Quilts and more quilts

Bliss resident Betty Bishop marvels over some of the quilts being shown at First Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls Friday afternoon. The show is sponsored by the Desert Sage Quilters of Magic Valley and is the first time the local organization has held the event, said Dixie McClain of Eden. One hundred twenty-five quilts are on display from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today with each representing 500 to 700 hours of work, McClain said. Admission is $2 per person.

Judge dismisses 2 counts against Weaver, Harris

The Associated Press

BOISE — U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge on Friday dismissed two of the 10 counts against white separatist Randy Weaver and co-defendant Kevin Harris and reserved judgment on dismissal of a third. "They simply have not made out their case beyond a reasonable doubt," defense attorney David Nevin said. But Lodge rejected Nevin's contention that the entire indictment against the two men is "nothing but speculation." His ruling left Weaver and Harris still facing the most serious charges in the indictment, including the murder of a deputy U.S. Marshal during last summer's shootout at Weaver's northern Idaho cabin. Lodge had previously ruled out the death penalty on conviction of the murder, but conviction on the remaining counts would carry a maximum penalty of life plus 45 years in prison and nearly $1.8 million in fines. The ruling came after Lodge abruptly recessed the hearing because one of the lead prosecutors was unable to complete his arguments against the defense motions for dismissal. As he tried to respond, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Howen appeared disoriented and physically distressed, his voice shaking, his hands trembling and his statements interrupted by long pauses. "Howen finally told Lodge: 'I'm sorry, judge; I can't continue.' The U.S. Attorney's office refused to elaborate on Howen's breakdown. But the incident combined with a full morning of closed-door debate over instructions for the jury delayed Lodge's schedule for ending the eight-week trial. Testimony ended on Thursday when the prosecution wrapped up its lengthy case and the defense rested without presenting any evidence of its own. Jury instructions will be finalized Monday morning and the jury of seven women

Falls will flow through the weekend

By N.S. Nokkentved Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The spectacular flows over Shoshone Falls will continue through the weekend, the Bureau of Reclamation reports. After that the roar of falling water will dampen to a whisper as the flow is expected to drop off quickly next week, said bureau hydrologist Mike Beus. The bureau expects to pass 12,000 cubic feet per second of water over the falls Saturday, reducing to about 10,000 Sunday. A cfs equals 449 gallons per minute. High flows in the Snake River below Milner Dam during the past week have rekindled recreational interest and brought delight to tourists and local residents, who haven't seen that much water over the famed "Niagara-of-the-West" since 1986.

In the spring of 1986 more than 20,000 cfs went over the falls. This year, because of the wet, cool spring, the normal irrigation demand didn't materialize, and the reservoir system filled, forcing the bureau to pass along whatever is running in the river. The bureau's reservoir system on the river is 95 percent full, with snow still waiting to melt in the mountains. This week the reservoirs held 3,953,769 acre feet — they can hold 4,165,708 acre feet. An acre foot is the amount of water needed to cover one acre with one foot of water. This week rafters were out in force on the Murtaugh Reach. It's 14 miles of bucking, churning white water from Star Falls to Twin Falls, through Grand Canyon-quality scenery, say those white-water recreationists. But it hasn't been an option for them since 1986.

Clinton meets possible choice for high court

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Summoned from his hospital bed, federal judge Stephen Breyer met with President Clinton on Friday, hoping to become the first justice in a generation named to the Supreme Court by a Democratic president. Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton "felt good" about the meeting but Breyer was not offered the job. "There's been no decision," she said. Breyer, nursing broken ribs and a punctured lung suffered in a bicycle accident, ate lunch with Clinton at the White House. Their meeting, which lasted 1 hour and 40 minutes, was the final exam for the centrist judge and former Harvard Law School professor who had already survived a vigorous review process to remain on Clinton's short list as dozens other candidates fell away. Several sources, including key White House officials, said Clinton had settled on Breyer but wanted to meet face-to-face with the jurist before making his decision final. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt was the only other candidate, administration officials said. Clinton telephoned Arizona Gov. Fife Symington on Thursday, expressing concern about the ramifications of taking Babbitt from Interior. Clinton did not talk publicly about the matter Friday. Myers said an announcement would not be made before Saturday. "I think he's just going to finish this on his own timetable," the spokeswoman said. Breyer met with White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum after eating with Clinton in a dining room near the Oval Office. Breyer, 54, appeared tired but fit as he was driven on to the White House grounds early Friday afternoon. The visit came exactly a week after he was hit by a car while bicycling

Gem court hears initiative challenges on June 25

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court will hear oral arguments June 25 on two lawsuits over the anti-gay initiative. Chief Justice Charles McDevitt signed an order setting oral arguments for 3 p.m. June 25 in Boise. Each side will be allowed 30 minutes for statements.

The Idaho Citizens Alliance needs more than 32,000 signatures from registered voters to qualify its initiative for the November 1994 ballot. The measure would bar homosexuals from being granted minority status in hiring, government programs and other areas. It also would bar public schools and governments from portraying homosexuality as acceptable.

The Idaho Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union and Idaho for Human Dignity, Inc., sued Attorney General Larry EchoHawk and Secretary of State Pete Conarrusa May 11 claiming that the ballot title drafted by EchoHawk's office failed to fairly and accurately represent the intent of the initiative. The Idaho Citizens Alliance filed its own lawsuit, calling the ACLU legal action a "completely distorted" view of the matter. Both the appeal from ICA Chairman Kelly Walton, filed on behalf of the Stop Special Rights Committee, and the ACLU petition were filed under a 60-year-old state law requiring the Supreme Court to review any challenges to ballot titles.

through Saturday across the mountains of northwest Montana, where a foot of snow was possible.

Elsewhere, a moist and unstable southerly flow of air from the Texas Gulf Coast north into the middle Mississippi Valley and central Plains fueled numerous showers and strong thunderstorms during the afternoon.

Some thunderstorms produced drenching rain early in the morning. In southeastern Oklahoma, up to 3.5 inches fell across western Bryan County. Rain fell at a rate of more than one inch an hour in Abilene, Texas, causing minor street flooding.

Heavier rainfall amounts for the six hours up to noon MDT included 2.45 inches at Galveston, Texas, and 1.36 at Brownsville, Texas.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms developed along and to the south of a line extending from the Ohio Valley east through the middle Atlantic Coast.

Hot, humid weather continued south of that line and heat advisories remained in effect over the midlands and coastal areas of South Carolina.

The temperature reached 98 at Columbus, Ga., tying the record for the date.

N. Korea stays in nuclear pact

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — North Korea pulled Asia back from the brink of a possible nuclear arms race Friday.

It reversed its decision to withdraw from a treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons.

The hard-line Communist country had said it would leave the 153-nation treaty today.

Kang Sok Ju, a North Korean vice foreign minister, said his country made the reversal based on its "legitimate rights" and limited the United States offering nothing concrete in exchange.

"This is not horse-trading," the minister told reporters at the U.S. Mission to the United Nations.

He spoke after talks with Robert Gallucci, assistant U.S. secretary of state for political-military affairs.

But the North Korean negotiator said his government had decided to "suspend" its withdrawal from the pact, indicating it could change its mind.

North Korea would have become the first nation to withdraw in the 23-year history of the pact, which provides for nuclear inspections by foreign observers to ensure that nuclear weapons do not spread.

The North announced its pullout March 12 after barring an inspection of a suspected reactor and reprocessing plant at Yongbyon. The prohibition heightened concern that North Korea, despite its denials, was developing nuclear arms.

North Korea made the announcement less than three weeks after CIA Director James Woolsey said there was a possibility it had manufactured enough fissionable material for at least one nuclear weapon.

If North Korea were to have nuclear weapons, South Korea and Japan might try to develop their own nuclear stockpiles as deterrents.

North Korea's neighbors regard it as a "suspense" as to whether a Japanese defense official said North Korea had tested a new intermediate-range ballistic missile capable of hitting western Japan.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said information about the missile's test firing in May off the Japan Sea came from several sources. He hinted they might include U.S. intelligence sources.

North Korea's development of the missile, a modified and upgraded version of the Russian Scud, is believed to be nearing completion, the official said.

North Korea's conditions for staying in the nuclear accord have included cancellation of U.S.-South Korean military exercises, withdrawal of 36,000 U.S. troops from South Korea and a pledge by the United States not to use nuclear weapons in Korea.

U.N. Security Council diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity in New York, had said that if the U.S.-North Korea talks failed, they could have taken up a resolution to impose sanctions on North Korea.

Trial

and five men given the instructions that afternoon. Closing arguments, originally scheduled for Monday, were set back until Tuesday.

Weaver, 45, and Harris, 25, are charged with the murder of Deputy U.S. Marshal William Deagan during an Aug. 21 shootout at Weaver's "Whispering Willows" cabin. Weaver's teenage son, Samuel, was also killed in the gunfire that triggered an 11-day siege of the cabin.

The wife, Vicki, 42, was shot by a federal sniper on the second day of the siege.

The gunfire occurred as a team of marshals checked the lay of the land near the Ruby Ridge cabin in preparing another scheme to peacefully arrest Weaver for failing to appear at a 1991 trial on a weapons charge.

Dismissed by Lodge was one charge that both defendants attempted to fire on officers in a helicopter as it approached the cabin on the second night of the siege and another charge that Weaver obtained guns and ammunition while Weaver was a fugitive on the weapons charge.

He withheld judgment on dismissal of the charge that Harris harbored Weaver as a fugitive.

Nevin had argued that Weaver was not a fugitive because he never left the state.

Marines set to intervene in Somalia

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 4,200-man Navy and Marine assault force broke off a military exercise in Kuwait Friday and prepared for possible intervention in Somalia, officials said.

The 2,200 Marines and 2,000 Navy sailors of the Wasp Amphibious Ready Group, which had arrived in Kuwait this week, packed up to set sail for the lower Persian Gulf, said Cmdr. Joseph Gradisher, a Defense Department spokesman. They await possible orders to link up with U.N. forces in Somalia, he said.

Gradisher said no decision had been made on whether to head on to Somalia. It would take a week to 10 days for them to reach Somalia.

The Pentagon wouldn't say what role the amphibious assault force might play in Somalia. But the group is a highly versatile, heavily armed force that could reinforce in the event that any U.N.-directed retaliation for last Saturday's attack on Pakistani peacekeepers led to bigger gun battles in Somalia.

The Kuwaiti exercise "Eager Mace," which began four days ago, had been scheduled to run through June 15, but Gen. Joseph Hoar, Central Command, decided Somalia was a higher priority. He made the decision in consultation with retired U.S. Navy Adm. Jonathan Howe, the special U.N. envoy to Somalia, and the Joint Staff at the Pentagon, Gradisher said.

The 4,200 Marines and sailors are aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Wasp, the amphibious transport dock ship USS Navajo, and other ships comprising Amphibious Squadron Two, which is commanded by Navy Capt. Charles Vion.

The Marines comprise the 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit, which is based at Camp Lejeune, N.C., and had been participating in the U.N. Somalia operation in March.

Breyer

and just hours after he left a Massachusetts judge. His wife, Joanna, accompanied him.

Myers said Clinton considered the visit an opportunity "to sit down face-to-face and have a conversation with somebody who he's considering for the high court."

Breyer reportedly was driven from Boston to New York on Thursday night and took a train to Washington Friday morning.

He is chief judge of the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston. Appointed to the federal bench by President Carter, Breyer was confirmed after Ronald Reagan was elected president, a sign of his support among Senate Republicans.

That good will stems from his days as chief counsel of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Although Breyer was an aide to liberal Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, he worked closely with Republicans, particularly in drafting airline deregulation legislation.

The ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, described Breyer as "a person who is intellectual, very learned in the law, has an excellent record as a jurist."

Clinton needs Republican support to ensure a trouble-free confirmation after a series of miscues, most recently his abandonment of Lani Guinier as his choice to head the Justice Department civil rights division.

In Texas for a bill-signing ceremony, Babbitt was asked if environmentalists scuttled his appointment. "Well, it is kind of interesting. You know, I can handle my enemies. But I have a hard time fending off my friends this time around," he said.

Babbitt said he had not talked to Clinton Friday. "I'm sure that he is going to be making a decision very shortly. I'm perfectly content whichever way it goes."

Breyer is known as an astiduously prepared jurist and a sharp, engaging questioner. He has a reputation for carefully building consensus with his fellow justices, a trait Clinton considers a requirement in a justice. He hopes will strengthen an coalition between the court's moderates and its two most liberal members.

If Breyer is selected would become the first Jew on the court since Abe Fortas retired in 1969.

He studied at Stanford and Oxford University before earning his law degree at Harvard. He clerked for Justice Arthur J. Goldberg in 1964-65 and taught antitrust and administrative law at Harvard Law School. He is considered an expert on regulatory issues.

Breyer also served as an assistant special prosecutor in the Watergate cases in 1973.

Half three-quarters of an inch in diameter fell at Baker City, Ore.

Report shows low inflation rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices held steady last month, the government said Friday.

The report was welcomed by Clinton administration officials who hope continued low inflation will keep the Federal Reserve from boosting interest rates.

The May figures for inflation at the wholesale level were the best this year, held down by declines in energy and food costs. The news sparked a rally in financial markets.

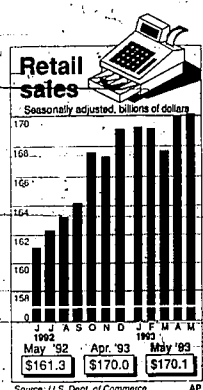

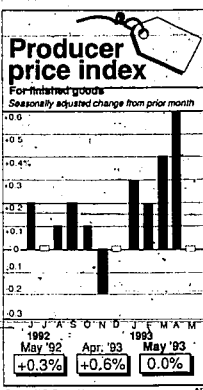

In less promising economic news, a second report showed that retail sales barely budged in May, rising an anemic 0.1 percent, far below expectations. But even in that report, analysts noted that clothing and cars, two key areas for discretionary spending, posted gains during the month.

The administration and financial markets chose to focus on the Labor Department's Producer Price Index, which was unchanged in May following worrisome increases of 0.4 percent in March and 0.6 percent in April, the biggest one-month gain in 2 1/2 years.

Stocks and bonds both rallied as the wholesale price report calmed anxieties that rising inflation would force the Federal Reserve to begin pushing interest rates higher, something the central bank has not done for more than four years.

"The PPI report tells us the Fed won't be tightening anytime soon," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch in New York. "This report shows that the recent inflation scare was greatly exaggerated."

The administration, which often points to falling interest rates as a sign financial markets approve President Clinton's deficit reduction program, welcomed the inflation news.

Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said it "buttressed our feeling that what we had seen in the previous reports was an aberration." He told reporters, "I would assume (Federal Reserve Chairman Alan) Greenspan would find that encouraging too."

Commerce Secretary Ron Brown said the report is "solid evidence that higher interest rates are unnecessary given the current state of the economy."

President Clinton met with Greenspan for an hour Wednesday night and the White House would appear afterwards it hopes the Fed will not drive rates higher.

The administration is concerned that without the Fed's tacit assurances it will keep rates low, Congress will not support Clinton's deficit reduction program fearing the economy could not withstand higher taxes and spending cuts in conjunction with rising interest rates.

The new wholesale inflation report will be followed Tuesday by a report on consumer prices in May. Economists said they expected to see similar movements, forecasting a small increase in consumer prices of around 0.2 percent.

"Cold water has been thrown on any notion that a Federal Reserve tightening is imminent," said Robert Dederick, chief economist of the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago. "Inflation basically remains a non-problem."

For May, the Labor Department said that food prices actually fell by 0.1 percent, reflecting sizable declines in vegetable prices, while energy costs were down an even bigger 0.6 percent as gasoline prices dropped by 3.6 percent, the biggest decrease since December.

Excluding the volatile food and energy categories, wholesale prices rose only 0.2 percent with half of that gain blamed on a 2.1 percent spurt in tobacco prices. Car prices dropped 0.6 percent.

Wholesale prices have risen at an annual rate so far this year of 3.7 percent, far ahead of last year's overall increase of 4.6 percent.

But economists believe given the continued sluggish economy, inflation rates will slow markedly for the rest of the year. They are forecasting that consumer prices will likely rise by 3 percent this year, little changed from last year's modest 2.9 percent rise.

The 0.1 percent decline in food prices last month followed a giant 1.4 percent increase the month before when vegetable prices climbed 44.7 percent.

In May, vegetable prices fell by 6.3 percent with lettuce, green onions and eggplant all registering big declines.

That good news was offset somewhat by a 21.6 percent increase in fresh fruit prices, the biggest advance in wholesale fruit costs since July 1972, as lemons, oranges and granny smith apples shot up.

President Clinton speaks with former Vice President Walter Mondale on Friday after Clinton nominated Mondale as the new U.S. ambassador to Japan.

Clinton tabs Mondale as Japan ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton signaled his determination to improve the nation's "often-troubled economic relationship" with Japan on Friday by tapping former Vice President Walter Mondale to be ambassador to Tokyo.

"I chose someone of Fritz Mondale's stature ... because there is no more important bilateral relationship in the world than that which exists between the United States and Japan," Clinton said in a Rose Garden ceremony.

Taking note of ongoing trade tensions with Japan, Clinton acknowledged that the "economic pillar of our relationship needs some repair."

The appointment was widely regarded as a sign of the importance the Clinton administration attaches to improving its trade relations with Japan. Last year hit $49.6 billion, well over half America's total deficit of $84.5 billion.

Mondale, too, spoke of the importance of the relationship, saying, "Our destinies have become inseparable."

"Although we are economic competitors, we share a fundamental interdependence," he said. "Each of us has a vital stake in the other's economy and together we share a fundamental interest in a growing world economy."

The selection of Mondale was warmly received in Japan even before it was formally announced, with newspapers there describing him as an "omono" or big shot likely to wield influence at the White House.

Mondale, 65, a former senator and Jimmy Carter's vice president, moved back to his native Minnesota to practice law after losing to President Reagan in the 1984 election.

Clinton said it was particularly fitting that the announcement of Mondale's nomination came on the same day that U.S. and Japanese negotiators were sitting down in Washington to work out the framework for talks on reducing the trade imbalance.

"This framework ... will get our economic problems out of the headlines and onto the negotiating table, where we can best resolve them," Clinton said.

The president took note that it was Mondale, as vice president, who had sworn in former Japanese ambassador Mike Mansfield, widely regarded as one of the nation's most successful envoys to Tokyo.

Hate criminals face tougher sentences

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who commit "hate crimes" motivated by bigotry may be sentenced to extra punishment without violating their free-speech rights, the Supreme Court ruled Friday.

"A physical assault is not by any stretch of the imagination expressive conduct protected by the First Amendment," Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for a unanimous court.

"The decision upheld the 'doubled sentence' of a black man convicted of inciting the beating of a white youth in Kenosha, Wis.

Bias-motivated crimes are "thought to inflict greater individual and societal harm," Rehnquist said. "The state's desire to redress these perceived harms provides an adequate explanation for its penalty-enhancement provision over and above mere disagreement with offenders' beliefs or biases."

In other action Friday, the court:

- Ruled unanimously that religious groups have a constitutional right to sacrifice animals in worship services. In striking down a ban on animal rituals in Hialeah, Fla., the court said the prohibition was aimed only at conduct motivated by religious belief and thus "violated the nation's essential commitment to religious freedom."

- Voted 5-4 in an Ohio case to let states give some creditors priority over the federal government in claims against assets of bankrupt insurance companies.

In the hate-crimes case, Rehnquist noted that many years on the divisive issue.

The justices in 1992 struck down a St. Paul, Minn., ordinance that banned cross-burnings and other expressions of racial bias. The ordinance violated free speech because it sought to ban some viewpoints, the court ruled.

"Whereas the ordinance struck down (in the St. Paul case) was explicitly directed at expression ... the statute in this case is aimed at conduct unprotected by the First Amendment," Rehnquist wrote Friday.

But he added that sentencing judges may not take into account "a defendant's abstract beliefs, however obnoxious to most people."

The ruling reinstated a Wisconsin law that had been struck down by the state's highest court.

The law does not create new types of crimes attributed to bias. Instead, it also longer sets penalties for people convicted of violating existing laws if they chose their victim because of race, religion, disability or sexual orientation.

Todd Mitchell was sentenced to four years in prison in the October 1989 beating of a 14-year-old white youth, Mitchell, then 19, was among a group of blacks who were discussing the movie "Mississippi Burning."

"Do you all feel hyped-up to move on some white people?" Mitchell asked the group. The youths saw Gregory Reddick walking nearby and Mitchell said, "There goes a white boy, go get him."

Samuel Rabinove of the American Jewish Committee praised the ruling, saying, "The key is that this is conduct, not speech. If First Amendment protection were to be construed so broadly, then all laws on discrimination would be vulnerable to challenge."

American Civil Liberties Union attorney Steven Shapiro agreed, but said he wished the court had stated more clearly that hate-crime laws "are not an excuse to rummage through someone's political views and political statements and punish people based on these statements."

The ruling will let states do just that, said Harry Reinhardt of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers.

"It allows the government to regulate or attempt to regulate ... thoughts people hold that are presently unpopular," Reinhardt said. "I don't think people have ever empowered government to do that."

judges traditionally have been allowed to consider defendants' motives in imposing sentences.

At least 20 states have laws allowing longer prison terms for crimes motivated by racial or other bias, and federal legislation has been introduced in the House.

Friday's ruling was the high court's second decision in as many years on the divisive issue.

Appearing before a congressional panel Friday, Linda Sands pleaded with the government to find out what made her five children sick.

"I beg you," she said, her voice shaky. "Please take care of this problem."

But there were no clear answers for the Sandes, or others who complain that something in their new carpeting has made them ill. After more than four hours of testimony before the House Government Operations, environment and natural resources subcommittee, all sides agreed that more research is needed.

The Environmental Protection Agency has been unable to find a link between carpets and illness, even after its own workers complained in 1988 that new carpeting at EPA headquarters was making them sick, an official testified. The carpeting was removed.

"Certainly there are people who are suffering and we are very sympathetic," said Victor Kimm, EPA's acting assistant administrator for prevention, pesticides and toxic substances. "But we don't know the cause, therefore we're not in a position to do anything about it."

Carpet-based illness puzzles government

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the Sands family installed new carpeting in their home, they were overcome by headaches, exhaustion and sore throats that still plague them eight years later.

Senator stops fund-raiser

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan on Friday abruptly canceled a fund-raiser that sought $5,000 each from lobbyists after disclosure that the invitations trumpeted his chairmanship of the Senate committee rewriting President Clinton's tax bill.

The Associated Press reported Thursday that solicitations were sent the week before the Senate Finance Committee began work on the tax plan and made clear reference to Moynihan's new position as chairman.

"Most importantly, Senator

Moynihan is now chairman of the Finance Committee where he will oversee 55 percent of all federal spending and 98 percent of all revenue raising, as well as health care reform and trade," it said.

The New York Democrat's office announced Friday that the event, scheduled for July 19, was being canceled.

"The senator took a look at the story and said, 'This is not what I need when I'm trying to put together a bill,'" said Bill Cunningham, an official with Moynihan's re-election committee.

White House denies new IRS charge

WASHINGTON — The White House on Friday denied making an implied threat to draw the IRS into a probe of the White House travel office. But reports of such tactics drew new protests from Republican lawmakers.

"The most terrifying letters in the English language are FBI and IRS," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., as he called anew for a Senate inquiry of what he called "apparent political abuse" of both the Internal Revenue Service and the FBI.

According to a report in Friday's editions of the Washington Post, a White House lawyer last month discussed the possibility of using the IRS to investigate allegations of wrongdoing in the White House travel office if the FBI did not immediately begin doing it.

Task force will look at welfare reform

WASHINGTON — The White House named its welfare reform task force Friday, including at least one member who grew up on public assistance.

The 27-member task force will spend the summer and fall developing a plan to overhaul the nation's welfare system, now reaching record numbers of American families.

The task force members include representatives of several federal departments and agencies. Fernando Torres-Gil said he grew up on welfare and lived in public housing.

Pro-lifer receives 5-month sentence

NEW YORK — Operation Rescue founder Randall Terry was sentenced to five months in prison Friday for presenting a fetus to Bill Clinton during the Democratic National Convention.

"Unfortunately, when the defendant spoke, he demonstrated no remorse, no contrition, no respect for the law," U.S. District Court Judge Robert J. Ward said as he imposed the sentence, which was suspended pending Terry's appeal.

Ward found Terry, 34, of Binghamton, guilty of one charge of contempt following a three-day, non-jury trial. Ward said Terry aided and abetted a man pretending to be an autograph seeker who presented the fetus to Clinton on July 14, 1992, even though Terry was not present.

Panel backs 2 cheapest plans

Report: Space station costs could be minimized if Congress commits to stable funding over time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The two cheapest options for a space station are the "most deserving of further consideration," a presidentially appointed panel said Friday.

In a report delivered to the White House, the committee said that although NASA was unable to redesign the space station within the spending targets set by President Clinton, its team did find major cost savings for the project.

NASA's redesign team called for a 30 percent reduction in NASA and contractor employees and a management restructuring of the space agency.

But costs for the station could be minimized, the committee report said, if Congress would commit to stable funding over the life of the project.

The report also said that if NASA used a high-angle launch path for the orbiting laboratory, it would enable Russia to participate, further cutting costs and enhancing international cooperation. The high-angle path would also allow station components to be launched using European or Russian rockets.

Clinton instructed NASA in March to redesign Space Station Freedom and come up with versions costing $5 billion, $7 billion and $9 billion over the next five years. The White House also named an advisory committee, headed by Charles Vest, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to review the NASA study and make recommendations to Clinton.

There was no immediate announcement on when the White House will decide which space station designs it will propose.

The NASA team, which released its report Monday, came up with four basic designs, called Options A1, A2, B and C. Option B was the most expensive and the one that most closely resembled Space Station Freedom's current design.

Option B also is the design preferred by the majority of the members of the House Committee on Science, Space and Technology.

However, the White House advisory panel recommended only Options A1, A2 and C. The committee said that A1 and A2 were so similar that it considered them as one.

Option A uses much of the equipment and general design that had been developed for Space Station Freedom. Its plan calls for construction in orbit with 16 shuttle flights. This option would cost of $12.8 billion over five years, the committee said. But this version "is a high risk option during the critical launch and assembly operations," the committee said.

Option C, the report said, is the cheapest and least risky. This design would involve building a module that would be launched unmanned by components of the space shuttle. The module, which resembles a tin can, would have the most enclosed volume and would be powered by solar panels. Its estimated cost is $11.9 billion over five years.

Option B is a scaled-down version of Space Station Freedom's current design and has been estimated to cost $13.3 billion over the next five years.

Three streamlined designs for space station

NASA has until June 7 to present President Clinton with three options for building a space station, each designed to cut construction costs. Estimates for building the current design, Space Station Freedom, have gone well over budget. The new station's purpose would remain the same — to provide a permanent research laboratory in space. A preview of the options:

Lowest cost station

This station — the most spare and least costly of the three — would be built in three phases.

- Phase 1: "Power station" — an orbiting source of electrical power to which a manned shuttle could be hitched for up to 30 days.
- Phases 2 and 3: Funds permitting, additional modules could be added, including those being designed by Canadian, Japanese and European space agencies. The final phase would enable astronauts and other scientists to live at the station for long periods of time.

► Design elements: Mostly simplified hardware from Freedom design

Number of launches to make permanent: 13

Single-launch station

This station — called the "can" — differs radically from the other two. One shot would deliver the core station and some equipment.

► The "Can": Seven decks joined by a central passageway; seven ports to berth international modules; other elements; houses four crew permanently

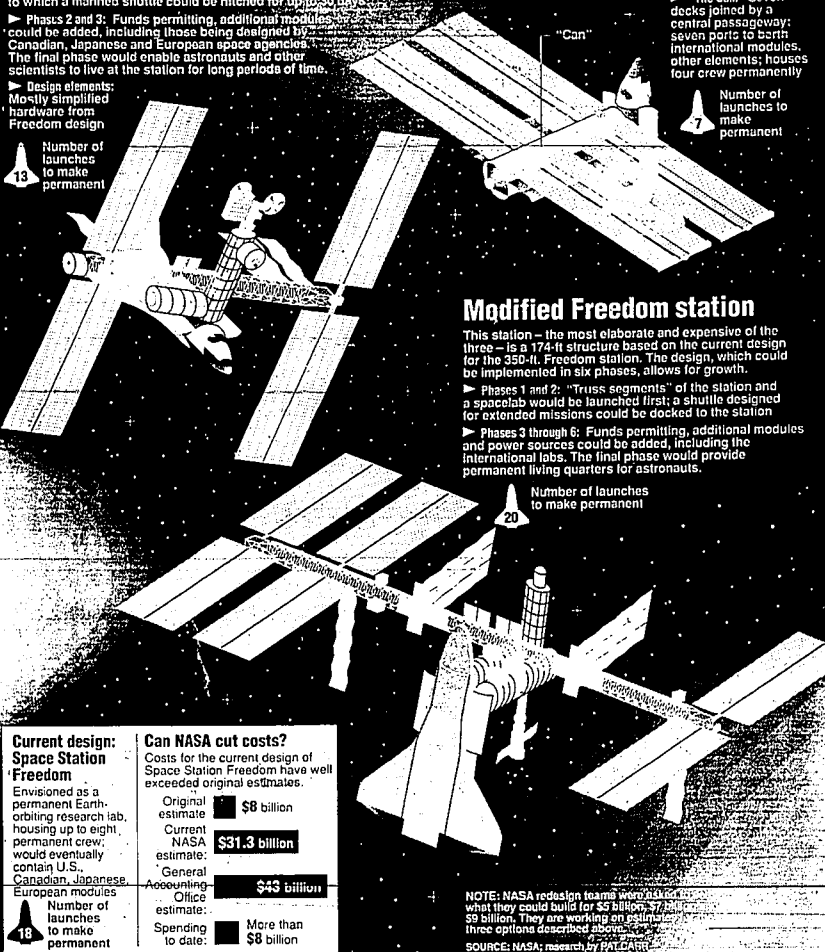

Number of launches to make permanent: 7

Modified Freedom station

This station — the most elaborate and expensive of the three — is a 174-ft structure based on the current design for the 350-ft Freedom station. The design, which could be implemented in six phases, allows for growth.

- Phases 1 and 2: "Truss segments" of the station and a spacecab would be launched first; a shuttle designed for extended missions could be docked to the station
- Phases 3 through 6: Funds permitting, additional modules and power sources could be added, including the international labs. The final phase would provide permanent living quarters for astronauts.

Number of launches to make permanent: 20

Current design: Space Station Freedom

Envisioned as a permanent Earth-orbiting research lab, housing up to eight, permanent crew; would eventually contain U.S., Canadian, Japanese, European modules

Number of launches to make permanent: 18

Can NASA cut costs?

Costs for the current design of Space Station Freedom have well exceeded original estimates.

Original estimate: $8 billion
 Current NASA estimate: $31.3 billion
 General Accounting Office estimate: $43 billion
 Spending to date: More than $8 billion

NOTE: NASA redesign teams are developing what they could build for $5 billion, $7 billion, $9 billion. They are working on estimates for three options described above.

FBI chief should be eased out, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior Justice Department officials have concluded that FBI Director William S. Sessions should be replaced and are searching for a graceful way to ease him out, says an administration official.

Sessions

The agency is seeking a way to get Sessions to resign "in the good of the service" and to avoid further controversy over an internal report that harshly criticized him for ethical lapses, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Under this scenario, Attorney General Janet Reno would not be forced to make any recommendations to the White House about Sessions' future, and Sessions would be able to leave the post he has held for five years without further harm to his reputation, the official said.

Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern said that Reno "has not reached a conclusion on what she is going to report to the president."

Thomas Sussman, a Washington attorney who represents Sessions, did not immediately return telephone calls.

Stern said that Deputy Attorney General Philip B. Heymann is reviewing the matter, but declined to provide any details. Heymann's review could take a month, Stern said.

A report by the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility said Sessions arranged speaking engagements so that he and his wife, Alice, could fly to San Francisco at Christmas to spend the holidays with their daughter.

It also questioned the propriety of other use of FBI aircraft and Mrs. Sessions' use of the director's limousine for personal errands.

And it criticized Sessions for letting his wife interfere in bureau business by overruling a decision by FBI officials to build an iron security fence around the couple's home.

Mrs. Sessions insisted on a wooden fence that she said was cheaper and afforded more security and privacy.

Former Attorney General William P. Barr rebuked Sessions in a written reprimand that said evidence of ethical wrongdoing "is overwhelming and your explanations, where provided, are wholly unpersuasive."

Ex-agent's book says FBI blackmails gays

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A fired gay FBI agent accuses the agency of blackmailing suspected homosexual agents by threatening to expose them to family and friends unless they resign.

Frank Buttino said the practice was revealed in documents he obtained from the FBI for the discrimination lawsuit he filed on behalf of all gay FBI employees and job applicants.

The class-action lawsuit is scheduled to go to trial here in September. Despite President Clinton's support of equal rights for homosexuals, the administration plans to defend Buttino's firing, Justice Department spokesman Joe Krovinsky said.

Buttino, a 20-year veteran then stationed in San Diego, was fired in 1990 after disclosing his sexual orientation in response to an anonymous note that was sent to his super-

FCC delays cable rate rollback until Oct. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers will have to wait longer for a rollback in cable TV rates, the Federal Communications Commission said Friday in an announcement that it was delaying enforcement of a new law.

"This means FCC's freeze on rates remains in effect until Oct. 1, said FCC Chairman James Quello.

Both the FCC and local cable companies need more time to meet the requirements of the law passed last year by Congress, he said.

Consumers won't see changes until late fall

The FCC's work has been complicated by lack of staff and refusal of Congress so far to approve funds needed to hire the attorneys and accountants that will be needed to enforce the law.

Consumers won't be seeing any rollbacks in their rates until November at the earliest, but possibly not even by then, said Quello.

Leaders of the House and Senate committees that guided the law to enactment both have approved the delay, said Quello.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., is seeking an additional $11.5 million for this fiscal year so more FCC staff can be hired, but his proposal has not yet been approved by Congress.

The law lets regulators control rates for basic cable TV service, defined as all over-the-air broadcast channels and those cable channels used by local government, school boards and the general public.

But in order for regulation to begin, each franchising authority must file papers with the FCC proving that the local cable operation is a monopoly. The law does not apply in the very few communities where two or more cable companies or similar systems compete.

Initiative should draw more to gay pride parade

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Citizens Alliance's proposed anti-gay initiative is expected to mean more participation than ever in today's fourth annual Gay and Lesbian Freedom Parade in Boise.

More than 500 people are expected to turn out for an event that has drawn 300 to 350 in previous years.

"This initiative has made people realize you must stand up for yourself," Dallas Chase, a Boise gay activist, said Thursday. "There definitely are more people joining organizations and becoming active."

The weekend's activities are part of National Gay Pride Month, and parades and other events will be held in cities around the country.

But Idaho organizers say the anti-gay initiative gives their event a sense of urgency never seen before.

Organizers bill the Boise parade as a "family event," under the theme of "A Family of Pride." But initiative sponsor Kelly Walton of Burley said the theme is merely an attempt to appeal to the idea of traditional values.

"The parade is their own form of freedom of expression. I think they're desperately trying to appear normal," Walton said. "We'll leave it to the public to see if it flies."

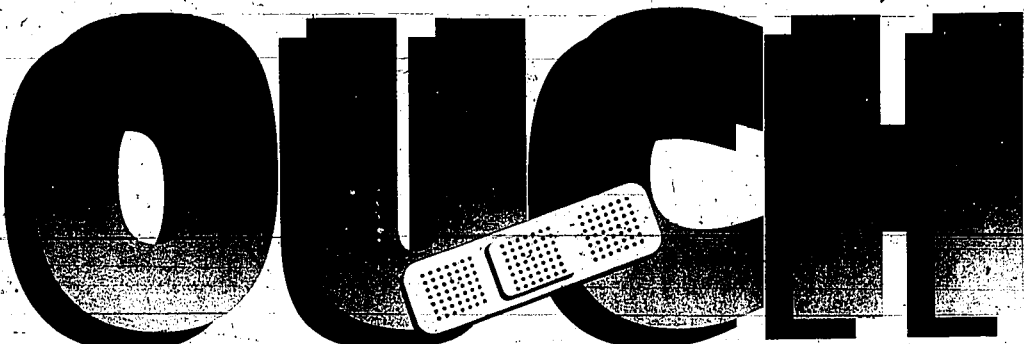

Walton said the Idaho Citizens Alliance plans no demonstrations on the day of the parade. Any displays of opposition will be up to individuals, he said.

His group needs more than 32,000 signatures from registered voters to qualify its initiative for the November 1994 ballot. The measure would bar homosexuals from being granted minority status in hiring, government programs and other areas. It also would bar public schools and governments from portraying homosexuality as acceptable.

Mary Rohlfing, a Boise State University communication instructor and a coordinator of Saturday's parade, said she became involved in local gay organizations and anti-initiative efforts after Oregon's anti-gay Measure 9 was only narrowly defeated last fall.

The formation of the Idaho Citizens Alliance reinforced her commitment, she said.

"I saw Measure 9 as a threat and a cash cow for the radical right. I was convinced that as an educator I should become more active in fighting the ICA's attack on gays and lesbians," Rohlfing said.

Bail denied for 2 Washingtonians

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Bail has been denied for two people accused of plotting to kill a 29-year-old deaf, handicapped woman.

Grace Hope Dickinson and Kenneth Wayne Pearson, both 29 and Spokane, Wash. residents, have been in the Kootenai County Jail without bond since their April 6 arrest on charges of trying to hire a man to kill Pearson's wife.

Michelle Pearson is deaf and has cerebral palsy.

Her husband and Dickinson were arrested as they met with a prospective hit man in Coeur d'Alene, and they pleaded innocent on Thursday. First District Judge Craig Kosonen scheduled their trial to begin Aug. 30.

SPENCER (AP) — Clark County authorities have found the body of an Idaho Falls man who drowned while fishing a swift-flowing creek.

The body of Steve Reynolds, 48, was discovered at about 11 a.m., Friday, north of Spencer.

Clark County Sheriff Craig King said he believes Reynolds may have gone into the water to retrieve his equipment. Rivers are running higher than in recent years and can catch recreation fans off-guard.

Coeur d'Alene man dies in fall at gorge

CLARK FORK (AP) — A Kootenai County man died after falling 120 feet from the Cabinet Gorge Dam in Clark Fork.

Michael Duane Johnson, 34, of Coeur d'Alene and his brother walked onto a mossy point above the river Thursday. Butter County sheriff's Detective John Valdez said Johnson lost his footing and slipped over the edge.

The Clark Fork search-and-rescue team climbed down ropes to reach the body on the rocks below. The dam is located about 30 miles east of Sandpoint.

Romans were stuck on birds

You know how the old Romans caught birds? They boiled mistletoe juice, then spread the gummy concoction on tree limbs, which said birds could step into, but not out of. Thus history lists the Romans as the first to make glue.

Nigerians defy court order, vote today

LAGOS, Nigeria — The military government's election commission denied a court injunction blocking presidential balloting and announced Friday that Nigerians will go to the polls as scheduled to choose a civilian leader.

The confusion over today's vote apparently was orchestrated by Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, Nigeria's ruler since 1985. His motives were unclear, but many here suspect him of sowing confusion to find an excuse to stay in power.

The two candidates in today's presidential election were picked by Babangida and are wealthy friends of his.

Turks protest anti-foreigner violence

BERLIN — Turkish shopkeepers closed for an hour Friday to protest anti-foreigner violence, and organizers promised similar strikes by Germany's biggest minority group to press for more rights for minorities.

Hundreds of people rallied in the Kreuzberg neighborhood, where stores closed from noon to 1 p.m. to stress the importance of Turkish workers to Germany's economy.

Incumbent should hold Iran presidency

TEHRAN, Iran — President Hashemi Rafsanjani headed to victory over token challengers Friday as voters were urged to flock to the polls to show support for their Islamic leadership.

But Rafsanjani in his second term should confront the same problems he has faced before: a crumbling economy, uncompromising Muslim hard-liners and rebel violence.

Iran's main dissident group reported it carried out a bomb attack on a giant oil refinery Friday — a claim quickly denied by the government.

German magnetic train hits 270 mph

BONN, Germany — Germany's experimental magnetic-levitation train has set a speed record of 270 mph, researchers said Friday.

The run Thursday at Emsland broke the record of 261 mph set on the same track several years ago.

The record for a train on rails is 309 mph by a French train in 1990. The "maglev" train glides above its rail on a magnetic field.

Police sweep cities for Mafia, arrest 13

CATANIA, Sicily — Police launched an anti-Mafia sweep in four cities Friday, arresting 13 people, including the brother of a top Cosa Nostra boss captured last month.

Officials said arrests were made in Catania, Milan, Rimini on the Adriatic coast and San Remo near the French border. Everyone arrested was accused of associating with the Mafia.

Among those picked up was Antonino Santapaola, 39, news agencies reported. He is a younger brother of Benedetto "Nitto" Santapaola, the reputed No. 2 boss of the Cosa Nostra who was captured May 18 after 11 years as a fugitive.

Unrest disrupts relief efforts
Somalia workers see hunger worsen

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — After six months of success in feeding the hungry and caring for the sick, relief workers have once again seen their efforts blocked by violence and political unrest.

While the United Nations' manders its response to an attack that killed 23 peacekeeping troops, hundreds of thousands of Somalis dependent on food aid are going hungry.

Schools operated by foreign aid agencies have closed. Canal repairs in flood-prone areas have stopped, and the truck convoys that had brought relief supplies have ground to a halt.

"This is without a doubt the worst setback to humanitarian efforts," Mike McDonough said Thursday as he described the problems faced by his agency.

Irish Concern, and others.

"What's happening now is a large section of the population which is in good health and finally getting guaranteed food every day has not had food for four or five days. This food was also keeping the market price down for the rest of the population, so it's affecting everybody."

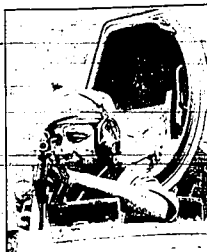

When foreign troops arrived in Somalia in December, most aid agencies welcomed them. Two years of civil war had reduced the country to a state of anarchy, and food aid had killed an estimated 350,000 people, and 2 million more were in danger of starvation.

The situation quickly improved as troops secured airports and ports, allowing aid to arrive safely, and patrolled highways to ensure the food reached its destination. Daily death counts that had reached 300-400 in some cities dropped into the teens and eventually were no longer a factor as malnutrition was quelled.

After Saturday's gunbattles, nearly all foreign relief workers were evacuated from Mogadishu as a precaution against feared widespread violence. Those who remained stayed mainly indoors, unable to do their usual field work because of the prospect of violence and lack of staff.

The most immediate effect was the closure of 35 food distribution sites in Mogadishu, which had been open six days a week and handed out enough food each day to feed about 600,000 people. Nearly 80 percent of Mogadishu's residents still depend on food handouts.

kill 2 Croats

VITEZ, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — British troops guarding an aid convoy unleashed a volley of cannon fire Friday that killed two Croat fighters — the first confirmed deaths in Bosnia at the hands of U.N. peacekeepers.

The attack in the village of Novi Bila was the second against the convoy waged by Croat forces as they face increasing attacks by Muslims, their former allies against Serbs.

European Community mediator Lord David Owen said principle figures in the Yugoslav crisis were invited to a meeting next week in Geneva.

British commander Col. Alastair Dupcan said a new cease-fire was in place in central Bosnia to allow the remainder of the mammoth 500-vehicle relief convoy, organized mostly by Muslims, to proceed north to the government-held town of Vukle.

Bosnian Croats attacked the convoy on Thursday and again on Friday. Sniper fire killed a convoy driver on Friday, and British soldiers reported that Croat troops had seized about 30 drivers and were holding them hostage.

Most of the convoy stayed behind at Croat-held Novi Travnik, but some lead trucks pushed forward early Friday.

Wyoming man injured in Jerome accident

JEROME - A 45-year-old Wyoming man was injured in a two-car accident in Jerome Friday.

Michael T. Stauch of Jackson was in the emergency room at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Friday evening, but a nursing supervisor said he probably would be released soon.

Stauch was riding in a car driven by his wife, Jennifer Stauch, when the accident happened at about noon, Deputy J.D. Gibbs of the Jerome County Sheriff's Office said.

The Stauchs were northbound on South Lincoln, preparing to turn left onto Max's Chevron gas station and were facing a tractor-trailer rig turning left onto 300 South Road, Gibbs said.

Jennifer Stauch turned into the path of a southbound pickup driven by Vern Graham, 22, Gibbs said. She was cited for failure to yield.

Extrication equipment was needed to free Michael Stauch from the car, but nobody else was seriously hurt, Gibbs said.

4-year-old boy with lighter may have started house fire

JEROME - A 4-year-old boy playing with a cigarette lighter may have caused a fire that damaged a Jerome house Friday morning, the city's fire chief said.

Firefighters went to the home of Buddy Lee Scoover, 244 East First St., at 8:25 a.m. The fire had spread from the bedroom closet where it started into the child's bedroom and to the front living room, Fire Chief Jim Auclair said.

The 13-member fire crew was able to put out the flames within two hours. Damage to the house and its contents is estimated at $20,000-$25,000, Auclair said.

Scott, his wife and son all escaped without injury. The Scotts first were aware of the blaze when their son told them his bedroom closet was on fire, Auclair said.

Scott said the house is insured.

Thieves strike Latham Motors again; 5 4X4s taken

TWIN FALLS - Five vehicles were stolen from Latham Motors in Twin Falls Thursday, the same day the dealership's owner offered a reward for information regarding an earlier rash of thefts.

All but one of the 4X4s taken on Thursday were found by Friday, but three of those had been wrecked, detective Dave Heidemann of the Twin Falls Police Department said.

A new Jeep Cherokee is still missing, Heidemann said.

Another new Jeep Cherokee was found inside a barricaded garage and contained evidence that may link it to a burglary, he said.

Police have six suspects in Twin Falls and Buhl and hope to make arrests soon, Heidemann said.

Twin Falls sheriff hooks up phone line for the deaf

TWIN FALLS - Deaf people in Twin Falls County can now call the sheriff's department directly.

The device is in the dispatch office, so help can be sent immediately, Barth said. The number for the TDD is 736-4167.

Marine found guilty in Iceland death

By H.R. Weisel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - A New Jersey Marine was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter Thursday in U.S. military court in Iceland in the March shooting of a Jerome man, a Marine spokesperson said Friday.

However, Lance Cpl. John J. Wahl, 20, was found innocent of personal assault with a deadly weapon in the death of Pfc. Steven Smalley, 19.

Smalley was observing guard-changing procedures March 14 while being indoctrinated, according to a news release read by Lt. Susan Haeg during a telephone interview Friday from the public affairs office for the Atlantic Fleet in Norfolk, Va. A single 9mm round was discharged from a pistol held by Wahl, Haeg said.

"The shooting took place in the ready room inside the main barracks adjacent to the armory at Camp Keflavik," Haeg said.

Wahl was sentenced to two years in confinement, his rank was reduced to the lowest enlisted grade, he must forfeit $500 in pay, pay-monthly-for-six-years and he was given a "bad conduct" discharge, Haeg said; reading a fax sent from the U.S. Keflavik Naval Base in Iceland, where the court martial took place.

The gun's safety was off at the time of the shooting, Haeg said.

Wahl said he didn't know the gun was loaded and wasn't aiming at Smalley at the time of shooting, Haeg said.

He said he believed he had unloaded the gun earlier while cleaning the weapon and making it safe for turn-in.

Five people witnessed the shooting, which killed Smalley instantly. The incident had initially been designated a "military accident" until a "thorough investigation" brought it to trial, Haeg said.

Smalley was a Jerome High School grad-nate and an accomplished musician, performing at Disneyland at the age of 15. He had joined the Marines during his junior year in high school and entered active duty following his high school graduation in 1992.

Wahl is unmarried and from Little Silver, N.J. He entered the Marine Corps Jan. 2, 1992.

Haeg said Wahl's two years of confinement would "probably" be at Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Smalley's mother, Judy McClimens of Jerome, attended the trial.

DeAnna Durham assists her daughter, Angela, with June wedding preparations.

Keeping with tradition

June processions to county courthouse, altar begin

By Analise Taylor
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - June weddings are almost a tradition in Angela Durham's family.

"My grandma, mom, aunt ... all got married in June," said Durham, 18.

She will be married June 25 in the Salt Lake City Mormon Temple.

If marriage license sales at the Twin Falls County Courthouse are any clue, Durham and her bridegroom, Roger R. Dolise, are hardly unique upholding the tradition of June weddings.

Since June 1, 16 marriage licenses have been issued at the courthouse. Thursday and Friday before the Memorial Day weekend, 11 were issued, said Marge Annis, recording supervisor.

The number of licenses probably will not exceed 50 for the month of June, Annis said.

Late summer and Christmas break are actually busier than June, Annis said. College students schedule August weddings to allow preparation time at home in the summer. Nonetheless, churches are busy with June brides.

Six couples are getting married this month at the Methodist Church in Twin Falls, and all Saturdays are booked, said Ruth Kestie, church office manager.

"We are booked heavier in June," she said.

From Jan. 1 to the beginning of June, the church had just 15 weddings.

The Boise LDS Temple is doing plenty of June business, said Evelyn McCoy, secretary. Seventy-one couples are getting married this month in the temple.

From Jan. 1 to April 30, the temple averaged about 53 weddings per month, according to figures provided by Temple President Lloyd Hamilton.

The Rev. Rob Keller of St. Edward's Catholic Church attributed the busy summer season to the weather and the vacation time that allows families to get together for weddings.

"Summertime is the busiest," he said. "But weddings in the Catholic Church are celebrated year-round."

From May 1 to August 31, 11 marriage ceremonies were planned for the church as of this week.

In neighboring Nevada, weddings happen every day, with July and August producing the most business for the 32 chapels in the Las Vegas area.

The wedding business alone brings approximately 1.2 million people to Las Vegas every year, according to the convention bureau of Clark County, which includes Las Vegas.

To accommodate the lovebirds, the courthouse is open from 8 a.m. to midnight Monday through Thursday and from 8 a.m. Friday to midnight Sunday.

Clark County issues an average of 80,000 marriage licenses per year, said Sam K. Bledsoe, Baptist minister of the Cupid Wedding Chapel.

For the chapels in Las Vegas, summertime is busiest. In June, the courthouse issues 1,200-1,400 licenses per week and in July and August, the number exceeds 1,700, Bledsoe said.

DARE asks county, city for funding

Drug program may fold once agency grants end

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Faced with reduced state and federal grant funds, supporters of DARE - Twin Falls County's popular drug-education program - are looking for money.

The coming school year will bring the final installment of a three-year grant, and the money for 1993-94 is less than the city police officers who run the program had anticipated.

That means the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program in the county's elementary schools could go under without additional support from the public, DARE officer Don Hall said.

He and other supporters will ask Twin Falls County commissioners and City Council members from throughout the county to chip in and keep the program going.

"Right now, our main concern is to maintain the status quo," Hall said. Elected officials need to hear from their constituents about how much to support DARE, he said.

DARE is the nationally recognized program in which uniform police officers teach elementary school children how to resist drugs and the peer pressure that encourages their use.

It began with the Los Angeles Police Department several years ago and came to Twin Falls in 1991.

Since then, Hall said he and fellow DARE officer Curtis Gamberel have reached thousands of kids and given them the tools to stay drug-free.

At schools, kids flock to the officers as though they were Michael-Jordan-Mickey Mouse and Madonna all rolled into one.

They say their souped-up DARE-mobies attract a lot of kids who probably wouldn't come near a police officer.

After class and during the summer, Gamberel and Hall still can be seen around town, talking to kids and patrolling popular youth hangouts.

"I wouldn't stay in it if I didn't think the program was worthwhile," Hall said.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Norma Blass said the county should do its part, and she wants to hear from residents about funding for the program.

"Personally I think it is a real worthwhile program," Blass said. "Something we're doing isn't working, so we have to try something like this to help these kids."

The program stretches into every Twin Falls County elementary school. Jerome County students also go through a DARE program.

Library Board taps Robertson as new member

By Phil Salm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls City Council has appointed Tom Robertson to the Twin Falls Public Library Board of Trustees starting July 1.

Council members voted unanimously this week for Robertson to replace Councilman Tom Condie, who will serve as a non-voting liaison to the board of trustees.

Robertson joins four other voting trustees, plus Condie, and will serve through 1994.

The change comes from a revised state law that says council members no longer can serve as voting library trustees. One council member must serve as a liaison between the council and trustees, however.

This revision puzzled Councilman Gale Kleinkopf, who favors an active, voting member of the council on the board of trustees.

Estate gift buys library globe, sign

TWIN FALLS - A $5,000 gift from a Twin Falls woman will buy the Twin Falls Public Library a new sign, illuminated globe of the earth and tack boards for children.

The library also will buy a 32-inch illuminated globe and tackable surfaces for the children's room, so that displays no longer must be taped to the walls, Call said.

Stronk was a longtime library patron, he said.

The projected Twin Falls DARE budget for the upcoming school year is $93,700, an increase of $13,000 from the previous year.

Most of the DARE money - $79,000 - is earmarked for salary and benefits for Gambrel and Hall. The rest of the money will go toward the ubiquitous T-shirts and buttons, plus supplies, vehicle maintenance, uniforms and cleaning.

With $28,000 in grant money and another $26,000 from the city of Twin Falls, the program is $39,700 short of its goal for the next school year.

The Magic Valley DARE Foundation

hop to raise $54,000, plus establish a source of funding to keep the program afloat in the future.

"Most people get the impression in place, it's there forever," said foundation President Dave Van Engelen. "That's not the case here."

In Jerome, the foundation hopes to raise more than $25,000. Van Engelen has had a child go through the DARE program, and he said the officers have a big impact on the kids.

Hall tells of children whose parents have sought treatment for drug and alcohol abuse after their children began telling them about the things they learned in school from the DARE officers.

The program has given some children the courage to talk about sexual molestation that was happening at home, he said.

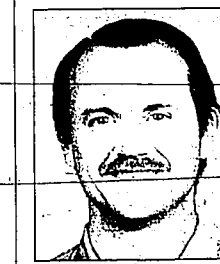

"There are success stories like that, so the program is working," Hall said.

The next DARE budget includes money to train a third officer to use over in case Hall or Gambrel is injured or ill, Hall said.

Mule hair saves Burley a bundle in demolition

Old City Hall plaster used hair for binder instead of asbestos

Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY - Mule hair might have saved the city of Burley a pocket-load of cash.

Mayor Frank Bauman reported at the last City Council meeting that it would have cost much more money to demolish its old city hall had asbestos been in the plaster. The head of the company doing the surty determined, however, that instead of asbestos, mule hair was used as a binder for the building, which was constructed in about 1917.

Asbestos apparently wasn't available that long ago, Bauman said. Asbestos removal from the building - from floor tiles - began Friday, Bauman said, and might continue into Monday. The City Council authorized the cost of removal, not to exceed $6,800.

The company doing the asbestos work, Valley Research Corp. from Hagerman is doing the removal. The company also conducted an analysis of the building to determine how much asbestos, which has been linked to lung problems, there was in the building.

Out of 22 samples taken from the building, three came back positive for asbestos, Bauman said. The asbestos was in the floor tiles. The city, following established guidelines, was required to give the Environmental Protection Agency notice that they were proposing asbestos be removed from the building. The EPA then has 10 days to examine how the proposal will be done. The agency, in turn, allowed the asbestos removal to take place.

"The EPA is the watchdog of the whole thing," Bauman said.

The place where the old City Hall now stands might be turned into a small park, Bauman said. Previous to building the new City Hall, it was thought some parking places might be needed to allow for traffic into the building, directly east of the old City Hall.

Bauman said, however, that there already appears to be adequate parking. An exact date as to when City Hall will be demolished hasn't been set yet. Bauman said the city has asked several companies for bids, however, and that the work should be done this summer.

HEYBURN - Mini-Cassia Storage will be holding an auction Saturday.

The items are taken storage bins which have overdue bills, according to Carla Hare, secretary at the storage facility.

"We had a bunch of people pay their bills (Friday)," she said, the day before items go on the auction block.

This is the second time for the auction, Hare said. The first auction was held about four years ago.

Most of the items are household goods, including furniture.

Some of the bills have been overdue for as long as six or seven months. Hare said they wanted to wait for the warm weather before holding the auction.

She said some people store their property and forget about it while others figure the things they have stored aren't worth the cost of storing it.

The auction will begin at 10 a.m.

Wagon train events deemed successful

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY - Despite what might have been some of the coldest nights he's spent outdoors, Cassia County Commissioner Weldon Beck said he had an enjoyable time during the Mini-Cassia sesquicentennial wagon train.

The wagon train ended Thursday evening with participants appearing to be in good spirits as they paraded down Overland Avenue in Burley.

The group that sometimes numbered more than 200 had to weather rainstorms, from showers that fell as the wagon train began near Almo Monday to heavy rain that fell as the group neared Burley Thursday.

The first day turned into a wet affair, Beck said, made worse because the group had to cross about 13 to 15 streams.

"There was water running everywhere," he said. "We got so cold and so wet."

Catered meals were "out of this world," Beck said. Each night included entertainment, including a history lesson on each spot the group pitched its camp.

There were no serious accidents during the trip, which made Beck happy. A few incidents, including two wagon break-downs, hindered the trip a little.

The first day before the trip began, the tongue of the official Cassia County wagon broke. A blacksmith was able to fix it and get it into camp that night, Beck said. One other wagon broke its tongue.

Religion

It doesn't matter who's who

Rev. Stephan Ross

The Rev. Stephan Ross has been a minister of United Methodist churches since 1982. He has served churches in Oregon and is currently serving at the Burley United Methodist Church.

He has a bachelor of science degree in biology from Portland State University and a master of divinity degree from the Pacific School of Religion. He and his wife, Joanne, have been married 20 years and have three children, Justin, Michael and Aaron.

The Times-News invites area clergy to submit columns of 400 words or less. Column topics can include a point of doctrine, religious perspective on current events or social commentary. Send columns to Denise Turner, assistant features editor, Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Treating religions equally

The Supreme Court ruled this week that schools may allow religions to use school facilities and — maybe — that student-led prayers are acceptable at high-school graduations.

This eliminates the fear on the part of school officials that they would be violating the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution if they rented school property for religious gatherings or if prayer was uttered at school functions.

But public-school leaders must still exercise caution and common sense if they hope to stay out of trouble with civil rights organizations and government officials.

I want to be entirely clear here. I see the First Amendment as the one law that stands between us and religious tyranny.

If you want to see what the United States would be like without the First Amendment, you need only look as far as Iran, for instance, where such religions as the Bahai faith are routinely persecuted and people tortured and murdered for believing anything but the strictest form of Islam.

Clark Morpew Faith today

The First Amendment also causes some difficulty in the United States, allowing the rise of such bizarre religions as the Branch Davidians. But if I have to choose between having a few kooky religions or outlawing approved religion, I will opt for the kooks every time.

Here, we have civil rights organizations as watchdog groups to make sure the First Amendment is observed by government officials. And if any religion is being harassed by any level of government, civil rights organizations will be there to protect citizens from that interference.

Now the Supreme Court has spoken a good word for religion. Basing their ruling on freedom of speech, all nine justices concurred that public-school leaders who allow some outside groups to use school property must permit religious groups access, too.

That doesn't mean that schools can't refuse space to a religious group for legitimate reasons: for instance, if the school is filled to capacity on the day a church wants to rent space or if the church gathering would interrupt classes.

But here's the caution. Schools cannot favor one religion over another, and that is what civil rights organizations are going to be watching.

So if school leaders rent space to Christians, then they will be expected to do the same when Hare Krishnas ask to meet.

You may not want the Hare Krishnas in your school because you believe they do not share the community's values. But if one religion is approved and another refused space under the same conditions, the Supreme Court says you will have discriminated "against speech on the basis of viewpoint."

The second part of this week's ruling may be a little more sensitive. Apparently, there can be prayers said at graduation ceremonies as long as the person uttering the prayer is a student. No clergy are allowed to pray, and school officials cannot order the prayer or coerce students to participate.

But the last word on this issue has not been heard, I suspect. The Supreme Court made no binding ruling on the matter. Rather, the court refused to hear a case against a school district that had allowed a student to say a prayer at a graduation ceremony.

The decision not to hear the case has led conservative Christians to conclude that a student prayer would be acceptable. But there are sure to be challenges in lower courts, and my guess is the Supreme Court eventually will have to rule.

But all the court rulings in the world cannot stop prayer from happening in schools. The courts ruled long ago that student-led groups could use school space for meetings, and many of the groups probably not only pray but study the Bible as well. And we've still got coaches gathering athletes into a prayer circle and coercing them into asking Jesus to help the team win.

As our society grows more religiously diverse, questions about religious issues are going to surface more often. Just remember this: if you treat one religion well, you have to treat every religion well.

It's the truth: If we want religious freedom, we must be diligent in protecting the religion of our neighbor.

Clark Morpew is an ordained clergyman and a writer for the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press.

"John answered, 'Master, we saw someone casting out demons in your name, and we tried to stop him because he does not follow with us.' But Jesus said to him, 'Do not stop him, for whoever is not against you is for you.'" (Luke 9:49-50, NRSV)

Seems like one of the things that engages our energy is deciding who's in and who's out. It takes a lot of forms. Over in the former Yugoslavia, it takes the form of "ethnic cleansing," where one sort of folks don't like another sort of folks to even exist. We don't have much of that kind of discrimination here, praise God! But we do have the kind of thing Jesus confronted back when Christianity was brand-spanking new in the world.

We still feel the need to protect the name. We still want the power to decide who gets the tag and who doesn't. In fact, we have all recently witnessed a little mini-debate in the pages of this newspaper about "who is a Christian and who isn't."

Maybe we ought to take a cue from Jesus himself. His advice basically boiled down to some simple principles. First, get busy with what it is Christ wants you to do. If you fill your time with following him, you won't have much time to worry about what somebody else is up to.

Second, if they aren't against you, count them as friends and let it be. When Jesus gave them that advice, somebody who was against you wasn't just someone with a different idea. It was somebody who was taking your freedom or your life.

Jesus never showed the slightest fear about what others were doing. His confidence in the ultimate victory of God's good will was so great that he just went forward in God's will without worrying about the opposition or error of others. So do those today who really believe in the power of God.

An awful lot of people don't really care what you or I say about who qualifies for the title, "Christian."

What they're really more impressed by is any kind of evidence that there is someone in the world living in the power of the goodness of God. The greatest witness in the world is the confident life of love.

Onward Christian soldiers

Frustrated evangelicals join political campaigns in growing numbers

"Many live under obedience more of necessity than of love, and such people are often discontented and complaining. They will never attain freedom of mind unless they submit with their whole heart for the love of God."

—Thomas Kempis, "Of the Imitation of Christ"

By Steve Crump Times-News writer

BURLEY — Dr. Paul Dearing believes that he lives in the greatest country on Earth, and he's not happy with what's becoming of it.

Homosexuals clamor for civil rights, a Supreme Court that seemed within an eyelash of banning abortion four years ago is turning left and public schools that used to instill moral values now shy away from discussing them.

"We're afraid of the sense that a nation with a majority that shares moral values with evangelical Christians like Dearing seems to be morally adrift. And that nobody seems to be doing much about it.

So, Dearing, a 37-year-old Burley surgeon, political neophyte and a born-again Christian, called up Kelly Walton, the Heyburn contractor who's trying to get an initiative on the Idaho ballot next year that would forbid state recognition of the rights of homosexuals, and volunteered his services.

"Jesus spent three years of his life ministering and teaching," Dearing said. "And what he was dealing with was social issues. I don't think a Christian can avoid politics."

Christian soldiers are on the march in Idaho again, some of them in the cause of Walton's anti-gay rights measure, others trying to get friendly school board members elected and still others seeking the right for their kids to pray at school.

"A Christian has an obligation to the good of the community," said the Rev. Jim Evans, pastor of Twin Falls' Heritage Alliance Church. "And that means being an active citizen."

Active, yes. But not, perhaps, altogether enthusiastic about it.

There's a strong strain of mistrust for politics in Christian history. It grew up as a religion on the outs with the authorities, and many of the Protestant congregations that were the antecedents of today's American Christian conservatives survived by either fleeing unfriendly governments or making an uneasy peace with them.

"Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's," Christ enjoined his followers. Sixty years later, Paul wrote in his epistle to the Romans:

"Everyone must submit himself to the governing authorities, for there is no authority — except that which God has established. The authorities that exist have been established by God. Consequently, he who rebels against the authorities is rebelling against what God has instituted."

"God requires that we respect the authorities," Dearing said. "But He also requires that we follow our conscience when they are wrong."

Two hundred years ago, Thomas Jefferson erected his famous wall to separate church from state, setting in place one of the most basic tenets of American government.

"And one of the most misunderstood, evangelical activists believe.

"It's one of the greatest lies," Walton said. "The Constitution says government can't interfere with religion; it says nothing about the separation of church and state. It's something that the ACLU promotes for its own ends.

"You don't hear anybody from the left complaining because Clinton is a Baptist, do you?"

Christ told his disciples he was bringing them a sword, not peace, and many evangelicals believe aptly is the equivalent of moral cowardice.

"I think a lot of Christians become politically active because they see things that need to be changed and they don't know how else to do it," said Dr. Wayne Wright, a Twin Falls cardiologist who is president of the 5,000-member Idaho Family Forum. "In that respect, they're like any other American.

In a democracy, if you want to things to change, you have to become involved."

When Walton sees the future, he sees Idaho as sort of a conservative city on a hill.

"I'd like to see Idaho as a conservative example," he said. "I'd like to see a state that has retained its values, where nobody — not homosexuals, not blacks, not whites, not Christians — has any special rights. I'd like to see it be an example for the rest of the country, or at least for some other states. Some states, I think, are too far gone."

Anger builds on reservation after bishop decides to cut clergy

The Associated Press

LAPWAI — Rebellion is brewing on the Nez Perce Indian Reservation over Roman Catholic Bishop Tod Brown's decision to replace Lapwai's full-time priest with a part-timer and a nun.

"We will go to a higher authority," Mary Maler, a member of the Sacred Heart Parish Council, said. And Theresa Quinn agreed.

"We aren't done with him yet," Quinn said.

Brown faced an increasingly angry crowd at the parish's St. Joseph Mission Church in Stickpoo last Sunday after the annual Corpus Christi Mass. The parishioners were disgruntled over Brown's decision that will eliminate weekday masses and replace two Sunday masses with a service on Saturday evening when many church members are still busy on the farm.

The Rev. Anthony DiLoreto, who has been the resident priest in Lapwai at $12,000 a year, is being transferred next month to a parish in Idaho Falls. He will be replaced by the Rev. William Crowley, who is assigned to a church in Lewiston. Crowley will be paid $65 plus mileage for each Saturday mass. Sister Sharon Baker will be stationed at the parish full-time at a salary of $22,000 a year.

Sacred Heart is just the latest of rural churches being hit by a shortage of clergy in the Catholic Church. Fewer young men are entering the priesthood at a time when older priests are retiring.

Brown, who said four Idaho priests are retiring this summer, said the diocese has little choice but to move remaining priests from sparsely populated rural parishes in northern Idaho to more densely populated ones in the southern part of the state.

But parishioners said the elimination of Sunday mass would reduce church attendance because many will not be able to make the Saturday night service and do not have cars to drive to another church on Sunday.

Walton, a 36-year-old activist who was involved in the unsuccessful effort to enact the anti-gay rights Measure Nine in Oregon last year, says his is a conservative movement, not a Christian one.

But he describes himself as a Christian, and says perhaps two-thirds of his supporters are evangelical Christians or Mormons.

"Most of these people have been politically active in any way before, but homosexual rights is the issue that has gotten them active," Walton said. "They're unhappy and they're alarmed as to what's happening to family values in this country."

But beyond the evangelicals and Mormons, Walton figures there are at least as many "mainstream" voters, their conservative social values. Together, he says, they comprise a vast majority.

"We have coordinators in every county of the state, and we're working hard to get the message out," he said. "We want to win this battle, before it becomes a wedge issue, like Second Amendment concerns."

Stephanie Witt, an assistant professor of political science at Boise State University and perhaps Idaho's leading expert on the evangelical right and politics, agrees that gay rights is a powerful "wedge" issue, the kind that can get like-minded voters fired up.

But she's not sure Walton should count on being able to build an evangelical-Mormon-conservative alliance around it.

"The fact is that evangelicals are less politically homogeneous than most people think," she said. "Ten to 15 percent describe themselves as liberals. And I don't think you can assume that all Mormons, or even most of them, will rally around this issue. They're not politically homogeneous either."

Monie Carlson, Twin Falls LDS stake president, echoes that sentiment.

"I wouldn't classify all of the Mormons I know as conservatives, although certainly many are," he said. "It seems to me that Mormons are as diverse politically as the rest of Idaho."

And not all Protestant conservatives share Walton's enthusiasm for the anti-gay rights initiative.

"My feeling is that if it's not broke, don't fix it," Wright said. "I just don't think homosexual rights is a problem in Idaho."

Wright's interest is in lower-profile issues, and he's typical of many who see Christian activists who think globally, but act locally.

"I'm very interested in promoting Judeo-Christian values, and I think you do that best by educating people," he said. "The Idaho Family Forum is not in the business of running candidates for office. We're interested in making our views known on education, school prayer, abortion, and other issues."

Evans says that's partly the outgrowth of the dashed expectations that evangelicals had about the Reagan administration.

"A lot of Christians expected that when someone who supported Christian issues was elected, change would come from above," he said. "That's not the way it works. When change comes, it comes from the grass roots."

"One of the reason evangelicals and conservatives are effective is that they learn from their mistakes," Witt said. "In 1964, Barry Goldwater, whom many of them supported, was absolutely crushed, and everyone was saying that was the end of conservatism in America. It turned out that that was only the beginning, because conservatives like Richard Nixon had developed those mailing lists they used so effectively to elect Nixon and later Reagan."

"Three years ago in Idaho, they were absolutely crushed when Gov. Andrus vetoed HB625 (a measure that would have outlawed most abortions in Idaho)," she said. "But two years later, they came back strong and got a lot of conservatives elected to the Legislature."

"The best illustration I know of is

Catholic schools continue strong teaching tradition

Newport News Daily Press

Jani and Mike Flanagan spend nearly $200 a month and several hours a week volunteering at their daughters' parochial school. It's a price they're willing to pay. "I really don't feel like we sacrifice that much, because we get so much in return," said Mrs. Flanagan, a 37-year-old Timpanio. Mr. Flanagan, whose children attend Our Lady of Mount Carmel School in Newport News, Va.,

The Flanagans' dedication is part of the reason America's Roman Catholic school system, the largest private school system in the country, survives today. Nearly 200 years after St. Elizabeth Ann Seton opened a free school for boys and girls in Maryland, laying the groundwork for the modern American Catholic school system, more than 2.5 million children study in Catholic schools across the United States.

Teachers and parents have the system by pointing to its "realities" of oriented education, where children are taught right from wrong as well as reading and writing. Students are taught to serve as well as spell; in many of Catholic high schools, volunteer work is required for graduation. And social issues are brought to the fore.

Catholic school educators use standards to back up their claims they're doing a good job in academics as well. Approximately 83 percent of their high school graduates go on to college, about 20 percent more than the pool of all high school graduates, according to the U.S. Department of Education.

(Boise Republican state Sen.) Roger Madsen. Witt said. "He was a vocal supporter of 625 in 1990, and he lost narrowly to Cynthia Scanlon. Then last year, he emphasized other issues, promised he wouldn't raise the abortion issue again and it's 'realities' change. Walton agrees, comes by increments.

"The most powerful man in Washington, D.C., isn't Bill Clinton," Walton said. "It's (speaker of the House) Tom Foley. You change things in the country by changing Congress, and you change Congress by starting at the precinct level."

"That's what we're doing."

"It can't come soon enough for Dearing, who holds with John that man is perceptible only with acceptance of Christ."

"I believe in moral absolutes," he said. "And I believe in a value system founded on absolutes."

Even if that means, sometimes, rendering to God the things that are Caesar's.

"If your children play in the street, you stop them, you teach them, you try to make them understand that what they're doing is harmful to them," Dearing said. "That's the way I feel about the homosexual agenda. What they're doing is wrong, and it's going to destroy them."

"Here I stand," Martin Luther told his inquisitors 470 years ago. "I cannot do otherwise."

"I can't be intolerant and accepting of things that I know are wrong," Dearing said. "If I were, as a Christian, I'd be wrong."

Bulls prevail despite Barkley

The Associated Press

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley played like the Most Valuable Player. Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls played like champions and made history Friday night.

Barkley had 42 points and 13 rebounds and played with special fire from start to finish, but it was Jordan's 42 points, 12 rebounds and nine assists that carried the Bulls to a 111-108 victory that pulled them ever closer to their third consecutive championship.

"The most important thing now is Game 3," Jordan said. "That puts us in the driver's seat for what we want to do with history. I don't think it's in our best interest to go home to relax. We need to go back and keep the pressure on them."

Never before has a team started the NBA Finals with two victories on the road, and the outcome makes the Bulls an overwhelming favorite to win another title. The next three games of the best-of-7 series are scheduled for Chicago Stadium, starting Sunday night with Game 3.

"We have it in our court, but they're still the best team in the league on the road," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "They beat us in our place. The Suns are tough."

Phoenix beat the Bulls in Chicago during the regular season, and the Suns' 27-14 road record was the best in the NBA, but their 35-6 mark at home did them no good in their first two games of the finals.

Jordan got plenty of help, with Horace Grant scoring 24 points and Scottie Pippen coming through with 15 points, 12 rebounds and 12 assists. A late flurry by Danny Ainge was the best support Barkley got.

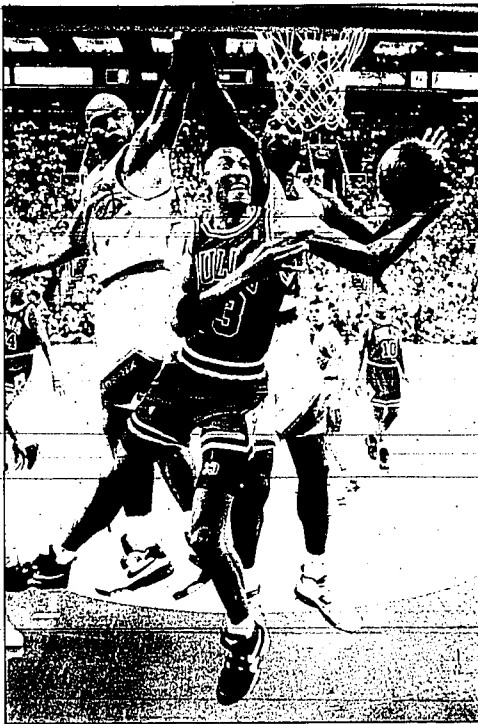

"We took advantage of Charles' tiredness in the fourth quarter," Jordan said. "I can understand some of the frustration he has right now. He could not get his team over the hump."

A 3-pointer by Dan Majerle pulled the Suns even at 87-87 in the first minute of the fourth quarter, the first tie since the first half.

Three more ties and two lead changes followed in the next three minutes before the Bulls took the lead for good on a 3-pointer by John Paxson, his first point of the game.

Jordan kept Chicago in front by scoring the next 10 points for the Bulls, giving them a 106-98 advantage on a jumper with 1:33 left.

Ainge, who scored 10 of his 20 points in the last 1:27, followed with a 3-pointer and a layup, pulling the Suns to 106-103. "He got in my face and I just tried to contest his shot," Pippen said. "I was able PHOENIX — Be kind, Chicago. The Suns are coming, pending an attack of good sense, to finish their obligation as final fodder for the Bulls' three-peat.

For the next four days, a week at the most, they will be our guests and no danger of anything fragile or dear.

Do not bother to challenge one of them on the street, as Charles Smith of the Knicks was challenged, for they are harmless souls and likely to be diverted by such modern wonders as skyscrapers and taxicabs.

Be especially lenient to Dan Majerle, the old Chippewa, for he has been extremely courteous to Michael Jordan, treating him as if Jordan has left him something in his will, which guilt may actually force Jordan to do.

Majerle may not be easy to spot. He favors a natural camouflage that makes him invisible for long periods of time. Most of June, so far.

Mighty Ducks put webbed foot down for new dress code

The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Employees at the new Anaheim Arena, home of the National Hockey League's Mighty Ducks, can forget wearing eyeliner, tattoos and facial hair. But they better be wearing underwear.

The venue has taken a page from the Walt Disney Co., owner of the Mighty Ducks, and issued an employee handbook that is nothing if not specific in how it expects its workers to look.

"We did collaborate with the Walt Disney Co., the Mighty Ducks being one of our main tenants," confirmed John Nicoletti, the arena's marketing manager.

"The key to the appearance guidelines is to limit the number of distractions," Nicoletti said. "We want you to enjoy the event, not talk about the usher who had half a shaved head."

What is a "distraction?" According to the handbook, it's frosted, streaked or excessively teased hair.

Asymmetrical haircuts. Dyed hair that isn't a "natural looking" color.

If you wear a wig or toupee, you have to bring a doctor's note to verify that you wear it for medical reasons.

Women can't wear eyeliner, false eyelashes or eye shadow.

Men can't wear moustaches, beards, shaved heads or floured or muton-chop sideburns.

And everyone is required to wear underwear. (Don't ask. They'll know.)

College coach — higher pay, higher responsibility

Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — In many ways, the collegiate-head-coach has entered an era of unmatched success. Public recognition for the most successful has become national.

More people know how to pronounce Krzyzewski than Mike over dreamed.

For the members of the American Football Coaches Association, success has brought rewards unfathomed even a decade ago. In 1982, when Texas A&M signed Jackie Sherrill to coach Aggie football for about $260,000 per year, faculty members screamed.

The fact that at least a dozen head football coaches now make more than $300,000 annually no longer is news. Heads did turn, however, when the Duke head basketball coach charged with filling seats. The two revenue-producing coach — Krzyzewski (Shute-SHEFF-see) — signed a $5.6 million, 15-year contract (plus a $1 million signing bonus) just to promote Nike shoes.

The average coach can diagram a shoe contract or a TV and-radio deal as quickly and easily as a pick-and-roll. Throw in summer camps, speeches and endorsements, and the coach's office becomes the base of a financial fiefdom.

The increase in money and fame, however, has not come cheaply. It has been joined by equally daunting increases in responsibilities, restrictions and scrutiny.

"Quite honestly, coaching is probably the easiest thing I do," said Arkansas State basketball coach Nelson Catalina. "It is probably the least thing I get to do."

The typical NCAA Division I basketball coach or Division I-A football coach is a public relations man well as other men's sports.

The coach must recruit players who have a chance to graduate. He bears an ever-increasing accountability for their behavior off the field. Yet the NCAA has restricted the amount of time the coach may spend with players while they are recruited and once they get on campus.

"In the past, the coach has always been like the policeman or the clergy," said John Robinson, who returned to coach Southern California football after 11 years in the NFL. "Now he's questioned not only where a coach is questioned — 'Did he lose the game? How? Make a stupid decision?' — but in how he is doing it. How he practices, how he treats people."

The players may be the root of the biggest change of all.

Foreign students allowed in athletics

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho High School Activities Association board of directors has upheld its existing rule which allows foreign exchange students to play on varsity teams.

The proposal to sanction athletes from other countries even drew the interest of Gov. Cecil Andrus, who wrote to IHSAA Executive Director Bill Young that the proposed prohibition was "ridiculous" and threw a shadow on international understanding.

With no discussion Friday, the board voted 11-3 against the measure.

"I think they pretty much had their minds made up," said Larry Curry, board president and Kellogg School District superintendent. Curry voted with the majority, although he earlier supported allowing foreigners to play junior varsity only.

The board suggested the ban in April after the state's athletic directors said they feared foreign recruitment and displacement of Idaho players could be taking place.

Parents statewide complained the talented exchange players were giving some teams an unfair advantage, or they were preventing some Idaho athletes from having any game time.

"Extracurricular activities are an integral part of the total education experience," Andrus wrote. "We would feel legitimate outrage if an Idaho student in a foreign country were prohibited from full participation there."

Curry said the earlier vote to put the measure to a vote was more evenly split, so the 11-3 finale was a turnaround and indicated the matter probably would not come up again soon.

Voting to lock out the foreign players were Richfield Superintendent Larry Tinker, Potlatch Superintendent Don Armstrong and Bear Lake High School Principal Clay Homer.

Homer said Utah schools had problems with recruitment of standouts from other countries. One team had traveled to Australia and were successful in attracting some "impact players" to play on their varsity team.

"At my school, we've had a tremendous increase in exchange students requesting a place to be," he said. "I think recruitment can take place in Idaho."

But board member Gary Johnson, a debate teacher from Borah High School in Boise, had opposed the foreign restriction from the beginning.

"I don't think they have much of an impact," he said of the immigrant athletes. "That student is a member of the student body with the same rights. I guess there are some isolated reasons (Friday's vote) took place."

That decision failed to boost the spirits of some parents.

Undhjem takes Muni tourney

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Virginia Undhjem returned to the championship of the Twin Falls Municipal Women's Club tournament Friday.

Undhjem had a two-day 75-75-150 total to win the gross division handily. She reclaimed the title from Rosemary McRoberts. The two have alternated winning for the past six years. This is Undhjem's fourth win since the 1987 event, and she probably has won it more than anyone in association history.

Carole Kasel took the net title with a 134 with Jackie Gasser and Vi Young at 139 and Charlotte Brunelli and Glenda McGreer at 140.

In the all-net first flight, Kelly Priest was the leader with a 135, followed by Terry Steelman at 139 and Billye Brown 141.

Gullickson hurls complete game against Toronto

DETROIT (AP) — Bill Gullickson pitched his first complete game of the season and Lou Whitaker continued his hot hitting as the Detroit Tigers beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-1 Friday and increased their lead atop the AL East to three games.

Gullickson (4-2) allowed six hits and a walk and struck out three, and Whitaker went 2 for 4 with an RBI and two runs scored, making him 5 for 7 with three runs and two RBIs in the first two games of the four-game series.

Jack Morris (3-7) had beaten his former teammates four straight times, but struggled Friday, allowing six runs on six hits and one walk in six innings. Morris' ERA is 9.91.

Twins 11, Athletics 8
MINNEAPOLIS — Shane Mack's fourth hit of the game, a three-run homer in the seventh inning, completed Minnesota's second comeback of the night.

Mack, mired in a season-long slump that had him hitting .217 coming into the game, hit his third home of the season off reliever Edwin Nunez (1-3) as the Twins struck for five runs in the seventh.

American League

Mike Trombley (3-3), Minnesota's third pitcher of the night, picked up the victory, and Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 19th save. Minnesota rallied from deficits of 5-0 and 8-5.

Orioles 16, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Cal Ripken's three-run homer capped a six-run Baltimore fourth inning and the Orioles added five more runs in the fifth to win their ninth straight game.

Ripken, who had five RBIs, also had a run-scoring single and an RBI double. The Orioles had a season-high 16 hits, including seven doubles, and extended the longest winning streak in the American League this season.

Mike Mussina (9-2) joined Jack McDowell as the only nine-game winners in the major leagues. John Dopson (3-5) took the loss as Boston was beaten for the sixth straight time.

White Sox 6, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Frank Thomas and Robin Ventura each hit their 11th home run and Jack McDowell won his ninth game as Chicago beat Kansas City.

Thomas homered leading off the third and Ventura homered leading off the fifth against David Cone (3-7), who allowed one run in each of the first five innings in his shortest outing of the year.

McDowell (9-4) went seven innings, giving up a run on eight hits while walking two and striking out three.

Yankees 5, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Kevin Maas pinch hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning as New York rallied in a game with dozens of sea gulls swarming on the field.

Mike Stanley opened the ninth with a single off starter Jamie Navarro, and Doug Henry (0-1) relieved Maas, batting for Spike Owen. Hit a homer to right, his ninth of the season, on a 3-2 pitch.

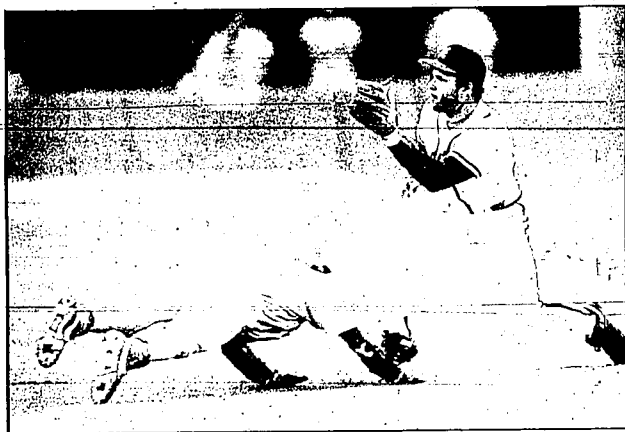

Yankees starter Melido Perez (4-5) allowed nine hits, walked one and struck out a career-high 12 for the victory. Steve Fria worked the ninth for his 15th save.

Orioles owner sells team for $141 million

BALTIMORE (AP) — An agreement to sell the Baltimore Orioles for $141 million to a group of Cincinnati businessmen is the deal headed by William O. DeWitt Jr., was filed Friday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York.

The agreement, filed by attorneys for Orioles' owner Eli Jacobs, would be the highest amount ever paid for a baseball team, topping the $125 million paid last year for the Seattle Mariners. The bid must be approved by the bankruptcy judge.

Pinch-single carries Braves

ATLANTA — Eric Nixon, the subject of strong trade rumors, scored the winning run on Brian Hunter's pinch-single in the 11th inning Friday night, lifting the Atlanta Braves over the Cincinnati Reds 6-5.

Nixon, who had not played in eight days since being replaced by Deion Sanders in center field, has attracted interest from several American League teams, including the Boston Red Sox.

The Braves tied the score in the ninth on Jeff Blauser's two-out, two-run single off Rob Dibble, his fourth hit of the game. Sid Bream, in a 2-for-34 slump, led off the 11th with a single against Tim Lincecum (3-8) and Nixon pinch ran.

Greg Olson walked, Mark Lemke sacrificed and Hunter lined a single to left center. After crossing the plate, Nixon ran to the on-deck circle and jumped into the arms of Sanders, who raised him in the air.

National League

the Marlins trounced Pittsburgh for their sixth victory in seven games.

Magadan hit his third home run of the season and also doubled. Florida matched the club mark for runs, and set a record with seven extra-base hits.

Luis Aquino (4-3) gave up three runs in seven innings. He began the game with a 2.12 ERA, best in the National League. Tim Wakefield (3-7) was knocked out in the second inning.

Phillies 5, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Third baseman Chico Walker made an error on Pete Incaviglia's grounder with two outs in the ninth inning, giving the Philadelphia Phillies the go-ahead run and a win over New York.

The Phillies, who overcame a 5-0 deficit against the Mets on Incaviglia's homer in the seventh inning Thursday night, rallied for their 14th win in 18 games. Curt Schilling (8-1) gave up five hits in his fifth complete game.

The Mets have lost four in a row and seven of eight. Pete Schourek (2-8) dropped his fourth consecutive decision.

Cardinals 1, Expos 0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joe Magrane allowed two hits in 7 2/3 innings, and torrid Bernard Gilkey homered as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the sagging Montreal Expos.

Magrane (4-6) has won his last two starts allowing only one run in 14 2/3 innings after losing four in a row. Before his previous start, the Cardinals had considered removing him from the rotation.

Gilkey hit his second home run on a 2-2 hanging breaking ball from Kent Bottenfield (1-4) with one out in the fifth. He also singled twice, making him 5-for-9 in the series.

Lee Smith worked the ninth for his 18th save. The Cardinals won for the sixth time in eight games.

Lawmaker sends out baseball 'bribe alert'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Major League baseball is trying to bribe the members of Congress who are reviewing the league's antitrust exemption with hard-to-get tickets to next month's All-Star game, former major-leaguer Jim Bunning says.

Bunning, now a Kentucky congressman, sent out a "bribe alert" this week to House and Senate members regarding the league's offer to sell lawmakers tickets to the game, to be played on July 13 at Camden Yards in Baltimore.

"Before you don your baseball cap, grab your glove and dash off to the ticket counter. I suggest you stop and think a moment," wrote Bunning, a Republican from Kentucky's 4th District.

"Legislation to repeal the antitrust exemption is starting to move in Congress now. And Major League baseball is trying to curry favor with members."

'Legislation to repeal antitrust exemption is starting to move in Congress now. And Major League baseball is trying to curry favor with members.'

— Sen. Jim Bunning, R-Ky.

Lawmakers were asked to respond to the offer by acting baseball Commissioner Bud Selig by June 15.

Unlike other professional sports, baseball has enjoyed exemption from federal antitrust laws since a 1922 Supreme Court decision ruled that baseball is not interstate commerce and thus not subject to regulation.

The exemption gives baseball protection from lawsuits over matters like deciding how many teams will be in a league, whether a team can abandon a city or where a new franchise will be cities from bidding wars.

Bunning is a co-sponsor of a bill now before the Judiciary Committee that would rescind baseball's exemption.

"For 70 years, Major League Baseball owners have enjoyed virtual feudal lord power over baseball fans and players.... The owners want to keep it that way," said Bunning, who won 110 games in both the American and National leagues in a career spent primarily with Philadelphia and Detroit. He pitched a perfect game against the New York Mets in 1964.

Twins rookie makes most of his chance

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — David McCarty was supposed to spend just 15 days with the Minnesota Twins while Shane Mack healed. A .341 batting average has changed those plans.

Not that McCarty doesn't belong in the majors — he was the No. 3 overall pick of the 1991 amateur draft and expected to be a Twin by early this season.

But in spring training, he was stuck behind a group of outstanding players at first base (his best position), outfield and designated hitter.

"I knew I didn't have much of a shot, but I still went in there with the goal of making the team," he said. "I felt that I put up good numbers. There wasn't any doubt that I could play there. Not in my mind and I don't think in the team's mind either."

So the Twins demoted their star prospect just before opening day.

"I was upset at first, disappointed. But I just had to get over it," he said.

He also realized he was better off playing every day in the minors than sitting on the major league bench behind the likes of Kirby Puckett, Dave Winfield, Shane Mack and Kent Hrbek.

In Portland, McCarty played like a major league hitter, hitting minor league pitching — a .398 average and a .637 slugging percentage in 31 games.

Then Mack was injured and McCarty got the call — with a stipulation.

"They told me it was going to be for 15 days while Shane's injured," he said. "So there wasn't any pressure on me. It just worked out that I happened to get hot at the right time."

He stayed hot, prompting the Twins to keep him in the lineup after Mack returned.

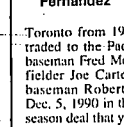

Through Thursday, McCarty had started all 20 games since being called-up and had hits in 18 of them. He was hitting .341 with six doubles, a triple and a home run. His 13-game hitting streak, which ended Tuesday, is the second-longest of the year in the American League.

"I know that I've got the skills to succeed at this level, but I certainly don't expect to be hitting .350, or whatever I'm hitting, at the end of the year," he said.

Mets part ways with All-Star shortstop

NEW YORK (AP) — The floundering New York Mets gave up on All-Star shortstop Tony Fernandez in a trade with the Toronto Blue Jays for outfielder Darrin Jackson on Friday.

Ironically, both were with the San Diego Padres last season. Fernandez, a four-time All-Star who played for Toronto from 1983-1990, was traded to the Padres with first baseman Fred McGriff for outfielder Joe Carter and second baseman Roberto Alomar on Dec. 5, 1990 in the biggest off-season deal that year.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Life is eternal, and love is immortal; and death is nothing but a horizon, and a horizon is nothing save the limit of our sight."
— Rossiter W. Raymond

Put yourself in today's East seat and plan your defense against four hearts. Hint: You've got to look past the horizon to find the winning defense.

East wins his diamond ace, and if he returns a "safe" diamond to dummy's king. The trump finesse loses to West's king, but South has no problems. He must still lose to East's club ace but the defenders take only three tricks.

What should East do to beat the game? The first thing he must do to counter the ace's possible winners. He can see his two aces and he must place West with a trump trick; otherwise there is little chance.

The bidding provides another clue. South's bid of three clubs marks West with only two with a singleton, he would probably have led the suit; therefore, East should lead the likelihood of a club ruff to go with West's assumed trump trick.

At trick two, East leads the low club to dummy's eight. When the trump finesse loses to West's king, West leads his last club, and the club ruff beats the game.

If one doesn't search for those obscure tricks, one will never find them.

Send bridge questions to "The Aces," P.O. Box 12383, Dallas, Texas 75213, with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.
