Capacity turnout

Parents pack the O'Leary Junior High School auditorium to hear about the school district's Outcomes Driven Development Model teaching philosophy Tuesday night.

Assurances, complaints about ODDM mingle

District 411 hearing on newly-adopted teaching philosophy attracts more than 400 people

By Mike Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Teachers and principals Tuesday night gave heart-felt testimonials about the advantages of the district's new teaching philosophy, Outcomes Driven Development Model. But their assurances about ODDM were often intermingled with complaints by parents who found fault with the philosophy itself or said the approach doesn't work the way it is intended.

More than 400 people packed O'Leary Junior High School's auditorium to hear panel discussions about ODDM and then separated into five sessions to hear different aspects of outcome-based education.

One group of parents wore signs on their clothing that said, "OBE? Not Me," or "ODDM" with a slash through it.

OBE stands for outcome-based education, where students must demonstrate competency in order to progress. After the main meeting was finished, a woman complained that the auditorium crowd should not disperse so that everyone would hear each other's questions and answers.

But board Chairman Steve Tolman responded that having the five sessions would give more people a chance to have their questions answered. When groups of people gathered in different rooms, tempers were often on edge, with some people showing their irritation by hushing each other or by loudly interrupting each other.

One of the sessions was about mastery learning, a key component of ODDM. The process provides some children who do not get a high enough grade on a test a second chance to learn the material with "correctives." It also gives students who pass a test the chance to explore their lesson in different ways through "extensions."

Much of the criticism about ODDM has come from parents of high-achieving students who fear education for their children will be watered down.

But Lynn Geer, a Sawtooth Elementary School sixth-grade teacher, said that high achieving students who used to be bored with school have found new challenges and are getting more excited.

Footloose Americans live away from states of birth

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than one-third of all Americans live outside their state of birth, the Census Bureau said Tuesday.

In 12 states, more than half the people came from somewhere else.

Nevada had the biggest share of outsiders. Nearly four out of five Nevadans came from someplace else, mainly California.

Pennsylvania had the biggest share of stay-at-homes. Only one Pennsylvania in five was born outside the state.

Altogether, 95 million Americans were born outside their present state. The total population was 248.7 million. And close to half the Idahoans counted in the census were born outside the Gem State.

In 1990, there were 497,757 of them. That amounted to 49.4 percent of the state's population. But the percentage was down slightly from 1980, when 50.9 percent were born outside Idaho.

The government study used information gathered in the 1990 census. Geographer Alex de Sherbinin with the Population Reference Bureau in Washington said America's widespread and varied economy causes most of the movement.

"Industry has required a mobile labor force, and historically Americans have been willing to move to where the jobs are," he said.

In smaller industrialized nations, like France, Germany or Japan, there's little incentive to move because the nation's economy tends to rise or fall as a unit, he said.

The United States "has dramatically different regions," making it possible for workers to move from states in economic decline to states where the economy is thriving, he said.

California, the most populous state, was the likeliest home state for out-of-staters. Nearly 3.4 million people were born there but now live elsewhere.

One American in 11 moved to a different state between 1985 and 1990. The 12 states where outsiders form a majority are mainly in the West, which experienced an economic boom in the 1980s. Besides Nevada, they are Florida, Alaska, Arizona, Wyoming, Colorado, New Hampshire, California, Oregon, Washington, Maryland and Delaware. Outsiders also form a majority in the District of Columbia.

Stress may be telling on cult, leader as talks go on

The Associated Press

WACO, Texas — Cult leader David Koresh vacillates between shouting profanities and speaking of peace during negotiations, a sign he's succumbing to duress in the 10-day standoff, the FBI said Tuesday.

"We have two irreconcilable tracks on which we are dealing," FBI spokesman Bob Ricks said. "We go from discussions of belligerency to one where he wants to be a peacemaker."

Ricks said that during telephone conversations with Koresh, the 33-year-old cult leader, is showing signs of increased irritability. "There is... the use of profanities on their side," he said. "It's probably duress and stress on their part."

Ricks said Koresh, who says he is Jesus Christ, also appears to indicate some interest in ending the standoff.

"He reiterated that he intends to come out but is still waiting for a message from God," Ricks said. At mid-afternoon, Koresh's followers hung an 8-foot banner from a watch tower window: "God Help Us We Want The Press." Authorities wouldn't comment on the banner.

Three hours earlier, a white flag was hung from another window.

In Dallas, radio station KGBS said it appeared moments after radio show host Ron Engelmann suggested that a white flag be displayed if Koresh wanted the station's legal and medical help. Julie Van Dielen, producer of the show, said the station believed the sheet was a response to that message.

Ricks also said that McLennan County Sheriff Jack Harwell had been enlisted to talk with Koresh. In other developments Tuesday:

Custody hearings were held for the 21 freed children. Eighteen remain in the hands of the state Children's Protective Services, while three were ordered released to their father.

ATF spokesman Dan Conroy in Waco said shots were fired at reporters trying to interview relatives of cult members in Palestine, Texas. Conroy said the Texas Rangers investigating the slayings of the four ATF agents also are looking for the source of a tip authorities believe was given to Koresh minutes before the raid.

King tells of attack, threats

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Rodney King took the witness stand Tuesday for the first time since his videotaped beating and said he was "attacked" by police officers, including one who screamed racial insults and told him, "We're going to kill you."

King, speaking in a soft voice, said he never attacked the officers accused of violating his civil rights.

"I was trying to stay alive," King told the jury.

King's testimony was his first detailed public account of the night the black motorist's speeding car was pursued by police officers and he was beaten — and finally coming to a stop.

In a cross-examination, two defense attorneys challenged King's truthfulness in previous statements about the beating. King acknowledged he had had his parole officer, denying he was drunk and speeding when police chased him down.

"I was scared of going back to prison," he explained repeatedly. He also said that when he led police on a long chase, refusing to stop, "I was hoping the problem would go away... I stopped at all the stop lights and stop signs and when I saw the problem wouldn't go away, I pulled over."

Attorney Michael Stone, who was cross-examining King when court recessed for the day, said King's testimony "hurt us a lot."

He promised to undermine the testimony when he resumes questioning King today. The testimony in the federal trial of four white policemen came two years after the March 3, 1991, beating, which led to a state trial, acquittals and three days of deadly rioting.

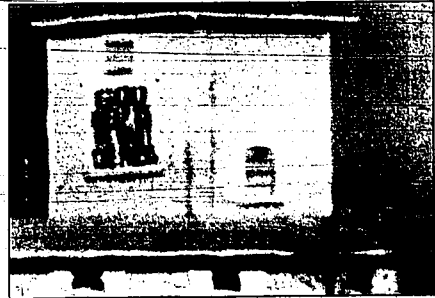

King, 27, said the officers asked at one point how he felt. "I said I felt fine. I didn't want them to know what they were doing to me was really getting to me. I didn't want them to have the satisfaction."

Under questioning by prosecutor Barry Kowalski, King insisted he never resisted arrest and suggested that a woman state Highway Patrol officer who first tracked him down for speeding could have handcuffed him if Los Angeles police had not intervened.

He said he was lying face down, trying to cooperate when officers leaped on him and "one of them applied pressure like he was trying to snap my wrist in half." He said he screamed in pain, and then heard someone shout "Back!"

"They all backed away from me and I'm

March turns moist with widespread rain, snow, flooding

The Associated Press

Snow was scattered from the northern Plains to New England on Tuesday, while melting snow caused scattered flooding in the Midwest.

At midday, snow fell over parts of North Dakota, the upper Mississippi valley, upper Ohio Valley, and into northeastern New York state and northern New England.

Snow changed to rain over eastern and southern New England.

In South Dakota, wind gusts to 51 mph at Rapid City and to 68 mph at Buffalo.

A new surge of cold weather brought winter storm watches in effect for Wednesday, over extreme northern Illinois, central and southern Wisconsin, and the southern half of Lower Michigan.

The colder weather could slow the melting of snow and allow some flooded streams to slowly recede.

Along the Platte River in eastern Nebraska, about two dozen families were flown to safety by National Guard helicopter after water burst through a dike in the Thomas Lake area and flooded recreational cabins.

Ice jams and snowmelt along the Platte have caused flooding in eastern Nebraska for several days, mostly inundating low-lying fields but also closing some highways.

"We're getting hit on all sides," said Russell Daehling, Seward County, Neb., highway superintendent. "Right now, I've used about every closed road sign and barricade I've got."

Along the Elkhorn River in northeast Nebraska, about 200 people were evacuated from West Point as a precaution, said City Clerk May Des Stoltzman.

In western Illinois, the Illinois River and its tributaries — the Spoon River, La Moine River and Sangamon River — were above flood stage Tuesday at several places. A few families were evacuated and some low-lying roads were blocked.

Lowland flooding also was reported along many rivers in Indiana, the National Weather Service said.

Further south, a flood warning was in effect along the Mississippi River at Red River Landing and Baton Rouge, La.

In the West, snow was scattered over the northern Rockies and Pacific Northwest. Rain was scattered over the northern coast of California. There were no reports of heavy rainfall during the six hours up to 11 a.m. MST.

Famed actress Hayes critically ill

NYACK, N.Y. (AP) — Actress Helen Hayes was hospitalized Tuesday in critical condition with congestive heart failure, a hospital official said.

Hayes, 92, was brought to Nyack Hospital by ambulance at 2:30 a.m. and also was diagnosed with an irregular heartbeat, said a spokeswoman, Nancy Kriz.

Hayes' son, actor James MacArthur, and his wife were expected at the hospital after flying in from California, Kriz said.

Hayes lives in Nyack, a town north of New York City. Her companion, Eileen Dowd, said Hayes was "resting comfortably" at the hospital.

Hayes had her first professional role in 1905, when she was 5.

Her career spanned eight decades, from Little Lord Fauntleroy to Queen Victoria.

"Even if you don't make it as an actor, it's an act of courage to try," she said.

She received three Tonys, two Oscars and an Emmy, and in 1981 was awarded the Kennedy Center Honors for lifetime achievements. She also was named one of 10 American artists to be commemorated on a gold medalion issued by the Treasury Department.

Hayes left the theater in 1971 because of allergies to dust that aggravated chronic bronchitis. She continued to perform in television roles, but said the theater remained her first love.

"Sometimes the audience is annoying, sometimes they go to sleep and snore," she said in a September 1991 appearance. "But sometimes they're a true inspiration."

still on the ground waiting to be handcuffed and shortly after that I was shocked by a Taser."

Asked what the stun-gun darts felt like when they hit him, he said, "I got shocked and it felt like my blood was boiling inside of me."

Moments later, as he was on the ground, he said, he heard the shout: "We're going to kill you nigger, run!"

"I ran closer to the Hyundai (his car) and I was struck across the right side of the face again," King said, pointing to his temple. "To this day there is a bump right here."

Kowalski asked what King heard while being clubbed and kicked.

"I'm not exactly sure but I heard while they were hitting me words of 'kill nigger, how do you feel killer?'"

He was asked whether he truly remembered the officers say "nigger" or "killer." King said he wasn't sure.

Quisno court, defense attorney Harland Braun noted that no other witness had reported hearing racial epithets, so King couldn't be believed.

"His case will rest and fall on the question of whether there were any racial epithets," Braun said.

King directed most of his comments to the jury, using his hands for emphasis. At first he seemed nervous, licking his lips, but as his narrative continued he appeared to grow calm.

He recalled being taken to a hospital, then being transferred to yet another hospital in a police car. He said an officer previously identified as defendant Timothy Wind, sat in the back seat with him.

"I was bent over in the back seat of the police car from the pain. He kept snatching me by the collar of the shirt and saying, 'Stay with me now, stay with me.' ... It was very painful from the injuries and I wanted to curl up."

Quisno the next morning as painful and confusing after he awakened in the jail ward of Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center.

"I was having trouble remembering exactly what went on in the jail, he recalled being attacked by police officers," he said.

King acknowledged that the night of the beating he had been drinking while watching a basketball game on television, and admitted to speeding — going about 75 mph to 80 mph.

A convicted robber who served jail time, King said he didn't pull over because he was afraid he would be going back to prison.

Band leader Bob Crosby dies

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Swing era bandleader Bob Crosby, younger brother of the late crooner Bing Crosby, died Tuesday of cancer at a nursing home. He was 80.

His son, Kris Crosby, said his father had lived in a penthouse in La Jolla until he moved to the nursing home two months ago.

"He was active and working right up to a year ago, when he got the cancer," Kris Crosby said. He said his father and some original band members played at concerts, balls and conventions until he fell ill.

Crosby led big bands from 1925-1942, and started an eight-piece band within the band, the Bob Cats, at that time. He said he didn't play an instrument at all. He was known for swing and Dixieland sounds.

The Bob Cats hit records included "Big Noise That Blowin' From Winona," "South Rampart Street Parade" and "March of the Bobcats."

The youngest of five Crosby sons, he was born in Spokane, Wash., and attended Gonzaga University.

Although his brother Bing, who was 9 years older, was not involved in the formation of the Crosby orchestra, it was often billed as the band of "Bing Crosby's brother."

During World War II, Crosby spent 18 months with the Marines, organizing and touring with bands throughout the Pacific Theater.

Crosby disbanded the Bob Cats in 1942. But he remembered them for a Dixieland concert in Los Angeles in 1951 and played with members of the group periodically over the next 40 years.

Reno confirmation sails smoothly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Janet Reno promised to blend tough-law enforcement with respect for people's rights Tuesday at a smooth confirmation hearing.

Afterward, both Democrats and Republicans predicted would lead to her approval as America's first female attorney general.

Miami's chief local prosecutor for 15 years, Reno described herself as a no-nonsense person who lived by the credo: "Don't pussyfoot, don't equivocate, don't talk out of both sides of your mouth."

For members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, an especially welcome quality seemed to be that she was non-controversial. "You have no idea how happy we are to see you here today," said chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del.

President Clinton's first nomination for the top Justice Department job, Zoe Baird, was withdrawn after criticism of her having illegally hired aliens as household help. The president then dropped federal Judge Kimba Wood from consideration because she also had hired an illegal alien to be her child's nanny — though she had broken no laws in doing so.

Reno, 54, seemed nearly free of personal controversy and Biden said she was one of the best witnesses for the confirmation hearing. Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the ranking Republican on the committee, said the panel might vote on her nomination this week.

"Having read every page of your

Janet Reno shares a laugh with Sen. Bob Graham prior to testifying Tuesday.

FBI report, I am impressed with your credentials and what you've done with your life," Hatch said.

In the hearing, the committee concentrated on eliciting her opinions on legal issues likely to come before her and the Congress. Reno said she wanted to apply nationwide the lessons she learned fighting crime in the Miami area, including working with ex-offenders, families and children to try to prevent violence.

But, she said, "I think it's imperative to understand that you will not have success... (without) threat of reasonable punishment and unless you can ensure that that punishment can be carried out."

On the subject of illegal drugs, she said, "If you confirm me... the president of the United States is going to have an attorney general that doesn't back away from vigorous enforcement against traffickers, against anybody who deals in this human misery."

"Janet is part social worker, part crime fighter," said Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., one of the Florida lawmakers who introduced her to the committee.

A liberal opponent of the death penalty, Reno said she still has sought it in many cases under Florida law. She stopped short of endorsing a Republican bill to end most death-row appeals which delay execution, but she agreed with Thurmond on the value of swift justice.

"We've sought the death penalty. We've gotten the death penalty. And to find those people still in prison without that penalty carried out after 10 and 13 and 15 years, makes a mockery of the justice system," she said.

Reno reiterated for the committee her support for federal gun controls, especially to halt the spread of high-powered "assault weapons." She peppered all her comments with tough talk toward criminals of all stripes.

FBI: Bombing likely deed of terrorist group

WASHINGTON (AP) — A "well-known terrorist group" is likely responsible for the bombing at New York's World Trade Center, an FBI official told Congress on Tuesday.

But law enforcement experts said there was no reason to fear a wave of such incidents.

"We're saying it's a group that knows what they're doing, and perhaps not an ad-hoc bunch of terrorists," said James Fox, head of the FBI's New York office.

Fox told a House Judiciary subcommittee that it was investigators' "gut feeling" that experienced terrorists were responsible for last month's blast that killed five, injured 1,000 and shut-down the World Trade Center for several weeks.

"I don't have a specific group in mind," Fox told reporters later, adding that agents based the speculation on "30 years of this stuff."

FBI Director William Sessions cautioned against speculating, who was behind the bombing, and noted it took years to conclude the investigation into the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

It was the first congressional hearing into the New York bombing as lawmakers began reviewing whether there was need to overhaul immigration laws or take other precautions against terrorism.

It was an all-star witness list, featuring Sessions and other high officials. But they offered few new details, saying they didn't want to jeopardize the case. One lawmaker questioned Congress' motive behind the hearing. "I hesitate to see people who are elected to public office sort of elbowing their way in front of the cameras, when this is a law enforcement investigation that ought to be allowed to go on," said Rep. Craig

Washington, D-Texas. Sessions advised Americans that there's no reason to fear the bombing is the beginning of "a coming wave of terrorism."

"The American public should always be vigilant, but this suspected act of terrorism should not be viewed as the opening act in a coming wave of terrorism," Sessions said.

Several lawmakers grilled the FBI officials, and others who testified on immigration and Naturalization Service laws and the government's ability to keep unwanted aliens from entering the United States.

Authorities have described a Palestinian charged in the Feb. 26 bombing, Mohamad Sulameh, as a Muslim fundamentalist who worshipped at a New Jersey mosque where a militant Islamic cleric, Omar Abdul-Rahman, preaches.

Abdul-Rahman has condemned the violence, but authorities in Cairo suspect the cleric is the spiritual leader of Egyptian radicals involved in dozens of murders. Thomas McNamara, the State Department's counter-terrorism coordinator, said there are more than 1.5 million immigration visas that come through a year. About 800,000 green cards were revoked last year, then he applied for political asylum.

Governor gives up on flag change

ATLANTA (AP) — Gov. Zell Miller gave up his fight Tuesday to remove the Confederate battle emblem from Georgia's flag, blaming extremists on both sides for the lack of support in the Legislature.

"I have given this issue my best and strongest effort," he said in a letter to the House rules committee chairman. "I still strongly believe that change the flag is the right thing to do."

Why our $59 eyeglasses are worth more than theirs

Lately there's been a lot of hoopla from our higher-priced competitors about their new low prices. The new "low prices" take up a huge portion of the ads. Yet, if you get to the stores, how many frames do you think you'll find at that price? Would you be disappointed if there were only 12 or 13? Unfortunately, it makes it even harder for you to believe that our low prices are really on the level. Few companies operate with the cost-cutting efficiency required to succeed at prices this low.

Our $59 price is complete—including frames and single vision plastic lenses. Additional pairs, same prescription and visit, are just $39. Most bifocals just $20 more. So two pairs cost just $98. And no extra charge for oversized or almost all high power lenses.

You don't wear the price tag! Still, the biggest difference between us and them is our selection. Our $59 and $39 prices include a choice from over 400 fashionable frames—the vast majority of frames in our store.

From the fashionably conservative to the cutting edge of today's styles, these include designs from S. Moriz, Converse, REM, Zimco, Renaissance, Enrico Biaggi & more. For $20 to $90 more, we carry specialty designers like Liz Claiborne, Anne Klein, Ray Ban, Logo of Paris, Cheryl Tiegs & others.

Doctor's Comment

Dr. S. E. Samuels, Ophthalmologist
Ketchikan, Alaska and Portland, OR

Working with the Portland Trailblazers, I learned how important correct eyewear is in sports.

"If you wear contact lenses, you should be fitted for a larger lens size for sports. This will decrease the chance of losing one during physical activity.

"Or if you play a sport in which a ball can hit your eyes, you should wear protective sports goggles, whether your vision needs correction or not."

- Comprehensive eye exams available by Independent Doctors of Optometry • Most vision care plans accepted
- Free frame adjustments • Over 400 fashionable frames
- Complimentary OPTI-FREE™ lens care solution kit by ALCON
- Included with any soft contact lens purchase (see our coupon)

Idaho

Briefly

Head Start will probe federal fund use

IDAHO FALLS — An official for Head Start programs throughout the West says the agency will investigate the use of $10,000 in federal funds to improve a house rented for Head Start classroom space in Driggs.

Steve Hennings, regional administrator for the Children and Families branch of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, said his office did not approve the money spent on the house owned by John Ohman.

The Idaho Falls lawyer is a former State Transportation Board chairman and the husband of Susan Ohman, who resigned last month as executive director of Human Services Center. That agency oversees Head Start and most child-care outreach programs in eastern Idaho.

The center's board of directors said last week that it was not aware of and did not approve the expenditures on the Driggs house.

House introduces charitable bingo bill

BOISE — After two months of work, the Idaho House finally introduced a bill allowing charitable bingo and raffles to continue after June.

A temporary law adopted last year allows the games through June, but if the current session does not act, charitable games will end in July.

The House State Affairs Committee quickly endorsed a bingo bill on Tuesday from a subcommittee that had been working on it for weeks. State Affairs Chairman Pam Ahrens said a hearing will be conducted Friday.

Meanwhile, the Senate State Affairs Committee plans a hearing today on its own version of bingo legislation. If the two chambers pass different bingo bills, they will have to be reconciled in conferences between House and Senate members.

INEL braces for spring cuts in jobs

IDAHO FALLS — Some jobs will be cut this spring at the Specific Manufacturing Capability project as the INEL tank armor production facility continues running at only a fraction of capacity.

Greg Baker, general manager of the project for Babcock and Wilcox Idaho, would not say how many jobs might be lost at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Baker said the project might continue producing armor through 2000, but at reduced levels and with a smaller work force.

The U.S. Army-funded Specific Manufacturing Capability project now accounts for about 430 jobs at the INEL, 40 fewer than last year.

Critics try splitting education board

BOISE — Proponents of splitting the State Board of Education hope the 18th time is a charm.

Since 1983, 17 measures that would have divided the board's higher education duties from its oversight of public schools have failed to pass the Legislature.

"It is not a new idea," said Rep. Pam Ahrens, R-Boise, cosponsor of House Bill 345, which was approved by the House Education Committee Monday.

Chairman of citizen's board resigns

COEUR D'ALENE — Faulting a decision to issue individual reports, the chairman of a recently created citizen's advisory board on government efficiency resigned his chairmanship.

"It seems to me we don't need a chairperson if we're going to operate as independent subgroups," board chairman Roger Rowland said Monday during a meeting with Kootenai County Commission Chairman Kent Helmer.

Created by resolution in October, the advisory board was charged with studying county government, exploring consolidation and privatization and recommending various ways to improve efficiency.

Charges reduced in booby trap case

COEUR D'ALENE — An explosive booby trap discovered in a rural area 15 miles north of Coeur d'Alene was large enough to harm anybody nearby had the device worked, authorities said.

William C. Thomson, 50, told police he rigged the trap to explode when somebody crossed an access road onto his property, about one mile west of U.S. Highway 95.

During a court appearance Monday, aggravated assault charges against Thomson were reduced to first-degree destruction of property, a felony. He remained in Kootenai County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bail.

I tracked Otter's drinks, friend testifies

BOISE (AP) — A friend of Lt. Gov. Butch Otter on Tuesday testified he was certain how many alcoholic drinks Otter had the night he was arrested for drunken driving, but was unsure how many he himself drank.

Otter, in the second day of his Boise trial for misdemeanor DUI, said he had four beers that night after eating no food all day and running eight miles in the summer heat. But he denied he was incapable of driving.

"I was fatigued, but I didn't feel it impaired my ability to drive," Otter told a judge and jury.

Otter's friend, Jack Ellis of Boise, accompanied him to boxing matches at the Boise Hawks Memorial Stadium on July 31, and then to the 127 Club in Meridian.

Ellis testified Otter had one beer at the stadium, then three at the bar. Ellis then said he thought he himself drank five beers.

Otter

He responded he had gone to court-mandated instruction after being arrested on a DUI.

"I went to schools. I wouldn't say that's treatment."

"I'm not a liar. I'm not going to cook up anything for anybody," Ellis said.

"You're sure how much Mr. Otter had, but not sure how much you had," asked Bill Schwartz, Meridian city attorney.

Schwartz also asked Ellis if he had undergone treatment for alcohol abuse, and if he conferred with Otter and defense attorney John Sutton to establish how Ellis would testify.

"I don't care who it is."

Otter's vice president of the J.R. Simplot Co. and is son-in-law of Idaho industrialist Jack Simplot. He's in his second term as lieutenant governor and has been considering running for governor next year.

Dan Wohlers, of Boise testified he sat with Otter and Ellis at the 127 Club from about 10 p.m. on July 31 to 1 a.m., on Aug. 1. He said he kept track of how much Otter drank. Wohlers concluded Otter did not appear to have "reached his limit."

In response to Schwartz's question, Wohlers said he thought the legal limit for drunken driving was a 1.0 percent blood-alcohol. It is actually 0.10 percent.

Breath tests on Otter after he was taken to the Ada County law enforcement building read 0.11 and 0.12 percent, police said.

GOP puts hope in Medicaid cost-containment package

BOISE (AP) — Republican budget writers continued checking increases in 1994 state spending Tuesday by embracing a $7.8 million Medicaid cost-containment package.

The Andrus administration contends the plan dramatically overestimates savings in the cost of subsidized health care for the poor. But the reduction projected by legislative leaders kept the state's general tax commitment to welfare programs nearly $100,000 below the GOP's $117.1 million target. The federal government will match the state's share with over $250 million more.

Without that package and other more modest budget reductions, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee could have exceeded the welfare spending target by as much as $3 million — money budget writers need to augment a relatively anemic state-aid package for public schools.

"Some place we've got to hold the line," House Appropriations Vice Chairman Robert Geddes, R-Preston, told his colleagues. "There's only a couple of budgets between today and public schools, and anything we put here we can't put there."

But administration analysts predict the actual general tax bill will be at least $1 million, higher — a bill that will have to be paid next year when general tax revenue is expected to be even tighter than it is this year.

The public school aid package is the last major spending decision facing the committee. It has fulfilled GOP leadership hopes of drafting a "maintenance" budget that avoids the kind of tax increase Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus proposed to underwrite critical needs and keep the economy growing.

The original target budget put politically sensitive public school support at $522 million, a $25 million increase over the current year but less than half the increase Andrus proposed in his tax-increase-enhanced budget. But squeezing the House-Senate panel has done on spending for the rest of state government over the past three weeks has created the prospect of pushing that figure closer to $525 million.

The full Senate paved the way for accepting that scaled-down public school allotment by unanimously repealing the $6 million requirement that every elementary school with more than 400 students have a full-time counselor beginning this fall, and that those with 200 to 400 students have part-time counselors. That bill now goes to the House.

But even at that amount, education experts say there will barely be enough cash to cover enrollment growth under the current distribution formula.

Court upholds ruling for Pocatello firm

BOISE (AP) — A Pocatello company is not liable for a machine ordered from a Michigan company but damaged in shipment, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Tuesday unanimously agreed with 6th District Judge Peter McDermott, who found for John Beal II, doing business as Medalist Cleaning of Pocatello.

The cost-containment package for Medicaid includes cuts in payments to health providers treating the poor as Andrus has demanded. It also includes restrictions on those eligible for care under the Pregnant Women and Children program and requirements for parents to contribute to the cost of their children's care as Republicans have wanted.

In addition, it eliminates $1.3 million to finance the administration's medically needy program. The Republican majority promised that financing two years ago in a deal with the governor to get the state to take over from counties the cost of catastrophic medical bills run up by poor people who are not eligible for Medicaid.

U.S. workers post biggest productivity gain in 2 decades

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — American workers posted their biggest productivity gain in two decades in 1992, which ended with the largest quarterly advance in nearly seven years, the government said Tuesday.
 "It's an extraordinarily impressive performance," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York.

"If we can come close to sustaining it, we won't see the fourth quarter performance too often — eventually we'll see our standard of living begin to rise again," he said.
 The Labor Department said productivity, defined as output per number of hours worked — rose 2.8 percent last year, the best improvement since a 3.1 percent advance in 1972. The growth was even stronger than last month's 2.7 percent estimate for the year.

The year ended with a 4.8 percent surge over a seasonally adjusted annual rate from October through December, the largest quarterly increase since a 6.9 percent jump in the first three months of 1987.
 The fourth quarter advance, originally said to have been 4.0 percent, was the seventh such increase in a row. Productivity fell 0.7 percent in the first quarter of 1991.
 Analysts noted that labor costs per unit of output rose just 0.9 percent last year.

sharply from a 4.6 percent advance in 1991. This measure is a key gauge of future price inflation.
 "It means the inflation rate is still coming down," Steinberg said.
 The economy's output rose 2.2 percent in 1992 after a 2.2 percent loss a year earlier.
 Despite the increase, the number of hours worked fell another 0.5 percent last year after a 2.6 percent decline in 1991.
 Total business productivity, including farming, rose 2.9 percent in 1992, including a 4.9 percent advance in the final three months.

 Manufacturing productivity rose 3.0 percent, including a similar 3.0 percent advance in the durable goods sector. Non-durable goods productivity was up 2.9 percent.
 Productivity rose at an annual rate of 1.8 percent during the 1970s and 1980s, down sharply from an average annual rate of 2.5 percent during the two prior decades.

Fish and Game problems? Don't pass buck to counties

Our question is, what's the real motive behind legislation to force Idaho's Fish and Game Commission to clear land purchases with county commissioners?

We've heard maybe half a dozen different reasons since the Legislature started debating this idea, and none of them makes much sense. Some examples:

• The goal can't be to protect county revenue by keeping the land on tax rolls: Fish and Game already is authorized to begin making payments to counties in lieu of property taxes.

• The goal may be to halt or slow down Fish and Game land purchases. But if that's so, why not just pass a law that halts or slows down Fish and Game land purchases? Why pass the buck to county commissioners?

• Maybe it's to give county commissioners more authority over what happens in their counties. No thank you, please.

• Most county commissioners are already overwhelmed by a wide range of politically touchy responsibilities—topics as diverse as juvenile detention and landfills. They don't need another fight to referee.

• Is the goal to protect farmers from noxious weeds growing on state land? If so, there's an easier way. County commissioners already have authority over noxious weeds on private land; if they don't have such authority over state land, the Legislature could give it to them.

That's a simpler and more effective remedy than having them review land sales. In fact, every problem cited by supporters of the land-sale bill has a simpler solution than the county-review bill.

But our growing suspicion is that supporters of this bill don't particularly want to solve problems. They just want to make life difficult for an agency they think is getting too big for its britches.

It's a silly bill, and it may get sillier. Sen. Stitt Hawkins, R-Ucon, wants to amend it. He wants to require county commissioners to hold public hearings before ruling on the land purchases. It's adding the terror of hapless county commissioners trapped by that mandate: Caught in a crossfire between bureaucrats and enraged property owners, they'll be legally required to rule on matters that are properly none of their business.

Whether a landowner wants to sell out to Fish and Game, to J.R. Simplot or to a Saudi oil sheik, county commissioners have no business interfering. Private property is still private property.

If rural landowners have grievances against Fish and Game, the Legislature should air those grievances and try to solve them. Dragging unsuspecting county commissioners into the fight won't help.

Gutting the foundations

Two foundations in New York City were attacked in recent days. One, at the World Trade Center, was caused by a bomb. Although there was tremendous loss of life and property, the structural damage will be repaired.

The other occurred at the Municipal Building, where 109 couples showed up to register as "domestic partners." A new city law grants many rights previously reserved to heterosexual married couples to people of the same or opposite sex who want to live together without, as they used to say, benefit of clergy (though there are now sufficient clergy who will do anything, including "marry" homosexuals).

The damage from this assault on the nation's primary social foundation is substantial and may be very difficult to repair.

For $20, the domestic partners receive what they have long sought — a degree of societal approval for what used to be known as "living in sin," before sin died off, like an extinct species.

Just as married couples do, domestic partners employed by the city now will be able to take unpaid leave when they wish to care for a new child. They'll also have the same rights as married spouses to visit partners at municipal hospitals and city jails. And they'll have the same standing as married couples in qualifying for apartments and in inheriting a lease in residential buildings owned or overseen by city housing agencies.

This law fulfills a goal first outlined in 1970 at a homosexual convention in Philadelphia. Delegates called for "the abolition of the nuclear family because it perpetuates the false categories of homosexuality and heterosexuality." A lesbian workshop demanded the "destruction of the nuclear family," which the statement called "a microcosm of the fascist state."

At a 1972 meeting of the National Coalition of Gay Organizations in Chicago, participants demanded the "repeal of all legislative provisions that restrict sex or number of persons entering into a marriage unit; and the extension of legal benefits to all persons who cohabit regardless of sex or numbers."

For more than a century, the Supreme Court has ruled that a family begins when a man and woman legally marry. Given the evolutionary principles that now permeate the law, and its tailoring by judges to fit the customer, it is probable that even this definition might change.

Since the 19th Century, the Supreme Court has consistently refused to sanction polygamy, bigamy or any other relationship that would define a family as beginning from a source other than the uniting of a man and woman in legal matrimony. It has written of the male-female marital bond as "the true basis of human progress."

In Griswold vs. Connecticut (1965), the court said, "Marriage is a coming together for better or for worse, hopefully enduring, and intimate to the degree of being sacred. It is an association that promotes a way of life."

So, too, does the "domestic partner" arrangement promote a way of life — a way of life that is an assault on the most important building block of any society: the traditional concept of family.

Marriage, like law, has its roots in the Bible, which says, "A man shall leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh." Since that book and so many other foundational principles of this country have now been symbolically "burned" by the political correctness police, appeals to such a standard increasingly fall on deaf ears.

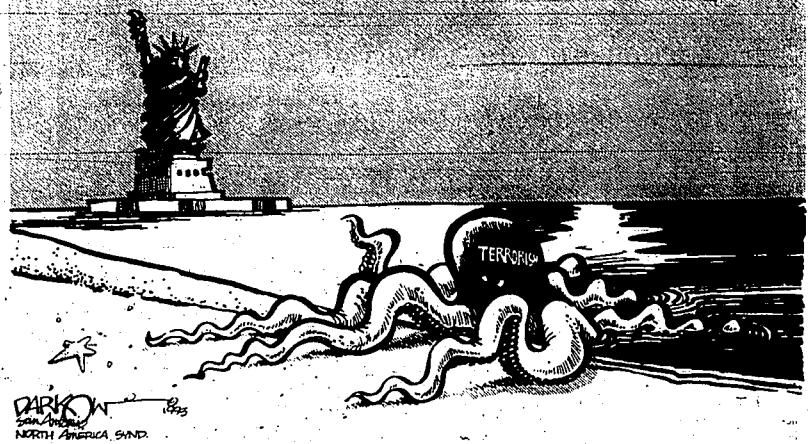

Yet, the principle remains and is beneficial to those who heed it and to a society that upholds it.

In his once widely read "Commentaries on the Laws of England" (1765), the great British legal scholar William Blackstone saw law as flowing from a Creator, who not only endowed humans with certain rights, but also established rules for a social order which, if followed, would profit individuals and society.

"Man, considered as a creature," wrote Blackstone, "must necessarily be subject to the laws of his Creator, for he is an entirely dependent being." Blackstone said the will of Man's Maker is "the law of nature" and "this law of nature, being co-equal with mankind and dictated by God himself, is of course superior in obligation to any other... no human laws are of any validity, if contrary to this."

Said in New York City and in increasing numbers of places, people like Mayor David Dinkins in effect have declared themselves God and are busy, destroying the foundation of the law of nature and the bedrock principles of history. This can result in destruction far greater and more long-lasting than any, single bombing.

Let's stick it to drunk drivers

Stick it to the drunk driver — he's already sick with what the American Medical Association classed in 1955 as an incurable, progressive disease. Let's really nail him to the cross.

Every twice in a while, we are shocked into thinking about the addict who drives, such as a prominent judge letting himself be defeated by the disease or maybe even a lieutenant governor or two being roped into this silly, sometimes happy, most times not, fatal habit.

Then along comes the law that almost kills, almost takes the life of someone who is completely innocent of anything but being in the wrong place at the right time. Then we want new legislation, new laws, new ways of dealing with the oldest and most fatal disease known to man.

Let's think back at what we have tried and failed with. We tried prohibition. We tried and lost the war on drugs (and believe me, alcohol is a lethal drug).

Now we want to sock it to the drunk driver. Let's think about something new to go along with the sock-it-to-them theory.

Last year, according to The Times-News, the state of Idaho made a profit of $14.5 million from its liquor operation. The state is anticipating much higher profits this year and in future years, so the state is building new facilities in order to facilitate the distribution of this harmless legal drug — alcohol.

Of the $14.5 million profit, $1.5 million was returned to rehabilitation. (This is where, in most rehabs, the patient is taught that if he will turn his life over to God, he can be saved.)

Why can't some of this profit be spent on research to cure this incurable disease (and by the way, in 1955, cancer was pretty much incurable also)?

Why can't some of this profit gained in the sale of habit-forming drugs (alcohol) be set aside to help compensate people like this poor kid that was almost killed in Jerome County a few weeks ago? Why can't the profit be used to train and teach our children, in their early years, the dangers of all habit-forming drugs, alcohol, cigarettes, dope of all forms and, last but not least, prescription drugs?

Why punish students for threat?

I am writing in concern about a school district policy for Twin Falls schools.

This policy is regarding bomb threats. If a bomb threat is called in and the school is evacuated and time is taken out of the class, it is school policy that all students make up this time by staying after regular school hours as a form of detention for something that they did not do. There is always the possibility that a student did not have anything to do with the threat and still they are punished.

What are we teaching our children when the law says that we are innocent until proven guilty but our schools are demonstrating the opposite? I think that, as parents, we need to re-evaluate our school structure and the policies of our schools and work toward the same goals in a more appropriate way. If you have any questions, you may contact me at 736-8711.

Thanks for supporting Trojans

I would like to thank all the people who made the trek to Boise recently for the state basketball tournament.

Wendell, by far, had the largest turnout. We have had so much community support throughout the year, it is overwhelming. It is an awesome feeling to walk out on the court and see all the fans.

The town of Wendell has much to be proud of in its people for carrying on the traditions of their busy lives and schedules to come in support of us. We hope that you were not disappointed. Let's not let the support diminish in the future, so that all those who play for the Wendell Trojans to come know that deep appreciation and gratitude that the team of 1993 has.

Automobile to blame for death

In response to the editorial on easy access to guns on March 4, let's look at another incident to punish your logic. Look at what you said the ingredients were that led to the tragedy:

- Alcohol
  - A high-powered, fast-firing gun
  - A painful family battle over money
- As a human being, I profess confusion that you think drunk-lady-driver would get into a car and drive on the Bull Grade. One sad fact is that this drunk lady ran into a car driven by a teenage girl (cheerleader) who was tragically killed. It is a sad fact that this lady may become best known for her drunkenness. That would be a shame. I suggest that Twin Falls residents direct their alarm elsewhere — perhaps toward alcohol and the car my lady friend was driving.

Indeed, consider the automobile. It has four wheels, an engine and a steering wheel with which the car can be controlled. Oops, I forgot she was driving under the influence.

Tuesday, the president of the United States did not mention that he believes that everyone in America needs to be able to buy alcohol as a weapon for killing people.

Generally, I do not support Americans' right to buy alcohol. We could not control alcohol use during the Prohibition period. But public safety may require some reasonable limits on cars, such as my lady driver was driving. Of course, the National Rifle Association would argue that if assault rifles had been outlawed, my lady driver might have wielded a cup of coffee or a bicycle.

But if my lady had brandished a bicycle a year or so ago, she might not have had to spend nights in jail or face all the court trials, screwing up her life forever in killing this teen-age girl and traumatizing Idaho streets.

Why don't they ban automobiles? Oh, no one blames the automobile!

When a drunk uses a car to kill, we blame the alcohol. When a drunk uses a gun to kill, we blame the gun.

Leave right to bear arms intact

Generally, I support Americans' right to keep and drive cars, but public safety may require they be outlawed.

Does that sound ridiculous to you? I hope so. Then maybe you can understand how ridiculous your March 4 editorial on gun control sounded to me.

Why is it when a tragedy involves a gun, it's the gun's fault but if it involves a car, it's the driver's fault? Think about it.

The criminal acts of a few should not lead to restricting the rights of the law-abiding general public. It is impossible to legislate a 100 percent safe, no-fault society anyway, so please leave my right to keep and bear arms intact.

Think before jailing some women

Whoever said, "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," has not visited the "women's section" of the Twin Falls County Jail lately.

Try this one on forsize, folks. Take 10 women, one room, one shower, one television, and mix well with sentences for 10 days, 10 weeks, 10 months and watch the lid explode!

I would like to congratulate jail personnel for jobs well done, but even more, I would like to tell the women who endure these conditions for some crimes as simple as disturbing the peace (10 days) congratulations! And a heartfelt one at that!

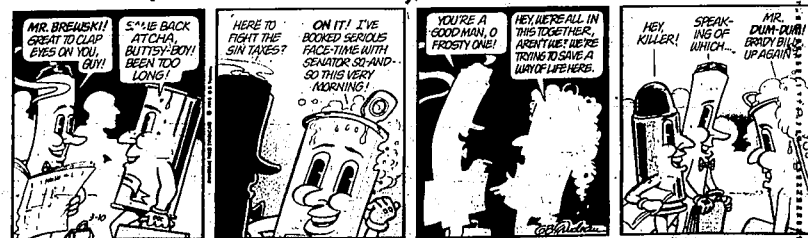

I'm not saying the jail is bad or even that the women are bad. What I am asking is for the judges to "look before they leap" in some of these cases. Surely a stiff fine and probation would be better than taxpayers' monies being spent so frivolously.

Keep those of us who deserve to be here. But please, your honors, send the housewives home before we all end up in Binelefon.

Pay more attention to breast cancer to preserve objects of beauty

Breasts. No other body part receives so much public exposure and adulation.

You've seen, of course, the cover of last month's Sports Illustrated swimsuit edition, featuring the lovely model's breasts beneath an X of moonbeams. Lyra.

And you've noticed, discreetly, I'm sure, who has nice ones beneath the silk blouses in your office, peering from the strapless gowns at your cousin's wedding and displayed in ads for bra sales at Macy's.

Breasts are objects of beauty. Desire. Reverence. Celebrity status. Have I left anything out? I'm afraid so.

Ignorance. Neglect. Fear. Death. Unit two years ago, only $90 million was allocated by the Federal government for breast cancer research. Far too little money to combat a disease that afflicts 2.6 million American women and kills 30,000 a year.

Medical researchers have never devoted much study to the breast. So there is very little known about whatever it is that transforms normal cells into ruthless raptors on a fatal search-and-destroy mission.

We women are scared to death about this disease, which will kill one in eight of us.

We are at higher risk for breast cancer if our mothers, sisters or grandmothers had it. Or if we got our periods early. Had our children late. Didn't nurse our babies. We should worry, we've heard, if we eat too much fat. Or if we're tall and thin.

But really, no one can breathe easily. Because 70 percent of breast cancer victims have none of these risk factors. And the experts haven't a clue as to why. Or what to do about it.

We are encouraged to examine our breasts every month, to give our fingers a memory and a chance to detect changes early. But we have heard that any tumor big enough to feel probably has been a lethal presence for years.

Like many women, I had put great faith in mammograms, which can pick up tumors too tiny to feel. But last week, we learned of some new studies that shook our confidence.

The data suggests that in women under 50, cancer often evades the mammogram's probing eye. Tumors hide, they say, in the dense tissue of a younger woman's breast.

But some scientists say there are technical problems with the studies and not enough evidence yet to justify changing the guidelines.

Women still are advised to have a baseline mammogram between age 35 and 40, biennial mammograms until age 50 and annual mammograms after that. And to remember that there is not substitute for a woman's monthly self-exam.

In the meantime, the public can draw one clear conclusion from the latest studies: We deserve to know more.

Tom Harkin of Iowa, whose two sisters died of breast cancer, and her troops won $210 million from the Department of Defense for breast cancer research.

An additional $196 million was allocated through the Department of Health and Human Services.

This year, the commission seeks $100 million.

Visco will have the support of every woman who has ever stood in the shower, probing her breasts for a lump she prayed she wouldn't find. Every one who ever had her breasts mashed between the plates of an X-ray machine, every one who was ever told that to survive, she should have had her breast cut off and then swallow some poison.

For all of us can testify - this is an awfully primitive way to fight an epidemic. And a very shabby way to treat objects of beauty.

What would the Federal Energy Tax be on diets?

If a Btu is the amount of energy needed to raise the temperature of 1 pound of water 1 degree F and a calorie is the amount of heat needed to raise the temperature of 1 gram of water 1 degree Celsius, how many calories are equal to 1 Btu?

According to my dictionary, 1 Btu is equal to 252 calories.

At that rate, a person on a daily diet of 2,000 calories would consume 730,000 calories or 2,896.8 Btu's per year. I wonder what the proposed Federal Energy Tax would be on that diet.

P.S. Don't mention this to our president. I wouldn't want to give any ideas.

deadline for independent candidates by more than three months, thereby reducing the chances of an independent challenge to an incumbent candidate.

Stubbs' assertion that independent candidates run only to spoil the election for somebody else is both inaccurate and childish.

Independent candidates give us an option that is sorely needed in this area. The local Democrats can't seem to organize a viable campaign to challenge the entrenched Republicans, leaving the Republican candidate unopposed in many cases. I don't recall anything in the Constitution or the Bill of Rights that suggests that only Republicans and Democrats should be allowed to run for public office.

Stubbs' assertion that if "they intend to be legitimate candidates, it would benefit them to begin campaigning as early as possible..." is not surprising coming from a well-heeled sitting Republican. What he fails to acknowledge is that campaigns cost money and most independent candidates can't afford a nine-month campaign. I suppose when Stubbs says "legitimate" he really means well-financed.

I would urge anyone who feels that this measure should be a quick death on the House floor to call or write to their elected House Representative, and Mr. Stubbs as well, and voice their opposition to this absurd attempt to make freedom of choice even more difficult to come by in Idaho.

The Times-News biased against non-Republicans

You don't have to read The Times-News very long before you realize that it is a Republican-biased publication. To illustrate, twice in recent publications, in response to written requests for information on our state's members of Congress The Times-News has just printed the names, phone and fax numbers of the Republican members.

I think everyone knows that each state has at least two senators and two house members, not just three Republicans from southern Idaho. Maybe Larry LaRocco, a Democrat from north Idaho, doesn't deserve to be acknowledged as a member by The Times-News; he does actually represent our state in Washington, D.C.

Do you think you can "break gridlock" and make known the name, address, phone and fax number of our other representative, just in case someone might want to contact him after no response from the other three?

ELWOOD R. WERRY
Shoshone

Editor's note: LaRocco's nearest district office is at 304 N. Eighth St., Room 136, Boise 83702; phone 343-4211; fax 343-4791. We normally don't include LaRocco in our list of addresses and phone numbers because LaRocco represents northern Idaho's 1st Congressional District. He doesn't represent southern Idaho, and southern Idahoans can't vote for him. Tom Knuppenberger, LaRocco's district representative in Boise, says that LaRocco's office normally refers all southern Idaho inquiries to 2nd District Rep. Mike Crapo, as a "congressional courtesy."

Oppose Stubbs' attempt to deny independents

In this day and age of obsessive government regulation, when our civil liberties are being slowly but surely taken away from us one bit at a time, Mark Stubbs would like to make it even more difficult for concerned Idaho citizens to run for public office.

Stubbs, a member of the House State Affairs Committee, is apparently so afraid that an independent candidate might actually unseat a Magic Valley Republican that he is determined to make the process of running as an independent as cumbersome as possible.

Stubbs wants to move up the filing deadline for independent candidates by more than three months, thereby reducing the chances of an independent challenge to an incumbent candidate.

Stubbs' assertion that independent candidates run only to spoil the election for somebody else is both inaccurate and childish.

Ethnic cleansing campaign continues

UNITED NATIONS — U.N. refugee chief Sadako Ogata said Tuesday that a campaign of "murder, torture, mutilation and rape" to achieve ethnically pure regions continues in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Ogata said "ethnic cleansing" — the deliberate policy of forcing members of an ethnic group from their homes — is a new phenomenon to the Office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, founded in 1951. Refugees had normally been a byproduct of war, disaster, or more recently, economic and social disruptions, she said. But now, "there are unfortunately too many instances, where displacement is not so much a consequence of persecution or conflict, but a deliberate goal," she said.

Finn's cancel licorice vodka sales

HELSINKI, Finland — The state-owned liquor monopoly, Alko, said Tuesday it will stop selling a licorice vodka because it is too popular with teen-agers. "It's a lethal combination; the taste of licorice and strong spirits," said Dr. Pekka Karhunen at the University of Helsinki hospital. "Kids don't know what his them because they can't taste the alcohol." Salmiakikossu, with a 38 percent alcohol content, became Alko's third best-selling item after its launch in December. More than 15,000 bottles were sold weekly.

Cardinal meets with anti-Sandinistas

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Nicaragua's Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo met Tuesday with three armed anti-Sandinistas holed up in the Nicaraguan Embassy to persuade them to give up some 19 hostages and end their siege. The three men stormed the embassy Monday with AK-47 assault rifles and other arms. They hold Nicaraguan Ambassador Alfonso R. Belo and as many as 18 others, most of them embassy workers. There have been no reports of injuries. The hostage-takers' demands — already refused by the Managua government — include the firing of Sandinista leader Humberto Ortega, who heads the Nicaraguan army.

Islamic radicals proclaim allegiance

HAEKSTAP, Egypt — Forty-three Islamic radicals opened their terrorism trial Tuesday by professing allegiance to an extremist cleric who preaches at the mosque where a Palestinian suspected in the World Trade Center bombing worshipped. Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, a blind preacher who has been living in the United States in self-imposed exile for nearly three years, has denounced the bombing in New York, which killed five people and injured more than 1,000 on Feb. 26. His lawyer declined to comment on the defendants' statement. The statement read by a member of the fundamentalist Islamic Group did not refer to the Trade Center. But British Broadcasting Corp. said the group denied any involvement in the bombing in a fax received Monday in Cairo. The fax also threatened retaliation for the linking of Abdel-Rahman's name to the bombing probe. Abdel-Rahman has been acquitted three times by Egyptian courts of charges related to violence by radicals.

Yeltsin offers parliamentary foes deal

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin told his opponents Tuesday he was ready to cut a deal at the emergency session of Russia's parliament, but his chief rival warned that legislators might try to impeach him. On a day of constant maneuvering, hard-line lawmakers rejected Yeltsin's compromise proposals on power-sharing, setting up what the president conceded would be a "difficult" session of the Congress of People's Deputies. In December, the same body stripped him of his powers to carry out political and economic reforms without legislative approval.

U.S. forces brace for demonstrations

MOGADISHU, Somalia — U.S. troops built up their fortifications and set up new checkpoints Tuesday to guard against demonstrations aimed at disrupting a peace conference this week. On the three-month anniversary of the beginning of Operation Restore Hope, officials said Americans soldiers and Marines had been put on a "state of heightened awareness." Col. Fred Peck, the U.S. military spokesman, said there was concern that violence could erupt again in Mogadishu coinciding with the talks that begin Thursday in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Dairy robbery close to being solved

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent
and Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sheriff's investigators may be close to solving an armed robbery that happened at a Bull-area dairy two weeks ago.
One worker at the H and H Dairy southeast of Buhl was tied up, and another was held up at gunpoint by four men who took $220 from the two victims Feb. 25.
Detectives working on the case say they don't want to release information about possible suspects until their investigation is complete.

On Monday, however, a Jerome County prosecutor told a judge in court that a man being arraigned on a drunken driving charge will be charged in the dairy robbery.
James M. Fox, 24, Wendell, pleaded innocent to DUI in Jerome, and bond was set at $5,000.
During Fox's hearing, Deputy Prosecutor Frank Nichols said he had information from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office that Fox would be arraigned on charges of kidnapping, first-degree burglary and armed robbery.
Those charges were not filed Tuesday. On Monday, Senior Sgt. Bob Gauthier said the department planned to give a news release Tuesday.

But Sgt. Dan Mori said Tuesday that the investigation into the robbery had not been completed. More information may be released later in the week, he said.
The four men involved in the Feb. 25 robbery carried rifles and shotguns, according to Mori.
In Fox's court file, a report from the Idaho Motor Vehicle Department says Fox, Steve D. Lehmann, 29, and Stacey Lee Fox, 19, were "believed to be armed with a .44-caliber level action rifle and an assault rifle."
Lehmann was arrested Friday, and charged with driving without privileges, resisting arrest and other misdemeanors, according to Twin Falls County Sheriff's department records. He remained in the Twin Falls County jail Tuesday.

Idaho Power must buy Rosebud electricity

MOUNTAIN HOME — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has ordered Idaho Power Co. to negotiate an agreement to buy electricity from Rosebud Enterprises.
Rosebud wants to build a 40-megawatt electric generating plant, which would burn high-sulphur waste petroleum coke, near Mountain Home.
Rosebud wants to sell the power from the proposed plant to Idaho Power.
Under the Federal Public Utilities Regulatory Policy Act, utilities such as Idaho Power must buy power from small producers. The rats that the utility would pay for the power from plants producing more than 10 megawatts must be individually negotiated.
Rosebud complained to the commission that Idaho Power wasn't negotiating. The commission said it would not suspend Idaho Power's obligation to negotiate with Rosebud under the law.

Notifications of eligibility will be mailed April 1. The department is asking people who qualify to wait for notification and avoid calling or going to Job Service offices until April 5.

Hailey agrees to buy Fox building for cool million

Residents' taxes may go up to pay for it

By Bradley P. Blum
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The city of Hailey entered into an agreement to purchase the downtown Fox Building for $1 million Monday night, and local taxes may go up.
Officials have decided to look into a bond issue and also offset those costs with new rent from Friedman Airport.
The council voted unanimously to authorize Mayor R. Keith Roark to sign an agreement with Janet Brown to purchase the 15,000-square-foot building located on the corner of Main and Crox Streets in Hailey. City officials plan to move the Hailey Public Library into the lower level of the building.
The building currently houses Atkinson's Market in its lower level and the Blaine County office of the College of Southern Idaho and the Blaine County School District in its second story. Atkinson's is scheduled to move into its new quarters in the Alturas Plaza next month.
The building, which was constructed in 1920, had been listed for sale at a price of $1.6 million. Roark said in an interview with The Times-News on Tuesday that he believes the structure would be appraised at $1.6 million or higher.
"Obviously, it is well below market price," Roark said. "I think the public-mindedness of Janet Brown is chiefly responsible for that offer."
Roark said another reason for the low price was the city's willingness to continue offering space to CSI. Brown's late husband, Texas oilman Hughes Brown, was a strong supporter of the college and provided CSI with its current office space at no charge.

That rent-free agreement is scheduled to end this year, according to Roark, but he said that city officials have given Janet Brown and CSI director Jerry Beek what he termed "a moral commitment" to continue to offer it the space.
Roark said the city will not continue to provide the space for free to CSI and a price has not yet been negotiated, but, "We're not looking to make money on CSI."
Roark said that, rent negotiations will likely wait until after the city actually owns the building. The agreement signed Monday gives the city until Aug. 1 to come up with the purchase price.
City officials plan to bring a bond issue before voters to finance purchase of the Fox Building. Roark told council member Mary Ann Mix that he is cautiously hopeful that such a vote can be taken by June 1.
Before that vote is announced, however, Hailey officials would like to negotiate a new agreement with Blaine County for the operation of Friedman Memorial Airport, approximately 85 percent of which is located on city property. Ideally, Roark envisions revenues from airport operations paying at least a portion of the bond obligation.

Triumph residents fear being Superfund site

The Associated Press

BOISE — Some residents of the Blaine County community of Triumph urged the state and Board Tuesday to help save them from what one woman called the "nightmare" of becoming a Federal Superfund cleanup site.
"Please help us; please do everything that you can to right this terrible wrong," Blaine resident Wendy Collins said in emotional testimony Tuesday. "We need your help, and we need it now."
The Environmental Protection Agency has been studying the area around two large tailings piles near the defunct Triumph Mine, about six miles southeast of Ketchum, since June 1991. It determined after testing soil, water, air and sediment that the area is contaminated with such heavy metals as lead and arsenic from lead, silver and zinc mining that ended in 1957.
The agency's regional office in Seattle concluded in January that the potential environmental and health risks would be best addressed through the Superfund process. So it recommended that the area be added to the National Priorities List.
But some of Triumph's 80 residents contend the EPA is exaggerating the risks. And they say that as "potentially responsible parties" under the Superfund law, the cleanup could cost the state, the county, past and present mine owners and operators and private citizens more than $60 million.
"They cannot prove that we have a health risk," said Donna Rose of Concerned Citizens of Triumph. "Our community is prepared to block EPA bulldozers until they prove that we have a real health risk."

Gov. Cecil Andrus, chairman of the five-member Land Board, pledged to look into the situation and said he may call a rare special meeting of the Land Board to consider what the state can do to put off the EPA's action.
Andrus said he would first call the EPA's regional administrator and try to determine if the agency is willing to cooperate in resolving the problem.
Rose, Collins and other residents also urged the board to develop a less expensive mitigation plan, preferably to cover the tailings area with organic soil and plant native vegetation.
Kent Lavery of Boise, a shareholder in the company that owns the defunct Triumph mine, said he and other owners agree that the Superfund process is "a shipwreck."
"We're open to any mitigation plan that would best serve all the parties involved and would keep the site off the NPL," Lavery said.
Blaine County Commissioner Tom Blanchard said the most important step is winning a delay from the EPA in adding the Triumph site to the Superfund list. But he said so far, the federal agency has been unwilling.
"We're in a very short time frame here, and we're dealing with very few good facts," Blanchard said.

Companies plan cleanup of INEL aquifer hazard

The Times-News and Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — The paperwork is in place and two teams of companies will spend the next nine months studying ways to clean up the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's Pit 9 radioactive waste burial ground.
The cleanup could remove a source of potential contamination of the Snake River Plain Aquifer, the sole drinking and irrigation water supply for 200,000 people in southern Idaho.
The Federal Energy Department's main INEL contractor, EG&G Idaho Inc., has signed subcontracts with two companies to study Pit 9 as they compete for a cleanup job that could be worth more than $115 million.
The Pit 9 job will be the first step toward cleaning up buried transuranic waste — waste contaminated with plutonium — at the INEL's Radioactive Management Complex.
From 1967 to 1969, about 110,000 cubic feet of chemical and plutonium-contaminated waste — mostly from the Rocky Flats weapons plant in Colorado — were buried in the Pit 9. But it is only a fraction of the more than 2 million cubic feet of buried waste at the complex.
Organic solvents from that waste have been found in the Snake River Plain Aquifer in concentrations above the national drinking water standard. Traces of plutonium from the waste have been found 240 feet below the burial site.

The aquifer — 580 feet below the waste site — is the sole source of drinking and irrigation water for more than 200,000 people in southern Idaho.
The two subcontractors, Waste Environmental Services Inc. and Lockheed Corp., are putting their own money on the line in pursuit of the cleanup job. Each subcontractor is eligible to receive a $8 million fee from the Energy Department if their technologies pass the nine-month test, INEL spokesman John Walsh said.
The companies are studying cleanup techniques to remove radioactive and cancer-causing materials from the contaminated soil.
The techniques include physical separation — modified mining techniques — and chemical extraction to remove the contaminants.
After the tests end in December, the Energy Department will select a Pit 9 contractor in the spring of 1994. The contractor would then start building a test lab at Pit 9, where limited cleanup work might begin in 1995 or 1996.

Senate approves amendment to stop boundary fighting

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Idaho Legislature would no longer fight over the boundaries between counties, districts under a constitutional amendment approved Tuesday by the Senate.
Instead, a six-member panel would take on the task of "reapportionment" and reap legislative and congressional districts.
The idea, said amendment author Sen. Evan Frasure, R-Pocatello, is to remove incumbency and partisan politics from the reapportionment process as much as possible.
The amendment still must pass the House and be approved by Idaho voters.
District lines must be redrawn once a decade, after every U.S. census, to reflect shifts in population. In the past, the lines have frequently been drawn to favor one political party or the other and protect the seats of incumbent lawmakers.

The proposed constitutional amendment sets up a six-person reapportionment commission. "The House and Senate Republican and Democratic leaders and the chairmen of the state Republican and Democratic parties would each appoint a member."
They would have 90 days to file a reapportionment plan, which would have the force of law. Approval would take a two-thirds vote.

House mulls local-option tax caps

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Two years after repealing the 5 percent cap on property tax increases, the House Revenue and Taxation Committee is poised to consider a bill that would let voters reimpose the cap on a temporary, district-by-district basis.

The local-option cap is contained in a rewrite of the "Truth in Taxation" law, which was enacted in 1991 to replace the statewide 5 percent cap.

The Truth in Taxation rewrite would also repeal a provision added last year that triggers the law's advertising and hearing requirements when a taxing district proposes raising its levy by more than 5 percent. The State Tax Commission and district officials have said the provision is unworkable.

The proposed revision also simplifies the requirements for the newspaper ads, which districts have complained are confusing and especially for small districts include the cost of raising the tax cap would rise.

The Revenue and Taxation Committee will hold hearings on the rewrite as soon as this week, said Chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert.

Truth in Taxation requires taxing districts, from cities and counties to cemetery districts and mosquito abatement districts, to buy newspaper ads announcing proposed tax or budget increases and hold public hearings before adopting them.

As now written, the law kicks in when either a district's budget or its levy rate increases by more than 5 percent over the previous year.

The rewrite would add a section to Truth in Taxation allowing a district's voters to initiate a budget limitation election if they thought the district's budget was excessive.

Under the "local option relief" section, a district would estimate how many voters were qualified to vote in its elections. A petition signed by 20 percent of those qualified voters would initiate a budget limitation election.

By majority vote, voters could limit the district's budget to the most recently adopted amount and cap annual increases at 5 percent for the next five years.

Even though the Legislature is in the final weeks of its 1993 session, Antone said there's still enough time for the rewrite to get through the legislative process in both the House and Senate.

"We can run 'em through in a day if we have to," he said.

Pizza sales to benefit Raptor Club

By Bertina L. Redfern
Times News correspondent

BUHL — City council members granted a permit to Buhl High School Raptor Club members to do door to door selling pizzas.

The council also waived the $20 permit fee to help students raise enough funds to keep their raptor rehabilitation program alive.

The club's president, Travis Stickler, presented council members with a petition from the club Monday, asking for permission to solicit in town.

Stickler told board members the raptor rehabilitation program is in its second year and has managed to operate on $200 so far.

He said it can cost as much as $6 a day to feed a bird and that doesn't include medical costs.

Stickler said Clear Springs Trout Co. donates fish to feed osprey, but other kinds of food is required.

Students can earn $1 to $2 for each pizza sold. Sales will begin shortly and continue through April 15. Coupons for the pizza will be redeemable whenever presented.

In other business:

Council members adopted a resolution to permanently buy an easement from Union Pacific for $2,000. The city has leased the easement for many years from the railroad.

Union Pacific recently notified the city the annual fee would increase to $600 and offered a permanent easement for $6,000. Council members asked the attorney to negotiate the lower fee.

Council members adopted an ordinance altering the requirements for serving on the Planning and Zoning Commission. Now board member need only have lived in the county two years, instead of five.

The seven-member board consists of five persons living in the county and two from the city's impact area.

Mayor Ted Pence appointed Lillian Powell to be a member of the beautification committee and appointed Glen Powell as Powell's consultant. Pence said the beautification committee recommended the two to replace John O'Connor, who recently resigned.

A meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday to chose a construction firm for the City Hall.

Shoshone officials to return to City Hall

By Pat Voloshen
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone City Hall has undergone a lot of repairs since a Thanksgiving Day fire destroyed the building, and officials say they are moving in soon.

The building also was recently insulated and repaired with sheetrock, said city bookkeeper Mary Kay Bennett at a recent meeting.

"The only remaining work is the construction of a stud wall in the basement of the building to support the floor."

Police Chief Charles Cox reported two residential burglaries and vandalism at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds this month.

Both houses involved were unlocked, and Cox said organizing a "neighborhood watch" might be helpful in curtailing crime.

"You should lock your door even if returning to the store for just a minute," he warned. "Often crimes are perpetrated by someone who is aware of the habits of a certain resident and the days of leaving house and car unlocked are over."

"The appearance of a strange car in a neighborhood, even with Idaho plates, should linger in an area too long, should be reported to police."

Cox also reported that he and prosecuting attorney Jennifer Brown are working on the organization of a multi-jurisdictional task force to work with child abuse cases.

Cox also requested that the city consider annexation of property north of town and adjoining the city on Seventh Street. He said the area is receiving police and fire benefits, while residents aren't paying for them.

Barry Egan, representative from Summit Cable Co., responded to complaints about the city's cable system.

He explained that "the cable wire from North Butte into the city is completely worn out. Rather than attempting to repair the wire, Egan requested permission to install an antenna on the city water tank."

"I'd like to try it anyway, and it could be the answer to many of our reception problems," he said.

Egan explained that placement will not interfere with water tank maintenance and repair.

"It has been my plan and my hope to tie those two together," Roark said Tuesday, but added, "I believe the acquisition of the Fox Building is so advantageous to the city that we should proceed, no matter what."

The city is located to the Fox Building, city officials plan to relocate the police station to the city's building on Carbonate Street, eliminating about $10,000 per year currently being paid to rent the space.

Eventually, Roark said that the current City Hall and shop on Carbonate and River Streets should be sold.

A new shop to house the street and water and sewer departments would be built somewhere outside the downtown core, and the city's administrative offices would be moved to the offices in the Fox Building now occupied by the school district.

"We can move all the city administrative offices into the Fox Building, without displacing CSI," Roark said Tuesday. "Eventually, the school district would be displaced, but the displacement of the school district is probably many years off, and would depend as much on their needs as on the city's."

Reed, D-Cour d'Alene, also served on the interim commission. She called reappointment "a nightmare" and agreed that incumbency played too big a role in the process.

"The citizens of this state will be relieved to have this taken from our hands," Reed said.

The Senate vote was 26-9, two more than the two-thirds needed for constitutional amendments. Dean Cameron of Rupert, Denton Darrington of Basco, and Laird Nash, Republican senators who voted against the amendment.

"I have a very strong feeling that it's a legislative process, it's a legislative responsibility, and so works very well," Darrington said. The amendment now goes to the House, where it needs 47 votes to win a spot on the 1994 ballot.

The House rejected a Senate-passed reappointment commission bill last year, but this year's measure may have a better chance of passage. House Speaker Mike Simpson, R-Blackfoot, plans to co-sponsor it along with Rep. Pam Ahrens, R-Boise. Ahrens co-chaired the 1991 interim committee.

If the amendment passes the House, a majority of voters would have to approve it at the November 1994 general election before it would become part of the state Constitution.

CSI faces big-time scorer

Southern Union's Dillard averages 28.6 points per game

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When College of Southern Idaho Coach Fred Trenkle hears his Golden Eagles would open the national tournament against Southern Union, he immediately went to the national stats for some glimmering of that team's history.

The fourth thing he saw on the national scoring leader list was Al Dillard, Southern Union, who averages 28.6 points per game.

Since then, Trenkle has found out a lot more — like Southern Union, a 1,600-enrollment junior college in Wadley, Ala., had knocked off No. 4-ranked and undefeated Chattanooga, Ala., in the regional finals.

This will be Southern Union's first appearance since its only-other showing in Hutchinson in 1963.

From a preliminary look, Trenkle sees something of a repeat of the final battle that Dixie staged here last week.

They seem to like a small lineup with four quick people moving around the perimeter," said Trenkle.

That would be very much like Dixie's look after a couple of its tall people got in foul trouble last week.

"Dixie gave us some matchup problems with that lineup," Trenkle said. "I don't know if Southern Union has the same quickness. If they do, we will be facing the same problems."

Dillard evidently puts the ball in the air a lot. The 5'9 guard didn't become eligible until the second semester this season, playing in just 13 games. But he had 39 two-point buckets, 81 3-pointers and 51 free throws.

That's a lot of 3s," Trenkle said, "an average of over six a game. And the number of free throws indicate he must make some penetration moves."

Those teams will be tipping off at 6 p.m. (5 p.m. Mountain time) Tuesday. The winner will remain in the evening bracket with the loser continuing in daylight in the consolation portion.

In the second round, the Eagles will face either Arizona Western of Yuma or Vincennes, Ind.

CSI topped the Matadors in pre-conference action this year and also defeated Vincennes 84-81 for third place in last year's national playoffs.

CSI and Vincennes have met four times in the last six years with the Eagles losing only once.

Meanwhile, Jonathan Drew, KMYT sports reporter, said the purchase of TV rights by a national network could result in the local station carrying the semifinal and finals — if CSI is participating.

Drew noted that the national junior college association's fees and logistical costs had made it unfeasible to handle on a one-station basis. This way, the company can pick up the rights for a feed charge. He said announcement should come soon.

Ricks men's coach resigns

The Associated Press

REXBURG — Gary Gardner has stepped down after 12 seasons as coach of the Ricks College basketball program.

Steven D. Bennion, president of the Mormon Church-owned two-year school, said the search for a new coach would begin immediately.

On Monday, Gardner met with athletic director Glean Dalling and community services vice president Brent Kinghorn and offered to quit.

"We mutually agreed to have the men's basketball program undergo a coaching change at this time," Dalling said.

Gardner, who had a 240-140 record at Ricks, will remain on the college's physical education department faculty.

Seven of Gardner's 12 teams at Ricks won 20 or more games. In 1984, Ricks placed sixth nationally in junior college ranks. This year, Ricks compiled a 16-16 record and was eliminated in the first round of the regional journey.

Holmes jabs his way to win, improves ring record to 56-4

BAY ST. LOUIS, Miss. — Larry Holmes used a series of solid left jabs to open a severe cut above the left eye of Rocky Peppi, stopping the fight in the fifth round Tuesday night.

The bout was stopped at the beginning of the fifth as Peppi came out bleeding badly from above the left.

Holmes, who improved to 56-4, had used a solid jab in the closing seconds of the third round and Peppi, already with a bloody nose, went to the corner with a slight cut above the left eye.

In the fourth, Peppi backed the former heavyweight champion into the ropes and landed a flurry of quick shots to the body. Holmes backed out and taunted the 28-year-old Peppi before landing a series of jabs that led to the end of the fight.

‘Ryan’s Express’ begins final trek

46-year-old fireballer surrenders 2 runs, homer in 1st spring outing

The Associated Press

—PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — In the first game of his final spring training, Nolan Ryan was so-so.

He threw 79 pitches, Tuesday against the Minnesota Twins, allowing two runs and four hits in five innings, striking out three and walking two. He was the loser in the Texas Rangers' 3-0 defeat, allowing an RBI double to Brian Harper in the fourth and a home run to Scott Lewis in the fifth.

It was the last beginning of Ryan's career, perhaps a time for a nostalgic look back. But Ryan wasn't thinking about the final first start.

"It's also the last time I'll give up a home run in my first spring start," Ryan said. "But I don't think about anything being the last time I do something. I have to concentrate on what do, day-to-day. I haven't given much thought to this last spring. I'm too preoccupied with getting ready for the season."

Ryan's main concern is finishing his career with a healthy and productive season. There's not a thought about 1994 — even if he has a really big year.

"No, I won't come back," the 46-year-old interrupted even before the question was finished.

The reply was polite, but there was a tinge of weariness in his voice. He is at the center of baseball's spotlight this season, the only real national star and a fan favorite everywhere.

Fans hung on every pitch Tuesday. Ryan wants to make sure he goes out at a satisfactory level. After all, Hank Aaron hit .229 in his final year (1976) and Willie Stargell finished at .233 in his final season (1982).

"I hope it works that I don't have physical problems and I look back on my last year in the game and say I wished things had been different if I'd been healthy."

Spring training roundup - B6

Ryan said, "My No. 1 goal is to stay healthy all year."

Texas pitching coach Claude Osteen, who watched former Philadelphia great Steve Carlton struggle through his final seasons while rebounding from injury, Osteen went better for Ryan.

"That was frustrating for Lerly," Osteen said. "You can imagine the pride and drive and the adrenaline of a star pitcher, and then getting out there and being unable to perform. But in Nolan's case, this is probably going to be one of the most remarkable things that ever happened to pitching. He's going to go out as a power pitcher."

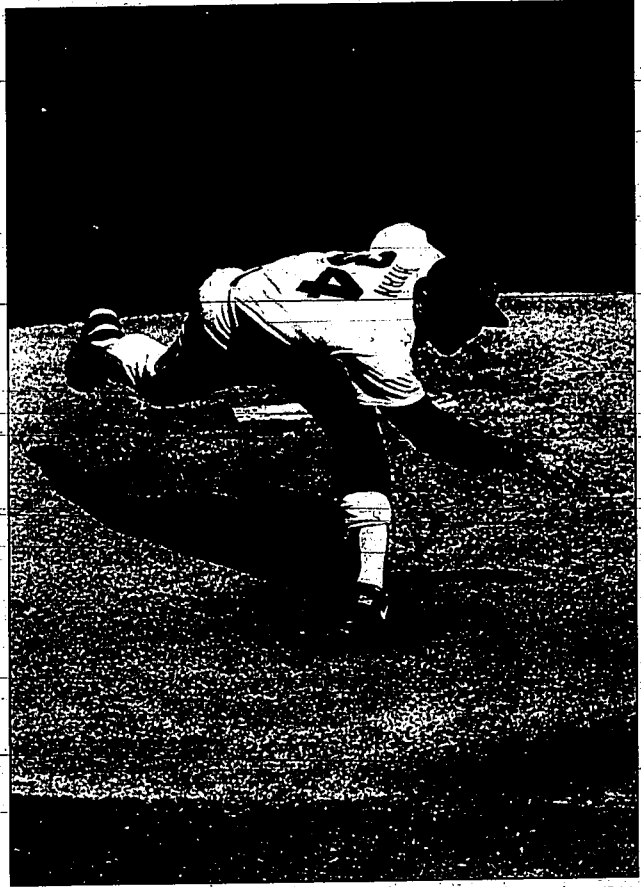

There are definitely some aspects of being the center of the baseball universe that Ryan won't miss next season when he'll be out of pro ball for the first time since Red Murff signed him for the New York Mets on June 26, 1965.

"It'll be the travel, leaving Seattle after a night game, getting into Dallas at 6 or 7 in the morning and you haven't been a day," Ryan said. "It's not having any freedom during the six, seven months the season is going on, rain delays and extra-inning games. Those are the things I'll miss the least."

Ryan rarely encounters a question he hasn't heard countless times.

That, too, will be something he won't miss next season, when he's driving a pickup over one of his ranches or tending business at one of his banks.

"There certainly will be an adjustment," he said. "The biggest thing is not being a member of the team, and the competitiveness, and not going to spring training and not being in the routine."

Nolan Ryan of the Texas Rangers delivers a pitch during his first spring-training outing of the year Tuesday against the Minnesota Twins in Port Charlotte, Fla.

Late free throw ices victory for Lakers

The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — James Worthy scored 28 points and A.C. Green's free throw with 33 seconds left broke a tie for Los Angeles against Detroit.

After Green hit 1 of 2 free throws for a 120-119 lead, Isiah Thomas turned the ball over, then fouled Vlade Divac with 18 seconds to go.

Divac also hit 1 of 2 free throws, and Terry Mills missed a layup that would have tied the score with five seconds to go. Divac got the rebound and was fouled, and his two free throws negated Thomas' last-second basket. Sedale Threatt had 27 points and 15 assists and Divac 25 points and 10 rebounds for the Pistons, while Mills had 24 points and Thomas 21 points and 13 assists.

It marked the third straight game in which the Rockies had trailed in the lead or tie.

Angels (ss) 2, Rockies (ss) 1

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Scott Sanderson allowed one hit in three innings, and Gary Gaetti went 3 for 3, hitting two doubles and driving in one run.

Sanderson is competing for one of two open spots in the Angels rotation. Gaetti, who lost his starting job at third base last June, faces a situation where he will back up starters at first and third base.

Exhibition games

Tom Glavine started for the Braves, and Steve Lincecum pitched two innings. The Mets scored five runs in the third off Randy St. Claire, two on Todd Hundley's double.

Tigers 6, Dodgers (ss) 3

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Kirk Gibson, trying to make a comeback with Detroit, hit his first home run in more than a year as the Tigers beat a Toronto Blue Jays split squad 6-3 Tuesday.

Gibson, who hadn't played since the Pittsburgh Pirates released him on May 5, was making his second start of the spring. He went 1 for 3 as a designated hitter Saturday against the Jays. He played left field against Toronto and made a nice catch in the third after a long run on a foul off the bat of Domingo Coleman.

Twins 3, Rangers 0

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Nolan Ryan jog in his first start of his final spring training, allowing two runs and four hits in five innings.

Ryan, 46, threw 79 pitches, striking out three and walking two. Brian Harper double home a run in the fourth and Scott Lewis homered leading off the fifth.

While Babbs pitched four perfect innings and was the winner for the Twins.

Blue Jays (ss) 9, Indians 5

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — Juan Guzman was tagged for four runs and seven hits in two innings, but the World Series champions rallied from a 4-0 deficit for their first victory in five games this spring.

Mets shortstop Tony Fernandez tags Braves baserunner Ollis Nixon at second base during exhibition baseball action Tuesday in West Palm Beach, Fla.

ROOKIE outfielder Robert Perez homered twice and drove in five runs. Roberto Alomar also homered for Toronto, hitting a two-run drive in the fourth when the Blue Jays (4-3) battled around shortstop rookie right-hander Paul Byrd.

Red Sox 5, Pirates 2

PORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Ivan Calderon, acquired in an off-season trade, hit his first spring homer, a two-run drive in the fifth off Rich Robertson, and single twice.

Calderon, who has a painful right shoulder that has limited him to designated hitting, is 6 for 13 this spring after being traded by Montreal.

Reds 3, Cardinals 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Jose Magrane, attempting to make a comeback from arm troubles, allowed one hit in three shutout innings for St. Louis.

Jose Rijo allowed two hits in four shutout innings for Cincinnati and struck out three. Reds manager Tony Perez said Rijo probably will pitch the season opener against Montreal on April 5.

Yankees 6, Expos 3

PORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Dion James had three hits and drove in three runs as New York increased its record to 5-0 and remained the only unbeaten team in the major leagues.

The Yankees haven't had a better spring start since 1962, when they won their first nine games. James, bidding for

Dodgers 10, Marlins (ss) 0

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tim Lincecum had three hits, including his first home run of the spring, and Orel Hershiser allowed two hits and struck out six in four shutout innings.

Kirk Gibson Attempting comeback

Gibson takes biggest challenge in stride

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Kirk Gibson is a batter. Some of his most significant hits have come under the most trying conditions.

Maybe it's a carryover from his football days. When the going gets tough — that sort of thing, whatever it is, Gibson is very much aware of it. In fact, he counts on it.

On Tuesday, just before his first home run in nearly a year, he was talking about his ability to battle and win against long odds. He recalled the memorable homer he hit off Dennis Eckersley, a shot that turned around the 1988 World Series for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I was overmatched," said Gibson, who limped around the bases that October night. "But I fought him. You'll see me do that a lot. I'll go 3-2 in the count a lot. Why go up there and swing, just because it's a strike? When I'm comfortable with two strikes, I'm a real good hitter."

Gibson, who will turn 36 on May 28, is facing perhaps the biggest challenge of his career.

He played only 16 games before the Pittsburgh Pirates released him in last May.

He said he would retire. But the Tigers lured him back into baseball just before the start of spring training. He signed a $500,000, one-year contract that could earn him an additional $600,000 if he meets several performance benchmarks.

Then camp opened and the real work began. It hasn't been easy. "I never is with aging body, especially after not playing in almost a year. He has played in only two of the Tigers' five exhibition games. But each time. He clearly had the old fire. Three hits, including a home run, in two and a half at-bats.

"It obviously feels good, especially the homer," Gibson said. "But the next at-bat was really the limousine. I have a tendency to let him hit after one hit."

But Gibson, who walked his first at-bat against the Blue Jays, followed his homer off rookie left-hander Huck Flenor with a line single off Rick Steig, raising Gibson's batting average to .600.

"That's not the best," Gibson said. "When I let him hit, I start to slide. Open. That last pitch, I went right down. That's what I've got to do to get that pitch. My hardest thing is to get the strike. I'm not a mechanical guy. I'm a strong guy."

He is, indeed.

Henderson: Don't bother playing me, just trade me

PHOENIX (AP) — Rickey Henderson, starting the final year of his four-year deal with the Oakland Athletics, is wasting no time stirring up controversy.

Baseball's premier leadoff man and center fielder says he wants a trade if contract negotiations don't start before opening day. But A's general manager Sandy Alderson hasn't worked that way in the past, and said Henderson won't be treated any differently.

"We have no plans to talk to anybody during spring training or the early part of the season," Alderson was quoted as saying in Tuesday's edition of the San Jose Mercury News. "It's similar to our stand last year."

Henderson, 34, will make $3 million in 1993, the final season of a $12 million, four-year pact. The deal contains a no-trade clause, but the outfielder is willing to make a trade.

"If they said, 'Rickey, do you want to be traded tomorrow?' I'd go play for anybody," he said. "Right now I feel better, because I feel free. I don't have any more of 'I'm going to be gone.'"

He arrived in camp in peak physical condition, ready to show he remains in the top echelon of players after two subpar seasons. Hampered by a hamstring injury last season and a calf problem in 1991, Henderson believes he would be better off elsewhere, saying he feels unappreciated by the A's and unappreciated.

"The last two, three years I haven't been happy," he said. "I think if I'm happy, I wouldn't get hurt at all."

Henderson, who will turn 35 during the height of the free agent season, maintains he just wants to be paid commensurate with his skills. At the time his contract was signed, he was only the second $3 million player. Now there are 99.

"It's impossible for me to look around the league and say, 'That ball player's better than me,'" he said. "I can play with any of them, top five (highest-paid players), whatever."

Niners deny report Montana is shopping

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers denied a report Tuesday that they have given permission to Joe Montana's agent to shop the 36-year-old quarterback around the NFL.

In a telephone conference call, club president Carmen Policy said the team hopes Montana "remains a 49er until the end of his career."

The San Francisco Chronicle reported Tuesday that Montana's agent, Peter Johnson, has been given permission to talk to other teams. "That is not the case," Policy said.

"We have been talking to the agent and we have been discussing various options and alternatives," Policy said from Youngstown, Ohio, where he is meeting with team owner Ed DeBartolo Jr.

He had no comment on another Chronicle report that said Johnson has asked NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue to void the remaining year on Montana's contract and make him a free agent.

Tagliabue issued a statement Tuesday that the league had been asked by Johnson's office to "interact with Montana's contract and found that the player 'has a valid contract for 1993.'"

"The rest is between Joe and his club," he said.

Policy said he hopes the matter of Montana's future with the team can be resolved by the end of the NFL owner meetings that begin March 21.

Judge rejects request for linebacker to move

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A federal judge rejected an appeal by Washington's Redskins linebacker Wilbur Marshall to have the franchise player-category dropped from the proposed settlement between the NFL and its players.

The court clerk said Judge David Doty wrote a letter to the attorneys informing them of his opinion. The clerk said the letter was "lodged in the court file Tuesday."

In a copy of the letter obtained by The Washington Post, Doty wrote that although he was denying the linebacker's request, Marshall was free to submit additional material to support his case before a hearing on April 16. That is when the total package will be approved or rejected by the judge.

Marshall was declared the Redskins' franchise player, which means he cannot become a free agent. Each team was allowed to protect one player under the terms of the agreement, which was given preliminary approval by Doty last month.

Doty said in the letter that he had sympathy for individual players such as Marshall, but he was focused on all players in the league. "...granting preliminary approval of the settlement is in the best interests of the class as a whole," Doty wrote, according to The Washington Post.

Five-time winner, challenger pace Iditarod field

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Jeff King and Rick Swenson paced the McGrath checkpoint Tuesday to lead the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race, with five mushers in pursuit.

Swenson, a five-time winner, was first into McGrath, followed 12 minutes later by King. But King was back on the trail in 23 minutes away, a few minutes before Swenson.

McGrath, a community of about 500 on the Kuskokwim River, is about 385 miles into the 1,100-mile race from Anchorage to Nome.

Dee Dee Jonrowe also was reported into McGrath, but she had to leave at 4:30 mid-afternoon Tuesday, the race's fourth day. Four others — Kathy Swenson, Vern Halter, Doug Swingley and Joe Runyan — were on the 48-mile stretch of trail between Nikolai and McGrath.

Defending champion Martin Buser and four-time winner Susan Blucher were among a group of mushers electing to take their mandatory 30-hour layover at Nikolai, 335 miles into the race. Buser is first to reach Nikolai at about 1 a.m. MST, nearly 2 hours ahead of Rick Swenson, Jonrowe and King.

Canadians lead world skating event

PRAGUE, Czech Republic (AP) — Canadians Isabelle Brasseur and Lloyd Eisler used a snappy routine to lead the pairs event Tuesday while Russians Maia Usoba and Alexandr Zhulin dominated ice dancing at the World Figure Skating Championships.

Brasseur and Eisler, bronze medalists last year at the Olympics and World Championships, scored marks of 5.7 to 5.9 in the technical program with the eight required elements worth one-third the total mark.

With red, white and black outfits, they skated to a combination of "Tequila" and "Summertime" highlighted by high double twist lift. It was accentuated when he put his arms at his side momentarily with her in the air.

"We've worked harder this year than ever and we're more ready than we have ever been in our last four years together," Eisler said.

is worth two-thirds of the scoring. "We are looking forward to the long," Eisler said. "We had a new program. We're feeling good about ourselves."

In the earlier ice dancing, Usoba and Zhulin scored mostly 5.8's and 5.9's for their presentations of the "Wesminster Waltz" and "Argentine Tango." The compulsory section counts 20 percent of the total score.

Russians Oksana Grischuk and Evgeny Platov were second, Another Russian duo, Angelika Krylova and Vladimir Fedorov, were tied for third with Finland's Susanna Rokhamo and Petri Kokko.

Usoba and Zhulin were second in the World Championships last year to Olympic gold medalists Marina Klimova and Sergei Ponomorenko, who have turned professional.

Besides the three Russian pairs in medal positions, skaters from the ex-Soviet Union took another three places in the top 10. Gershgorin Sur, a Russian defector who now competes for the U.S., was 11th with Renee Roca.

The competition continues with the original dance Thursday, when all couples dance to versions of the Viennese waltz rhythm.

The event concludes with the free dance Friday.

In other developments, the International Skating Union said it will consider the criticism stemming from the elimination rounds of the individual events. However, it said no changes could take place before 1995.

The group also said it has received reinstatement applications from the Olympic pairs champions of 1988 and 1992. The two teams hope to compete at the 1994 Winter Games.

Russian Ekaterina Gordeyeva and Sergei Grinkov won the gold medal in Albertville.

New ISU regulations allow a one-time option for regaining Olympic eligibility, and a number of top skaters are considering a return to challenge the current title-holders.

Food facts

Egg classification determined by weight

What's the difference between a dozen "large" eggs and a dozen "medium" eggs? Weight, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. A dozen jumbo eggs must weigh a minimum of 30 ounces; a dozen extra large eggs, at least 27 ounces; large, 24 ounces; medium, 21 ounces; small, 18 ounces; and "peewees," 15 ounces per dozen.

By the way, when a cookbook calls for eggs, it normally means large eggs. It's sort of a cookbook writer's standard. But unless you're preparing something like a cake, which requires precise measurements, it doesn't usually matter if you swap medium for large in a recipe.

Banana bread can be made easily with new cereal

For those who love banana bread but do not want to crawl out of bed and bake it, Post has created Banana Nut Crunch. The new cereal is made with bits of real banana baked into clusters of rolled oats and mixed in with whole-wheat flakes and chopped walnuts.

The first thing you'll notice when you open the package is the distinct smell of bananas. Banana Nut Crunch is sold in supermarkets in 15.5-ounce boxes for about $3.

Teen-agers eligible to take part in recipe contest

Teen-agers have an opportunity to build a nest egg of up to $2,000 with the Turkey Lover's Recipe Contest.

Sponsored by the National Turkey Federation, the contest calls for original recipes for appetizers, salads, entrees, sandwiches or snacks. Anything is eligible as long as the recipe contains at least 1 pound of fresh or fully cooked turkey and serves four to eight people. Judging will be based on taste, originality, appearance, appeal and simplicity.

Besides the $2,000 grand prize, awards of $1,000, $750, $500 and $250 will be given. Anyone 12 to 18 is eligible to enter. Recipes must be received by April 1. Type or print your recipe on a plain sheet of 8 1/2-by-11-inch paper.

Include your name, address, telephone number, age and name of school. You can enter as many recipes as you like, but each must be on a separate piece of paper.

Winners will be notified by May 15. Send your recipe to Turkey Lover's Recipe Contest, National Turkey Federation, 11319 Sunset Hills Road, Reston, Va., 22090-5227. If you have any questions, call 1-703-435-7209.

These tips might be lifesavers when it comes to eating meat

Once again, let's run through hamburger safety in light of the outbreak of food poisoning among customers of a Washington Jack-in-the-Box restaurant.

- Don't eat raw or rare hamburger.
- Cook hamburger until it is at least medium well-done, until its internal temperature hits 160 degrees and its juices run clear, about 7 to 8 minutes.
- Defrost ground beef in the refrigerator, not on a counter.
- If you defrost ground beef in the microwave, use it immediately.
- Use refrigerated ground beef within two days.

Do not refreeze defrosted raw ground beef.

Wash your hands thoroughly after handling raw ground beef.

Cook ground beef without interruption; partial cooking can encourage bacteria.

And, by the way, can you pass the ketchup?

What you call certain items reveals how old you are

The words you use to describe food can date you.

"Spaghetti, noodles" and "macaroni" are terms used by middle-aged people who can't hear the word "pasta" without thinking of how Jackie Gleason used to say, "pasta fazooloo." Reader's Digest reports.

Also, according to "Dickson's Word Treasury," "iceboxes" became "refrigerators" and now, says one leading manufacturer, they are "food-storage systems."

St. Patrick's Day delights

Irish holiday is good excuse to say goodbye to winter

Non-fat vanilla yogurt is one of the main ingredients in Irish Delight. But don't forget the Heath Bits.

The wearing of the green is upon us. Our mid-winter excuse for merriment comes on March 17 and not a minute too soon. Irish or not, it's a cause for celebration or, at the very least, a relief from those gray days of winter and the promised hint of spring.

Coming at mid-week, your St. Paddy's menu might be just a home style menu with simple recipes that will warm the heart, fill the stomach and offer an opportunity for conversation about this holiday and the legend that inspired it.

This dessert is light in taste and low in fat. The potato topping on the Shepherd's Pie could lead to a discussion on the history of Ireland and the reason so many sons of the "wild sod" immigrated to America. Or you might want to mention all the statesmen, entertainers and writers who claim Irish heritage. You might amuse your children by talking about U-2 even though your personal preference might run to such golden oldies as Dennis Day, Gene Kelly or Bing Crosby. ## Beetles crawl into Aztec cuisine

By Isaac A. Levi
The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY - Aztec food is sweeping modern Mexico — not just the always popular wild duck, boar and crayfish, but corn fungus, fried honey ants and beetles, and the broiled tails and raw eggs of iguanas.

Both toy restaurants and seedy dives offer such dishes, at consistently high prices.

The headwaiter at Bellinghausen in the capital's fashionable Pink Zone, who calls himself Don Celso, said the trend began about 20 years ago. His establishment sells a plate of fried maguety-cactus worms with guacamole sauce for $31.

Why do people eat such things? "Supposedly it contains many vitamins, supposedly this or that," Don Celso said, "and above all, it's supposed to be a powerful aphrodisiac. It's a lot of nonsense."

At his four luxury restaurants, Nick

Noyes serves refined varieties of such Aztec staples as squash-flowers and a black, slightly gooey corn fungus called cuitlacoche (weat-la-KOH-chay).

His flagship, Delmonico's, serves both in crepes, as soups or fried with garlic and onions, folded into corn tortillas.

Noyes, a 61-year-old native of Chicago, said he was proud to have invented Mexican caviar — unshated ant eggs dropped into boiling water for a few seconds, then broiled lightly and served like caviar.

"It has a very delicate flavor," but Mexicans "usually spoil it by frying it bathed in chopped garlic," he added.

A dozen lesser eateries near downtown Mexico City have taken Aztec dishes.

One is Don Chon's, near the huge La Merced wholesale market. The chef for 28 years, Fortino Rojas, is a portly man in a food-stained apron who specializes in the cuisine of the outgroups.

In an ambience of cheap cutlery, paper napkins and beer in the bottle, he winked and said: "We serve everything. Like the ancient Aztecs, in Mexico, nothing is wasted — cat, dog, anything."

Don Chon's menu includes maguety-flower cakes in tomato sauce, stewed-of chrysanthemums or rose petals, armadillo, buffalo and lion steaks. Prices average about $16 a plate.

"The lion? Why it's imported from Africa," Rojas said, winking again.

"Don't believe him," said one of the four women who helps him in the kitchen. "It's mountain lion, a puma."

Aztecs did not have chicken, beef, mutton, pork or goat until the Spaniards brought them 500 years ago, but never lacked for protein. Their diet was balanced and rich in fiber, consisting of about 65 percent complex carbohydrates, 20 percent protein and the remainder fat and oil.

Native and European styles combined over the centuries to produce a tasty, sometimes fiery cuisine unique to Mexico.

Snack-happy Americans demand 'mini' munchies

By Elaine Tait Knight-Ridder News Service

No, it isn't your imagination.

Like Alice in Wonderland, your take-home pay and the kids in the popular film, many of the foods in your supermarket really are shrinking.

The list of snacks available in mini sizes already includes Ritz crackers, Saltines, bagels, pita breads, brownies, muffins and doughnuts. We now have Oreos no bigger than a coin, burgers that fit in the palm of your hand and ice cream treats the size of bonbons.

And more minis are on the way.

Dr. Neal Satten, director of the Eating Disorders Program of the Institute of Pennsylvania-Hospital, thinks the first mini-muncher-makers may have been inspired by market research that suggested that smaller sizes of food work in demand.

"Others probably saw the success and said, 'Good idea; let's adapt it to what we make.'"

Shrinking the size of tempting, often high-calorie foods is one way of increasing a product's share of the market, said Satten, who is studying the business of eating at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Commerce and Finance.

While the smaller sizes seem just another fad to you or me, to Satten, they make sense.

"They offer people choices that, depending on their own inner strengths or weaknesses, may be helpful," he said.

Many modern Americans are entrenched in what Satten calls "a mentality of absolutes": We consider certain foods - doughnuts, for example - to be absolutely forbidden to a dieter.

"That's outdated," said Satten. Current thinking on dieting for weight loss runs to moderation. "No food is forbidden, he noted. "Every food is available, especially in moderation."

Here's where a mini-doughnut could be just the ticket.

"Mini foods are particularly helpful for people who have reasonably good impulse control," said Satten. "They're an escape from portions that are often too large."

Minis, made from the same formulas as the originals, are proportionately - and predictably - lower in calories than the originals. A mini-doughnut (Hostess Breakfast Bake Shop) takes a modest 60-calorie bite out of a dieter's daily caloric allowance, whereas a full-size member of the same baker's doughnut family is 190 calories - more than three times the mini.

If 'loosemeat' is what you want, ask Roseanne, Tom where to go

By Chris Christensen Knight-Ridder News Service

We may finally have gotten to the bottom of this "loosemeat" mystery. A while back, I wrote about Roseanne of sitcom fame opening a "loosemeat" sandwich shop on the show and what a great gig it was. Then I discovered there really is a loosemeat sandwich, and the laugh was on me.

So I asked Iowa natives to share their "dearest loosemeat memories" - and did they ever.

While their cards and letters continued to stream in, I did a little research of my own. I found that in a little town in Iowa, a real-life "loosemeat" sandwich shop on the show and what a great gig it was. Then I discovered there really is a loosemeat sandwich, and the laugh was on me.

"After the shows about loosemeat were filmed, I happened to jokingly mention to my brother that a sandwich shop in Eldon was going to close and that they ought to open a real-life loosemeat shop there," Chris Arnold said in a phone interview from Eldon. "And to my surprise, they both said, 'Hey, that's a great idea!'"

Roseanne 'n' Tom's Big Food Diner was born.

Thinking this might be the end to my long search for the "real" loosemeat recipe, I asked Chris just exactly what goes into this, well, unique-sounding sandwich.

"Uh, well, I don't really know," he said. "This is all very new to me and I don't know the first thing about the cooking end of it."

What he did know, though, is that to him, loosemeat "no relation to the sloppy joe, which traditionally calls for ground beef held together with ketchup and other gooey additions."

"This stuff hangs loose and crumbles all over the place," he said.

the sandwiches - and everyone knew how good they were.

"The building was always red and white, and several stands started up, from Davenport to Bettendorf, and on into Illinois. The sandwich was wrapped in white wax paper with a red-and-white MAID-RITE in the center.

"My sister and a good friend of mine worked there. There were two Maid-Rite stands in Muscatine. The meat was put into a large steam table - raw - and then a secret brown liquid was poured over it. It then was simmered till the meat was brown. "The sandwich came on a large round bun, served with yellow mustard, sliced dill pickles and onions. They were 10 cents each in 1939, and you ordered them with cold, frosty mugs of A-W draft root beer. Every-one asked for a root beer and a Maid-Rite."

Brunson says she still makes the sandwiches at home and freezes them. In a follow-up phone interview, she described how she came upon the recipe she uses today.

"My guess on the brown liquid, or 'secret sauce,' is that it's brown onion soup," she said. "The other secret is that you do not brown the meat first. It is mixed with the soup in the raw state so it soaks up more of the flavor."

Brunson is so hooked on the sandwiches that from 1959 to 1975 she sold them in a doughnut shop she owned in San Pedro.

"I knew I had the recipe down when a truck driver came in one day and said, 'Hey, you know these sandwiches taste just like the Maid-Rites back in Iowa,'" Brunson said.

"We sold them under the name 'scrumburgers' because you had to scramble the Maid-Rite name.

They were good, but they never caught on here like they did back home. Californians would see the loose meat and think it was taco filling," she said.

King Edgar creator of weekends

Come Saturday night, meditate for the nonce on Saxon King Edgar, enthroned at age 15 as the King of England in the late A.D. 950s.

He promptly ordered no work be done from Saturday noon to Monday dawn, and thus invented the secular weekend.

Good boy, Edgar.

You're not going to convince anybody of this in today's lingering cold, I know, but the weather, always easier, travels faster in the winter than in the summer.

Savory Mexican Lenten dishes emphasize flavor

By Marilyn Marter
Knight-Ridder News Service

Lent is a time of abstinence from meats, sweets and other favorite foods. But even in abstinence, you need to give upflavor.

No matter the season, in Mexico lent is banned. During Lent, simply follow the lead of Mexican cooks for whom the cycles of religious fasting and feasting are a way of life.

In a culture that is 98 percent Catholic, the other 2 percent tend to go along with tradition, said David Suro. Some of those traditions he continues at his restaurant, Tequila, in Philadelphia.

"I am part of the 2 percent," said Suro, "but my grandmother and mother used to cook dishes related to Lent just because they were such wonderful dishes for the season."

Most prepare for the solemn and meatless days ahead by overindulging during the days of feasting and fiestas that lead up to the "Cuaremas," or "40 days," as the Lenten period is known in Mexico. Lent began Ash Wednesday, Feb. 24, with the burning of the preceding year's palm leaves and the marking of ash crosses on the foreheads of the faithful. It concludes Easter Sunday, April 11.

Through Lent, the faithful refuse meat on Fridays and abstain from "It altogether" during Holy Week. Many also refrain from other favorite foods or personal pleasures.

Generations of adaptable Mexican cooks have taken the limitations of Lent as a challenge, as an incentive to create a meatless culinary delights such as wild mushrooms roasted with garlic, tiny pickled quail eggs, cheese-stuffed chili peppers and flaky turnovers filled with young spinach, egg custard and shredded cheese.

They make good use of Mexico's abundant seafood.

"With over 3,000 miles of seacoast, in many areas of Mexico the most typical food is seafood. But people in the United States are not very familiar with the seafood dishes of Mexico," said Suro.

Red snapper is perhaps the most popular fish in Mexico, going back to the time of the Aztecs.

In a favorite during Lent, Suro's said, lettuce de camarones, little shrimp cakes or croquettes made from finely ground, dried shrimp and egg batter and served with a tomato and chili pepper sauce.

Mexican cookbook author Patricia Quintana also has strong childhood memories of Lenten foods.

Quintana, a caterer and cooking teacher in Mexico City and a regular at Tequila on her occasional visits to Philadelphia, often spent Lent at the home of her Aunt Elena in a inland state of Queretaro.

"All of our long drive to Queretaro, Aunt Elena always rewarded us with delicate crepes tucked around pale yellow squash blossoms, chili poblano and sweet corn," recalled Quintana in an article she wrote about Lent.

"But the real treat for us, children after long hours at church was her capitada, a dish reminiscent of French toast, which we soaked with spiced syrup and showered with raisins, nuts, and fresh wild cherries."

It was foods such as these that characterized Lent for both Quintana and Suro.

This Lenten specialty, used as a snack or appetizer, should be prepared at least a day ahead for the flavors to meld. Keep it refrigerated.

PICKLED EGGS

(Huevos en Escabeche)

12 small chicken eggs or 40 quail eggs
1/2 cup olive oil
8 cloves garlic, peeled
4 medium onions, thinly sliced
5 bay leaves
2 sprigs fresh thyme or 1/2 teaspoons dried
2 sprigs fresh marjoram or 1/2 teaspoons dried

1 teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon ground allspice
Salt to taste
4 1/2 cups white vinegar, reduced to 3 cups by boiling
9 carrots, peeled, sliced diagonally and cooked tender in water with 1/2 teaspoons each of salt and sugar

Prepare the eggs by boiling in water to cover. Allow about 12 minutes for chicken eggs or 6 minutes for quail eggs. Drain and cover with iced water. Let stand 20 minutes. Drain. Peel eggs and set aside.

Prepare the pickling sauce: Heat oil in medium saucepan over medium heat. Brown the garlic, about 2 minutes. Remove and discard four of the cloves. Puree remaining four garlic cloves and return to saucepan. Add onions, bay leaves, thyme, marjoram, pepper, allspice and salt. Reduce vinegar, Reduce heat and simmer about 25 minutes. Taste and adjust seasonings. Add the reserved peeled eggs and the cooked carrots and cook 10 minutes more.

Let cool and store eggs in the pickling liquid in a covered container in refrigerator for at least eight hours. To serve, remove eggs and carrots with slotted spoon and arrange on serving platter. Pass pickling liquid on the side. Makes 12 servings, depending on type of egg used.

In Oaxaca, cooks prepare sweet pastry turnovers, empanadas de corpus, on Palm Sunday. The dough, made in a classic method, produces a flaky pastry that is equally good for savory pies.

LENTEN TURNOVERS

(Empanadas de Corpus)

For the dough:
1 pound all-purpose flour (3 1/2 cups), approximately 12 ounces (3 sticks) butter (1 stick at room temperature; 2 sticks well chilled)

For the filling:
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup ice water
2 cups sugar
6 egg yolks
1/3 cup cornstarch
3 cups warm milk
2 cinnamon sticks or vanilla beans (6-inch)

For the garnish:
2 egg yolks, beaten
1/3 cup milk or heavy cream
1 cup sugar

To prepare dough, place flour on flat surface. Form well in center and add egg yolks and one stick of room-temperature butter. Knead ingredients together, add salt, then gradually work in ice water. Knead by hand or with processor bread attachment until dough is shiny, elastic and not sticky. Roll out dough, sprinkling with additional flour if necessary, and shape into rectangle or square about 1/2 to 1 inch thick. Place the two sticks of chilled butter in center of rectangle and cut into fourths with rolling pin to cover entire one-third of dough. Fold top third of dough downward over butter, then fold bottom third upward, overlapping top third in a letter-style tri-fold. Repeat from sides, folding the left side inward, then the right side over to form a compact rectangle totaling nine layers of dough.

Roll out dough slightly to press layers together. Wrap in plastic wrap and chill 17 hours. Remove from refrigerator. Roll out dough to 1/2-inch thickness. Roll out dough on floured surface to 2/3-inch thickness and cut into 3-inch rounds.

To prepare filling, combine egg yolks and sugar in saucepan and whisk over low heat until mixture is a pale yellow color. Add cornstarch, warm milk and cinnamon. Simmer until mixture thickens, about 20 minutes, stirring constantly. Discard cinnamon sticks. Remove from heat and let cool.

To assemble, place one tablespoon of filling on one side of each dough round and fold over. Pinch edges to seal. Beat together egg yolks and milk. Brush turnovers with beaten egg-milk mixture. Sprinkle with sugar. Place on ungreased baking sheet.

Refrigerate assembled turnovers 15 minutes before baking. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until golden. Serve hot or at room temperature. Makes eight servings.

If it's St. Patrick's Day, it must be time for something with cabbage

By Marilyn Marter
Knight-Ridder News Service

With St. Patrick's Day fast approaching, the recipe requests in Hartstown, Pa., should have widespread appeal among our readers.

While ham and cabbage most often call to mind the Irish holiday, this combination can bridge both the Chinese-New Year and St. Patrick's Day. Depending on the cook's ingredient choices, the recipe has subtle to generous overtones of Chinese cuisine in the preparation.

You can use just about any kind of good ham, and either regular or Chinese cabbage. The stronger the ham, the less you need. The finished dish should taste balanced, rich and substantial, but not meaty.

SWEET-AND-SOUR CABBAGE WITH HAM AND PEACANS

Serves 12

1-1/3 cups sliced prosciutto, Smithfield or Westphalian ham, or 2 1/2 cups very mild ham cut up fat matchsticks
6 cups 4-inch shredded green cabbage, or

7 cups 4-inch slices Chinese cabbage
1 tablespoon ginger, freshly grated
2 to 2 1/2 teaspoons garlic, grated
2 1/2 cups chicken broth
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/2 cup sherry or sweet rice wine
1/4 cup ketchup
3 tablespoons mild vinegar
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1/2 cup mild vegetable oil
1/2 cup whole, shelled pecans

Assemble and prepare ham, cabbage, ginger and garlic. Set aside.

In a small bowl, slowly stir chicken broth in a cornstarch. Add sherry, ketchup, vinegar, brown sugar and soy. Set aside.

In a large wok or skillet, heat oil to 360 degrees. Add pecans and fry for two minutes; or until they are toasted dark gold. Drain pecans on absorbent paper, and pour off but the drippings of the oil.

Over medium-high heat, saute garlic and ginger, stirring, for about a minute. When aroma develops, add ham and fry one minute more. Add cabbage, a handful at a time. Turn the heat to high and cook, stirring, until cabbage turns bright green and begins to wilt — about four minutes. Stir sauce mixture to combine and add to cabbage. Cook, stirring, until cabbage is cooked tender-crisp and the sauce has thickened, from two to five minutes more. Cooking time will depend on pan size, cooking temperature and the cabbage itself. Serve immediately, garnished with fried pecans.

There's more than one way to slice a cabbage. And many more recipes that take advantage of this very nutritious and healthful cruciferous vegetable.

Let us tempt you with this much-updated, sauerkraut-moistened chocolate cake. The recipe — a sort of mecha, chocolate chip version of the classic — is adapted from Maida Heatter's "Book of Great American Desserts."

CHOCOLATE-SAUERKRAT CAKE

Serves 8 to 10

1/2 cup sauerkraut, firmly packed
2 1/2 cups flour
Pinch of salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
Pinch of clove
1/2 cup Dutch process cocoa powder
11 tablespoons (1 stick plus 3 tablespoons) unsalted butter
1/2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
3 large or extra-large eggs
1 cup cold, strong coffee, brewed or instant
1 pound semisweet chocolate morsels
1 cup sour cream
2 teaspoons light cream syrup

Place sauerkraut in a large bowl; cover with cold water and mix to moisten fully. Drain and squeeze lightly to release most but not all of the moisture in the sauerkraut. Chop sauerkraut fine in a food processor or with a large knife chopping blade. Set aside. Sift flour with salt, baking soda, baking powder, cinnamon, ginger, clove and cocoa. Set aside. Heat oven to 350 degrees.

In large mixer bowl, beat butter until soft. Beat in sugar and vanilla until fluffy and light, scraping sides of bowl as needed. Add eggs, one at a time, beating at high speed for one minute after each.

Mix in reserved flour mixture in three additions, alternating with coffee in two additions. Beat just enough to make a smooth batter. Remove from mixer and fold in sauerkraut. Turn batter into two 9-inch cake pans that have been greased, lined with butter, papered or wax paper, and dusted lightly with flour.

Level tops with a rubber spatula. Bake at 350 for 30 minutes or until cake tops just spring back when lightly touched. Do not overbake. Cool in pans on a rack for 10 minutes. Invert onto another rack, remove pans and papers. Return to upright rack to cool completely. To make icing, melt chocolate bits in top of a double boiler over simmering water until chips are completely melted. Remove from heat. Whisk in sour cream and cream syrup. Stir until smooth and lightly thickened.

Place one layer of the cake on a serving plate. Spread an even layer of icing over top. Place second layer on top. Ice sides and top of cake with an even coat of icing. Let set. If icing becomes too firm to spread, warm it slightly over hot water in the top of a double boiler, and whisk just until smooth. Slice cake with a knife dipped into hot water to keep cake from sticking to blade.

Let's do lunch sometime, but when we do, the lunch will be in the bag

By Pat Dalley
Chicago Tribune

Packing a lunch for work or school can be a challenge.

A steady stream of sandwiches becomes tedious and frozen microwave entrees can be a hassle. Many people still resort to brown bag lunches several times a week as a respite from fast-food or costly restaurant visits.

And it is easier to control the nutritional quality of foods that you assemble at home.

Here are three unconventional recipes that you won't often find in brown bags. But they fill the requirements: They're easy to make, they pack well and they're simple to heat in a microwave oven. As an alternate, the chili can be sealed in a vacuum bottle so it stays hot for at least 4 hours. The salad, of course, is eaten chilled.

CHICKEN CHILI

Preparation time: 10 minutes
Cooking time: 20 minutes
Yield: 5 cups

2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1 small onion, chopped
1 can (10 ounces) diced tomatoes with chilies
1 can (16 ounces) ranch-style beans, see note
1 can (16 ounces) pinto beans, rinsed, drained
1 teaspoon each: ground cumin, chili powder

2 cups leftover cooked chicken
1 tomato, seeded, diced
1/2 cup chopped fresh cilantro
1. Heat oil in a large saucepan. Add onion and cook gently until soft, 4 to 5 minutes.
2. Add diced tomatoes, ranch-style beans, pinto beans, cumin and chili powder. Heat to a boil and simmer, uncovered, 5 minutes. Add chicken and tomato; simmer 5 minutes. Remove from heat and stir in cilantro. Note: Ranch-style beans are pinto beans that are cooked with Mexican chorizo-sausage and seasonings. They are available in most supermarkets.

This can be served in lettuce cups, hollowed out tomatoes or toast as an open-faced sandwich.

TUNA AND WHITE BEAN SALAD

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Yield: 3 to 4 servings

1 can (15 ounces) white or Great Northern beans, rinsed, drained
1 can (6 1/2 ounces) solid white tuna

in water, drained
2 green onions, sliced
1 tomato, cored, seeded, diced
2 tablespoons each: mayonnaise, yogurt
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
1/2 teaspoon each: dried sage, dried basil

Salt, black pepper, crushed red pepper flakes to taste
Combine all ingredients and mix gently. Keep chilled until serving time.

Happy Meal to contain nutritional information

By Steven Pratt
Chicago Tribune

By giving out plastic toys that represent different food groups with its kid-size Happy Meals, McDonald's is teaming up with the nutritional good guys during March, National Nutrition Month.

Geared to children up to 8 years old, the program is supported by the American Dietetic Association, which wrote the pamphlet on nutrition that accompanies the toys. Because McDonald's is the world's largest fast-food chain, millions of children pass through the Golden Arches and will be exposed to some simple messages about nutrition.

ADA's National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics based in Chicago.

"For kids, it means that each time they order a Happy Meal — which consists of a hamburger, cheeseburger or Chicken McNuggets, fries and a soft drink or low-fat milk — they will get a toy that represents one of the food choices in the Department of Agriculture's Food Guide Pyramid.

There's a Willie, a can of low-fat milk; Stiggo, a T-bone steak; Rubby, an apple; Dunkan, an ear of corn; and Ouis, a slice of bread. The toys' legs and arms unfold from the toys, transforming them into food items. Also inside each toy is a tiny pad of colored paper on which children can record how many times they eat a food from that food group.

Included in the toy package is a pamphlet in some riddles and word games associated with the food groups. For parents the pamphlet has a few words about nutritional values of certain foods such as milk or vegetables or fruits as well as on how to get more nutrition information or to find a registered dietitian by calling the toll-free number for the National Center for Nutrition and Dietetics 800-366-1655.

The Happy Meals themselves aren't particularly health-oriented. They consist of a choice of a hamburger, cheeseburger or Chicken McNuggets with fries and a choice of soft drink or one-percent milk. But though they have few vitamins and little fiber, they aren't particularly high in fat. They represent a little more than one-third of the maximum fat recommended for a 2,000-calorie diet, the average caloric intake for an 8-year-old.

Schwartz says that the ADA does not endorse the Happy Meals themselves or any McDonald's products, but is using them to reach out to thousands of young people.

"The value far outweighs any implied endorsement," she explains. "We are trying to capture their attention and to convey the simple message that food and nutrition can be fun."

"It is true that to obtain the toys you have to make a purchase, but at worst, to get a full set of toys you need eat at McDonald's four times during the month," Schwartz says. "And four Happy Meals in a month are not enough to ruin a child's nutrition."

If it is our concept that all foods can be part of a good diet."

cooking, including classics by Diana Kennedy, the widow of New York Times correspondent Paul Kennedy.

Turtle soup and raw turtle eggs were popular until recently, when President Carlos Salinas de Gortari made it a felony to hunt or sell turtles and their eggs because the species is threatened.

Present-day staples include dozens of varieties of cactus, beans and peppers.

The queen of Mexican cacti is the nopal, whose fruit is the prickly pear. The leaves are grilled whole with a touch of safflower oil or cut in squares, boiled and made into a salad with onion, garlic, chopped tomato and coriander.

Villagers in southern Mexico favor brailed maguay worms, ant-eater avocado flies, for market; but will not eat pork. They consider the pig, which they sometimes fatten on mangoes, to be a dirty animal.

Home/gardening

Jerome Lenoir of Oakland, Calif., applies plywood over a cripple wall to strengthen a home in the Bay Area to brace it for a possible earthquake.

Precautions protect homes from earthquake damage

By James O. Clifford
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A homeowner can do a lot to prepare for the "Big One" — that powerful earthquake that can send your house sliding off its foundations and right on top of whoever's inside.

And although California is usually thought of as the earthquake capital of the U.S., experts say quakes can happen almost anywhere.

These experts say you are talking nuts and bolts when it comes to getting an older home ready to stand up to a major quake.

Stand up is right. For instance, more than 23,000 homes were damaged in the Loma Prieta quake that rattled the San Francisco Bay area in October, 1989. Many were knocked off their foundations and turned into crumpled piles of what looked like oversize match sticks.

Much of the damage came either because the house wasn't bolted to the foundation or because of inadequately braced cripple walls, according to the Bay Area Regional Earthquake Preparedness Project.

One expert is Jerome Lenoir, who runs an Oakland, Calif., company appropriately called "Quake Busters." He crawls under older homes, strengthening them by bolting the foundation and buttressing the cripple wall — the short wall between the foundation and the floor.

Cost to do the job right usually ranges between $2,000 and $6,000, says Lenoir, who founded the company in 1983 and now employs six people.

"That cripple wall is really important," says Lenoir, who puts plywood over the wall to form what is called a shear wall.

Whether the home is old or new, Quake Busters can do a lot more, including strapping water heaters and reinforcing chimneys. But, says Lenoir, the foundation and cripple wall head-the-hill.

Start growing peppers and tomatoes inside

By Nancy Brachey
Knight-Ridder News Service

March tempts gardeners. One day it is warm and sunny as June; the next, chilly and gray as January. For gardeners, this is rough because you yearn to plant tomatoes, sow cucumbers, tend marigolds. You want a straight shot into summer.

Tomatoes and cucumbers and peppers on the window sill give you that shot. And part of the magic of springtime is watching the transformation of minute seed to growing seedling.

Sure, you can buy the plants for most of your summer beds at garden centers, which will be stocked with huge numbers of perfect plants in spring. But part of the fun of home gardening is growing plants from seed.

Hovering over 1 inch seedlings — making sure they have the right amount of light and water — always makes you feel like a real gardener.

But this project is not without its pitfalls. These perfect plants you see in garden centers were raised in perfect conditions: greenhouses with careful attention given to light, humidity and water.

"I read studies that showed that 70 percent of collapses of homes were because of cripple walls going," Lenoir says. "Lack of bolting to foundations was 20 percent."

Homes of the 1930s or 1940s really weren't designed with quakes in mind, says Frank Lew, retired seismic safety manager for San Francisco and now director of building inspectors in Contra Costa County.

"The biggest bang for the buck for older homes is bolts and plywood," Lew says. "No doubt about it."

The fact that most homes in California, including older ones, are wood framed, instead of made of some solid material, is an important safety factor, he says. The wood allows for a certain amount of give and take with the quake's movements.

"They may fall or tilt off foundations, but most of the house stays more or less upright," says Lew. "The ceiling doesn't pancake and crush people to death."

The Bay Area Regional Earthquake Preparedness Project agrees that the basic square single-story wood-frame house is one of the safest structures in an earthquake. But it warns that "all structural elements must be securely tied together."

This can be accomplished in areas above the foundation by simply nailing a shear wall of plywood to the studs.

It's not too difficult to do the work, especially where studs are often exposed, such as the garage and closets.

In contrast, bolting the house to the foundation or bracing the inside of the cripple wall can be tough because there's usually cramped quarters to work in.

If you go with a pro, make sure to pick the right contractor. Get references from previous customers, make sure the contractor is state licensed and has no complaints listed with the appropriate local and state agencies.

And remember, slipshod work can go undetected.

Perforated hardboard can provide easy-to-install storage system for tools

Panels of perforated hardboard can provide an easy-to-install storage system for tools and other items.

Do It yourself
Gene Austin

I want to put Pegboard in my garage for storage. The walls are unfinished, with the studs and insulation showing. Must I first cover the studs with wallboard before putting up the Pegboard? How do you hang Pegboard against a smooth wall? — L. Lawrence.

A Pegboard, a trademarked product and other types of perforated hardboard can be attached directly to exposed studs, but this should only be done if there is no insulation between the studs and no plan to finish the walls. Owners of unfinished, uninsulated garages often use wall studs as supports for perforated hardboard, shelves and other storage devices.

In fact, perforated hardboard must have some space behind it so the hooked ends of tool hangers can be inserted. A minimum of about 1/2-inch of space is needed behind panels. Wall studs usually have a 3/8-inch-deep space between them.

However, the insulation in the garage should first be covered with gypsum wallboard to reduce fire hazards. Insulation in unfinished walls often has an exposed vapor barrier of kraft paper, which is flammable, or contains other flammable material that should be covered with a fire-retardant surface.

Installing gypsum board will leave a smooth wall, but perforated hardboard can still be attached. The trick is to use spacers behind the hardboard so hooks can easily be inserted into the perforations. Strips of wood 1/2-inch thick, used picture-frame fashion behind the hardboard, is one good system.

Spacers are sometimes used only at the corners of hardboard panels, but I prefer perimeter strips because they help keep the hardboard from buckling.

Perforated hardboard is sold in 1/2-inch-thick and 1/4-inch-thick panels. Panels usually range from 2-by-4 feet to 4-by-8 feet. The 1/4-inch panels are adequate for small tools and fixtures.

Many home centers and hardware stores sell hooks of various shapes for hanging, as well as small shelf supports and other storage devices that can be attached to perforated hardboard.

The bathroom walls in our older house are finished with ceramic tiles that are in excellent condition, but the grouting between the tiles is filthy. Not just mildew, but dirt. We have been unable to clean the grout. Can you help? — N. Moss.

I'd first try one of the heavy-duty grout cleaners sold by tile dealers such as Color Tile. Read the directions carefully and follow all cautions, because these cleaners generally contain acid. Wear goggles and rubber gloves.

If a heavy-duty cleaner doesn't work, you can try a grout whitener, which coats the grout with a white film and is applied with a dauber. Another is a liquid shoe polish. A whitener called Tile Guard is sold at some home centers and hardware stores. It is made by Tile Care Products Inc., Hamlet, Minn., 55340.

The ultimate solution, usually reserved for badly deteriorated grout, is to remove the existing grout and regrout. There isn't space to give the details of this process, but it is tedious work.
