Tax objectors still unrepentant

Post office hours

The Twin Falls main post office will be the only one in the Magic Valley to offer special hours and services today, the deadline for personal income tax returns.

The Postal Service announced last week that the post office at 253 2nd Ave. W. will offer window service until 7 p.m. and will collect and postmark returns until midnight.

for the back taxes, penalties and interest they say the couple owes.

After months of legal haggling, most of the equipment finally was auctioned off a few months ago. Helen Trowbridge says she doesn't know what the selling price was, and the IRS wasn't saying.

On Feb. 25, she said, a half-dozen IRS agents raided the Trowbridge house-southwest of Twin Falls and totaled away six boxes of documents and letters.

Government offers lending hand, warning to tax laggards

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With more taxpayers than usual holding their federal returns until the last minute, the government offered a helping hand to those unable to meet the midnight deadline and a dire warning to those who ignore it.

The Internal Revenue Service is waiting to hear from 45 million couples and individuals. Professional tax preparers estimate several million of those were putting off the chore simply because they were getting smaller refunds — or none at all.

"The reason is President Bush's withholding change last year," John Hewitt, who heads the Jackson Hewitt Tax Service, guessed Wednesday. "People who usually owe money owe even more this year, and up to 5 million will owe money for the first time."

Bush permanently reduced most workers' withholding to spur the economy. While that did not change anyone's tax liability, it did give wage earners a little piece of their refund with each paycheck, and cut the lump-sum refund many are accustomed to.

Clinton, GOP spar over job spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton said Wednesday his $16.3-billion jobs bill would give "a little goose" to the nation's economic recovery, but Republicans retorted that it would merely drive up the budget deficit.

President Clinton addresses a summer jobs conference in Arlington, Va., Wednesday.

Clinton's envoy warns Serbs to make peace or risk isolation

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Clinton's special envoy warned Yugoslav leaders Wednesday that they face complete isolation if Bosnia Serbs do not stop atrocities and make peace.

The United States and its allies also will press for Bosnia's largely Muslim government to be exempted from a U.S. arms embargo if Bosnia Serbs do not sign the U.N. sponsored peace plan, envoy Reginald Bartholomew told reporters.

"The military and human horror has to stop now," he said. "Bosnian Serbs have to do it now."

Bartholomew and Russian envoy Vitaly Churkin were engaged in what seemed to be a last-ditch attempt to get Bosnia's Serbs to sign a peace plan already agreed to by Muslim and Croat leaders in the former Yugoslav state.

But the two envoys appeared to get nowhere.

Russia has been reluctant to support tougher sanctions on Serbia, a long-time ally that dominates what remains of Yugoslavia.

Earlier this week, Moscow persuaded the U.N. Security Council to put off a vote on new sanctions until April 26.

Despite increasing international outrage over Bosnia Serb behavior, artillery attacks continued on Srebrenica, one of only three enclaves held by Muslims in eastern Bosnia.

Eight people were killed and 21 wounded in an attack just after a convoy evacuated about 650 refugees from Srebrenica late Tuesday, said John McMillan, a U.N. aid spokesman in Sarajevo, Bosnia's capital.

The refugees, who included 47 women, were taken to Tuzla, a Bosnian government-controlled city 35 miles to the northwest.

Seven children, including a 2-month-old baby, and three adults died after leaving and were buried in Tuzla.

U.N. monitors reported only scattered shelling in Srebrenica on Wednesday. The town, which holds tens of thousands of refugees, was hit by ferocious shelling Monday that killed at least 50 people and injured scores.

Polar ozone drain harms other levels

NEW YORK (AP) — Ozone destruction near the North and South Poles may draw down levels of the protective gas elsewhere, a study suggests.

Satellite observations earlier this year found chemical evidence of ozone destruction in northern regions of the Northern Hemisphere, and an unusually steep drop in ozone levels over much of the hemisphere, researchers said.

They also reported a finding announced last December, evidence of ozone destruction over Antarctica well before the sharp drop in ozone levels that is nicknamed the "ozone hole."

Near both poles, ozone levels rose for a period when chemical evidence suggested the gas was being destroyed, signaling ozone losses were being replenished by inflows of ozone-rich air, said researchers.

Plane's landing gear collapses on touchdown

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — The landing gear of a DC-10 passenger jet collapsed moments after the plane touched down Wednesday, and at least 30 people were injured during an evacuation, officials said.

The American Airlines jet, carrying 202 passengers and crew, came to rest just off a high-speed taxiway and its nose gear collapsed, said airline spokesman Al Becker. The nose and left wing came to rest on the runway.

Koresh will surrender once writing done

WACO, Texas (AP) — Armed cult leader David Koresh, who has broken past promises to end his 46-day standoff with authorities, now pledges to surrender after writing a religious manuscript, his lawyer said Wednesday.

Attorney Dick DeGuertin talked with Koresh in an hourlong phone call. He said the cult leader was writing about the seven seals from the Bible's book of Revelation, signs that are said to precede the end of the world.

"David has been working day and night, composing a manuscript that will be delivered to me, upon which he will then come out," DeGuertin said.

The lawyer said an aide to Koresh read him a letter the cult leader was sending to DeGuertin. "We are standing on the threshold of great events. The seven seals in written form are the most sacred information ever," DeGuertin said Koresh wants his manuscript to be studied by two religious scholars before he surrenders. DeGuertin said he didn't know when the manuscript would be finished.

Koresh and his heavily armed followers have kept hundreds of law enforcement officers at bay since a Feb. 28 shootout with Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents trying to serve search and arrest warrants.

Four agents were killed and 16 wounded.

Experts urge better treatment for depression

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government-backed panel of experts says most depressed adults get little or no help, urging family doctors Wednesday to aggressively diagnose and treat the 11 million Americans who suffer serious mental disorders each year.

"Once identified, depression can almost always be treated successfully, either with medication, psychotherapy, or a combination of both," said the panel in promulgating new guidelines for treating the disorder.

"Depression is not a 'down period,' it's a disorder," said Dr. A. John Rush, a psychiatrist from the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center who chaired the panel. "Depressions are not due to personal weakness, lack of will or moral defects. They are not normal reactions to life's difficulties."

But they are common, said Rush. "They affect one in eight individuals in a lifetime and 11 million Americans each year. And they can be very disabling," he said.

The U.S. Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, part of the Public Health Service, published two volumes of the guidelines aimed at family doctors and other primary care physicians, and a separate pamphlet for consumers.

While several major medical and mental health groups endorsed the guidelines, they were criticized by the American Psychological Association, which charged they "reflect a bias toward medication and a prejudice against therapy."

The guidelines were distilled from a three-year review of more than 3,500 scientific studies.

Stegner dies at 84

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Wallace Stegner, a Pulitzer Prize-winning writer who celebrated the spirit of the American West in his novels and non-fiction, died of injuries suffered in a traffic accident.

Stegner

He was 84. Stegner, of Los Altos Hills, Calif., was involved in a car crash March 28 while in Santa Fe to give a speech. He died Tuesday night at St. Vincent Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said. The hospital would release no other information.

In a literary career that spanned more than 50 years, he earned the courage and optimism of the pioneer spirit and the beauty and vastness of the West.

Thousands of Kuwaitis line streets to revere, welcome Bush

KUWAIT (AP) — Schoolgirls with flowers and Kuwaiti sword dancers welcomed former President Bush Wednesday in his first visit to the tiny nation battled over in the Persian Gulf War.

Bush

Thousands of Kuwaitis cheered Bush, who is revered in the emirate for his role in forming the U.S.-led coalition that drove out occupying Iraqi forces more than two years ago.

The festivities began as soon as Bush's special blue and white Kuwait Airways jet touched down at Kuwait International Airport. Bush, wearing a navy blue suit, emerged smiling and shook hands with Kuwait's emir, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, then hugged and kissed two young flower girls.

Drums sounded the beat for whirling sword dancers, and people cheered as Bush was escorted along a red carpet to the airport VIP lounge for official photos with the Kuwaiti ruler.

The airport grounds were strung with hundreds of American flags and the green, white, red and black banner of Kuwait. Former first lady Barbara Bush told Kuwaitis: "I'm very happy to be in your country."

Thousands of Kuwaitis lined the highway to cheer the former president's motorcade. They included schoolchildren, who have been given a holiday to participate. Many carried small American flags, balloons and signs.

After a lunch at the emir's Al Bayan Palace, Bush was scheduled to attend a special ceremony presenting him with Kuwait's highest civilian honor, the Mubarak al-Kabeer medal, which is named for a former emir.

Bush's arrival was delayed by one day because of an airplane malfunction after he left Houston. But it just gave Kuwaitis more time to prepare to honor him.

Riyad al-Sultan, 43, a supermarket manager, spent Tuesday collecting more Kuwaiti signatures on an American flag he hoped to give the former president. Thousands have signed.

Hotels and houses are flying Kuwaiti and American flags, and large posters of Bush adorn downtown street corners.

"It's going to be a wonderful trip," he told reporters before leaving Houston.

Bush also was accompanied on the three-day visit by his son Neil and his wife, Sharon, and two other daughters-in-law.

Former Secretary of State James A. Baker III and former White House chief of staff John Sununu also have made the trip.

Today, Bush is scheduled to address the Parliament and receive an honorary doctorate from Kuwait University. On Friday, he'll see remnants of Gulf War damage — oil lakes on the desert, a house destroyed by Iraqi soldiers, and visit U.S. troops in Kuwait under a 10-year defense pact.

U.S. breaks Japanese code, assassinates admiral

Knight-Ridder News Service

U.S. Naval Intelligence had broken the Japanese naval codes early in the war, making possible the ambush of the Japanese fleet at Midway.

Yet in April, 1943, Tokyo still believed its codes were secure. This confidence was about to cost them the life of Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, commander-in-chief of the Combined Fleet.

The admiral was going on a tour of bases in the Solomons to boost morale in an area plagued by heavy losses. A complete titerary of Yamamoto's trip was sent by radio to the bases about to be visited. An American radio monitor in Dutch Harbor, Alaska, intercepted the message and relayed it to Naval Intelligence.

Yamamoto was on every American's hate list. Not only was he Japan's top naval officer, but he had personally planned the Pearl Harbor attack. If he came within reach, could he be assassinated?

The idea went from Naval Intelligence to Adm. Chester Nimitz, chief of naval operations, to Navy Secretary Frank Knox to President Franklin Roosevelt. The president gave the order. Knox signed it.

Operation Vengeance was assigned to Rear Adm. Marc Mitscher, commander of all land-based aircraft in the Solomons. The attempt on Yamamoto would be made as he flew into Ballale, Bougainville, on April 18. There Yamamoto was to transfer to a ship for the rest of his trip. Attacking the ship might be easier, but shooting down his plane gave better odds of being fatal.

Only the long-range P-38 Lightnings of the 339th Army Air Force Fighter Squadron could reach Bougainville from Guadalcanal and return. All 18 fighters would be sent.

Four planes were assigned as the "kill section" to attack Yamamoto's plane. The rest would fend off the fighter escorts. It was known from radio intercepts that Yamamoto's Betty bomber would arrive with only six escorts, but there were 75 more fighters based at Ballale.

The P-38s would fly all the way over water, outside even the sight of land to avoid detection. They would fly at wave-top level to keep under enemy radar. It was 6500 miles round-trip, and at low level the fighters would drink gasoline fast, even with drop tanks, the fighters would have less than 15 minutes over the target. Both Yamamoto and the Americans had to be on time.

They were. Two P-38s aborted due to malfunctions, but the other 16 arrived at the same moment as Yamamoto. There was confusion because two bombers were present. One headed into land; the other turned out to sea. Both were shot down. Yamamoto's plane crashed in the jungle, killing all aboard. The other crashed in the water, with Vice Adm. Matome Ugaki and two others surviving.

A debate has raged over who "got" Yamamoto: Capt. Thomas Lamphier or Capt. Rex Barber. Both were part of the "kill section," and both were credited with shooting down a bomber over the jungle that day. Capt. Heshey-Holmes was credited with the other bomber.

The assassination had to be kept secret. If Japan thought the United

Anti-gay initiative presents a moving target to its foes

Draws to Sen. Dirk Kempthorne for strengthening his stand on the Idaho Citizens Alliance's anti-gay rights initiative.

Recently we chided Kempthorne and other Idaho Republican leaders for shirking leadership in opposing the initiative. Although Kempthorne had declined to sign a petition himself, he hadn't called on Idaho voters to do the same.

That changed this week.

"If asked, I would tell others that I would not advise them to sign it," he said. "I can create a great deal of acrimony in this state and be divisive."

Though Kempthorne still stops short of vigorous opposition, his position is an honorable one especially for a Republican politician who draws much of his support from conservative voters.

Actually, directly opposing the initiative is a bit of a challenge, because the Idaho Citizens Alliance has made it a moving target.

Last week, after an attorney general's opinion had labeled the first version of the initiative unconstitutional, the alliance offered a revision that really is a whole new initiative. The new language seems to soften some points while adding a couple of brand-new wrinkles.

The initiative's stated intent is to keep homosexuals from receiving "special rights," whatever that means. Its actual impact is hard to predict. Lawyers likely will get rich litigating its effect.

Regardless of its legal technicalities, the initiative's political goal is fairly easy to see; it seeks to stir up intolerance against a powerless and unpopular segment of society—under the guise of heading off a perceived threat.

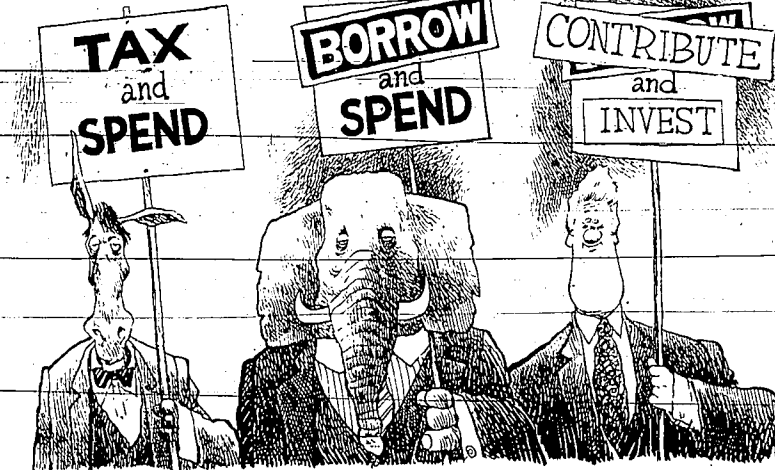

In response to Kempthorne's statement this week, ICA founder Kelly Walton said, "Dirk is a little naive if he doesn't think there's a problem that needs to be addressed here."

The senator may have his faults, but naive he isn't. Kempthorne just spent the better part of a year criss-crossing the state on a political campaign.

If Idaho homosexuals were on the march for "special rights," don't you think Kempthorne would have caught wind of it?

In fact, the problem that Walton alleges does not exist. Kempthorne's assessment is exactly right: This initiative will create acrimony and divisiveness. Who needs it?

200 years later, taxes are still revolting

George Marotta

Our tolerance for taxes has increased significantly from colonial days when we denuded "no taxation without representation" to independence when we achieved "taxation with representation" to our present plight of "taxation because of representation."

Government leaders tell us they need to spend more money to stimulate the economy and create jobs. However, I've never understood why a dollar spent by government is any better than the dollar that we might spend, if it didn't go for taxes.

The president has proposed an annual federal spending level of $1.5 trillion, but tax revenues are expected to total "only" $1.2 trillion. That's some gap—a $300 billion deficit growing almost $1 billion every day.

The news out of Washington is not good. We know that the highest tax rate will be raised soon from 31 percent to 36 percent on the wealthy.

Our representatives ignore history when they assume that they can collect more money simply by raising the tax rate. "For some reason unknown to politicians, people don't work to pay taxes. People will work to avoid paying taxes, and if necessary will stop working to avoid paying taxes," says economist Arthur Laffer.

Studies at the Hoover Institution by senior fellow John Cogan, and recent analysis by San Francisco investment adviser Kurt Hanser, show clearly that no matter how high or low the top tax rate, the amount of federal taxes actually collected over recent decades does not deviate much from 19.5 percent of gross national product. That should tell us to set spending at the level of tax tolerance, but the federal government spends 23 percent of GNP!

A good measure of tax tolerance is the rate of compliance by taxpayers. The "tax gap"—the amount owed to government but not paid—is steadily increasing, from $63 billion in 1982 to the present level of about $110 billion. A major activity of my fellow "enrolled agents" (who are qualified to appear before the tax courts) is negotiating payment schedules with the Internal Revenue Service on behalf of clients who cannot now pay their outstanding tax liabilities. In many cases, the taxpayer is willing but unable to pay.

Today, the average family of four pays 24 percent of their salary in federal taxes. In 1948, they paid 2 percent. The heavily burdened taxpayer in 1993 will not be much amused to learn that during the legislative debate in 1913 leading up to the 16th Amendment (income tax), Congress promised that the top tax rate would never exceed 10 percent.

If there were any connection between the amount of taxes paid and the degree to which we could achieve better lives for the less fortunate, maybe we would be more tolerant of the tax collector's work. But, alas, we all know that the chief beneficiaries are the politicians and the bureaucrats who run the programs.

As Thomas Jefferson wrote, "The natural progress of things is for government to gain ground and for liberty to yield." We should learn from modern history the painful lesson that former communist societies have learned: Government cannot create real prosperity and real jobs.

Book about Anita Hill brings vindication to Clarence Thomas

He still talks about it. He brings it up without prompting.

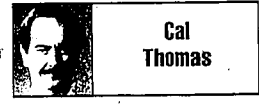

The public lynching of Clarence Thomas, 18 months ago, continues to occupy much of the Supreme Court justice's thinking. But a visitor has the impression that it is more than a gnawing personal pain.

To be called a sexual harasser and heard words attributed to you that you never said that would have crushed the man who taught you, and the grandfather who reared you, and the wife and children who love and respect you—is something you can never forget. Thomas obviously believes he was done a grave injustice.

Of greater concern to him, though, is the effect his experience has had on the court and on the nation's dwindling respect for law and the legal system.

But now, like the convict wrongfully accused who is set free from an unjust sentence, Clarence Thomas can see the light of vindication. It comes in a new book by David Brock, titled "The Real Anita Hill: The Untold Story," a portion of which has been excerpted in the Wall Street Journal.

It takes every charge leveled by Hill during these riveting hearings and destroys them (and her credibility) one by one. Revisiting each allegation Hill made during the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, Brock dismantles every statement, offering names of numerous witnesses and/or Hill's own contradictory statements to dismantle her contentions.

Brock reminds us that everyone who worked with and knew both Clarence Thomas and Anita Hill believed Thomas, not Hill. Those with political scores to settle and who knew neither Hill nor Thomas skillfully turned what should have been a hearing that focused on background, writing and evidence into a political show trial on the issue of sexual harassment. In a courtroom, such an attempt would have been deemed immaterial and objections would have been sustained. But a show trial permits anything that helps make the point those holding power want made.

Hill could not find a single corroborating witness to back up her charges. During the time she alleged Thomas was sexually harassing her, Brock writes, "Hill complained that Thomas 'did not even notice me'; she portrayed him as the 'ideal boss' who was particularly respectful of women employees; and she asserted he would 'make a great father.'"

Are these the words of someone who feels sexually harassed? If Hill was afraid of losing her job (which Brock debunks, saying she had job security and knew it), she might have made lukewarm comments in favor of Thomas, but those she did make went above and beyond generality. They are words of conviction, not pragmatism.

Hill testified she had agreed when making her complaint to the Judiciary Committee that Thomas could be told her name. In fact, says Brock, she did not. Brock also notes that when the Justice Department suggested Hill as a possible witness in Thomas' favor, before Hill made her charge, Thomas thought it was a good idea. Even after the charge, Thomas refused to withdraw from the nomination. Is this the behavior of a man with something to hide?

Brock notes that Hill denied the sworn testimony of Carlton Stewart (former special assistant to Thomas at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission) and Stanley Grayson (former deputy mayor of New York City) that she said Thomas deserved the nomination.

Hill offered a misleading account of how she got her teaching job at Oral Roberts University. Because the alleged sexual harassment is supposed to have occurred behind closed doors, there will never be a "smoking gun" document or third-party witness who will persuade everyone who is telling the truth.

So we have to look at the character of those involved, and Brock does this with the thoroughness of an FBI agent conducting a background check.

It was suggested during the hearings that Hill should be believed over Thomas because she had nothing to gain and he had everything to lose. But since the hearings, Anita Hill has enriched herself with speeches at a reported $10,000 a pop. She refuses all questions about her testimony from audiences and the press.

Given her contradictory statements and the fact that more than a dozen credible witnesses with reputations of integrity would have had to perjure themselves in order to testify in favor of Thomas, it ought to be clear to fair-minded people, who are interested in the truth instead of scoring political points, that Clarence Thomas suffered cruel and unusual punishment he did not deserve.

In addition to vindicating Clarence Thomas, the book also supports the prosecutorial tactics of Republican Sens. Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania and Alan Simpson of Wyoming, who were denounced at the time for not "getting it" in their relentless pursuit of the truth.

The press, especially television, has an obligation to give Brock and his book the saturation coverage they deserve. Anita Hill was never held accountable for her remarks and continues to profit from them. She has become a high priestess in the cult of feminist name-bashing.

Those who believed Anita Hill based on her testimony need to read this book and then offer Clarence Thomas an apology.

Natural birth is better

In response to Donna Hish's letter printed April 6:

Correction: If you had been properly informed, you wouldn't have requested an epidural at all. The Food and Drug Administration and the American Medical Association have both stated that there are no safe drugs used during pregnancy and childbirth. That goes for the seemingly benign epidural as well.

Your anger is justifiable, but not for the reason that you give. You should be angry that the medical establishment has made you think that you need an epidural to have a satisfying birth experience. A truly skilled birth attendant would be able to provide the birthing mother with alternative to drugs for pain relief—alternatives with no unnatural and potentially harmful side effects.

With an attitude of empowerment, natural childbirth can be the ultimate experience for any childbearing woman. For you obviously had the power to give birth naturally, so why endanger the life of your baby with unnecessary drugs?

There are millions of women who became subject to epidurals only to find themselves on the operating table receiving a cesarean or at least seeing their baby removed by forceps. Both of these interventions have their own set of dangers aside from those of the epidural.

Most interventions are absolutely unnecessary and can be avoided simply with faith in the natural process of birth and a dedicated and patient birth attendant.

My childbirth activist sisters and I are working hard to inform all women about the perils and pitfalls of "modern" obstetrics. We maintain there is a place for such skills in high-risk births and in emergency situations, but for the low-risk majority of women, technology has no part in which to play.

Congratulations on the birth of your baby. I pray you someday see the beauty of your natural birth experience.

Don't call it 'swing'!

Regarding April 9 Steve Crump's article on dance:

As a member of the National Association of Country Western Dance Instructors, I would suggest Mr. Crump should have researched Country Western Dance a little more. There is no dance called "Country Swing." There is only Country Western Dance! Within this genre of dance is the Shuffle, Two-Step, Pony, Texas Two-Step, West Coast Swing, East Coast Swing, Cotton-Eye Joe, Waltz, Cha Cha, Schottische and Polka, as well as line dances (no partners required) such as the Boot-Scotin' Boogie, Ski-Bump-Ski, Diamond Express and Achy-Breaky Heart, to name a few.

Country Western Dance has been a part of the culture of our country since the westward migration of the early settlers. As we have seen the popularity of different forms of dance rise and fall in this country, there has always been a nucleus of people who have kept alive the dance of the cowboy.

Country Western Dance has grown in popularity in relation to the changes in country music. Over the past years, the music has become more melodic with a strong beat. The music of such stars as Bob Wills, the immortal Hank Williams and Texas' own Willie Nelson have inspired Country Western Dance through the years. Dance halls such as Gilly's in Houston, Billy Bob's in Fort Worth and Bluestonnet Palace in San Antonio have dwarfed the size of traditional dance halls throughout the country.

There are Country Western Dance festivals all over the United States. In my last professional journal, there were 23 festival/competitions listed: Country Western Dance clubs all over the United States and England are brushing up on their technique and styling, getting ready for the 1993 World Championship in Nashville.

The only place in the Twin Falls area to do Country Western Dance is Spanbauer's Barn. We really need more places to dance.

For more information on Country Western Dance lessons, call the College of Southern Idaho at 733-9554, Ext. 270. Country Western Dance is a lot of fun and good aerobic exercise.

Question for Cameron

I would hope you will let me respond to Sen. Dean Cameron's letter, in which he defends Sen. Laird Noh's "integrity" from my "sharpnet" pen.

Sen. Cameron brought up a situation in regard to State Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards' bill that came to Sen. Noh's Resource and Environment Committee that I believe is the good senator from Rupert needs to clear up.

As Sen. Cameron explains the "railroad" attempt to move Mrs. Edwards' bill quickly to the Senate floor, he tries to clear up the events that led to her bill being held in Sen. Noh's committee. He writes, "It was at my request and the request of a few others" that Mrs. Edwards' bill be added to an evening committee meeting that "had already had a full agenda."

With the hour of 10:45 p.m. fast approaching, the state treasurer's bill came up for consideration by the committee. After the last motion to move the bill to the Senate floor for approval was made, Sen. Cameron and Erasure quickly moved and "seconded" the substitute motion to hold the bill in committee. This motion passed.

Sen. Cameron continues, "Since I had read and reviewed the bill earlier and didn't care for the measure, I had called Sen. Erasure and others in the committee and asked them their opinions and to vote 'no.'" I would add, Sen. Cameron failed to contact some committee members, including Sen. Hawkins and me, both of whose votes were necessary to hold the bill in committee.

Now I am asking Sen. Cameron to please explain to me and the readers of The Times-News why he would want to waste committee time at 10:40 p.m. in the last days of the legislative session to review a bill in the Senate Resource and Environment Committee that he intended to hold in committee. It just doesn't make sense.

What Sen. Cameron wrote is factual. I'm sure Sen. Noh and the state treasurer are still the best of friends. However, I believe Sen. Noh's use of Sen. Cameron in defending his integrity has resulted in a net loss of integrity to both senators.

Update sex attitudes

These past weeks, there have been many headlines and comments made about the Outcomes Driven Developmental Model and about the teaching of self-esteem and human sexuality. It becomes abundantly clear that many people do not have the foggiest idea what the mind-body connection is all about.

Here are some examples: "Jerome schools plan sex education survey." "It should not be the schools' focus to cure the ill or dysfunctional families, but their role should be teaching academics." "We need to do such a good job nailing down public feelings so there is no room for controversy or criticism." "Sex should be taught in the home." "Just say no." "To feel good about oneself rather than be good has become the pursuit of public education." "Do you want raw sex taught in the classroom?"

These attitudes and beliefs are based on the idea that human beings are unchangeable and inhumanistic in nature. These are the attitudes that have allowed sexual predators to hide safely behind the closet door labeled "The Family Code of Silence" for many decades.

Self-righteous and judgmental people get so involved with rigid rules and regulations that they forget to evaluate the difference between "innate" and "learned." Human beings have the ability to reason the ability to use logic and common sense.

Self-esteem and human sexuality are intertwined and interrelated. One part does not function separate from the other.

Reason and common sense will tell you that "knowledge replaces fear." Roosevelt said that "all we have to fear is fear itself." That "saying is just as important today as it was in the 1930s—it not more so."

It is time for parents to stop blaming teachers and for teachers to stop blaming parents for the ills of our society. We are both equally to blame. Let's get off on complacent hats and shovel out what is behind the closet door.

It is my belief that an honest person has nothing to hide. It is the dishonest people that like to keep family secrets hidden. Parents and teachers need to become partners in a child's future starting at birth.

Horgan deserves praise

This letter is being written to publicly commend John Horgan for the courage to act as he believes for the good of the citizens he represents. I believe that "honest" and "conscientious" would have been more appropriate adjectives to have been used in The Times-News editorial on April 13. In my opinion, "all tempered" was an extremely inappropriate adjective.

Yeltsin too busy for voters?

NOVOKUZNETSK, Russia (AP) — At one point in Boris Yeltsin's campaign trip to Siberia this week, supportive workers waited for him near a coal mine. But when Yeltsin arrived, all he had to say was: "I have a tight schedule."

Was this the same populist leader once so comfortable with crowds? Yeltsin initially launched what seemed like a campaign to woo blue-collar voters before Russia's April 25 referendum, but he ended up meeting handpicked officials and labor activists in Novokuznetsk, on the heart of the coal-rich Kuznets Basin, 1,500 miles east of Moscow.

Midway through his seven-hour tour, several hundred people gathered outside the main office of the Abashevskaya Mine to see Yeltsin, who was elected president in June 1991, thanks largely to their support.

Women were dressed up for the occasion. Many of the men wore their hair slicked, their faces darkened by coal dust. They had stood in the unseasonably hot sun after a grueling shift in a pit several hundred yards underground.

A few people held up posters welcoming Yeltsin. One read: "We need a tough president."

The crowd buzzed with expectation when the presidential motorcade of three black ZIL limousines and several Volga sedans approached the freshly scrubbed building in the center of the dilapidated mining complex.

Yeltsin, accompanied by local officials and bodyguards, got out of his limousine and walked to the building's door — through the crowd — to meet with a selected 400 top executives and labor activists inside.

Once the meeting started, neither Yeltsin nor other speakers mentioned the word "referendum." Their caucuses, reminiscent of old-time huddles of Communist Party apparatchiks and managers, focused on production.

The miners, as usual, demanded more control over their output. Yeltsin and other Moscow officials, as usual, tried to give them as little as possible. In the end, the president pledged greater economic freedom, higher wages and more social benefits.

"He came here before, but none of his promises have materialized," said Aman Tuleyev, a charismatic local leader and frequent critic of Yeltsin's policies in the Russian Congress.

"When the czar visits his subjects, he at least should make sure his promises are fulfilled," Tuleyev told reporters.

Many journalists who accompanied Yeltsin on his whirlwind tour wrote Wednesday that he acted like another hurried, white-haired gift-giver: Santa Claus.

The official meeting over, Yeltsin headed back to his car. Passing the crowd again, he brushed off greetings by saying he had a tight schedule.

People responded with angry boos and shouts: "Then why come here? You shouldn't have come!"

That made Yeltsin pause for a few minutes, only to face a disgruntled mob of about 100 people who broke through the tight security cordon to air her grievances.

"Boris Nikolayevich, how can we live on 6,000 rubles a month?" said the elderly woman, whose monthly pension equals about $10.

Yeltsin listened, then shrugged: "Don't vote — this is your right." He turned and disappeared into his armored limousine.

Millions mourn slain leader, strike

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — In an outpouring of black rage, millions of workers went on strike Wednesday to protest the slaying of black leader Chris Hani. Four people were killed and hundreds wounded as blacks battled police.

"The worst clash was in the black township of Soweto, where police fired on marchers outside the main police station. Hospital spokeswoman Adri Potgieter said three people died, five were critically wounded and 259 suffered minor wounds. Police claimed they fired because protesters were hurling rocks, but witnesses said most of the crowd was calm and had started to leave the area.

Among the dead was African National Congress official Sam Ntobane, the black group said.

ploded and injured 10 soldiers, and medical officials said a man was killed and about 150 people were wounded in the looting.

Looting also broke out in Durban and Pietermaritzburg in Natal province, and in Port Elizabeth to the south.

Hani, head of the South African Communist Party and one of the ANC's most popular leaders, was assassinated outside his home Saturday. A white right-winger has been charged in the murder.

Trial begins for 12 men accused of plotting coup

MOSCOW (AP) — Judges at the coup attempt trial of 12 old-guard Communists rejected defense attempts today to challenge the court's authority and halt proceedings in the first hours of the long-awaited case.

Lawyers for the former Kremlin leaders sought to show that Russia's Supreme Court was not the legal heir of the Supreme Court of the former Soviet Union, which dissolved after the failure of the August 1991 coup.

"The union no longer exists," argued Genrikh Pavch, an attorney for former Soviet parliament leader Anatoly Lukyanov. "It seems to me that we have today to decide who can judge an alleged crime against a state that may no longer exist."

Teacher: Exercise not part of ODDM

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The junior high teacher whose "fallout shelter exercise" came under fire Tuesday from an opponent of Outcomes Driven Development Model opposes ODDM himself.

And teacher Jeff Hoskisson said Wednesday the exercise had nothing to do with the teaching philosophy because he does not use ODDM in his classroom.

Sue Loois, a vocal ODDM opponent, complained to Twin Falls School Board members Tuesday night about an activity involving 13- and 14-year-old O'Leary Junior High School students.

"Students were asked to select six survivors of a nuclear holocaust from among 10 people with character flaws.

The choices included a retired 39-year-old prostitute; a homosexual architect and an unskilled 20-year-old black militant.

"Are the schools trying to teach children to judge the value of a human life under ODDM's new philosophy?" she asked board members.

But Hoskisson, one of the two health teachers who used the activity, does not use ODDM philosophies in his teaching, Hoskisson said.

"In fact, teachers at the school who use ODDM philosophies hold team-teaching meetings in which they look at age appropriateness when deciding which activities to use, O'Leary Principal Wiley Dobbs said. It is questionable whether the bomb-shelter activity was age appropriate, he added.

"In my opinion it is somewhat controversial," Dobbs said. "At least one member of the community was offended by this activity."

Dobbs said under a proposed district policy teachers would have to consult with their principal about such activities.

If the teacher and principal conclude that the activity is important to the lesson, the teacher would have to notify parents, and they could decide whether their children participate or do an alternative lesson, he said.

Hoskisson said he used the activity, which was not part of the district's curriculum guide, so his students could practice four steps of decision making.

The activity is not graded, is not used for psychological testing as Loois suggested to the school board, and does not have one right answer, he said. It is not intended to teach values either, he said.

"They think we're teaching a value," Hoskisson said. "But we only want to help them recognize their own values."

Hoskisson said he did not think the material was sensitive, but because of the objections to it he will no longer do the activity, which is similar to one in the state's curriculum guide.

Jerome man charged with injuring jail

JEROME — A Jerome man is facing charges of injuring the county jail.

Michael Allen Taylor, 38, appeared Monday before 5th District Magistrate John Varin. Varin postponed the preliminary hearing to allow Taylor to consult an attorney.

Taylor, an inmate in the Jerome County jail, allegedly smashed a television set, broke a jail telephone and window, and shoved a jail door shut, breaking the key in the door lock, according to a jail report in his court file.

Taylor is serving a 14-month sentence for burglary. He has been in the jail since his arrest March 28, 1992.

Taylor remains in maximum security at the jail.

Twin Falls earns Idaho's highest rate of seatbelt use

BOISE — Twin Falls had the highest rate of seatbelt use in Idaho during the first quarter of 1993, according to a survey by the Idaho Transportation Department.

Seventy-one percent of Twin Falls automobile riders buckled up during the quarter. Twin Falls was the only town in Idaho to meet the national goal of 70 percent seatbelt use by 1992, the department said.

Statewide, seatbelt use topped 50 percent during the quarter. The survey found Idahoans buckling up at a rate of 51.6 percent, slightly less than the 53.2 percent in December.

National seatbelt use at the end of 1992 was 62 percent.

Legislators set environmental forum to discuss water issues

KETCHUM — Four Idaho legislators will gather in Ketchum on Friday for a special discussion on Idaho's water issues.

Scheduled for 7 p.m. in the next Stage Theatre on Ketchum's Main Street, the program is being held as a benefit for the community's Environmental Resource Center. Featured panelists include Legislators Maxine Bell, Reed Hansen, John Peavey and Karl Brooks.

Bob Doyle, a teacher at The Community School in Sun Valley, will moderate the forum discussion on "Water: Idaho at the Crossroads."

Tickets for the event are $7 for adults and $5 for students under 18 years of age. They are available at Cafe des Artistes, the Chapter One Bookstore, and the Environmental Resource Center in Ketchum.

For more information, call the Environmental Resource Center at 726-4333.

Rosebud accuses Idaho Power of not negotiating fairly

BOISE — Rosebud Enterprises, which wants to build a coke-burning power plant near Mountain Home, has asked the state Public Utilities Commission to review contract talks with Idaho Power Co.

Rosebud charges that Idaho Power is not negotiating in good faith. The utility is required by law to negotiate a contract to buy power from independent power producers with greater than 10 megawatts capacity.

Rosebud proposes to build and operate an electric power plant that would burn waste petroleum coke, a high-sulfur fuel. If built, the developer says, the plant would include pollution control technology to limit the release of sulfur, which is known to contribute to acid rain.

Trans IV assigns groups to determine bus routes

TWIN FALLS — Trans IV Buses plans to use federal grant money to set up fixed-route service in Twin Falls, and to extend services to Jerome and Gooding.

To help set up the routes, the non-profit service plans to form four groups to look at funding levels, access, routing and other issues.

An organizational meeting is planned for April 23 at 2 p.m. in the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare building at 601 Pole-Line Road.

The service plans to use the grant to buy buses for fixed routes and two larger inter-city buses.

Janet Zimmerman and Mark Mehl will be the co-leaders of the groups.

Anyone who wants to work in the four groups is urged to attend the April 23 meeting. Those with questions can call Trans-IV at 736-2133, or the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Crapo, Craig call for focus on wilderness

The Associated Press and The Times-News

As he wrapped up the last of eight town meetings on the issue, Congressman Michael Crapo said he hopes to form citizen panels to develop wilderness proposals for each area of the state.

Crapo

The decision to create committees will depend on Idahoans' willingness to serve on them, the Idaho Republican said.

Crapo set no deadline for making a decision on the panels.

Craig

The freshman lawmaker representing Idaho's 2nd Congressional District said it also is possible he and Democratic 1st District Congressman Larry LaRocco could work together on a statewide wilderness bill.

LaRocco last month introduced a wilderness bill in the House for his district, which includes northern and western Idaho.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, said Monday that he also is working on a wilderness plan, but has no deadline in mind for finishing it.

The Idaho Conservation League has also put together a plan, calling for 130,000 wilderness acres in the Smoky Mountains, 182,000 acres in the Pioneers, more than half a million acres in the Boulder-White Cloud mountains and 26,000 acres on Cache Peak south of Burley.

Idaho already has more than 4 million acres of designated wilderness in five areas, the largest of which is the 2.3-million-acre Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness.

Communities to clean up roadside litter

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — With Johnny Horizon Day coming May 1, the Twin Falls County Solid Waste Department has released a list of area cleanup coordinators.

Individuals, families and groups wishing to pick up litter on a county road in their area can call the following people:

- Buhl — Kenny Hulse, 543-5211.
- Castelford — Trisha Wetstein, 537-6511, or 537-6686 and Susan Murphy, 537-6501.
- Filer — Joe Baratti, 326-5001, or 326-4871.

- Hansen — John Hinton, 423-6356.
- Hollister — Terresa Taylor and Evelyn Slater, 655-4310.
- Kimberly — Jesse Posey, 423-4151.
- Murtaugh — Robin Wright, 432-6643.
- Rogerson — Sherry Satterwhite, 655-4322.

Twin Falls — Darrell A. Heider, or Leuanne Atix at the county Solid Waste Department, 734-9491.

The goal of Johnny Horizon Day is to clean litter from every road in the county by now.

When the cleanup's done, join the Twin Falls Lions Club and county commissioners for cookouts at the Filer Fairgrounds, the Red Barrel in Castelford, the LDS Church in Murtaugh and the Nat-Soo-Pah near Hollister.

Anyone with questions or who needs assistance can call Darrell Heider at 734-9491, or William Chancey at 733-8912.

Manager: INEL future in cleanup

By N.S. Nokkewend
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The future of Idaho National Engineering Laboratory will be in waste cleanup and management, the site manager says.

The future of the Federal Energy Department holds no weapons production.

And the focus at INEL will be on environmental cleanup and clean energy, Augustine Pitrolo, the department's manager of INEL since 1990, told the Twin Falls Rotary Club Wednesday.

But a dwindling federal budget means tougher competition for new projects, he said.

"We want to be DOE's low-cost producer," he said. The eastern Idaho, 899-square-mile site has the talent, "we just have to get the costs down."

One way Pitrolo plans to do that is by reducing the six contractors that now work for the department to a single contractor by 1994.

But whatever projects INEL undertakes in the future, Pitrolo pledged more open operations, more public involvement.

"The secrecy is gone," he said.

The site has a $1 billion annual budget and employs nearly 12,000 people, making it the second-largest employer behind state government.

Of the site's budget, INEL spends about $90 million on cleanup of waste sites. Over the years, INEL has accumulated a variety of radioactive and non-radioactive wastes, including:

- 3.9 million cubic feet of high-level waste — liquid wastes from processing reactor fuel to recover usable nuclear materials.
- 2.3 million cubic feet of transuranic waste — waste contaminated by plutonium.
- 21,000 cubic feet of spent reactor fuel
- 129,711 used fuel elements from reactors.

The site has a $1 billion annual budget and employs nearly 12,000 people, making it the second-largest employer behind state government.

Other types of waste at the site include "low-level," which is defined as anything not falling into other categories. It is made up of generally short-lived radioactive materials, but it may be so highly radioactive that it must be handled by remote control. Mixed waste refers to radioactive wastes mixed with non-radioactive, hazardous chemical wastes.

All spent fuel and high-level wastes will eventually be shipped to a geologic repository. But while the department is investigating the suitability of Yucca Mountain in Nevada, it is not known if or when such a repository would be open.

Government officials also have acknowledged that the first repository would be primarily for commercial spent fuel and may not have room for wastes from INEL. A typical repository for transuranic waste is nearly ready to accept wastes. And INEL has 140,000 drums of it ready to go to the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant in New Mexico.

But Pitrolo pointed out in his overview of INEL that radioactive waste is not the only source of radiation.

Natural sources of radiation include soil, rocks, foods, space and radon from the ground. Man-made sources include X-rays, smoking, smoke alarms and fallout from nuclear bomb tests, and airline flights expose passengers to cosmic radiation.

But man-made radiation is only a small part of the average annual background dose of 360 millirems a person living in eastern Idaho gets, he said.

A millirem is a unit of radiation exposure. A typical chest X-ray exposes a person to about 30 millirems.

The estimated annual dose from INEL releases to a person outside the site boundary is about .02 millirem, Pitrolo explained. The INEL worker limit is 50 millirems, and the INEL average exposure to workers is 6 millirems. The average smelter is exposed to 1,300 millirems. The radiation industry worker limit is 5,000 millirems.

The department is conducting an environmental impact statement of its environmental restoration and waste management operations at INEL, he said.

It won't include operations of the Naval Reactors Facility at INEL, but it will cover spent fuel moved from the nval facility to a storage facility at INEL.

Women's Resource Center to open in Hailey

By Florencé Blanchard
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The paint has barely dried, and the carpet is yet to be installed, but after two years of planning, the Women's Resource Center will open Monday at 309 S. Main, Hailey.

The mission of the center is to "provide support, referral, and education services to the women of the Wood River Valley to enhance their status, quality of life, and continuous growth."

The funding for the center's development is provided jointly by the Moritz auxiliary of the Wood River Medical Center and the Wood River Medical Center as a community outreach service of the hospital.

Referral services, an information library, educational programs, and a Helpline will be available. In addition, the center will serve as liaison for "Community Holiday Baskets," a group that distributes food and clothing to people in need.

"Basically, we'll be working with other agencies to help design programs that fill the gaps that exist in women's care," said Lisa Laajala, director.

A steering committee of 20 women representing several local services and women's focus groups in the community, were responsible for determining the need for a center and establishing its goals.

"It became apparent that there were several things women needed that they weren't getting," said Connie Perry, Wood River Medical Center associate administrator.

"Perry said the current system of services is fragmented with many duplicated or non-existent services, education, or support groups.

"We want to link the people who need it with the people who've got it," she said.

"Although the center won't provide actual care or counseling, the staff hopes to be able to track people until their problem is resolved.

"We'll do more case management," said Laajala.

According to the director, some of the center's priorities will be the establishment of low-cost mental health counseling, rape support for teenage victims, and programs for parents of young children.

"The way it is right now, she said, "low-cost counseling is only available in cases of domestic violence and manic depressive or schizophrenic behavior."

A crew of volunteers cleaned and painted the center which is located in the former U.S. Forest Service office in Hailey.

Information about services of the Women's Resource Center is available by calling 788-5733 or the Helpline.

Shoshone may demolish building

By Patricia Voloshen
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE Council member Pam Brown requested that the city consider doing away with the condemned buildings in town.

The city owns irrigation water rights and has enough to accommodate any future development, officials say.

Consequently, they have shares that are put up for bid and leased every year. The extra water will again be advertised this month.

Julie Nance and Patti Cheslick spoke to the council on behalf of the Iron Horse Roundup.

Nance and Cheslick said that the formal for the event is basically the same as last year with the addition of a wood-fired, steam-operated locomotive, which is coming from Humboldt County, Calif. An auction will be held the end of May to raise money for the transportation of the train.

Police Chief Charles Cox reported vandalism to some street signs, and two complaints regarding the local movie theater.

The tickets were oversold during the showing of "Aladdin" and benches were placed in front of exits while some children sat in the aisles.

The establishment is owned and operated by Tere Zech. An inspection was done by Fire Chief Boyd Alexander, who reported that Zech said he would change the locks on the doors.

The theater operates three nights a week only, and the ticket demand was unexpected.

Blaine County allots $80,000 over 2 years to alternative school for teacher

By Jody Hinton
Times-News correspondent

HAILY Proponents of the Blaine County Alternative School are celebrating a commitment from the Blaine County School Board of approximately $40,000 for each of the next two years.

The money will provide for the salary and benefits of an alternative school teacher.

Since receiving the support of the board at last month's meeting, Bob Devine, vice principal of the Wood River Middle School, and several others have stepped up fund-raising efforts throughout the community.

The school hopes to raise an initial $79,000 in start-up costs for the building for "at-risk" students or current dropouts.

Devine hopes to open enrollment as early as next fall.

The School Board is also celebrating. Following almost two years of negotiations with developer Elliot Caplow and EMB Hailey, the district is in possession of a signed agreement toward the purchase of the Northridge property in Hailey, the proposed site for a new middle school.

The board still faces negotiations with the city of Hailey, concerning needed improvements to the property and who will pay for them.

There is also a question concerning a request to subdivide the 20-acre property from an existing parcel, as well as concerns over the availability of irrigation water.

The board approved a proposal presented by Jonathan Marvel, A.A. in association with Armstrong and Associates, one of two local architectural firms to submit proposals for the repair of the roof at Wood River High School.

Accolades went to Ray Grosvenor, vice-principal at the Wood River Middle School, for receiving a certificate from Gov. Conrad Anand in appreciation for his efforts in substance abuse prevention.

The School Board was recognized for its support of the Developmental Preschool at Bellevue Elementary by Kathy Lind, the developmental preschool teacher.

Chuck Turner, principal at Wood River Middle School, was runner-up for school administrator of the year for area four.

Anna A. Laakso
TWIN FALLS - Anna A. Laakso, 85, of Twin Falls, died Wednesday, April 14, 1993, at West Medical Care Center in Twin Falls.

She was born July 7, 1907, in Bovey, Minn., the daughter of Adolph and Maria Manginen of Finland.

Survivors include one son, Robert Laakso of Twin Falls; two granddaughters, Jackie Hucksby of Citrus Heights, Calif., Barbara Gregg and Luane Moran, both of Fresno, Calif.; Patti Charlesworth of Hot Springs, Ark. and Cindy Puker of Huntington Beach, Calif.

Three sisters, Fayle Erickson and Helga Savolainen, both of Duluth, Minn., and Hayme Hynys of Hunkley, Minn.; one brother, Carl Manginen of Grand Rapids, Minn., and nine great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her husband, Clifford H. Laakso, one daughter, Mildred Montelius, two sisters and one brother.

No funeral services have been planned. Cremation took place at White Crematory and arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary in Twin Falls.

Susie Hansen Shaw
GOODING - Susie Hansen Shaw, 85, a longtime Gooding resident, died Wednesday, April 14, 1993, at the Gooding County Memorial Hospital after a courageous battle with cancer.

Susie was born March 22, 1908, in Nyssa, Ore., to Pator and Sarah Thomas Hansen. At a very young age, Susie's father married Zeke Gamble and she was raised by them. The family moved from Oregon to Idaho where they lived on a farm in the Shoshone area. She attended school there and later moved to Gooding. She married Clinton Shaw on Sept. 20, 1924, in Gooding, and they farmed south of Gooding for several years. They moved into town in 1933. They had a trucking business and later operated a real estate business. Clint passed away on Aug. 21, 1950. Susie worked at the state TB Hospital in the diet kitchen until it closed. She then worked at Green Acres Care Center until she retired in 1982.

Susie had much joy with her family and friends. She loved her knitting and crocheting projects. She attended many of the activities at the senior citizens center. She was a member of the First Christian Church.

She is survived by two daughters, Jeanette Carlton and Dolores Rork; and one granddaughter, Diana Ibara, all of Gooding; six great-grandchildren, Danny and Tony Ibarra of Gooding and Carmen, Jan, Christie and Julie Gooding, all of Twin Falls; two sisters, Mary Gill of Wendell and Eva Holford of Gooding; one brother, Claude Gamble of Boise; and several nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her husband, parents; a daughter, Melba Jean Collins; a granddaughter, Susan Rork Goicochea; a grandson, John Carlton; two sisters and one brother.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, April 17, 1993, at Demaray's Gooding Chapel. Burial will follow at the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding. Friends may call from 4 to 7 p.m. Friday at the funeral chapel.

Memorials may be made to the Gooding Senior Citizens, Gooding Hospital Hospice, or to a charity of the donor's choice.

Fred L. Gentry
TWIN FALLS - Fred Leonard Gentry, 81, of Twin Falls, died Wednesday, April 14, 1993, at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls.

He was born Jan. 22, 1912, in Pawnee, Okla., son of Frank and Lula Bunton Gentry. Soon after his birth the family moved to Klamath Falls, Ore., and in 1922, they moved to Filer and he attended Maroda Grade School and graduated from Filer High School in 1930. He attended the University of Idaho for two years. In April 1937, he married Dorothy Mary Vining in Twin Falls. Mr. Gentry worked as a welder during World War II and following the war, he worked as a pipeliner and was a member of the Plumbers & Pipefitters Local No. 467 for 36 years in Burlingame, Calif. He returned to Twin Falls in 1978.

Mr. Gentry was a member of St. Edward's Catholic Church.

Survivors include one daughter, Patricia Mancini of Los Altos Hills, Calif.; five grandchildren; one brother, Dr. Herbert Gentry of St. Cloud, Fla.; and two sisters, Lucille Ytuarte of Jerome and Maxine Wanzonoid of Twin Falls. He was preceded in death by his parents, his wife, three brothers, one sister and one daughter.

Funeral Mass will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls, with Father Rob Koller officiating. Interment will follow at the Twin Falls Cemetery. Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. Friday at White Mortuary in Twin Falls.

Martha M. Winterbrouer Matlock
TWIN FALLS - Martha Marjorie Winterbrouer Matlock, 75, of Twin Falls, died Tuesday, April 13, 1993, at her home.

She was born July 26, 1917, in Hepler, Kan., and attended Hepler schools until graduating in 1935. In July, 1936, she married William Price Matlock and they had 10 children, three of whom did not survive infancy. In 1956, they came to Idaho with her seven children and their eleventh child was born in 1957. Martha worked as a cook at the Red Rock Cafe in Twin Falls and later at Woodstone Retirement Center until retirement.

Survivors include eight children, Virginia Cunningham of Salina, Kan.; Bill Matlock of Basti, James Matlock of Atlanta, Ga.; Rosemary Kern and Gary Matlock, both of Snomohish, Wash.; Margaret Black of Twin Falls; Sandra Cannon of Reno, Nev.; and Carl Matlock of Ephrata, Wash.; 25 grandchildren; 16 great-grandchildren; two sisters; and one brother. She was preceded in death by her husband, and three children, David Lyle and twins, Staton and Stanley.

Funeral services are under the direction of White Mortuary in Twin Falls.

Lewis C. Guttery
TWIN FALLS - Lewis Charles Guttery, 73, of Carson City, Nev., and formerly of Twin Falls, died Sunday, April 11, 1993, at the Sierra Convalescent Center in Carson City.

He was born May 17, 1919, in Twin Falls, the son of Edward T. and Marie Shivers Guttery. His grandparents were Twin Falls High School and married Joyce Pierce on June 27, 1942, in Twin Falls. He had resided in Boise and later moved to Carson City, where he had resided for the past 21 years. He was a manager of food services. He served in the Air Force during World War II.

He was a past master of the Carbon Lodge No. 16 AF and AM, was a past commander of Knights of Templar York Rite and was a past member of the El Korak Temple. He enjoyed golf, bowling, softball, fishing and his family.

Survivors include his wife, Joyce Guttery of Carson City; daughters, Deborah Jane of Salem, Ore., and Sandra Joyce Gonyea of Carson City; sisters, LaVone Brooks of Jerome and LaDorah Greenstate of Twin Falls; a brother, Edward T. Guttery of Sunnysvale, Calif.; one grandchild, and one stepgrandson. He was preceded in death by his parents.

The graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Friday at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Arrangements are under the direction of FitzHenry's Funeral Home & Crematory in Carson City.

The family suggests memorial contributions may be made to the Shriner's Hospital for Crippled Children, in care of Kerak Terrell, 4935 Energy Way, Reno NV 89502.

New cleaning agents may be causing bacteria to die at Hansen sewer plant

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN - Dying bacteria in the Hansen sewer treatment plant has become a problem for Operation Maintenance Inc. Project Manager Gene Christensen.

Christensen said the problem has lasted six weeks. He asked the Hansen City Council Monday night to allow Wayne Heinemann, the firm's engineer, to determine if there are new cleaning agents or chemicals being disposed of in the sewer system.

Heinemann will most likely talk with residents and businesses in town, Christensen said. He feared that there have been some changes made causing the problem. The firm operates the town's sewage treatment plant.

In other business: • Jack Besson of Operations revealed that the Division of Environmental Quality's drinking water standards require testing of water in 20 Hansen homes for traces of lead and copper. The tests will be done in homes built from 1983 to 1987 that might have copper tubing.

These tests should be made before October to receive a cheaper testing charge, he said.

The water will be taken after a six-hour standing period and tested in a health department-approved lab in Boise.

Mayor George Urie said the $1,300 fee for the mandatory test required every three years was costly for the city.

Fire Chief John Hinton reported aging fire hydrants could be replaced with a Waterloo hydrant at a cost of $676.

The hydrants are easily repaired and parts are readily available. The council voted to purchase three units with two of them to be installed now and the third held as a "stand-by."

Councilman Larry Bourn said the new City Hall quarters are nearly remodeled, and the city office will move soon.

The new quarters will be located in the former post office location. Urie displayed a historic building certificate sent to the city by the Idaho Historical Society. The building was originally the bank of Hansen.

A group of citizens complained to the council about accumulations of old cars and debris on various lots in town. Urie said these problems should be resolved after the hiring of a new police chief at a special meeting today.

Parents and younger citizens should be pleased to learn playground equipment ordered last fall has arrived and will be installed in both parks.

Navy jet collides with crop duster

THORNTON, Wash. (AP) - A Navy jet collided Wednesday with a small crop duster plane over rural Whitman County, critically injuring the plane's pilot, authorities said.

The accident near this town about 35 miles south of Spokane was reported about 4:40 a.m. said Sarah McGruder, spokeswoman at Whidbey Island Naval Air Station, where the Navy plane was based.

The pilot of the crop duster, Keith Graham, 40, of Hoquedale, Idaho, was flown by helicopter to Deaconess Medical Center in Spokane. He was in critical condition, nursing supervisor Gladys Smith said.

The two crew members aboard the Navy A-6E jet ejected, McGruder said.

The pilot, Lt. Daniel E. Dugan, 31, of Sacramento, Calif., was in stable condition at Sacred Heart Medical Center, nursing supervisor Pat Holmes said.

The bombardier-navigator, Cmdr. James Bill Jacobs, 44, of Pembroke, N.C., was in satisfactory condition at Deaconess.

Details of their injuries were not immediately available.

The A-6E, an all-weather carrier-borne bomber, was from Attack Squadron VA95 at the Whidbey base in Oak Harbor, about 50 miles north of Seattle, McGruder said.

The jet was on a low-level training mission, said Howard Thomas, another base spokesman.

The collision occurred along a route where A-6es routinely make low-level runs after dropping dummy bombs at a bombing range near Boardman, Ore., Thomas said. He did not know if the plane that crashed had made a bombing practice run at the site.

Navy pilots who fly the route are advised to watch out for crop-dusting planes, Thomas said.

The two aircraft hit the ground a few miles apart. Authorities closed off a large area around the crash sites.

Jess Upshaw said he was riding a dirt motorcycle when he saw the planes collide. The accident happened as the crop duster climbed after making a spraying run, he said. The Navy jet emerged over a hilltop and smashed into the smaller plane, he said.

After the collision, the Navy plane turned 180 degrees and briefly climbed before it hit the ground a few miles away, Upshaw said.

Dick Kloainger said he heard a loud noise and saw the Navy jet catch fire, apparently following the collision and after the Navy crew members had ejected.

The Navy plane remained airborne trailing flames for a few miles before it hit the ground, Kloainger said.

Food-poisoning outbreak spurs federal lawsuit

SEATTLE (AP) - The parents of a 7-year-old girl stricken in January by food poisoning outbreak have filed a federal lawsuit against the Jack in the Box restaurant chain.

The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court on Tuesday by the parents of Lindsey Hicks of Spanaway. Lindsey was hospitalized more than three weeks after eating a Jack in the Box hamburger on Jan. 7, said Karen Balluff, the attorney representing the family.

The suit seeks unspecified damages from Jack in the Box, which is owned by San Diego-based Foodmaker Inc., and Foodmaker's former meat supplier, The Vons Cos.

To your list of sleepers, add the desert snail, goal for a three-maybe-four-year nap.

According to the historical footnotes, Spanish conquistadors turned attack dogs loose on South American natives. The dogs were spiked cotton armor. The natives didn't. Terrifying bestial battles, though.

When it came time to fast in early England, the subjects of the Crown fasted, or ebe, not just by Church dictation. The law of the state likewise stipulated. The 1570 Lennox Prohibition could send a meat-eater to jail for three months. Or an egg-eater. Or even a milk drinker.

Q. Didn't Mark Twain say, "Nothing is really work unless you'd rather be doing something else?"

A. No, it was the Peter-Pan man James M. Barrie who said that. What Twain said - not on one of his better days - was "I do not like work even when someone else does it."

Q. What usually kills the most people in hurricanes - high wind or high water?

Salmon advocates may file suit to block Army barging effort

EAGLE (AP) — Salmon advocates say they will file suit in federal court to stop the Army Corps of Engineers from barging of impelled Snake River salmon around dams on the Snake and Columbia rivers.

The National Marine Fisheries Service on Wednesday issued a permit to the Corps to collect young salmon in the dams and haul them in trucks and barges for release in the Columbia River estuary. The Corps is expected to begin immediately.

"Barging salmon is a scientific hoax," said Ed Chaney, director of the Northwest Resource Information Center in Eagle. "It is driving Snake River salmon to extinction. It is wrecking economic havoc on the region. We will sue to stop the mass-kill."

In January, the conservationists served a 60-day notice to the fishery service, charged with finding ways to help the endangered Snake River sockeye and the threatened Snake River chinook runs.

The Army Corps began experimental barging of young salmon in the late 1970s when it was found more than 95 percent of them perished in the dam turbines and slackwater reservoirs on the Columbia River Basin.

To avoid changing the way the dams were operated, the Corps barged the fish, but populations continue to decline, Chaney said.

An analysis by the Act Ho Transportation Review Group chosen by the Columbia Basin Fish and Wildlife Authority in December concluded collecting salmon into barges is no substitute for road river in migration and may harm the fish.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife studies say crowding fish onto barges can spread a bacterial disease deadly to salmon, Chaney said.

Under the Endangered Species Act, the Corps needs a NMFS permit to collect and barge salmon. Barging was strongly opposed by fish agencies, tribes and the public at recent public hearings on the Corps' permit application.

The Corps applied for the permit last Oct. 30. NMFS delayed issuing it until April 14, the day before barging was scheduled to begin.

"National Marine Fisheries Service deliberately delayed issuing the permit until the 11th hour in an attempt to frustrate public challenge," Chaney said.

"This is shameful behavior for a government agency charged with protecting the salmon and the public interest. We don't intend to let NMFS get away without a fight."

Salmon advocates claim the Corps deliberately maintains lethal conditions in the Columbia River Basin dams to justify barging and avoid trying the dams as required by several laws, including the Northwest Power Act passed in 1980.

Judge rescinds bond for killer

WALLACE — Citing public reaction, 1st District Court Judge Craig Kosonen rescinded his order allowing convicted murderer Mickey Lee Whitcomb out of jail on $10,000 bond for two weeks.

"I misjudged the apprehension of people," Kosonen said Tuesday. "If they are that ill at ease, I am not going to interfere that on the bond."

But the judge's decision came after Whitcomb had already been released from the Shoshone County Jail, where he was being held pending his May 10 sentencing.

Whitcomb, 39, turned himself in late Tuesday and was back in custody.

School board keeps King novels

SALMON — The Salmon School Board has voted to keep two Stephen King novels on the shelves at the high school library.

"The Talisman" and "The Skeleton Crew" were challenged by April and Ken Barrill, parents of a high school student. About 150 people turned out Tuesday to listen to the proceedings.

Ken Barrill started the discussion by reading parts of "The Talisman" which contained graphic street language regarding homosexuality.

"I've got seven pages of this kind of stuff. I'd like to know what the school's policy is on making vulgar literature available to our kids," he said. "I mean, is this the best we can do for our kids?"

Rexburg man spared more jail time

REXBURG — A 7th District judge has spared a jail term further prison time for last summer's shooting death of a teenager in front of a local convenience store.

Judge James Herndon put James Walters, 22, on six-months of house arrest followed by 6 1/2 years probation. Walters is completing 180 days of evaluation and alcoholism treatment at the minimum security prison in Cottonwood.

A $10,000 fine was also imposed.

Corrections firing kept under wraps

LEWISTON — Richard Vernon, director of the Idaho Department of Corrections, said there were "many valid reasons" for last month's firing of Ronald McKinsey, former warden of the state prison in Cottonwood.

"He knows why. He knows the history of what's happened," Vernon said Tuesday. "But he's indicated he's going to sue me."

Because of the legal threat, Vernon said, he will not elaborate on reasons for firing McKinsey as warden at the North Idaho Correctional Institution.

"It will come out if it goes to court," Vernon said.

Counties dissolve joint district

GRANGEVILLE — Idaho and Lewis counties returned to square one after commissioners voted to dissolve a fledgling joint-solid waste district.

"Some people were not in tune with the direction we were going," Patrick Long, chairman of the solid waste board and an Idaho County commissioner, said Tuesday.

Are films really worth showing?

BOISE (AP) — Many Idaho teachers get Hollywood's help to entice their classes, but some parents say they are concerned that film makers' values don't match their own.

Educators say the judicious use of videotapes is an important form of instruction for a generation of students who depend more on a video screen for information than previous generations.

But some parents in the Meridian School District have raised concerns about the nature of commercial films in the classroom.

"There should be a real search made for educational films first, and the Hollywood stuff should not even be a close second," parent Barbara Youngstrom said Tuesday. "It puts too much legitimacy on what is, frankly, made for entertainment."

The Meridian School Board adopted a policy last month restricting the movies that can be shown in certain grades, based on their ratings from the Motion Picture Association of America.

Educational videos make up the bulk of school libraries; history lessons, descriptions of scientific theories and exploration of music and visual arts.

Kempthorne: Nix anti-gay measure

BOISE (AP) — Sen. Dirk Kempthorne has amplified his opposition to the Idaho Citizens Alliance's anti-gay initiative, saying he will ask voters not to sign the petition.

"I asked, 'I would like others that I would not advise them to sign it,' the freshman Republican said Tuesday. "It can create a great deal of acrimony in this state, and be divisive."

Last week, Kempthorne said only that he would not sign the petition.

Rep. Larry LaRocco, D-Idaho, and Michael Claps, R-Idaho, also opposed the initiative. Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, has not taken a position.

Idaho Citizens Alliance Chairman

Kempthorne

Kelly Walton said he was disappointed.

"Obviously, these guys are going to have some credibility with the voters," he said, but added that Kempthorne was misreading his conservative constituency.

"Dirk just won't be able to take credit for it when it wins. Dirk's a good guy. On most issues I agree with him. I just think he's naive, and uninform on this particular issue," Walton said. "Dirk is a little naive if he doesn't think there's a problem that needs to be addressed here."

The initiative, which needs about 32,000 signatures of registered voters to win a place on the 1994 ballot, would prohibit the state from recognizing homosexuals as a minority group for hiring or other purposes. It also would bar schools or other government entities from portraying homosexuality as acceptable.

Supporters of the measure contend legal minority status would amount to giving homosexuals "special rights."

District may cut back school 1 day

MIDVALE, Idaho (AP) — A plan to improve student achievement with a four day school week has people talking in the Washington County town of Midvale.

About 110 students attend classes in the Midvale School District — among Idaho's smallest. But its size has not stopped school officials or patrons from thinking about school reform.

On May 18, residents will get the chance to vote on the recommendation from a parent committee that the district cut Friday from the school week.

School leaders fear the issue could split the close-knit community where last year's high school dropout rate was zero.

Under the plan, students would spend about 30 minutes more time in class each day, divided between the morning and afternoon. The school year would be extended by one week.

Old-fashioned barbers face new health fears

DEAR-ABBY: For 30 years, I have visited An the barber for a haircut. He finishes his "work of art" by sharpening his ancient straight razor on a leather strap, and proceeds to trim the sideburns, around the ears and neck. Occasionally, he draws blood.

An AIDS is transmitted first as easily in this external bleeding, as in any body cavity such as the mouth.

Must we have a haircut every time that our fathers/grandfathers, who had their own personal shaving mugs, soap, hairbrushes, and razors sitting on their new, sterile disposable razor be used on each visit? Your comments and that of experts would be appreciated.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

Q: "When instruments contaminated with blood are not sterilized or disinfected between clients, and when the blood from one person enters the bloodstream of another person. However, the CDC has suggested that the risk of transmission in personal service settings is extremely low."

The CDC recommends that all instruments that are not intended to penetrate the skin, but which may become contaminated with blood, be used for only one client, or cleaned and disinfected after use.

The regulations of the California Board of Barbering and Cosmetology require that all instruments and equipment used by barbers and cosmetologists be disinfected after each use. All states are regulated by their state cosmetology board. Laws vary from state to state, but all require operators to disinfect their instruments, razors, brushes, combs, etc.

In general, California regulations require that all instruments and equipment be cleaned with soap and detergent and water, and then immersed for at least 10 minutes in an EPA registered disinfectant with antimicrobial activity. Razors must be kept in a clean, covered place (i.e., cupboard, or container) they should not be left out in the open.

The CDC points out that personal service workers (this would include barbers and cosmetologists) infected with the AIDS virus should not be restricted from work, unless they have other infectious illnesses for which any person should be restricted from work. To enhance protection of both patron and operator, non-sterile, disposable gloves may be used, if appropriate.

Finally, if barbers and cosmetologists disinfect all instruments and equipment according to the regulations of their state board of barbering and cosmetology, and take simple precautions (such as avoiding injury to the hands and being aware of any bleeding cuts), they and their clients should not be at risk of transmitting or contracting the AIDS virus infection.

DEAR ABBY: "Not afraid of the Dark," who complains about searchlights glaring into the sky, is talking about "light pollution." This is a well-known type of pollution in gradually reducing the pleasure of sky viewing from tens of millions of people. Bright skies hide the stars and planets from us.

Light that shines upward is a waste. Few communities, largely near major observatories, have ordinances requiring lights. Why should we pay for light that doesn't go where we want it?

We should all try to limit light pollution by having our own lights and outdoor city lights shine only on the ground, not above the horizon, and by shutting off those lights whenever they are not needed.

-- JAY M. PASACHOFF, PROFESSOR OF ASTRONOMY, WILLIAMSLAM COLLEGE, WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.

NOT A FEARMONGER

DEAR NOT: According to the California Board of Barbering and Cosmetology, there have been no documented cases of the transmission of HIV (the human immunodeficiency virus) in a barbering or cosmetology ("personal service") setting.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) has indicated that there is a risk of transmission of the AIDS

Parents say they should discuss drugs, alcohol, sex with teen-agers

Should parents discuss smoking, drug and alcohol use, contraception, pregnancy and sexual activity transmitted diseases with their teen-agers? Yes, said 401 parents who were asked this question in a recent study conducted by North Shore University Hospital in Manhasset, N.Y. But actually having that discussion can be one of the hardest tasks a parent faces.

"These are sensitive issues," says Dr. Martin Fisher, the hospital's chief of adolescent medicine. "Some people find sex the hardest topic to talk about at all, especially when you're addressing your own children."

If you can't talk to your child about drugs, alcohol or sex without either yelling or turning red in the face, there are resources to turn to. According to Fisher, approximately 1,000 of the nation's 50,000 pediatricians now specialize in adolescent medicine. Besides doing checkups and treating illnesses, these doctors are trained to work with teens and discuss substance abuse and sexual activity. The American Academy of Pediatrics (141 New York Point Blvd., P.O. Box 927, Elk Grove Village, Ill. 60009-0927) will refer you to specialists in your area if you send them a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

There are several books available on these subjects, too. One written for children is "Growing Up: Feeling Good: A Child's Introduction to Sexuality," by Stephanie Waxman (Panjandrum, $3.95). Among the choices for parents are "Not My Kid: A Parent's Guide to Kids and Drugs," by Beth Bolson and Miller Newton (Avon, $4.50), and Eric W. Johnson's "People, Love, Sex and Families: Answers to Questions Parents Ask" (Walker & Co., $14.85).

There are also videos that address drug abuse and teen sexuality. One is "Straight at You," featuring actor Kirk Cameron of the TV show "Growing Pains," who is shown talking with kids about peer pressure and drugs. The video costs $8.50, plus a shipping and handling charge, and is available through the Center for Substance Abuse. To order, call (800) 729-0666. Another option is a video called "If You Can Talk to Your Kids About Sex, You Can Talk to Them About Anything," which shows parents encourage an honest dialogue with their children. It costs $13.95 and is available through East-West Media. To order, call (800) 858-9540.

Animal lovers can profit from pet-sitting

"Pet-sitting can be a full-time business or profitable and agreeable sideline for qualified people who love animals. You can be your own boss, set your own schedule, and take only agreeable assignments.

In some cases the pet-sitter moves into a pet owner's home while he or she is away. In other instances, the sitter visits the owner's home for an hour or so in the morning and again in late afternoon or early evening to feed and exercise pets. Many clients prefer such at-home care to boarding facilities. Pets at home care avoid the trauma and exposure to disease connected with communal boarding. They generally receive more exercise and far more human companionship than they would in a boarding facility.

In addition to tending pets, sitters, if they are agreeable, also can perform such housekeeping tasks as taking in mail and papers, monitoring security and utilities and watering plants.

Qualities needed for success in this field include love of animals, adaptability, steadiness in emergencies, common sense, dependability, personal pet care experience, and physical condition suited to walking dogs in all seasons. You also will need liability insurance and bonding. Live-in pet sitting is not for individuals with heavy family responsibilities or those who don't like living without human companionship.

Magic Valley Mall plans learning fair

TWIN FALLS - A "Young Child and Parent Learning Fair" has been planned for noon to 5 p.m. Sunday at the center court of the Magic Valley Mall.

The fair is in conjunction with the celebration of the Week of the Young Child. It will feature activities for children with the parents designed to enhance young children's development of language and thinking skills. The activities are intended for infants through early grade-school age. All children attending must be accompanied by an adult.

The event is sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho Child Development Department and the Parent As First Teacher Project, which is funded, in part, by a grant from the US West Foundation.

For more information, call Catherine New, project manager, at 733-9554, extension 138.

BEFORE THE IDAHO PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION

Case No. 31-6101-9301
LEGAL NOTICE

MATTER OF THE AMENDMENT TO AND TO THE REFORMATING OF THE IDAHO MOTOR CARRIER RULES TO BE EFFECTIVE ON JULY 1, 1993

NOTICE OF EFFECTIVE DATE OF THE NEW ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE ACT

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission proposes to amend and reformat the Motor Carrier Rules, currently codified at IDAPA 31.6, and move them to 31.61 and 31.62. This amendment and reformatting of the rules is intended to bring the rules into compliance with the requirements of the Administrative Rules Coordinator rule of effective July 1, 1993.

1993, to update the Commission's adoption by reference of numerous federal safety regulations. The Commission is proposing substantive changes in the existing rules in response to the needs of the industry and the public.

In particular, interested persons are invited to provide comments upon the four options presented under Rule 16.16 for traffic control systems where traffic state either maximum or minimum, a maximum rate-only option, a fixed rate-only option, a minimum and maximum state in the tariff. If a new rule is adopted, it will become effective on or before July 1, 1993, in order to allow for a one-year transition period. The Commission also proposes to amend existing rules to provide for a two-step rule 41 for permanent authority and a new rule 42 for temporary authority. In both instances, the Commission proposes a test to financial health of the carrier, with 10% of a carrier's capitalization must be equity capitalization. The Commission proposes explicit requirements for having or obtaining equipment. Specific statements of shipper support to be filed with an application, explaining the need for the safety rating must be obtained before a permit will be issued, and generally shall be contained in an application for motor carrier authority. Proposed Rule 46 proposes to clarify the existing geographical authority provisions, and to provide general forms and other information are on file for examination at the following locations:

1. Subject Matter: The subject matter of the proposed amendments to existing rules is to bring the Idaho Public Utilities Commission's Motor Carrier Rules into conformity with the format required for the publication of rules under the Administrative Procedure Act, effective July 1, 1993, when the new Administrative Procedure Act takes effect.

2. Legal Authority: The Idaho Public Utilities Commission proposes the adoption of amendments to the Motor Carrier Rules of the authority of Idaho Public Utilities Law, Chapter 17, Title 61, Idaho Code, and Chapter 8, Title 81, Idaho Code.

3. Purpose of Rules: The purpose of the amendments to the existing rules is to keep the rules in conformity with the format required for the publication of rules under the Administrative Procedure Act, effective July 1, 1993, when the new Administrative Procedure Act takes effect.

4. Oral Presentations: The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has not yet decided whether to conduct oral presentations regarding these proposed amendments to the rules. If oral presentations are held, they will be held on or after July 1, 1993, at the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, Statehouse, Boise, Idaho 83720-0000.

5. Written Submissions: Any persons wishing to make a written submission commenting upon the proposed amendments to the rules or requesting the opportunity to be heard at an oral presentation should submit their written comments to the Administrative Rules Coordinator, Statehouse, Boise, Idaho 83720-0000.

6. Agency Contact: The Idaho Public Utilities Commission is the agency contact for this rulemaking proceeding. The Administrative Rules Coordinator, Statehouse, Boise, Idaho 83720-0000, is the contact for the public.

7. Deadline for Comment: The deadline for written comments is Friday, April 26, 1993.

8. Negotiated Rulemaking: No negotiated rulemaking proceeding will be conducted in this rulemaking proposal because there are no interested parties who have a direct and substantial interest in the rulemaking proposal. 9. Summary for Proposed Rules: The Commission's proposed amendments to the Motor Carrier Rules, currently codified at IDAPA 31.6, are reformatting and substantively amending the rules. DATED at Boise, Idaho, this 2nd day of April 1993.

Golden Eagles take perfect district mark on one of the two northside spots in the district tournament in Utah.

By Mike Malters
Times-Sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The league standings for the north side of District 13 baseball appeared in College of Southern Idaho's favor.

After two weekends of play, the Golden Eagles stand 6-0 with a road trip to North Idaho Friday and Saturday: NCS ranks second at 2-1. That leaves Richards at 1-5 and Treasure Valley 0-5.

"We always seem to have a great first half of conference play and then struggle the second half," said CSI Coach Jim Walker.

If the Eagles win the series at Coeur d'Alene this weekend, they would have a lock on one of the two northside spots in the district tournament in Utah.

Walker wants more for CSI than to simply make it to district.

"What I'm really concerned with, even though we're improving, I saw Treasure Valley much improved from when we first played them. I know Richs will be a factor. With North Idaho, if they get better and we struggle, who are we going to be?" Walker said. "We might win our side, but when we're when it comes to district."

The coach sees an even battle for this weekend's two games, Friday and one Saturday.

"They hit pretty well and play defense. They're probably a lot like us," Walker said.

"Our pitching is comparable because we're slumping here."

After scoring 27 runs in three games against Treasure Valley and keeping the CSI batting average at .380, Walker remains happy with his offense.

"We looked very ordinary this weekend, and it's not because we didn't hit it," Walker said. "Our pitching, the starters aren't getting it done. Kevin Shafer looked pretty sharp, but after that hour delay, he was done."

Shafer had to sit out an hour rain delay after pitching only one inning. No starter lasted past the third inning against Treasure Valley. All three victories went to middle relievers.

"We got two things that are really troubling," Walker said. "One, we're not ahead in the count, and two, we can't finish an inning. Their rallies came with two out and nobody on."

The relief pitching seemed in a little better shape against TVCC. Jedd Soto, Dan Poulton and Craig Peck each earned a win. Hard-throwing Pat Flury picked up two saves.

First baseman Tom Walker continues to lead the Eagles in power numbers, with 11 home runs and 47 runs batted in. CSI has four regulars batting .400 or better. Devin Chavez leads the team at .462 followed by Walker (.429), Sean Gorman (.414) and Brian Keswick (.400). Mike Zant and Craig Sands are knocking on the door at .397 and .394 respectively.

Bulls, Pistons pay big bucks for alteration

NEW YORK — Darrell Walker of Chicago on Wednesday was suspended for one game and fined $10,000 and Bill Laimbeer of Detroit was fined for a third time this season for their roles in a bench-clearing scuffle Monday night.

Laimbeer was fined $12,000 and the Bulls' Scott Williams was fined $6,000 for taking part in the incident.

The fines and Walker's suspension were announced by Rod Thorn, the NBA's vice president for operations.

Walker was suspended for leaving the bench while not in uniform and attempting to fight with Laimbeer after Williams and Laimbeer tangled with 5:05 left in the second quarter of the Bulls' 98-95 victory.

Fourteen other players were fined $500 Monday for leaving the bench during Monday's scuffle. For Chicago, they were Horace Grant, Scottie Pippen, Bill Cartwright, Will Perdue, Ed Nealy, Rodney McCray, B.J. Armstrong and Corey Williams. For Detroit, they were Terry Mills, Dennis Rodman, Mark Aguirre, Mark Randall, Alvin Robertson and Danny Young.

Ruth league seeks umpires, conducts tryouts for players

TWIN FALLS — The Valley Babe Ruth Association needs umpires for its games in May through July.

Prospective officials need to be at least 17 years old and have a basic knowledge of baseball. The pay is $15 per game. Anyone interested should contact Roy Dunham at 734-0540.

The association will hold tryouts for players who have already signed up Saturday at Harmon Park. Players need to attend tryouts to be placed on a team.

The trials for 13-year-olds begins at 9 a.m. Saturday. Tryouts for those 14 and 15 start at noon.

NFL's expansion team cost league at least $175 million

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The expansion franchise to be awarded by the NFL this fall will cost at least $175 million — more than 10 times the amount paid for teams the last time the league expanded, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

Jacksonville, one of five finalists for two expansion teams, was visited Monday by NFL officials, and a league source told The Florida Times-Union that the final two ownership groups will have to pay $175 million to $200 million each.

Spartans slip by Bobcats

Minico grinds out 14-4 win with big innings

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minico got its bats working in two major innings Wednesday afternoon to run-rule the Bobcats 14-4 in a non-conference baseball game.

The Spartans sandwiched six- and five-run innings around a four-run fifth inning by Burley to end the wind-blown affair early.

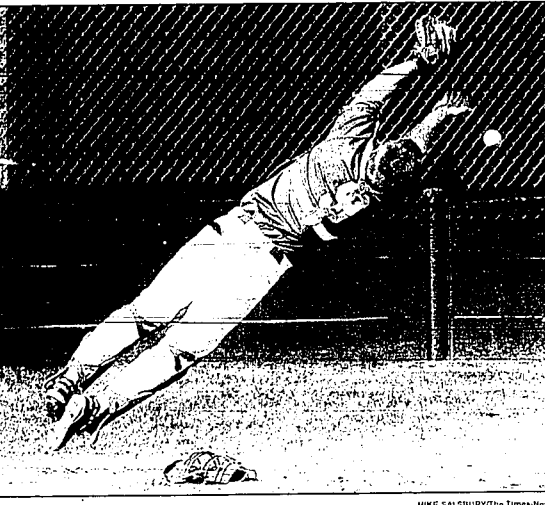

"We showed some intensity at times," said Minico Coach Russ Wright, "but when we went ahead (9-0 in the fourth) I felt we started playing a little lackadaisically. But I was pleased when we answered back (with the five-run fifth inning)."

The Spartans opened up two easy runs in the first and another in the second to lead throughout the day. In the first, a throw, two walks and a hit batted in plus Jeff Swenson's base hit accounted for the two runs.

In the third, Todd Seamons doubled and scored while Jeff Swenson was grounding out.

Minico pounded Burley's pitching in the fourth as Swenson, Brad Mautsen and Matt Adams had doubles and Seamons, Brandon Wilcox and Nick Benavidez clipped in with singles.

But Burley stopped the rally, a run short of the rule limit and then put on a determined bid to extend the game.

Consecutive singles by Mike Ramsey and Scott Brinkerhoff started it and then on alternate at-bats, Burley had three singles and two walks to push the inning's total to four.

Minico's clinching effort started with Stake's single and Swenson followed with a tying and winning triple that defied the wind and stayed in the park.

Wilcox plated the second run with a single before Mautsen lived on a dropped strike.

An error kept Stroschein alive and the final runs scored on a wild pitch and passed ball.

"It was the second win in two days for the Spartans, who rallied to beat Pocatello 7-0 in a Region III contest Tuesday. And Wright was happy to have touring triple that defied the wind to get a little more pitching experience."

"Because of all the rainouts, our one-two pitchers have been handling most of the work," he said.

Mariners squander 7-run lead, come back to defeat Toronto in 10 innings

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Rich Amaral singled home the go-ahead run in the 10th inning and the Seattle Mariners, after blowing a run lead, beat the Toronto Blue Jays 10-9 Wednesday night.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit an RBI single in the sixth that put Seattle ahead 7-0. An error by first baseman John Olerud on Omar Vizquel's grounder allowed two runs to score in seventh, giving the Mariners a 9-3 lead.

Pat Hentgen (0-1) issued consecutive one-out walks in the 10th, including Tino Martinez, before Olerud tied the game before Jay Buhner hit a grounder that could have been an inning-ending double play. But shortstop Dick Schofield's relay to pulled Olerud off the bag, bringing up Amaral.

Amaral lined a 2-0 pitch off reliever Mike Timlin to score pinch-runner Henry Cotto with the go-ahead run.

Rich DeLucia (1-0) won despite giving up two runs on three hits in 2-3 innings. Norm Charlton pitched the 10th for his first American League save.

Paul Molitor's three-run homer capped Toronto's five-run seventh inning, bringing the Blue Jays within 9-8. Schofield and Roberto Alomar had RBI singles off Dwayne Henry and Molitor connected against DeLucia.

The Blue Jays made it 9-11 in the eighth on Ed Sprague's run-scoring single.

Seattle roughed up Juan Guzman, scoring once in the first inning and four more in the fourth. Guzman lasted only 3-1-3 innings and gave up seven hits, including Jay Buhner's two-run single.

Erik Hanson, who pitched six shutout innings in his first start against Baltimore last Friday, did not allow a run until the sixth. Hanson hit Joe Carter in the helmet with a curveball with the bases loaded and Olerud followed with a two-run single.

Indianapolis Speedway will open doors to NASCAR race

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Motor Speedway broke a tradition almost as old as the automobile age Wednesday, announcing a NASCAR stock car race after eight decades dedicated solely to the Indianapolis 500.

"There will be a NASCAR Winston Cup event here at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway" on Aug. 6, 1994, said Speedway president Tony George.

The 400-mile, 160-lap "Brickyard 400," bows to the tradition of the once all-brick track's nickname.

"This is a great milestone in Winston Cup and NASCAR history," said NASCAR president Bill France Jr., who negotiated the deal with George.

The deal seemed almost certain last June when the Speedway invited nine top NASCAR drivers to a tire test and opened the workout to the public, drawing more than 30,000 non-paying fans.

At the time, France and George, unlike their families' earlier generations, talked cordially — if cautiously — about uniting the Speedway and NASCAR.

"It was just a matter of time while they worked on it," said Dale Earnhardt, who attended the announcement with Darrell Waltrip and Bill Elliott.

The drivers, eyeing a reported $2.5 million purse, live TV and horde of new fans, let the clutch out on their enthusiasm.

"This is an exciting time for us as race car drivers and for our sport," Waltrip said.

"We're ready to come back," said Elliott, who topped the 1992 field with a 168 mph lap.

George refused to confirm the purse figure reported by The Indianapolis Star, saying that and other details would be released later.

College shot clock now 35 seconds

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Although chopping 10 seconds off the 45-second shot clock seems certain, college basketball will not be able to work to the advantage of the superior defensive team.

"I think it strikes a good balance in the last minutes of the game," said Southern California coach George Raveling, a member of the NCAA committee that voted Wednesday to take the clock to 35 seconds. "If the shot clock's sitting at 15 seconds, I'd be foolish to get the ball back in 15 seconds anyway."

"Now there's a greater incentive for the defensive team to play good defense, because you have a better opportunity to get the ball back."

Region 4 wildlife fend off tough winter

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

'It appears our losses were pretty light considering we came into the winter with the driest range conditions of the past six years.'

— Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager

B-ROME Region 4's big game herds may have come through the winter remarkably well despite some harsh conditions.

That's the opinion of Wildlife Manager Craig Kvale after winding up all the feeding programs and sites.

"It appears our losses were pretty light," Kvale said, "considering we came into the winter with the driest range conditions of the past six years. We also had a tougher winter in the valley than usual. But even with all that, it seems mortality was surprisingly light."

Those results come despite the obvious point that the region had probably as many deer, antelope and elk to maintain as it has had in many years.

"We fed about 1,000 elk on the (House River) South Fork and that's the highest number in the 13 years I've been here," Kvale said. "The previous high was about 700."

"It probably was due to a combination of more elk coming in during a harsher winter than during the past six mild ones. We also suspect that a good number of the South (Mountain) elk dropped over the divide into the South Fork side. That would account for the increased 300 head that we fed."

But the best news of all that is perhaps the six mild winters broke the habit the Soldier Mountain elk appeared to have developed of coming down onto the flat lands of the high prairie where they became a probably for private landowners and forced emergency feeding by the department.

The old cows usually at the leaders in the winter-summer migrations and perhaps the six mild winters in which they weren't forced onto the flats caused the cows to loose that memory.

In any case, Kvale said only two bunches — 20 in one and about 40 in another — were actually seen on private property. The bait stations and new, higher feed sites on Willow Creek held a group of about 150 elk away from the flatlands.

"In any case, we didn't have to feed on the Camas prairie and we're very pleased about that," Kvale said.

Even with the record numbers counted on the feed sites, ground and aerial counts turned up a surprisingly large number of elk that stay up on the hillsides and never come to the bottoms. These included several groups of cows and calves, which is surprising. Usually, only the mature bulls stay away from the free lunch.

Kvale said the department's permanent feeding site at Bullwacker attracted about 130 head — perhaps 30 over the 10-year norm.

The department never had to open the Snowwhite feed feeding site — a major blessing, which also might indicate the deer have forgotten their historic migration route into Black Pine that was intersected by the interstate highway.

The department did have to invoke an emergency call along Silver Creek where about 600 deer didn't get into the Pieabo Hills and beyond onto the desert. About 120 antelope got special feeding near Acaquia.

"Right now we still have a few bait stations out but they are designed more to keep deer away from highways," Kvale said.

He noted the department — getting seriously close to antler drop — is still trying to put together some winter censusing. Results were excellent in the Little Wood River with over 1,000 deer counted.

Those numbers will be incorporated into a computer model on a "sustainability" which should turn up a very solid population there.

F&G: Good bang for the buck

Today is tax day. The day when we each "contribute" to the funding of our federal government. But at least we are getting our money's worth, right?

The evening news informed me that taxpayers really have a good deal going since 49 cents of every tax dollar is returned to the citizens. Too many investors like that I could not afford.

But do not despair for there are a few values to be found in government and one is our own Department of Fish and Game.

David Hocklander
Hunting

Though not perfect since even wise men can not agree on what is right and not without failures since nature hides many truths, Idaho's Department of Fish and Game is giving us a good bang for our buck.

But what is it about this government department that makes it different from other government bureaucracies? Consider the following points.

The Department of Fish and Game was created by an initiative act. It was a mandate by the people to serve the people of Idaho by providing effective wildlife management. Today the department's leadership still adheres to this mandate. Service is the key word here.

Money is the driving factor in all of government. Those who pay the fiddler get to name the dance. Unique to the Department of Fish and Game is the fact that none of the department's money comes from the state general fund, only from the constitutions it serves, in the form of licenses and excise taxes.

This financial arrangement allows the sportsmen to determine the amount of services they want by the fees they are willing to pay. The purse strings are controlled by the sportsmen.

This direct and relatively simple financial structure of the department makes it easier for the sportsmen to monitor and track the operation of the department. Unlike the federal budget, constituents can identify where most of the money is going.

Current leadership is another factor which makes the present department sensitive to the wishes of the sportsmen. In recent years we have been fortunate to have a governor and director whose basic values and interests closely mirror those of most of Idaho's sportsmen.

Director Conley is interested in the opinions and concerns of those the department serves. He recently attended a meeting of the Region 4 Idaho Wildlife Council giving all who took time to attend an opportunity to discuss with the director any aspect of department policy.

Grassroots involvement in the running of the Department of Fish and Game has been encouraged through the organization of the Idaho Wildlife Council. This council, made up of representatives of various outdoor interest groups, conservationists, farmers, and ranchers, has been asked to provide critical input to the governor, the director, and the Fish and Game commission.

During the selection of a new commissioner for our region the Region 4 Wildlife Council was asked to nominate a candidate for that post. Council members participated in that selection which resulted in the appointment of that nominee, Dr. Wes Rose, to the commission.

That is a fair amount of grassroots clout. A problem with many government bureaucracies is that their employees do not always have a vested interest in the service provided. Most employees of the Department of Fish and Game from the Governor down to our local conservation officers like to hunt and fish like you and I. So they understand what our common goal is.

They have a vested interest in doing their job well.

I do not submit that the department is beyond reproach, but at this time of the year when I feel like a very small pawn in an incomprehensible federal power struggle, it is nice to remember that there is a department of government that is willing to listen to me: the department which puts service to the constituents above its own self-importance and political agenda.

And I can do not agree with all that the department has been doing. I do submit that there is ample opportunity for you to participate in bringing about change in this government department.

No ordinary king of the hill Snowmobiler, fans go for 'blood and guts' during competition

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - Riding snowmobiles in the professional hill-climbing circuit is a kamikaze sport for Larry Stephens of Gooding.

Despite wearing a full face helmet, shin guards, chest protection and tall leather boots, he has gone to the hospital twice this year after accidents in hill climbing contests.

"That's what the spectators go for, blood and guts," said Stephens, who broke a rib in February and, last week, ended, flipped over backward and crushed his helmet into his face. "They like guys like me doing wild, crazy stuff, kind of like a bullfighter or a rodeo clown."

Because of the high level of excitement for both riders and those who watch — even spectators are often injured — this wild sport is getting bigger every year, he said. By comparison, Stephens said, drag racing on snow machines is a sport for grandmothers.

Hill climbing is as exciting as stock car racing, he said, explaining, "Gashes bring the crowds to life. They whistle and scream as body parts go flying by. They love action... it's not for the meek."

In 11 classes for small stock sleds up to super machines with unlimited modifications, racers from half a dozen states and Canada compete for cash prizes in nine major races in the northwest. This year, the first hill climb in Idaho was held in Preston in January.

"Idaho is really coming alive in the snowmobile world," Stephens said.

At Preston, the Gooding man was ahead until he lost control and "blew off the course," he recalled.

In another race in Afon, Wyo., Stephens was edged out of the money by a mere eight inches.

His best race was in Pinedale, Wyo., where he competed in a field of 204 other riders and won "King of the Hill" to pocket prize money of $600.

Stephens usually enters each event in at least two classes and uses two sleds. One is a small modified stock machine and the other is a powerful climber that runs on high octane racing fuel ($6.50 per gallon). Two-inch paddles and two-inch titanium cleats dig in for added traction.

Each course is different. Some are a direct climb almost straight up, Stephens said. If no one makes it to the top, the highest climber wins. If two or more make it over, then the fastest time wins. If the site does not have a suitable hill, tough obstacle courses are set up over piles of plowed snow or cross-country through the roughest terrain available.

Most races are three-day events and require entry at least a few days in advance. Entry fees range from $50 to $150 per class with limited entries and many competitors often turned away. The top 10 qualifiers in each class compete for paychecks on the third day.

Larry Stephens doesn't let the dangers of snowmobile hill climbing keep him from racing.

Last weekend at the World Championships in Jackson Hole, Wyo., Stephens was one of 325 climbers. He blew out an engine on one sled and lost control of the other, rolling down the hill as did about 25 other climbers.

Although this was his rookie year on the pro circuit, Stephens, 39, has been riding snow machines hard for about 10 years.

"I just about took my left leg clear off," he said, recalling his worst injury in 1984 when he passed too close to a stump in a non-competitive jaunt.

But Stephen's love for riding snow machines has grown over the years and he has found that the national contests offer his only competition.

"You can be top dog around here, but over there, you're just one of the boys," he said. "It's stiff competition. These guys are the best there are anywhere. But I put pressure on them. If they don't ride, I'm going to get them."

Black-footed ferrets could be protected in Utah

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Federal and state wildlife officials hope to restore black-footed ferrets, an endangered species, to the Uinta Mountains of northeastern Utah.

"I hope nobody shoots me for saying this, but it looks to me like it won't interfere" with grazing and mining, said Jensen, rancher Dean Chew, a member of the multiple-use advisory board that has been looking into the ferret proposal.

"Hopefully, we will be able to address enough of the concerns so that the ferret could be reintroduced without taking precedence over these multiple uses."

The federal Endangered Species Act makes it a crime to kill protected animals or damage their habitat.

However, the law has a little-known provision that allows pilot projects that take into account accidents likely to happen when rare animals are introduced to inhabited areas.

For instance, a rancher who inadvertently drives over a black-footed ferret would not be prosecuted under the species law. But he would be prosecuted for shooting one for sport.

If current ferret plans are approved, it would be the first time this provision is used in Utah.

The disappearance of black-footed ferrets across the western Great Plains was blamed on ranchers.

They routinely killed prairie dogs, which provided food and lodging for ferrets.

The only known colony was nearly wiped out by distemper in the early 1980s.

Wildlife officials trapped 18 ferrets and started a captive breeding program that restored their numbers in the Shirley Basin of southeastern Wyoming, and they had two litters this spring.

Some of the 500 captive-bred ferrets likely will be among those released in eastern Utah's Coyote Basin, once the program gets underway.

Montana is expecting to host a new ferret community next year.

Habitat destruction would threaten birds, 1918 treaty

The Associated Press

Seventy-five years ago, Congress passed what many hunters and conservationists consider the most significant wildlife-protection law in the country's history.

The Migratory Bird Treaty Act of 1918 was signed at a time when people still ate robins for lunch.

For 75 years, it has protected the 330 species of songbirds and game birds that migrate across North America each year from wholesale slaughter for food and feathers.

The Migratory Bird Treaty Act marked a turning point in how America viewed wildlife resources, said U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Director John Turner. "We changed from treating migratory birds as a resource to be exploited to treating them as a limited and valuable resource worthy of conservation and management."

The law "also paved the way for the scientific management of migratory bird populations across national borders (and) expansion of the National Wildlife Refuge System," Turner said. Now the biggest threat to those birds is not market hunters, but habitat destruction. To point that out, the wildlife service and other organizations are sponsoring Migratory Bird Day, with the inaugural observation scheduled for May 8.

Groups throughout the Western Hemisphere will take part in activities dedicated to conservation of all migratory birds, songbirds, raptors and waterfowl.

Populations of forest-dwelling migratory birds in eastern North America declined at an annual rate of 1 percent-3 percent from 1978 through 1987, primarily because of fragmentation of their habitat.

Habitat protection was not addressed in the 1918 law, which implemented the Convention for the Protection of Migratory Birds, a treaty between the United States and Britain (for Canada). It was the first international treaty for the protection of birds.

It completely protected some species, such as songbirds, and allowed the Interior Department to set hunting seasons for other species, such as ducks and woodcock.

At a time when egrets were slaughtered for their feathers and millions of ducks and geese were killed and sold to restaurants, there was strong opposition to any law giving the federal government control of any wildlife.

In 1920 the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the law, and wildlife management in the United States was changed forever.

"But for the treaty and the statute there soon might be no birds for any powers to deal with," Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote in the decision.

Since then, similar treaties have been signed with Mexico, Japan and the Soviet Union.

The law mandated massive research programs, allowing hunting seasons of game birds only after consideration has been given to the "distribution, abundance, economic value, breeding habits, and times and lines of migratory flight of such birds."

America's rivers hold key to salmon survival

MAPLETON, Ore. (AP) — Charlie Dewberry used to hate to come to Knowles Creek.

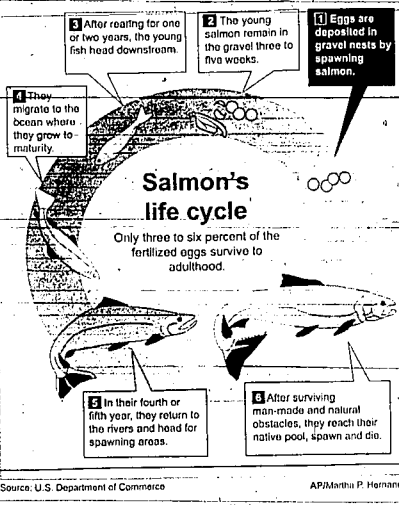

A century of Paul Bunyan-style logging had practically wiped out the salmon and steelhead that had survived for 10,000 years.

Now Dewberry is all smiles as he shows off the way he has played Mother Nature, tossing huge logs and root wads in the water to create pools, capture floating leaves and twigs, and restore the web of life in this Coast Range tributary of the Siuslaw River.

"You want it to get messy like this," said Dewberry, stream ecologist for the Pacific Rivers Council, an environmental group dedicated to restoring the dwindling salmon runs of the Northwest. "You want it complex with stuff sticking out all over the place."

Last year, the Pacific Fishery Management Council shut off commercial salmon fishing on 500 miles of Oregon and California coastline because of drastic declines in fish runs. The outlook for this year isn't much better as the council prepares to meet in Portland April 6-9 to set this year's seasons.

But the future of coho, chinook and steelhead runs depends on what is happening in little creeks like this. Salmon, steelhead and cutthroat trout are known as anadromous fish. That means they are born and start growing up in freshwater, migrate to the ocean to mature, then return to their native streams to spawn.

In recent years, natural cycles have made life tough on salmon in the ocean. Meanwhile, freshwater habitat has been severely hurt by dams, heavy logging, agriculture, drought, urban development and pollution.

Since there is nothing anyone can do to change the cycles of the ocean, the people fighting for the survival of salmon in the Northwest are focusing on getting back to nature in the forests where salmon cycle between

The Siuslaw River once produced enough salmon to keep three canneries busy in Florence. Scientists estimate the annual run at 218,000 fish in the 1890s. That's nearly as much as the entire commercial catch from the Columbia River to Mexico last year. Knowles Creek contributes about 120 adult fish.

The American Fisheries Society has identified 214 runs of salmon, steelhead and cutthroat trout in the West that are in danger of extinction.

"The most pervasive factor causing these declines is habitat damage caused by human activities," said Willa Nelson, lead author of the report.

Over the past 100 years, Knowles Creek has seen everything that can happen to a stream. Before the turn of the century, loggers floated timber to the mills by building splash dams. When the dams were dynamited, the torrent of logs and water scoured the life out of the creek.

During the 1960s and 1970s, the U.S. Forest Service and Oregon Department of Forestry ordered loggers to yard out the logs that fell into the water under the misguided notion that logjams were roadblocks to spawning fish.

Under the Oregon Forest Practices Act, logging has been allowed to occur within several yards of the river's bank, leaving upslope soils prone to erosion and removing trees that would otherwise fall into the creek to make new logjams.

Knowles Creek flows through lands managed by the Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management and The Campbell Group, a private timberland manager. They have joined in partnership with Pacific Rivers Council to restore the creek at a time when such parties are often in conflict.

"We are going to be as environmentally aware as we can," said John Rollin, southwest Oregon manager for The Campbell Group. "We think the only way these (environmental) issues are going to be resolved is through partnership."

The idea of restoring fish habitat is not new, but efforts in the past 10 years have failed more often than not, said Jack Williams, former head of fisheries for the BLM and now science adviser to the agency's director.

Neatly milled logs and square wire cages filled with rocks were tied into creekbeds with cables, making them look more like Japanese gardens than salmon streams. Storms washed them out. Unable to float up with the rising water, they couldn't trap the leaves and twigs vital to the food web.

Dewberry has gone back to the journals of Hudson's Bay Co. trappers to learn what Mother Nature wants salmon streams to look like. The MacLeod party in 1826 turned back on the Siuslaw after hitting a barrier that stretched clear across the valley and more than a mile upstream.

"The channels used to be very complex and braided," Dewberry said. "The organic material that was stored in flood plains, ponds and pools wouldn't go very far. Once the logjams are removed, the stream forms one channel that downslopes to bedrock."

The leaves, twigs and carcasses of spawned out salmon are part of the food web. Without logjams, they wash out to sea with the first storms of fall. The rising waters from melting snows in spring wash out the young fry before they are ready.

On a larger scale, the Pacific Rivers Council is proposing a comprehensive program of protecting the best remaining freshwater habitat in the Northwest and restoring key watersheds that need help.

Last Week, Pacific Rivers director Bob Doppelt joined Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt for a box-lunch on a bridge over a creek flowing out of the Cascade Range.

Competing with the roar of rushing water, Doppelt made a plea for Congress to appropriate $30 million for initial work to assess the state of watersheds on public lands and start a few restoration projects sitting on the shelf in Forest Service offices.

Over the next 10 years, he figures it will take $644 million to finish the job.

"If we don't do it here, it will not happen," Doppelt said.

Northern spotted owl facts

- Owls need old growth forests because they dwell in mid-forest, safe from hawks and other predatory birds who inhabit the sky above, and animals who would eat them.
- The owls are small and live in pairs, male and female. They eat rodents.
- They are found predominantly in national forests in Oregon, Washington and California.

Judge: What's holding up owl management plan?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has given the Forest Service until next week to explain why it cannot come up with a plan to protect the northern spotted owl by this summer, some three years after the bird was declared a threatened species.

Critical of the agency's "long history of delays," U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer of Seattle also ordered the Forest Service on Monday to produce documents that environmentalists say will show the government isn't trying very hard to meet the August deadline.

"The Forest Service today is no closer to complying with the law than it was seven months or even seven years ago," said Todd True, an attorney for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund representing the Seattle Audubon Society.

"The court should not allow the Forest Service to hold the ancient forests and communities of the Northwest hostage while the agency delays inevitable decisions, even if it does not want to make them," he said.

Dwyer issued an injunction in May 1991 banning logging across millions of acres of Northwest national forests until the Forest Service comes up with a legal plan to protect the owl and other old-growth species.

The Forest Service told Dwyer of its progress last month, submitting a scientific report that shows logging cutbacks beyond those tied to the owl are necessary to meet environmental laws guarding other fish and wildlife in the region, including the threatened marbled murrelet.

But agency officials also said they probably would miss Dwyer's Aug. 22 deadline for the formal management plan.

They originally planned to be done in February but said they may need more time to complete the plan. In the form of an environmental impact statement — as President Clinton tries to devise a unified forest management policy throughout his administration.

A spokesman for the Forest Service said the agency had no immediate comment Tuesday on Dwyer's latest ruling. The agency's lawyers said they could not comment on whether they would ask next week for an extension on the plan.

Wells Burgess and Stephen Odell, attorneys for the Justice Department's environmental and natural resources division, said in court briefs on March 22 that litigation is doing its best to come up with an owl management plan as quickly as possible.

"The new administration takes seriously the concerns of this court that forest management comply with all applicable laws, and that the injunction against timber harvesting be lifted as promptly as possible to alleviate the social and economic hardship caused by it," they wrote.

President Clinton held a Northwest forest conference in Portland, Ore., on April 2 and directed his Cabinet to come back with a comprehensive plan to protect the centuries-old forests within 60 days.

In addition to the pending environmental impact statement, the Interior Department is developing a recovery plan to rebuild the population of the estimated 3,500 pairs of northern spotted owls in Oregon, Washington and northern California.

Dwyer ruled on Monday that any request for an extension on the EIS must be made by April 22.

The Forest Service's statement that it cannot comply with the injunction on time is of special concern in light of the agency's long history of delays," he wrote.

Dwyer has been one of the agency's sharpest critics since the Fish and Wildlife Service declared the owl a threatened species in June 1990.

In his 1991 ruling, he cited "a remarkable series of violations of environmental laws" that have pushed the owl closer to the brink of extinction, including "a deliberate and systematic refusal by the Forest Service and the Fish and Wildlife Service to comply with the laws protecting wildlife."

Hunting black rhino could help the species

ATLANTA (AP) — The only way to save the black rhino is to hunt it — with dart guns — according to the Safari Club International.

Although the black rhino has had international protection, its numbers have diminished from 80,000 when first protected to 2,000 today. The Congress on International Trade in Endangered Species says protection has failed the black rhino, said John Jackson III, chairman of SCI's Renewable Wildlife Resources Committee.

"Protectionism has driven it to the brink of extinction," he said.

It is being slaughtered by poachers seeking its horn. The black rhino is making its final stand in Zimbabwe, which has asked SCI to help protect it, Jackson said during the 19,000-member hunting and conservation group's East Coast Convention.

To the south, its cousin, the white rhino, is in much better shape.

"The white rhino was saved by sport hunting in South Africa," Jackson said.

"If the preservationist-conservation world would let the sustainable use conservation world do its job, which we have done so well with other species, we will save the black rhino," promised Don J. Kim, SCI president.

"Wildlife will only survive if there's a value to the hunter-user and to those on whose land the wildlife lives," Kim said.

Sport hunting of the black rhino would start with dart guns loaded with knockout drugs. The hunter's trophy would be the horn. The rhino would be released alive.

That would give the rhino value to the sport hunter, value to the local people, value to the government and take away its value to the poacher, Jackson said.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service must approve the idea for American hunters to be part of it.

Since the black rhino is listed under the Endangered Species Act, the service must grant a permit for each rhino horn brought into the country.

So far the service has not granted such permits, Jackson said.

"Unlike the white rhino, a creature of the open plains, the black rhino stays mostly in thick brush," Jackson said.

There would be no scenes of hunters chasing rhinos in trucks.

"You'd probably have to crawl in on your belly" through the brush, he said.

For that privilege, the hunter would pay about $15,000, including license and trophy fees to the government, and room, board and guide fees to the local outfitter.

In five years, the rhino would grow the horn back and be huntable again, meaning a live animal could have a value of $45,000 or $60,000 over its expected 30-year life, far more than it would have had by the hand of a poacher, Jackson said.

Eventually, old, highly territorial bulls could be hunted with guns, adding perhaps another $30,000 to an animal's economic value, Jackson said.

Hey, any angler worth his salt can fish in Florida

Knight-Ridder News Service

FLAMINGO, Fla. — A lot of freshwater anglers who visit Florida don't bring tackle because they don't know anything about saltwater fishing.

That's a mistake. Anyone can catch lots of species with the most rudimentary techniques and tackle, and skilled freshwater anglers will figure out quickly how and where to fish.

Dave Walters, a Miami Herald photographer and longtime fishing buddy, had to become much of a fishing lately, with two small children taking up a lot of his time. It wasn't hard to persuade him to blow the cobwebs off his flats boat and launch it at this tiny community at the southern tip of Florida.

Flamingo is in Everglades National Park, and our plan was to locate snook in the back country of Whitewater Bay near the mouth of the Shark River. This area is a maze of saltwater creeks and bays, but it is so well-marked with navigation aids, virtually anyone can launch his own boat or rent a small skiff and find his way around with a navigation chart.

There are as many lures available for saltwater fishing as for freshwater, but the novice should equip himself with a handful of quarter-ounce white jigs (preferably bucktails) and shrimp. Live shrimp make the best bait, but even frozen shrimp work well for sweetening a jig.

Something I wanted to try was European-style floats in saltwater. I tried a half-dozen of the Thill floats I sold in Michigan tackle shops, and they worked as well as in freshwater.

We couldn't locate snook, so we decided to run out the mouth of the Shark to Northwest Cape and drift the grass flats for spotted sea trout, a member of the weakfish family that is as tasty as it is pretty.

While Walters threw various plugs, I put frozen shrimp on a hook under various Thill bobbers and caught seven species over the next couple of hours: sea trout, lizardfish, pinfish, ladyfish, Spanish mackerel, jacks and even a remora, or shark sucker.

The following day I used the same tackle — European floats on a 6-foot spinning rod and 6-pound line — in Florida Bay to catch sea trout, redfish (channel bass), lookdowns, a baby tarpon (about 10 pounds), a 2-foot bonnethead shark and a 6-pound snook.

Steelhead season was worth $10 million, survey shows

BOISE (AP) — A Fish and Game Department survey indicates the 1992 fall steelhead season was worth at least $10 million to the Idaho economy.

Anglers bought more than 45,000 steelhead tags last season. Final harvest results indicate about 83,000 steelhead were caught. Of those fish, about 10,000 were kept, 26,000 wild fish and 27,000 hatchery steelhead were released.

State law requires all wild steelhead to be released unharmed.

Hatchery fish can be kept, but many fishermen reported releasing them.

A survey of anglers showed that about 60,280 steelhead fishing trips were made for a total of about 151,000 fishing days.

Each trip cost an average of $170. Transportation cost about $62, the anglers spent more than $40 on food and nearly $25 went for fishing tackle.
