choices because there is no clear picture set before them as to what is right and wrong. Some parents sanction premarital sex activities and some don't. Many schools, when they should have been teaching reading, writing, computer science, etc., have been teaching immorality as right and satisfying and the easy way out. Nine old-folks in Washington, D.C., by a strong majority of their decisions, clearly sanction immorality over godliness, murder over the right to life, for abortion is murder and the basic principles of life are given precedence over the principles of God.

It is no wonder that the last two and present generations of people are confused and discouraged and some give up, feeling that there is no hope. Therefore, I want to leave with you some things that may help you get started toward success and happiness. You can succeed if you will pay the price. The choice is yours. No one can make it for you, nor can anyone keep you from the right choice.

First, set for yourself a goal worthy of your God-given abilities.

Next, figure the price (not in dollars but in toil and labor) you are willing to pay to reach this goal. You can make it.

Then choose your leader. I urge everyone to choose Jesus Christ, the son of God and only savior. He never fails. Having done this, choose your friends. Choose those who will help, not hinder, you. Strive to help them also.

If you get discouraged, remember, "Jesus will never leave you or forsake you." Find yourself a Bible-teaching church and, in the strength of God, reach for your goal. Don't give up.

Incidentally, if you are really concerned about the fact that courts, people and many schools, etc., are trying hard to put Christianity down, read this closing story and pray about it.

A young man entered a blacksmith shop to get a horseshoe fixed. He noticed an anvil and, in the corner, a large number of worn, broken hammers. "How many anvils did it take to wear out that many hammers?" he asked the blacksmith. "Only one, young man — only one," he replied.

Now I want you who read this to remember that the church, established by Jesus Christ, is an anvil. Courts, schools and people are just hammers.

Church news

St. Ed's plans 5-day parish-mission

TWIN FALLS — St. Edward's Catholic Church has planned a five-day parish mission for Feb. 7 to 11.

The theme of the mission (an event similar to a retreat but not as concentrated) is "Healing of Hearts." It is designed to help people experience the healing love of God and to help them renew and deepen their faith in Jesus Christ.

Schmidt

Father Carl Schmidt, from Quebec and Sister Mary Hogan from London will conduct the mission beginning immediately after the 6 p.m. Mass on Feb. 7. The event, which will continue at 7 p.m. nightly through Feb. 11, is built around the Mass, the Sacrament of Reconciliation, preaching, healing prayer and the exposition of The Blessed Sacrament. Topics for each of the five sessions are "Letting God be God," "Father's Concrete Love — Jesus," "Healing of Memories," "The Power of Unforgiveness and Forgiveness" and "The Power of Jesus Through Blessed Oil."

Hogan

Schmidt and Hogan will be available during the daytime each day of the mission for individual counseling.

Schmidt was educated in Ontario, Quebec and Germany and ordained as a Redemptorist Priest in 1959 in Germany. He has worked as an assistant priest in a German parish in Toronto and as an assistant vocation director. He has preached parish missions in Korea, the Philippines, China, India, the Caribbean and several areas of the United States and Canada and has also worked with the Youth Apostolate.

Schmidt has a master's degree in religious education from the University of Loyola in Chicago and a master of arts degree in psychology from the University of Detroit. He began a full-time healing ministry in 1976 at the Holy Redeemer College in Windsor, Ontario, and is presently stationed at St. Patrick's Rectory in Toronto. He is also a member of the Association of Christian Therapists.

Hogan is an Ursuline. Religious of the Diocese of London and has served the Catholic Church there in recent years in pastoral and social ministry. She has been involved in the Renewal since 1969 and presently works full-time with Schmidt in the retreat and healing ministry.

Hogan has a master's degree in special education and is certified in the field of mental retardation, emotional disturbance and learning disabilities. She has worked in the educational field for 25 years, most of which was specialized training. Her work has taken her to the Philippines, the Caribbean and several areas of the United States and Canada.

Jerome ministers set Chili Cook-off

JEROME — The Jerome Ministerial Association has planned its second annual Super Bowl of Chili Cook-off for 5 to 8 p.m. today at St. Jerome's Catholic Parish Hall, 216 Second Ave. E. The public is invited.

A variety of local performers will provide entertainment. No admission will be charged, but donations will be accepted at the door. All proceeds will be used for the Jerome Ministerial Association Foodbank and general assistance to the needy.

For more information, call Mike St. Marie at 324-4141.

Christian Women gather Tuesday

TWIN FALLS — The Christian Women's Club of Magic Valley has planned its monthly prayer coffee meeting for 9:30 to 11 a.m. Tuesday at the home of Kristie Fairbanks, 2455 Victorian Court. The theme of the meeting is "Be My Special Valentine." For more information, call 736-0076.

Women sponsor Father-Daughter Dance

TWIN FALLS — The Council of Catholic Women is sponsoring a Father-Daughter Dance set for 8 to 12 p.m. Feb. 6 at St. Edward's Parish Hall.

The theme is "Valentines" and the music will be by the "Compact Discs," a disc jockey music system. The father/daughter groups are asked to bring a dessert to share. Admission is free, but a freewill offering will be taken.

Homebuilders set introductory session

TWIN FALLS — An introductory session of the Homebuilder's Couples series is set for 9:45 to 10:45 a.m. Sunday in the Homebuilder's Room at the First Baptist Church, 910 Shoshone St. N.

Sessions will be held each Sunday through May 9. The theme of the series is "Pressure Points in Marriage." The program is designed to help couples overcome problems and to use them to build greater intimacy and love for each other. It will focus on how to keep the marriage strong no matter what happens.

The Homebuilder's program is for married or engaged (wedding date must be set) couples. The sessions are free, and texts and materials will be furnished.

For more information, call Ron and Suzy Heath at 733-5272 or the First Baptist Church at 733-2936.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thomason, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Chaplains created 'a living parable'

50 years ago, 4 men made great strides for interfaith relationships

By George W. Cornall
The Associated Press

The night was frigid. The U.S. transport ship Dorchester, carrying 902 troops, had slowed to half speed because of ice floes. At 1 a.m., a torpedo struck and exploded midship. The ship started down rapidly.

Then, in the panic on the deck of that doomed World War II vessel 50 years ago, came an episode that implanted the ideal of interfaith bonds in American memory.

Four Army chaplains — two Protestants, a Jew and a Roman Catholic — after working to distribute life jackets, calm the frightened men and direct them to lifeboats and rafts, gave their own life belts to men with no rafts.

Survivors related that as the ship went under on Feb. 3, 1943, the four chaplains clung together on the slanting deck, their arms linked, their heads bowed in prayer.

"It's a living parable that has affected the lives of many Christians and Jews ever since," said the Rev. David Poling of Albuquerque, N.M., a cousin of one of the four chaplains.

"Ministers of different backgrounds, drawn together in crisis, gave up their lives for others in love of God. A threatening, challenging moment brought out the essence of their relationship — that they were brothers."

That tie was little recognized in the early 1940s and before, a time of denominational aloofness, backbiting and prejudice, prior to the rise of ecumenical organizations and interfaith work.

"It was the sort of thing you didn't see back then, but which we now see all over the country," Fred K. Honigman, interim executive director of the Chapel of the Four Chaplains at Valley Forge, Pa.

He said the event got wide public attention, spreading a spark that had implications for the whole ecumenical movement. It has broadened understanding and produced working links among most Christian denominations and Judaism.

On the 50th anniversary, commemorative events were being held this week and next — in scores of communities across the country by churches and veterans' organizations.

Several ecumenical services and processions were scheduled this Sunday and next weekend in Philadelphia.

Dedication services also were held on a 4.5-acre plot in Valley Forge for building of a new Chapel of the Four Chaplains designed to suggest the shape of the Dorchester. A $2 million fund drive is under way for the project.

Last Monday, ceremonies were held at the U.S. Naval Station on Staten Island, N.Y., and a plaque commemorating the heroism of the four chaplains was dedicated at Pier 1 from which the Dorchester departed on Jan. 22, 1943.

After taking on more troops in Boston, the ship joined a convoy in the Atlantic, but broke off alone to head for Greenland. German submarines at the time were sinking about 100 Allied ships per month.

"Torpedo Junction," those Atlantic waters were then called.

The four chaplains on the Dorchester, working to allay anxieties of the young servicemen, were: Lt. Alexander D. Goode, 31, a Brooklyn-born Jewish rabbi; Lt. Clarke V. Poling, 32, a Dutch Reformed minister from New York; Lt. John P. Washington, 34, a Roman Catholic priest from Kearny, N.J.; and Lt. George L. Fox, 42, a Methodist, of Altoona, Pa.

"They were all very sociable guys, who seemed to have initiated interfaith activities even before the war," said Clarke Poling's cousin, David Poling, a Presbyterian pastor who has collected material on the four and the Dorchester episode.

"They had hit it off well at chaplains' school. Sharing their faiths was not just a first-time deal for them. They were really very close. They had prayed together a number of times before that final crisis," David Poling said.

"That was the climate they had grown up in," he said. "But it wasn't the climate of the country back then.

They lit a kind of vision for the rest of us."

The Poling family has been prominent in Protestant affairs, particularly Clarke's father, the late Rev. Daniel Poling, who was influential in launching commemorations of the four chaplains by President Truman in 1951.

Daniel Poling was longtime editor of The Christian Herald and pastor of New York's Marble Collegiate Church, preceding the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale. His son, Clarke, had lived with cousin David's family in New Jersey while going to Rutgers University.

The Dorchester went under 20 minutes after she was hit. Only 230 of the 902 aboard survived to tell of the desperation of those last minutes and sacrifice of the four chaplains.

David Poling said it epitomizes a maxim of the 1st century Jewish rabbi Jesus whom Christians regard as manifesting God in the human context. He said, "Greater love has no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Roberts passes the torch

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Evangelist Oral Roberts retired Wednesday as president of the university that he said God told to him build, passing the mantle to his 44-year-old son.

The Oral Roberts University regents unanimously elected Richard Roberts to become the second president of the university, which his father founded in 1965.

The elder Roberts, who has said God called him to build the university, was named chancellor by the board of regents. He said he would hold that post "for as long as I live."

Most of the school's 4,300 undergraduate and graduate students were in the chapel when Roberts stepped to the podium to announce his retirement. The announcement was met with a thunderous ovation.

The succession, however, was expected. Roberts had told students two years ago he would step down when he turned 75. His list of duties, passed to his son by the hands and asked the regents to stand as he commissioned his son to succeed him. "You have the calling to be the second president," Roberts told him.

Richard Roberts was executive vice president and handled virtually all of the administrative tasks at the university for the past six years. The school, which was founded as an extension of Roberts' evangelistic ministry, has been beset with financial troubles over the past few years.

The City of Faith, a medical complex that Oral Roberts said was inspired by a vision from God in the desert, was closed in 1989 and sold in December to an undisclosed buyer as the university moved to trim its debt.

to the dance this weekend. I think I'll ask Renae."

"The Boys went absolutely nuts. Rulon had a reputation for being such a nice guy. Who would've thought he'd come up with a practical joke like this?"

"What about it?" Rulon continued. "I'll ask Renae and the rest of you can see what happens. So no joking around — we play it straight. Got it?"

"Sure," Todd said as everyone nodded. "Straight. But when do we pop the big guy?"

"Don't worry," Rulon said. "I'll let you know. But this is going to work thoughtfully. This is going to work your date like she was queen of the prom. Make her feel special, like this is the greatest night of her life. That's the only way it'll work. Trust me."

The Boys did trust him, so they did what he said. They asked girls from the bottom rung of the social ladder. They called them on the phone, spent time with them at school and got to know them better. They ordered corsages, made arrangements for dinner at a fancy restaurant and prepared themselves for what promised to be an unforgettable evening.

When the big night came, The Boys picked up their dates — who, I should mention, all looked good. Really good. The dinner hour flew by as The Boys discovered how interesting it can be to get to know someone new.

By the time they got to the dance, some of The Boys were beginning to worry about Rulon's plan. After a few dances and a little more conversation, they were downright concerned.

When Rulon and his date — that couldn't possibly be Renae, could it? — finally arrived, The Boys confronted him.

"What's going on, Rulon?" Danny asked. "What are you going to do?"

"Why?" Rulon asked. "What's the problem?"

"There's no problem," Todd said. "It's just that ... well, I don't want to ..."

Danny went directly to the point. "Look," he said, "if you're planning to seduce Roberts' daughter, you had better feel good — forget it."

The rest of The Boys indicated their concern for their dates, too.

Rulon looked his friends over carefully. "You don't mean to tell me that you guys have actually enjoyed your date tonight, do you?"

The Boys glanced at each other sheepishly — except Danny, who was a little put off by the tone in Rulon's voice.

"Dam right I have," he said. "I've had a great time. Want to make something of it?"

Rulon smiled at his friend and patted his shoulder. "Nope," he said. "You already have. Now, if you guys will excuse me, I'd like to spend the rest of the evening with Renae."

He turned and left his friends — with a spring in his step.

"Joseph Walker has been beset with financial troubles over the past few years."

And like I said — he isn't telling.

"Joseph Walker is a bishop of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. His column will appear every other week on the religion page."

Is Robertson Believable?

The Rev. Pat Robertson has hinted he may run for president again. Every time I see him praying on TV, it reminds me of what Jesus said about how the hypocrites prayed (Matthew 6:5).

faith in them; for faith in anything is comforting to the mind, which, in turn, controls the body.

Old Father Time pays no attention to doomsayers. He probably even chuckles when he hears the word truth, for truth and time have been marching on since time began, never yielding to man's imagination.

Truth and Pat Robertson have very little in common. He should take the advice Jesus gave in St. John 3:21, "But he that doeth truth cometh to the light."

God transcends time

Some believe and teach that a couple of vague references to "coming in the clouds" from Matthew and 2

Thessalonians closes the book in the matter: "Christ" must return as a gigantic energy form wielding supernatural powers, perhaps whisking preserved bones and the living faithful off the earth.

Jesus, and the writings he referred to and praised, the Psalms and prophets, foresee only a natural human with a large dose of love and contriteness. A person who doesn't know his true identity for some time (Isaiah 42:19) but whose drive leads him not only to seek but to apply himself and understand what was found.

God transcends time, hence knew of his unbiased searching and pure goodwill intentions toward all life in this latter incarnation and so presented him to us several lifetimes and many years back.

Because of this arises his only unnatural aspect: He is the subject of all the prophecy and Psalms and due to "scaling" and detailed personal information, he's the only one who can properly and fully understand and hence, teach them.

Further, once he knows his role, he must "hide his face" from us until the time written due to our current condition and rejectfulness.

Evangelical speaker has history of interrupting

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The pastor whose protest got Billy Graham's daughter, Anne Graham Lotz, bumped from speaking at a Southern Baptist evangelism conference also had walked out of an earlier meeting where another woman spoke, the Daily Oklahoman reports.

Graham.

It says the Rev. Wayne Keely of Faith Baptist Church in Claremore, Okla., had interrupted Jill Briscoe, a popular evangelical women's speaker, at a youth conference Dec. 30, pointing his finger at her and saying women do not have authority to preach. He and his group then walked out. His complaints led to Ms. Lotz being dropped from the program of a Jan. 18-19 conference here. Biblical fundamentalists now controlling the Southern Baptist Convention maintain women are excluded from ordination.

Mormon youth: The modern missionaries

By Roy Rivenburg
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Amid the purple hairdos, tattooed ankles and studded leather boots of Hollywood Boulevard, the two clean-cut men in pressed white shirts and ties politely invite passersby to chat about God.

AL BEER/The Los Angeles Times

A few heed the call, but most ignore, argue with or even try to proposition the pair. Others have pelted the young men with trash or soaked them with super squirt guns as they pedal their battered bicycles around Los Angeles.

Still, they persist: 12 hours-a-day, six days a week without being allowed to call home, swim or play full-court basketball.

Ryan Tolman, 19, and Hyuk Hong, 23, are missionaries for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormons).

"Hello, ma'am, can I offer you a free Book of Mormon?" Tolman asks over the wail of sirens and the blather of a nearby tour guide discussing Alfred Hitchcock.

The question meets with silence. "Have a good day, ma'am."

Tolman, Hong and 40,000 other missionaries worldwide are in the thick of their two-year odysseys of faith, frustration and wrinkle-free clothes that will change others' lives as well as their own.

It is a strange mission in many ways, but it reflects a level of commitment and determination that most other groups can only fantasize about.

"We have to believe very strongly to do what they do," says W. Barney Gogarty, who leads the 208 missionaries scattered around Los Angeles — and neighboring cities.

Tolman and Hong work out of a small, church-rented shack in Hollywood.

Hong arrived from Kwangju, Korea, by way of Brigham Young University, where he studied computer and honed up on his English watching five hours of TV a day. Eight years ago, while reading a Book of Mormon given to him by missionaries in Korea, a warm, tingling sensation filled his torso and he converted to the faith, Hong says. "It was the Holy Ghost."

The incident inspired his own missionary work: "I got so much; now I want to give back."

Tolman hails from Twin Falls, Idaho, where he spent 18 months after high school graduation pouring concrete, cutting Christmas trees and working in a nursery, to raise the $350-a-month fee required of all missionaries.

The missionary experience often is described as a rite of passage, an eye-opener to the world. Mormon officials inaugurated the voluntary missions soon after the church's founding in the 1830s. Winning converts has been the primary goal, but it has become evident that some of the biggest changes occur in the missionaries themselves.

Forced to rely exclusively on their partners, their God and their wit, they develop a faith and self-sufficiency that can serve a lifetime.

Tolman and Hong say they have also learned patience, communication skills, budgeting and greater family appreciation.

But the transformation occurs in fits and starts. At a weekly meeting of Los Angeles missionaries, it is hard to decide whether the group looks like a collection of young percent of members are inactive.

But the increasingly sophisticated missionary program keeps new blood pouring in. At missionary boot camp — three weeks of training in Provo — new recruits get a crash course in Mormon doctrines, Gospel salesmanship and, if they stay an extra six weeks, a foreign language.

Single men typically begin their missions between the ages of 19 and 28, at which time they also receive sacred church undergarments as a symbol of their maturing faith. Women do not go out before age 21, but they have no upper age cut-off.

They are fewer in number — about one-fifth of the missionary force — but rising steadily. A few older married couples also serve missions.

Behavior on the missionary trail is guided by a pair of unusual texts: the Book of Mormon and an obscure, slim volume known as the "White Bible."

The White Bible, published in Salt Lake City, it is the official rule book for traveling Mormon evangelists.

The White Bible forbids missionaries from watching television, reading newspapers or listening to music (other than church-approved cassette tapes). The idea is to avoid all distractions.

Dating or even standing within arm's length of the opposite sex are banned.

The controls are so intense that missionaries returning to civilian life are regarded as social cripples: Women at church-owned Brigham Young University sometimes refer to them as "returning missionary geeks."

Other rules include no full-court basketball (missionaries are considered more prone to injuries playing anything beyond half-court) and no swimming.

To help enforce such rules, the church assigns missionaries to new partners and cities every several months.

Scheduling also makes it tough to stymie from the straight and narrow.

Virtually every waking — and sleeping — moment of missionary life is carefully plotted by church officials.

Up by 6:30 a.m., down by 10:30 p.m. and a set program of praying, studying, teaching and door-knocking in between.

"We try to stay as busy as we can all day long," Tolman says.

California Lutheran church faces expulsion for naming gay minister

By Gustav Niebuhr
The Washington Post

A small Lutheran congregation in San Francisco has decided to risk expulsion from America's third-largest Protestant denomination by installing a gay man as its senior minister, openly defying church-wide ban on homosexual clergy.

The decision by First United Lutheran Church to install Jeff R. Johnson as pastor is the latest salvo in a bitter, nationwide struggle wracking Protestant churches over homosexual ordination.

Two months ago, the Rev. Jane Adams Spahr, a lesbian minister, was barred from becoming co-pastor of a Rochester, N.Y., Presbyterian congregation after the Permanent Judicial Commission, the "supreme court" of the Presbyterian Church (USA), ruled that the church does not allow openly homosexual ministers. Last June, the Southern Baptist Convention voted to change its constitution to keep out congregations that condone homosexuality.

First United, a 60-member congregation in San Francisco's Richmond district, already has had one major brush with authorities of the 5.2 million-member Evangelical Lutheran Church in America over the issue. In July 1990, after a church trial complete with lawyers and jury, the 106-year-old congregation was suspended from the denomination for five years for hiring Johnson as assistant pastor.

It was told to comply with the ban by 1995 or face expulsion.

Eagles 'steal' win from Wolverines

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

OREM, Utah — When all else fails, defense will win the basketball game. No. 1 ranked CSI proved that again coming up with three critical steals in the final two minutes to defeat Utah Valley 70-63 Friday night.

Valley to a 4-6 record.

CSI led 62-58 when J.J. Moore came up with the first steal, leading to a field goal by Taj McFarland. David Cason stole the second pass after the inbound play for a triple. After offset UVCC free throws, Moore made his second steal with 26 seconds left to give CSI a 70-59 lead. Utah Valley closed with four meaningless points.

The Eagles had led throughout the first half and had a 10-point lead at intermission, but its shooting, not hot all night, went completely cold in the second period.

Not helping was the loss of a field goal by the official scorer robbing Paul Jarrett of a slam dunk. Without that error CSI might never have trailed, but Utah Valley twice managed a one-point lead in the second half. CSI fought them off largely with the transition game plus some good inside moves off structure.

"We were a little sluggish, no doubt about it, but we did have a lot of good defense. We knew they were going to slow it down," said Coach Fred Trenkle. "We didn't shoot well and we didn't rebound well, but the defense kept us in the game."

Trenkle praised Utah Valley's effort, saying coach "Duke" Reid, "had them well prepared for us, better prepared than we were for them. But we also knew we are a better team than we showed."

Bruins fall in double overtime

Twin Falls picks up defense in 2nd-half to force extra periods

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Reshaping a blowout into a burn-offer Friday night, the Twin Falls Bruins fell short of keeping Highland from clinching the top seed in the Region III playoffs.

Trailing 17-6 after the first quarter, Twin Falls battled back and took the Rams through two overtime periods before bowing 57-55.

Highland, 11-4 overall, moved 10-5-0 against Region III opponents with one game remaining. Second place Twin Falls, 11-5, fell to 3-2. In their first meeting, the Bruins lost 64-49 in Pocatello.

A pair of free throws by Rams guard Darren Almond with 30 seconds left pushed Highland's lead to 56-53. The Bruins missed a 3-point shot for a tie but cut the lead to one on Eddie Trenkle's steal and layup with 10 ticks to go.

Almond made one more free throw for the final margin. The Rams tipped a Twin Falls pass to keep the Bruins from getting off a last shot.

"We let them get out of the blocks again. We have to feel fortunate we got back into the game and forced the two overtimes," said Twin Falls Coach Ben Allen. "We did a much better job defensively the second half. We got some confidence now. We got some positive things we can look at."

Only a hint of the face 22-foot 3-pointer by Highland senior Chad Harding with five seconds showing got the Rams into the second overtime. John Krahn's two free throws with 1:26 to play in the first OT put the Bruins up 49-48. J.J. Astorquia padded that lead with two more free tosses with 18 seconds left.

Krahn made one of two free throws with nine seconds to go in regulation to force the overtime. The Rams then missed two game-winning shots in the last five seconds.

The boisterous Twin Falls student crowd never gave up on the Bruins, despite their start. Twin Falls lived up to the support in the fourth quarter by outscoring Highland 8-1 the first three minutes of the period to trim the lead to 44-42.

Neither team accomplished anything with the basketball the next 3/4 minutes. Astorquia drilled a 3-pointer at the 1:22 mark for Twin Falls, first lead since the first minute of the game. Krahn answered a Lucas Berg basket with his free throw for the tie.

Highland took its early lead by making its first seven shots of the game. The Rams, whose quick cutting and patient

Wolves knock back Huskies, 68-

By Brad Breland
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — The wild Magic Valley Conference race just got a little wilder.

On the verge of guaranteeing themselves at least a tie for the Conference title, the Hansen Huskies were thrown back in the race. Castleford dealt the fifth-ranked Huskies their first Conference defeat Friday with a 68-50 victory over Hansen.

The Wolves blew an early chance to put the game away in the second quarter.

Midway through the period, four straight Hansen turnovers resulted in three points from Duwayne Kimball. A missed Huskie bucket turned into a Steve Vulgamore 3-pointer and the Wolves held a 20-14 advantage.

A late comeback by Hansen with a 3-pointer by Telly Stanger closed the Castleford lead to one point at the break.

Any chance of a Huskie comeback soon crumbled.

In the first 30 seconds of the third quarter, Castleford outscored Hansen 6-0. Sam Lowder had four of the six with Willie Barnes adding the other bucket. Lowder had nine points in the quarter and led Castleford with 13.

After the first minute had elapsed in the third quarter, the Wolves had gone on a 9-0 run. It was an 11-0 run and a 40-28 Castleford lead before Hansen would score.

Hansen had a couple of chances cutting the lead to seven in the third quarter and slicing into the lead late in the game to nine points, but Castleford proved to be too much for the Huskies.

Head coaches promise aggressive offenses as Super Sunday nears

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It will be a truly super Super Bowl — Marv Levy and Jimmy Johnson promise.

The men who will coach the Buffalo Bills and Dallas Cowboys on Sunday made one vow as they met the media Friday for the final time: They will open things up.

"Too many coaches who get into a big game get conservative because they don't want to do anything to lose," Johnson said. "Our style is to play to win. If you handcuff the player it puts the seeds in his mind."

"We are not going to send our team into the game with caution," Levy said. "We will play to the limit of their abilities. Let it all hang out."

It was the end to a long week for both coaches and both heard very little that they hadn't heard before.

It also was the end of a long week for the questioners, who were stretching to ask questions — one person asked each coach

if he had decided on his starting lineup; another asked Levy if he was at a disadvantage because the Bills' practice session were at a warmer site than the Cowboys, who have been closer to the ocean.

By the end of the session, Levy was congratulating a reporter from Brazil, who asked him to explain the beauty of American football to soccer fans by saying: "That's the first question I've heard in the last two days that I haven't heard before."

So what's new? Both teams will change hotels Saturday

— a Super Bowl ritual engaged in by coaches who want to get away from fans, celebrity-watchers and groupies who regularly clog the lobbies and elevators of team hotels.

The new hotels are supposed to be secret, but somehow some fans, celebrity-watchers and groupies always find them anyway.

Both teams also will see the Rose Bowl, site of the game, for the first time Saturday. The Cowboys will engage in a short walk-through there, the Bills will hold a light practice for about 45 minutes.

But there was little more to discuss after a week of talking about no-huddle offenses (Buffalo) and how to stop no-huddle offenses (Dallas), of Buffalo's apprehension at the spectre of becoming the first team to ever lose three straight Super Bowls, at Dallas' future as the potential "team of the '90s."

Levy promised that these Bills are different and better even though they had to qualify as a wild-card team this season and overcome a 35-3 deficit to Houston in their first playoff game. He noted that in last year's 37-24 Super Bowl loss to Washington, their best defensive player was hurting.

Conference co-leader blasts CSI

The Times-News

OREM, Utah — Utah Valley's women put on a sizzling shooting display Friday night and rolled over College of Southern Idaho 98-53.

It was the ninth win against one loss for Utah Valley, which co-leads the Scenic West Athletic Conference with Ricks College. It was Southern Idaho's eighth league loss in 10 tries.

Utah Valley shot a hot 24-37 to open up a 50-30 halftime lead and then blew completely away by hitting five of their first six attempts in the second half.

They ended the night on a cooler note but still were 39-for-65 overall including 3-for-12 on 3-pointers.

About the only bright spot for CSI was freshman Janyce Anderson, who found her scoring touch after a brief shooting slump to lead the Eagles with 24 points. Anderson was 7-for-15 from the field, while the rest of the team was 7-for-31.

"It was bad enough they shot as well as they did, but in the first half, when they did miss, they seemed to get the rebound and put it back in every time," said Coach Ben Stroud. "Utah Valley was simply too big for us underneath and too deep everywhere else."

Bobcats give Broncos scare

By Dave Goins
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — By gradually edging away, the Boise State Broncos earned a blue-collar victory over Montana State Friday night.

The Big Sky Conference men's basketball final was 72-52, but until only five minutes were left, the Broncos didn't put much distance between themselves and the Bobcats.

"They're a feisty team," said BSU senior center Tanoka Beard, who scored 15 points and took six rebounds. "They do not give up. That's a lot of credit to them."

The Broncos were fairly short on credit in the first half. In their first conference home game after three road contests, the Broncos had seemingly listless times in the first half.

They took a 31-25 halftime lead, which led to a "motivational" talk at halftime.

"We got a very motivational speech at halftime," Beard said. "Basically, we had to redeem ourselves. We didn't play very

Kings trade star vet for younger players

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The slumping Los Angeles Kings appeared to make a commitment to developing younger players by trading All-Star defenseman Paul Coffey to the Detroit Red Wings Friday in a six-player deal.

The Red Wings hope the smooth skating and passes of Coffey will turn their high-scoring offense up another notch — and transform their annual Stanley Cup ambitions into reality.

But Detroit surrendered a steady scorer, center Jimmy Carson, and one of its brightest prospects, in order to obtain Coffey. He played a key role in helping Edmonton and later Pittsburgh win the Stanley Cup.

Although the Kings have been slumping, Coffey's offensive contributions have not lessened. He had five assists in a recent game against San Jose, and is among the top scoring defensemen in the NHL this season with 57 points on eight goals and 49 assists.

Trojans hire former Heisman winner to oversee athletics

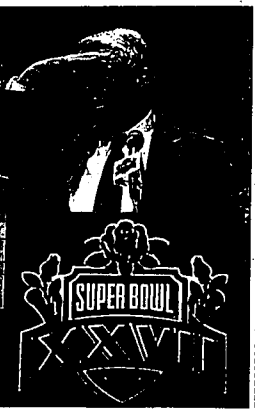

LOS ANGELES — Mike Garrett, the first in a line of Southern California tailbacks to win the Heisman Trophy, was hired Friday as the Trojans' athletic director.

Seles smashes Graf Down Under

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Silent no longer and stronger than ever, Monica Seles unleashed seven aces Saturday to sweep past Steffi Graf and capture a third straight Australian Open.

Seles, who received her grunts and got psyched out in losing to Graf at Wimbledon, let herself go to the ultimate as she solidified her No. 1 ranking with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 victory.

Monica Seles solidified her No. 1 ranking by defeating Steffi Graf for her third straight Australian Open title.

Seles' fastest serve, a 102 mph screamer, came on her final ace and wiped out a break point against her that would have tied the third set back at 3-3 in the seventh game. Instead, it let Seles get back to deuce, and she held on two errors by the demoralized Graf.

The triumph, worth nearly $280,000, gave Seles her ninth Grand Slam title in the last 10 finals she's played. "She really deserved to win today," said No. 2 Graf, who won the three straight Australian Opens before Seles.

Seles' souped-up serve, one of the key parts of her game she's been developing, let her down in the first set when she started out with a double-fault. Seles double-faulted again in the last game of the set, when she was broken for the second time.

But grinding as loud as ever, desperate to chase down Graf's punishing forehands, Seles took a 2-1 lead in the second set when she broke Graf with the help of a double-fault by the German at 15-40.

From then on, Seles never let up. She forced Graf to open the next game, and snacked two service winners, including one at 101 mph, to make it 3-1. Graf, who had only one ace, was unable to attack the net against Seles' deep groundstrokes

Oilers hire ex-Eagles coach to handle defense

HOUSTON (AP) — Buddy Ryan is back.

Ryan, the former Philadelphia Eagles coach, signed a two-year contract as the Houston Oilers' defensive coordinator on Friday.

"Everything just fell into place," Ryan said in a telephone interview from Tampa, Fla. "We basically worked everything out yesterday. There were just a couple of other things that were important to me."

Ryan interviewed with Oilers coach Jack Pardee earlier Friday and returned to Tampa, Fla., before the announcement.

"I thought I was going to get the New England job but Bill Parcells beat me to it. It was one of the few times he beat me," Ryan cracked.

Pardee said he doesn't feel threatened by Ryan's ambition to be a head coach again. "I don't think I'd want a coach who didn't want to be a head coach," Pardee said.

On a recent episode of "If you want to be a head coach you'd better be around a winner and that's what we're trying to do here."

Oilers owner Bud Adams fired defensive coordinator Jim Eddy and

Frost heats up Phoenix round

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — David Frost closed with a rush with birdies in three of the last four holes Friday to tie Lee Janzen for the 36-hole lead in the Phoenix Open.

Frost, one of seven players who shared the first-day lead, shot his second Sunday par 66 by using just 22 putts over the 6,992-yard-TPC-of-Scottsdale course. "It was one of my best putting rounds ever," the 33-year-old South African said.

Janzen shot a 65 on Friday to join Frost at 132, and both were two shots clear of the field. Steve Lowery, also with a 65, joined Robert Wrenn, another first-day leader, at 134. Wrenn shot 68 on Friday. Tom Watson, Tom Lehman and Gary McCord were at 135, and the group at 136 included Michael Allen, Scott Gump, Ed Dougherty, Scott Simpson, Gil Morgan, Jim Woodward, Kirk Triplett and Jeff Maggen.

NHL goes on-air to promote graceful image over 'goon' tag

The Associated Press

The NHL, tired of being portrayed as a sport of fighting rather than finesse, is battling back with a television campaign designed to broaden hockey's appeal and clean up its image.

Faced with "The Glory," the NHL has begun airing ads in the United States and Canada emphasizing speed, finesse, grace and style.

One commercial, shot entirely in slow motion, begins with players cutting fluid arabesques on the ice to the strains of soothing New Age-style piano arpeggios.

"This game — this game has three rules," the narrator says. "Do not hurt to win. Do not cheat. What has to be sacrificed. Give whatever you have to give. Not for the money, not for the praise, but for the game. This is what the game is ... in all its glory."

The ads are in stark contrast to the rock-'em, sock-'em approach to promotion that television audiences are used to seeing.

"In the United States, there is still a toothless goon theory which doesn't apply," Skip Prince, the NHL's New York-based executive director of broadcast services, said. "But I am not trying to turn this into a sport that has no hitting. It is not ice dancing."

The ad campaign, assembled by a Boston agency, reflects efforts by league officials to improve the game's image, especially in the United States, where the NHL longs for a national TV contract.

But in parts of the United States, particularly those without hockey franchises, the league is perceived as akin to the World Wrestling Federation on skates.

The Boston Globe recently reported that Bruins president Harry Sinden had asked producers of the television program "Cheers" to alter dialogue in one episode. The script in which a character said he had Bruins tickets so close to the ice he could "smell the blood," was changed to read "smell the sweat."

On a recent episode of the "Murphy Brown" show, the lead character, played by Candice Bergen, took the following swipe at the league: "We have had centuries of men not thinking. That explains the decline of the Roman Empire, the Dark Ages and the National Hockey League."

Prince said the NHL is an easy target because of its violent reputation. While fighting has declined by 50 percent this season, highlights for players trading punches still get big play on sportscasts in the United States and Canada.

Prince realizes that fight highlights send the wrong message to potential fans and said the NHL will work with television broadcasters to educate them on the sport. "They just look at the tapes and look at what they can find," Prince said about sports anchors. "Many of them are not sophisticated about the game."

Johnson also had one prediction, one that demonstrates that he does in fact go against the conservatism in the coaches' handbook — he almost predicted a victory. "If we don't turn the ball over, we'll score enough points to win," he said.

NFL

"Bruce Smith wore No. 78 last year, but he wasn't healthy or he wasn't Bruce Smith," he said.

And of running back Thurman Thomas, who last year misplaced his helmet for the first two plays of the game, Levy said: "He lost his helmet. So what? For two plays."

Johnson went through the routine he's followed all week, again getting in a plug for the book "Floyd," which he says has given him inspiration for his first Super Bowl. He again failed to mention the name of the author, Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi, whose name he concedes he can neither pronounce nor spell.

Johnson also had one prediction, one that demonstrates that he does in fact go against the conservatism in the coaches' handbook — he almost predicted a victory. "If we don't turn the ball over, we'll score enough points to win," he said.

Broncos

well in the first half. "That first half included 10 of the Broncos' 14 turns and 12 of their 28 shooting stops. They made 18 of 34 second half shots."

"They're the type of team you've got to put away early," said senior guard Jermaine Halliburton, who scored 12 of his team's 16 points in the second half. "We came out the second half and turned it up, a notch defensively and I think they got rattled."

In raising their record to 11-5 overall and 2-2 in conference play, the Broncos held MSU to the second-lowest point total that's been scored against BSU this season.

The Bobcats (5-12, 1-4) came into the game shooting 44 percent but made just 22-of-51, or 36.1 percent. BSU stopped the Bobcats but not 6-foot, 6-inch, 200-pound senior forward Art Menefee, who bulled his way in for 23 points and 13 rebounds.

The Broncos began coming away a bit when Halliburton put in a pointer with 6:33 left to make it 58-44. And with 4:41 remaining, forward Sherman Morris scored a layup to give the Broncos a 62-46 cushion. That sent many in the crowd of 7,516 to the exits.

Broncos Coach Bobby Dye said recent injuries have slowed BSU. "We were real reluctant to do a lot on the practice floor this week and I think that showed in the first half," he said. "And I thought it's a real quiet atmosphere out there tonight."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

These are the times that try men's souls...

— Thomas Paine

Against a routine defense, South is forced to find the winning finesse to make his slam. What can the defense do to give South a sick headache?

Bridge score tables showing NORTH (15-5), WEST (4-1), SOUTH (A-Q), and EAST (K 10 9 8) cards and trick counts.

In the typical game, West leads the club king. East signals encouragement with his seven and South ruffs the second club. One round of trumps eliminates the enemy, trumps, and the two top diamonds are cashed to reveal the horrible break: There's nothing left but a spade finesse, and when it wins, South chokes up his vulnerable king. Was anything the defense might have done?

BID WITH THE ACES

North South 1-5-3-B. South leads. ♠ K 10 9 6. ♣ Q 10 8 4. ♦ A 7 3.

Answers: Three no-trump. Should hearts be a safer contract, North will likely bid four hearts.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 1344, Boise, Idaho 83722, with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.
