Clinton challenges Japanese to open markets to U.S. goods

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Clinton laid down a blunt challenge to Japanese leaders to "rebalance" its economic relations with the United States by opening the Japanese market to more American goods.

Pressure on Japan? - A5

With Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa by his side after four hours of discussions, Clinton called for "a change in the direction of our relationship... with the view toward getting results" in increased U.S. exports to Japan. The two leaders agreed that by July they should establish a negotiating framework for resolving problems in specific industries.

Despite the accord on holding new talks, however, the two countries appeared to have very different views on how to proceed.

U.S. officials said Clinton will insist on establishing specific goals and yardsticks for measuring increased U.S. sales of some major products in Japan.

By contrast, a senior Japanese official said his government will make clear at the outset of the coming talks its rejection of targets or other quantitative indicators to measure success in trade shifts with the United States.

Given Clinton's unusually strong statements that U.S.-Japan economic relations must change and Japan's reluctance to set specific goals or targets, the stage appeared to be set for confrontation in the months ahead between the world's two largest economic powers. Administration officials were not specific about how they intend to measure success in the forthcoming trade negotiations with Japan, saying there are a variety of ways to do that.

Clinton cited approvingly the U.S.-Japan semiconductor agreement in which, in Washington's view, Japan agreed to a 20 percent foreign share of its market, and an agreement by Japanese companies last year to buy $19 billion in U.S. auto parts annually by 1994. But U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor said such agreements are not the only possible approach.

"There are other ways to measure success," he said, without elaborating. If the

Twin Falls infant born without cells that fight disease

By Suzanne Huxbold
Times-News correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO — Tiny Brittany Jones may not quite weigh six pounds yet, but she's already caused quite a stir in hospitals and doctor's offices in three states, capturing hearts and medical miracles along the way.

"She's a cute, healthy, growing little girl," said Dr. Paul Miles, Brittany's Twin Falls pediatrician. "She should have a long, healthy life."

She will, if medical science and her devoted family have anything to say about it. Brittany was born two months ago with an extremely rare form of Severe Combined Immune-Deficiency Syndrome, or SCIDS.

A genetic condition in which a child is born without enough T-cells or B-cells, the roaming warriors of the immune system that fight off infection and disease, SCIDS affects just one child in 500,000 in the United States every year.

Brittany is afflicted with a uncommon strain of SCIDS called Reticular Dysgenesis, also known as RD.

"What makes her case special is that there have been only four reported cases

The Joneses were unable to get a room at San Francisco's 10-bed Ronald McDonald House, for extremely ill children and Brittany's father has been out of work for months, tending to his daughter.

The family hopes to set up a local fund to defray some of those costs. Arrangements have not yet been made.

Clinton steps up talk of strikes at Serbian targets

Los Angeles Times

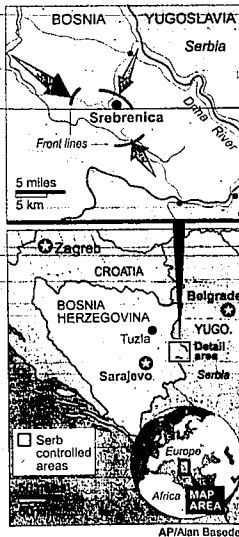

WASHINGTON — Clinton administration officials, expressing alarm at the imminent fall of the Bosnian stronghold of Srebrenica, renewed talk Friday of air strikes against Serbian artillery emplacements and began a flurry of diplomatic consultations aimed at tightening sanctions against the Serbs and rallying international support for possible military strikes.

As Serbian-backed forces closed in on one of Bosnia's last Muslim enclaves, President Clinton, in some of his toughest talk since assuming office, said "the time has come" for the United States and its European allies to reassess the effectiveness of the measures they have taken so far and to consider new steps to halt the advance of Serbian troops against Bosnia's Muslim strongholds.

Clinton pointedly added that he "would not rule out any option" for dealing with the Serbs, except the introduction of American ground troops — a step that he has consistently refused to take.

"We have to consider things that at least previously have been unacceptable," Clinton said during a joint news conference with Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa. Clinton met with Miyazawa to discuss trade and U.S.-Japanese relations.

Woman responds to plea of rapist: 'Die, then'

The Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. — The Mississippi Supreme Court upheld a 25-year prison sentence for a would-be rapist whose victim grabbed his groin and wouldn't let go.

"He said, 'Please, please, you're killing me.' I said, 'Die, then,'" the victim testified in the trial of 29-year-old Dwight Coverson.

The court rejected Coverson's grounds for appeal, which focused on challenges to certain jurors and whether the jury should have heard his confession.

The court's opinion included some of the woman's graphic testimony during the trial three years ago.

"She said she was in bed the night of Feb. 3, 1990, when she heard someone walk into the room.

The intruder sat on top of her, threatening and cursing as she begged him not to harm her.

When he took off his clothes, the woman, who is in her 50s, realized he wasn't armed. She grabbed his genitals with both hands, twisted and lung on as he hit her and bit her.

"He said, 'Woman, you got me suffering.' I said, 'Have you thought about how you were going to leave me suffering?'"

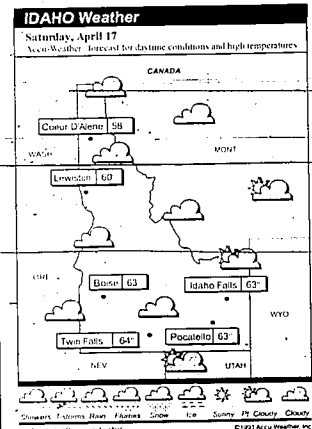

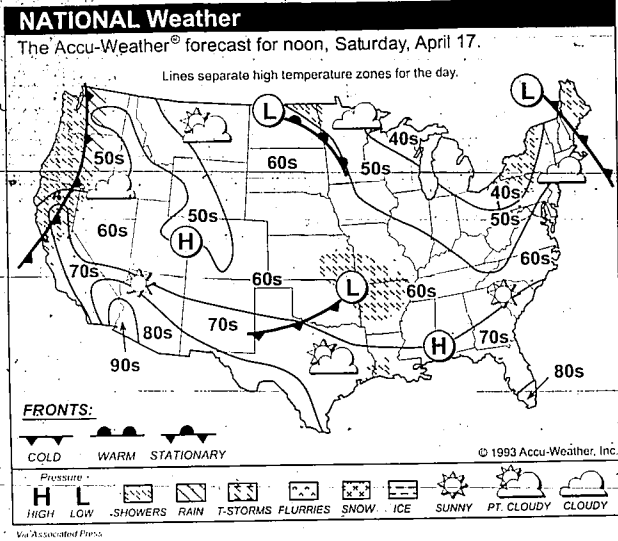

He tried to get her to call police, but she refused and, still holding on, got him to her porch, where he fell down. "That gave her time to go back into the house and get a pistol. She fired two shots as he ran away, but she missed.

Sheriff's deputies found Coverson's name written inside a pair of pants he left in the woman's bedroom. They found Coverson at home, in bed, in severe pain.

"To say that my client regretted his actions is truly an understatement," defense attorney George Luter said. "He had no permanent damage, but he was definitely hurting for several days."

It took the jury seven minutes to convict him.

United States and Japan cannot agree on how to "measure success," the administration will apply its own benchmarks, a senior U.S. official said.

"The Cold War partnership between our two countries is Conceding that he and Miyazawa still have differences over elements of a new economic approach, Clinton declared, "Let's not paper this over

At the same time, Clinton expressed satisfaction with U.S.-Japan security ties and declared that "The United States intends to remain fully engaged in Asia." Clinton also praised Japan's role in aiding Russia.

Prisoners release hostage on TV as negotiators seek peaceful end

The Washington Post

LUCASVILLE, Ohio — An extraordinary, televised release of a hostage unfolded at a table on a grassy yard inside the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility here Friday as negotiators worked for a peaceful end to the six-day uprising by about 450 inmates.

The hostage, a 26-year-old prison guard who criticized the authorities' handling of the crisis, was the second captive to be released within 24 hours in return for inmate access to radio and television broadcasts to voice grievances.

The release followed a 10-minute address that was read from notes by an inmate who identified himself as Abdul Samad Mumin and stated more than a dozen demands by Muslim inmates and the general prison population, including that there be no reprisals for the uprising.

Prison officials identified the released hostage as James A. Demons, a guard here since 1990 and the only black among the eight guards captured by rioting inmates on Easter. The first hostage to be released, Darrold R. Clark, 23, was freed Thursday night following a 10-minute radio broadcast of demands and complaints by an inmate identified as George.

The inmates inside Cellblock L still hold five guards, whose condition is not known, and on Thursday they dumped into the prison exercise yard the body of the only hostage known to have been killed, Robert R. Vallandigham, 40. Prison officials have provided no information about Vallandigham's death, but the Columbus Dispatch, quoting unnamed sources, reported Friday that he had been hanged and had been dead for some time before his body was recovered in the exercise yard.

Hostage negotiators, left, a prison guard, second from right, and a prisoner, meet in the prison yard for a live television broadcast during which prisoners listed demands.

As low, menacing clouds hovered over the prison Friday and television cameras recorded the scene from outside a double chain-link fence, Mumin and Demons, both dressed in Muslim garb, walked across the grassy field just before 2 p.m., slowly approaching the table where two prison negotiators awaited them.

Mumin spoke first, but the most dramatic moment of the encounter came after he left the table to return to the cellblock, and Demons briefly addressed the live television audience throughout Ohio.

Referring to the seven inmates who had died during the uprising, Demons said black Muslim inmates did not kill the men, who included six whites killed in the initial rioting. "Those boys was killed because they was snitches," he said.

CIA Chief took secret Egypt trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director R. James Woolsey paid a secret visit to Egypt this week, meeting with President Hosni Mubarak to discuss the extent of Iranian support for militant Islam in the region, official sources said Friday.

Woolsey, who assumed office in February, was on an orientation tour of several Middle Eastern and European countries, including Israel and Italy, said one source who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

U.N. mission to Haiti fails

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — A U.N. mission to restore democracy to Haiti ended in failure Friday, with army chiefs rejecting a U.S.-backed plan.

"We proposed a definitive solution of the Haitian crisis. Unfortunately, we did not get a positive answer," U.N. envoy Danie Caputo, an Argentine diplomat, told reporters after his report at the end of four days of negotiations. "The situation is complicated, but with will and a cooperative spirit, a solution can be found," he said.

An army source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the military remained open to a slower-paced, negotiated solution.

The source said Caputo came to Haiti accompanied by American troops to cut air traffic to Haiti and mobilize 5,000 U.N. peacekeepers unless the army high command stepped down and let ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide return within 60 days.

are testing untried waters in Brittany's case every day. Jones said. She added she and her family are confident that Brittany will prove to be the exception to the rule.

Brittany was born Feb. 12 in Twin Falls by emergency Caesarean after an ultrasound showed that the baby, in its seventh month of gestation, had stopped growing and moving.

The 2-pound, 14 ounce girl seemed to be in trouble from the beginning.

"She appeared to have a virus," Jones said. "It looked to everyone that she'd been sick in-utero."

Despite the rocky start, Brittany showed her tenacity and slowly began to gain weight after birth. Then, when she was three weeks old, the SCIDS surfaced in the form of encephalitis in her navel.

"They rushed her to Salt Lake," Jones said. "That's where they found the SCIDS."

"Brittany immediately became a 'bubble baby.' She was placed inside a pure-air, germ-free plastic dome in a isolation room, where her parents and caregivers had to be gowned and masked to hold and feed the infant.

"It was very hard to give up nursing her," Jones said. "It's only been the last couple of days when I haven't started crying every time I think of everything that's happened."

When doctors at the Salt Lake City Children's Hospital discovered the Reticular Dysgenesis factor, they told Jones and her husband, Bobby, that their baby's only hope was at the University of San Francisco Medical Center.

Father Bobby Jones left his Twin Falls construction job, and the couple bundled up their 2 1/2 year-old son, Jake, and, with Brittany, they headed for the Golden Gate.

Brittany will take the first step on the arduous road to wellness Sunday when she begins four days of intensive chemotherapy to destroy cells that might reject newly-transplanted bone marrow cells.

Thursday morning, Bobby will undergo surgery to aspirate the portion of his bone marrow cells — containing those vital immune-adequate cells — that will be treated and injected into Brittany Thursday afternoon.

"It's a kind of like planting a garden," Miles said. "They'll take his immune system and plant it in her body. Quite a few people have benefited from this operation."

"It's never been done before on a baby like Brittany, but if it works, the doctors think she has a 70 percent chance of survival," Jones said.

Jones said the family, including Brittany's grandparents, long-time Twin Falls residents Robert and Arlene Jones, is still reeling from the changes in their lives since Brittany was born.

And she admitted that even after daddy and child are released from the hospital — Bobby in a few weeks, Brittany in about 3 months — times will be tough for years to come.

"We'll all have to be isolated for a period of time so that none of us can pass an infection to Brittany," Jones said. "The doctors have told us we'll have to be extremely careful about where Jake goes — day care or preschool — so that he doesn't catch chicken pox or other childhood diseases that could be passed to Brittany."

Still, Jones said everyone is hopeful. "She's beautiful. Very special. We're hoping for the best."

Analysts question economic strategy

Clinton Dole

The Washington Post and The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — To save his economic "stimulus" package in the Senate, President Clinton may be whitening it down so much that its passage will have little impact on the course of the economy, analysts said.

Clinton's proposals are under attack from Senate Republicans, who want to get his proposed investment tax credit and pare back the $16.3 billion spending package by about half.

Clinton Friday offered to jettison $4 billion from his $16.3 billion jobs bill in an effort to break a Republican logjam in the Senate and provide a "modest stimulus" to the economy.

"I make this recommendation reluctantly and regret the unwillingness of the minority to let the Senate act on the original legislation," Clinton said in a letter to Democratic Senate leaders. "But our mandate is to achieve change and to move our country forward and to end business as usual in Washington."

The offer drew an immediate re-based economic consultant Laurence H. Meyer, who advised the Clinton campaign last year.

The liberal Economic Policy Institute, which questioned the value of Clinton's original proposal, has concluded: "Should the stimulus be further compromised, the effect would be even more negligible."

Fearing that an ineffective measure labeled "stimulus" could dishearten higher-income earners, the institute urged Clinton to start the economy, the EPJ said. "We believe that it may be time to dump the stimulus in order to save it."

Clinton and his aides, however, show no signs of giving up on the idea.

"The stimulus, as small as it is, is good insurance," said Robert E. Rubin, the president's economic policy adviser. He said the administration was looking at more than a dozen ways of restructuring the package.

Cabinet members and White House congressional lobbyist Howard Pastor have been pressing a handful of Republicans this week to get the four votes needed to break the Republican filibuster that has blocked the bill when lawmakers return from recess next week.

One target, Sen. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, a moderate Republican who is his party's ranking member on the Senate Appropriation Committee, Hatfield often swerves from the Republican party line and supports key parts of the Clinton package, including the investment tax credit that will be part of a separate tax measure later in the year. This week, the administration released $1.5 billion in local government investments for community development. The money comes from the Community Development Block Grant program that Republicans want to take out of the stimulus package.

One-Republican strategist said he feared that Clinton would not really try to reach a compromise, figuring that the stimulus package was too small to make much difference to the economy and preferring to be able to blame the Republicans for poor economic performance.

New Vinton theater topples under wind

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — A music theater being built for singer Bobby Vinton collapsed Friday. No injuries were reported.

The theater, which was in the early stages of construction, apparently was toppled by wind. Fire Chief Ernie Haswell said.

"Apparently there was a strong gust of wind that came through and started a tumbling action that flattened all the steel structure," he said.

The 1,537-seat Bobby Vinton Blue Velvet Theatre was scheduled to open in July on the strip in this Ozarks tourist town, with Vinton performing two shows a day.

Archives displays Himmler speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — A stark reminder of the Holocaust — a speech by Nazi SS leader Heinrich Himmler that refers to "the extermination of the Jewish race" — went on display Friday at the National Archives.

The documents, including handwritten notes by Himmler, are among the best evidence that exists to rebut claims that the Holocaust is a myth, archives experts say.

"The notes give them their authenticity," said Robert Wolfe, a supervisory archivist for captured German records. "He was supposed to destroy them. Like a lot of bosses, he didn't obey his own rules."

The documents, moved out of Berlin to what Himmler hoped would be a safe hiding place, were recovered by Allied forces after World War II from a salt mine near Salzburg, Austria.

Himmler's speech on Oct. 4, 1943, in Posen, Poland, to more than 100 German secret-police generals makes it clear an American display case is the last place the Nazi leader would have expected to see his words reproduced.

"I so frankly to talk to you, quite frankly, on a very grave matter," Himmler said during a two-hour speech. "Among ourselves it should be mentioned quite frankly, and yet we will never speak of it publicly."

"I meant the clearing out of the Jew, the extermination of the Jewish race," he said. "This is a page of glory in our history which has never been written and is never to be written." Himmler, who oversaw Adolf Hitler's "final solution" of the Jewish question, "committed suicide" after his arrest by British troops in 1945.

The National Archives exhibit on display through May 16, is a small preview of the material available to the public beginning April 26 at the new United States Holocaust Memorial Museum here.

The museum has 36,000 square feet of exhibits, including oral histories, documentary film and photographs telling the story of the millions of Jews and other victims who died in Nazi concentration camps.

The National Archives exhibit has three items — a page each of Himmler's handwritten notes, a typed transcript from the speech and an official translation made for the Nuremberg war crimes trials.

For the thousands of daily visitors to the archives, the display is hard to miss. It is located in the Rotunda near the main entrance to the building, a few yards from the exhibit of the Constitution, Bill of Rights and Declaration of Independence.

The German word Himmler uses that is translated as "extermination" is "Ausrottung."

Wolfe, the archivist expert, said a more precise translation would be "extirpation" or "clearing up by the roots."

Himmler used a euphemism — "Judenverkuering," or "vacuolation of the Jews."

TV show puts Gore on hot seat during national call-in segment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Al Gore Friday said it was unlikely the country would adopt a national sales tax "in the near term" as he defended administration tax policies during a call-in session on national TV.

Gore, making an hour-long appearance on NBC's "Today" show, said that while a sales tax or value-added tax was one option being considered to finance health-care reform, "I've never been for that particular approach in the future."

"It's something that in the future may have to be considered but it's not something that's right on the president's desk," Gore said.

"I personally don't think it's likely to occur in the near term," he added.

Fielding questions from viewers around the country, Gore found himself on the hot seat over the administration's proposed energy tax increase and over its consideration of a sales tax or a tobacco tax increase to pay for health reforms.

"We elected you on tax relief for the middle class," a New Jersey woman told Gore. "All these taxes are on the middle income again. When are we ever going to get a break?"

Gore told her that many middle-income Americans already were benefiting from lower interest rates on mortgages and car loans and that the "overall health of the economy can improve when we reduce the budget deficit over time."

He added that the energy tax would be offset with other tax breaks for most families, making less than $30,000 a year.

"I really don't buy that," the woman replied. "I have to provide for my family or buy oil."

Gore insisted that upper-income Americans would bear most of the increased tax burden and that getting the economy moving and creating jobs would benefit all Americans.

"The way we do it has to be fair to people and President Clinton's plan definitely is," he said. "People in the middle-income and lower-middle-income groups are not burdened by this because of the offsetting features of it, including lower interest rates."

A caller from North Carolina told Gore that raising tobacco taxes, one option for financing health care reform, would hurt tobacco farmers.

Gore told her that even if the tax were increased, there "unfortunately" would still be a market for tobacco. He added that because of the health problems associated with smoking, "it does seem to make sense to talk about that option" for raising money.

The vice-president told the woman he had raised tobacco himself, saying, "I know what your life is like." Then he asked her if she wasn't uneasy about raising a crop that does so much harm.

"That's the way we make our living," the woman replied. "That's the major crop for North Carolina and it would just totally break our state."

Gore said the administration was "attuned" to such concerns and knew that there would have to be a transition period to ease the impact on farmers.

International smuggler sentenced to 13 months

MIAMI (AP) — An orangutan smuggler was sentenced Friday to 13 months in prison in a KGB-linked case that aroused the indignation of conservationists around the world.

In a last-minute twist, prosecutors refused to recommend a lighter sentence for Matthew Block, 31, questioning whether he had fully cooperated with the government as required by his plea bargain.

Britain's Prince Philip and chimpanzee expert Jane Goodall are among more than 1,000 people who have written the judge demanding tough treatment for Block.

U.S. District Judge James Keohoe also fined Block $30,000 on a felony count of conspiracy to violate the U.S. Endangered Species Act and an international treaty barring the trade of protected animals.

Experts believe fewer than 32,000 of the gentle, red-haired apes exist in the wilds of Borneo and Sumatra, and the estimates of the number of the endangered primates is keep shrinking.

"I hope this sentence will send a message to deter other smugglers and to protect endangered species around the world," said Cathy Liss of the Washington-based Animal Welfare Institute, who testified at the two-day hearing. "And I hope it will save the lives of some orangutans."

The case began when six baby orangutans were found stuffed in a crate at the Bangkok, Thailand, airport in February 1990 part way through a circuitous journey that was to end in Moscow.

Weather delays shuttle landing

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Discovery's astronauts swiftly resumed their scientific readings Friday when they were given extra time in orbit because of bad weather in morning at the shuttle's landing site.

After the landing was postponed for at least a day, the astronauts turned on their instruments again and began squeezing in more measurements of the sun's energy and the Earth's ozone layer. Before the bonus day was out, scientists planned to get more use out of nearly all the equipment that has been gathering data during the flight.

The space agency decided to try to bring the shuttle home to Cape Canaveral, Fla., on Saturday morning because of clouds, rain and wind in today's forecast.

Discovery's astronauts already had shut down the atmospheric experiments and tidied the shuttle for its return to Earth with a wealth of data on the withering ozone layer.

"It's really, probably OK with us if the weather is really bad and you want to leave us up here another day," astronaut Kenneth Cockrell assured Mission Control on Thursday.

Fishing boat capsizes, 2 missing, 1 dead

NEWPORT, Ore. (AP) — A charter fishing boat capsized when a large wave washed over its bow, throwing the 15 people on board into the frigid waters of the Pacific. One died and the search for two others was called off Friday.

The 42-foot Rain Song was heading into Yaquina Bay from a fishing trip Thursday afternoon when the accident occurred, state police said. "A wave hit us broadside and flipped us just before we got to the pier," said Irwin Ames, 63, of Salem. "I reached down and grabbed the rail and pulled myself over the side. I didn't know whether I was going to have enough air."

The Coast Guard rescued 12 people, including the two crew members: six from a life raft and six clinging to a life preserver. The boat, chartered through Sea Gull Charters in Newport, eventually washed up on the jetty rocks.

Thomas McMann, 34, of Eugene was pulled from the water by a Coast Guard helicopter and pronounced dead at a Newport hospital.

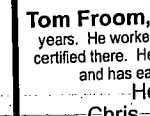

Monte L. Sahe, 39, of Eugene was flown to a Portland hospital, where he was listed in serious condition with head injuries and hypothermia.

Two others, including Ames, were hospitalized for observation, while the nine remaining passengers were treated for hypothermia and released. Ames estimated he and the others were in the water at least a half-hour before rescue. The Coast Guard resumed the search at dawn for the two missing men, but called it off later this morning.

Serbian ready to take town

The Washington Post
SARAJEVO, Bosnia — The east-Bosnian town of Srebrenica, packed with thousands of Muslim refugees, appeared ready Friday to negotiate its surrender to Bosnian Serb forces, and the United Nations announced it is sending in 150 Canadian peace-keeping troops "to assert a major humanitarian mission."
 An announcement by the French Foreign Ministry that Serb forces entered Srebrenica late Friday night could not be confirmed immediately. Bosnian officials in Sarajevo denied the report.

U.N. sources in Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, said an advance party of about 30 Canadians was expected to enter Srebrenica today with the agreement of Radovan Karadzic, leader of the Bosnian Serbs, and Slobodan Milosevic, president of neighboring Serbia and chief backer of the Serb forces in Bosnia.

U.S. officials were reported preparing for a possible massive evacuation of thousands of Muslim civilians from Srebrenica across mountain roads to Tuzla, a Bosnian government stronghold 40 miles to the northwest.

The fall of Srebrenica, one of three remaining Muslim-held enclaves in eastern Bosnia, would have major implications for international efforts to halt the year-long war that has killed at least 20,000 and perhaps more than 100,000 people in the former central Yugoslav republic. Bosnian Serb leaders have rejected a U.N.-brokered peace plan, signed last month by both the Muslim-led government in Sarajevo and Bosnian Croats, that would put the east Bosnian region under Muslim control as part of a division of the republic into 10 semi-autonomous provinces.

In Washington, President Clinton reacted to the day's developments by saying that the United States and its allies should consider intervening in ways that "previously have been unacceptable."

Bosnian Serb leader Karadzic told the British Broadcasting Corp. he was negotiating with U.N. commanders to have the town's lightly armed defenders "hand over weapons" to the U.N. troops. If that is done, he said, Bosnian Serb forces "will not enter Srebrenica," but only "pacify" the town.

Nonetheless, Bosnian Serb troops closed the noose tighter around Srebrenica, capturing a key hill from which snipers could fire at the town's center and reaching the lines of the town's Muslim defenders to the south, southeast and north, according to officials here.

Ibrahim Becirevic, Srebrenica's ham radio operator, reported at 3 p.m. that Serb gunners in the previous six hours had fired 100 to 150 mortar and artillery rounds at the town's center, preventing the population, swollen to at least 30,000 by refugees from surrounding Serb-held areas, from leaving cellar shelters to collect the 32.5 tons of food airdropped by U.S. planes overnight.

Bush visits U.S. troops in Kuwait

KUWAIT (AP) — After paying tribute to U.S. and Kuwaiti soldiers, George Bush got a royal sendoff Friday to cap a three-day visit in which he was lauded as a hero for his role in the Persian Gulf War.

Big signs along the former president's motorcade route read "Salam Alaikum, Ya Azeem" (Arabic for "Peace Be On You, Oh Great One.") The departure ceremony, like much of the visit, was televised live nationwide. "The visit has been a milestone in the history of Kuwait, about which we will keep telling our sons and our grandsons time after time," said the announcer on Kuwaiti television. "We await his next visit."

Bush's last stop before Kuwait's emir, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, saw him off at the airport where at camps of U.S. and Kuwaiti soldiers. Some 1,500 American troops are in Kuwait under a 10-year defense pact negotiated by the oil-rich emirate after the 1991 war.

Casually dressed in a white shirt and gray pants, Bush addressed the American soldiers from a stage covered with camouflage netting at their base in Doha, about 12 miles north of Kuwait.

Bush told the soldiers they "have the respect of the entire world." Specialist Jerral Jones, 21, of Stewart, Ga., who fought in the Gulf War and entered Kuwait on the Gulf War day, Feb. 26, 1991, said Bush was his hero, too. "He will go down in history like our great presidents. He should have won the elections."

U.S. trade deficit seen putting pressure on Japanese

Knight-Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — A new widening of the U.S. trade deficit with Japan to $1.12 billion in February is likely to put further pressure on the already strained trade relations between the United States and Japan, analysts said.

Meanwhile, flat industrial production in March, which broke a string of five consecutive monthly increases, is not a cause for concern because output data were greatly distorted by the storm that wracked the East Coast last month, analysts said.

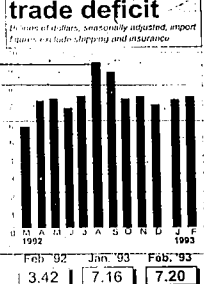

The March data are "hard to interpret because of the storm," but "clearly, production would have been up instead of unchanged were it not for the storm," said Marty Mauro, senior economist at Merrill Lynch.

"Even with that flat (March output), that follows on the heels of pretty strong growth over the past few months," said Richard Berner, chief economist with Mellon Bank in Pittsburgh.

U.S. merchandise trade deficit

The deficit with Japan made by far the largest contribution to the overall U.S. February trade deficit that widened to $7.197 billion from a revised January shortfall of $7.159 billion, on an adjusted basis. The January deficit was originally reported at $7.303 billion.

Although a new surge in the value of the yen to a record high of 112.20 yen set overnight in Tokyo was such as part of Japan's attempt to ease tension with its key trading partner, economists agree that the stubbornly wide bilateral trade deficit will weigh heavily on Friday's talks between President Clinton and Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa at the White House.

"Before the morning is over, we'll hear a lot of rhetoric about the need for the Clinton administration to get tough trade policies with Japan," said David Resler, chief economist at Nomura Securities International.

"Every time we get such economic news, administration officials feel it's an occasion to hyperventilate over protection agenda."

February from $3.792 billion in January.

Most of the problem in the bilateral trade deficit is because Americans import Japanese cars, not because the U.S. sells so little products in Japan," Resler noted.

The U.S. deficit with Japan totaled $8 billion in the first two months of 1993, a pace that indicates no improvement over 1992's total shortfall of $49.92 billion and one that runs well above 1991's $43.39 billion gap.

"While the overall U.S. trade picture is largely unchanged from January, the prominent feature of the report is the Japanese trade deficit, which sets an unfortunate backdrop for the Clinton-Miyazawa meeting Friday," said analyst Amy Smith at IDIA.

"Again, the main sector in the trade deficit was automotive imports, mainly from Japan. That deficit rose to $4.068 billion in

Sales tax talk

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Computer-driven buy programs pushed the Dow Jones industrial average higher today, but the broader market languished on disappointing earnings reports amid a persistent sell-off in consumer stocks.

The Dow's buoyancy was based "purely on (oil) programs" tied to today's expiration of April contracts and options, said Jon Groveman, president and head of equity trading at Ladenburg, Thalmann & Cook. Stock indexes were mostly lower.

Consumer stocks continued to take it in the chin on concerns about price wars in consumer nondurable products and talk of a federal value-added sales tax.

BLM policy keeps filmmakers waiting

MOAB, Utah (AP) — The surrender of Geronimo might have to wait a couple of weeks.

Columbia Pictures wants to start filming its epic on the Apache war chief in southern Utah the first week in May. But it is being held up by a Bureau of Land Management policy requiring a 30-day waiting period after completion of an environmental assessment.

The assessment was expected to be done Friday, so permits could not be issued until May 16, according to a story in Friday's Salt Lake Tribune.

Producers want to film all but a few scenes near Moab, Kanab and the Little Sahara Sand Dunes Recreation Area. But in order to begin when they want, they'll need a waiver from Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

Representatives of the Utah Film Commission, BLM and Rep. Bill Orton's office met last week in Salt Lake City to talk about obtaining the waiver.

While the Interior Department is reviewing the rules, spokeswoman Stephanie Hanna said the 30-day policy remains in effect.

Columbia's application seeks permission to film on BLM land from May through June. Some scenes will involve cast and crew numbering in the hundreds.

"We gave one sequence where we'll have 400 extras — 200 cavalry and 200 Indians — all on horseback," said Shirley Fulton Crumley, location casting director. The production will be the largest ever filmed in southern Utah.

Crumley held the first casting call for movie extras Tuesday at the Moab Civic Center. She plans to hire hundreds of extras, paying a minimum of $60 daily, to portray Apaches, soldiers and Mexicans. Eight speaking roles are still available.

BLM officials must study the impact of the filming and determine what steps must be taken by Columbia to mitigate damage to soil and plants.

Andrus, LaRocco part ways over Meadow Creek issue

LEWISTON (AP) — An agreement more than a decade old over Idaho wilderness is dividing the two top Democratic leaders in the state.

The bill that Rep. Larry LaRocco, D-Idaho, introduced into Congress March 31 called for adding some 160,000 acres along Meadow Creek, east of Grangeville, to the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness.

Within a week, Gov. Cecil Andrus wrote LaRocco asking him to withdraw Meadow Creek from his proposal for the 1st Congressional District in northern and western Idaho. Copies of the letter began to circulate Thursday.

It hit nerves among parties on both sides of the wilderness debate. Proposing the 160,000-acre area for wilderness protection violates a pact he and the late Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, made with the timber industry and others, Andrus said.

Church, LaRocco's former boss and mentor, made the deal as part of the 1980 bill that created the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness.

Andrus LaRocco

The governor said he generally supports LaRocco's bill, despite some reservations about the proposed Mallard Larkins Wilderness in the Vanderbilt Hill area, he said.

"There is, however, one major flaw that I think we have to face up to early on and, I hope, bring about your reconsideration," Andrus wrote.

The deal about the fate of Meadow Creek still stands as far as he is concerned, Andrus said.

"Frankly, Larry, an agreement was struck, and Frank Church and I agreed to it. I feel compelled to keep my word and to keep the word of Frank Church, who is unable to speak for himself in these discussions," Andrus said.

One Congress may not bind lawmakers in the future, he wrote. "But in Idaho, when you give your word to something, you keep it, and I have no intention of doing anything else," he said.

"There are 160,000 acres of the Meadow Creek drainage, east and west, that make a very suitable addition to the Selway Bitterroot Wilderness," LaRocco said in a Thursday statement.

"Meadow Creek is a veritable fish factory for anadromous fish and bull trout. The area has fragile soils and relatively low timber values," LaRocco said. "Furthermore, I was not a party to any deals cut in 1980," he said.

"It's another example of how little certainty there is under the traditional approach to solving these problems," said timber industry spokesman James Riley of the Intermountain Forest Industry Association at Coeur d'Alene.

Funding suit divides ed board

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Members of the Idaho Board of Education ducked a decision Friday whether to switch sides in a lawsuit over public school funding.

Instead, members say they could decide by the May 13-14 meeting in Coeur d'Alene whether to switch from defendants to plaintiffs in the suit.

One board member, state Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans, already has started the process of becoming a plaintiff. Gov. Cecil Andrus on Thursday declared he's doing the same thing.

Along with the state board and Legislature, the officials are defendants in a lawsuit brought by 17 school districts, seeking more state funding of public schools.

Members Diane Bilyeu of Pocatello and Roberta Fields of New Meadows said they were not happy defending the level of school funding as adequate.

State authorities monitor bingo games

CALDWELL — Authorities are monitoring a bingo game going on six nights a week in a smoky, converted Caldwell bar.

"I can't see any reason why they want to close the bingo on us," said Shirley Thorne, one of the first players to play Free Speech Foundation bingo when it opened last August.

Officials have little knowledge of the operation or any interest in shutting it down. But they say they will monitor it for compliance with the new state charitable bingo law that goes into effect May 1.

With the Riverbend Addiction-Prevention Association in Boise, the foundation is one of southwestern Idaho's two major bingo games.

Idaho tests contents of Cataldo barrels

CATALDO — Some people are trying to scuttle rumors barrels discovered near the Cataldo Mission contain toxic waste.

Others say there may be hundreds of them and they contain heavy metals. "I don't think there are any toxic chemicals in the barrels," said life-long Cataldo resident Mickey Mack. "And if there was anything in them, it's going to be long-gone by now anyway."

Mack, 80, believes the barrels may be leftover flotation devices from a dredging project more than 20 years ago.

Gordon Crow, executive director of the Council for Mineral Information, agrees.

"That's exactly what (the barrels) are," Crow said. "We're 99 percent certain of that."

Higher education fees will rise this fall

IDAHO FALLS — The State Board of Education has approved increases in both resident and nonresident fees at Idaho's three universities and Lewis-Clark State College.

Beginning this fall, resident fees will rise from 6 percent to 10 percent depending on the school while nonresident fees will be up as much as 36 percent.

The decision on Thursday came as the board searches for cash to compensate for another limited increase in state support for the four institutions and a commitment to have nonresident fees, now among the lowest in the region, cover the actual cost of providing a college education.

'Grand Dame' to reopen this summer

SALT LAKE CITY — A $42 million restoration project is nearly complete at the former Hotel Utah, which will reopen this summer as the Utah Building.

The Mormon Church-owned hotel, which hosted kings, presidents and people from all walks of life since its opening in 1911, was closed in 1987 and renovation began in 1990.

"I guess the most exciting thing about the building is seeing it all come together with all the details that have been exciting to the public who used the building," said Mike Enfield, project manager.

Black community pushes ahead with Las Vegas march despite delay efforts

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Black community activists planned to march through downtown Las Vegas Saturday, despite efforts of city officials and police to delay the event.

Organizer Joanna Wesley-Lee vowed the march, dubbed "Unity in the Community," would be peaceful.

The mid-morning march was scheduled to move through downtown's casino row before winding up with a rally at city hall.

Chester Richardson, a black community activist, had announced the parade earlier this week, suggesting it would be a chance for people to vent their feelings in case of a verdict in the Rodney King beating trial.

Richardson sought the backing of a community wide unity group known as "All of Us Together." The group includes law officers, elected officials, media executives and black community activists who have banded together to try and avoid trouble when a verdict is announced in the Los Angeles trial.

Rioting in Las Vegas following the acquittal of the four Los Angeles police officers last April left one person dead, 37 injured and property damage estimated at $6 million.

Mayor Jan Laverty Jones, Metro Police and others asked Richardson to delay the march for a few weeks to allow any tensions from a King verdict to cool.

Ms. Wesley-Lee, an unsuccessful candidate for the local NAACP presidency, rejected requests for a delay and sent fliers throughout predominantly black West Las Vegas announcing the march.

Metro Police spokesman Lt. Carl Fruge said the department would provide security.

"If the march is held, Metro will do its duty," Fruge said.

Briefly

Escobar's foes retaliate for bombing

BOGOTÁ, Colombia — A group seeking to punish fugitive druglord Pablo Escobar torched three of his aides' ranches in retaliation for the bombing of a Bogota shopping center, police said Friday.

At least 11 people were killed Thursday by the 220-pound truck bomb, and more than 200 were wounded. Some reports placed the death toll as high as 15.

Nogara claimed responsibility, but President César Gaviria blamed Escobar for the blast, which destroyed about 30 shops, restaurants and banks and led the government to decree longer prison terms for terrorist crimes.

Afghanistan helicopter crashes; 15 die

KABUL, Afghanistan — A military helicopter crashed Friday in central Afghanistan and killed all 15 people on board, including Associated Press Pakistan chief of bureau Sharon Herbaugh, aid workers said.

Also killed in the crash was Natasha Singh of Oakland, Calif., a free-lance journalist, the workers said.

John Lane, director of a British-based charity that located the helicopter and recovered the bodies, said the helicopter crashed outside the mountain village of Pul-e-Khumri, 100 miles north of Kabul.

ANC, allies call for strike; curfew likely

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The ANC and its allies called for a nationwide strike in honor of black leader Chris Hani's funeral and urged supporters Friday to defy any government crackdown on protests.

Earlier, police declared most of greater Johannesburg an "unrest area" in anticipation of protest marches before the funeral Monday. Such a declaration usually brings an overnight curfew and gives police wide powers to disperse crowds and detain people.

Armenians claim truce; fighting sighted

YEREVAN, Armenia — Officials in the secessionist enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh declared a cease-fire Friday, but the Azerbaijani government reported fierce artillery bombardments in the region.

Previous attempts at a cease-fire have failed in the conflict over Nagorno-Karabakh, a predominantly ethnic Armenian region of Azerbaijan that has been the focus of five years of fighting that has claimed 3,000 lives.

In a statement received in Yerevan, the Nagorno-Karabakh information department said the cease-fire started Friday. It invited international observers to monitor the truce.

Shells shower deportees' 'death march'

MARJ AL-ZOHOUR, Lebanon — Nearly 400 Palestinian deportees staged a "death march" to Israeli army lines Friday, underfired by artillery fire and military helicopters overhead. One suffered a chest wound when a shell exploded nearby.

The deportees sought to draw attention to their plight and protest an expected decision by Palestinians to resume Arab-Israeli peace talks in Washington on Tuesday.

In Mehola, Occupied West Bank, meanwhile, a car bomb explosion Friday killed two Palestinians and wounded eight soldiers and a civilian, the army said.

A senior military commander indicated the blast was the work of a suicide bomber, which would be a major escalation in Palestinian attacks against Israelis.

Despite aid, industry laughs at Yeltsin

MOSCOW (AP) — Billions in new aid were no help to Boris Yeltsin's referendum campaign Friday, when factory managers jeered him in the Kremlin and his rebellious vice president refused to quit.

The Russian president did not even try to take credit for the announcement in Japan a day earlier that the seven richest industrial nations would give Russia $28.4 billion in aid and the United States would send an additional $1.8 billion.

The Group of Seven countries

Yeltsin... rather than help... Instead of crowing about the aid...

clearly intended the announcement to help Yeltsin win a nationwide vote of confidence on April 25. But presidential advisers are concerned that the appearance of relying on the West could hurt.

Yeltsin was defensive. "Russia has never rejected a helping hand," he told a hostile audience of nearly 5,000 state factory directors and business leaders in the Kremlin's cavernous Palace of Congresses.

"We, ourselves, are not holding out our palm (for charity). But it would be silly to reject help today," he said.

Many hard-pressed Russians are grateful for donations of food and medicine. Even those who are well off, such as newly rich entrepreneurs, welcome technological assistance and easier terms for trade.

But deep pride, reinforced by decades of Communist boasting about Soviet economic achievements, will make it difficult for Yeltsin to take advantage of the capitalist world's support in the days before the referendum.

The referendum will ask voters whether they have confidence in Yeltsin and approve of his economic policies, as well as whether they want new presidential and parliamentary elections.

Cambodia volunteers leave

The Washington Post

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia

The recent killing of two U.N. electoral volunteers, apparently by the Khmer Rouge guerrillas, has prompted dozens of the activists' colleagues to give the U.N. peace-keeping mission an ultimatum: provide more protection or the workers will leave before crucial elections scheduled next month.

Five volunteers have already asked to be sent home, causing concern about the issue among officials of the 22,000-member U.N. Transitional Authority in Cambodia, or UNTAC.

The 460 volunteers have been the main organizers at the district level of the May 23-28 elections. Without the volunteers, senior U.N. officials said, it would be difficult to proceed with the halting.

The elections were intended to be the culmination of a $2 billion, 18-month U.N. peace process, set in motion by a peace accord signed in October 1991 by warring Cambodian factions.

Kremlin coup trial suspended indefinitely

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's Supreme Court indefinitely suspended the trial of the alleged ringleaders of the August 1991 coup Friday because one of the 12 defendants is ill.

The dozen die-hard Communists who briefly seized power from Mikhail Gorbachev argued the trial could not continue without Alexander Tizyakov, 67, who was rushed from the courtroom with heart trouble on Wednesday, the opening day of the trial.

The presiding judge, Maj. Gen. Anatoly Ukolov, said the court would decide when to resume the trial after it received a medical report on Tizyakov, who is at a military hospital.

Around the valley

Kimberly woman run over by car critical

KIMBERLY - A Kimberly woman remained in critical condition Friday afternoon, one day after she was run over by a car.

The woman, whose identity was withheld pending notification of relatives, was in the intensive care unit at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Kimberly Police Chief Jim Campbell said.

Dennis Amundson of Kimberly has been charged with aggravated driving while under the influence in connection with the accident, Campbell said.

No further information was available Friday evening.

Blaine begins workout program for commuters

HAILEY - The Blaine County Recreation District will begin its annual "Workout to Work" program on Thursday.

Designed to promote human-powered commuting in the Wood River Valley during the fair-weather months, the program tallies the mileage participants cover on foot, bike, horseback or rollerblade rather than automobile.

Those who commute in non-motorized fashion at least 10 times become eligible for prize drawings that include a Scott USA mountain bike, cash, and a season pass to the Sun Valley Athletic Club.

Entry forms are available at the Blaine County Recreation District Office in Hailey or by calling 788-2117.

Idaho Power seeks 2.5% decrease in rates; costs drop

BOISE - As the first move under a new rule allowing Idaho Power Co. rate changes depending on its power costs, the utility has asked for an overall decrease of 2.5 percent.

Officials said Friday for homeowners, the decrease would be 1.6 percent, less than $1 on the typical monthly bill of about $58 for a residential customer using 1,200 kilowatt-hours per month.

Last month, the Public Utilities Commission approved Idaho Power's plans for a power cost adjustment mechanism. It allows annual adjustments each May, reflecting power supply costs such as water conditions.

The utility on Friday asked the commission to change current rates May 16. Rates would remain in effect for one year.

Next year's adjustment and those in subsequent years will include a "tune up" to reconcile differences between projected and actual costs.

Idaho Power's current rates include a $15 million temporary rate increase granted nearly one year ago to offset the utility's increased generating costs due to a lack of water to operate hydroelectric dams.

Since it's scheduled to expire 10 days before the new rate, Idaho Power also asked the commission to extend the temporary rates through May 16.

Additional revenue collected during the 10 days, with interest, will be included in next year's tune up.

New US West phone books due soon on your doorstep

TWIN FALLS - The new US West Direct phone books will be delivered soon.

US West said the books will be sent to homes and businesses starting Tuesday. This year's directories include an easy reference guide with emergency instructions, maps, zip codes and community information.

The directories are printed on recycled paper for the first time.

Farm workers' compensation on Hispanic Affairs' agenda

TWIN FALLS - Hispanic and state leaders will discuss workman's compensation issues for farm workers at the Idaho Commission on Hispanic Affairs' quarterly conference at about 11 a.m. today at Canyon Springs Inn.

The public is welcome to attend the meeting, which begins at 9 a.m. and will include discussion of the commission's 1993 and 1994 budgets.

Election deadline surprises Jerome

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Candidates running for Jerome School Board might have to wait longer than others in Idaho to get elected.

District Business Manager Mike Gibson said he incorrectly read the law governing school board elections and thought candidates had until April 30 to throw their hats into the ring.

Under state election law, Friday was the deadline to file petition papers for the May 18 election.

"Because of the mix-up, school district officials failed to advertise the election."

Gibson said he is not certain whether Jerome can go ahead with its election on May 18 like other school districts in Idaho.

"We're consulting our legal counsel to determine what will be done to remedy the failure to properly post notice," Gibson said.

School district attorney Robert Williams III said he was researching the error.

"We are going to be sure not to hurt anybody and fix this error, but we just need some time to determine the right way to go now," Gibson said.

Despite the error, several residents had filed for office by the Friday deadline.

Incumbent Eric Steigers is running for Zone 4. Steigers was appointed as trustee in 1991 when Steve Marshall moved from the area.

He was elected to fill the position for one year in May 1992.

"There are a lot of issues out there to be dealt with, and I have some ideas for the direction we need to go," he said.

Newscomer Connie Bernsen, a mother of three, is seeking the Zone 3 seat. She said she is running without a hidden agenda.

"I just want to serve," Bernsen said.

Ben Neff, who has served as trustee in Zone 3 for 12 years has stepped down.

"It's been a tough pleasure to serve, but it's time for new blood," Neff said. "Now other people have to step up and take the responsibility."

State court rules sales tax applies to ski lift tickets

The Associated Press

From now on, people who buy ski lift tickets in Idaho will have to pay sales tax, the Idaho Supreme Court says.

The court on Friday sided with the cities of Ketchum and Sun Valley and the state Tax Commission and against Sinclair Oil Corp., owner of the Sun Valley Ski Area.

The sales tax on a $15 daily lift ticket would be 75 cents.

The ski area contended ski lift tickets shouldn't be subject to Idaho's 5 percent sales tax because state law exempts "transportation" facilities.

But in a 4-1 decision written by Justice Linda Copple Trout, the Supreme Court said the intent of using a ski lift was to utilize recreation facilities, not transportation.

"Looking at the transaction as a whole, the object sought by the buyer is to go skiing," the court said. "One purchases a lift ticket and rides a chairlift to facilitate the recreation of skiing."

"Although a very small number of people use the Sun Valley chairlifts for other purposes, the overwhelming majority of those who purchase lift tickets do so for the purpose of skiing," the court said.

"The end product or object sought by the buyer of a lift ticket is not just to get to the top of the

Police charge roulette victim's housemate

By Times-News and Associated Press

SPOKANE - A Spokane man has been accused of providing the gun and bullet in the Russian roulette death of a former Twin Falls teenager.

Richard S. Larson, 39, was charged April 9 as an accomplice to first-degree manslaughter in the death of Raven Lee Kennedy, 17, Deputy Prosecutor Jim Sweetser said.

On April 5, Kennedy spun the cylinder of Larson's .38-caliber revolver once, then missed the gun to his right temple and pulled the trigger, Spokane County sheriff's deputies said.

Kennedy died on arrival at a Spokane hospital, and was buried in Twin Falls last Saturday.

Larson and three teenagers watched Kennedy shoot himself in the living room of Larson's home, deputies said.

Larson's attorney, John Cooney, said authorities went too far with the charge.

"All the facts we have point to a person committing suicide," Cooney said.

Kennedy lived without his parents in the attic of Larson's home, rent-free in exchange for his labor remodeling the building. His mother, Sharon Olson, lives in Twin Falls, and his father, Grant

Air controller, county clerk challenge school incumbent

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - An air traffic controller and a Twin Falls County deputy clerk will face incumbent Dave Sommer in a May 19 School Board election.

Danny R. Basham, an air traffic controller with the Federal Aviation Administration; and Marsha Stallones, a Twin Falls County deputy clerk, filed to run for the zone 5 board position this week.

The trustee filing deadline was Friday. In Zone 2, no one filed against board member Calvin Lamborn, who is running for his fifth term. It is the second election in a row that Lamborn has run unopposed.

On election day, polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at Morningside Elementary School, 701 Morningside Drive. Generally, people living south of Addison Avenue and east of Washington Street are eligible to vote in that race.

Basham, who has lived in Twin Falls three years, said tutoring children in his daughter's first-grade classroom at Bickel Elementary School has taught him something about public schools; they are sadly lagging behind private schools in student achievement, even though private schools spend one-third as much money as public schools, he said.

"I want to find out why," Basham said.

He said his daughter, who went to kindergarten last year at Twin Falls Christian Academy, reads on a fifth-grade level. But children he has tutored at Bickel can't read words like "it," "at" or "the."

If elected, Basham, who has a bachelor's degree in business administration from California State University, said he would try to use what is good about private schools in Twin Falls' public schools.

"I see there is a need," he said.

Stallones, who has three children in Twin Falls schools and who has lived in Twin Falls 15 years, could not be reached for comment after she filed to run for election late Friday afternoon.

Sommer, a farmer, is seeking his third term. He said he likes the direction the district is taking and he wants to "continue on what we started."

He said the recent voter approval of the $9.85 million bond issue for new school buildings will give children better access to learning in uncrowded classrooms.

He was also encouraged by the community's efforts to enlarge the Twin Falls High School auditorium so that all students could be seated at once. He said that was commendable.

All tied up

After several failed attempts to fly their homemade kites, Jerome Middle School students Lanie Barnes, center, and Ann Correll decide to put their string to a different use by tying up Katie Crozier. As a combined math and English project, students made blueprints for their kites, which were accompanied by an instruction sheet. Friday afternoon they tried to fly the kites.

With citizens' help, county investigators crack dairy case

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls County sheriff's investigators praised citizen tipsters Friday for helping them find three men arrested in connection with the Feb. 25 armed robbery of a Bull-area dairy.

In a press conference Friday morning, Staff Sgt. Robert Gauthier said that within 12 minutes of issuing a public request for help in the case, several people called him with information that eventually led to the arrests of the three suspects.

They are Ronald Lehmann, 23, of Buhl; James Fox, 24, of Wendell; and his brother, Steacy Fox, 21, also of Wendell.

The men were charged between March 30 and April 5 in connection with the robbery at the H and H Dairy southeast of Buhl. Gauthier said. Some were already in jail on unrelated criminal charges.

In that crime, one dairy worker was robbed of $200 at gunpoint, and another was tied up and robbed of $20. Also stolen were three checks, with a total face value of between $240 and $300, and a shotgun.

Ronald Lehmann is being held in lieu of $50,000 bond on charges of aiding and abetting a robbery, second-degree kidnaping, burglary, grand theft, and criminal conspiracy.

James Fox is also being held in lieu of $50,000 bond on similar charges: aiding and abetting a robbery, aiding and abetting second-degree kidnaping, aiding and abetting burglary, aiding and abetting grand theft, and criminal conspiracy.

Preliminary hearings for the two men are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. on April 23.

No preliminary hearing has been scheduled for Steacy Fox, who is being held on a $50,000 bond. He is charged with robbery, second-degree kidnaping, aiding and abetting burglary, aiding and abetting grand theft, and criminal conspiracy.

James Fox and Ronald Lehmann's 28-year-old brother, Steve, have been charged in connection with the Dec. 24, 1992 theft of a rifle from a pickup truck west of Buhl. Steve Lehmann has also been charged with forgery by Twin Falls city police.

The four men face a variety of criminal charges from several other law-enforcement agencies around the Magic Valley.

The Lehmann brothers were arrested in Boise on March 1, four days after the dairy robbery, on an unrelated parole violation charge, sheriff's Sgt. Dan Mort said.

That arrest, combined with citizen information, eventually led to the armed robbery and other charges against Ronald Lehmann and the Fox brothers, Mort said.

Sheriff's investigators hope citizen tips can be just as helpful in cracking another case, this one involving a forged check passed at Berry's Market on State Highway 74 southeast of Twin Falls.

Last month, a state unemployment check for more than $300 was stolen from the mailbox of Jennifer Olson's home 12 miles south of town. The same check was forged and passed the evening of March 12 at Berry's Market.

Sheriff's officers are looking for two suspects in the case. One is described as a white male with blond shoulder-length hair, about 25 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall and 170 pounds. The other is described as a white female with light brown neck-length hair, 25 to 30 years old, 5 feet 3 inches tall and 130 pounds. She may be slightly hunchbacked, officers say.

The two suspects, along with a second woman, are believed to be driving a dark blue or black Dodge full-sized pickup truck with California license plates.

They had been in Berry's Market at least six times in the three-week period before the stolen check was passed, and always drove south down the 2700 East road to the market.

Anyone with information about the suspects or the truck should call Gauthier at 736-4040 or 736-3108.

Council seat worries, excites newcomer

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Jim Lynch Sr. says being named to the Burley Council is both exciting and worrisome.

Lynch was nominated by Mayor Frank Bauman April 5 to fill the vacancy of Clay Handy, who recently moved out of city limits. The City Council unanimously approved the nomination. Lynch will be sworn in at Monday's meeting.

"I hope I can do the job and give straightforward answers," Lynch said. "I am very proud of our city and its accomplishments."

He added he has yet to get his feet wet on city business recently because he has been out of town.

"I don't have any agenda," he said.

He is unsure what committees he will be assigned to.

"Mr. Handy left quite a vacancy; he did quite a job," he said. "I hope I can fill that hole."

Lynch was born in Burley and served in the Navy for three years. He began working in oil business in 1941, working for his father. He eventually took over running Lynch Oil Co. and directed the business activities of Mr. Gas and Mr. Wash in Burley and Twin Falls.

He retired about five years ago, selling the operation to his son.

Bauman said Lynch's business experience will help the council.

Lynch also serves on the D.L. Evans Bank board of directors.

Dispose-All admits to digging landfill

Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — The president of Boise-based Dispose-All Inc. has reportedly confirmed that his company is building a landfill west of Burley, but says the company is not breaking any laws.

According to the South Idaho Press, Lemow said he has contacted three law firms in Boise and has been advised they aren't breaking any laws in starting the landfill.

Cassia County officials, however, say they're researching whether the work can be stopped because the company has not yet received permits.

County Administrator Tim Hurst said commissioners will be meeting Monday to discuss zoning and will likely discuss whether Dispose-All should be slapped with a injunction.

He said no Dispose-All officials have contacted him.

A bulldozer was first sighted moving dirt on Burley Barre earlier this month.

Lemow has not returned repeated phone calls from The Times-News since the digging on Burley Barre was first reported.

Lemow told the Burley newspaper that he doesn't intend to open the landfill until all necessary permits have been secured. Dispose-All submitted a site certification plan to the Idaho Division of Environmental Quality last week, but the DEQ has almost a month to review it.

Cassia County Prosecutor Steven Bywater told commissioners recently that under state law commissioners must give permission before a landfill is constructed within their county.

Cassia County belongs to the Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District, which is planning to start a landfill on Miller Butte, located only a few miles from Burley Barre.

Lemow told members of the solid waste district he can construct a landfill much more cheaply than the district is proposing to do.

He said the landfill would cost about $4 million dollars.

Lemow, an waste district and Twin Falls County, are all working to complete their landfills before Oct. 9, when old landfills must be closed or counties will face federal penalties.

Woman arrested on charges of using stolen credit card

Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — A 38-year-old Burley woman was arrested Thursday afternoon on charges that she attempted to use a stolen credit card to purchase $277 worth of items at Burley's K mart, officials say.

Debra Day was charged with grand theft after Cassia County sheriff's department deputies alleged she stole a credit card from Mark Grigg, 43, of Burley.

Grigg said he went to a service station where Day worked on Wednesday, and she didn't give him the credit card back, a deputy report said.

Employees at K mart saw Grigg's name on the credit card when Day tried to purchase the items and they would need to get authorization to use the account, deputies said. She then left the store.

Law officers obtained a search warrant and found the credit card in Day's car, according to a sheriff's department report.

Deputies said evidence was obtained indicating Day had also used the stolen credit card to purchase items at Pay Less Drug Store in Burley.

Police seize marijuana, arrest 2

Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — Rupert Police arrested two Burley residents Thursday after they seized 40.5 ounces of marijuana.

According to the Cassia County sheriff's department, the marijuana, worth an estimated $7,000, was seized at a house in Rupert.

Apollo Mejias, 22, and a 17-year-old Mexican national, face charges of delivery of a controlled substance.

Police said the two were arrested after they were first followed to Burley home.

Police obtained search warrants for both the Rupert and Burley homes.

The owners of both residences were unaware of drugs being used on their premises, according to Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal.

Officers also seized a 1992 Chevrolet pickup, a 1983 Oldsmobile and approximately $700 in cash.

Parents at hearing support Cassia's neighborhood schools

Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Cassia County School District Superintendent Norman Hurst said Thursday's public hearing on community and neighborhood schools went off as well as expected.

"Everybody spoke very realistically," he said.

About 45-50 people attended the hearing, which is the first in a series of four scheduled this month. The next hearing is set for 7 p.m. Tuesday at Overland Elementary.

Hurst said most of the parents were in favor of neighborhood schools, which would enroll students in grades one through six.

Community schools would instruct students in only specific grades. One school would teach grades one and two, while another grades three and four.

Hurst said 12 people spoke in favor of neighborhood schools, and four spoke in favor of community schools.

"Some questioned whether the board has already made up its mind," Hurst said.

He said Board Chairman Kent Fletcher said the trustees were still researching the issue and want to do "what's best for the kids."

"There were people who had various ideas, and we had a good frank discussion," Hurst said.

Cassia County accident injures 2

failed to stop at a stop sign.

Jones and passenger Sonya Jones, 19, Declo, were taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital, where they were treated and released.

Kandil Jones was cited for no insurance and failure to stop at a stop sign, while Vargas was cited for driving while suspended and no insurance, deputies say.

There was $3,500 damage to each vehicle.

Rupert police corner wayward pig

Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — When Rupert Police responded to a call Wednesday they discovered a very big problem — about 380 pounds worth.

According to the Rupert police department, Lois Dawson of Rupert reported at 8:30 p.m. that a black and white pig was eating flowers in the backyard of his residence on "A" Street.

Police chased the pig down the street when the animal went into another backyard and began eating some old potatoes on the ground.

Officers said they contacted the owner of the animal, Javier Calder of Burley, who chased the animal back onto its pasture land.

Police cited the owner under a city ordinance that prohibits animals running at large.

Burglar stops to eat

Mini-Cassia News Service

According to the Minidoka County sheriff's department, whoever broke into the home of Paul Urie, 41, of Heyburn some time between 10:30 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday just wanted a quick snack.

Urie reported a 12-pack of soda and two pieces of chicken had been stolen from his refrigerator. Deputies discovered a small highway window had been pried open.

It would take a miracle

Despite pilgrims' high hopes, the Virgin Mary did not appear after all at the holy farm field outside Kettle River, Minn., on Easter Sunday.

No one claimed to have had a vision, and to the people's credit, nobody tried to fake it. In fact, with 3,000 people watching, it would have been difficult to try explaining to the skeptics if you had been the only person there to see the Virgin in the clouds.

What did happen in that field two miles north of Kettle River on a dead-end gravel road on Easter Sunday?

Clark Morphew
Faith today

By mid-afternoon, about 3,000 had gathered, most of them after attending worship in nearby churches. Then, about 3 p.m., the sun peeked through the clouds for an instant. Shortly after, most people began leaving, many disgruntled, some speaking harshly about the two mystical entrepreneurs, Steve Marino and Earl Nett, who had predicted the Virgin would appear.

But about 1,000 people stuck around, praying their rosaries as they knelt in the snowy farm field. Then about 4:20 p.m., according to a woman from Lino Lakes, Minn., the sun started to do strange things. She was walking down the gravel road headed for her car, disappointed but not without faith, when she heard people cheering.

She looked into the sky. The sun was shining, but it was surrounded by a white disc and there was a "black smaller disc moving in it," she said. "And then there were bits of color." The sun was shaking, and there were spiraling colors, purple, turquoise, blue and yellow.

"That was Mary's sign," she said. "It went on and on for 15 miles down the road."

A few miles from the holy farm field, she and her party pulled into a rest stop and encountered other people who had seen the spectacle of the sun. They also believed it was a sign from Mary. And even though it was an oppressively cloudy day, all the people at the rest stop had sunburned faces, she reported.

One man told her that his rosary turned to gold. Another told patrons of a bar in Kettle River that the beads on his rosary had changed color. And many of those who saw the sun spectacle claimed their faith was restored.

But nobody was healed. "The people in wheelchairs were still in wheelchairs," the Lino Lakes woman said.

I was assigned to cover the Kettle River gathering the day before Mary was scheduled to appear. I met many wonderful people, some who had traveled thousands of miles to experience this phenomenon of visions, which are reported happening in other unlikely places around the world.

In Denver, a woman claims to have seen a vision of Mary, and people gather around her waiting for another apparition. In Georgia, Mary is said to have blessed a well, and people come to drink the holy water.

I met a husband and wife from Great Britain at the Kettle River site who had come to Minnesota simply to pay homage to the Virgin because they believe she is responsible for a worldwide renewal of faith and morality.

I talked to a man who said he was admitted to a hospital because he had a heart attack. Doctors put him in intensive care. But after members of his church came to pray for him, the doctors could find no evidence of heart disease. He came to Kettle River from Kansas City to honor the Virgin with his devotion.

These people are not crazies. Well, probably some of them stand on the brink of craziness. But most of the people I met could have been your neighbors: good, decent, hard-working people who pay their taxes on time and keep their lawns mowed.

But a person has to wonder: What is the purpose of these alleged miracles? Is it to strengthen faith? If so, one would think the powerful Virgin with the help of God could pull off something truly spectacular, such as wiping out poverty. Why would God be content to send an apparition of a woman's face when the world is experiencing so many wrenching problems?

Yes, I'm skeptical of miraculous claims. I've never been touched by a supernatural experience. And if God wants me to believe in such things, it will take a miracle to convince me. Only God and I know what miracle I have in mind. Neither of us is talking.

Pain has a purpose, and people can choose healing

Pain is a trend. When I feel pain, I know that there is something that needs my attention. If I were made to feel my pain, I would not let it go and would either be diagnosed or die.

Leprosy is a disease which ravages many people. It destroys the nervous system. The result is that whenever a victim cuts his finger or rubs his toe, he cannot feel it. When muscles are attacked and infections set in, the victim seldom notices the problem and damage requires amputation to save the life. Fingers lose fingers, toes, sometimes entire limbs. The disease is devastating because it derails the body's ability to feel pain, which would normally motivate the person to attend to the problem and be healed.

The Bible speaks of leprosy as a symbol of sin, which, in our lives, both causes us pain and affects us from recognizing and dealing with our pain. Sin affects us like leprosy: it derails the body. It numbs the conscience, the moral feelings. It creates a spiritual and emotional infection that destroys our lives.

James Evans
Clergy's corner

People suffer from the pains of sin. Divorce, death, sickness, crime and abuse are symptoms of sin. When pain bombards us, we have one of two choices: either denying its existence. We use chemicals to dull it or hide in work or recreation or escapism through entertainment, movies, books and TV. However, sooner or later, the wounds infect because they aren't treated. We find ourselves bankrupt emotionally, spiritually and physically.

Healing is found in a relationship with a person who is capable of knowing everything about us and yet loves us unconditionally and able to walk with us through life without ever abandoning us no matter how ugly or lurid or painful our experiences have been. The person is Jesus

He was born in Idaho Falls and attended Boise State University, the Canadian Bible College and St. Paul Bible College. He and his wife, Patrice, and their two children, Aaron and Ashley, live in Twin Falls.

Christ

He is able to make all the difference in our lives because he is God. He already knows everything that has happened to us, everything we have said, thought, felt and desired and he loves us regardless. One person who had experienced his love wrote, "But God demonstrates his own love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

Jesus is uniquely qualified to heal us because he suffered humiliation and pain.

He suffered the sorrow of having his best friends "desert" him, the hostility of accusations which were distorted and purposely misleading, physical abuse, the insult of being spat upon and crucifixion as a criminal.

These he suffered, but not as a victim. Rather, he volunteered to suffer these things in order to fully experience the sorrows and pains of humanity (see Hebrews 2:17) and make full atonement for the sins of every person who would ever live (see Peter 2:24).

Our only hope of healing, forgiveness and true freedom of life and assurance of the future is found in a relationship with Jesus Christ.

Men find hope in Promise group

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

It began while Dick Froehner's wife planned a trip to Lakeland Springs to honor a man named James Dobson. Froehner was plotting some plans of his own. He took a step behind and kill himself.

That was 10 years ago, and Froehner is still alive. He credits an organization called Promise Keepers with saving his life.

Promise Keepers is a non-denominational Christian organization with a name that implies identity. It's heavy on man-to-man relationships and on clarifying male identities in a complex world. Promise Keepers contends that today's male is confused or defeated because society has blurred the role definitions.

"I didn't care about anyone — my wife, my children, my job," said Froehner, who works for the Idaho County Sheriff's Department. "I had everything planned out, but I would already be in the morgue with no mess in the house when my wife got back from her trip."

But Froehner's wife, or, some would say, God, intervened.

Froehner's wife works for Idaho Family Forum, an arm of Dobson's Focus on the Family group. When the bad times came, she decided to stand up and fight.

She knew something was wrong with me, so she got me to a minister, and then she dropped me with her to Colorado Springs," Froehner said.

Thus began a scenario of events that eventually led Froehner to a Promise Keepers men's conference. That was last July in Boulder, Colo.

God had his there for a specific reason," Froehner said. "There were 2,000 men in that coliseum, but every speaker spoke only to me."

Once Froehner found the strength to begin again, he became a Promise Keepers volunteer. Other men throughout the country serve in similar capacities.

One of those men, Pastor Joe McMahan of the Jerome Church of the Nazarene, is currently working to introduce the Magic Valley to Promise Keepers. "I really think men need to get together by themselves because they don't know what it's like to be men," McMahan said. "Being a man involves both an emotional and a religious life, and not understanding that creates the kind of male identity problems we now have."

Among the featured speakers are Norm Evans, former Miami Dolphin; John Eldridge, Director of Public Policy Seminars and Research for Focus on the Family; Jim Zorn, former quarterback for the Seattle Seahawks and Steve Farrar, author of "Point Man: How a Man can Lead a Family."

Contact the Idaho Family Forum, which sponsors Promise Keepers, at (208) 344-9009. Dr. Wayne Wright of Twin Falls is president of the organization.

McMahan is selling tickets to the Pacific Northwest Regional Promise Keepers Conference, to be held next month in Boise. Some 6,000 men are expected to attend.

By the time the conference ends, McMahan hopes to have a Promise Keepers support group organized in Jerome. Meanwhile, he will continue to act on his commitment to help men find the resources they need to define their Christian identities.

It's a promise he doesn't intend to break.

Assemblies find fertile ground

By Josh Lemieux
The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. Sex and money scandals involving Assemblies of God preachers Jimmy Swaggart and Jim Bakker haven't slowed the ambitious outreach plans of the denomination.

Experts say the Springfield-based Pentecostal church is finding fertile ground in many poor countries for its evangelical fervor.

"They have a very sizeable missionary constituency," said Edith Blumhofer, project director at the Institute for the Study of American Evangelicals in Wheaton, Ill. "They are a presence to be reckoned with."

Success in countries from Asia to Latin America to Africa has made the Assemblies the largest Protestant denomination in the world, Blumhofer said, although she questioned some Assemblies' growth statistics and said its national numbers have been flat since the late 1980s.

The Assemblies counts 2.2 million followers in the United States and more than 22 million in 128 countries.

Loren Triplitt, executive director of foreign missions for Assemblies of God, heads a people who are successfully evangelizing poor countries. He's standing in front of his Pentecostal denomination's headquarters in Springfield, Mo.

Loren Triplitt, executive director of the church's foreign missions, said the denomination, founded in 1914, always has pursued "The Great Commission, which was the command of Christ to go to all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

"That's 5.5 billion creatures today, but we take that literally," said Triplitt, whose foreign missions division reported 1991 income of $96 million. "It's one of the easy commands of the Lord to understand."

Triplitt sees the breakup of communism as new turf for Assemblies missionaries, who have been working in previously taboo places such as Russia and Mongolia.

Pentecostalism, a group of Protestant evangelicals, generally focuses less on theology and more on a personal relationship with God and tangible manifestations of the Holy Spirit. Essential Assemblies beliefs include faith healing and glossolalia (praying in unknown tongues).

Margaret Palmer, a sociology professor at the University of Akron, has written a book on the Assemblies, said spirit-filled faiths.

"They want the experience of God now, and that's what the Assemblies of God offers," Marty said.

"If you're in Guatemala or Namibia, it's almost limitless the potential of people to join you."

But many converts leave the churches as rapidly as they join, and tend to remain in the congregational fold, Marty said.

"If you investigate further, you find they have tremendous background losses," said Marty, who conceded that overcounting is common among many other denominations as well.

Triplitt and the scholars agree that a chief ingredient to the Assemblies' worldwide success has been allowing local rule at national and congregational levels.

Marty said the diversity and local rule allowed Assemblies churches to survive highly publicized scandals of Bakker and Swaggart, once the denomination's most visible preachers.

"They were temporarily set back a little bit, but it didn't set them back too far," Marty said.

Swaggart was ousted in 1988 after he was caught using prostitutes. Bakker lost his Assemblies credentials a year earlier amid charges of sexual misconduct and later was convicted of holding his followers of millions of dollars.

"It is a chapter we wish were closed," Triplitt said.

Vatican: Princess Caroline's children legitimate

VATICAN CITY — The Vatican said last week Pope John Paul II has ruled Princess Caroline's three children legitimate, clearing the way for their possible succession to the throne of the tiny Roman Catholic principality of Monaco.

The children, two boys and a girl, were born of Caroline's seven-year civil marriage to Stefano Casiraghi, an Italian who was killed in a speedboat accident in 1990.

The Vatican said the pope signed the legitimization order Feb. 23.

Caroline married Casiraghi in 1983, a year after her divorce from Philippe Junot, a French playboy. Her first marriage was annulled last year by the Vatican after a 10-year wait.

Caroline is the eldest offspring of Monaco's monarch, Prince Rainier, and the late Princess Grace, a former American actress. First in line for the principality's throne is Caroline's unmarried younger brother, Albert. Caroline's oldest child is a boy, Andre.

Presbyterians choose to uphold gay ordination

EUGENE, Ore. — A regional body of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) defied a national church policy and upheld the ordination of two homosexual men as deacons.

The Presbyterian Synod of the Pacific's judicial commission ruled 6-1 last week that Heather Boomstar and George Link should be allowed to serve as deacons at Central Presbyterian Church in Eugene.

A church in Portland, Hope Presbyterian, challenged the ordinations, saying they should be annulled because they were "in rebellion against the word of God."

The synod's ruling "will likely be appealed to the General Assembly," said Larry Trogen, pastor at Hope Presbyterian.

Paternalism poses danger, says Baptist secretary

BERLIN — Paternalism is the great danger of working with a mission agency outside of one's own country, according to the general secretary of the Baptist World Alliance.

As eastern Europe opens up to evangelism, there is a danger that groups coming in with a lot of money may unknowingly use it as a form of bribery "to do what they want to do, not what you want to do," Denton Lotz told Baptist leaders gathered for a recent church growth conference.

"Unfortunately, many organizations with fine and well-behaved evangelical zeal come into our countries with no knowledge of the language, history or culture," Lotz said, according to a Baptist Press report. "As a result, their presentation of the Gospel often misses the mark, and in fact by emphasizing certain foreign or cultural doctrines lead people astray and destroys the fellowship."

Lutherans may establish supplemental pensions

CHICAGO — The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America is considering establishing a fund to supplement the pension contributions of pastors and other church workers employed by congregations unable to pay them average salaries.

The board of the denomination's Division for Ministry-in-Mid-March approved the proposal of its Task Force on Low Compensated Clergy to help church workers "who are serving faithfully in locations of chronic low compensation."

The proposal now will be sent to the Churchwide Assembly in August in Kansas City, Mo., said Ann Hatfield, a church spokeswoman.

Mormon choir will perform in Catholic church

SALT LAKE CITY — The world renowned Mormon Tabernacle Choir will perform in concert at 8 p.m. May 1 in the newly renovated Cathedral of the Madeleine, said Wendell M. Smooth, choir president.

The event is open to the public. It will be part of the Madeleine Festival of the Arts and Humanities, a series of events celebrating the reopening of the cathedral after a major renovation.

"The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is pleased and honored to be invited to participate in the celebration of the completion of the renovation of the beautiful Cathedral of the Madeleine," Smooth said. "We have high regard for the musical heritage of the Catholic Church and are pleased to perform works of well-known Catholic composers such as Beethoven, Frank, Haydn and Bachmann."

"The event signifies the excellent relationship that exists between Catholics and Mormons in our city," said Monsignor M. Francis Mammion, rector of the cathedral.

He estimates that more than 2,000 priests may have committed such crimes during the last quarter-century.

"I think in the history of the priesthood, it's the worst crisis since the French Revolution, and maybe since the Reformation," said Greeley, who teaches social sciences at the University of Chicago and the University of Arizona. "I don't know how we're going to recruit young men into the seminaries, and I don't know if it's to do with relationships with priests."

Greeley often sounds the alarm about pedophilia priests in a weekly column he writes for the Chicago Sun-Times. But last month he opened his campaign on a new front, with the publication of his 25th novel, "Fall from Grace," which deals in part with a fictional case of clerical sex abuse in

Many agree movies too violent

By Tom Schaefer
Knight-Ridder News Service

Are people disgusted with today's movies? Like film critic Michael Medved, who says Hollywood "assaults our most cherished values and corrupts our children?"

Several weeks ago, I asked readers to tell me what they thought, and whether they avoid going to movies that are violent or sexually explicit. Medved wrote about the film industry in his 1992 book "Culture and the War on Traditional Values" (HarperCollins, $20).

Now that people have had time to send in their responses to my query, let's tear open the 65 envelopes (plus flip over a few postcards) and read some of the "winners."

Perhaps not surprisingly, most of the respondents agree with Medved. Many said they don't go to movies that they think will be offensive. Some thought efforts to boycott movies or to write protest letters to sponsors of movies on television could have long-range benefits, though they didn't seem very confident that they could change Hollywood's attitudes. And if you think some folks want to denigrate the First Amendment, think again. No one advocated government-imposed censorship.

Here's a sampling of responses: "If the movie industry had used rare instances of morally objectionable words, acts, etc., solely when the story line or characterization required it, and had done so judiciously and with respect for their viewers, those of us who are angry and disgusted now would have understood the artistic need," said Jeri Gundlach. "But it's gone so far beyond that, that such an argument is specious and an affront to most people's intelligence."

Many readers say they believe that violence in the media and hostile behavior in society are connected.

"There is NO way the surge of violence among children in our schools is NOT directly related to the violence portrayed to them by the media, particularly the entertainment media but also including sensationalism in so-called reporting," said Meredith Woolley. "Of special concern are violent games in which the player actively seeks to shoot, kill, torture, dismember and even rape his/her victims for one, two and three hours a day."

Kim Smith said the movie and television industries should be held responsible for what they show. He came up with a unique system of fees.

"I believe the motion picture and television industries should adopt a system of 'contributions,'" he said. "For each murder they portray, they contribute $25,000; for each use of drugs or violence, they pay $20,000; for each of the FCC's old standby '7 dirty words,' another $5,000. These contributions would go to social service agencies, school programs, drug treatment centers, even law enforcement agencies that have to clean up the results of our violent society."

Several movie and television industry leaders and organizations will meet this summer to look at devising joint standards on entertainment violence. (To paraphrase an old Hollywood standard: Don't expect a happy ending.)

In fairness, I would note, many movies are worthwhile, yes, even some that are sexually and violently explicit. After all, movies are meant to be entertaining — to make us think, laugh, cry and sometimes be frightened.

But the fact is, movies too often lead up what is debated rather than what is decent. Even moviemakers admit that the trend is toward more violent movies.

Perhaps one of the respondents, Karyl Conard, points out one of my greatest fears as to how movies affect our society:

"The desensitization of upcoming generations has had and will continue to have a heavy price (increases in violent crimes, casual sex and low regard for self and others and much more). Appearances that have been stimulated with unhealthy fare crave more nastiness, and the rule seems to be to give more. Soon, what will be left to give?"

Author speaks on priest sex abuse

By Gustav Niebuhr
The Washington Post

Greeley

Child sexual abuse by priests — and increasing public awareness of it — are creating a crisis of loyalty among clergy and mistrust among parishioners that the Roman Catholic Church has not seen in centuries, according to Andrew M. Greeley, the sociologist, novelist and Catholic priest.

He estimates that more than 2,000 priests may have committed such crimes during the last quarter-century.

"I think in the history of the priesthood, it's the worst crisis since the French Revolution, and maybe since the Reformation," said Greeley, who teaches social sciences at the University of Chicago and the University of Arizona. "I don't know how we're going to recruit young men into the seminaries, and I don't know if it's to do with relationships with priests."

Greeley often sounds the alarm about pedophilia priests in a weekly column he writes for the Chicago Sun-Times. But last month he opened his campaign on a new front, with the publication of his 25th novel, "Fall from Grace," which deals in part with a fictional case of clerical sex abuse in Greeley's native Chicago.

Driving the point home, Greeley dedicated the book to Jason Berry, an investigative journalist who has written extensively about pedophilia scandals in the church.

The novel has met with a mixed reception: A handful of Catholic newspapers have said they will not accept advertising for it. On the other hand, a mostly Catholic focus group, assembled in Arizona for the book's publisher, G.P. Putnam's Sons, responded positively to his treatment of the issue, Greeley said.

At least one nationally known church expert on pedophilia hails Greeley's persistence in calling attention to the problem.

The Rev. Canon Connors, president and chief executive of the St. Luke Institute in Suitland, Md., which treats clergy with behavioral disorders, said, "I applaud him. ... He's been very supportive to victims. And I give him full marks for that."

Connors also offered measured praise for an article on the same subject by Greeley. "How Serious is the Problem of Sexual Abuse by Clergy?" — the cover story in the current issue of America magazine, a Jesuit publication.

In it, Greeley warns that the scandal is triggering immense anger among Catholic lay people, and he urges dioceses to set up "independent review boards with more lay than on them than clergy" to investigate abuse allegations.

He rejects the notion that the priestly requirement of celibacy is in any way linked with pedophilia and suggests that over the last 25 years, 2,000 to 4,000 priests "might be guilty of sexual abuse of children or minors."

Going a step further, he suggests that each pedophile may have had 50 victims: "A not unreasonable estimate of the victim population would then be well in excess of 100,000."

Connors, cautioned that no national data exist to support or refute such numbers. But information gathered over the years in treatment programs such as St. Luke's suggests that 3 percent of priests — about 1,500 men out of a priest population of more than 50,000 — show some tendency toward pedophilia.

Animals scripturally correct at new zoo

The Associated Press

Jerusalem — In an ordinary zoo, the hippopotamus is, well, a hippopotamus. At the Jerusalem Biblical Zoo, it's the "behemoth" that eateth grass as an ox.

The citation, from Job 40:15, appears on the plaque at the hippo pond along with conventional zoological data, as befits a zoo whose emphasis is on animals mentioned in the Bible.

Jerusalem has just moved its latter-day Noah's Ark in a six-month piecemeal journey from cramped quarters among apartment blocks in the northern part of the city to a valley on the southern outskirts.

The new zoo cost $18 million and is four times larger, with spacious aviaries and 62 acres of natural habitats separated by moats, waterfalls and ponds filled with swans and flamingos. The keepers claim it equals the world's most modern zoos.

For the animals, it was like leaving a one-room apartment for a villa, said Gabi Eshkar, a zoo veterinarian. "Here, they all have space and grass and trees and they run around. It's a totally different world for them ... and for the visitors."

Not all the zoo's animals must be biblical, and only about one-tenth of them are. Some of the species, such as kangaroos, might have started the biblical prophets.

But priority goes to animals that might have been natives of the Holy Land, Eshkar said. Thus there is an Asiatic lion, which "bath roared, who will not fear?" (Amos 3:8).

rather than an African one, and a Syrian brown bear, probably like the one from which God saved King David (1st Samuel 17:37).

Most of the animals have adapted to the new freedom. A month before the formal opening in April, a mother chimpanzee playfully wrestled with two babies while a male examined the climbing trees: a big improvement on the cement-floored, iron-barred cubicle the apes left behind.

Matti, the three-ton hippo, now has enough space to entertain a mate.

Tammy was wallowing happily at his side.

Boaz and Ruth, exquisite black panthers named for the biblical lovers of the Book of Ruth, paced their enclosure, growling at the occasional passer-by.

Irons: Coaching here is 'exciting'

Irons spends 1st day on job answering phones, recruiting

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — On his first day as College of Southern Idaho basketball coach, Steve Irons answered several dozen phone calls, touched base with hierarchy and possible return players — and hosted the first visiting recruit of the season.

Not had for a guy who left his family in Walla Walla at 5 p.m. Thursday and arrived in Twin Falls at midnight.

"I'll be here every day now, full time," said the former CSI player and assistant coach. "I'm kinda looking forward to tomorrow when the phone stops ringing and I can get some things done."

Although he's spent 10 years here as a player and eight as assistant coach, Irons says he finds being on campus "exciting."

"The bottom line is recruiting," he says, "and I think we're getting a real good start on it."

That start would be 6-6, 240-pound Arvesta Kelly, St. Paul, who comes to look CSI over as the Minnesota prep basketball player of the year.

"He's a perimeter player," said Irons despite the size. "A great three-point shooter."

Kelly is one that Fred Trenkle started talking to before he left the helm, leading Irons to note "in recruiting I feel it is important to maintain the contacts the school has had and explore new ones. All coaches develop different relationships. But it's always great to have a wide network of people you can respect and rely on for cross-checking the talent of any player that might be brought to our attention in any part of the country."

And, Irons emphasized, CSI will continue to recruit nationally.

"They (the administration) have assured me that the resources will be made available," he said.

"One thing I learned from Coach Trenkle is that you can't get in too big a hurry recruiting. It appears we will have seven spots available for newcomers this fall. But we can't fill those seven spots in the next two weeks."

Irons noted that good players become available to recruitment at different times of the recruiting season. Some don't make their pre-college scores, some division I players decide to test after school is out, some simply feel an early decision isn't wise and put themselves back on the market.

Sloan receives fine for bumping referee

NEW YORK — Utah Jazz coach Jerry Sloan was fined $2,000 and suspended for one game without pay by the NBA on Friday for bumping referee Bob Delaney.

Sloan was ejected Thursday night with 9:01 left in regulation after he shoved Delaney as they argued over a non-call. The Jazz was ahead 85-78 and wound up winning 122-117 in overtime.

The suspension covers Saturday night's home game against Phoenix.

Sloan and Delaney argued a non-call against Tyrone Corbin.

"It's rough when someone jumps in your face," Sloan said of Delaney. "I just thought he got a little too close to me."

NBC outbids ABC, will televise Super Bowl in 1994

NEW YORK — NBC outbid ABC and will be the first network in 25 years to televise consecutive Super Bowls next January.

"We've had a pretty nice week here, getting the rights to the Super Bowl and being recognized by our peers for our work in Barcelona particularly," NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol said Friday.

NBC won nine sports Emmys Monday night, including five for the Summer Olympics.

While NBC declined to reveal it's sealed bid, it was believed the network paid about $41 million for the game, about $1 million more than ABC bid. Last week, CBS said that while it was interested in the game, it would not participate in the bidding.

Mike Keenan to be named NHL Rangers' coach

NEW YORK — Even before the New York Rangers concluded their season-of-utter shame Friday night, president Neil Smith got next season under way Friday by giving Mike Keenan a long-term contract as coach.

Keenan's duties will be to coach, and only coach. If the 43-year-old newcomer has aspirations of a prominent front-office job, something may be arranged if he ends the team's Stanley Cup drought.

Boxer Palacio tests positive for AIDS virus, loses crown

LONDON — It took journeyman boxer Ruben Palacio 12 years to win a world title. On the eve of his first defense, he became the first champion to test positive for the AIDS virus.

Palacio flew home to Colombia on Friday, stripped of his WBO featherweight title after a routine pre-fight medical examination found the presence of the HIV virus.

"It took him a long time to get to this stage," said WBO championship committee president Ed Levine. "He reaches the pinnacle of his sport, he's defending his championship for the first time, and he's stricken."

Levine said the only option was to bar Palacio from the ring.

"We can't risk the life of another boxer by letting him fight," Levine said. "It's a kind of disease that can be spread via blood contact, and boxing is a sport where that is likely to happen."

Palacio, 30, was to defend his title against Briton John Davidson in Washington, England, on Saturday. The title now vacant, the WBO said it will award the crown to the winner between Davidson and Welshman Steve Robinson, brought in as a last-minute substitute for Palacio.

"We've made an exception to our regulations to permit Robinson to challenge for the title," Levine said.

But the match is overshadowed by the fate of the Colombian.

State board urges universities to stay

IDAHO FALLS — The state Board of Education has encouraged, but did not mandate, Idaho's three universities to remain in the Big Sky Conference and move toward complete gender equity.

The motion Thursday, by trustee board member Joe Parkinson, said the schools should be encouraged to close the gap in athletic scholarship money between men and women by one-third a year for three years, finally reaching 50:50.

Charles Ruch said he is trying to determine how to reach the gender goals while staying in the Big Sky Conference.

Boise State and the University of Idaho are looking at their options in light of the Big Sky's cutbacks in football scholarships from 63 to 45 by 1996. The Big Sky left room for two schools to leave the conference football program.

This school year, Boise State had 108 athletic scholarships for men and 60 for women. Last year, the latest for which figures were available, the University of Idaho provided about 90 athletic scholarships to men and about 35 to women.

Glen Alford, the sports information director at Idaho State, said he was not authorized to release that information.

"The big difference is football. No women's sport requires that many players."

NFL players voice objections to ruling

MINNEAPOLIS — Some of the NFL's top players told a federal judge Friday that the league's new free agency system has cut their earning power by millions of dollars.

The arguments came in the latest round of the NFL's long battle over free agency as U.S. District Judge David Doty heard 10 hours worth of objections from players and Eagles' owner Norman Braman, who are unhappy with an out-of-court settlement on the issue.

A federal jury ruled last summer that the NFL's Plan B free agency system was illegal, a decision that prompted the league and its players to negotiate a new system that includes nearly unrestricted free agency for players with five or more years of league experience.

Doty gave that plan preliminary approval on Feb. 26, but 86 objections to the plan have since been filed with the court, 66 coming from NFL players. Doty took the matter under advisement.

Several players asked to opt out of the class action suit, objecting to the take-it-or-leave-it aspect of the deal.

Sean Jones, a defensive end from Houston, compared the system to slavery and emancipation.

"Even when you were offered 40 acres and a mule, you didn't have to take it," Jones said.

"I happen to like pro football," said attorney Don Howarth, who represented Lomas Brown of Detroit and others. "But it does not have preferred status under the Constitution."

A key aspect of the settlement allows each club to designate one "franchise player."

"These players may not become free agents, but must be paid 120 percent of their previous salary or the average of the top five players at their position."

Eight of the 10 franchise players designated so far — including Brown, Wilber Marshall of Washington Redskins and Paul Gruber of the Tampa Bay

Montana to announce choice today

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A tight-lipped Joe Montana left Arrowhead Stadium Friday after a second-round of talks with the Kansas City Chiefs and said he was still determined to choose between the Chiefs and Phoenix today.

After an afternoon of talks first with the Chiefs coaching staff and then with club president Carl Peterson, Montana strode briskly through a crowd of reporters and got into a waiting car without hardly a word.

Montana, who arrived in the early morning hours from Phoenix with his wife Jennifer, looked tired of the process of finding a new team. They were to fly back to San Francisco late Friday night.

"He's going to make a decision tomorrow, tell all the appropriate people and let them work it out," said Peter Johnson, one of Montana's agents.

Peterson said "excellent progress" was made in talks with Johnson.

The franchise players are doing an awful lot of giving, but they are not doing any receiving," he said.

The other two, Reggie White and Tim McDonald, were plaintiffs in the earlier suits and were allowed to move — White from Philadelphia to Green Bay and McDonald from Phoenix to San Francisco.

Jerry Goldman, an attorney for Marshall, told the judge that his client is being hurt by the proposed settlement.

The franchise players are doing an awful lot of giving, but they are not doing any receiving," he said.
