Pilgrims retrace Christ's steps along Way of Sorrows

The Associated Press
JERUSALEM — Pilgrims from around the world walked the Way of Sorrows in Jerusalem's Old City on Good Friday, kneeling to pray at the stations symbolizing Jesus Christ's suffering on his path to crucifixion.
But this year, many Palestinian Christians who live in the West Bank and Gaza Strip missed the ritual because the government ordered the occupied territories sealed off nine days ago to quell Arab-Israeli violence.
The procession, with some pilgrims lugging heavy wooden crosses, is a larger version of the observances many of the world's Christians conduct before celebrating the resurrection of Jesus on Easter Sunday.
In Rome, Pope John-Paul II covered his white robes with a black cape before hearing confes-

Iraqi gunners raise 'no-fly' zone tensions

Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — Iraq fired at four U.S. fighters that were patrolling its northern "no-fly" zone early Friday morning.
That ended a two-month cease-fire and presented President Clinton with his first visible challenge from Baghdad since just after he took office.
The Pentagon said that the U.S. jets, three F-16 Falcons and an F-4G Wild Weasel, dropped four cluster bombs on the artillery site and returned safely and apparently undamaged to intrude Air Base in Turkey. No assessment of the damage to the Iraqi battery was available.

It was not immediately certain whether the incident — which marked Baghdad's first hostile action against Western aircraft since Feb. 3 — was an aberration or was intended to signal an end to the cease-fire that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had proclaimed in January.
Iraqi radio, which reported that one Iraqi soldier was wounded as a result of the bombing, quoted an Iraqi foreign ministry official as branding the U.S. action "aggressive and provocative behavior." Baghdad also denied that it fired at the U.S. jets.

The Clinton administration sought to minimize the significance of the incident, indicating that the United States would take a wait-and-see attitude until it could determine the meaning of the Iraqi attack.
State Department spokesman Richard A. Boucher said that the latest incident "underscores Iraq's continued failure to abide by" U.S. Gulf War peace settlement resolutions, and said that Baghdad would be held "solely responsible" for its refusal to comply.

U.S. F-16s similar to this plane were involved in the shooting incident over Iraq.

But senior U.S. strategists indicated privately that the administration did not plan to retaliate further or seek additional U.N. sanctions unless attacks continued.
Clinton, in Little Rock, Ark., to attend a memorial service for his father-in-law, Hugh Rodham, who died Wednesday, received a detailed briefing by telephone from his top national security advisers.
Friday's incident occurred at 1:05 p.m. Iraq time at a spot two miles east of the Saddam dam, which is located some 20 miles northwest of Mosul, the major city in the northern no-fly zone.
U.S. officials said that the American fighters were "illuminated" by Iraqi anti-aircraft tracking radar, which by itself would have been grounds for U.S. retaliation during the Bush administration. The no-fly zone comprises the portion of Iraq

New anti-gay petition still irks opponents

Complete text - A2
Opponents of the Idaho Citizens Alliance's anti-gay rights initiative said Friday that the revised version is just as bad as the old one.
Robert Shaffer, spokesman for Idahoans for Human Dignity, said the new initiative is still an attempt to deprive homosexuals of equal protection under the guise of banning "special rights" — which, he said, Idaho gays and lesbians don't want anyway.
And an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union's Idaho chapter claimed the revised initiative, if it became law, wouldn't survive a court challenge.
The Alliance, an offshoot of the Oregon Citizens Alliance, filed its revised initiative petition Thursday afternoon. The original version was announced last month.
The revision followed an advisory review of the original by Attorney General Larry Echols, in which he declared that it "violates the most essential constitutional principals upon which our society is based."
Alliance Chairman Kelly-Walton: a battery construction contractor, says the initiative is meant to prevent homosexuals from receiving "minority status" and being given "special rights" because of that status.
The measure specifically bars affirmative action programs and hiring quotas for homosexuals, as well as legal recognition of same-sex marriages or "domestic partnerships."
But Shaffer said that Idaho gays have no intention of seeking any of those things.
"Should gays and lesbians be given special rights?" he asked rhetorically. "My answer as a gay man is 'No. We don't want anything special.' The gay and lesbian community has never asked for quotas or affir-

Jerome prosecutor keeps Becker off most cases

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer
and H.R. Weikel
Times-News correspondent
JEROME — Fifth-District Judge Phillip Becker hasn't heard many Jerome County cases since he returned to the bench in August after a three-month suspension for repeated alcohol abuse.
County Prosecutor John Horgan has disqualified Becker from nearly every Jerome County felony case.
Horgan won't say specifically why he has removed Becker from more than 50 cases since August.
Of the handful of cases he has allowed Becker to handle, most are old probation cases that Becker handled the first time they came through the judicial system, Horgan said.
"Under Idaho Court Rule 25, a judge can be disqualified without cause, and that's what I've done," Horgan said.
Becker, 36, was suspended by the Idaho Supreme Court for three months last year after his long battle with alcoholism was made public by a drunken driving arrest.
He was placed on administrative leave after the July 1991 arrest, and he pleaded guilty to drunken driving two months later.
The Idaho Judicial Council recommended that the high court remove Becker permanently, but the justices suspended him instead.
"My decision to disqualify Judge Becker is based on matters relating primarily to the proceedings before the Idaho State Judicial Council and Supreme Court, of which Judge Becker's conviction for Driving Under the Influence of Alcohol is only a part," Horgan said Thursday in a written statement.
Horgan pointed to a paragraph written by Justice Charles McDevitt, the only Supreme Court Justice who voted to reinstate Becker from the bench.
"He based his recommendation on Becker's apparent violation of the court's order. While on paid administrative leave after his arrest, Becker was ordered 'to have no further contact with any official or court personnel ... including clerical' personnel, without specific permission of the ad-

Weather summary

The National Weather Service said most unstable conditions remained over Idaho in the wake of a cold front that moved into Wyoming.

Shower activity will continue over the state through the weekend as a series of disturbances move inland from the Pacific.

Radar and weather reports indicated scattered rain and snow showers around the state Friday afternoon. Amounts appeared to be light. Mostly cloudy to cloudy skies were the rule over the entire state. At midafternoon Lewiston, Madal and Twin Falls were all reporting light rain showers. Soda Springs and Hailey had light snow.

Winds in the 10 to 20 mph range occurred over most of Idaho with a few gusts to 30 mph.

Temperatures Friday afternoon were mostly in the 40s and low 50s.

The pollen count in Twin Falls was 57, from elm and juniper.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 61 degrees at Caldwell and Tagerman. Ketchum reported the coldest at 23 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 93 degrees at Imperial, Calif. The lowest was 11 degrees at Gallup, N.M.

Clintons attend rites Becker

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — President Clinton and his wife Hillary, were joined by family, friends and top government officials as they attended a funeral Friday for Hugh Rodham, the first lady's father.

The 82-year-old retired drapery maker died Wednesday night after suffering a stroke March 19. Mr. Clinton had kept a 10-day vigil at his bedside.

The four-hour, private service was held at the First United Methodist Church in downtown Little Rock.

The Clintons arrived early for the service with their 13-year-old daughter, Chelsea. They joined about 25 family members and close friends for a brief get-together in the church before the funeral.

Vice President Al Gore and White House Chief of Staff Mack McLarty flew to Little Rock to attend the funeral.

Cult claims 6 slain in fight

WACO, Texas (AP) — Cult leader David Koresh's deputy claims six religious followers were killed in a Feb. 28 gunfight with federal authorities, the FBI said Friday.

Koresh and his Branch Davidians faithful also reiterated to authorities that they have no plans to end a 41-day standoff around Passover or Easter.

"They say Easter is a pagan holiday with no significance to them," said FBI agent Richard Schwein. "We hoped during the Passover season they might come out. But the chance looks dimmer and dimmer."

Steven Schneider, Koresh's top lieutenant, told the FBI Thursday that six cult members were killed during a failed raid by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

"Just because he gave us names doesn't mean it's so," said Schwein.

active action. We wonder where this is coming from."

Responded Walton: "Why are they fighting it then? Their actions speak louder than their words."

Jack Van Valkenburgh, director of the ACLU's Idaho chapter, said the organization supports the idea of domestic partnership legislation but has no plans to propose such a bill.

"Politically realistically, it's one of the last rights gays and lesbians would get in this state," Van Valkenburgh said.

George Patterson, a Boise attorney and chairman of the Idaho ACLU's legal committee, said the new initiative is clearly intended to deprive homosexuals of equal protection under law.

Although part of the measure guarantees "equal protection of the law" and reaffirms "all existing civil rights protections based on race, color, religion, gender, age, or national origin," Patterson said that conflicts with other initiative sections prohibiting use of public money to promote, make acceptable, or express approval of homosexuality.

He denied the initiative as "legal inept" and "a lawyer's feast."

Complete initiative text

Here is the complete text of the Idaho Citizen Alliance's new anti-rights initiative.

PROPOSED TITLE 67, CHAPTER 80, IDAHO CODE

SECTION 67-8001: PURPOSE OF ACT. The provision of Title 67, Chapter 80 of the Idaho Code are enacted by the people of the State of Idaho in recognition that homosexuality shall not form the basis for the granting of minority status. This chapter is promulgated in furtherance of the provisions of Article 3, Section 24 of the Constitution of the State of Idaho.

SECTION 67-8002: SPECIAL RIGHTS FOR PERSONS WHO ENGAGE IN HOMOSEXUAL BEHAVIOR PROHIBITED. No agency, department or political subdivision of the State of Idaho shall enact or adopt any law, rule, policy, or agreement which has the purpose or effect of granting minority status to persons who engage in homosexual conduct, solely on the basis of such behavior; therefore, affirmative action, quota preferences, and special classifications such as "sexual orientation" or similar designations shall not be established on the basis of homosexuality. All private persons shall be guaranteed equal protection of the law in the full and free exercise of all rights enumerated and guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, the Constitution of the State of Idaho, and federal and state law. All existing civil rights protections based on race, color, religion, gender, age, or national origin are reaffirmed, and public services shall be available to all persons on an equal basis.

SECTION 67-8003: EXTENSION OF MARITAL TO DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIPS BASED ON HOMOSEXUAL BEHAVIOR PROHIBITED. Same-sex marriages and domestic partnerships are hereby declared to be against public policy and shall not be legally recognized in any manner by any agency, department, or political subdivision of the State of Idaho.

SECTION 67-8004: PUBLIC SCHOOLS. No employee, representative, or agent of any public elementary or secondary school shall, in connection with such school, engage in any act, omission, or endorsement of homosexuality as a healthy, approved or acceptable behavior. Subject to the provisions of federal law, no such discussion of homosexuality within such schools shall be age appropriate as defined and authorized by the local school board of trustees regarding such students' sexual identity.

SECTION 67-8005: EXPENDITURE OF PUBLIC FUNDS. No agency, department or political subdivision of the State of Idaho shall expend public funds in a manner that has the purpose or effect of promoting, making acceptable, or expressing approval of homosexuality. This section shall not prohibit government from providing positive guidance toward persons experiencing difficulty with sexual identity. This section shall not limit the availability in public libraries of books and materials written for adults which address homosexuality, provided access to such materials is limited to adults and meets local standards as established through the normal library review process.

SECTION 67-8006: EMPLOYMENT FACTORS. With regard to public employees, no agency, department or political subdivision of the State of Idaho shall forbid generally the consideration of private sexual behaviors as non-job factors, provided that compliance with the Title 67, Chapter 80, Idaho Code is maintained, and that such factors do not disrupt the work place.

SECTION 67-8007: SEVERABILITY. THE PEOPLE INTEND, that if any part of this enactment be found unconstitutional, the remaining parts shall survive in full force and effect. This section shall be in all parts self-executing.

Thunderstorms, flooding leave Floridans paddling

The Associated Press

A line of strong thunderstorms moved across south Florida on Friday, causing flooding in some low-lying areas.

Snow fell in Wyoming and Minnesota.

A tornado was sighted in Cape Coral, Fla., but didn't touch down, police said. A tornado watch was in effect until early evening for Palm Beach, Okeechobee, Martin and St. Lucie counties as a line of strong thunderstorms moved across south Florida.

By late afternoon, water was rising over the seawall at Horseshoe Beach along the Gulf Coast in central Florida, the National Weather Service said. Low-lying roads in Taylor County were covered by 1 foot of water.

Several inches of snow fell in the Wyoming portion of Yellowstone National Park overnight including 4 inches at Grant Village, 3 inches at Old Faithful and 2 inches at the snow entrance to the park. A snow advisory was posted into today over the Cascades and Skiways of Oregon.

By early afternoon, rain and thunderstorms extended over the southern Atlantic coastal states, the Tennessee Valley, the Ohio Valley, Lake Superior, the northern Rockies, the northern Plateau and coastal Washington and Oregon.

Heavier rainfall during the 6 hours ending at noon MDT included nearly an inch at Paducah, Ky., and at Evansville, Ind.

Temperatures around the nation at 1 p.m. MDT ranged from 34 degrees at Jackson, Wyo., to 86 degrees at Palm Springs and Thermal, both in California.

The low temperature for the lower 48 states early Friday was 10 degrees at South Pass City, Wyo.

Russians release documents on U.S. planes

MOSCOW (AP) — A Russian investigator released new details Friday about U.S. planes shot down during the Korean War, but said there was no evidence any American war prisoners were still alive in Russia.

A U.S. colleague on a POW-MIA review panel, however, said Russians were hampering the commission's efforts to account for missing American soldiers.

Malcolm Troon, co-chairman of the U.S.-Russian commission, said he had given Russians details of 10 downings of U.S. aircraft.

"We cannot understand why the Russian government cannot give definitive information about the shoot-downs, or whether there were any survivors," Troon told a news conference.

On Friday, Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov, a military historian and co-chairman of the commission, said the newly released documents had ed over to the Americans could help determine the exact location of U.S. planes shot down over Korea during the 1950-53 war.

Volkogonov said Soviet anti-aircraft artillery downed 140 U.S. bombers in seven months over northwest Korea.

He said newly released documents list the factory production numbers, from recovered parts of the planes, which would aid in identifying them.

Volkogonov also said the commission would be able to produce a map showing locations of 44 of the downed U.S. planes.

He said new evidence has helped determine many more Korean gravesites of U.S. war dead.

"But we haven't managed to get any information to indicate that there are any survivors," he added.

Volkogonov disclosed earlier that 59 Americans, mostly pilots, were downed by the North Korean and Soviet air forces during the Korean War and were kept in North Korean camps.

Volkogonov said authorities had found records of the KGB interrogations of the pilots, which consisted mostly of technical questions about their planes and equipment.

Briefly

Cable TV to contest requirement

WASHINGTON — Cable television operators will appeal a federal court ruling requiring one-third of their channels to be reserved for commercial and public-TV broadcasters, an industry spokesman said Friday.

The ruling issued late Thursday upholds a section of the new cable law that was challenged by cable operators and their programmers.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia ruled 2-1 against the cable industry's complaint that the law violated their First Amendment free speech rights.

Peggy Lammie of the National Cable Television Association, said, "We still believe our case will prevail and we will pursue appropriate appeals." Edward O. Fritts, National Association of Broadcasters president, who had fought for the provision in the law, lauded the ruling as "a great day for broadcasters."

Clinton to press trade talk deadline

WASHINGTON — President Clinton will ask Congress to renew special authority to quickly complete negotiations on a sweeping overhaul of the rules governing world trade, the White House announced Friday.

Trade talks among 108 countries are now in their seventh year but are snarled in a dispute over phasing out farm subsidies.

"The failure to complete the round has been a source of disappointment and frustration to the United States and many of our trading partners," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said in announcing the effort to get the talks moving again.

Under the legislation to be submitted, the talks would have to be wrapped up by next Dec. 15, with Congress then given until April 15, 1994 to act on the completed agreement.

Shuttle crew takes solar energy tests

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Discovery's pilot twirled the shuttle high above Earth on Friday for solar energy measurements needed by scientists studying Earth's withering ozone layer.

As those measurements streamed down to scientists, NASA struggled for the second day to fix a data relay problem involving a prime ozone monitor. Engineers traced the trouble to the high-data-rate channel on a shuttle antenna.

The ozone monitor, capable of measuring 30 to 40 atmospheric gases, cannot transmit those readings to Earth without chunks of information missing, and its on-board recorder has room for only another few days of data. The eight-day mission lasts until next Friday.

The chief scientist for the experiment, Michael Gunson of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., said his instrument was gathering all the data desired so far.

Tennessee towns continue egg contest

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. — Residents of Peters Hollow and Rome Hollow have been trying to determine who has the hardest eggs in the hollows for 169 years with an Easter egg fight.

But the contestants don't throw eggs at each other, they sit in a circle and tap them together. The last one with an uncracked, hard-boiled egg wins.

According to the local memory banks, the contest started when some men from Peters Hollow and Rome Hollow — about 10 miles from Elizabethton in northeast Tennessee — wondered whose chickens laid eggs with the hardest shells.

Study: Doctors ignore recommendations

CHICAGO — Pediatricians routinely disregard recommendations that all infants receive the hepatitis B vaccine, a new survey has found.

Dr. Gary Eered and his colleagues at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill surveyed North Carolina's pediatricians within three months of the federal Centers for Disease Control's November 1991 recommendation that infants receive the vaccine.

The researchers tallied responses from 438 of the state's 695 pediatricians. Of those, 82 percent said they were aware of the recommendation, but just 32 percent said they believed it was warranted in their practices.

Cash wins lawsuit against developer

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Johnny Cash was awarded $1.6 million in his lawsuit against the developer of a never-completed theater complex bearing his name.

A bankruptcy judge approved the settlement Thursday between Cash and developer David Green.

Cash was to headline the Cash Country Theater in Branson last year, but Green ran into money trouble and filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection before the theater was completed.

The singer will get $400,000 now. The rest will be paid once the remaining 70 acres near the theater site along Branson's main strip are sold, Nelson said.

Church-related colleges pay lowest

WASHINGTON — The average college professor makes $46,270 a year, with private university teachers typically the highest earners and those at church-related schools the lowest, a professors' group said Friday.

Vereen returns to Broadway stage

NEW YORK (AP) — Ben Vereen stopped the show just by showing up — getting cheers as he took the Broadway stage in "Jelly's Last Jam" 10 months after he was nearly killed in a highway accident.

Vereen's doctors and therapists were in the audience Thursday night among a celebrity turnout that included Mayor David Dinkins and performers Mary Tyler Moore, Gwen Verdon, Chita Rivera, Melba Moore and Ann Reinking.

Vereen played the role of Chimpney Man, a death figure who has an opening monologue, sings and performs various stylized movements.

The 46-year-old performer was hit by a car last June as he walked along a dark highway near his home in Malibu, Calif. He suffered head and internal injuries and a leg fracture.

Milwaukee water department chemists check a filter for a suspected contaminant that caused residents to fall ill.

Millions unprotected from untreatable bug

ATLANTA (AP) — Most Americans never will encounter the parasite that contaminated Milwaukee's water.

But 21 million people use water systems that aren't protected from the bug, and others swallow it when water plants improperly clean their filters, experts said Friday.

One small outbreak of rigor can result in one of these outbreaks, said Jack Hoffmuth of the American Water Works Association, a nonprofit foundation that tracks drinking water. "But I think most people can rest assured this is not common."

Thousands of Milwaukee residents were stricken by cryptosporidium, a protozoan about one-hundredth the size of a speck of dust. It causes severe diarrhea.

Mostly found in developing countries, it's the major cause of travelers' diarrhea. But 2 percent of the diarrhea cases in U.S. hospitals are caused by the bug, which can kill people who have weak immune systems.

"I had news that there's no treatment for it, but the good news is it runs its course in about 14 days in healthy people," said Dr. Dennis Juraneck of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Cryptosporidium lives in the intestines of animals and humans and is spread by contact with infected feces — anything from diaper-changing to water tainted by farm runoff.

Milwaukee's is the fourth U.S. outbreak of cryptosporidia in recent years, and all were caused by tainted water.

The largest outbreak was in Carrollton, west of Atlanta, in 1987, when thousands became ill. Residents boiled water for two weeks before the state decided the water plant was filtering properly for the bug.

The other outbreaks were in Brain Station, Texas, in 1984 and Medford and Talent, Oregon, last year.

Filters are the only protection from the parasite, which cannot be killed by chlorine or other chemicals, Juraneck said.

The earth naturally filters cryptosporidia before it reaches ground water, which is the primary source for 92 percent of the nation's water systems.

But cities that draw drinking water from streams or lakes — such as Milwaukee — are required to chemically treat their water but not to filter it, Juraneck said.

About 21 million Americans drink unfiltered surface water. Most live in mountainous areas where people think the water's safe because it appears so clear, Juraneck said. The 1992 Oregon outbreak was caused by an unfiltered spring, he said.

Lawmaker cleared of payoffs charges

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A federal court jury Friday acquitted Rep. Harold Ford of charges he took political payoffs from two former bankers and political allies.

The U.S. District court jury acquitted the Tennessee Democrat on 18 counts of conspiracy, bank and mail fraud. Ford, 47, has been on trial since March 1 on charges he took a bogus loans from former Tennessee bankers Jake and C.H. Butcher Jr.

Ford brought his left hand to his face and set quietly in his chair as the jury returned the verdict.

Health plan to stress physician choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's health-care plan will put strong emphasis on the ability of Americans to choose their own doctors, administration officials said Friday.

Offering fresh details of the plan, which is still being developed, these officials responded to nervousness about how the sweeping changes would affect individual Americans. They said most people would have more choices in obtaining health coverage under Clinton's plan than they do now.

"The increased choice will come in the fact that so many Americans, a significant percentage of working Americans, are locked into their employers' choice of plan," said one of three officials who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity.

"The employer says, 'There's what we're offering, you've got to take it,'" this official said. "In what we're proposing, individuals... will have the choice of that company's plan or plans or may always go to a health alliance to purchase from among those plans."

Officials stressed the health-care plan still is taking shape. Clinton is getting in-depth staff briefings on key aspects now.

The package originally was due to be unveiled on May 3, but that deadline has slipped somewhat due to the complexity of the project and the need for first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton to attend to her father in the weeks before death Wednesday.

Mrs. Clinton is chairing the health-care reform task force. The health plan now is expected to be unveiled some time in May.

The chief goals of Clinton's health reforms are to extend health coverage to the 37 million Americans who now lack insurance, to provide all Americans with the security that their insurance cannot be put at risk if they become ill or change jobs, and to rein in skyrocketing costs that are a drain on the U.S. economy.

Under Clinton's plan, all

The increased choice will come in the fact that so many Americans, a significant percentage of working Americans, are locked into their employers' choice of plan.

— anonymous administration official

Americans would eventually have a "health security card" that guarantees them access to a standard set of health benefits laid out by the federal government.

Employers would have to offer insurance to their workers and their families, but workers would be able to choose between a variety of plans offered by their employer, or through a local health-purchasing alliance. Employers would pay the bulk of the health-care premiums, and workers would pick up the rest.

Administration officials stressed that insurers would not be able to sick or turn away people with pre-existing medical conditions. However, they said the administration hasn't decided whether to allow companies to charge different rates for people of different ages.

Other details released Friday:

- Consumers will have the right to change plans, probably once a year.
- People will have access to some sort of "report card" rating the performance of various health plans and laying out what sort of complaints they have generated.
- Local health alliances, from which employers and individuals will buy health care, will offer a variety of plans.

Some would be networks of doctors who treat patients for a flat annual fee, much like existing health maintenance organizations. But there also would be "fee-for-service" plans available that allow people to see specific doctors, who would be reimbursed separately for each service and visit. It is unclear whether the "fee-for-service" plans would cost more.

Medicaid, the federal-state system that ensures health care for the poor, would be gradually phased out. "The death of a program people are unhappy with is to be applauded," one official said.

"Poor people ultimately would get their health coverage through the same purchasing alliances as other people, with help from government subsidies.

Recipients of Medicare, the health insurance program for the elderly, may see their coverage enhanced in some ways but the government does not "want to mess it up" by making radical changes in the short term, one official said.

The plan will include special efforts to attract and retain doctors and other medical workers for areas with inadequate health care, such as rural counties and inner cities. There also will be efforts to set up referral systems to ensure people in these areas have access to nearby medical specialists and specialized medical facilities.

Administration officials cautioned that it would take "some number of years" to fully implement the health reforms and to extend health coverage to all uninsured Americans.

"This is a major change we're envisioning for one-seventh of the economy," one official said. "You can't turn that on a dime, even if you want to, structurally."

Schwarzkopf, CBS visit Hanoi

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Retired Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the Gulf War commander and Vietnam veteran, arrived Friday for a two-day visit to Vietnam's capital.

Schwarzkopf is making his first trip to Vietnam since serving in the country as an Army officer in the 1960s. He is working with a CBS News crew on a documentary about his experiences during two tours of duty in South Vietnam.

Schwarzkopf could not be reached for comment. CBS has denied reporters access to the general since he checked into a Hanoi hotel.

Linda Mason, executive producer and vice-president of CBS News, said

Schwarzkopf is working under an exclusive CBS contract and is traveling as a private citizen. The network arranged and paid for his visit.

Schwarzkopf arrived in Vietnam on Sunday and spent four days in Ho Chi Minh City.

California native takes Idaho bank's top job

BOISE Kathleen Ross has been named president and chief operating officer of Bank of America Idaho.

Ross, 45, will be in charge of commercial and retail banking. The bank is the Idaho subsidiary of Bank America Corp., San Francisco.

She reports to Ronald Slocum, Bank of America Idaho chairman and chief executive officer, who was president before being named chairman last August.

Ross most recently was senior vice president of strategic planning for the retail banking group of First Interstate Bank of California in San Francisco and was a member of First Interstate's managing committee.

Bank of America Idaho has 20 branch banks in Idaho, including three in Boise and one in Nampa. Ross is a Los Angeles native.

Plans to convert Sears catalog stores to retail include Nampa

CHICAGO Sears, Roebuck and Co. which in January said it was closing its 2,000 catalog stores, announced plans this week to convert about 350 of them to small retail businesses.

Sears said the conversion of the stores would be complete by year's end.

Among catalog stores to be converted are ones in Nampa and in Utah at Cedar City, Logan, St. George and Vernal.

"We have received hundreds of calls and letters from customers in smaller markets who have traded with Sears for years asking us to remain as a part of their community," said Arthur C. Martinez, chairman and chief executive officer of Sears Merchandise Group.

The conversion would be complete by year's end and will create between 1,050 and 3,500 jobs, said Gordon Jones, a company spokesman.

The stores will carry major home appliances, electronics, adult lawn and garden equipment. Dealers will stock popular models and can order others.

The move was part of a larger survival effort intended to save the company an estimated $300 million a year. That effort included closing 113 other Sears stores and cutting about 50,000 full- and part-time jobs.

Idaho EG&G veteran returns to Idaho to run INEL plant

IDAHO FALLS Earl Fray has been named president and general manager of EG&G Idaho, a contractor at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, company officials say.

For the past four years, Fray was president of EG&G Washington Analytical Services, a technology company in Rockville, Md.

Fray's knowledge of the (INEL) site, its people and programs — combined with his vast commercial experience — should prove valuable to the Department of Energy efforts to bring the INEL's respected resources to contribute to key U.S. economic competitiveness, technology transfer, research and development, and environmental and energy initiatives," said James Zacc, vice president of EG&G, Inc.

From 1977 to 1989, Fray worked for EG&G Idaho with five years as deputy general manager. Fray replaces Jim Oksanen, who has taken another post in the company, EG&G said.

Cutbacks will send Litton employees to Utah facility

LOS ANGELES Litton Industries Inc. said it will eliminate about 700 jobs in its 1,500-employee navigation systems unit in suburban Woodland Hills by 1995, reflecting defense spending cutbacks.

Some work from Litton's Guidance and Control unit and another facility in Grants Pass, Ore., which is being closed, will be transferred to the company's Salt Lake City facility, spokesman Dirk Koerber said Thursday.

Litton will eliminate all production in Woodland Hills of guidance systems for military ships and aircraft, resulting in 450 layoffs, Koerber said. Another 220 and 250 engineering and administrative jobs will be moved to Salt Lake City, he said.

Small firm's deal with Sony brings music to greeting cards

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. A small Florida company is teaming with Sony Corp. to bring the artists and other pop acts to greeting cards.

Musical artists have been around for years, but the new cards go beyond melodious microchips to include CDs with recording artists from Sony music labels. The cards will list for $9.95.

"Physically, it's a conventional CD, but with an array of artists and songs that relate to the card," Fred Massaro, chief executive of Golden Circle Corp., said Thursday.

GM gas tank designs

Detroit — Federal auto safety regulators asked General Motors Corp. Friday to recall voluntarily 4.7 million pickup trucks with side-mounted fuel tanks because the tanks may pose a deadly fire hazard.

"They were 3 1/2 times as likely as comparable Ford pickups to be involved in fatal side-impact crashes in which fire was the cause of the fatality," said William A. Boehly, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's top enforcement official.

Based on four months of investigation and crash tests, the agency believes "those vehicles contain a defect and General Motors should therefore initiate a recall," Boehly said.

The automaker, which has until April 30 to respond, had no immediate comment.

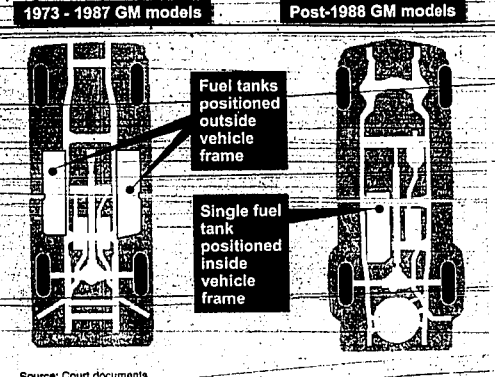

The fuel tanks were the focus of a lawsuit GM lost in Atlanta in February, when a jury awarded $105.2 million to the parents of a teen-ager killed in the fiery crash of his GM pickup truck. The automaker on Friday asked a state judge to overturn the jury's finding and award.

The trucks all were the subject of a "Dateline NBC" program last November that cited internal GM reports suggesting the automaker might have been aware of a problem with them. NBC later admitted using incendiary devices during demonstrations of fuel tank fires in the report.

Consumer groups say 300 people have died in fires caused by side-impact crashes involving GM pickups with fuel tanks mounted outside the frame rails — GM built

Slower medical inflation holds down consumer prices — a boost for Clinton

WASHINGTON The smallest increase in medical costs in nine years helped hold consumer prices to a 0.1 percent advance in March, the government said Friday in a report that calmed inflation jitters.

"This is tremendous news. I'm sure the Clinton administration must be breathing easier. One of the worst things that could happen to them is an acceleration of inflation," said economist Sandra Shaber of the WVEFA Group in Hala Cuywyl, Pa.

The barely perceptible, seasonally adjusted rise in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index followed a moderate 0.3 percent gain in February and a worrisome 0.5 percent jump in January, the steepest in two years.

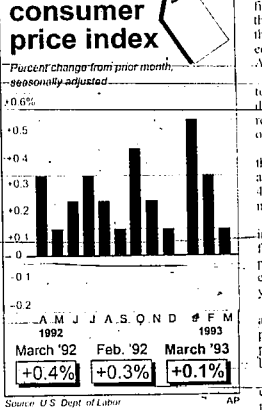

Some economists had taken the earlier reports as signs that prices would increase more strongly this year, after rising just 2.9 percent in 1992, the second best in 27 years.

But Shaber said inflation should show little change into 1994, up or down, as the U.S. economy continues to grow slowly while overseas economies falter.

"There are still major conditions in the United States and world ... that are keeping a deflationary pressure over. This may not be an energetic (economic) recovery, but it is a recovery," she said.

Financial markets had rallied on Thursday in response to a report showing only a 0.1 percent increase, outside of food and energy.

U.S. consumer price index

Source: U.S. Dept. of Labor

Economists said one of the most striking features of the consumer price report was the 0.3 percent rise in medical care costs, the smallest since March 1984. "This may be the first indication that health care reform and the prospect of health care reform is causing economic Mark. Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

"I think people in the industry are scared to death. ... No matter how you slice it or dice it, the industry is headed for restructuring and that will mean a slower rate of increase in medical costs," he said.

But because of the consumer price surge at the start of the year, the seasonally adjusted annual inflation rate for the first quarter was 1 percent, the worst three-month period in more than two years.

More importantly for economists, the core inflation rate — prices excluding the volatile food and energy sectors — has risen at a 4.3 percent annual rate so far this year, compared with 3.3 percent for all of last year.

Those core prices, which analysts consider a better measure of underlying inflationary pressures than the overall rate, shot up 0.5 percent during both January and February but rose only 0.1 percent in March.

The mild consumer inflation in March came despite a 0.7 percent jump in energy prices — the biggest in eight months. Gasoline prices fell 0.4 percent. But the late winter blizzard pushed fuel oil prices up 2.5 percent.

Japanese leadership lauds U.S. workers

TOKYO — Here's the latest word from Japan's leadership about American manufacturing: U.S. workers are great, but management may need some changes.

Newly appointed Foreign Minister Kishin Muto, one of the politicians who caused a furor last year with disparaging comments about the American work ethic, returned to the subject Wednesday.

"Americans are marvelous workers," Muto said in his first news conference as Japan's top diplomat.

"The fact is, I was shown a Toyota of Honda factory run by Japanese managers. To see the American workers was really impressive.

"I was greatly moved to see how much the American workers want to make high-efficiency, high-quality products. Even more than the Japanese employees you'd see at a plant in Japan, the Americans working in a Toyota or Honda plant in America have a way of working that is just splendid."

But Muto also had a warning for Americans.

"Even with these marvelous American workers, if good management is lacking, things won't come out well," he said. "Management is key." And Muto had an idea where Americans might turn to learn good management practices. "Wouldn't it be a good thing if Americans would adopt what is called Japanese-style management — to produce good products at the best price to please consumers?"

The new foreign minister's comments contrasted with the view he expressed early in 1992. In a conversation in parliament with Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, Muto mentioned the belief that U.S. products made in assembly lines on a Friday or Monday tend to be inferior because American workers then are too focused on recovering from the weekend to pay attention to quality.

At the time, Miyazawa chimed in that he had some concerns about the strength of the American work ethic. These criticisms, coming at a tense time in U.S.-Japanese relations, infuriated some Americans and led to a round of "Buy American" campaigns.

Casinos take in less in February

CARSON CITY — An odd mix of bad weather, fewer weekends, Super Bowl bet accounting and an early Chinese New Year combined to push Nevada casinos into a 6.9 percent revenue slump in February.

The state's Gaming Control Board recently Friday that the clubs took in $435 million in February, but that was 6.9 percent lower than the money won from gamblers in the same month a year earlier.

The February action compared with a big month for the resorts in January, in which they won $525.7 million for a 9.5 percent gain.

"February was kind of a strange month," GCB spokesman Terrian Flges said in detailing the agency report and explaining the factors that figured in the downturn.

Clubs in Elko County took in $10.8 million in February for a 4.9 percent decrease.

But even with the bad month, Flges said, February's net brought fiscal year revenues up to $3.97 billion, an overall increase of 4.7 percent.

The state's cut of those revenues, $257.9 million, is up by the same percentage.

Flges said harsh weather, especially in northern Nevada, kept players away in February. "One one had mid-afternoon rain, many highways were closed at times, he added.

Reno's airport set an all-time record for February passenger volume, but Flges said that didn't offset the loss of gamblers who couldn't make it to the area by car.

Besides the weather, February was one day shorter this year than last year, and that — resulted in "four weekends instead of five weekends" for accounting purposes.

The win percentage also took a hit because of better winnings from Nevada's legal sports books on the Jan. 31 Superbowl game fell into the February accounting column, Flges said.

Key lawmaker unsure of huge tax shift

LEWISTON (AP) — Republican House Speaker Michael Simpson says he cannot guarantee lawmakers will raise property taxes next year to keep another One-Percent Initiative off the ballot.

Simpson and other Republican leaders were in Lewiston and Moscow Thursday to trumpet the GOP-dominated Legislature's refusal to raise taxes this session.

The only way Gov. Cecil Andrus and Democratic legislative leaders would give the Legislature an "A grade" would be if it raised taxes and imposed burdensome regulation, he said.

"The governor calls it a no-nothing session because we didn't raise taxes like he proposed," said Simpson, a likely gubernatorial candidate.

Andrus proposed granting property tax relief and substantial hikes in education spending largely by increasing the transactions covered by the sales tax.

Granting property tax relief is complicated because of rapidly growing property values in parts of the state, and deciding what tax should be raised to make up for the lost property taxes, Simpson said.

He said there is a lot of resistance to raising the income tax because Idaho has one of the highest income tax rates in the nation.

"I think we do more damage by increasing the income tax than we currently do with property taxes," he said.

Simpson said there is opposition to raising the sales tax in counties bordering other states. But he said he believes lawmakers eventually will broaden the burden of the sales tax, cut the rate to 3 percent and provide some property tax relief.

He said he does not know whether there is a good plan to shift the burden of property taxes onto other taxes. An interim legislative study committee will hold public hearings about several proposals this summer, he said.

Idaho voters last fall turned down the initiative to limit property taxes to 1 percent of fair market value.

"The Latah County Citizens for Fair Taxation—pressed Simpson on whether he can assure Idahoans the Legislature will move to head off another One Percent Initiative. The tax will be more difficult next year because it's an election year, they said.

"I can't give my assurance to the people of Idaho want. As soon as you make a proposal, 50 percent will go one way and 50 percent will go the other."

Senate President Pro-Tem Jerry Twigg, R-Blackfoot, said he believes Idahoans want property tax relief granted without raising taxes overall.

Simpson said he is more opposed to a local option sales tax than a local option individual income tax because the former creates problems for businesses around the state.

Potential Idaho GOP leader bows out

BOISE — James Risch, who was considered one of the frontrunners to succeed Phil Batt as chairman of the Idaho Republican Party, on Friday said he's withdrawing so he can take a significant part in Batt's governor campaign.

Batt officially resigns April 24 as party chairman after rallying the party from losses in 1988 and 1990 to a smashing victory in the 1992 election. He's formed an exploratory committee to run for governor next year but hasn't officially announced.

With Risch's departure, leading contenders are Bill Ringert, Boise lawyer and former Ada County state senator, and Randy Smith, Pocatello lawyer.

Risch said Friday he wants to take a big part in the formation and direction of Batt's campaign for governor.

Batt, Wilder farmer and former lieutenant governor, won the GOP nomination for governor 11 years ago but lost to Democrat John Evans.

Shelter would house vets, their families

BOISE — A Boise-area shelter exclusively for veterans and their families would be the first in Idaho, says founder Dan Hart of Caldwell.

Now in the initial planning stages, Shelter Habitat for Homeless Veterans will provide temporary housing and counseling, he said.

Hart, a veteran of the Korean and Vietnam wars, and his five-member, all-veteran board of directors hope to set up shelter space for 50 vets and to provide job placement help, information on benefits and access to counseling services.

The U.S. Veterans Administration estimates there are 115,000 veterans in Idaho. And according to figures from the Disabled American Veterans, at least 300 of them are homeless.

Study: Idaho maternity benefits lag

BOISE — Maternity benefits for southwestern Idaho workers have improved little in a dozen years, a new Boise State University study shows.

Nearly all employers surveyed provide health-insurance coverage for pregnancy. But only 13 percent pay new mothers a portion of their income if they stay home after exhausting other benefits, such as sick leave and vacation.

There is no provision in most company policies to provide a paid maternity leave," said Patricia Dorman, a BSU sociologist.

"What that means is unless you have a good bank account stashed away, childbirth becomes very expensive," she said.

Funds will restore college building

COEUR D'ALENE — North Idaho College President Bob Bennett missed out on his first wish for building renovation but got his second one.

Bennett was notified Wednesday NIC will receive $161,000 to restore the 1879-vintage Fort Sherman Officers' Quarters.

The money from the state Permanent Building Fund will be funneled through the Division of Public Works. Construction will not start until after funds become available July 1.

Bennett's top priority for state funding was the remodeling of Lee Hall at $2.2 million.

WALLACE — A Pinchurst man has been convicted of vehicular manslaughter in the deaths of two passengers in the vehicle he was driving.

After deliberating into the night Thursday, the jury convicted Thomas Sheahan of two counts.

He was charged in the deaths of Keith Olson, Spokane, and Perry Padley, Pinchurst, following an accident at along the North Fork of the Coeur d'Alene River last August. Both men were pronounced dead at the scene.

Craig to review LaRocco's choices

BOISE — Republican Sen. Larry Craig is taking the unusual step of forming a committee to review federal appointments of Democratic Congressman Larry LaRocco, but the congressman says it will have little impact on the process.

"His role (Craig) is to cast a vote in the U.S. Senate," LaRocco said Friday. "It's not changing my way of proceeding."

Craig chief of staff Greg Casey said the Republican senator is forming a bipartisan committee to solicit recommendations on LaRocco's two Justice Department nominations. They are John Tait, Lewiston attorney, as a new U.S. district judge, and Betty Richardson, Boise attorney and a member of the state Industrial Commission, as U.S. attorney.

Former congressman may teach in Idaho

MOSCOW (AP) — Former Congressman Richard Stallings says he would like to return to teaching in Idaho later this year, either for a public university or his old employer, Ricks College.

The Idaho Democrat said he doubts the Clinton administration has an attractive enough appointed post to keep him in the nation's capital after a son graduates from high school in early June.

But he added he is not ready to make a decision about whether he will run for governor next year.

"We are seriously looking at Moscow and Pocatello," Stallings said Thursday from his Falls Church—Va.—home. "I am an educator and I want to get back in the classroom."

He taught history at Ricks College in Rexburg for 15 years, before serving four two-year terms in Congress and losing last fall's U.S. Senate election to Republican Dirk Kempthorne. He earned his bachelor's degree at Weber State and his master's degree at Utah State.

He is lobbying for giving federal funding directly to a consortium of universities, including ISU, for the boron neutron capture therapy project rather than handing it out through the U.S. Department of Energy, said Michael Gallagher, ISU's academic vice president.

The project deals with a form of brain cancer therapy. Stallings said he will probably apply for teaching positions at Ricks College, the UI and ISU.

Zinsler said decisions about whether Stallings is hired would be made at the academic departmental level.

"I expect he would make a fine contribution in the classroom," she said. "I greatly encouraged him. I would do that to anyone asking about positions."

Gallagher said ISU always needs more history teachers because of its rapidly expanding enrollment.

"My guess is there probably will be an opening," he said.

Alyn Andrus, chairman of the Ricks history department, said the department is not looking at hiring anyone for the next school year.

"There is no spot in the history department, but I have no idea whether there would be in the school," he said.

Meanwhile, Stallings, who indicated he was seriously considering running for governor three months ago, said a final decision about that is a long way off.

Although he said he has support in northern Idaho, Stallings added he doubts Idahoans are ready for another campaign to begin because one just ended a few months ago.

SILVERTHORNE, Colo. (AP) — Two people in a cross-country skiing group were trapped by an avalanche near here Friday afternoon and one was airlifted to the Summit Medical Center at Frisco, authorities said.

An ambulance attendant-paramedic in the group of four skiers was able to call for help with a radio he carried, authorities added.

The first person, a man, was recovered from the slide after 21 minutes, said Summit County sheriff's sergeant Wolfgang Schmidt. After being treated in Frisco, the man was flown to St. Anthony Central Hospital in Denver.

Senator, Serbs trade tough talk

SARAJEVO — Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The Bosnian Serb militia commander agreed Friday to a cease-fire around beleaguered Srebrenica, but refused to allow U.N. peacekeepers into the Muslim town.

Gen. Ratko Mladic said his refusal stemmed from Thursday's discovery of 48 boxes of ammunition hidden in four that a U.N. aid convoy was taking to a Muslim suburb of Sarajevo.

Also Friday, a deputy of Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said the Serbs had informed international negotiators that they were ready to resume peace talks.

It was unclear whether either development heralded significant change in the year-old war that has left 134,000 people dead or missing in the former Yugoslav republic. There have been more than 20 other cease-fires called, many of which collapsed within hours.

In the peace talks, the Serbs have adamantly rejected elements of a peace plan that calls for dividing the country into 10 semi-autonomous provinces, based largely on ethnic criteria.

U.S. Sen. Joseph Biden, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, demanded during a visit to Sarajevo on Friday that the Serbs allow U.N. peacekeepers into Srebrenica immediately. Biden, D.-Del., also held out the hope of U.S. military aid to Bosnia's Muslim-led government.

As many as 60,000 Muslims are stranded in Srebrenica, most of them after fleeing fighting elsewhere in eastern Bosnia.

Accused coup leaders blame Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — Twelve men who were once among the most powerful in the Soviet Union go on trial next week for plotting the August-1991 coup. Their defense is expected to be simple: Gorbachev inspired it all.

Two of the accused conspirators — former Vice President Gennady Yanayev and Politburo member Oleg Shenin — gave their version of the coup in interviews with The Associated Press this week.

They said former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev secretly pushed them to declare emergency rule and then backed out as the plot failed, leaving them to take the blame and the country to collapse.

"Really, his own idea was carried forward by his closest circle. Whenever any critical situation in the country required unpopular measures, we always tried to cover up Gorbachev's role so his democratic image would not suffer," Yanayev said.

Gorbachev denies the accusation and has agreed to testify at the non-jury, military trial, which starts Wednesday and could last several weeks.

If the accused are found guilty of treason, they could get the death penalty.

Yeltsin vows to stay in power if he loses

MOSCOW (AP) — Intensifying his campaign for the April 25 referendum on his leadership, President Boris Yeltsin claimed Friday that extreme forces could take power if he loses.

Then in a gesture to voters angered by soaring inflation brought by his economic reforms, Yeltsin said he would repeal a sharp price hike for gasoline and rents for state-owned apartments in the Moscow area.

Yeltsin, increasing the campaign rhetoric, said a victory by his hard-line opponents would shake the world.

Magic Valley

Around the valley

Building permit totals rise from last year

TWIN FALLS - The cold weather that shut down much of the Magic Valley economy didn't stop the Twin Falls construction industry from seeking building permits.

Twin Falls City approved $3.4 million in building permits in January and February, according to First Security Bank's monthly building report. The total is 25 percent higher than last year and 45 percent higher than the same two months of 1991.

The increase was broad-based, with increases in residential and commercial construction. Twin Falls County issued $883,321 in permits, well above last year's $495,198. All other areas of the Magic Valley, except for Ketchum, remained quiet as the construction industry prepared for the building season.

Ketchum issued almost $1.1 million in permits. One single-family permit worth $150,000 and three multi-family permits worth $850,000 accounted for all but $78,000 of Ketchum's total.

Park Service presents plans for Fossil Beds at meetings

TWIN FALLS - The National Park Service will present its plans for the Thagerman Fossil Beds National Monument at a series of public meetings later this month.

The Site Selection Planning Study and Environmental Assessment for a proposed research center and museum will be covered in meetings at 7:30 p.m. on:

- April 19 in the Hagerman Senior Citizen Center.
- April 20 in Room 108 of the Aspen Building at the College of Southern Idaho.
- April 21 at the First Security Bank, 200 Broadway, Buhl.
- April 22 at the Gooding City Hall.

The Park Service also is studying what facilities and services will be necessary to handle the 250,000 to 300,000 expected annual visitors to the monument.

For information call the Monument office at 837-4793 or the Park Service's Twin Falls office at 733-8398.

CSI offers North Side stress management help Saturday

GOODING - The College of Southern Idaho North Side Center has planned a stress management workshop for 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday in the round building at the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind.

The workshop is free, but those planning to attend are asked to pre-register by calling 934-8678.

Applications available for CSI cheerleading tryouts

Business communication seminar set for April 23

KETCHUM - The Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce will be sponsoring a two-hour seminar April 23 on "Confident Business Communications."

Led by Patricia Teal Meyer, a business protocol educator from Sacramento, Calif., the seminar will focus on telephone protocol and "working a room" - creating comfortable small talk, meeting and greeting.

The seminar will be held from 3-5 p.m. in Ketchum Town Square. Registration fee is $15 and includes refreshments.

Reservations are required by calling 226-3423.

7th annual statewide litter cleanup slated for May 8-15

TWIN FALLS - The seventh annual "Idaho is Too Great to Litter" spring cleanup week will take place May 8-15, the Idaho Transportation Department announced.

Gov. Cecil Andrus is expected to sign a proclamation officially designating the week, according to a Transportation Department news release.

Police rule out suicide in roulette victim's death

The Times-News and The Associated Press

SPOKANE - A 17-year-old former Twin Falls boy who apparently killed himself with a handgun in a game of Russian roulette had talked to friends about suicide two weeks before he died.

But suicide has been ruled out in the death, authorities said, despite Raven Kennedy's comments to friends.

"We believe he was just looking for sympathy," Spokane County Sheriff's detective Michael Massong said.

A graveside funeral is planned for noon today for Kennedy at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Kennedy lived without his parents in Spokane in the attic of a home that he was helping to remodel in exchange for free rent. Spokane investigators believe Kennedy shot himself at the home after taking the first turn in a game of Russian roulette.

"They're investigating whether Kennedy's landlord proposed the game."

At the time of Raven Kennedy's death Monday, his father, Grant Kennedy, was in Spokane County Jail on a pending charge of child sex abuse, according to the Spokane Spokesman-Review newspaper. His mother, Sharon Olson, lives in Twin Falls.

Kennedy had talked to friends about taking his life March 24, but detectives "don't believe he intended to kill himself," Massong said.

After a friend called 911, paramedics answered the call, found nothing wrong and left the house believing it was a prank call.

Spokane investigators are focusing on the role of a 39-year-old man who owned the 38-caliber revolver that Kennedy put to his head and fired Monday, Massong said.

Detectives may charge him with manslaughter if it is determined he directly contributed to the death, authorities said.

Witnesses told detectives that the man came up with the idea of passing around the revolver, which was loaded with a single bullet. Three other teen-agers were present. Kennedy took his turn first, spinning the cylinder and taking his chances by pulling the trigger, witnesses said.

He died on arrival at a hospital, and an autopsy determined the cause of death was consistent with a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Law enforcement officers knew the youth was living without his parents, Massong said.

They decided not to refer him to state Child Protective Services workers because they believed he was being adequately cared for by the couple that owned the home where he was staying.

There was no reason to believe he was being neglected," Massong said.

Raven Kennedy grew up in Twin Falls and worked for The Times-News as a newspaper carrier from August 1990 to December 1991.

Rachel Holwich and Michael Johnson, eighth-graders from Valley Junior High, dig holes for new trees on the Thousand Springs Preserve.

Outing gives trees roots, students' careers wings

By Suzanne Huxhold Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN - Rachel Holwich handles a shovel and pick like a pro.

The 14-year-old, in a denim shirt and long ponytail digs a quick hole, pops up a tiny tree and expertly backfills it.

She looks up, a smile forming on her pretty face.

"I have to get used to all this digging," she says, laughing. "I want to be an archeologist someday. I need the practice."

It's that kind of enthusiasm for hard work and thirst for learning that her digging partner, Valley Junior High School teacher Frank Dehoney, loves to see.

It's also the reason he brought 14 of his life science students out to plant 550 river birch trees on the Nature Conservancy's Thousand Springs Preserve near Hagerman Friday.

"We use this as a lab for eighth-grade life science class," Dehoney said. "But it's more than that. It's a way for these kids to have a positive effect on our local environment and return something to their community."

The kids have made contributions other than the reforestation of the island meadow. In previous trips to the Conservancy, they've laid out irrigation lines for native grass plantings, tested island water supplies, built a fence from the fish hatchery to the meadow and fashioned nesting boxes for the Conservancy's resident and visiting wood ducks.

Dehoney said his students have constructed more than just boxes and fences, of course; the relationship they've built with Thousand Springs conservationists Mike and Christine O'Brien has been a boon to the kids' education.

"At least three kids intend to pursue life science careers, primarily due to their contact with Mike and Chris," Dehoney said. "It's hard to explain, they are so gentle and non-confrontational."

Advertisement error leaves Dispose-All plans unclear

By Phil Sahn Times-News writer

BURLEY - Dispose-All Inc. announced in a newspaper ad Friday company plans to build a landfill on Burley Butte in Cassia County.

But the legal notice the company submitted to The Times-News incorrectly described the butte's location, as 66 miles west in Owyhee County.

Meanwhile, a bulldozer remained at Burley Butte where the company apparently wishes to dig.

The legal notice listed the proposed landfill site on the western slope of Burley Butte as lying within Range 11 East.

But the proposed Burley Butte landfill site actually lies within Range 21 East, according to a map the company submitted to the Division of Environmental Quality Friday.

Whether this error means the company must advertise again was unclear on Friday.

Dispose-All President Doug Lomow could not be reached for comment. Lomow told the Twin Falls County Commission this week that the company planned to start work on a landfill at an undisclosed site within two weeks.

But his claim did not fit with the DEQ's nor Cassia County's time frame. Mike McMasters, DEQ water quality field supervisor, said that after receiving the company's application, the agency must give the public 28 days to comment before certifying the site.

The Cassia County Commission also must OK the landfill and hold a public hearing on the issue, said county Prosecuting Attorney Steven Bywater. The public must get 14 days notice of the hearing.

As of Friday afternoon, the county had not received Dispose-All's application to build a landfill, said county Manager Tim Hurst. But Hurst had received a letter saying the company has applied to the DEQ.

Workers were on Burley butte this week building a fence and operating a bulldozer. Bywater could not confirm whether they had started building the landfill.

If they have started work on a landfill, that would be illegal and the county would try to stop them until they receive a permit, he said.

Any time state grows, tack on more taxes, lobbyist says

By Craig Lincoln Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Idaho's growth will keep pressure on the Legislature to raise taxes, a business lobbyist said Friday.

Dick Rush, the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry's chief lobbyist, said that although the Idaho Legislature put most tax bills on the back burner this winter, taxes will be a hot issue next year.

"The problem is there is growth in Idaho and growth is very expensive," Rush said after a breakfast speech to the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce. "You add kids to schools, prisoners to prisons."

As a business lobbyist who represents the big-money interests in Idaho, Rush said the Legislature was wise not to change Idaho's tax structure. A flurry of bills introduced in reaction to the failed One Percent Initiative were simply not acted on.

Instead, the legislature formed an interim committee to study Idaho's tax structure.

"In a way, it's a cop out to study it another year," Rush said.

But a "lot of bills didn't go anywhere," he said. "I think the legislature didn't feel there was a consensus."

"And it probably won't be an easy task to change tax laws next year," Rush said.

"Any time you're talking about taxes in an election year it can become very difficult," he said.

Rush probably won't be around to twist the arms of legislators next year, since he has been nominated by Democratic Congressman Larry LaRocco to be the new Idaho state executive director of U.S. Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service. President Clinton must approve the nomination before Rush succeeds Trent Clark, who has already left the ASCS position.

Snail survey stalls bridge completion

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT - The replacement of Downard Bridge between Deco and Rupert may hinge on a survey for endangered snails to be performed next month.

"We don't have a specific date, but it might be the first week in May," senior environmental planner Bob Rohrer of the Idaho Transportation Department said.

Four snail species and a limpet were recently classified as endangered, halting work on replacing the narrow, wooden Downard Bridge with a concrete trestle.

Many area legislators, including state Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deer, are clamoring at the bridge delay and are pushing for the bridge's completion.

"First of all there's no scientific evidence the snails should be listed (as an endangered species)," state Sen. Dean Cameron of Rupert said.

The Idaho Fish Bureau has indicated it might sue the Fish and Wildlife Service for placing the snails on the endangered species list.

If the snails are found, Rohrer said bridge work might depend on the number of snails and where they are located near the bridge.

Terrence Frost of Delix Consultants of Seattle has been hired to do the sampling. The Fish and Wildlife Service recently approved of the survey plans submitted by the transportation department.

Previously, the state Transportation Department's assessment that no snails existed in the river.

A minimum of 12 samples will be taken near the proposed site of the new bridge. Most of the samples will be near the river bank, where the snails are thought to reside.

A dip net will likely be used to collect samples, and a visual examination will be made for any of the listed snail species.

If any of the listed species are found, they will be returned to the river and sampling suspended at that site, according to the study plan.

McFaddan rallies farmers into adjudication battle

By John J. Harberth
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT - Some farmers feel they are getting a bum rap in the Snake River Basin adjudication and are hoping to fight it.

One person spearheading that fight - Dan McFaddan - said objections to the proposals by the Idaho Department of Water Resources recommendations must be made soon.

A May 1 deadline has been set by the those objections, according to McFaddan, who is chairman of the Hagerman Water Right Owners' group of about 300.

McFaddan spoke Thursday to about 50 Rupert-area farmers on the group's hope to enlist more support.

He said he sought out the Mini-Cassia farmers because Rupert and Hagerman Valley are located in one of three test basins in the state that will be used as part of the adjudication.

"About 90 percent of the issues in the Hagerman Valley are basin wide," said McFaddan.

He said the state will win by default if objections aren't made by the deadline, but it won't be cheap fighting the Department.

Since retaining legal representation, McFaddan estimated it will cost his group about $100,000 to file objections.

The adjudication of the Snake River Basin was mandated by the Idaho Legislature in 1985.

After years of debate over water rights, the legislature ratified the Swan Falls Agreement, which settled a dispute between the state and Idaho farmers.

As part of the agreement, a key provision called for "a complete and accurate list of all water rights," according to the Department. The adjudication began November 19, 1987 in the 5th Judicial Court in Twin Falls.

In 1988, residents began filing claims for existing water rights. Following the investigation of the claims from 1988 to 1992.

Since January, the water rights group has looked to educate groups within the basin about the recommendations and muster support.

McFaddan said they discovered "very few water rights owners know what's going down in the adjudication."

McFaddan said he was recommended for a 75 percent cut because he converted to a sprinkler irrigation system.

"We believe that the direction of the adjudication is off course from what the intended original mandate was," McFaddan said. "The current trend of the adjudication is to reduce and restrict water rights, which really concerns us."

The vice president of the group, Cliff Jensen, said the water allocated in the proposal doesn't take into account drought, soil type and weather.

He warned of decreasing property values. Jensen said the recommendations of the Department would cause inconsistent water distribution, causing people to fight among themselves.

According to Pat Brown, a lawyer representing the water rights group, one of the purposes of the test basin is to set the law for everyone in the case.

Some of the issues, Brown said, will probably end up in the U.S. Supreme Court, such as whether a water right is a property right.

"Let's get together as citizens in Idaho who have water rights and make it clear that there are water rights," Brown said.

Enjoy Easter; avoid circus

If you hurry, you may be able to catch a glimpse of the Virgin Mary when she makes a scheduled appearance on Easter Sunday outside a tiny Minnesota town called Kettle River.

Understand, I can't guarantee that the Virgin will actually appear, but a couple of Wisconsin entrepreneurs have posted announcements all over the area, and they predict that healings of every kind will happen when the Virgin Mary shows up in Kettle River.

Clark Morphew
Faith today

The two men, Earl Nett and Steve Marino, have promised the Virgin that they will build a 10,000-seat cathedral. The spirit here is to appear, as well as a cross-shaped housing complex that will stand seven stories high.

It is just a coincidence that Nett and Marino own the land where the blessed woman is to appear. For years, Marino says, he has been experiencing "visions" from Mary, and he has written down these spoken messages and circulated them in books, which, also coincidentally, were printed by Nett. So now the stage is set. Local officials say they are expecting upward of 10,000 pious and curious people to stop by the open field where Mary is expected to materialize at 3 p.m. on Easter Sunday. If that happens, roads will be clogged, the few ballrooms in town will be overrun, food will be scarce and many sick people will get a lot sicker.

Not that I am opposed to such gatherings. These mystical Christians who are so anxious for a miracle, can suffer through this Easter any way they want. I am not going to suggest they stay home and have a normal Easter.

Incidentally, this event has caused quite a ruckus in Catholic circles. Bishop Roger Schriver of the Duluth diocese has said he would not support the event and would not be responsible for any difficulties that might arise. Archbishop John Roach of the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis has also come out against the event.

Well, there you have it—a good-old-fashioned claim of miraculous happenings, the kind that have mesmerized the gullible and the scripturally-religious for centuries. Why should I denounce something like this? People, it's got all the trappings of a circus. Two guys in high heels, the Virgin Mary at their side. I think it's beautiful, zany enough to make a good yarn and yet powerful in its dimension.

By the way, if you thought some of Jesus' miracles were amazing, wait till you see tens of thousands of people endure the whole long day without an outdoor billy or running into the woods screaming for relief. These alleged miracles should not surprise us because they have been happening on and off since before the Virgin Mary was declared blessed. She has appeared around the globe, sometimes near major cities, such as Denver, where a seer has claimed a vision just in time for Pope John Paul II's visit there next summer.

But most often, these sightings of Mary happen in remote places, such as Kettle River. Forty years ago, the Virgin Mary was reported to have appeared to Mary Ann Van Hoof in the little town of Necedah, Wis. Eventually, the lone sighting turned into a major tourist attraction with as many as 400,000 people visiting the shrine in a single day.

Why do we need these "visions" and miraculous happenings? Because we're desperate people. We long to connect with something greater than ourselves. Life is getting more complicated, spotted with violence and poisoned with fear and anger.

In tiny Medjugorje, Bosnia-Herzegovina, where a small group of teenagers encounter the Virgin Mary almost on a daily basis, the signs that miracles were about to happen were everywhere. Living under the Yugoslavian government—the most oppressive in Eastern Europe—in a remote village high in the mountains, the people there lived virtually without hope.

And then along came an apparition of Mary speaking a fresh message of hope. And soon after, the communists' cruel hold on the people fell away. Tourists came by the thousands, bringing prosperity to the village. Suddenly, for those people, hope was alive. But let me warn you: Easter does not give you an obligation, even an Easter filled with visions. If you believe a miracle has been worked in your life, remember there are millions of us who have never experienced anything close. Armed with divine resolve, you become the hope for others. And if you fail to reach out, God help the world.

The group that gathered in 1991 was typical of the turnout in recent years for the sunrise service at Shoshone Falls.

Sunrise services — now and then

Shoshone Falls has been popular site for 70 years

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

"At dawn on the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to look at the tomb ... the angel said to the women, 'Do not be afraid, for I know that you are looking for Jesus, who was crucified. He is not here; he has risen ...'" (Matthew 28)

TWIN FALLS — That's the precedent. That's why countless Christians throughout the world gather at dawn on Easter morning for what has come to be known as a sunrise service.

Shoshone Falls is the site of one such pathway.

For more than 70 Easters, give-or-take a few, groups have planned sunrise celebrations at the falls. The First United Methodist Church has remained in the forefront of the planning.

"There were no picnic tables down there in the early years," said Marie Fuller, 90, who helped organize the Shoshone Falls services from 1921 to 1938. "There was just sagebrush, and we would take an old gas stove down there and cook breakfast and sit on the ground to eat."

During those years, Fuller was a member of the First United Methodist Church Fidelity Sunday School class, famous for serving up bacon, eggs and hotcakes in the (often brisk) open air every Easter morning. The class was formed in 1920. It began as a "matrimonial bureau" for young adults seeking life partners. The concept must have worked, because the class eventually earned the label "nursery class."

Fuller doesn't remember who first had the idea to plan an Easter sunrise service at the falls, but she does remember everyone looking forward to the big event. "Even after our children grew up, they said the sunrise service was one of their best childhood memories," she said.

Members of the First United Methodist Church Fidelity Sunday School class who still attend the church include Marie Fuller, wearing white hat, Frank Beer and Edith Knight, front, sixth through eighth from left, respectively. The three are shown at the 1933 breakfast following the sunrise service. Also attending were the unidentified people at right.

Shoshone Falls service starts at 6:45 a.m.

The Easter sunrise service at Shoshone Falls Park is set for 6:45 a.m. Easter Sunday. John Graham, a United Methodist lay speaker from Twin Falls, will deliver the message.

In case of rain, the sunrise service will be held in the sanctuary of the First United Methodist Church, 300 Shoshone E. Contact individual churches in the area for information about other sunrise or Easter services.

Fuller's husband, Orrin ("Doc") Fuller, now deceased, always helped plan the festivities.

"Sometimes Orrin would play the cornet until late the night before at the old Optimum Theater, but he never complained about getting up early on Easter," Fuller said. She added, with a smile, "In those days, we didn't need so much sleep."

At the falls, Fidelity Class members (often numbering 40 or 50) sang old hymns and listened to a short inspirational talk. The men cooked the breakfast, often over smoking campfires.

Soon, it would be time for the class members to rush home and change into their Easter finery for Sunday School and church. It was their tradition.

As the years passed, the times changed. Between 1938 and 1944, few organized services were planned at the falls. Between 1945 and 1955, a local ministerial group took on the task, but the group eventually disbanded. Then, in 1979, the United Methodist Men decided to revive their church's old tradition.

This time around, the men opened the Shoshone Falls service to the community. Ora Lee and Norman ("Duke") Wiseman, Fuller's daughter and son-in-law, got involved in the planning. Sometimes, Duke Wiseman would drive the church bus down to the falls, rising well before dawn to pick up riders.

First United Methodist Church member Frank Mogensen has some special memories of sunrise at the falls.

"My wife and I always loved the falls," he said. "We went there together before we left on our honeymoon in 1945."

Mogensen's wife died at 2:30 a.m. on Easter morning, 1984.

"Our three children were here, and the children and I went on to the sunrise service," Mogensen said. "That morning, a rainbow appeared in the sky during the service, which we believe was a sign of the resurrection."

The Methodist men continue to sponsor the sunrise service each Easter. Today, it's different from the way it was in the early years. And it's much the same.

The sagebrush has long since been cleared away and, though Easter breakfast is still served, it's served at the church. People wear jeans and Nikes to the sunrise service, 1990s style.

But the format of the service has never changed: singing, topped off with a short meditation, clocking in at about 1 1/2 hour. And the sun still rises over a cross, placed high above the falls years ago — by someone.

The same feeling's still there, too, say those who continue to journey to the falls every Easter morning, and it's passed along to each new generation. It's a feeling of rejuvenation and springtime renewal and resurrection, a feeling quickened by the sound of rushing waters and wind-tossed branches — and Easter's gift of peace.

Here's an Easter message, of sorts

Robert Stebe
Clergy's corner

God's saving grace is offered anew through the cross and resurrection. Every Easter is a chance to receive the gift of new life ...

Here it is, the day before Easter, which means you might be expecting some insights on the resurrection. But if I were to do what you might be expecting, then my hunch is that since you already know what you want me to say, then I don't need to say it.

Instead, I would like to deal with something else. Now if you are still willing to hang in with me, I will come back to Easter before this is all over.

Have you ever thought about raising sins? Listing all those evil activities from the worst sins, to the bad sins, to the not-so-badful-sins?

What things constitute the biggest threat to God's kingdom? Would the list start with murders and organized crime, offenses, child abuse or... Then the list might include those things acceptable to society, but against God's purposes, like sexual promiscuity, greed and the accumulation of goods, power over individuals, or...

When choosing the items that go on the list, should the question be, "What causes the greatest harm?" Or should we be measuring merits from another approach, "What causes the greatest good?"

If we use Matthew 25:31-46 as a gauge, we'll see how God separates the "sheep" from the "goats." The sheep were those who "did" for Christ because they "did it to one of the least of these." And so the sheep inherit the Kingdom of God. Now the goats, as you would suspect did not do so well; and are sent away into eternal punishment, because they "did not do" for Christ, because they "did not do" for the least of these."

In other words, a person can go to hell for doing nothing. Thus, a far greater sin and threat to the reality of the kingdom of God is the sin of nothingness — those who do no harm, but also do no good.

Now I need to be clear that I am not promoting works and good deeds as the basis for God's grace. There is nothing we can do to earn salvation, we can only faithfully receive it as a gift from God. But there is much to be done in thankful response.

Here lies the Easter message. God's saving grace is offered anew through the cross and resurrection. Every Easter is a chance to receive the gift of new life and respond in the way we then choose to live.

I say this not for you who read this, but as a reminder that this gift if offered even to those folks who only come to a worship service on Easter.

Will they feel shut out because we give them nothing, or will they be ready to respond to God's grace because we show them that they belong.

I think it's beautiful, zany enough to make a good yarn and yet powerful in its dimension.

By the way, if you thought some of Jesus' miracles were amazing, wait till you see thousands of people endure the whole long day without an outdoor toilet or running into the woods screaming for relief. These alleged miracles should not surprise us because they have been happening on and off since before the Virgin Mary was declared blessed. She has appeared around the globe, sometimes near major cities, such as Denver, where a seer has claimed a vision — just in time to hope John Paul II's visit there next summer.

But most often, these sightings of Mary happen in remote places, such as Kettle River. Forty years ago, the Virgin Mary was reported to have appeared to Mary Ann Van Hoof in the little town of Needah, Wis. Eventually, the lone sighting turned into a major tourist attraction with as many as 10,000 people visiting the shrine in a single day.

What do we need these visions, stories and miraculous happenings? Because we're desperate people. We long to connect with something greater than ourselves. Life is getting more complicated, spotted with violence and poisoned with fear and anger.

In tiny Medjugorje, Bosnia-Herzegovina, where a small group of teenagers encounter the Virgin Mary almost on a daily basis, the signs that miracles were about to happen were everywhere. Living under the Yugoslavian government — the most oppressive in Eastern Europe — in a remote village high in the mountains, the people there lived virtually without hope.

And then along came an apparition of Mary speaking a fresh message of hope. And soon after, the communists' cruel hold on the people fell away. Tourists came by the thousands, bringing prosperity to the village. Suddenly, for those people, hope was alive. But let me warn you: Easter does not come without obligation, even an Easter filled with visions. If you believe a miracle has been worked in your life, remember there are millions of us who have never experienced anything close. Armed with divine resolve, you become the hope for others. And if you fail to reach out, God help the world.

Sunrise services — now and then

Shoshone Falls has been popular site for 70 years

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

"At dawn on the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to look at the tomb ... the angel said to the women, 'Do not be afraid, for I know that you are looking for Jesus, who was crucified. He is not here; he has risen.'" (Matthew 28)

TWIN FALLS — That's the precedent. That's why countless Christians throughout the world gather at dawn on Easter morning, for what has come to be known as a sunrise service.

Shoshone Falls is the site of one such gathering. For more than 70 Easters, give or take a few, groups have planned sunrise celebrations at the falls. The First United Methodist Church has remained in the forefront of the planning.

"There were no picnic tables down there in the early years," said Marie Fuller, 90, who helped organize the Shoshone Falls services from 1924 to 1938. "There was just sagebrush, and we would take an old stove down there and cook breakfast and sit on the ground to eat."

During those years, Fuller was a member of the First United Methodist Church Fidelity Sunday School class, famous for serving up bacon, eggs and hotcakes in the (often brisk) open air every Easter morning.

The class was formed in 1920. It began as a "matrimonial bureau" for young adults seeking life partners. The concept must have worked, because the class eventually earned the label "merry class."

Fuller doesn't remember who first had the idea to plan an Easter sunrise service at the falls, but she does remember everyone looking forward to the big event.

"Even after our children grew up, they said the sunrise service was one of their best childhood memories," she said.

What things constitute the biggest threat to God's kingdom? Would the list start with murders and organized crime, violence, cult religions, drugs, sex offenses, child abuse or... Then the list might include those things acceptable to society, but against God's purposes, like sexual promiscuity, greed and the accumulation of goods, power over individuals, or...

When choosing the items that go on the list, should the question be, "What causes the greatest harm?" Or should we be measuring merits from another

Members of the First United Methodist Church Fidelity Sunday School class who still attend the church include Marie Fuller, wearing white hat, Frank Beer and Edith Knight, front, sixth through eighth from left, respectively. The three are shown at the 1933 breakfast following the sunrise service. Also attending were the unidentified people at right.

Shoshone Falls service starts at 6:45 a.m.

The Easter sunrise service at Shoshone Falls Park is set for 6:45 a.m. Easter Sunday. John Graham, a United Methodist lay speaker from Twin Falls, will deliver the message.

In case of rain, the sunrise service will be held in the sanctuary of the First United Methodist Church, 300 Shoshone E. Contact individual churches in the area for information about other sunrise or Easter services.

Fuller's husband, Orrin ("Doc") Fuller, never "deceased" — always helped plan the festivities.

"Sometimes Orrin would play the cornet until late the night before at the old Ophium Theatre, but he never complained about getting up early on Easter," Fuller said. She added, with a smile, "In those days, we didn't need so much sleep."

At the falls, Fidelity Class members (often numbering 40 or 50) sang old hymns and listened to a short inspirational talk. The men cooked the breakfast, often over smoking campfires.

Soon, it would be time for the class members to rush home and change into their Easter finery for Sunday School and church. It was their tradition.

As the years passed, the times changed. Between 1938 and 1944, few organized services were planned at the falls. Between 1945 and 1955, a local ministerial group took on the task, but the group eventually disbanded. Then, in 1979, the United Methodist Men decided to revive their church's old tradition.

This time around, the men opened the Shoshone Falls service to the community. Ora Lee and Norman ("Duke") Wiseman, Fuller's daughter and son-in-law, got involved in the planning. Sometimes, Duke Wiseman would drive the church bus down to the falls, rising well before dawn to pick up riders.

First United Methodist Church member Frank Mogensen has some special memories of sunrise at the falls.

"My wife and I always loved the falls," he said. "We went there together before we left on our honeymoon in 1945."

approach. "What causes the greatest good?"

If we use Matthew 25:31-46 as a gauge, we'll see how God separates the "sheep" from the "goats." The sheep were those who "did" for Christ because they "did it to one of the least of these." And so the sheep inherit the kingdom of God. Now the goats, as you would suspect did not do so well, and are sent away into eternal punishment, because they "did not do" for Christ, because they "did not do for the least of these."

In other words, a person can go to hell for doing nothing. Thus, a far greater sin and threat to the reality of the kingdom of God is the sin of nothingness — those who do no harm, but also do no good.

Now I need to be clear that I am not promoting works and good deeds as the Mogensen's wife died at 2:30 a.m. on Easter morning, 1984.

"Our three children were here, and the children and I went on to the sunrise service," Mogensen said. "That morning, a rainbow appeared in the sky during the service, which we believe was a sign of the resurrection."

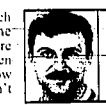

The Methodist men continue to sponsor the sunrise service each Easter. Today, it's different from the way it was in the early years. And it's much the same.

The sagebrush has long since been cleared away and, though Easter breakfast is still served, it's served at the church. People wear jeans and Nikes to the sunrise service, 1990s style.

But the format of the service has never changed: singing, topped off with a short meditation, clocking in at about 75 minutes. And the sun still rises over a cross, placed high above the falls years ago — by someone.

The same feeling's still there, too, says those who continue to journey to the falls every Easter morning, and it's passed along to each new generation. It's a feeling of rejuvenation and springtime renewal and resurrection, a feeling quickened by the sound of rushing waters and wind-tossed branches — and Easter's gift of peace.

Here lies the Easter message. God's saving grace is offered anew through the cross and resurrection. Every Easter is a chance to receive the gift of new life and respond in the way we then choose to live.

I say this not for you who read this, but as a reminder that this gift is offered even to those folks who only come to a worship service on Easter.

Will they feel shut out because we give them nothing, or will they be ready to respond to God's grace because we show them that they belong.

By Mike Mallor
Times-News sports editor

Two teams return to Frontier for a doubleheader today at 1 p.m. The Eagles, 24-7 overall, are now 4-0 in district play. After rainouts last weekend, this was Treasure Valley's first district game.
CSI's edge in the game came on clutch hitting. Brian Keswick and Devin Chavez each hit a two-out, two-run double that kept the Eagles in the lead.
Keswick's second two-base hit of the game, a drive into the right-center field gap, put the Eagles up 5-2 in the bottom of the third inning.
With the contest tied 5-5 from the top of the fourth into the sixth inning, Chavez hit a drive that one-hopped the left field fence to give CSI a 7-5 advantage.
"They played a great game against us," Walker said. "We left a lot of runners on (base) but we still got something hitting."
In the seventh, CSI upped its lead to three. After a pair of walks and Andy Godale's sacrifice bunt, Nate Tebbis drove a two-out single off pitcher Mike Ray's foot to bring home Mike Zanit.
With a bases-loaded walk and groundout, the Chukars closed to 8-7 in the top of the eighth.

Maggert grabs lead at soggy Masters

The Washington Post

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The sun did not shine on first-round Masters co-leader Jack Nicklaus or anyone else Friday at soggy Augusta National Golf Club. But after heavy rain forced a delay for some golfers in the second round, the leaderboard still radiated with plenty of possibilities for a classic finish among some of the game's greatest golfers.
So what if second-round leader Jeff Maggert, who finished with a 67 before play ended at 4:55 p.m., counts the 1989 Malaysian Open among his more treasured triumphs? Nicklaus, Raymond Floyd, Fred Couples, Lanny Wadkins, Fuzzy Zoeller and Greg Norman are all within five shots of Maggert's 7-under-par 137.
As Norman said much earlier after shooting 68 to get to 2 under 142, "I might be five or six back by the end of the day, but that's not a lot with 36 to play."

Attitude matches the altitude as Rockies fly high in opener

The Associated Press

DENVER — Even Bryn Smith, a veteran of 12 previous major-league seasons, had never seen anything quite like this.
Relaxing before the Colorado Rockies' historic home opener Friday by snoring in the training room, Smith awakened, grabbed his bat and glove and walked out into a sea of 80,227 fans.
"I was in total awe at what was out there," Smith said of the ovation-oriented crowd, which set a National League regular-season record for attendance.
Then Smith and his teammates gave something back, refusing to play down to expansion standards by beating the Montreal Expos 11-4 for the Rockies' first-ever victory.
Eric Young and Charlie Hayes celebrated long ball-friendly Mike High Stadium with first-inning homers to spark the win, and Smith did the rest, shutting out the Expos on six hits through seven innings before giving way to reliever Willie Blair.
The Rockies carried an 11-0 lead into the ninth, when Montreal reined in the shutout on Tim Spehr's sacrifice fly and Steve Reed. "When you pitch well and you hit well, all of those other things take care of themselves," Rockies manager Don Baylor said. "It's something we lacked in our first two games."
Asked if he ever relaxed as his team built the big lead, Baylor said, "I'm never loose. Even at 11-1, I was kind of sweating it there. And then after the three-run homer, I had to get someone up in the bullpen. Not until I saw that last out going to right field did I relax."
Baylor wasn't inclined to allow himself much time for celebration, either. "Now we have to get back to .500," he said. "We had the longest losing streak in our history. We got that out of the way, so now we have to start a winning streak."

Denver's agonizing, 30-year wait for big-league baseball was rewarded beyond almost anyone's dreams.
The Rockies had 48 hits, including a career-high four by Young. They committed only one error. Smith, a 37-year-old right-hander who had elbow surgery last season and arthroscopic knee surgery just six weeks ago, was vintage Smith, keeping the ball down and changing speeds, producing mostly harmless ground balls.
Smith had a difficult time harnessing his adrenaline in the early going, however.
"When I grabbed the ball for the first time and stepped on the rubber and heard the crowd yelling, I tried to throw the ball 200 miles per hour," he admitted. "Then I settled in. I tried to stay within myself and not overthrow. I tried to get them to hit the ball on the ground and let my defense do the rest. That's what happened — it was good, old-fashioned country baseball."

Bengals rape trial ends

Jury decides victim signed form for settlement; former player dances on steps

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — A federal jury Friday found valid and binding a release agreement signed by a woman who says she was gang-raped by Cincinnati Bengals players in 1990.
The verdict upholds the "Release of All Claims" signed by the woman in exchange for $30,000 from a group of players. The document frees all parties of liability and bars the woman from pursuing a federal lawsuit seeking further damages.
Former Bengal Elbert "Ickey" Woods, a defendant in the case, did the "Ickey shuffle" on the courthouse steps for television cameras after the verdict.
"This is the victory shuffle," he said, grinning broadly as he performed the little dance he used to celebrate successful plays before a knee injury ended his NFL career.
The plaintiff, identified in court records as Victoria C, was not in court when the verdict was announced.
"She expected justice. This is not justice to her," said her lawyer, Victoria Vreeland. "It doesn't eliminate the facts about what happened to her."
Vreeland and co-counsel Richard Bytman said they plan to appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on several issues, including Judge Walter McGovern's decision to consider the release agreement separately from the rape allegations. "We weren't allowed to present any evidence of what occurred that night," Vreeland said.
Jurors reached a verdict after about six hours of deliberations. They listened to 11 days of testimony.
Defense lawyers had argued that the release was a binding contract.
Attorneys for the plaintiff wanted it thrown out on grounds that it was signed under duress, without legal counsel and for insufficient compensation.

The document was signed by Victoria C. about a year after the alleged assault at a Seattle-area hotel.
She filed a civil lawsuit in April 1992, about six months after signing the release.
Her lawsuit, which had been set for trial June 7, sought damages from the NFL club and 19 current or former players — 12 accused of raping her at a Seattle-area hotel and seven of standing by and doing nothing to help her. Victoria C. contends she was assaulted after consensual sex with one player.
The defendants deny Victoria C. was raped. No criminal charges were ever filed.
"The jury made a great decision and I'm happy with it," said Woods, who represented himself and attended every day of the trial. "Thank goodness the jury came to the right decision. It wasn't no rape at all. She was a willing partner. I don't know why she called it a rape. She was out for money."
Woods had said he was at the scene of the alleged assault but had no sexual contact with the plaintiff and saw no rape.

The aftershock effect

Study: Waves from 'The Big One' could harm L.A.

The Associated Press LOS ANGELES — Even if the disastrous earthquake known as the "Big One" happens far from Los Angeles, it might trigger damaging aftershocks in the city, a new study says. That's one of many lessons of the major earthquake that struck Southern California last summer, researchers from the California Institute of Technology, the U.S. Geological Survey and other institutions report in Friday's issue of Science magazine.

The Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., has said the June 28 Landers quake measured 7.6 in magnitude and its Big Bear aftershock measured 6.7. The new study produced lower figures of 7.3 and 6.2 using a scale seismologists consider more accurate. The information center said it will stick to its higher figures.

The Landers and Big Bear quakes — the strongest in the contiguous United States in 40 years — killed one person, injured more than 400 and caused almost $100 million in damage. They happened in remote, sparsely populated areas roughly 100 miles and 80 miles east of Los Angeles, respectively.

Scientists previously reported the Landers quake triggered only jolts as far away as Wyoming's Yellowstone National Park. It also set off magnitude 5.6 quakes in Nevada on June 29 and near Mojave, Calif., on July 11. The new study said the fact the Landers quake triggered such strong tremors up to 180 miles away raises "the possibility that a major earthquake on the San Andreas fault, outside most of the Los Angeles metropolitan region, could spawn aftershocks in more heavily populated regions."

A U.S. Geological Survey report said a quake measuring 7.5 to 8 or more on the San Andreas — a disaster meriting the fearsome nickname the "Big One" — was at least 60 percent likely within 30 years in Southern California. Scientists have said the Landers quake increased those odds.

A 1980 report said the "Big One" could kill up to 1,400 people if it happened near Los Angeles, but most scientists expect a much lower toll because the quake probably will be centered farther east. Nevertheless, "we may have to worry about it setting off damaging earthquakes within the (Los Angeles) city limits," said Geological Survey seismologist Lucile Jones, a co-author of the new study.

Richter 1 of 4 ways to measure quake's force

The Associated Press LOS ANGELES — Nine months after California's strongest earthquake in 40 years, scientists are using two different numbers for the quake's magnitude and disagree on whether it was the world's biggest jolt of 1992.

It seems odd, but both sides are right. Contrary to the popular notion that all earthquakes are measured on the Richter scale, there actually are four magnitude scales, each appropriate for certain quakes.

Magnitude is a gauge of energy released by a quake, as measured by ground motion recorded on a seismograph.

The Richter or "local" magnitude scale is accurately used only to measure nearby small to moderate quakes. "Surface-wave" and "body-wave" magnitude scales measure moderate to large quakes. The "moment" magnitude scale is the most accurate way to measure the biggest quakes, said seismologist Lucile Jones of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Most so-called Richter scale measurements issued by the Geological Survey are surface-wave magnitudes, said geophysicist Waverly Person of the agency's National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

But to avoid getting too technical and confusing the public, news organizations usually use the term Richter scale no matter which scale is used. The information center said in January that California's Landers earthquake of June 28 was the world's strongest of 1992, with a final magnitude of 7.6, up from earlier estimates. The agency also said the quake's Big Bear aftershock measured 6.7.

But in a study in Friday's issue of the journal Science, other Geological Survey seismologists say the Landers and Big Bear quakes measured 7.3 and 6.2, respectively. That would make the Landers quake the world's third-strongest of 1992, behind quakes in Indonesia and Nicaragua. The information center's figures are surface-wave magnitudes. The new study lists moment

Lead author Kerry Sieh of Caltech said he considers that "initially" because devastating San Andreas quakes in 1857 in Southern California and in 1906 and 1909 in Northern California didn't produce damaging aftershocks inside Los Angeles or San Francisco, although the main shocks did damage those cities.

Jones and Sieh noted, however, that the magnitude-8.3 San Francisco quake of 1906 was followed within hours by a magnitude-6.6 quake hundreds of miles to the south in the desert east of San Diego.

The new study also said: — The Landers quake really comprised two quakes that happened 10 seconds and 18 miles apart along the 53-mile-long rupture that broke parts of five faults. That shows that predicting such powerful quakes will be even more difficult than previously believed, most prediction efforts have focused on how often a single fault or fault segment breaks.

During the seven hours before the Landers quake, 25 small tremors were centered in the same spot that generated the big quake. That clustering pattern offers some hope of allowing scientists to recognize when small quakes are foreshocks to a big quake.

Clams could help predict tremblers

The Associated Press TOKYO — Fish they tried capturing earlier.

Now Japanese researchers are trying to find out if clams crawl and if they can be used to predict earthquakes.

Scientists at Japan's Marine Science and Technology Center are watching crawler clams on the ocean floor to determine whether changes in their movements or behavior are related to tremor activity.

"We're not sure whether fish and animals have a special sensitivity which causes them to respond somehow before an earthquake occurs, and if so, what the mechanisms are," said Jun Hashimoto, a researcher at the Marine Science and Technology Center.

Japan is one of the world's most quake-prone nations. Some scientists say a major quake could hit soon, and kill 10,000 to 150,000 people.

The species of white clams, called vesicomyids, thrives in areas of underwater volcanic activity because of a symbiotic relationship with bacteria that live on the clams' gills and derive energy from volcanic materials such as hydrogen sulfide, Hashimoto said.

The scientists have begun watching the clams in Sagami Bay near Tokyo, where large groups of the mollusks were observed at the time of a series of earthquakes in 1989 that preceded an underwater volcanic eruption.

The government will invest up to $850,000 a year in clam watching.

Last year, the city of Tokyo ended 16 years of research into whether catfish can be used to predict quakes.

They found that a tankful of the normally sluggish fish perked up several days before 60 percent to 70 percent of the earthquakes that occurred during the research.

But unfortunately the gamboling catfish proved unreliable as predictors.

S. Texas suffers minor damage

The Associated Press Jourdanton, Texas

An earthquake rattled parts of southern Texas Thursday, shaking at least one house off its foundation and prompting a plant that processes natural gas to be shut down, officials and residents said.

There were no immediate reports of injuries.

Waverly Person, a geophysicist at the U.S. Geological Survey's Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., said the quake measured 4.2 on the Richter scale and was centered about 55 miles southeast of San Antonio.

"This morning, at about 2:35, we started getting calls with people saying the earth did move around 7:29," said Amber Williams, Atascosa County deputy sheriff. She said she didn't feel anything when on the way to work "but people who were stationary said they felt it."

Reports from residents indicate a home was shaken off its cement foundation in Campbellton and others were damaged, Williams said.

Reports of earth shaking also came from Potoc, Jourdanton, Fashing and some rural areas.

Walter Essex Jr., who lives near Campbellton, said the quake shook pictures on his walls and shelves.

The Warren Petroleum Co., a natural gas processing plant near Fashing, shut down after the quake caused three minor leaks, said plant manager Charles Budzinsky. He said the leaks posed no danger.
