Pro-choice court nominee likely

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton promised Friday to choose someone with good judgment and "a big heart" in making the first Supreme Court appointment by a Democrat in a quarter-century.

He has also said the nominee must support abortion rights. Clinton was notified of Justice Byron R. White's retirement plans early Friday and immediately scheduled a Saturday meeting with top advisers to begin his search.

'Whizzer' retires - A4

"I think that there are few decisions a president makes which are more weighty, more significant and have greater impact on more Americans than an appointment to the Supreme Court," Clinton told reporters. "And I'm going to try to pick a person that has a fine mind, good judgment, wide experience in the law and in the problems of real people and someone with a big heart." Clinton refused to be drawn into the speculation that immediately engulfed Washington as Democrats and liberal interest groups delighted in the prospect of a Democratic appointment that would begin to reverse the court's Reagan-era conservative shift.

Republicans, meanwhile, suddenly found themselves in much the same position occupied by Democrats during the Reagan and Bush years, cautioning the White House to steer clear of using abortion as a litmus test for high court picks.

"If the president nominates someone who will follow in the common-sense tradition of Justice White, he will be doing the nation a great service," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas. "But if the president nominates a 'litmus-test liberal,' all bets will be off."

As a candidate, Clinton repeatedly said ideology would take a back seat to excellence in his court picks, but also acknowledged his Supreme Court nominees would have to share his support of abortion rights. He also promised to appoint more minorities to the federal bench than any past president.

Idahoans will decide reapportionment plan

The Associated Press

BOISE — After decades of political battles over reapportioning itself, the Idaho Legislature has finally moved toward surrendering the task to a citizen commission.

Voters still must endorse the proposed constitutional amendment taking from the Legislature the job of changing legislative districts every decade to reflect population changes.

Sponsors of a resolution that squeaked through the House on Friday afternoon predicted voters will approve.

"I have no doubt the people of this state will believe it can be better accomplished with this group of citizens than those individual who benefit from the outcome," House State Affairs Chairman Pam Ahrens-R-Boise, said.

"I think they will approve it overwhelmingly," said House Speaker Michael Simpson, who joined Ahrens in getting the resolution approved despite strong opposition from rural lawmakers.

The House voted 50-17, three votes more than the required two-thirds majority. The Senate approved it earlier 26-9, two votes more than needed.

The amendment will become a part of the Idaho Constitution if a simple majority of voters approve in the November 1994 general election.

It calls for creation of a six-member commission on reapportionment. None of the members could be elected or appointed officials, and members would become ineligible for public office for five years after their service.

Republican and Democratic legislative leaders each would appoint two members, and the chairmen of the two major parties would appoint one each.

The Legislature spent weeks in the 1991 and 1992 sessions working on reapportionment, finally adopting a plan just before a court deadline.

It's an issue that doesn't directly affect the public. But Ahrens and Simpson said a citizen commission done the way they will save the Legislature from going through time-consuming partisan battles every 10 years.

"The greatest waste of time and legislative energy that I have seen is legislative reapportionment," Ahrens said. "The Legislature could have been using that time to find solutions to major problems, such as property tax relief, the school formula and water issues."

All 20 House Democrats joined 30 of the 50 Republicans voting for the bill. Opposition came from rural, conservative lawmakers who worried that they would get left out in future reapportionment battles.

Former congressman fasts in appeal to power of people

The Times-News and The Associated Press

POCATELLO — Former Republican Congressman George Hansen, whose attempt to involve a Magic Valley bank in a check-kiting scheme resulted this week in a four-year sentence for bank fraud, said Friday he is beginning a hunger strike.

"I've always been very careful to do things by the book," Hansen declared from the steps of the Federal Building in Pocatello. "I tried to obey the law. I love my country. I believe you should fight to save your country ... and go to jail, if necessary."

The 6-foot-6, 300-pound politician, clad in a red, white and blue windbreaker and surrounded by local supporters, said he hoped his fast would "appeal to the spiritual and moral power" of the people.

Hansen, 62, who served a year in prison during the 1980s for falsifying federal financial disclosure forms, has been ordered to report on

Hansen

April 14 to begin a four-year sentence in connection with a multi-million-dollar check-kiting scheme.

According to court testimony, D.L. Evans Bank in Burley blew the whistle on Hansen in September 1990.

But Evans Jr., President John Evans Jr., said he became concerned when he reviewed the account of customer Brad Neibaur, a Paul farmer-businessman, and discovered he was trading numerous $100,000-plus checks with Hansen's account.

Hansen said Martin Luther King and Mahatma Gandhi faced similar struggles in their fights to right wrongs.

He said if the government had given him time, he would have repaid his creditors the money he had borrowed to continue fighting injustice by agencies like the Internal Revenue Service and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Men leave Texas cult compound

The Associated Press

WACO, Texas — Two more people left the heavily armed compound of the Branch Davidian sect late Friday, the first to depart in a week.

Two men left the compound about 7:30 p.m. MST, according to a federal source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

That brings the total number who have left the cult's rural compound near Waco to 27 people, including 21 children. Eighty-six adults and 17 children remain inside.

Earlier in the day, federal authorities had characterized negotiations with cult leader David Koresh to end a 20-day standoff as the "most positive" since March 2.

A morning telephone discussion was "the most positive conversation that we've had with David Koresh since March 2," FBI agent Bob Ricks said. "He indicated ... his desire to get this matter resolved."

"He asked for a little more time. He has no intent of committing suicide. He believes that he has a message to get out, and he realizes that if he's killed, his message will not get out."

Negotiators refuse to get too hopeful because the leader of the Branch Davidian sect has disappointed them before, Ricks said. Authorities have been in a standoff with Koresh since a Feb. 28 gunfight.

U.S. pledges to help enforce no-fly zone

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. military "will do its share" to keep Bosnia skies free of Serb aircraft once the U.N. Security Council approves a resolution to enforce the existing no-fly zone over that country, the State Department said Friday.

Approval of a Security Council enforcement resolution seemed all but certain following Serb air attacks on eastern Bosnia last weekend and reported raids Wednesday evening.

"If the resolution is adopted by the council, the U.S. will do its share in enforcing the no-fly zone," acting State Department spokesman Joseph Snyder said.

The resolution would give U.N. forces the authority to shoot down aircraft that violate the ban. Snyder gave no additional details on the extent of U.S. involvement in enforcing the resolution.

A no-fly zone was approved last fall, but Britain and France have been reluctant to go along with U.S. proposals for an enforcement resolution. The two allied countries fear that Serb forces might retaliate against troops they have in Bosnia to help deliver relief supplies.

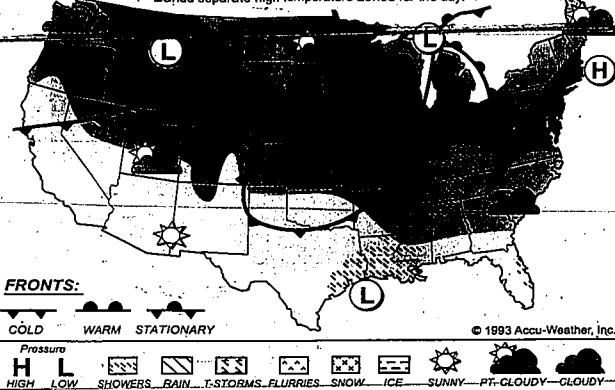

Serb military aircraft had flown many missions over Bosnia but had not taken hostile action against Muslim populations until last weekend.

A Democrat on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Rep. Frank McCloskey of Indiana, told President Clinton in a sharply worded letter Friday that unless he takes immediate steps to end the bloodshed in Bosnia he will be "damned forever by acquiescence in the murder" of the country.

Freezing cold grips East as winter says farewell

The Associated Press

Freezing temperatures reigned from the central Appalachians to New England on Friday as the last day of winter, but skies were mostly clear and dry. Snow dusted parts of the Midwest and Great Lakes.

Skies were less than in most of the western third of the nation, except in the Northwest and Montana.

Melting snow and rain flooded some areas of eastern Oregon, forcing many dozen people to evacuate their homes Friday. Several houses near Vale were flooded, and about 30 homes were evacuated near Ontario.

The Midwest had patches of stormy weather. Thunderstorms and rain showers fell in parts of the Plains. Small hail fell at San Angelo, Texas.

It was the coldest morning for the last day of winter in more than 25 years in the state of New York.

Low temperature records for the day included Binghamton, N.Y., where a reading of 7 degrees below zero broke the 1967 record by 1 degree.

Demo senators want abortion foes probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seventeen U.S. senators asked the FBI on Friday to investigate a "pattern of harassment" by anti-abortion activists at abortion clinics around the nation.

The FBI said it can do nothing under current policies.

An anti-abortion group said such a probe would have a chilling effect on all protest movements.

"The recent murder of Dr. David Gunn in Pensacola, Fla., allegedly by an anti-abortion extremist, has driven home to many Americans the rising tide of anti-clinic violence across the country," the senators said in a letter to FBI Director William Sessions.

The letter was drafted by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who gathered signatures from 16 other senators, all Democrats.

"Organized groups coordinate anti-abortion activity across state lines," the letter said. "Many clinics and clinic workers nationwide have had to endure blockades, picketing of both their work sites and their homes, bomb threats and bombings, vandalism and physical violence."

The letter said the actions are intended to prevent women from exercising their constitutional right to abortion and said a full investigation of "violence and harassment against clinics and clinic workers is essential to addressing this growing national problem."

However, the FBI is operating under policies established by the Bush administration that found such activities do not violate federal law.

Court

"It makes me feel uncomfortable," he said of his involvement during the campaign. But he said it was necessary because of the court's erosion of abortion rights during the Reagan and Bush administrations.

On Friday, Clinton chose not to answer directly when asked if abortion was the crucial test. He said only if he believed that the constitutional right to privacy, yes, I do.

Only once during the campaign did Clinton attach a name to his discussions about the Supreme Court, calling New York Gov. Mario Cuomo "qualified beyond question."

Those often mentioned as potential nominees in a Clinton administration include federal Circuit Court Judge Richard S. Arnold of Little Rock, a longtime Clinton friend, and federal judge Amalya Lyle Kearse of New York. She was on Clinton's early list of attorney general candidates. Judith Kaye, recently confirmed as New York state's top judge, is another attorney general contender who could be considered for the high court.

Others mentioned by Democrats and liberals included Stephen G. Breyer, chief judge of the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston; Jose A. Cabranes, chief judge of the federal court in New Haven, Conn.; Stephanie Seymour, a federal judge in Oklahoma; and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine, a former federal judge.

More distant possibilities include Martin Wright, chairman of the Children's Defense Fund and a long-time friend of Mrs. Clinton. Sen. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut, a Clinton political ally and former state attorney general, and Laurence Tribe, a Harvard professor and well known liberal legal scholar who would draw sharp opposition from Senate Republicans.

With the speculation came instant pressure from interest groups. "President Clinton must appoint a woman," declared Eleanor Smeal of the Fund for a Feminist Majority.

White consistently sided with conservatives in abortion cases, and National Abortion Rights Action League president Kate Michelman said his retirement "will allow the long process of restoring balance to our highest court to begin."

ing is the Legislature's job, even if it's difficult.

"We shouldn't dodge our responsibility when it comes to reapportionment any more than on other important issues, he said.

Rep. Bob Geddes, R-Preston, disputed Ahrens and Simpson's claims that the Legislature wasted a lot of time on the issue.

"I don't think they wasted their time. They did a fantastic job the last time around on reapportionment," he said.

But Ahrens said all the Legislature accomplished was "making sure that someone's backside was taken care of," by drawing legislative districts lines to protect incumbents.

Both sponsors said getting the proposed amendment through the Legislature might become one of the major accomplishments of the 1993 session.

Clinton OKs rationed health care plan

On the guitar, Tameka Sipay-Parrow, 4, left, accompanies President Clinton Friday as Andrew Creamer looks on. The president visited the class before addressing Atlanta business leaders.

Keep heat on Congress to OK economic plan, Clinton tells Americans

ATLANTA (AP) — President Clinton urged Americans on Friday to keep the pressure on Congress to enact his budget and economic stimulus programs, saying, "There are many roadblocks ahead."

"On the 57th day of this administration, our economic plan is almost halfway home," Clinton said after the House passed his five-year, $500 billion deficit-reduction plan and a $16.3 billion "emergency" jobs bill.

After celebrating the victory over breakfast with lawmakers who voted for his program, Clinton flew to Atlanta to turn up the heat on the Senate to go along with the House.

The president also visited a day-care center where he indicated he has all but decided to use the Internal Revenue Service to collect child-support payments from "deadbeat dads" who cross state lines to avoid their responsibilities.

"We haven't made a final decision on this although I'll tell you I'm pretty close," the president said. "I don't know how we can get it any other way than using the IRS and I've really given a lot of thought to it."

A crowd of hundreds gave Clinton a friendly welcome outside, but there were a couple dozen demonstrators protesting a waste incinerator in East Liverpool, Ohio. The president told them he had asked Vice President Al Gore and Environmental Protection Agency Director Carol Browner to look into it, and "They don't think we can stop it."

While Clinton's economic proposals clear the House by comfortable margins, they face a tougher time in the Senate. Senate Republicans are mapping efforts to pick the budget apart, including an attack on a proposal to raise taxes on Social Security recipients. Senate Republicans also failed Thursday night in an attempt to kill Clinton's plan to raise $71 billion through a tax on energy sources.

"Make no mistake, I know that there are many roadblocks ahead," the president said in a speech to a group of business leaders after touring the child center. "There are still guardians of gridlock in Washington who will fight fundamental change."

He said there are 80,000 lobbyists in Washington who spend nearly $1 billion a year protecting special interests.

"Those who are neither wealthy nor organized, no matter what they're doing, are very often the most voiceless and powerless in our system," Clinton said. "That's why it's the president's job to try to speak and fight for them. It's why we have to encourage those in Congress to stand ready to vote for change."

He said the House vote was "an exhilarating first step" and the beginning of "the process of real renewal."

Clinton hailed a preliminary House vote for his economic program Friday as proof that government can work, and the Senate put down an early Republican challenge to the proposals.

"It was a wonderful beginning," Clinton told Democratic lawmakers who gathered at the White House to celebrate House approval of the broad outlines of a budget and of his plan to stimulate the economy.

The target $1.5 trillion budget for 1994, which includes deficit reduction of about $500 billion over five years, was approved on a near party-line 243-183 vote Thursday night. Early Friday, the House followed up with a 235-190 vote for his stimulus spending; no Republicans voted for it and only 22 Democrats opposed it.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move that may signal future changes in the nation's health-care system, the Clinton administration gave Oregon Medicaid insurance for all its poor people by rationing the care they receive.

For the first time, everyone living in poverty in Oregon will be eligible for health insurance with a broad package of services, from preventive care to treating pneumonia to most organ transplants. The state will add about 120,000 people to the 239,000 residents already on its Medicaid rolls.

But their choice of doctors will be limited, and Oregon will no longer pay for dozens of procedures deemed too costly or ineffective, including aggressive treatment of terminal cancer or AIDS, simultaneous liver and kidney transplants, infertility therapy, scoliosis, and treatment of the common cold.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna E. Shalala, who granted the federal Medicaid waiver necessary for Oregon to implement the plan, said the state had "significantly modified" the original plan rejected last August by the Bush administration on grounds of discrimination against the disabled.

President Clinton, as a candidate, had promised to give Oregon its waiver, and he assured governors last month he would give them the flexibility to run their own health reform experiments.

Shalala imposed special conditions that Oregon must meet to ensure that it does not curtail essential services to the 239,000 state resident's now on Medicaid. The program cost the federal and state governments $883 million in 1992.

Nationwide, Medicaid covers only about 47 percent of people living in poverty.

"The American people want, need and deserve the peace of mind of knowing that their health-care needs will be covered. In Oregon, citizens and state officials have come up with an approach to provide that security for state residents," Shalala said.

Oregon has drawn up a list of 688 medical conditions and treatments and proposed to pay only for 568 of them.

Shalala insisted that no one should draw "any conclusions about the health reform proposal of the Clinton administration based on my decision to grant the waiver."

Both friends and foes of the Oregon experiment said it could set the stage for similar efforts to ration or prioritize care for all Americans.

"Sooner or later, the rest of America is going to come to what Oregon is trying," Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said. "We cannot, at public expense, provide health care for everyone in America with no limits."

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., called it "the first big step in the march for national health reform."

Wyden refused to call the Oregon plan rationing, saying services for the poor in Oregon "are being expanded, not rationed."

Oregon Gov. Barbara Roberts said this was "one of those history-making days. It demonstrates that the states and Congress can work together to solve big problems."

Roberts has proposed imposing $100 million in taxes on health care providers over two years to help pay for the Medicaid expansion. The state contends that over five years, it would save the 50 percent increase in the Medicaid rolls. The program now enrolls 239,000 Oregonians.

Oregon expects to save money not only by refusing to pay for dozens of treatments, but also by steering Medicaid patients into managed care programs like health maintenance organizations.

Dozens of groups, including the United Cerebral Palsy Association, the Association for Retarded Citizens, the Child Welfare League and the American Civil Liberties Union, wrote Shalala on Wednesday in a letter opposing the waiver.

They charged it would create "dangerous precedents" for health reform.

Paul Marchand, director of governmental affairs for the Association for Retarded Citizens, praised the Clinton administration for insisting on safeguards for the disabled.

But he said the government should prod states "to squeeze excess capacity, administrative waste, and excess profits out of their systems before they impose benefit limits" on the poor.

Robert Griss, a senior health policy researcher for the United Cerebral Palsy Association, said he objects not to where Oregon drew its cutoff line but to the principle that "legitimizes the withholding of medically necessary services from persons who could benefit from them."

The Children's Defense Fund, once chaired by both Hillary Rodham Clinton and Shalala, had a mixed reaction, saying the experiment could leave some pregnant women and children without coverage, even as it expanded eligibility for thousands of other poor children and adults.

"This is another example of why America urgently needs national solutions to the health care crisis, not state-by-state tinkering," the group said.

Oregon must get federal approval before changing the cutoff line and the state will bear the financial risk of any extra costs due to the expansion.

A look at Oregon's health rationing experiment

WHAT IS IT: Nation's first program to greatly increase number of people eligible for medical care at public expense by restricting types of medical services they could receive. Expands Medicaid coverage to more than 120,000 working poor.

WHAT'S COVERED: People would receive standard health package, including doctor care, access to medication and hospital services. State ranked 688 medical treatments and conditions according to such factors as seriousness and ability of treatment to improve quality of patient's life.

Then it drew a line at 568: Everything above that point would be covered; everything below would not.

WHO'S ELIGIBLE: Plan extends Medicaid coverage to low-income Oregonians who currently don't meet eligibility requirements, including working poor or families making too much money to qualify but who still fall under the federal poverty level, listed as less than $991 in monthly income for family of three.

HOW TO APPLY: State will make two-page form available at various locations across state.

People can mail application without face-to-face interview. Eligibility will be determined by gross income.

WHO'S GOING TO PAY FOR PROGRAM: Not determined. Gov. Barbara Roberts has proposed tax on health care providers, while Oregon Medical Association is pushing for cigarette tax increase to pay for rationing plan. Oregon Legislature will determine which, if any, of those options will be used. There's no guarantee that Legislature will provide any money for program.

Panel urges FDA approval for MS drug

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The first drug designed to combat the fundamental crippling action of multiple sclerosis was endorsed Friday by an advisory committee of the Food and Drug Administration.

The committee voted 7-2 on the drug, beta interferon, but members of the majority said they felt that there had been enough evidence presented for the drug to be marketed as a new treatment for the disease. The FDA is not obligated to follow advisory committee recommendations but generally does.

The panel heard evidence that MS patients treated with the drug suffer fewer and less severe attacks of the crippling disease that afflicts about 350,000 Americans.

"I thought there was at least enough robust evidence for the drug to be used for multiple sclerosis," said Dr. Sid Gilman, a committee member and a professor at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

But one of the two opponents, Nancy Templin, a University of Washington professor, said, "I felt that there was insufficient evidence to meet the standards that the committee has applied to other drugs."

Beta interferon is the first pharmaceutical designed to stop the destructive processes that cause the crippling effects of multiple sclerosis. Other drugs used to treat the disease relieve symptoms only.

Women are twice as likely as men to have MS. It strikes most often between the ages of 20 and 40, the National Multiple Sclerosis Society says.

Chiron Corp. and Berlex Labs have applied to the FDA to market a genetically engineered form of beta interferon called Betaseron.

Beta interferon, an immune system protein, is thought to work by blocking other immune system proteins that are involved in MS attacks.

Multiple sclerosis is a disease of the central nervous system that scientists think is caused by a flaw that allows immune system cells to attack a tissue called myelin that covers nerve fibers.

When the myelin is destroyed, scars form within the nerve cell bundles and within the brain. That can lead to an impaired function.

Fats in margarine up heart attack risk

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Men and women who ate the most margarine and certain processed foods had more than twice the heart attack risk of those who consumed the lowest amounts, a study found.

It is the latest of several studies to impugn margarine, which is promoted as a healthier alternative to butter but is now being found to have health problems of its own.

Earlier studies linked margarine consumption to higher blood cholesterol levels, which in turn pose a risk of heart disease. This study, presented Thursday at the American Heart Association's annual epidemiology meeting, is one of the first to link margarine directly to heart attacks.

The problem occurs when polyunsaturated vegetable oils are modified to make them solid or semi-solid.

Clinton hails vote as proof that government can work

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton hailed a preliminary House vote for his economic program Friday as proof that government can work, and the Senate put down an early Republican challenge to the proposals.

"It was a wonderful beginning," Clinton told Democratic lawmakers who gathered at the White House to celebrate House approval of the broad outlines of a budget and of his plan to stimulate the economy.

The target $1.5 trillion budget for 1994, which includes deficit reduction of about $500 billion over five years, was approved on a near party-line 243-183 vote Thursday night. Early Friday, the House followed up with a 235-190 vote for his stimulus spending; no Republicans voted for it and only 22 Democrats opposed it.

Clinton, exulting after the biggest test of his young administration, hailed the votes as a "victory for ordinary Americans and for the proposition that this government can work for them again, that we don't have to be mired in gridlock, that we don't have to spend all of our time posturing and dividing and running for cover instead of moving into the future."

The big tests for his spending priorities and tax proposals lie ahead. There is more opposition to his short-term spending plans and his tax increases in the Senate than in the House.

And, the budget outline passed by the House and being considered by the Senate is not binding; Congress must vote later this year on whose taxes are raised and which programs restrained. Those choices will be more difficult than merely going on record in favor of deficit reduction, as the House did Thursday night.

In two days of debate, the Senate has sided with Clinton.

A 54-42 vote Friday rejected an amendment by Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, that would have frozen discretionary spending and cut the deficit by an additional $100 billion over five years. That would have affected programs ranging from education to highway building.

Four Democrats — Dennis DeConcini of Arizona, Howell Heflin of Alabama, Herbert Kohl of Wisconsin and Sam Nunn of Georgia — sided with most Republicans in favor of the freeze.

U.S. postpones EC trade sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration announced Friday it was postponing for at least a week the imposition of trade sanctions against the 12-nation European Community.

The announcement came in a joint statement issued by the United States and the European Community.

The statement said the sanctions, which had been scheduled to go into effect Monday, would be delayed until at least after a March 29 meeting between U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and EC officials in Brussels.

The announcement came a day after President Clinton met with European Community President Jacques Delors. At that meeting, Clinton had expressed the hope that the United States would be able to avoid a trade war with the EC, its largest trading partner.

The administration, as one of its first trade actions, has announced that it had planned to bar European companies from bidding on certain U.S. government contracts starting March 22.

Nevada senator tries to ban radar guns

CARSON CITY (AP) — A senator's renewed attempt to ban radar guns was met with cynicism in a committee hearing Friday, and seems destined to go no further than other chapters in a two-decade effort.

Sen. Joe Neal, D-North Las Vegas, said a large number of speeding tickets prompted him to introduce bills in the 1970s to ban radar guns, but said SB108 is based on medical evidence that radar guns cause cancer among police officers.

"I used to introduce this bill as a way of getting rid of the radar gun but now it's a medical thing," said Neal. "A lot of the officers who use this radar gun ...

are now finding themselves coming down with cancer."

The bill would ban any use of a radar gun that exposes anyone to non-ionizing radiation, which all the guns emit. It cites medical evidence and the potential workers' compensation costs of paying for injuries caused by the guns.

White to retire from Supreme Court after 31 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Byron R. White announced plans Friday to retire after 31 years on the bench.

White, in a statement released by the court's public information office, said he would step down at the end of the current term, in June or July.

"After 31 years, Marion (Mrs. White) and I think someone else should be permitted to have a like experience," White said in the statement.

White, 75, is a centrist conservative who most often sides with the court's more politically conservative members on such divisive issues as abortion and church-state relations.

White informed President Clinton of his retirement plans in a letter delivered to the White House Friday.

Clinton said he had talked to White and thanked him for giving so much advance notice. The president told reporters "I will begin work on this tomorrow."

The president vowed to nomi-

About Byron Raymond White

"It has been an interesting and exciting experience to serve on the court. After 31 years, Marion and I think that someone else should be permitted to have a like experience."

Age/Birthdate: 75, June 8, 1917. Education: Undergraduate at the University of Colorado; Rhodes scholar at Oxford University; Yale Law School.

Experience: Member of professional football's Hall of Fame; law clerk to Chief Justice Fred Vinson; chief aide to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy; nominated as 44 to Supreme Court in 1962 by President John F. Kennedy.

Family: Married to Marion Lloyd Stearns in 1946. Two children, Charles and Nancy.

White on announcing his plans to retire from the high court at the end of the current term, in June or July.

White did say during one MTV interview show that he thought New York Gov. Mario Cuomo...

The last Democratic appointee confirmed to the court was Thurgood Marshall, who was named by Lyndon B. Johnson in 1967.

There were no vacancies on the court during President Carter's 1977-1981 term.

White generally voted on the "law and order" side in cases pitting societal protection against individual rights.

He wrote for the court in 1987 when it ruled that homosexuals' privacy rights do not protect them from state laws making sodomy a crime.

White would let states outlaw most abortions. He opposes broad use of affirmative action to remedy past bias in employment, and he favors greater government accommodation of religion in ways some consider a violation of church-state separation.

White also took a narrow view of the First Amendment's free-speech and free-press protections.

In 1982 he wrote for the court when it created a new exception to First Amendment protections for expression. The court ruled that any work featuring sexual performances by children under 16 may be outlawed, even if not legally obscene.

The states are entitled to greater leeway in the regulation of pornographic depictions of children," White wrote.

In 1992, White wrote the court's opinion that said news organizations can be sued when they break a promise and disclose a confidential source.

Among the most famous opinions are two White wrote dissenting from the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion nationwide and the 1966 Miranda decision that required police to warn criminal suspects in custody about their right to remain silent before questioning them.

White said in his statement today that he and his wife plan to remain in Washington, and that he would move his office down Capitol Hill to the new Thurgood Marshall Federal Judiciary Building.

"I also expect that from time to time I will sit as an appellate judge on the courts of appeals," White said.

"It has been an interesting and exciting experience to serve on the court," White said.

The Whites have two children and six grandchildren.

In addition to White, there has been speculation that Justice Harry Blackmun, 84, may soon step down. Speaking to law students in Boston and chief aide to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy.

A look at opinions written by Justice White

WASHINGTON (AP) — A look at some of Supreme Court Justice Byron R. White's major written opinions.

White wrote for the court when in 1986 it ruled that consenting adults have no constitutional right to private homosexual conduct.

"The proposition that any kind of private sexual conduct between consenting adults is constitutionally insulated from state proscription is insupportable," White said. The ruling upheld a Georgia law banning sodomy.

The justices ruled in 1991 that news organizations can be sued when they break a promise and disclose a confidential source.

"The First Amendment does not confer on the press a constitutional right to disregard promises that would otherwise be enforced under state law," White wrote for the court.

In 1992, the court ruled that Mississippi must do more to desegregate its state-run colleges and universities than simply allow whites and blacks to attend the school of their choice.

"If the state perpetuates policies and practices traceable to its prior system that continue to have segregative effects," such policies are unconstitutional "even though the state has abolished the legal requirement that whites and blacks be educated separately and has established racially neutral policies," White wrote for the court.

White wrote the majority opinion when a divided court in 1989 rec-ed new barriers for workers who seek to use statistical evidence to prove they are victims of racial bias.

The worker "bears the burden of disproving an employer's assertion that the adverse employment action or practice was based solely on a legitimate neutral consideration," White wrote.

That ruling and others led Congress to enact the Civil Rights Act of 1991.

The justices in 1984 allowed evidence seized by police using defective search warrants to be used in criminal trials. It was the first time since 1914 that the high court had narrowed the "exclusionary rule" which bars use of illegally obtained evidence — to allow exceptions based on the good faith of police officers who believed they did nothing wrong. "Even assuming the rule effectively deters some police misconduct ... it cannot be expected, and should not be applied, to deter objectively reasonable law enforcement activity," White wrote for the court.

White wrote for the court when in 1982 it created a new exception to the First Amendment's protections for speech and expression — any work featuring sexual performances by children under 16.

The court said child pornography, even when not legally obscene, can be outlawed.

"The states are entitled to greater leeway in the regulation of pornographic depictions of children," White said.

Aspin walking, working day after pacemaker surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Les Aspin was walking hospital halls and "in good spirits" Friday, a day after receiving a pacemaker to control a heart condition, a Pentagon spokeswoman said.

"He's signing papers, seeing visitors, talking with staff on the phone," said the spokeswoman, Lynn Reddy.

Aspin, 54, was expected to leave Georgetown University Medical Center sometime this weekend, although doctors had not determined exactly when, she said.

While in the hospital, Aspin has received an inter-agency update and met with his deputy, William J. Perry, and with Joint Chiefs of Staff Vice Chairman Adm. David Jeremiah.

The pacemaker was implanted just under the skin below Aspin's collarbone during surgery under local anesthetic Thursday.

The device, normally used to regulate heart rhythms, is being used in Aspin's case to control a condition in which the heart muscle becomes stiff and contracts too forcefully, restricting the flow of blood to the main artery.

Aspin reported feeling better almost immediately after surgery, but his cardiologists said they won't know for weeks or months how effective the device is.

Should the pacemaker fail to help the condition, called hypertrophic cardiomyopathy, the next solution would be open-heart surgery in which doctors cut away part of a thickened heart muscle.

While use of a pacemaker for Aspin's condition is relatively new — began in the last four or five years — it is an established treatment," the secretary's doctors said.

Aspin's illness has come at a busy time for the Pentagon, when military forces are active in Somalia and Bosnia and the military is struggling to meet mandated budget cuts.

Japan meets 20% mark for computer chip sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration said Friday Japan had slightly surpassed a 20 percent target for sales of foreign-made computer chips in the huge Japanese market.

A dispute over computer chips has been one of the most contentious trade issues dividing the United States and Japan, with both the Bush and Clinton administrations charging that the Japanese were not living up to their commitments.

While U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor never said when the new administration would do if Japan failed to meet the 20 percent target, he had left the door open for some type of trade retaliation.

Kantor said that based on calculations for the fourth quarter of 1992, foreign computer chips captured 20.2 percent of the Japanese market, up from 15.9 percent in the third quarter.

The calculation came as a surprise. Many industry officials had estimated that the foreign market share would be in a range of around 17 percent to 18 percent, meaning that Japan would fall short of the 20 percent target set in a 1991 agreement with the Bush administration.

"This strong improvement in market access is a very positive development," Kantor said. "It clearly demonstrates that U.S. semiconductor suppliers can compete effectively in the Japanese market when given a fair shot and that trade agreements with Japan can, if vigorously implemented, provide concrete benefits to American industry and workers."

Kantor told reporters that the administration would be pushing for further gains in foreign market share in the Japanese semiconductor market, the largest in the world. However, he refused to say whether a new target figure would be set.

Both the U.S. and Japanese negotiators are scheduled to review the semiconductor issue during two days of talks in Hawaii for Monday and Tuesday.

Kantor noted that the agreement, which runs through 1996, calls for "gradual and steady" improvement.

Just last December, then-U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills had said that based on the third quarter sales figures Japan was falling short on its commitment to buy more foreign-made semiconductors and warned that without more progress both countries would face "a serious confrontation on this issue."

Nuclear Regulatory Commission reviews anti-terrorist plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Security at the nation's nuclear power plants is under review to see if new safeguards are needed against the possibility of terrorist truck bomb attacks, the chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Friday.

Chairman Ivan Selin said the installation of reinforced steel gates and concrete barricades, which the commission has rejected in the past, are being considered anew in light of two recent events.

They are the truck-bomb explosion at the World Trade Center in New York City and a recent incident in which a man drove a station wagon through security checkpoints at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania, ending 60 feet inside the turbine building.

The man, a former mental patient, eluded searchers for four hours. He was unarmed and his vehicle contained no explosives.

Responding to questions from members of the Senate Public Works subcommittee on nuclear regulation, Selin said that if the vehicle had been packed with high explosives, the damage could have caused operators to shut down the reactor.

He said basic protective systems would have worked, and there likely would have been no release of nuclear materials, but "the risks would have been much greater than we would have liked."

Such a blast "probably would have damaged emergency systems," he said. "And then you would have been on your very own," he said. "You would have had to take the plant down."

"I found your answers to be hair-raising," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., the subcommittee chairman. "Hearing you say it makes me wonder why you didn't have (barriers) before."

Selin said the commission would give the issue an "open-minded, fresh review."

Egyptian violence poses worldwide woes

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak says the growing Islamic fundamentalist violence in Egypt is an international problem.

Many critics, however, believe its roots are at home. The movement emerged, they say, because of corruption, unemployment and growing middle-class despair.

Whatever the causes, the stakes are high. Egypt is the traditional leader of the Arabs, Washington's best Arab friend, and the only Arab country linked by treaty with Israel.

An antagonistic Islamic government in Cairo could be catastrophic for the West, especially given the radical Muslim government in Sudan and fundamentalist movements operating in Algeria and elsewhere.

In recent months, religious extremism has seeped through the Nile valley from Aswan near the Sudan border to Alexandria on the Mediterranean. The state has applied increasingly harsh countermeasures.

"There's been a proliferation of military mentality in all branches of Egyptian life," said analyst Nabil Abdel-Fattah. That precludes a political solution, he said, "we're left with either a Muslim or a military solution."

The current upsurge by the extremist organization el-Gamaa el-Islamiya — the Islamic Group — began early last year. More than 130 people have died in extremist violence or in government reaction to it.

Some commentators use variations on the word "war" to describe the conflict.

Mubarak's government says it's winning, though Mubarak believes terrorism is an "international phenomenon, contaminating the whole world" and requiring a global response, according to his spokesman, Mohammed Abdel-Moneim.

But it's no longer unusual to read commentators in the government-owned press counseling increased attention to the causes of the movement, rather than relying on violence to put it down, or blaming other countries.

Even the governor of strife-torn Assiut province, Maj. Gen. Hassan el-Alfi, says jobs are vital to fighting terrorism.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak kneels for prayer. Muslim extremists are waging a violent campaign against his government.

ment, rather than relying on violence to put it down, or blaming other countries.

Even the governor of strife-torn Assiut province, Maj. Gen. Hassan el-Alfi, says jobs are vital to fighting terrorism.

Sayed said. "Even if the superior government firepower prevails, el-Sayed said, "if the causes that led to extremist violence in the first place are not dealt with, these groups or new groups will come up again."

The violence began in el-Alfi's southern province in 1981. Islamic extremists killed Mubarak's predecessor, Anwar Sadat, but were squashed with scores of dead when they tried to use Assiut as a base for a coup plot.

Assiut remains the most active region. Police killed 10 suspects there in a huge shootout Wednesday.

El-Alfi said the extremists can be beaten. To do it, he said, Egypt must stop infiltration, provide jobs, increase security and "preach the correct version of Islam," he said in the government newspaper Al-Ahram Weekly.

Besides the gun, the government's principal tool against the militants is its piety.

Cairo's Al-Azhar Mosque has been Islam's center of learning for 1,000 years. Extremists deride the sector, Sheikh Gad el-Haq Ali Gad el-Haq, who holds Cabinet rank within the Egyptian government.

"We are not secular people, and Egypt is not a secular country," Gad el-Haq recently told Islamic scholars. "Secular people believe that religion is just a question of faith... If some religions comply to this point of view, Islam is not like them. It is religion and government."

Naguib Mahfouz, the Nobel Prize-winning novelist, wrote in his newspaper column recently that he initially welcomed the reawakening of the Islamic faith.

"It never occurred to us to fear what it might do to our modern heritage," Mahfouz wrote, but it brought "authoritarianism, corruption, military defeats, economic crises, injustice and nepotism, a considerable degree of extremism."

"The reason we're having trouble with these groups is that the economic and social conditions are deteriorating for the middle class," political scientist Mustafa Kamel el-

Key warlord rejoins Somalia peace talks

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — A key warlord rejoined peace talks Friday, but his faction asked the U.S.-led military coalition to arrest a rival and compensate the victims of violence in Kismayu.

The Somali National Alliance, a group of factions headed by Mohamed Farah Aidid, again accused the U.S.-led coalition forces of favoring Mohamed Said Hirsi, known as Gen. Morgan, in battles for control of the southern port city.

Coalition officials have dismissed any suggestion they favor anyone. To prevent further violence, the United States sent a quick-reaction force of 500 soldiers and 13 helicopters to back up the 150 Americans and 800 Belgians already in Kismayu.

In another development, a U.S. Army soldier on leave in Mombasa, Kenya, drowned in a hotel swimming pool.

The body of Pvt. Daniel Lee Harris, 21, was found Thursday night by friends who tried to resuscitate him, said Marine Col. Fred Peck, the U.S. military spokesman. There were no reports of foul play, but an investigation was under way.

No hometown was immediately available for Harris, the eighth American to die since troops arrived on Dec. 9 to safeguard food shipments to the starving.

Overall, there have been 15 deaths among the coalition forces, including an unidentified Moroccan soldier who died Wednesday from injuries suffered in a traffic accident the day before. The incident was not reported until Friday.

On Tuesday, about 300 of Morgan's men attacked 40 forces of Col. Omar Jess and forced them to flee the city. The battle left at least 10 people dead and 51 wounded. Jess' faction belongs to the Somali National Alliance.

Morgan has claimed from his base near the Kenyan border that he did not order an attack.

Aidid walked out of the peace talks in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, on Wednesday and said he wouldn't return until the situation in Kismayu was "reversed." The negotiations were suspended for the day.

The peace conference sent its disarmament committee to Kismayu to investigate Tuesday's attack and was to report its findings to the peace conference Saturday.

Tanker carrying toxins explodes

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — A Japanese-owned tanker carrying toxic chemicals exploded and caught fire in the North Sea Friday, killing at least one crew member and injuring three, the Dutch coast guard said.

There were no immediate reports of leaks from the 2,700-ton cargo, although the explosion ripped a large hole in the ship. Flames as high as 160 feet were spreading over the hull, according to a Dutch Navy official at the coastal Eelde air base.

Bomb kills 4 in Calcutta train depot

CALCUTTA, India — A bomb exploded Friday at a train station in Calcutta, killing four people and injuring 15 others, officials and witnesses said.

It was unclear if the blast was linked to the series of explosions that hit India in the past week.

The blast occurred minutes after an express train carrying more than 1,000 people arrived.

The bomb, contained in a bag, had been planted in the train but was picked up by a vagabond, who carried it into the station where it exploded as he was being questioned by police, said railroad spokesman Gautam Banerjee.

Assailants attack, kill 2 South Africans

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Black assailants firing AK-47 assault rifles killed two whites and injured three Friday during a rush-hour attack that appeared racially motivated, police said.

A telephone caller claiming to represent the black militant Azanian People's Liberation Army told the South African Press Association his group was responsible.

The Azanian group, the military wing of the radical Pan Africanist Congress, previously said it carried out several bomb and gun attacks on whites last year that killed five people.

Thousands greet convoy

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Thousands of hungry but joyous people mobbed a U.N. convoy that rumbled into Srebrenica on Friday with food and medicine after being held up for nine days by Serbs.

U.N. officials said more such convoys were necessary immediately or the death toll, mostly from hunger and cold, would rise in the besieged Muslim enclave. Heavy Serb shelling preceded the convoy's arrival in Srebrenica, killing four people, including two children.

Elsewhere in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Bosnian radio reported 17 people were killed, including five children, and 50 were wounded when a shell hit a school serving as a refugee center in Kalesija, near Tuzla.

AP reporter George John said Serbs were shelling Tuzla's airport, which the Bosnian government desperately wants to reopen to bring in supplies.

Fierce fighting also occurred Friday around Sarajevo airport. A Serb tank deployed next to the airport entrance was lobbing shells into the suburb of Dobrinja, an AP photographer said.

Earlier Friday, radio said three people were killed and 10 wounded when three artillery shells exploded outside the entrance of the city's main bakery.

U.S. to test abortion pill

PARIS (AP) — An abortion pill will be tested on thousands of American women in hospitals and clinics, the drug's manufacturer said Friday.

"We project that between 10,000 and 20,000 women will receive the pill as patients in certain American hospitals and clinics," said Dr. Andre Ulmann, director of endocrinology for the French firm, Roussel-Uclaf.

It is not clear how the women will be selected. Ulmann said more details might be available in a few weeks.

The pharmaceutical company is reviewing offers by a few medical organizations in the United States to test the RU-486 pill on American women, said Ulmann.

"If things go well, the organization that is finally selected to do the testing could begin in as few as two months," said Catherine Euvrand, Roussel-Uclaf's communication director.

The proposed clinical trials will not focus on the pill's medical properties — they have been well-established in Europe — but how to safely administer it in the health system in the United States, Euvrand said.

Roussel-Uclaf had shown wariness about marketing the drug in the United States, fearing protests from pro-life groups who threatened boycotts of the U.S. subsidiary.

The pill is available in France, Britain and Sweden.

Country singer Jennings touts school

IDAHO FALLS — Waylon Jennings may have earned his fame singing country songs, but it was his words that are being remembered by hundreds of students in eastern Idaho this week.

His presentation at Eastern Idaho Technical College this week may not have been the most polished. But everyone knew his message about the importance of education from the heart. Jennings went through the General Equivalency Diploma, or GED, program and received his high school equivalency diploma in 1989.

He left no doubt about his feelings when he looked into the face of a 16-year-old at one point and said, "Son, if you ain't gonna stay in school, then get your GED. 'If I can do it, I know you can too. Education is the only thing that can never be taken away from you."

Suit against 3 prosecutors dismissed

MOSCOW — A lawsuit against three present and past Idaho County prosecutors based on the handling of child sexual abuse cases has been dismissed.

A jury trial for the remaining defendants — representatives of the state Department of Corrections' Division of Probation and Parole — has been scheduled for Nov. 15 in 2nd District Court at Moscow.

Moscow attorney Roy Mosman filed suit on behalf of four Latah County youngsters who allegedly were victims of Jesse Fleury in 1991 while he was on probation for child sexual abuse in Idaho County.

Fleury, 71, is serving 10 years to life in prison on convictions for lewd and lascivious conduct in Latah County.

House changes hunter permit forms

BOISE — A legislative session looking for ways to cut state spending and improve efficiency took a step in that direction Friday.

The House voted 54-14 to change the way hunters apply for controlled hunt permits, eliminating the need for state agencies to issue about 50,000 refund checks yearly. Sponsors said it will save about $250,000 in the cost of handling the refunds.

The measure sent to the Senate requires all hunters who apply for special permits to pay only a $5 nonrefundable fee and then the cost of the animal tag if they are successful.

Under the current system, the approximately 80,000 hunters who apply for restricted tags pay for a permit and the tag up front and then they get their money refunded if they do not draw a permit.

State Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards testified earlier it costs about $5 to handle each refund — about $250,000 for the 50,000 made annually.

Utah awaits decision on dredging lake

MONTPELIER — Hundreds of farmers in Utah's Box Elder County farmers are awaiting word from Idaho on whether the lake will be dredged to allow more irrigation water to be pumped from the lake.

The application to dredge farther into the lake has been made to the Idaho Department of Lands.

The department conducted a three-hour hearing on the proposal and said it will have a decision within 45 days.

Bear Lake property owners and recreationists, concerned that the level of Bear Lake already is at a 50-year low, opposed the dredging.

Cottonwood prison fires its warden

BOISE — Ron McKinsey, warden of the North Idaho Correctional Institution at Cottonwood, was fired Friday, the Department of Correction said.

The agency said it would release no information on why McKinsey was fired, but there have been a number of inmate lawsuits over the way the facility has been operated.

A news release from department representative Ann Thompson said James Rehder, an 18-year employee at the Cottonwood prison, has been named by Correction Director Richard Vernon as interim warden. Rehder, 42, began his career with the agency in 1974.

Williams OKs agency to inform public

BOISE — State Auditor J.D. Williams has signed an order activating a new state agency to inform the public of new administrative rules.

Williams on Thursday notified Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa that he was using authority granted by the 1991 Legislature to set up a new central registry to collect and publish administrative rules.

D. Corey Lowder has been appointed director of the new division.

Starting April 30, Williams' office will publish a monthly report on the new regulations, much the same as the federal government does with the Federal Register.

State didn't violate Open Meeting Law

BOISE — A House subcommittee did not violate the state Open Meetings Law by discussing mobile home legislation with a lobbyist at a Boise restaurant, the Idaho attorney general's office says.

But "the practice of holding closed meetings of legislative subcommittees raise serious policy questions that should be addressed," said a written analysis by Chief Deputy Attorney General Jack McMahon.

House Speaker Mike Simpson later reaffirmed plans for legislators to study during the summer new rules to limit such gatherings.

County may foot Crnkovich trial tab

WALLACE — Shoshone County taxpayers may be held liable for the defense costs incurred by former sheriff Frank Crnkovich, acquitted of federal public corruption charges.

Crnkovich's attorney, Samuel Eismann, said under state law, Shoshone County could be liable for his representation.

The first federal trial resulted in a hung jury and the second one acquitted Crnkovich of racketeering, obstructing justice, and aiding and abetting illegal gambling.

The price is estimated as high as $100,000.

Universities defend scholarship cuts

BOISE (AP) — State Board of Education members said they fear a decision by Big Sky Conference presidents to reduce football scholarships may have been a death blow for historic rivalries between Idaho's three schools.

And two board members, President Karl Shurtliff of Boise and Roy Mosman of Moscow, criticized Idaho State University President Richard Bowen on Friday for what they contended was his failure to get board guidance on how to vote.

"I'm sorry that the vote was taken. I believe it involved a policy matter that this board should have instructed the presidents about before they went," Mosman said at Friday's meeting in Boise.

"If I had known there was going to be a vote, then I clearly would have expressed my opinion on how you should have voted, and it would have been that we should wait and see."

Bowen said he thought he made the board members at their February meeting in Lewiston that the Big Sky Presidents Council was considering the cost-containment move, in part as a way of providing more money for women's athletic programs and scholarships at each school.

The 7-1 vote on March 8 cuts scholarships at each school from 63 to 45 over three years beginning in 1994, with the provision that two schools could leave the league's football program.

Bowen and Boise State University President Charles Ruch voted with the majority. University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser cast the only dissenting vote.

Idaho informed the Big Sky last week that it may choose not to play football in the league in 1994, and Zinser has ordered a report by June on the school's options. A committee also is expected to report to Ruch in about a month on whether Boise State should stay or leave.

Each school has made one previous bid to move up from NCAA Division I-AA to Division I-A football — Idaho in 1973 and Boise State in 1991. In both cases, the Board of Education rejected the proposals.

"There is a very great differential in the financial abilities of the schools in our conference," Bowen said. "I believe you have a core of schools at about the same level in the Big Sky and they tend to continue competing with one another. You have others that perhaps can afford more."

Ruch said even with Board of Education approval, it would be impossible for Boise State to move out of the Big Sky before 1995 because of scheduling conflicts. But in any case, he said he hopes to attack the problem by exploring other ways to contain costs and increase sports revenue.

"Boise State wishes to do everything it can to keep the Big Sky together," Ruch said. "We will not be party to its coming unglued."

Zinser said she also hopes to promote "healthy and productive" moves toward cost containment and gender equity without leaving the league.

She acknowledged the Big Sky is in "a very fragile condition," but said Idaho schools should do what they can — on their own if necessary — to find alternatives to reducing scholarships.

"We should work hard to preserve the integrity of the Big Sky Conference," Zinser said. "What took place with the Big Sky presidents is an indication of the urgency that we all feel."

Shurtliff, however, said it might be too late to undo the damage.

"If we thought we had problems in athletics before the meeting in Salt Lake City, they're minuscule compared to what we have now," the Boise lawyer said.

Duchess works to regain favor

The Duchess of York begins repair work on her image.

LONDON (AP) — Fergie's back. A year after her marriage to Prince Andrew fell apart, the Duchess of York has begun a concerted rehabilitation campaign to shed her image as a frivolous lazy-bone.

In recent weeks the former Sarah Ferguson — Fergie, in the cheeky tabloid press — has founded a new charity for children, visited orphans in Poland, written a book and taken up the genteel pastime of painting. The remake is slow, uphill work. Fergie's big-spending, holiday-venue, work-shirking ways did much to weaken the royal family's popularity.

"I still feel that the lower profile she keeps, the better she will be received. She realizes this," said Ingrid Seward, editor of Majesty magazine and the duchess' authorized biographer.

The duchess stopped performing royal duties the day her separation from Andrew was announced last March 19, 1992, after less than six years of marriage.

The dust had hardly settled when intimate photographs surfaced showing a topless duchess snuggling and smooching at poolside with her "financial adviser," American businessman Johnny Bryan.

During her year in purdah, the duchess learned to paint, Seward said, and wrote a book about Queen Victoria's travels.

"From our side, it's not changed. She's still very royal, still carries out countless duties as royal patron and misses awareness as well as valuable sums," said Philip Eckstein, spokesman for the association.

Fergie also flew to Austria to present prizes at a sports competition that Queen Elizabeth II reportedly banned her from attending last year.

"Just when you thought the Duchess of York had vanished forever, banished into society's coldest regions, she popped up at a charity dinner ... as if she had never been away," the Daily Express said recently.

Officers noted that she had turned up in a $14,500 designer outfit of turquoise, yellow, violet and pale pink. The duchess has been among the least popular members of the royal family since she married the queen's second son.

Between two and four percent of respondents have picked her as their most favorite royal in Gallup polls the past four years. Asked to rate the duchess' service to the nation on a scale of 10, most gave her a 0, 1 or 2.

The sensationalist British tabloids have criticized her weight (a size 14 wedding dress), her clothes ("a fashion obscenity" on Richard Blackwell's worst-dressed list), her house (a crisis between a Burger King and South Fork of "Dallas"), and her frequent holidays.

The comeback hasn't been helped by a recent kiss-and-tell book in which author Lesley Player claimed she slept with the duchess' father, Maj. Ron Ferguson, with Sarah's knowledge.

Nevadans push for new censorship policy

CARSON CITY (AP) — The state Board of Education is expected to decide Saturday on a new policy for determining whether publications such as Rolling Stone should be banned from school libraries.

Virginia City residents Mike and Rose Arp pushed for the policy review. At a recent board meeting, Mrs. Arp read from a Rolling Stone article with lurid descriptions of prostitution in Thailand.

Mrs. Arp said she didn't clean up her testimony because the publication is allowed in the school library in Virginia City, so she felt she could read it aloud to adults.

Nevada law says the state superintendent of public instruction has the final word on school library books and should reject any that would lead children to form ideals "not in harmony with truth and morality or the American way of life."

But state schools chief Gene

Paslov has said Nevada is too large now for the superintendent to approve every book, and book selection is now left to school libraries.

Prompted by the Arps' complaint, state education officials drafted a new policy to require local school board approval of books and periodicals destined for school libraries. The state superintendent would approve the review procedures and ensure there is an appeal process for those who object to the books.

The proposed policy says local school boards should be guided by the American Library Association's Library Bill of Rights and Freyre books and should reject any that would lead children to form ideals "not in harmony with truth and morality or the American way of life."

But Mrs. Arp is still concerned. She said the ALA statements may be appropriate for public libraries, but don't take into account the special nature of school libraries.

Adolfo drops designing fashion for license business

NEW YORK (AP) — Adolfo, whose fashions have graced Nancy Reagan and Betsy Bloomingdale, is calling it quits on designing to concentrate on his licensing business.

"They became like part of my family," Adolfo said in Friday's New York Times. "I never socialized with them — I don't go to parties — but I did enjoy very much the confidence and trust and help they always gave me."

The 60-year-old, Cuban-born Adolfo Sardinia, who has never used his family name professionally, licenses his name for royalties to manufacturers of men's wear, luggage, handbags, shoes, jogging suits, furs, sportswear, perfume and hats.

McEnroe, airline worker solve suit for unknown sum REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) —

Detective: Tired of caring for aunt, girls kill mother

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Two young sisters killed their mother because they thought getting rid of her would free them from having to care for an invalid aunt, an investigator said.

The girls devised the crime while feeding their 73-year-old aunt, who has Alzheimer's disease. They concluded they wouldn't have to care for her if their mother was dead, sheriff's Detective Donald Griffiths testified Wednesday.

Kathryn Marie Tomassoni, 12, and Tammie Marie Tomassoni, 11,

John McEnroe agreed to pay an airline worker an undisclosed sum to settle her lawsuit claiming he shoved her against a wall when she refused to hold a flight for him and his family.

Diane Lempe was "pleased and relieved" by the agreement reached Wednesday, said her lawyer, Tom LaLanne.

Lempe, a customer service representative for United Airlines, said in her Superior Court lawsuit that the tennis player grew angry when she refused to hold a Hawaii-bound flight until McEnroe's wife, Tatum O'Neal, their two children and their nanny arrived at the gate.

Lempe said she suffered a broken finger in the December 1990 racket at San Francisco International Airport. McEnroe was questioned by airport police but are accused of killing their adoptive mother, Lydia Tomassoni, 63, who was shot to death Feb. 5 while she slept at their home in rural Chandler Heights.

The girls then took $1,456 of their mother's money and spent some of it on makeup, Valentine candy and swimwear, Griffiths said. He testified during a hearing in the juvenile division of Maricopa County Superior Court.

Griffiths said both girls had run away repeatedly and that Kathryn not arrested. Judge Gene McDonald ordered the terms of the agreement to remain confidential.

Buckingham Palace mum on reports of new baby

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne may or may not be expecting a baby. Buckingham Palace wouldn't confirm or deny a report Friday in the Daily Express that the princess apparently is pregnant.

The writer of the tabloid story, columnist Ross Benson, said he based the observation on circumstantial evidence.

Anne's husband, Navy Cmdr, Timothy Laurence, told friends he wants a child, Benson said. Benson also reported that Anne felt faint while shopping recently and isn't riding regularly anymore.

"When a member of the royal had a 30-year-old boyfriend. Prosecutors on Wednesday charged Tammie with first-degree murder, conspiracy to commit murder, armed robbery and theft."

Kathryn was charged, with theft, but Griffiths testified she shot her mother once in the head with a pistol while Tammie stood by.

Police said Tammie was charged with murder even though she didn't shoot her mother because she admitted involvement in the killing while Kathryn didn't.

family becomes pregnant, an announcement is made at a time of their choosing," a palace statement said.

Laurence, 37, was a bachelor until his marriage in December to Anne, 42, the only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II. Anne was divorced last year from her first husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, and has two children.

Prince Charles, German leader meet in private

BONN, Germany (AP) — Prince Charles met privately with Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Friday before receiving an award for his environmental efforts.

The two met for more than an hour at Kohl's office. A government spokesman said the talk was of a "private character" but covered international affairs, particularly world environmental policy.

The International group Artists for Ecology honored the British crown prince with an award to be given late Friday at the government's presidential, mountain-top guesthouse.

Grid coach arrested for arranging sex encounters between wife, players

HEMET, Calif. (AP) — A high school football coach and his wife were arrested for investigation of charges that he arranged sexual encounters between her and a select few of his young players.

Rumors at Hemet High School circulated for at least a year, but football team members who knew about the alleged arrangement observed a code of silence, several students and a school official told The Hemet News.

The silence was shattered this week when coach Randy Brown, 38, and his 31-year-old wife, Kelly, were booked for investigation of the charges.

One varsity football player told the newspaper most of the team knew and the prevailing attitude was, "If you have nothing to do with it, keep it to yourself."

The player said several others spoke to the newspaper Wednesday.

on condition that their names were not used.

Mrs. Brown was under investigation for allegedly having sex with at least one minor and her husband "was involved in a conspiracy for it to take place," said Todd Rash, a deputy district attorney in Riverside County.

The two were freed Tuesday on $25,000 bond each.

"Students, faculty and staff are pretty much in a state of disbelief," said Dick Glock, principal at the high school in Hemet, a small desert town about 60 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

"We have many fine staff members and a strong parental network that we will rely on heavily in the days ahead of us," Glock said.

The school district brought in extra counselors for students and hired extra security to keep reporters and photographers off school grounds.

F&G bill becomes flight of fancy

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Freshman state Rep. Robbi King has learned a lot this session about the ins and outs of the legislative process. But she's also learned that, in a body as informal as the Idaho House of Representatives, sometimes humor is the best way to make your point.

King, R-Glenns Ferry, co-sponsored House Bill 144, which in its original form required county commissioners to approve any land purchases by the Department of Fish and Game.

After running into fierce opposition from hunters, fishers and conservationists, the bill was amended in the Senate to require only that Fish and Game hold a public hearing on proposed land purchases if county commissioners asked them to, and to prepare land-management plans based on those hearings. Before the amended bill could go to Gov. Cecil Andrus' desk, the House had to approve the Senate's changes. Usually this is a fairly routine process, but King, a former flight attendant for Braniff — decided to have some fun Friday.

Wearing a scarf over her shoulders and directing lawmakers' attention to the "three emergency exits located in this chamber," King told her colleagues to fasten their seatbelts as she explained HB 144's bumpy flight.

But first, she reminded cigarette-loving House Speaker Mike Simpson that "since King wings to shudder, the bulkheads to rattle, and it was evident that we were going down."

(Two of King's neighbors, Mark Stubbs of Twin Falls and Dolores Crow of Nampa helped out with sound effects.)

Sen. Stan Hawkins, R-Ucon, then brokered a compromise between Fish and Game and the agricultural groups who had sought the bill. The compromise jettisoned the county approval requirement, which this is an inter-Statehouse flight, we request that you refrain from smoking."

HB 144 passed the House last month with "a normal amount of turbulence," King said, "but when we hit the Senate, storm clouds caused the House to stall."

That brought the bill back to the House, and King to the end of her speech.

"I would ask you at this time to bring your seat back to its full and upright position," she told lawmakers. "Check around your desk area to make sure you have read the amendments, and upon deplaning, I would instruct you to hit your green light (for 'yes')." Thank you for flying with HB 144 as amended."

After the House stopped laughing, they approved the amended bill 51-9.

Father who threatened sex abuser sentenced

JEROME — The Jerome father who threatened police as they arrested a man who had sexually abused his daughter was sentenced for misdemeanor assault Friday.

The father received a jail term of 30 days, that was suspended. He must pay a $100 fine and court costs, serve six months probation at a cost of $30 per month and complete 50 hours of community service. Also, he must write an apology to the police department and enroll in an anger management class.

The man was arrested in September after police found him at the home of Jose L. Gonzales, wielding a knife in each hand.

Gonzales, 69, later pleaded guilty to molesting the man's 11-year-old daughter and is in the Jerome County Jail waiting to be sentenced.

Firefighters keep blaze inside kitchen of Ketchum restaurant

KETCHUM — A short circuit in a refrigeration pump started a fire that damaged a Ketchum restaurant Thursday night.

Firefighters from Ketchum and Sun Valley battled the flames at The Kneadery on Leadville Avenue for about 2½ hours after the blaze began at 10:20 p.m., Ketchum 911 dispatcher Gary Stitzinger said.

Fire crews contained the blaze within the kitchen, Stitzinger said.

"They got there just in time, otherwise the whole building might have gone," he said.

Officials maintain search for girls who escaped from motel

TWIN FALLS — Two girls who escaped from detention at a Twin Falls motel Thursday remained on the loose Friday evening.

The girls are sisters and were being held under guard at the Motel 3, 248 Second Ave. W. They had been charged with grand theft, Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Toulsey said.

One of the girls is 14 years old and the other may be 15 or 16, he said.

The sisters escaped through a ground-floor window Thursday evening and may have gotten in a pickup wearing white T-shirts and orange pants.

The county keeps female juveniles under guard at local motels because no permanent detention center for girls exists. A makeshift detention center in a display building at the county fairgrounds in Filer holds only boys.

Twin Falls County seeks grant funds to upgrade buildings

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Commission Chairman Jim Fraley said this week the county has applied for $205,000 in grants to bring buildings up to the standards of the Americans With Disabilities Act.

The money comes from Community Block Development Grants issued through the Idaho Department of Commerce. Cities and counties throughout Idaho applied for the grant money.

The county would use the money for such projects as remodeling the restrooms at the county fairgrounds, installing wheelchair ramps at the county office building and making the elevator in the County Courthouse accessible to those with disabilities.

Fraley hopes to learn soon about the grant awards.

With warming weather, roads closed to prevent damage

TWIN FALLS — Now that the ground is thawing and snow is melting, the Bureau of Land Management and the Forest Service are closing roads in the South Hills.

The BLM has closed Indian Spring Road from Foothill Road to the Sawtooth National Forest boundary; Cherry Springs Road from Rock Creek Road to Indian Spring Road; and West Fork of Dry Creek Road from the Tugaw Ranch to the forest boundary.

The roads will be closed until April 10. The Forest Service reports that North Cottonwood Road and the Hopper Gulch Road also will be closed.

Wheel ruts created when roads are wet cause erosion during snow melt and spring rains and damage roads further.

The recent rainstorms have kept Lyle Hampton of Twin Falls busy channeling leaks from his ceiling to buckets in his home. Hampton developed his aluminum foil and duct tape canal system several years ago when he and his wife, Barbara, discovered the flat roof on their Second Avenue West home leaked. The Hamptons say they cannot afford a new roof and have grown used to the shiny chutes that hang from the ceiling in every room of the house.

Ida-Pride owners put any rebuilding plans on hold; workers wait, wonder

Mychel Matthews Goodman
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON — Disappointment came in the mail this week for employees of Ida-Pride Potatoes, the fresh pack operation that burned Dec. 8.

The fire left 55 people from Hazelton and surrounding communities jobless, but with hopes of returning to work this summer.

But Ida-Pride workers were notified that the potato operation will not "rebuild its packing facility at this time," according to a letter received by employees and suppliers this week.

The letter, signed by Harold and Dennis Seelye, president and vice president of the company, cited "financial constraints, increased cost of construction ... and the ever-increasing volatility of the potato market" for not rebuilding.

Dennis Seelye said Friday that Ida-

Pride's shutdown was "not necessarily a closure."

"We just have everything on hold at the present time, till we figure out where we're at."

He added he had no idea when construction will start up again.

"There have been no decisions made yet," he said.

In January, Dennis Seelye told The Times-News that he hoped to have the plant operating by June or July. A construction site had been chosen for the new plant, and the company was employing seven workers, he said.

News of the shutdown came as a surprise to Dale Kent of Hazelton, who was one of the seven employed through the winter. He had worked for Ida-Pride for three years.

Kent said that until a few days ago he was on a small crew that was building bins at an Ida-Pride-owned cellar, located six miles from the old plant.

"Since we were working (to rebuild) I didn't think it would ever shut down," he said.

Those who were left jobless by the fire were hoping to get back to work soon, until they also received their notice.

Joe Fenn of Eden, whose wife had worked at Ida-Pride for 17 years, said Lonna June was shocked when she received her notice.

"She had planned on going back to work for them this summer," he said. "Ida-Pride is certainly going to be missed by (the community)."

Mayor Ervid Vansickle said the City Council planned to discuss the void left by Ida-Pride at its next meeting.

Kim Day, a spokesman with the Idaho Department of Insurance, said an investigation by the state Fire Marshal's office concluded that the fire was started by electrical wiring.

Sun Valley pilot walks away from 2nd crash in 4 months

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

HAILEY — A 46-year-old Sun Valley pilot walked away from his second airplane crash in just over three months Friday.

David F. Wilson was preparing to take off from Friedman Memorial Airport in his single-engine Piper Malibu Friday morning when the plane's left wing and wheel clipped a snow bank, Idaho State Police dispatcher Gloria Hackworth said.

The plane flipped onto its top, but Wilson and three passengers walked away from the 6:30 a.m. crash with minor injuries.

Wilson escaped serious injury Dec. 11 when his plane crashed in a muddy field south of Twin Falls.

In that accident, Wilson was flying in heavy fog and tried to land at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

His plane went down in a field less than a mile from the runway, and search crews beat the fog for two hours before finding Wilson walking near the plane.

He was treated for minor cuts and went home that evening.

Wilson, who owns a Ketchum construction company, did not return telephone calls to his office Friday.

The Idaho State Police investigated Friday's crash, but Hackworth said information on the plane's destination and the identity of the passengers was unavailable.

Airport manager, Todd Wirthlin said Wilson lost control just as he prepared to take off.

The plane veered off the left side of the runway and hit the snow, he said.

Blast propels well cover into Buhl airport ceiling

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

BUHL — An explosion in a water well at the Buhl airport caused more confusion than damage Friday morning.

Division of Environmental Quality officials were called to pin down the cause of the mysterious blast, Buhl Fire Chief Tom Owens said.

"It was a relatively small explosion" inside a building used for airplane repairs, Owens said. The blast launched the well cover into a ceiling heating duct, but caused no other damage, he said.

Two people inside the building were not hurt.

The explosion was probably caused by vapors that had built up in the well, Owens said.

Tests revealed that water in the well is contaminated, but officials aren't sure what is in the water, he said.

Environmental quality officials sent samples to Boise for testing and should have some results by Tuesday.

Until then, Owens said the well has been ventilated to prevent vapors from building up.

The well is not used for drinking water; it supplies a toilet and a sink inside the building, he said.

The contamination appears to be limited to the surface of the well water because water from the sink, which comes from below the water level, appears to be uncontaminated, Owens said.

Man pleads guilty in DUI case

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The man who nearly killed a Jerome woman in January when he plowed into her car in a drunken haze pleaded guilty Friday to aggravated driving under the influence.

Chris Leo Kiser, 34, of Twin Falls remained in the Jerome County Jail Friday night after 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl set bond at $30,000.

The maximum penalty for the felony charge is five years in prison and a five-year driver's license suspension.

Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan would not say Friday what sentence he will recommend.

Kiser, who has a string of drunken-driving arrests that ends with the Jan. 28 collision with 23-year-old Kathleen McKay, said his recollection of the incident is still unclear.

"I had consumed enough alcohol to black out. I don't even remember leaving home," Kiser said.

Records show his blood-alcohol tests after the accident registered .27 and .29 percent. Idaho law makes it illegal to drive with a blood alcohol level of .10 percent or greater.

Kiser had been released after posting $10,000 bond, but he was arrested again one week ago for violating the judge's order not to drink alcohol.

Deputy Wayne Childers arrested Kiser during a routine traffic stop of another driver. Kiser was a passenger, but Childers smelled booze on his breath. A breath test showed Kiser's blood alcohol level was more than twice the legal driving limit.

"Because Kiser cannot control his behavior, he is to remain in jail if bond is not raised during the pre-sentencing investigation," Meehl said Friday.

Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan had asked for a $50,000 bond and said Kiser may have left the area for Seattle several times since he was released.

Kiser's earlier release on bond was made with the provision that he not leave the area.

Kiser is scheduled to stand trial in May for a December drunken-driving arrest in Twin Falls.

His guilty plea came on a day when Kathleen McKay's parents were looking forward to their daughter coming home.

Betty McKay said earlier in the week that her daughter's recovery at a Boise rehabilitation center was going so well that she might be released this weekend.

McKay, who is studying to become a doctor, will still be required to return to the hospital for regular therapy sessions.

She suffered numerous injuries, including a broken hip and minor brain damage that doctors hope is temporary.

Newcomb hopes to 'get a life' after bill passes

By Drew DeSilva
Times-News writer

BOISE — House Majority Leader Bruce Newcomb passed Friday afternoon that he was close to get a performance-audit bill enacted into law.

Two days after Gov. Cecil Andrus vetoed Newcomb's first performance-audit bill, the Burien Republican implored his colleagues from the floor of the House to pass a compromise measure.

"I beg everybody in this body to please, please vote on this bill, so I can get a life," Newcomb said to general laughter.

The House obliged, passing the compromise 54-8. It now goes to the Senate, where indications are it will sail through on bipartisan wings.

The compromise essentially splits the difference between Newcomb's and Andrus' approaches to performance audits — systematic analyses of how efficiently state agencies are doing their jobs and how effective state programs are.

Newcomb had wanted legislative analysts to do the audits, with the option of hiring outside firms for specialized services. Andrus wanted the audits done exclusively by private companies. The bill passed Friday combines those approaches.

Other action

The performance-audit vote came at the end of a busy day for the House, which had 59 pieces of legislation on its agenda. The Senate also spent much of Friday trying to empty its "logjam."

Andrus' Senate both chambers' best efforts to wrap up their work, the 1993 legislative session will extend into next week.

Among Friday's legislative action: On a voice vote, the Senate unanimously confirmed the nomination of Twin Falls banker Curtis Eaton to the State Board of Education. Eaton attended his first meeting of the board Friday.

Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, told his colleagues that Eaton "is well known in Twin Falls for thoughtful and solid wisdom and the ability to provide constructive leadership. He will bring good, stable leadership to the board."

The House OK'd a Senate bill that will leave up to local school districts how to implement the state requirement for gifted-and-talented programs.

The Department of Education had proposed a $7 million gifted-and-talented program to be implemented by contractors in each school district. House Education Committee Chairman Ron Black said, but that wasn't the Legislature's intention when it enacted the gifted-and-talented mandate two years ago, Black said.

The new bill directs the department to help schools develop their own gifted-and-talented programs, rather than ask. It leaves in the requirement that some sort of program be established.

The House approved a $5.3 million appropriation for the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind in Gooding. That bill now goes to Andrus for his signature.

Repeat child sex offenders will face a mandatory minimum five-year prison sentence under a bill approved 56-8 by the House Friday. Black and Rep. Ceilia Gould, R-Buhl, were among the eight "no" votes.

The House also approved a bill requiring day-care workers to receive at least four hours of training annually. However, it deleted a provision that would have required include "health and safety issues" such as handwashing and first aid.

Castleford forms sex education committee

By Diane Schorzman
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — The School Board appointed a 22-member sex education committee earlier this week.

The committee, consisting of parents, parents, teachers and school administrators, was formed as part of the district's controversial sex issues policy.

The new policy states that, with regard to all sex education and instruction, all supplemental materials shall be pre-approved by a committee composed of a minimum of two parents, two teachers, two administrators/board members and two representatives representing an unbiased cross-section of the community. The committee will be chaired by teacher Connie Kinyon.

The committee's first meeting is set for 7:30 p.m. on April 14 at the school to review program and work on an outline for sex education in the elementary school. All interested parents are welcome to attend.

The board also conducted a first step in adding to the existing personnel hiring policy. The addition states that "applicants will be required to agree to testing for drugs and/or fingerprinting and a police background check if the district might require it."

The policy will apply to new employees, says Superintendent Henry Kilmer, and is being added "to give us the opportunity (to check background) if we need it" for things such as suspected drug abuse.

A recent state review of the district's special education program showed that the school is in compliance, "but they would very much prefer we have additional staff in special education," said Kilmer.

Teacher and track coach Bill Garrison reported that over 40 students have signed up for the school's track program, in its first season at Castleford.

Richard Dykes will return to the school this summer as counselor.

In other business the board: "Voted to join the Idaho Rural Schools Association. The mission of the group is to ensure that all public school students in the state have equal education opportunities."

The board also investigated the possibility of installing a heat exchange system between the elementary and high school buildings.

Kimberly students honored

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Three seventh-grade Kimberly students received top honors in the recent Idaho Public Television computer essay contest.

Jerrett Hall and Eric Larsen were runners-up in the top ten, with first-place honors going to Beth Brierly for her essay on faculty member George McAdams.

The school will be awarded $2,000, to be used for computer equipment. The three contestants are students of Mary-Calhoun.

Theron Sorgatz said at the Thursday School Board meeting that the Magic Valley Arts Council had presented a grant to his music department to be used for new instruments, if the school could match the amount. The board agreed to do so.

Sorgatz said there was a great need for new tubs and repair of several other tubs.

Shane Jones, Leslie Kaiser and Anne McLaughlin outlined the chemical abuse/awareness policy in the three-point agenda.

They said the program was an excellent one that started with support groups of students, parents and other agencies striving for a drug-free school.

The board agreed to hire Dave Davies to work as architect with the engineering firm Design West to eliminate the problems the recent weather that caused water on the floor of the gym.

The board voted to hold the last payment due the firm until all repairs had been made.

Superintendent James Garner stated the out-of-district attendance policy would be "tightened" because of expected overcrowding; however, out-of-district students currently enrolled will be allowed to finish in Kimberly.

Garner said the district would advertise for bids throughout the Northwest for a school bus next week.

In the past, used buses had been purchased in the Midwest as it was an area for low mileage buses. These buses no longer meet Idaho's requirements for school buses.

The board accepted the resignation of Dr. Colleen Larson, elementary principal, so she could return to Oregon, her home state.

Court OKs project across Payette River

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court has rejected environmental challenges to the Horseshoe Bend hydroelectric dam on Idaho's Payette River.

The Army Corps of Engineers acted quickly in approving the dam and-fill permit for the dam and in deciding that it would have no significant impact on the environment, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Friday.

The court adopted a standard the court adopted late last year to give increased deference to a government agency's environmental review.

The dam is to generate 9.5 megawatts of electricity for Idaho Power Co. It will divert water from 4½ miles of the western Idaho river through a canal and over powerhouse turbines. The scheduled completion date is in late 1994, said David Hirsch, general counsel for Horseshoe Bend Hydroelectric Co., and part owner of the project.

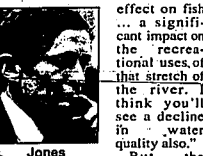

"We will proceed as quickly as we can," he said.

Two environmental groups, Friends of the Payette and Idaho River United, sued to stop the project, claiming violations of environmental and clean-water laws.

They disputed the Corps of Engineers' determination that diverting water from the river would have a significant effect on wetlands, water quality, fisheries and recreation. They also challenged the corps' decision not to hold a public hearing, and U.S. District Judge Martin Callister's refusal to allow testimony by the groups' environmental experts.

The corps "essentially ignored the impact of the project on the bypass stretch of the river, about 4½ miles that will no longer be devoted during the summer months," farmer Idaho attorney general Jim Jones, who handled the case for the environmental groups, said Friday.

"It will have a pretty devastating effect on fish — a significant impact on the recreational uses of that stretch of the river. I think you'll see a decline in water quality also."

But the court, in a 3-0 ruling, upheld Callister's decision allowing the project to proceed.

The opinion by Judge Eugene Wright said the government agency was entitled to conclude that the loss of more than 24 acres of wetlands would be adequately offset by a requirement to create 66 acres of new wetlands in the area.

He also upheld the corps' reliance on the company's water quality monitoring programs and on measures to compensate for the loss of fish.

Wright also said the corps was allowed to conclude that no public hearing was needed because it was aware of all sides' views through written comments.

On similar grounds, he upheld Callister's decision not to allow additional court testimony from the environmental groups.

Jones said his clients probably would not appeal further. But Jeff Kelly, spokesman for Friends of the Payette, said the decision was disappointing.

"This is a serious setback, but we remain committed to opposing this ill-conceived project," Kelly said. "We stand by our opinion that the environmental analysis was inadequate."

He said Friends of the Payette "will use any appropriate means to continue to fight for the river. We do not consider the matter of the Horseshoe Bend hydropower project closed."

Logging must cut further to protect spotted owl, Forest Service reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Logging cutbacks above and beyond those required to save the northern spotted owl are necessary to protect hundreds of other species dependent on old-growth forests, the Forest Service said Friday.

The agency, in response to a federal court order, acknowledged the need to protect the threatened bird would not go far enough to ensure the survival of other troubled fish and wildlife living in the Pacific Northwest's centuries-old forests.

The findings were included in a report by an internal scientific team that the service submitted Friday to U.S. District Judge William Dwyer in Seattle.

The report said that in protecting the spotted species, there is a pretty good indication of why we need new legislation," said Mark Rey of the American Forest and Paper Association.

"We find, as other resource analysts before us, that there is a need to reduce logging on a panel led by Forest Service biologist Jack Ward Thomas.

"It is likely that continued reliance on a species-by-species approach to preserve biodiversity will fail," the report said.

Environmentalists cheered the study's findings.

"It's about time they based something on science instead of politics," said Kevin Kirchner of the Sierra Club. "It's a good thing that timber industry leaders and labor leaders said it was further proof of the importance of President Clinton's April 2 forest conference, which will seek a consensus on the issue."

"That you had here is a pretty good indication of why we need new legislation," said Mark Rey of the American Forest and Paper Association.

"It certainly shows the need for the human element to be put into the equation," said Miles Draper of the Western Council of Industrial Workers, based in Portland, Ore.

Dwyer issued an injunction two years ago banning logging across millions of acres of national forests. The ruling came when he found government logging operations to be in violation of federal environmental laws.

The judge said the Forest Service had not completed the appropriate impact studies nor followed its own protection strategy.

The agency submitted a revised plan last year — in the form of an environmental impact statement with a preferred alternative — in hopes of persuading Dwyer to lift the logging ban.

He refused.

God has paid the toll, the rest is up to us

For those who ask, "What's with all of these Christians going around talking about Jesus?" — let me give you my response.

It's quite simple actually. We want to present our evidence. We Christians have been liberated from our bondage to sin. We have been given the freedom to maximize our potential by the one who molded us in the womb, and we want to provide ourselves as evidence that God loves humanity even though we don't deserve it.

We have evidence to present, and we don't have to lie or invent strange philosophies in order to get our point across. Reality is all we need. An empirical observation of reality reveals that the universe had a beginning (scientists call the beginning "The Big Bang"). We know by the laws of physics and nature that if something had a beginning that it must have had a cause. Logic would indicate that anything capable of causing the universe to come into being would certainly fit the definition of God.

And how about Christ? There are eyewitness accounts of his teachings and his miracles, including his resurrection and ascension. The authority of these accounts has been confirmed by the secular historians of the same time period. Eyewitness accounts and expert testimony are considered to be sufficient evidence to establish the reality of events in courtroom situations. What would the verdict be on Christ? There is more hard evidence for the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ than there is for the existence of an evolutionary link between monkeys and humans. Go figure.

But sometimes reality is hard to take — reality like that expressed in Galatians 5:19-21.

The acts of the sinful nature are obvious: sexual immorality, impurity and debauchery; idolatry and witchcraft; hatred, discord, jealousy, fits of rage, selfish ambition, dissensions, factions and envy; drunkenness, orgies and the like. I warn you, as I did before, that those who do like this will not inherit the kingdom of God.

Tough medicine in our day and age. But Jesus Christ provides the cure when he says, "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the father except through me."

The good news is — he has not only provided the truth but also the way, and he has already paid the toll. All he asks us to do ... is accept the life.

Graham begins different crusade

By Ken Garfield
Knight-Ridder News Service

Billy Graham

ESSEN, Germany — It started Wednesday night in a small hall in the heart of the Ruhr Valley. Some believe it is Billy Graham's last great crusade. Slowed by the rust of years and onset of Parkinson's disease, which grips him more than he publicly lets on, Graham is no longer the fire-breathing preacher who first wowed the world 45 years ago.

Instead, he is a silver-haired evangelist whose hands often shake, whose time and energy are conserved by conscientious aides, and whose ministry continues along a dramatic new course this week in Germany.

Relying on modern technology to send out his message, Graham began his five-night crusade expected to reach more than 2 million people in 59 countries and territories. The United States is not included.

Whatever he's done before — and whatever he does over the next year at crusades planned for Pittsburgh, Columbus, Ohio, and Tokyo — those who know Graham believe the Charlotte, N.C., farm boy who long ago left the farm is about to make one more big splash.

"I fully don't expect to see another major crusade like this," said David Neff, managing editor of Christianity Today magazine. "In some ways, this is the crowning event."

Where once he preached to stadiums full of folks yearning to hear his word, Graham speaks this week to an audience of just 7,000 in Essen, while millions more watch via satellite. Graham, 74, arrived in Europe about a week ago. He discussed the state of Christianity last week with Pope John Paul II.

To reporters, he joked about whether his two dogs and a cat made it through last weekend's vicious storm at his home in Monroet, N.C. To supporters in Essen, he downplayed his own importance and spoke little of Germany's growing economic problems and tension over right-wing violence.

"It's not Billy Graham," he preached. "It's the message and power of the Holy Spirit. It can help people who are out of jobs in the steel industry."

Cult leader not alone in claiming to be God

By Jean Marbella
The Baltimore Sun

David Koresh

Nietzsche notwithstanding, God is not dead.

"You could go outside the New York Public Library, and there will be 20 Christs, a couple of Pauls and some Peters," says Dr. Jonas Rapoport, who retired as chief medical officer of the Baltimore Circuit Court last year and is considered the father of forensic psychiatry. "These are terribly sick people, so no one follows them, no one pays attention to them. But then there are these chaps who are less ill, and who are charismatic and can get people to follow them, like this one in Texas and Jim Jones."

When David Koresh, head of the cult which became involved in a protracted standoff with federal agents outside Waco, Texas, proclaims that he is Christ — or alternately, the Messiah — "the Lamb of God" — he is treading on familiar turf. A number of cult leaders, criminals and the simply psychotic have announced over the years that they are some variant of the highest deity. Sun Myung Moon of the Unification Church, Jim Jones of the People's Temple in Guyana and Yahweh Ben Yahweh of the Nation of Yahweh in Miami, for example, are just a few who have crowded the heavenly field.

And it's not just religious leaders. Distant criminals have been known to claim godhood — either in true delusion or as a way of coping an insanity plea. A Maryland man named Robert James Smith, for example, said he was God and killed his father, the devil. Graham was declared insane, he pleaded guilty but not criminally responsible for the 1990 murder. In California in 1967, a police killer responded to his last, failed bid for clemency by slashing his wrists and claiming to be Jesus Christ — a proclamation he continued all the way to the gas chamber.

While such claims are considered blasphemous by adherents of many mainstream religions, they make a perverse sort of sense, at least when the claimant is obviously delusional.

"If you're going to have a delusion, you're not going to imagine you're Joe Zerk," says Rapoport. "People who feel inadequate or isolated, by identifying with a powerful figure, hope they will derive some of that power."

"Believing you're Jesus, unless you really are, would be considered a delusion. It would most frequently be a symptom of paranoid schizophrenia," he says. "But, he cautions, it's impossible to diagnose Koresh from this far afield."

The psychological maiming of clergy must stop

I am now quite certain that some pastors' lives are out of control and that they don't know what to do about their personal chaos.

For me, the convincing factor was a 1991 survey of clergy by the Fuller Institute of Church Growth. This study indicates that clergy are in a sadder state than we ever believed.

For instance, 70 percent of those surveyed say they do not have someone they consider a close friend. A "close friend," I assume, means a man or woman a pastor can talk to about personal things and trust that it won't get spread all over the neighborhood.

After all, there are many expectations of pastors, and few of them are written down where a body can read and ponder them.

One of those expected behaviors is that pastors will not go around the neighborhood complaining about parishioners. And if it becomes common knowledge that a pastor is a complainer and a blabbermouth, the entire ministry takes a tumble. So, you can see that clergy have to be careful about friendships.

But this statistic might say as much about religious communities as it does about the behavior of clergy. Perhaps congregations are sending a subtle message to clergy that any kind of friendship will be frowned upon. If that is the case, our pastors are being deprived of one of the great joys of life.

Clark Morpew

What we are developing here is a kind of public hermit who can roam about the streets all day but then must retreat to the passageway cave in silence when the sun sets.

So the churches are being served by men and women who know hundreds of people — some quite intimately, because of the sharing that goes on in counseling sessions — but they are not allowed to clasp down on any of those relationships hard enough to shape a close friendship.

The second factor that makes life miserable for clergy is the frequency of conflict in their lives. Forty percent of clergy surveyed by the Fuller Institute said they have a serious conflict with parishioners at least once a month. And 75 percent say they have had a serious stressful crisis at least once in their ministry.

Further, after all of this bashing from crabby church members, 70 percent say their self-esteem is lower now than it was when they started in ministry. And 80 percent say parish ministry has negatively affected their families.

You might wonder why anyone would put up with those kinds of conditions, coming to work day after day and getting bawled out by sour people. Very often, those confrontations with parishioners happen behind closed doors or over the telephone. And pastors feel that if they make the conflict public, they will split the congregation wide open.

So they endure, and the stress eats away at their lives and their families. If all this is true, what we have in American pulpits is a bunch of sad sacks who don't like themselves and who think they're inadequate and incompetent. Exactly the wrong people to serve up the gospel of Good News. I've said it before, pew sitters, you have to let up on your clergy. Most of these conflicts are about trivia, not about the great theological ideas that drive healthy churches.

If I thought this had anything to do with theology, I wouldn't be so upset. But that's not what this is all about. It's about power and fighting over who controls the church. The truth is, no mortal owns that congregation where you worship and take spiritual sustenance. That church belongs to God, and mortal members are its stewards.

In your role as caretaker, it is imperative that you do everything to preserve the peace so the mission can move forward. If you demoralize the leader, the mission is stalled already. Rather, each member should be cultivating an environment in which a true leader with vision can operate.

But some of this depends on clergy, too, and there is plenty they can do to keep themselves vital: Take time for prayer. Do your best at preaching. Get plenty of rest and time to avoid no-win situations. Get some close friendships. Take time for family. And once in a while, get down and boogie.

The psychological maiming of our clergy has to stop. I know few employers who would treat people as badly as the church treats its leaders. It boils down to this: Some pastors are obviously in trouble, and when the servants are not being blessed by the church, everybody suffers.

Clark Morpew is an ordained clergyman and is religion writer for the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press.

Poll: American pulse wavering on values

By George W. Cornell The Associated Press

NEW YORK — According to the pollsters, values are on a zigzag, wavering course in America. The characteristic shows up in rapid changes in people's assessment of some aspects of life.

Just how the biblical adage, "You cannot love God and wealth," fit into that combination was not examined. However, the curious juxtaposition of change was included in the Barna Report, 1992-93, by pollster George Barna, president of Barna Research Group of Glendale, Calif.

"People's values change with alarming rapidity these days," the report says, adding, "Americans are in a period of emotional flux. They are seeking just the right balance of ideas, experiences, values and goods to arrive at a pleasing harmony of their internal and external realities."

However, the importance attached to family, time and health remained high and relatively steady, but jumps were registered in importance attached to friends, living comfortably and the Bible, along with religion and money.

Three-fourths of adults consider the Bible God's "written word" and say it teaches accurately; 79 percent say the Ten Commandments still are relevant and 76 percent consider sin a present reality.

Barna's surveys "found weekly church attendance dropping over the past seven years from 43 percent to 49 percent," most recently at 47 percent, considerably higher than the 40 to 43 percent registered in Gallup polls.

But in either case, it's a big slice of the population, more than 100 million adults, in church or synagogue each week.

Most teens — 70 percent — consider themselves religious, including most of those who don't regularly attend church. The Gallup research center recently rounded up some of the unusual-facts it had found in 15 years of surveys, including these:

• Low to moderate-income people are more generous than upper-income people in contributing volunteer time and money to help the needy, and that minority groups, often in need themselves, are among the most generous of all people.

• Forty-four percent of Americans believe God has spoken directly to them.

• Seventy percent of Americans believe in the devil, half of them saying he is personal and half saying he is an impersonal force.

• Sixty percent of American households report that someone says a prayer before meals eaten at home.

• Although 80 percent of Americans describe themselves as Christians, only about half can identify who delivered the Sermon on the Mount. P.S. It was Jesus.

Vatican dismisses outspoken theologian

By Colleen Barry The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — An outspoken Roman Catholic theologian has been ousted from the Dominican order in what he sees as part of a Vatican movement to stifle dissent.

"This is how fascism works," the Rev. Matthew Fox said. "It sets up a fear that this could happen to you, so the fear goes throughout the whole system."

Fox was notified of his dismissal from the Dominicans in a letter dated Feb. 24. The letter cites Fox's refusal to return to the order's provincial office in Chicago as directed in 1991.

Fox said he viewed the order as an end to his work at the Institute in Culture and Creation Spirituality, which he founded in Chicago in 1977. Fox moved to California in 1983. He's also the author of 14 books, including "The Coming of the Cosmic Christ," and is editor of the magazine "Creation Spirituality."

Fox casts his dismissal in the context of Vatican censure of other theologians, such as the Rev. Charles Curran for his liberal views on sexual ethics and the Rev. Leonardo Boff, a Brazilian leader of liberation theology.

"I think the meaning in terms of the American church is probably going to mean less and less middle ground in the church. It's a pity but they are now on the side of the right wing," said Fox, 52.

Fox was silenced by the Vatican for one year in 1987 for his teachings of creation spirituality, an ecumenical theology that blends Christian mysticism with environmentalism, social justice and feminism.

Fox also has called for the ordination of women and optional celibacy for priests, dissenting from Roman Catholic Church doctrine.

But the Rev. Donald Goergen, Fox's Dominican superior, said the order's reasons for seeking Fox's dismissal were not theological, as were the Vatican's when it silenced Fox. Goergen, in fact, wrote a letter defending Fox's theology at that time.

"But the issue that we have been struggling with is the one of more accountability," Goergen said. "In some ways, we feel that in fact Matthew has."

Colson: Conversion can be personal Letter

By Tom Schaefer Knight-Ridder News Service

For me, Charles Colson is a singular example of non-creed conversion. Most people, however, remember him as Richard Nixon's "hatchet man" — or to be more politically correct, a special counsel to the president — who was indicted in 1974 for involvement in Watergate-related conspiracy cases.

What made his story incredible was his announcement, five months before his indictment, that he was a born-again Christian. Not surprisingly, many people interpreted his conversion as a desperate attempt to avoid prison. If so, his effort failed. He pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice and was sentenced to 1 to 3 years in a federal prison. He was released after seven months.

With royalties from his book "Born Again," Colson founded in 1976 Prison Fellowship — an evangelical organization that seeks to break the cycle of crime that prison often exacerbates.

Today, Prison Fellowship has 280,000 members and 50,000 volunteers in the United States, with thousands more in 54 other countries.

Colson's work for prison reform and for improving victim services has been praised even by many who opposed Colson politically over the years.

Last month, Colson was chosen to receive the 1993 Templeton Prize for Achievement in Religion, worth more than $1 million. The Templeton award, a religious counterpart to the Nobel Prize.

What has been striking to me since the announcement of Colson's selection is how some people have reacted to it.

For those who recall only the dark side of Colson, his selection smacks of a Nixon-like cover-up. Many believe that Colson has been trying to remake his image for some unknown and diabolical purpose and hasn't suffered enough for his sins. Others refuse to believe that leopards can shed spots.

Who are Branch Davidians?

The "Branch Davidians" in the news have no connection with the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

In Los Angeles in 1929, Victor Houteff was disestablished from the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Since then, there have been several splinter groups and many different leaders, which have included Victor Houteff's widow, Florence; Ben Roden; Lois Roden; George Roden and Vernon Howell.

These cults have had a variety of names such as "The Shepherd's Rod," "Branch Davidians" and "The Davidians." Vernon Howell, who is the present leader, was disestablished from the Tyler, Texas, Seventh-day Adventist congregation in 1981. None of his followers is known to hold membership in any Seventh-day Adventist Church.

The Seventh-day Adventist Church believes in the Trinity, salvation by grace through faith in Jesus Christ, promotes the sanctity of the family, practices allegiance to government, celebrates the Seventh-day Sabbath (Saturday), follows a non-violence lifestyle and looks forward to the second coming of Jesus Christ.

The Seventh-day Adventist Church is a worldwide church with 7 million members in 206 countries. Locally, the church has very active community services. This past year, it gave away $290,966 worth of clothes and food baskets and 116 homemade quilts to local residents. Additionally, 600 boxes of clothing were sent in the disaster relief program for victims of Hurricane Andrew and other natural disasters.

Renton, Wash., schools ponder religious-club ruling

By Keith Ervin Seattle Times

RENTON, Wash. — Renton School Board members Tuesday night reaffirmed their long-standing position that student religious groups should not be allowed to meet at middle schools and high schools.

The board will decide whether to appeal a federal-court ruling that religious clubs have the same right to meet as other student groups.

The School Board's decision will hinge on the cost of asking for a rehearing before the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals or for a hearing before the U.S. Supreme Court. Board president Brian Smith said school officials are unhappy with last week's court decision because they don't want to surrender control over what kinds of student activities are appropriate.

"It's one thing to bring in a religious club, which would be a strong positive influence," Smith said, "but you know there are other groups out there — skinheads and other organizations — that, rather than promoting positive values, promote 'negative' values. We would not be able to exclude them. This is an extreme concern to us."

Evangelical Christian students at Linbergh High School have been fighting since 1984 for the right to meet before school for prayer and Bible study.

The Equal Access Act forbids a school from banning student groups on the basis of religion, politics or philosophy. If a school allows any clubs unrelated to curriculum, it must allow all clubs.

The school district contends that the state constitution's language on separation of church and state forbids religious groups on campus.

Many shun materialistic ways late in life, heed call of God

By Mitch Weiss The Associated Press

TOLEDO, Ohio — Thomas Quinn was a real estate agent in the early 1980s when success was measured by fat bank accounts and fancy homes. Single and making $45,000 a year, he lived in an eight-room house.

Though he had plenty from the material world, something was missing. He was active in his church, but that wasn't enough. In his late 40s, he did some soul-searching and came to a decision that would change his life: He wanted to be a priest.

Quinn is among a growing number of middle-aged and older people who have left good-paying jobs to join the clergy, both, in Protestant denominations and Roman Catholicism.

"I prayed quite a bit before I made the decision to become a priest," said Quinn, 58, principal of St. Mary's Central Catholic High School in Sandusky, Ohio. "I've never regretted my decision. I really enjoy what I'm doing."

The Catholic church has four seminaries in the United States that accept only people at least 15 years of age. Quinn went to one of them — Sacred Heart School of Theology in Hales Corners, Wis. Also at the seminary with Quinn were a doctor, teachers and accountants.

Men over 30 can enter any Catholic seminary. But the four that are strictly for older men are designed to help them give each other support in adjusting to their new life.

"They are in their 40s, 50s, 60s. Those people had some type of professional background, a house, business. Now they are living in a shoe box they call a room," said Michael Hohenbirk, vicar of seminaries for the Toledo diocese. "What they do is tell a common story, and their common story is supportive to one another."

Ten years ago, Quinn was the only person in the Toledo diocese who was studying for the priesthood after giving up a professional career. Today, seven of the 19 seminarians in the diocese are between the ages of 32 to 42.

In the United Church of Christ, the average age for an incoming seminarian is 34, nearly 10 years older than the average 20 years ago, said spokesman Matt Tupper.

The United Methodist Church said the average age for its seminarians is 35, 10 years older than what it was 30 years ago.

Older people who become priests bring different perspective to helping people, Quinn said.

"The older man brings charisma," he said. "He knows what it's like to have a family to come home to. ... He knows what it's like to face those daily pressures, problems."

Older people who give up professional careers know that they will be taking a pay cut when they become ordained. Quinn is making $14,000 a year as a priest.

Many have families, which means they will see a drastic change in their lifestyles.

Dave Clark, 50, was police chief of Findlay, Ohio, for 12 years before becoming a full pastor of the Gospel Fellowship Church in Rawson, about 10 miles from Findlay.

He said his 25 years on the police department tested his faith.

"You see beaten wives, abused children, murder and suicide. People tend to say, 'Why did God let that happen?'" Clark said.

"The fact of the business is that God has given people the ability to make choices, and we shouldn't blame that on God."

Provo artist sculpts statue for Capitol

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Provo artist Kraig Varner has been hired to sculpt a large statue of Brigham Young for the grounds of the state Capitol.

Only a small bust of the leader who brought the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints pioneers into the Salt Lake Valley nearly 150 years ago is now on display in the Capitol.

Members of the Brigham Young Statue Commission have agreed to pay Varner $60,000 for the sculpture. He received the installment, $15,000, after signing the contract earlier this month.

Besides the 8-foot sculpture, Varner will also produce eight 32-inch copies for the commission.

The commission is funded entirely through donations and expects to spend a total of $125,000 on the statue, which is scheduled to be installed in the Capitol on Pioneer Day, July 24, 1994.

Commission Chairman Don LeBaron, a former legislator, said about $50,000 has been raised so far. The Utah Historical Society is accepting donations for the project.

LeBaron said many of the 100,000 visitors who tour the Capitol wonder why Young is not among the statues on prominent display. "The No. 1 question asked by these visitors is 'Where's Brigham Young?'" he said.

Most never see the small bust commissioned some 50 years ago by the Sons of Utah Pioneers and tucked into an alcove. Visitors who do find the bust of Brigham Young believe "that's all we think of him," LeBaron said.

Although Varner's proposal for the statue is being kept under wraps by the commission, LeBaron said it fulfills the goal to depict Young "as a kindly man in addition to his leadership qualities."

Varner, who moved to Utah from Montana when he was 12 years old, studied sculpture at Brigham Young University where he earned a bachelor's degree. He also apprenticed with Wasatch Bronze-works.

Little-known conference revels in NCAA success

The Associated Press

There are subplots in this NCAA tournament, factors outside the usual Team A-vs-Team B stuff. One of the better ones is the rivalry between the conferences, and the early winner is the little-known Atlantic 10.

With George Washington's surprising 82-68 victory over Texas Tech, the Atlantic 10 found itself with all four of its qualifiers in the second round. Temple, head Missouri and Rhode Island took Purdue on Thursday.

To get an idea of how much this means to the conference, one only had to catch a glimpse of Atlantic 10 commissioner Ron Bertovich outside George Washington's locker room in Tucson, Ariz.

"Attaboy, attaboy! Way to go! Four-for-four! Four-for-four!" Bertovich yelled as he slapped players, coaches and trainers like a baseball manager whose team had just swept four straight games in the World Series.

It was a moment of redemption for Bertovich because some had questioned the four berths for his conference, one more than the better-known Big East.

"I'm not saying we had to sweep all four to show we belonged," Bertovich said. "If we had lost some, it wouldn't have taken away from what our conference accomplished this season. We're really the underdog, but for right now I think we showed that we belonged."

The Atlantic Coast Conference is also doing well at 5-1, but all of its teams were seeded sixth or higher. The Atlantic 10 has Massachusetts seeded third, but Temple is a No. 7 seed, Rhode Island a No. 8 and George Washington a No. 12.

"I thought all along that we deserved to have four teams in the tournament, but no one was going to believe it until we proved it on the court," Bertovich said.

In other first round games Friday, Virginia beat Manhattan 78-66, New Mexico State surprised Nebraska 99-90 and Cincinnati crushed Coppin State 93-66 in the East Regional. Wake Forest defeated Tennessee-Chattanooga 82-69, Iowa downed Northeast Louisiana 82-69, Kentucky crushed Rider 96-52 and Utah beat Pittsburgh 86-63 in the South.

Ohio State beat Miami 82-69, 74-62, Louisville defeated Delaware 76-70, Xavier downed New Orleans 73-55 and Indiana routed Wright State 97-54 in the Midwest; and Southern upset Georgia Tech 93-78, Michigan beat Connecticut 82-69, 53 and UCLA defeated Iowa State

With Rodney Rogers (26 points) and Trellone Owens (22) controlling the offense and Derrick Hicks handling the rebounding, fifth-seeded Wake Forest (20-8) rolled past the Moccasins (26-7). UTC came in with a reputation as an outstanding shooting team, but made only 38.5 percent and wound up 28 points below its season average.

Iowa 62, Northeast Louisiana 69. Aic Earl, Iowa's 6-foot-10 senior center, had 23 points, 15 rebounds and five blocked shots, and the Hawkeyes (23-8) outbounded the smaller Indians 45-23. Northeast Louisiana (26-9) entered the game leading the nation in shooting (52.4 percent), but the Indians ended up hitting just 32 of 71 (45.1 percent).

Kentucky 96, Rider 52. In little more than a light workout for

Louisville 76, Delaware 70

Louisville almost blew an 18-point cushion before beating the Blue Hens (23-8). Dwyane Davis scored 24 points for the Cardinals (21-8) but had 15 turnovers and a missed game of 25 free throws. "It was a weird game," Louisville coach Denny Crum said. "I don't think we ever really got in synch for some reason."

Xavier 73, New Orleans 55

Xavier used a 12-2 spurt over a six-minute span of the second half to turn a 40-35 deficit into a 47-42 lead and steadily pulled away thereafter. Aaron Williams and Brian Grant scored 20 points each for the Musketeers (24-5). Ervin Johnson had 21 points for New Orleans (26-4).

EAST Massachusetts 54, Pennsylvania 50

Penn kept up the Ivy League's five-year streak of being a higher-seeded team a tough time in the opening round, but Massachusetts (24-6) made its four shots in the final seconds to advance. Mike Williams made two 3-pointers and a 16-2 run that gave the Minutemen a 42-32 lead with 1:17 to play. Penn (22-5) got within two points on Jerome Allen's driving layup, with 12 seconds left, but Hanger Williams made two free throws with six seconds left for UMass.

Virginia 78, Manhattan 66

Virginia point guard Cory Alexander made the most of Manhattan's decision to let him shoot, tying his career-high with 27 points as the Cavaliers (20-10) ruined the return to the tournament of Manhattan (23-7) after a 35-year absence. "They just didn't play me and I had to make them pay for that," Alexander said. Virginia held at least a six-point lead throughout the second half and wrapped up the win from the foul line.

New Mexico State 93, Nebraska 79

Point guard Sam Crawford set an NCAA tournament first and red with 16 assists and added 20 points. The Aggies (26-7) pulled away after the 10th-seeded Cornhuskers (20-11) had tied the game at 49-49 with 16:21 left by connecting on a 19-foot field goal attempt in the second half. Nebraska got a career-high 29 points from Eric Pitkowski.

MIDWEST Cincinnati 93, Coppin State 66

The upset dreams of 15th-seeded Coppin State (22-8) came to an end when Cincinnati used a 22-5 run to take a 68-45 lead with 9:54 left. The Bearcats (23-7) led the nation in scoring this season by leading scorer Nick Van Exel, who finished with just 7 points — 12.1 below his average. The Eagles entered the game with the longest winning streak in the country — 16 games.

Texas-El Paso 67, Houston 61

EL PASO, Texas — Johnny Melvin had 21 points and Roy Howard scored a key basket late in the game as Texas-El Paso beat 67-61 in the first round of the NIT.

The Miners' next opponent will be Georgetown, which advanced by beating Arizona State 78-68 Tuesday night. Houston, which was angered at being left out of the NCAA tournament, ended its season 21-9.

UTEP overcame a 23-4 run by the Cougars that began with 16:20 left in the second half on a 3-point shot by David Diaz. The Miners' lead was cut to a 56-55 lead on a jumper by Eddie River, who finished with 12 points.

Mavericks break jinx on road games

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks won for the first time in 30 road games this season, beating Philadelphia 89-87 Friday night for their first two-game winning streak.

Darryl Davis scored 24 points for the Mavericks, who avoided matching the NBA record of 20 consecutive losses in one season by winning at Dallas against Orlando on Wednesday night.

The decision over the Sixers improved Dallas' record to 6-57 and increased its chances of avoiding another NBA mark of futility, Philadelphia's 9-77 road record in 1972-73.

Nets 99, Bucks 85

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Drzen Petrovic and Derrick Coleman and man combined for 21 of New Jersey's 29 fourth-quarter points, and Milwaukee was scoreless for 3:59 down the stretch.

Petrovic, led to six points in the first half, scored 13 of his 27 in the fourth quarter as the Nets won for the seventh time in eight games. Coleman finished with 25 points and 12 rebounds.

Hawks 121, Timberwolves 103

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored a season-high 45 points despite sitting out the final quarter of Atlanta's rout of Minnesota.

Wilkins hit his first five shots, including three 3-pointers, and had 21 first-quarter points as the Hawks took control early and coasted to their seventh victory in eight games.

Pacers 112, Hornets 108

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — LaSalle Thompson came off the bench against Charlotte to score 14 points in the fourth quarter of Indiana's ninth straight home victory.

Reggie Miller scored 28 points and Rick Smith 18 for the Pacers, now 11-0 at home against the expansion Hornets.

Alonso Mourning scored 37 points and Larry Johnson had 21 points. 11 assists and 10 rebounds for Charlotte, his second double in two nights and the second in franchise history.

scored 11 of his 25 points in the final five minutes of the game as Chicago defeated Washington despite a career-high 37 points by LaBradford Smith.

The Bulls led 90-89 with 5:18 remaining before Jordan, held to 14 points on 4-for-11 shooting, shot to 14 points the next 11 Bulls points.

Jordan's ninth straight point put Chicago ahead 99-95, but a basket by Michael Adams and a free throw by Reggie Miller tied the game with 2:16 left.

Spurs 96, Magic 93

ANTONIO (AP) — David Robinson outscored Shaquille O'Neal 11-5 in the rookie's first pro game in his hometown and an Antonio beat Orlando.

O'Neal, who played a high school basketball in San Antonio, was ejected in the fourth quarter after he received two technicals for protesting an offensive foul.

The Magic rallied without him, closing a 19-point deficit to 94-93 with 42 seconds left. But Sean Elliott's two free throws with 11 seconds remaining gave the Spurs their winning margin.

SuperSonics 108, Jazz 97

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Sam Perkins spiked a Utah rally with a three-point play and a tip-in late in the game as the Rocky-Mountain SuperSonics won for the fourth time in five games.

The Jazz trailed 95-92 with 2:25 left on two free throws by John Stockton, completing a 7-2 spurt after the Sonics, who led by as many as 18 in the first half, took a 93-85 advantage with 5:19 remaining.

Suns 127, Pistons 97

PHOENIX (AP) — Charles Barkley scored 12 of his 23 points in a third quarter and Danny Ainge had 16 of his 23 in the fourth, leading Phoenix in a rout of Detroit.

Joe Dumars and Terry Mills scored 31 and 25 points, respectively for the Pistons, but they couldn't overcome the balanced effort of the Suns, who outrebounded Detroit 39-15 and had six players in double figures.

Barkley added 16 rebounds to 13 for Dennis Rodman, the NBA's top rebounder.

Dan Majerle had 20 points and Kevin Johnson 19 for the Suns.

Jackson State surprises UConn in overtime

The Associated Press

STORRS, Conn. — Lindsey Hunter scored nine of Jackson State's 10 points in overtime and finished with 39 points as the Tigers won their first Division I postseason game, defeating Connecticut 90-88 Friday night in the National Invitation Tournament.

The Tigers led Connecticut hit three 3-pointers in the final 30 seconds to force the overtime. But Hunter, who had just five points at halftime, hit a pair of free throws with 4:25 left in overtime to tie the score at 84-84, a jumper from the left corner with 2:54 left to give the Tigers an 87-86 lead then scored on a breakaway layup 17 seconds later.

The Huskies had a chance to tie it at the buzzer, but David Simmons broke up Scott Burrell's baseball pass to Donyell Marshall as time expired.

Jackson State (25-8), the regular-season Southwestern Athletic Conference champion, plays Southwest Missouri State either Monday or Tuesday at a site to be determined. The victory capped a great night for the SWAC, which also saw Southern upset Georgia Tech in the NCAA tournament Friday.

EL PASO, Texas — Johnny Melvin had 21 points and Roy Howard scored a key basket late in the game as Texas-El Paso beat 67-61 in the first round of the NIT.

The Miners' next opponent will be Georgetown, which advanced by beating Arizona State 78-68 Tuesday night. Houston, which was angered at being left out of the NCAA tournament, ended its season 21-9.

"I was followed that with a 15-foot jumper for a 71-65 lead with 1:04 showing. Two free throws each by Ross and Paul Jarrett and a closing layup by Ross ended it.

Through the first 35 minutes, Sullivan's athleticism and quickness were the key. The quick and quick-jumping Executives kept it tight with great offensive rebounding. The Executives outscored CSI 22-2 through 10:58 of the second half before CSI could shut that out.

"We talked about that a lot at halftime," said Coach Kevin Jones. "We told them these are great athletes who can jump and we have to meet bodies with bodies."

About the only thing the Badgers accomplished Friday was ending Kevin Shaffer's 17-inning streak without giving up an earned run. A Jerry Beck two-out single in the top of the first scored the game's first run to end Shaffer's string.

The freshman right-hander from Winston Ore., went on to finish a seven-hitter with one walk and eight strikeouts over a 4-0 record.

Hailey high school plots its dream field

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Last year Wood River High School fielded its first-ever baseball team. Next year the school may also have a ballfield.

A dedicated group of parents, alumni, coaches and friends — calling itself the Wood River Baseball and Softball Association — has finalized plans for a 13-acre athletic complex featuring a baseball diamond and grandstand, softball field, and regulation-size soccer field. Construction is set to begin in May.

"There's no other facility like this in Hailey, and nothing comparable anywhere in the Wood River Valley," said Larry Lloyd, Wood River senior baseball coach and a member of the association's steering committee.

"When it's complete it will be one of the nicest athletic complexes in the state," he said.

Wood River's fledgling baseball team, coached by Lars Hovey of Twin Falls, practiced and played its home games on softball fields at Atkinson's Park in Ketchum last year. With the heavy snowfall this year the team has been practicing in the school's gymnasium and will play all its games on the road.

"There's just so much interest in softball and baseball in this community that it made sense to have an athletic complex," Lloyd pointed out.

After winning approval from the Blaine County School District two years ago to form baseball and softball teams at Wood River, Lloyd and other supporters of the teams were granted permission last fall to build the athletic complex on school district property south of the high school — provided they come up with the fuel.

Boosted by a $100,000 contribution by Dick Kreiter of Ketchum, the association has raised $150,000 of an estimated $620,000 needed to complete the complex. But with engineers and contractors offering their services at reduced cost, the complex may get built at a lower figure, Lloyd said.

Moties raised to date allowed the association to pay for grading the site for the complex last fall. Drain fields and irrigation systems are due to be installed this spring, with the baseball and softball diamonds targeted for use in 1994. The soccer field may be ready for play by this autumn.

"The association has yet to raise the funds to pay for backstops, bleachers, fencing, and the baseball park's grandstand, but Lloyd said the group will be doing additional fund-raising this spring and summer.

"We want to be able to start hosting tournaments and make it a self-supporting facility," Lloyd said.

In addition to Lloyd, the Wood River Baseball and Softball Association's steering committee includes Gregg Sturevant and Scott Basolo, Galema Engineers, McStay Construction and Katco have contributed in-kind service to the project.

Water rights for the athletic complex have been donated by Marathon Partners, although the legal transfer of the rights has not been completed, Lloyd noted.

Olympics agencies unify drug testing

World Health Organization denounces use of drugs in athletics

GENEVA (AP) — Use of performance-enhancing drugs in sports is rising and more must be done to stop it, the World Health Organization said Friday.

Among the hidden health hazards of doping is infection with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS, if users of muscle-building anabolic steroids share syringes, WHO said.

In a report on what the U.N. agency called a rising public health problem, WHO concluded "that the use of drugs in sport is increasing and that more needs to be done to counter this trend."

Hans Embled, head of WHO's substance abuse program, said doping "is not confined to the Olympic elite."

"More and more amateur athletes, including adolescents, are resorting to harmful, unsporting practices of drug abuse," he said.

the second.

ASOIF officials said there appeared to be a consensus for a standard two-year suspension in all sports, with a life ban for a second violation.

Nebiolo, who also is president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for track and field, was confident that most federations would agree to follow a uniform doping policy.

However, he acknowledged that some would need convincing. Also, some federations, including the IAAF, would have to change their statutes to conform to the common rules.

Samaranch suggested that about 15 federations could accept the regulations improved to a standard "bit by bit, step by step."

Samaranch stressed that the responsibility for random, out-of-competition doping controls will remain with the international federations. The IOC, which administers drug tests only during the Olympics, has resisted calls to police worldwide controls.

most important problems we are facing in sport," Nebiolo said.

The decision came one day after ASOIF, which represents all 26 sports on the Summer Olympic program, called for uniform doping regulations.

As of now, testing procedures and sanctions vary widely among the federations. Depending on the sport, the penalty for use of steroids can range from four years to two years to three months.

"We agree we have to be together. We have to fight together, we have to harmonize many things," Samaranch said. "If the international federations want, we can coordinate this effort."

In track and field, where the doping problem is considered especially serious, the current sanction for steroid use is a four-year suspension for the first offense and a life ban for

ATLANTA (AP) — In a potential breakthrough in the fight against doping, the world's two major Olympic bodies agreed Friday to join forces in applying the same drug-testing procedures and sanctions to all sports.

The International Olympic Committee and the Association of Summer Olympic International Federations also decided to work together in addressing another pressing problem — civil law suits filed by athletes like Dutch Reynolds.

"Today there is a wall of all the federations and the IOC to be together," IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said. "The fight together will be much more effective. This is a good step forward."

ASOIF president Primo Nebiolo said "We believe that the times are changing and it can now be much easier to find a good decision from both sides."

The two officials announced that the IOC executive board and the ASOIF council will hold a special meeting June 21 at Lausanne, Switzerland, to formulate solutions to the doping and litigation issues.

HAINES CITY, Fla. (AP) — Jack Daugherty had three hits and Jason Crimley improved to 3-0 as Houston beat Kansas City. Royals starter David Cone took the loss, giving up seven hits, walking one and striking out two in five innings.

Cubs 4, Brewers 2

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — Greg Hibbard pitched five shutout innings to help Chicago beat Milwaukee. The Cubs have not allowed an earned run for 16 consecutive innings. Hibbard was acquired from the expansion Florida Marlins when they drafted him from the Chicago White Sox.

Mariners 3, Angels 2

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Fernando Vina's RBI single off Scott Lewis capped a two-run rally in the top of the ninth inning as Seattle beat California. Lewis, fighting to win one of three open spots in the Angels' bullpen, was given up a single to Henry Cotto and Greg Litton's double to open the ninth.

Padres 5, Giants 4 (12 innings)

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Gary Sheffield's two-out RBI single in the top of the 12th inning lifted San Diego past San Francisco. Sheffield has eight hits and four RBIs in his last 22 at-bats (.364).

Twin Falls therapist plays with the pros

By Brad Breland
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Imagine you're a big fan of tennis and enjoy the game. Imagine yourself playing with an idol like Stan Smith with another idol, Rod Laver, on the other side.

Dave Little didn't have to imagine anything.

Little, a Twin Falls physical therapist with the Family Physical Therapy and Sports Clinic, recently returned from the 1993 Hospice Legends Challenge in Florida where he indeed played doubles with tennis legend Stan Smith.

"It was really a treat," said Little. "It was like a fantasy week."

Even a bigger treat for Little was staying at the luxurious Palm Beach Ritz-Carlton Hotel along with many receptions and black-tie dinners.

Little was the official physical therapist at the three-day tournament which had the United States Legends players facing an Australian team.

Stan Smith and Little teamed up for the Pro-Am portion of the tournament. The team placed third.

In the first match where Little and Smith faced Rod Laver and his partner in the Pro-Am, Little soon found out that although the former Grand Slam tournament champions aren't pros any more, they can play with the best.

"They still have their strokes," Little said.

Little is active in tennis in the Magic Valley. As a player for the Idaho State University Bengal tennis team in the late 1970's and early 1980's, Little learned to love the game. He is active in the local tennis association and, along with his wife Karen, runs a tennis tournament every year.

The tournament was a benefit for the Hospice of Palm Beach County in Florida. The Hospice offers services to help patients and their families deal with the stress associated with life-limiting illness.

"This tournament, the first of its kind, was a success."

"It was the first time ever. It was a risky event," said Little. "They raised $300,000 for Hospice."

The only cost for Little was to cover part of the air fare to Florida. Meeting and playing with some of his idols made the trip well worth any expense.

Brisk winds can't blow Love off path to Nestle Invitational title

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Davis Love III used a combination of patience and power to extract a 3-under-par 69 from blustery winds for a one-shot lead Friday at the halfway point of the Nestle Invitational.

"On a day like today, being real patient is the main thing," Love said shortly after finishing in a cold dither.

Love, one of the longest hitters in the game, also said his great length was an advantage in the windy conditions.

"In the wind, if I get a good drive I'm hitting 4-5-6 irons in where other guys are hitting woods, and that's a big difference," Love said after making two trips over the 7,114-yard course in 140. He's 4 under par in the $1 million event.

Patience was the key.

"You just try to hang in there, be patient," Love said. "It's a long, hard golf course and in these conditions if it starts going bad you can go for a big number."

Fred Couples, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Purtzer served as examples as Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club became the stage for a golfing horror show.

Couples, a winner last week and the defending champion here, took an 8 on the par-5 sixth hole, shot 81 and missed the cut at 155.

Nicklaus bogeyed his first four holes in the 30-minute winds, shot 78 and missed the cut for the second week in a row at TSO.

Purtzer hit two into the water on the 18th then scrawled a "9" on his card.

He had an 82 for the day and a 156 total.

Low interest rates help market defy skeptics

The Associated Press

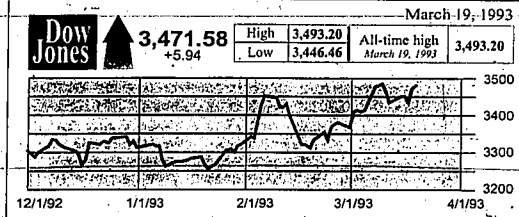

NEW YORK — Warnings from Warren Buffett notwithstanding, it's still a bull market out there.

While the Oracle of Omaha and lesser known investment strategists have decreed stocks are getting too pricey and risky, a substantial number of others said this past week they're optimistic about the market's long-term returns.

"It's still fundamentally a positive situation at this point," said James Schroeder, a market analyst at MMS International in Chicago.

Market enthusiasts assert the following:

- Interest rates remain low. That means stock investors can still get a better return than their bond-buying brethren.
- Stock funds continue to attract enormous amounts of cash that will have to be invested. The buying will push stocks higher.
- Inflation may be rising but remains tame.

That means interest rates aren't likely to move substantially higher, corporate costs should remain manageable and better corporate earnings will result.

Betting that stocks will keep rising is not a game for the faint of heart. The Dow Jones Industrial average added another 43.76 points this week, closing on Friday at 3,493.20, its near all-time high, set on March 10, at 3,478.34.

Broad-market indexes edged higher. The NYSE composite index rose 0.02 point to 248.18. The American Stock Exchange major market index added 1.28 point to 222.37.

Some market participants say the currently lofty stock prices aren't supported by corporate performance.

The average stock is selling at about 16 times forecasted 1993 earnings. That is "a little pricey," said Ernest Kloppe, senior vice president and veteran stock picker at Legg Mason Inc. in Baltimore. That number has hovered between 14 and 15 for the past 60 years.

Greg Shilling, an economic consultant and investment adviser in Springfield, N.J., scoffs at the notion that stocks will indefinitely move higher, simply because investors will continue to buy them. "Every time you hear the argument that money has no place else to go—watch out below," he said.

Even investment guru Buffett, in his annual letter to shareholders in his Omaha-based Berkshire Hathaway Inc. investment conglomerate, warned that "stocks cannot forever outperform their underlying businesses, as they have so dramatically for some time."

Buffett is "absolutely right," said Charles Clough, portfolio strategist at Merrill Lynch & Co., "but then we're back to what?"

Are stocks expensive relative to what? Clough and others look at a ratio of stock dividends-to-Treasury-bills-and-assert that stocks are still a superior investment alternative—and are likely to remain so for some time.

The average dividend yield on stocks in the Standard and Poor's 500 index, for example, is hovering at about 2.8 percent. Three-month Treasury bills are currently yielding about 3 percent.

If the S&P dividend yielded the same, T-bills would have to rise another 3 percent, to 6 percent, to make shorter-Treasuries relatively attractive, Schroeder said.

LEGAL NOTICE

BEFORE THE IDAHO PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION
LEGAL NOTICE OF PROPOSED RULEMAKING
 IN THE MATTER OF THE READOPTION AND THE REFORMING OF THE COMMISSION'S CUSTOMER RELATIONS RULES FOR GAS, ELECTRIC, AND WATER PUBLIC UTILITIES TO BE EFFECTIVE ON JULY 1, 1993, THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THE NEW PROCEDURE ACT.

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that the Idaho Public Utilities Commission proposes to make and multi-occupant customer relations rules for gas, electric and water public utilities, currently codified at IDAPA 31.C.0 through .7, and more than IDAPA 31.21.0100 et seq. The re-adoption and reforming of the rules is intended to bring them into compliance with the requirements of the Administrative Rule Coordinator for formal and style of rules effective July 1, 1993.

In addition, the Commission proposes for the first time rules addressing the problem of tenants in multi-occupant buildings who believe they are being metered for and billed for their neighbors' use because the building is internally wired or piped so that their neighbor's appliances are connected for service through the first tenant's meter. See proposed Rules 500 through 502. The proposed rules also clarify that those rules control when there is an inconsistency between the rules and the tariff of a utility. See proposed Rule 503. The proposed rules define the previously undefined term "non-utility service." See proposed Rule 504. The proposed rules clarify that emancipated minors are not metered for gas service in the three winter months to households.

1. Subject Matter: The subject matter of these proposed amendments is existing rules to be brought into compliance with the Administrative Rule Coordinator for formal and style of rules effective July 1, 1993, when the new Administrative Rule Act takes effect. See sections 67-5201 et seq., Idaho Code.

2. Legal Authority: The Idaho Public Utilities Commission proposes the adoption of amendments to rules governing customer relations of gas, electric and water public utilities under the general authority under the Public Utilities Law, Chapter 1 through 7, Title 31, Idaho Code, and the specific authority of sections 61-301, 61-302, 62-303, 61-315, 62-503, 61-507, and 61-520 (Idaho Code, with regard to service to public buildings being served by internal wiring or piping systems that result in them being metered for and billed for their neighbor's use because the building is internally wired or piped so that their neighbor's appliances are connected for service through the first tenant's meter.)

3. Purpose of Rules: The purpose of the amendments to the existing rules are (a) to propose new rules to address the recurring problem of multi-occupant buildings being served by internal wiring or piping systems that result in them being metered for and billed for their neighbor's use because the building is internally wired or piped so that their neighbor's appliances are connected for service through the first tenant's meter; (b) to clarify a number of open questions under the current wording of the rules for which informal policies have been set; (c) to bring them into conformity with the formalized and published rules of the Commission; and (d) to bring them into conformity with the formalized and published rules of the Commission.

4. Oral Presentations: The Idaho Public Utilities Commission does not propose to conduct oral presentations regarding these proposed amendments to the rules. It hereby notifies (25) interested parties of a state agency in writing requests an opportunity to make an oral presentation regarding these rules, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission will conduct an oral presentation.

5. Written Submissions: Any persons wishing to make a written submission commenting upon these rules or requesting the opportunity to make an oral presentation should submit their written comments to the Commission Secretary, Idaho Public Utilities Commission, State House, Boise, Idaho 83720-6000. Written submissions should list the docket number listed at the bottom of this document.

6. Agency Contact: The agency contacts for this rulemaking are Beverly Barker, director of the Commission's Consumer Assistance Staff, telephone number (208) 334-0368, and Michael S. Gilmore, Deputy Attorney General, telephone number (208) 334-0318.

7. Deadline for Comment: The deadline for written comment is April 8, 1993.

8. Negotiated Rulemaking: No negotiated rulemaking will be conducted in this rulemaking proposal because there is only one area of substantive rulemaking changes proposed, the remainder being technical rulemaking changes designed to relate these rules as required under the new Administrative Procedure Act.

9. Summary of Proposed Rules: The Commission's existing rules for customer relations for gas, electric, and water utilities, currently codified at IDAPA 31.C.0 through .7, are substantially unchanged, except for the addition of new rules 502 to address the needs of customers' service in multi-unit complexes being properly configured so that customers are required to pay for their neighbors' use. However, a number of clarifying working changes are proposed to make these rules more "user friendly" and easier to understand. Additional sections are added to meet the requirements of the Administrative Rules Coordinator for formalizing rules under the 1993 amendments to the Administrative Procedure Act. In addition, new rules are added to clarify existing understandings.

DATED at Boise, Idaho, this 10th day of March, 1993.
 Myrna J. Wallers
 Commission Secretary
