Voters reject 'triple dipping'

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The term "triple dipping" was on some people's minds when they voted down the school district's $840,000 supplemental levy.

In light turnout, 1,135 people — 56 percent — voted against the levy on Tuesday. Just 902 people — 44 percent — voted for it.

A simple majority was needed for it to pass. State Rep. Nor Black, R-Twin Falls, and other local legislators argued before the election that district teachers would essentially get three raises if the levy passed: automatic experience- and education-based raises, increased retirement benefits provided by the 1993 Legislature, and 3 percent raises tied in with the levy.

"The idea of triple dipping is apparent," said Bob Oslund, 66, 1150 Addison Ave. E., who voted against the levy.

Oslund said if teachers are being underpaid the Legislature should deal with it.

"I think it needs to be resolved at a higher level," Oslund said.

Superintendent Terrell Donich agreed that state legislators had a negative impact on the levy. He said a Times-News article that focused "too heavily" on salary increases, however, was the biggest factor.

"We asked them to give us a decision, and we told them what the options are," board Chairman Steve Tolman said after the vote tally.

The levy failed in four of six voter precincts, was tied at 100 votes at Bickel Elementary School and passed 266-265 at Sawtooth Elementary School.

Board member David Sass said budget items that could only be funded if the levy passed will be cut unless the state gives the district one-time funds linked to a budget surplus. In that case, budget items will be returned to the budget on a priority basis, he said.

However, the district stands to get a maximum of $140,000 in surplus funds and the district has $380,000 in budget cuts to make, including $60,000 for textbooks and $16,000 for school crossing guards.

The board may consider holding a new levy election in about a month depending on why voters rejected the levy, Sass said.

If voters mainly disapproved of the salary increases, the board may hold another levy just for the budget items that were

Ex-merchant admits taking $14,000 from Bon Marche

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A former owner of one of the city's best-known clothing stores has admitted embezzling more than $14,000 from The Bon Marche.

Frederick W. Van Engelen, 65, pleaded guilty to grand theft in 5th District Court and will be sentenced after a routine background check.

Van Engelen took the money to satisfy the demands of a young man who repeatedly threatened him with violence, his attorney said Tuesday.

In exchange for his guilty plea, the state agreed to recommend Van Engelen be placed on probation for two to five years, and may ask that he serve 10 days in jail or 30 days of house arrest, said his attorney, Laird Stone.

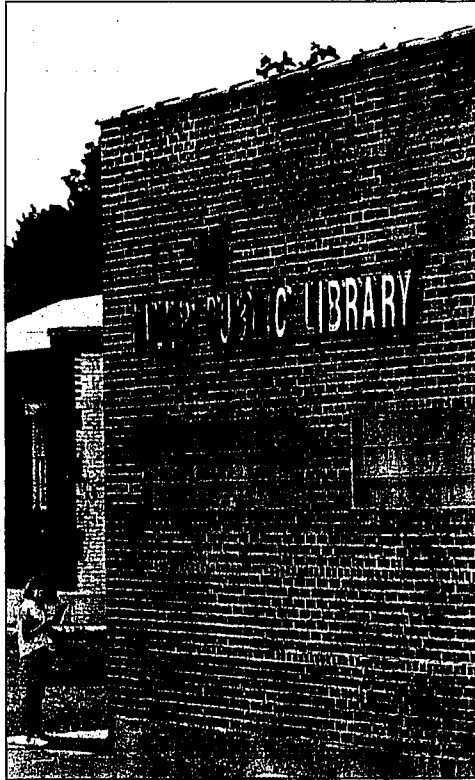

The state also will ask for the money to be paid back, Stone said. Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl can accept or reject the state's recommendation. The maximum penalty for grand theft is 14 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Van Engelen was part-owner of Van's Department Store, which anchored the Lynwood Shopping Center for many years until it closed in July 1984.

Governors press waste cleanup bid

The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Governors from the West called Tuesday for an independent review of the nation's high-level nuclear waste disposal program because of fiscal and management problems.

The governors also got a promise from Washington that the federal government is moving ahead on plans for mid-level nuclear waste storage facility in New Mexico.

The governors wrapped up a three-day meeting that included officials from Canada and Mexico by adopting a series of resolutions, including backing moderate changes in existing federal mining laws and grazing fees.

One resolution calls for an independent review of the federal plans to store high-level nuclear waste at Yucca Mountain, Nev.

The Energy Department estimates it will cost $6.3 billion to determine the suitability of the site near Las Vegas for long-term waste storage. But the governors' resolution said the General Accounting Office recently determined that studying the site will take up to 13 years longer than planned, at much more cost, to decide that.

Nevada Gov. Bob Miller, new chairman of the association, said the resolution was "designed to recognize the fact that this has been a political process and not scientific in its nature."

He said the GAO called for an independent review earlier this month, and Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary has told him she has agreed to a financial analysis.

The resolution, which seeks an independent review of disputed scientific elements, also notes that researchers found alternative methods of nuclear waste management that would be cheaper.

The governors also heard from a Clinton administration official on a proposal for a facility to store mid-level nuclear waste near Carlsbad, N.M. That facility is intended to store all of America's intermediate-level radioactive wastes, for example plutonium contaminants, for the next 70 years.

Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, complained the project has moved "at glacial speed. It just seems we never get there."

Former first lady Pat Nixon dies at 81

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For 53 years, she was the loyal and uncomplaining partner in Richard Nixon's triumphs and tribulations.

And for nearly two decades, as Nixon himself noted, "she would have to share my exile."

Pat Nixon died of lung cancer at the couple's New Jersey home Tuesday. Her husband and daughters were at her side.

The 81-year-old former first lady had suffered two strokes and numerous lung infections since Nixon's resignation from the White House in 1974 but she bounced back each time. A heavy smoker at one time, she was diagnosed earlier this year as having lung cancer.

Her death came a day after the Nixons observed their wedding anniversary at their four-story townhouse in Park Ridge, N.J.

"Mrs. Nixon was awake yesterday and knew it was their anniversary," said Kathy O'Connor, Nixon's aide. "The girls were there and they looked at anniversary cards and beautiful flowers that had arrived."

Mrs. Nixon later lapsed into a coma and died about 3:45 a.m. MDT.

President Clinton telephoned Nixon to express his sympathy and calls and telegrams flooded the Nixon office in Woodcliff Lake, N.J. They came from such diverse people as Ted Williams, the baseball Hall of Famer and a Nixon friend; Pat Buchanan, the conservative columnist; Roger Williams, the pianist; Mike Gminsky, a professional basketball player for the Charlotte Hornets; and prominent Democrat Pamela Harriman, now ambassador to France.

"I'm very sad," Clinton told reporters. "They had a very long and very close marriage. This must be a very difficult time for him. The American people appreciate the dignity with which she served as first lady."

Mrs. Nixon will be buried Saturday in California where she and Nixon met, outside

Northwest shivers while Texans battle more flooding

The Associated Press

Thunderstorms brought some additional flooding to south Texas on Tuesday.

Colder air moved into the Northwest and snow fell at some higher elevations.

The East Coast received relief from days of humid weather, with readings dropping into the 70s in western New England.

Sunny skies were over the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and across much of California and the Southern Plateau.

Colder air was spreading into parts of the Northwest. Snow fell in parts of the northern Cascades, and up to 6 inches was forecast for some higher elevations.

Several inches of snow was expected by Wednesday in the northwest mountains of Montana. Near record cold was forecast for Oregon.

A thunderstorm off the north Oregon coast, near Netarts, produced a waterspout Tuesday.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms dented the Mississippi Valley, the Texas Gulf Coast, the south Atlantic Coast, New England, the Pacific Northwest, the northern intermountain region, the northern Rockies and the northern Plains.

A thunderstorm stalled over Brazoria County in southeast Texas early Tuesday, dumping up to 3 inches of rain in three hours. Roads were closed in Angleton, where water was 3-feet deep in places, the National Weather Service said.

Some residents of Montgomery County, northeast of Houston, were forced to leave their soaked homes.

Strong thunderstorms in New Hampshire downed trees and power lines near Littleton and Plymouth. Storms also downed trees near Gardner, Maine.

Temperatures across the nation at midday ranged from 45 degrees at Mullin, Idaho, to 96 degrees at Phoenix.

The low temperature for the Lower 48 early Tuesday was 20 degrees at Truckee, Calif.

President backs plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton led an aggressive lobbying drive for his economic plan Tuesday as it was whipsawed by Republican criticism over its tax increases and liberal complaints about its spending cuts.

Clinton said his program, intended to reduce the budget deficit by about $500 billion, makes "the tough choices that have been avoided and evaded for too long here."

The Senate is expected to begin debating the bill Wednesday. On a party-line 12-9 vote, Senate Budget Committee Democrats sent the measure to the floor, where it is expected to be approved by week's end.

Republicans said the bill was overburdened with anti-business taxes. "This will cost jobs, not create them," said Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, ranking Republican on the Budget Committee.

Weaver trial jurors finish 6th day of work

BOISE (AP) — Jurors completed their sixth day of deliberations on Tuesday without reaching a verdict in the federal murder-conspiracy trial of white separatist Randy Weaver and co-defendant Kevin Harris.

And there was still no indication that the seven women and five men were nearing any agreement after sifting through two months of testimony and hundreds of pieces of evidence for some 47 hours since last Wednesday.

With nearly 60 instructions from U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge to guide their deliberations, jurors had yet to contact the judge for any reason.

Security surrounding the jury remained tight as the small group of Weaver supporters continued its vigil at the federal building just north of downtown Boise.

They have been no disruptions since the trial began April 13.

Weaver, 45, and Harris, 25, were being held in the Ada County Jail.

They each face a maximum penalty of life in prison and $250,000 in fines if convicted of murdering Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan during an Aug. 21 shootout at Weaver's remote northern Idaho cabin. Weaver's son also died in the gunfight, and his wife was killed by a federal sniper a day later.

Weaver is charged with six other conspiracy and firearms counts that carry a combined maximum penalty of 45 years in prison and $1.5 million in fines. Harris faces four other firearms and conspiracy charges with a maximum penalty of 25 years in prison and $1 million in fines.

The Bon Marche for several years until May 28, when store officials told police Van Engelen had been stealing money since August 1991.

According to an affidavit by Twin Falls Police Detective Tim Miller, Van Engelen used several means to take money from the store, including voiding out sales and pocketing the cash.

He admitted the thefts to company loss-prevention officials, Miller said in his affidavit.

Van Engelen was released from custody after his arrest May 28. He waived a preliminary hearing and admitted June 14 that he took $14,691 over the previous 21 months.

"During that time, Van Engelen was lauded numerous times for his work at The Bon, including being named his department's 'Sales Achiever' and the store's 'employee of the quarter' in 1992.

Van Engelen had financial difficulties, filing for bankruptcy and trying to make end meet on $1,200 per month before taxes, according to court records.

His relationship with a young man who has a bad temper drained his financial resources and forced Van Engelen to steal, said his attorney.

Van Engelen befriended the teenager and helped support him financially, Stone said. But the young man often threatened him with physical violence and destroyed Van Engelen's property, Stone said.

The threats did not quite reach the level of extortion or blackmail, he said.

"It was not enough for a successful defense before a jury," Stone said.

Van Engelen could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

A man who said he was the store manager at The Bon Marche said Tuesday Van Engelen had retired. He said company guidelines regarding employee privacy prevented him from saying anything more.

and I always tell her that she would look good in anything."

Dolé praised Mrs. Nixon as the epitome of the unselfish political wife and said "few people in history made this sacrifice with more grace and dignity than Pat Nixon."

Mrs. Nixon's health had not been good since that Friday morning in 1974 when a helicopter carried them from the White House into exile. A major stroke in 1976 left her with a paralyzed left side and Nixon suggested that the sudden illness was linked to her having read "The Final Days" a harsh account of the Watergate scandal.

"Mrs. Nixon read it, and her stroke came three days later," he said. "This doesn't indicate that that caused the stroke... but it sure didn't help."

The former first lady made a painful recovery through exercise and physical therapy. But, that first stroke — there was another, milder one, in 1983 — began a series of illnesses, mostly long-remembered.

Pat Nixon was born Thelma Catherine Ryan on March 16, 1912, in Ely, Nev., a small mining town. Her father nicknamed her "Pat" because she was born the day before St. Patrick's Day.

She met her husband in 1938 when both were trying out for a part in a play called "The Dark Tower." Nixon said that she was "a beautiful and vivacious young woman with titanium hair," and that "for me, it was a case of love at first sight."

During Nixon's turbulent rise in politics, through the dark years of Watergate and the pain of Nixon's forced resignation, Pat Nixon was at her husband's side, never showing in public how much it hurt.

"The resignation was harder on her than me, because she thought it was a mistake to resign," Nixon said later. "Like Julie and Tricia, she thought we should fight to the end."

Mrs. Nixon became widely known to the public during her husband's 1952 campaign for vice president when Nixon set up to defend a political fund set up for him by a group of California businessmen during his previous two years as a senator.

Struggling for his political life, Nixon made a nationwide television broadcast — the "Checkers" speech — in which he detailed his assets and debts. "Pat doesn't have a mink coat," he said. "But she does have a respectable Republican cloth coat."

Midway into 1st year, hundreds of administration jobs unfilled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five months after President Clinton took office, the changing of the guard is still a work in progress.

Want to be the president's new AIDS adviser? Three people have turned down the post.

Interested in a job at the Pentagon? Secretaries of the Air Force and Navy have yet to be named, and there are more than a dozen other top positions open.

How about the Federal Communications Commission? Two of five seats are vacant, including the chairmanship.

White House officials are quick to stress that they're doing about as well as the past two administrations.

"Everything's relative," says chief of staff Mack McLarty.

But there are still plenty of vacancies in an administration that swept into office with a promise to swiftly reverse the course of government.

Of 630 top administration jobs, Clinton has announced 278 nominees and formally nominated 225, of whom 165 have been confirmed by the Senate.

Box scores for the comparable pace of appointments by Clinton's predecessors — George Bush and Ronald Reagan — in recent weeks have been in the same range, sometimes a little ahead or behind. The latest figures:

- Bush, 220 nominations and 141 confirmations.
- Reagan, 287 nominations and 205 confirmations.

Presidential scholar Cal McKenzie, a historian at Colby College in Maine, said staffing a government is "a slow process in the best of circumstances." But the difficulties are being compounded this time by the Clinton administration's "capacity for the hibernating" and its detailed screening of potential nominees, he said.

The delays, he said, are contributing to "an incredible degree of disunity in the Democratic Party" on Capitol Hill because of missing leadership from missing administration officials, he said.

The vacancies are creating frustrations on all sides.

For example, both environmentalists and corporate interests are complaining about gaps at the Environmental Protection Agency, where seven of 10 assistant administrators have yet to be named.

One high-profile vacancy generating particular concern among health advocates is Clinton's lack of an AIDS adviser, a job he promised to create during the campaign.

Bob Hattoy, a White House personnel deputy who has the AIDS virus, said that while the vacancy is frustrating, "there's not any lack of commitment or dedication in hiring." Three people have turned down the job, he said.

Another big concern is leadership gaps at the Pentagon, where for 25 top slots, 10 appointments have been confirmed.

"The practical effect is it erodes the principle of civilian control of the military when you have a lack of civilian supervision," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a member of the Armed Services Committee.

White House officials say a variety of factors slow down the appointment process, including:

Clinton's determination to make sure his appointees include plenty of women and minorities. Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros this week said federal departments send the White House "a list with 15 names, and 13 are white males." Clinton sends them back and insists on more ethnic and gender diversity, resulting in delays of six weeks to two months, Cisneros said.

Rigorous background checks to detect potential ethical problems and difficulties such as unpaid Social Security taxes for household workers, the problem that sank the nomination of Zoe Baird for attorney general. Checking for a "nanny problem," for example, is now standard practice at the White House, aides report.

Tobacco companies claim EPA misused scientific data

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The tobacco industry sued the Environmental Protection Agency Tuesday, challenging the scientific evidence the agency used in concluding that secondhand smoke causes 3,000 cases of lung cancer in nonsmokers each year.

The civil lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court contends that the EPA misused scientific data in a report in January that formally classified secondhand smoke as a cause of cancer. The report also said secondhand smoke increases the risk of pneumonia and bronchitis in children.

"This is a little bit worse than bad science," said Daniel Donahue, vice president and lawyer for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of Winston-Salem, one of the plaintiffs. "There's much more politics to it than there is science."

The lawsuit wants the court to throw out the findings. It recaps arguments that were made repeatedly by the industry and its congressional allies as the report was being prepared.

To assure the accuracy of its report, the EPA submitted the final draft to an outside panel of scientific experts, some of whom had ties to the tobacco industry. Changes were made to the report in response to the industry's criticism, and the final report was approved by the outside panel of advisers. The report has led to a tough-ing of antismoking regulations around the country.

John F. Banzhaf, a law professor and executive director of Action on Smoking and Health in Washington, said he doubted the tobacco interests' effort would succeed in federal court or the court of public opinion.

"Despite literally tens of thousands of studies on what we call active smoking, they deny smoking causes cancer in smokers," he said. "So there's no way they're going to admit secondhand smoke can cause cancer."

R.J. Reynolds was joined in the lawsuit by Philip Morris USA of New York, Universal Leaf Tobacco Co. of Richmond, Va.; Gallins Vending Co. of Winston-Salem; the Council for Burley Tobacco of Lexington, Ky.; and the Phlegm-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. of Raleigh.

An EPA spokeswoman, Laura Mical, defended the EPA's findings. "EPA's environmental tobacco smoke report has gone through extensive scientific review by scientists inside and outside the EPA," Ms. Mical said today from Washington. "We have faith in our scientific process."

Because the issue is now in court, she said she couldn't comment further.

Modern medicine: Miraculous health care but at what cost?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Remember iron lungs?

They went into storage after polio vaccine was invented.

That cheap, simple vaccine ended the need for all that bulky, expensive equipment and care.

But unfortunately that isn't the way most medical breakthroughs work. "We are the victims of our own success as a biomedical research community," said Dr. William Schwartz, a physician-economist and professor of medicine at the University of Southern California. "Most of the new things we do add enormously to expenses."

Indeed, Schwartz and other experts agree that it is technology, not doctors' greed or drug companies' profits, that drives health costs relentlessly upward.

Doctors used to prescribe aspirin and a walker for people with diseased hip joints.

"Now we do a hip replacement operation costing $20,000 or $25,000," said Schwartz. "We have wonderful new things that are both effective and expensive replacing old treatments that were both ineffective and cheap."

Americans will pay $912 billion for health care this year, for everything from aspirin to open heart surgery, dental work to nursing home bills. The tab is rising by $80 billion a year and consumes 14.6 percent of the gross domestic product.

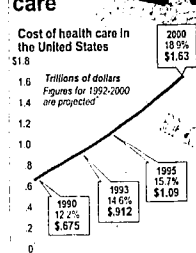

When Medicare was launched back in 1965, Americans spent just $42 billion, or 5.9 percent of the gross domestic product, on health care.

The soaring cost of health insurance — typically $4,000 per worker — has caused workers' real wages to stagnate.

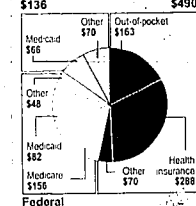

President Clinton promises a major overhaul of the health system and warns that his economic recovery efforts are doomed if rising health costs are not slowed.

"Everywhere you look, everything is conspiring to increase costs," said

You're doing all three.

Dr. James S. Todd, executive vice president of the American Medical Association (AMA), said, "Technology in medicine is not like technology in industry. If you put a robot on an assembly line, you've saved money. If you put an MRI in a hospital, you've added 10 people to the payroll."

Lithotripters can turn kidney stones to sand without surgery, noted the Brookings Institution's Henry Aaron. But doctors use it for cases "a lot less acute than would be necessary to justify surgery" because the device is non-invasive.

"We have a system with no brakes on it," said Robert Reischauer, director of the Congressional Budget Office.

"The provider is trained not to consider costs, but to do what is best for the patient's health even if the costs are very large and the benefit very small," he said. With insurers paying the bill, patients face "a reduced price or sometimes a zero price for what they get."

A recent AMA study blamed the cost spiral in part on Americans being "overinsured" and paying only 20 percent of costs out of pocket.

The Urban Institute's Marilyn Moon pointed out that most doctors are paid "on a piece-rate basis. They have a very strong incentive to provide lots of services."

Ross H. Arnett III, the top statistician in the government's $150 billion Medicare program, still remembers the hospital bill after his father-in-law suffered a fatal heart attack at home in Pennsylvania.

"He had been stone cold dead for two hours by the time he reached the hospital, and they still gave him $6,000 worth of care," said Arnett. "We give people every last treatment no matter what the cost-benefit ratio."

"The new technology tends to add on, not replace, the old technology," said Moon. "You do an X-ray first, then a CT scan and then an MRI."

Judge rules against former smoker

Seattle Times

MERCER ISLAND, Wash. — District Court Judge Linda Jacke on Tuesday ruled against a reformed smoker who sued Philip Morris Inc. in small-claims court for costs he incurred to quit smoking after 34 years of puffing mostly Marlboros, made by the tobacco company.

Jacke ruled that the state's statute of limitations prevented Al Deskiewicz's $1,572 claim against Philip Morris. The statute gives potential plaintiffs three years from the date of their injury to file suit unless they, through no fault of their own, could not have been aware of the injury until later.

But Deskiewicz, a Kirkland, Wash., engineer, should have known the nature of cigarettes, the judge said.

Whether they are "addictive," as Deskiewicz claimed, or "habituating," as Philip Morris claimed, didn't matter, according to Jacke: There were plenty of articles discussing the matter in the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s, and it was Deskiewicz's responsibility to be aware of them.

"Mr. Deskiewicz has failed to show any diligence in the past 20 years ... about his own health," Jacke said.

Crew chats with Clinton, closes in on satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)

— Endeavour's astronauts chatted about space with President Clinton on Tuesday as they closed in on their orbiting quarry, a European satellite loaded with science experiments. "I'm especially pleased about that because it shows what we can do in the way of international cooperation as well as science, and I want to congratulate you on that and wish you well," Clinton told the crew during a six-minute phone conversation from the White House via Mission Control.

Clinton commended the astronauts for taking time during the eight-day flight to talk with schoolchildren via ham radio and said their overall success will help him prevail in Congress this week on the scaled-down space station project.

"You're doing as much up there to help us win the votes down here as anyone and I thank you for that," Clinton said.

Shuttle commander Ronald Grabe replied that he and his crew were gratified by Clinton's support of the space station.

Before hanging up, Clinton urged the six astronauts to "have a great time up there and learn a lot and we'll all learn from you."

The last time an American president called astronauts in orbit was George Bush in January 1992. Grabe commanded that flight, too.

Payload commander G. David-Lund checked the shuttle robot arm Tuesday to make sure it's in good shape for the satellite catch. He will use the 50-foot arm Thursday to pluck the huge spacecraft from orbit and lower it into the shuttle cargo bay.

Man claiming he's Clinton's relative just wants to say 'hi'

Henry Leon Ritzenhaller, and his wife, Judy, appear on 'CBS This Morning' Tuesday in New York. The California man says he's President Clinton's half-brother.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who contends he is Bill Clinton's half-brother impressed the president Tuesday — on TV.

They still had yet to meet or talk. Henry Leon Ritzenhaller looked uncomfortable, almost overwhelmed during a round of television interviews. But Clinton said he found the man "very appealing and humble — the way he's handled this whole thing."

The president did not say whether he believes Ritzenhaller is related, and aides said Clinton has not discussed the matter in private.

"This is a very personal matter," spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said. The president still had not contacted Ritzenhaller, and Myers said Clinton may wait a day or two to give the man "a little space."

Ritzenhaller and his wife, Judith, said they were shocked by the media's interest in their story. "Quite frankly, we would have rather kept it in the family," she told ABC. Clinton tried to call Ritzenhaller at his Paradise, Calif., home and in New York, where the interviews were conducted. Ritzenhaller told television interviewers he did not return the calls because "I didn't feel that it was my place."

Thrust into the limelight by news reports of possible family ties, the baggy-eyed former janitorial service operator wore an open-collar shirt for the interviews. He spoke in short sentences, sometimes mumbling.

The Ritzenhaller said they wrote Clinton a year ago to learn about Clinton's family history because the California man has heart trouble.

"That's our main reason for doing it and that's our main goal to this day," Ritzenhaller told CNN. Clinton did not respond to the letter, but the couple said they assumed Clinton was too busy.

Ritzenhaller said he would like Clinton to acknowledge that they are related.

"I know he's my half-brother. I know he is in my mind, my own heart. I hope he reaches the same idea," he told CBS. "I don't want nothing from Mr. Clinton at all. I don't want no favors or nothing."

He later told CNN, "I'm not here for any personal gains. I don't want any money out of it — just a chance to meet him and say, 'Hi.' That's all I want to do."

Myers said Clinton may wait to call Ritzenhaller until the media spotlight subsides. "I think the president would like to... give the folks a little space," she said.

"I'd be very honored and very privileged to talk to him," Ritzenhaller told ABC.

Ritzenhaller, 55, says he and Clinton, 46, have the same father. W.J. Blythe, Blythe died a few months before the future president was born, and about nine years after Ritzenhaller's birth.

After Blythe died, Clinton's mother remarried and Clinton took the name of his first stepfather, Roger Clinton. Until now, media accounts of Clinton's humble upbringing have said he was Blythe's only son.

Ritzenhaller suddenly became a media celebrity after The Washington Post reported Sunday that records show Blythe married Adele Gash Coffelt in December 1935, about 11 years before Clinton's birth. The couple divorced a year later, then Ritzenhaller was born Jan. 17, 1938.

Government recalls fireworks

WASHINGTON — About 150,000 sets of four-shot fireworks displays are being recalled because they could cause injury or death by tipping over and firing their charges at onlookers, government regulators said today.

Starr Display Fireworks of Fargo, N.D., is voluntarily recalling the devices, which consist of four tall mortar tubes mounted on a board and connected by a single fuse, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said.

The recall covers four-shot fireworks racks bearing Nos. 100, 200 and 300 that were made since 1987, the commission said. The items, which sell for about $40, were sold through 100 wholesalers to retail stores nationwide, the commission said. The products carry such brand names as No. 100 Silver Palm No. 100 Glittering Comet, No. 200 Celestial Splendor and No. 200 Crackling Delight.

Clinton nears policy on homosexuals

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said Tuesday he's close to a decision on a policy for homosexuals in the military, saying the American people are "certainly ready for a resolution of this."

The president said he wanted to wait until he gets final recommendations from the Pentagon. Clinton had said he was leaning toward a "don't ask, don't tell" policy, and he said Tuesday he hadn't changed his mind.

A Pentagon document cited in a published report proposed that men and women who declare their homosexuality by word or deed would be banned from military service, but would not be asked and could serve as long as they did not draw attention to their sexual orientation.

Mourners pay tribute to fallen elm

BROOKLINE, Mass. — A somber mood filled the church as the Rev. David Johnson delivered the eulogy to the handful of mourners.

"Is there a more unerring sound than the hideous mechanistic screech of a buzz saw at work?" Johnson asked, quoting from the poetry of May Sarton. "It is an anti-sound, it does not fit with any landscape."

The deceased was a 100-year-old elm tree, cut down earlier this month near their church to make way for construction of a school.

Candles burned and flowers surrounded a slab of the doomed tree set up as a memorial on the altar during the service Sunday.

The falling ended a 19-month battle to save the tree, which stood on the border between the grounds of the First Parish Unitarian Church and the construction site.

Ruling upholds closed health meetings

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's health care task force did not have to hold meetings in public just because it was chaired by his wife, a federal appellate court ruled Tuesday.

But the panel of three judges also provided a possible road map to groups trying to penetrate the secrecy of a 500-plus-member "working group" that put together health care alternatives for consideration by the task force and the president.

While the task force itself is not subject to open meetings requirements of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (FACA) simply because it was chaired by Hillary Rodham Clinton, the working group may be, according to the unanimous panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Wisconsin parents who don't pay paint

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents who fall behind on child support get a choice in Wisconsin: Pay up or paint park benches for 16 weeks.

Nearly four out of five come up with the money. The rest do painting or other maintenance or clerical work, attend parenting classes, spend time with their children and look for jobs. Those who refuse or backslide may be jailed.

Known as Children First, Wisconsin's get-tough experiment has brought results in two counties and has caught the eye of experts in Washington as the Clinton administration tries to overhaul the nation's welfare system.

President Clinton has promised to make child support enforcement a linchpin of his welfare reform plan, due by the end of the year. Only one third of single parents now get any court-ordered child support, and billions of dollars ordered to be paid never are, says Clinton welfare adviser David T. Ellwood.

That money, Ellwood argues, could be used to lift single parents and their children out of poverty and off the welfare rolls. "Non-custodial parents need to pay, they need to pay more, and they need to pay more frequently," insists Jean Rogers, Children First's administrator.

Wisconsin officials say their modest experiment, now in its fourth year in Racine and Fond du Lac counties, is paying off financially.

Gerald Whitburn, the state's secretary of health and social services, says it may ultimately make men and women think twice before having children. "We have too many dads who father children without any real plans to look out for the financial responsibilities associated with parenting. And that's wrong," he says.

Robert Rector, a policy analyst for welfare issues at the conservative Heritage Foundation, agrees the program could discourage people from having children out of wedlock if they know "someone is going to seriously come after them for child support. Fathers should be responsible for supporting their own children. This is the first serious program to make that a reality."

And it could play a role in the debate over welfare reform. Whitburn discussed it with Ellwood last summer, before Ellwood was named assistant secretary for planning and evaluation at the Department of Health and Human Services.

Most parents — 77 percent — decided to pay child support. The rest spend one day a week looking for jobs and 32 hours a week cleaning up parks, painting picnic tables or doing other maintenance or clerical jobs for a government agency or non-profit organization.

Art imitates life, man calls police

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A man who called a video store for information on a movie heard a startling command: "Everyone down on the floor."

The customer called police, but they didn't find a robbery in progress at Blockbuster Video. They found a movie in progress.

The caller didn't realize he had been put on hold, and "When we put a caller on hold, they hear the audio from whatever movie we're playing on our monitors," said Teresa Cowley, the store's manager. "Turned out to be from 'Sister Act.'"

Bosnia agrees to talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Bosnia's collective leadership overruled President Alija Izetbegovic on Tuesday and agreed to enter talks on a Serb-Croat proposal to divide the country into three ethnic zones.

Yugoslav news media reported that Serb and Croat leaders already adopted boundaries for the zones, posing the Muslim-led government with the dilemma of talks or staggering along in a losing war.

International mediators — Lord Owen for the European Community and Thorvald Stoltenberg for the United Nations — planned to meet today with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and representatives of Bosnia's warring factions to discuss the partition plan.

Izetbegovic, a Muslim, apparently planned to boycott the summit. He was expected to sit it out in his besieged capital, Sarajevo, after a week of failed attempts to persuade European governments to exempt his outgunned forces from an international arms embargo on all parties in former Yugoslavia.

Despite Izetbegovic's opposition, seven members of Bosnia's 10-member, multi-ethnic collective presidency headed to Geneva after a heated session in the Croatian capital, Zagreb.

Sources familiar with the Zagreb meeting — only the second gathering of the collective leadership during Bosnia's 15-month war — said

Izetbegovic was pushed aside to permit more flexibility in bargaining.

Members of the presidency criticized Izetbegovic for refusing to negotiate at international talks despite battlefield losses that have reduced his room to maneuver and for failing to make peace with former Croat allies, said the sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Izetbegovic's loss of authority appeared partly the work of presidency member Fikret Abdic, a Muslim appointed by the Croats and backed by international mediators. However, Tatjana Ljubic-Mijadovic, a Serb member of the presidency, played down reports of a split.

In a telephone interview, she said the presidency delegation planned to listen to proposals from the mediators. She said the delegation would not negotiate behind Izetbegovic's back and would return to Sarajevo on Wednesday to consult with him.

An Italian U.N. soldier directs a bus full of Somali residents through a checkpoint in Mogadishu. Somalia was calm Tuesday following last week's attack on warlord General Mohammed Farrah Aidid.

What eyes over Mogadishu see

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — As U.N. forces assaulted the headquarters of Mohamed Farrah Aidid, Daniel Dotson steered his Cobra attack helicopter through a storm of sniper fire before getting the go-ahead to blast enemy targets with precise TOW missiles.

The first missile misfired. So did two more, whirling out of control over the brawling city June 17 as the 30-year-old Apple Valley, Calif., native watched helplessly from 200 feet above.

Dotson, an Army chief warrant officer, returned to base thinking his day was done. Three misfires were more than any pilot should have to live with in a single day.

But minutes later he was ordered back into the air to assist ground troops under counterattack from Aidid's forces.

The Army's Cobras haven't been used in inner-city combat since the Vietnam War.

U.N. spokesmen said 11 TOWs were fired during the assault on Aidid's compound, including Dotson's three misfires. All remaining TOWs in the U.S. Army's arsenal in Mogadishu were replaced with newer models and an investigation was launched into the mishaps.

The Cobra seats two, a pilot and a gunner. Dotson sometimes flies the Cobra from the back, but that day he was up front in the gunner's position. Imagine being strapped into a Volkswagen Beetle with a helmet on your head and your torso wrapped in a 2-inch-thick vest of ceramic and steel. He aimed his TOWs through a viewfinder at about chest level, accessible only by bending his cramped body forward and keeping his head still enough to peer through an eyepiece the size of a quarter.

Complicating his task was a cacophony of gunfire and explosions, a roller-coaster ride of dips and circles, and the stress of knowing that dozens of lives depended on his ability to keep tiny cross-hairs focused on a target while a missile screamed toward it.

"It's horrible. The worst thoughts go through your mind," said Chief Warrant Officer Tom Somers, 32, of Kerhonkson, N.Y. On June 14, Somers fired a TOW missile that went astray and landed in a city street, injuring several civilians.

Dotson said he wasn't told where his dad TOWs landed.

One apparently flew into the compound of a French humanitarian agency, killing a Somali employee and injuring seven others. Journalists found a 6-foot hole and the remains of the weapon at the site.

Somers and Dotson are part of the 380-member Army task force assigned to provide aerial reconnaissance over the city and backup firepower when needed. All are from the 10th Mountain Division at Fort Drum, N.Y.

Dubbed the "Eyes over Mog," they buzz over the city day and night in a fleet of Cobras, Scouts, Deltas and Blackhawks that slice the air like giant bugs in dizzying loops and spins designed to thwart ground fire. Perhaps the toughest jobs belong to those in the Scouts and Deltas, unarmed delicate-looking machines used as low-flying lures. The Cobras move in for the kill.

The method is necessary in Mogadishu, where congestion and the urban landscape make it virtually impossible to use the Blackhawk's deadly but imprecise M60 heavy machine guns.

"When U.N. forces moved against Aidid on June 17, the Blackhawks were first in the air. Within minutes, Lt. Col. Russ Forshag, the task force commander, requested permission to use Cobras to lessen the chance of civilian deaths.

Even then, the Cobras often had to pass over targets several times before getting close enough to identify an enemy and get a clear shot.

"The Somalis are very good speculators," said Forshag. "Even those not involved in battle are up close watching what's going on."

Pilots like Somers, Dotson, and the task force's senior pilot, Chief Warrant Officer Edward G. Morris of Camden, Wyoming, undergo nearly a year of specialized training before qualifying to fly attack helicopters. They must have perfect vision without corrective lenses and be able to clearly distinguish all colors.

Those who flew in the Persian Gulf War say the conditions in Mogadishu don't compare with the relative ease of a desert landscape.

Such goods are often moved on roundabout routes and listed as commercial equipment in an effort to escape detection.

Mouammar Gadhafi's regime said the containers were going to be used at a Benghazi factory to produce "drilling mud" for lubricating drill bits in Libya's oil fields.

EC pledges troops, money to Muslims

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — European Community leaders pledged troops and money Tuesday to defend six Muslim towns in Bosnia-Herzegovina, but rejected a German proposal to arm the beleaguered Muslim forces.

By withholding arms and urging more peace talks, the community pressured the Muslim-led Bosnian government into deciding on Tuesday to negotiate an unpalatable peace proposal put forward by advancing Serbs and Croats. The plan to divide the republic into three ethnic regions is to be discussed at talks opening in Geneva on Wednesday.

In a statement issued at the end of the two-day meeting, the west European leaders promised "to respond positively" to a U.N. request for 7,600 soldiers to guard civilians in six besieged Muslim regions designated as "safe areas."

Member states were urged to "comply" with that request within their abilities, but no specific number of troops was mentioned in the statement.

Gorby's mom sells home to star for $28

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev's mother has sold the house where he was born to a former Russian rock star for about $28 million.

Marina Panteleymonovna Gorbacheva sold her house in the southern Russian town of Privolnoye for 28,000 rubles, the Kommolskaya Pravda newspaper reported Tuesday.

U.N. blocks equipment under weapons embargo

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — For the first time, the United Nations has used a weapons embargo to keep equipment out of Libya that Western experts said could have produced chemicals for poison gas.

The government of Singapore seized the goods off a dock in March as they were about to be shipped, acting at the request of the sanctions committee that enforces the year-old U.N. ban on supplying military goods to Libya.

The near shipment of the eight high-quality stainless steel containers illustrates the difficulties governments have with equipment that can serve commercial or military purposes.

QUALITY EYEGLASSES ONLY $59!

Many eyeglass wearers continue to shop at the same small optical office where they've been paying $100 or more for each pair of glasses. They simply don't believe that we can really sell fashionable, quality eyeglasses for $59.

What is the most important aspect of eyeglass quality? The lenses.

Did you know that most lenses come already made to a prescription when they get to the optician—and that most optical shops buy these lenses from the same handful of national makers?

The only difference is that while a small office might buy them by the dozens, we buy them by the thousands. At very attractive prices.

What about the lenses that do need to be ground to your prescription? Small offices usually send them out to a wholesale lab. We operate our own high-tech lab where we employ strict quality controls.

CAN $59 EYEGLASSES BE FASHIONABLE?

You don't have to sacrifice fashion to get a low price. We carry over 400 fashionable frames in the latest styles and designers. In fact, our low prices can help you be even more fashionable. Now you can afford several pairs in different colors and styles for a variety of looks.

CONTACT LENSES FOR LESS!

Our high quality and low prices don't stop at eyeglasses.

We sell a pair of Softmate B or Ultra DW contact lenses for just $34! A pair of back-up glasses, with single vision plastic lenses, are just $39, same prescription, same visit.

So for both—contacts and glasses—it's a total of just $73! Eye exam not included.

Here's a community effort worth supporting

The Twin Falls Public Library is a valuable (and often underappreciated) community resource, and it is about to get better.

This summer's fund drive by the Library Foundation will enhance the library's ability to serve the public's thirst for information. It's a project worth getting behind.

A little background on the library itself: Among Idaho's larger libraries, it is ninth in terms of population served — about 27,600 people. Yet it ranks third in the number of items owned and fourth in the number of items circulated.

On a per-capita basis, it is first in both of those categories. It is second in library visits per capita.

Those rankings speak well of the community. They say we put a premium on knowledge. For our size, we maintain a fine library, and we use it heavily.

Recently the Library Foundation launched its first communitywide fund drive, with a goal of $150,000 by summer's end. The money is earmarked for several excellent projects:

- Building the collections of the library's Idaho and Pacific Northwest History room. This room, formerly an inaccessible cubbyhole, became a popular centerpiece of the library when the building was expanded and remodeled in 1991. It's a treasurehouse of local and regional lore, and it has the potential to become even better.

- Recording the memories of pioneer families on oral-history tapes. This exciting project promises to create a vivid record of this area's early years. It's a project with some urgency, because the ranks of old-timers grow thinner every year.

- Increasing the foundation's endowment fund to generate more income for buying books and materials. We have a beautiful building, but books are what make a library, and they must be updated constantly.

These are all excellent goals. What's more, the foundation can offer some enticing tax deductions to donors.

Volunteers from several service clubs will call on local businesses Thursday. We urge business owners and managers to dig deep. We also urge individuals, over the next few weeks, to consider private donations to this important community effort.

Thanks for summer baseball

A positive letter to the editor in a time when there are so many negative ones concerning our lives and times.

To all the Joey Fitzpatrick and Don Myers of this world that devote their time and energies to give our children their summer baseball program. Without people like them, there would be nothing for these kids to do in the summer. So please take the time to appreciate what they do for your children and to thank them.

Thanks to all those parents and friends who teach these young people to play as a team, to learn how to lose as well as to win.

Thanks to the fans that realize these are just children and refrain from any verbal abuse and profanity toward them.

Thanks to our community that supports the efforts of those working so hard for our children.

A program to be proud of ran by people who care. And a community that stands behind its youth.

"The devil made me do it" or "God made me do it."

Then you know that this person does not know that thing that makes them alive they call God is not guilty of wrong thinking. And they waste time talking about the devil. For the devil does not exist except in the minds of people who think in the wrong direction. Prove it for yourself. Don't believe anything I say. That is really not a good thing. But it is nice to have someone, and say, "I've been thinking of what you said here some time ago, and now I see that you were right."

Sure does make you feel good, don't it? When a prescription you have taken jumps from $8 to $46, what do you think is wrong? Has the doctor made a mistake? Has the price of producing the medication suddenly risen or has the doctor druggist found a better Chrysler with higher payments? Or is someone greedy and don't give a hoot for you?

Think hard to find a reason.

Support valley Fellowship Hall

This letter is a request for support and endorsement of the Magic Valley Fellowship Hall at 801 Second Ave. N. The building was previously occupied by the Salvation Army. Some local businessmen and farmers saw the need of a place for people in recovery to hold meetings and spend time with other recovering people.

The Fellowship Hall provides services to such groups as Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous, Cocaine Anonymous, Al-Anon, Adult Children of Alcoholics and 12 other step groups. In doing so, space is provided for meetings and so-called sobering up to their members. The Fellowship Hall charges a percentage of those contributions for space or room rents.

Other funds come from the sale of memberships. (You don't have to belong to the recovering community to be a member.) The hall holds potluck dinners, speaker meetings, dances, bingo and casino nights, yard sales, car washes, raffles and informational talks by some of the counselors from our local treatment centers. The hall also sells self-help literature: books, pamphlets, longevity tokens, bumper stickers and various other items. Despite all of these activities, the financial situation remains critical with the mortgage, utilities, insurance and maintenance payments, as well as having managerial and janitorial expenses to pay on a regular basis. The hall has been burglarized several times, creating additional expenses.

We provide a unique service to the community that no other organization does. Where else can that alcoholic, addict or mentally confused person go to express their problems or their way of living without substances?

The hall is open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. weekdays and on weekends. It costs to keep the building open. It is a good option to have this hall to go to instead of using toxic substances.

I personally would like to thank the merchants and other donors that have donated cash or merchandise to some of our past fund-raising activities! We hope we can continue helping the community. Your donations could help prevent that burglary, drunk driving accident or family battery from being more prevalent by helping us provide that safe "haven" for those so afflicted. Thank you again.

Hospital keeps costs rising

With the ever-escalating cost of health care, it would appear the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has been doing its share to keep the cost of hospitalization low while accumulating more funds for capital improvements. It has a $4 million reserve to use for a doctors' office building.

If this cannot be built with private funds off county property, why should the hospital build it? A private office building would contribute to taxes while one on county property would not. If a group of doctors wishes to build a building, they will have no problem finding investors or their own financing.

A transitional nursing unit is not necessary! There are several privately owned nursing homes in the Magic Valley providing skilled nursing care and rehabilitative services for the residents of our community, no matter how long the anticipated length of stay. They should not have to compete financially with a county-operated facility.

Refinancing the present indebtedness with lower interest rate bonds was an excellent plan, but the savings should be used to lower the cost of care and not to compete with private enterprise.

John Bingham displayed his scorn when he said, "They did not have to hold a hearing because the funding came from operations and not from tax dollars." This indicates he believes this is not a county hospital but a private business to be run as the board (John Bingham) wishes and the commissioners go along with him. I believe if the county owns the hospital, the surplus funds are county money and should be treated as such.

Increase start-up capital, not government sector

The tax bill that emerged from the Senate Finance Committee is worse than the one that went in. The senators dropped the destructive Btu tax on energy but substituted an even more destructive surtax on capital gains.

This pushes the capital-gains tax rate up to 30.8 percent, a rate that is high both absolutely and in relation to other countries. This inappropriate increase comes at a time when House members such as Herbert C. Klein, D-N.J., are complaining about the lack of money for start-up ventures.

On May 12, he told the House that "just the other day I had a visit from a group from the electronics industry, who said to me that they can create new jobs, that they have the business, that they can sell to foreign companies and they cannot get the capital to finance their ventures."

After the 10 percent hike in the capital-gains tax, they will be even less able to get start-up capital.

You might think that the Democrats would put two and two together and come up with a decision to cut the capital-gains tax. But that assumes Democratic fealty. The taxpayers will be able to lose a lot of their hard-earned tax dollars so that people who have never been in business can identify "critical technologies," "outreach to economically depressed areas" and allocate risk capital to "socially and economically disadvantaged individuals."

In other words, the government will have a new political slush fund to distribute in political ways for political purposes. In place of a capax process of wealth creation, there will be another mechanism for redistributing taxpayers' incomes to the politically favored.

Paul Craig Roberts

The National Competitiveness Act, like the capital-gains surtax, is a way to prevent the rise of new jobs and wealth. These are important achievements for Democrats, the party of government, because they lead to still more government. When capital is prevented by taxes from creating jobs, the government claims the responsibility and socialism expands.

The tax bill that is before the country makes it clear that there is no such thing as a New Democrat. The Democrats have clearly chosen to punish success and to reward failure.

repeal of the capital-gains tax. The capital-gains tax is a triple tax on the same income. A company that is successful and earns profits pays income taxes. This income is taxed again when paid out in dividends. If some of the earnings are reinvested, future earnings are capitalized in the value of the stock and taxed a third time as capital gains.

Moreover, unlike the income tax, the capital-gains tax is not indexed for inflation. That means that increases in asset prices because of inflation are treated as real gains and taxed. This taxation of nominal gains is a confiscation of wealth.

The current tax code already taxes investment income three times, and the current tax bill raises all three of the taxes: the tax on personal income, business income and capital-gains income. (In national income accounting, capital gains are not income.)

This extraordinary pummeling of success, which will make America poorer, less productive and less employed, is justified by Democrats and their media pimps on the grounds that the rich escaped taxation during the 1980s and do not pay their fair share.

This is a lie. Freely available IRS statistics show that the percentage of the total stock and income tax paid by the top 1 percent rose from 19 percent in 1980 to 27.5 percent in 1988. The percentage paid by the top 5 percent rose from 36.8 percent to 45.5 percent and the percentage paid by the top 10 percent rose from 49.3 percent to 57.2 percent.

Obviously, the Democrats have a perverted definition of fairness. It is one that is killing America as the land of opportunity.

Paul Craig Roberts, former assistant Treasury secretary, is chairman of the Institute for Political Economy in Washington. He wrote this article for the Los Angeles Times.

There's a reason for everything

Didja ever hear of Edgar Bergen, who was a famous ventriloquist of a few years ago? Made a lot of money with his makin' people laugh and have fun, just talking to a couple of wooden dummies.

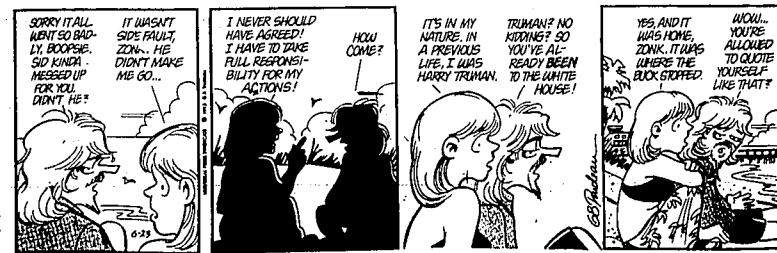

Like the time he scolded Mortimer Snerd, who was anything but good looking, but a merry soul, nonetheless. At this time, poor Mortimer had been spouting off about something which he didn't know one thing about and Bergen said to him, "Mortimer, how can you be so stupid?" And Mortimer said, "Well, uh — er, Mr. Bergen, it ain't easy!"

Now, I'm not intimating that you are stupid even for thinking stupid things because everyone has, at one time or another, caught themselves thinking unbearable thoughts that bordered on the uncertainty of life that involved wrong thinking. I admit I am not infallible in this respect, but even as a child I found myself looking for or waiting for a reason to appear, and I would ask my dad, "What is this for?" or, "Why do you say this?" This latter attitude can lead to trouble, as some dads are not patient enough to take time out to explain or evaluate a motive or reason.

This is what the detectives do in solving crimes, isn't it? If they can establish a reason, then they have a motive. So actually, the thinking processes lead to a right or wrong action. The people who choose a way out don't stop to think that someone else, maybe even the judge, will see through their subterfuge and convict them anyway, including the people who say,

Andrus encouraged on gaming issue

All sides begin talking on differing views of gambling regulation

Cecil Andrus
Met with tribal leaders

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus sees the potential for resolving Indian gaming conflict in the new commitment by state and federal officials to pursue government-to-government talks with tribal leaders on implementing the 1988 Indian Gaming Regulatory Act.

"What is encouraging by this commitment is that all of the principals of a sorely needed national resolution have signed on to addressing some of the conflicting concerns," Andrus said in a statement issued on Tuesday.

"States have significant and very common problems with this federal law, and the door has been opened to resolving them," the governor said.

Andrus was among the western governors to meet privately during the weekend in Tucson with tribal leaders and two key U.S. senators about refining the five-year-old law that opened the way for reservation gambling throughout the nation. Andrus was in Arizona for the Western Governors' Association meeting.

Idaho is among some 30 states at odds with tribes over interpretation of the law. The state is currently in court with two of Idaho's five tribes over the validity of its 1992 constitutional amendment intended to block casino games on reservations.

The amendment prohibits casino gaming anywhere in the state, limiting non-Indian gambling to lotteries, pari-mutuel betting on horses, mules and dogs. The amendment attempts to draw a line between the two categories of gambling even though the federal law treats them identically as Class III games.

But the tribes interpret the 1988 law as permitting all Class III gaming on reservations if any Class III game is allowed by the state.

Idaho has already signed a regulatory compact with the Coeur d'Alene Tribe as required by the federal law, but the compact specifically leaves to the federal courts the decision on whether casino gaming is allowed on Idaho reservations.

In other states, some federal judges have let Indians offer games that tribes contend are not permitted elsewhere in their states, and others have barred tribes from using the federal act to sue states that have refused to negotiate a compact with their tribes.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, said the discussions, which started May 1, show more potential for consensus than originally believed.

Andrus said members of the National Governor's Association and other state officials organizations along with officials of the Clinton administration and tribal gaming leaders will meet July 2 with Inouye and Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., on the issue.

Man pleads guilty to beating youth

POCATELLO — A 19-year-old Fort Hall man faces up to 10 years in prison after admitting he beat a 14-year-old youth for stealing from him, and left him to freeze to death outside a house last January.

Lincoln Charles on Monday pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter and will be sentenced Sept. 23 by U.S. District Judge Edward Rafeedie. Charles originally was charged with second-degree murder on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation.

Charles told Rafeedie he kicked and beat Alfred Bear because he thought Bear had stolen his beer and compact disks.

Bear was found dead in snow behind a Fort Hall home the morning of Jan. 17. Authorities said he probably froze to death a few hours before he was found beaten around the head and torso.

Hydro developers face record fine

ASHTON — A federal agency is levying a record fine against the developers of an eastern Idaho hydroelectric project that washed out a year ago.

The company says the penalty is excessive, since the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's own studies show the first estimates of environmental damage were too high. The agency said it's seeking a $500,000 fine against Marysville Hydro Partners, which is developing a project on Fall River, five miles southeast of Ashton.

A penstock and canal collapsed June 11, 1992. Agencies estimated between 10,000 and 20,000 tons of sediment was dumped into Fall River, killing young trout and degrading fish habitat.

Ada County seeks to ease jail crowding

BOISE — Nearly 80 Ada County Jail inmates will be transferred to the county's Work Release Center in the next month as part of a plan to ease the jail's crowding.

The Ada County Work Release Center will be converted into a temporary jail in the next few weeks as part of a plan to ease the county's crowding, Sheriff Vaughn Killen said on Monday.

Road builder reports vandalism

GRANGEVILLE — Idaho County Sheriff's Department is investigating severe vandalism to road building equipment in the Noble Creek timber sale area of the Nez Perce National Forest.

Highland Enterprises Inc. of Grangeville reported extensive damage on Sunday afternoon to a tractor, a log skidder, an excavator and a trailer. The damage included severed hoses that were cut, smashed glass and gauges and fuel tanks contaminated with dirt, rocks and sand. Tires on the trailer were also slashed.

Man protests denial of boat dock

COEUR D'ALENE — A Kootenai County man refused permission to build a boat dock in front of his home on Lake Coeur d'Alene wants his property tax valuation cut in half.

Donald Dupont told Kootenai County commissioners on Monday government officials are not allowing him to use his property to its "highest and best use" and therefore wants compensation.

County assessors have valued Dupont's property at $274,000. Dupont said his half-acre is worth $136,774. Both assessments exclude the price of Dupont's $241,646 home.

Weaver jurors live cloistered lives during their deliberations

BOISE (AP) — They travel in vans with blacked-out windows.

They have no contact with family or friends. Every word they read and everything they see is closely monitored. And they are constantly surrounded by armed guards.

They aren't federal prisoners. They're jurors in the murder-conspiracy trial of white separatist Randy Weaver and co-defendant Kevin Harris.

For many of the seven women and five men charged with deciding the outcome of the federal trial, the two months of testimony, followed by days of sequestered deliberations is a hardship. One juror is pregnant, several are senior citizens and many are missing work.

Their identities have been closely guarded. But there is an accountant—a public-school teacher, timber-production supervisor, college course administrator, a newspaper pressman, a medical technologist and a salesman.

The federal government pays a daily stipend of $40. Restaurant meals are provided. In return, the jurors must sit through eight weeks of testimony, almost 60 instructions and hundreds of pieces of evidence to unanimously agree on a verdict.

"I know you have all become good friends and you all get along," U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge said when he ordered the jurors sequestered.

They have been living that cloistered life for a week. Court officials said it is the first federal jury to be sequestered in Idaho in at least 19 years.

The jurors spend their time alternately between the jury room in the federal building and a local hotel.

They are whisked into the federal building each morning through the basement garage, out of view of the media and trial watchers. The same vans with darkened windows take them out each night.

At the hotel, they each have their own room, but the telephones and televisions don't work. All entertainment is provided in a common room where television programs can be monitored and newspapers and magazines can be exercised of all information that might influence their ultimate decision.

Two court bailiffs constantly monitor them and take care of everything down to buying toothpaste if needed. And if the jury wants to get a message to the judge, it goes through the bailiffs.

Three alternates — two men and one woman — are living the same existence. But none of them will participate in the secret debate over the fate of the two defendants unless one of the jurors cannot continue for some reason.

Weaver, 45, and Harris, 25, are accused of killing Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan during an Aug. 21 shootout at Weaver's remote northern Idaho cabin.

Council rejects swimsuit code

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A small but vocal group want a new Coeur d'Alene ordinance forbidding thong swimsuits after spotting a man in near-nude beach attire during a church school cruise.

"He was strutting like a peacock," said Judy Yeager. "He enjoyed the whole world looking at him." She and four other women asked the subcommittee for new guidelines. But the panel voted Monday against changes.

A member of the panel, Council member Nancy Wallace, said she spent some time during the weekend at a city beach. Though she saw some suits that resembled the thong suit, she said no one seemed to notice. "I didn't see people gawking at the thong bathing suits. I really do not believe in legislating what people wear."

The women argued that they and their children, who were on the boat near city beach, had their rights violated by the man who strolled past wearing a thong suit.

They won't go back to the beach.

Corporations try for contract worth billions

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Nearly 200 corporate managers are in Idaho Falls jockeying for a share of a multi-billion dollar contract at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

They started meeting in Idaho Falls Tuesday for three days of slide shows, information sessions and tours of the nuclear research facility in what the Department of Energy called a "preproposal conference."

The federal agency will award a management contract that could be valued at $3.5-billion or more. It will cover most of the facility's operations and bring most of the site's workers under the heading of a single company or a team of companies.

Several teams of companies are expected to bid on the five-year contract. Representatives from 86 companies registered for the conference. Department of Energy officials, who want a wide variety of bidders for the new contract, said they were pleased by the turnout.

In his overview, however, INEL Deputy Manager John Wileynski delivered some sobering numbers. He said INEL's 1992 budget of more than $1.1 billion is 78 percent defense-related.

Lack of dollars visible at Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Visitors to Yellowstone are streaming through unattended gates without paying the $10 admission fee.

Potholes and crumbling shoulders have turned roads into obstacle courses.

And good luck finding one of the nature guides who used to wander the park.

The country's oldest national park is rejuvenating itself after the devastating fires of 1988 but is having a harder time coping with budget woes.

A record 3.1 million people visited Yellowstone last year, and even more are expected this year. Yet the park's budget remains virtually unchanged at $17.8 million, despite rising costs for things like utilities.

Instead of the 136 rangers hired for four-month stints during the busy season five years ago, the park could afford only 70 seasonal rangers for 2½-month stints this year.

Park officials estimate they're losing $1 million in uncollected admission fees a year because there aren't enough rangers.

"We probably collect maybe half of what we should if we had the gates staffed all the time," lamented Yellowstone spokeswoman Marsha Karle. "That bothers people. They look around for someone to pay the $10 fee."

Brochures warn of the poor road conditions, and signs urge caution because of the potholes and orange-flagged crumbling shoulders.

"They need to be repaired, that's clear," Marsha

Betley of Madison, Wis., said recently after pulling off the pothole road to look at Undine Falls.

Recent roadwork has improved the Grand Loop that circles Yellowstone's interior. But park officials say hundreds of millions of dollars still needs to be spent on roadwork.

Yellowstone is seeking $20.1 million for next year, a 13 percent increase over this year.

"As you can guess, it's frustrating to us to see this happening," Karle said. "It's really unfortunate to not get support."

The shortage of rangers causes other problems. Back-country campers and boaters can wait half a day or longer for a permit. And with not enough rangers to direct traffic, roads become clogged when motorists slow down to gawk at bison and elk.

Uneasy Challis prepares for economic bust after cutbacks

CHALLIS (AP) — Seven months after Cyprus closed the doors on its Thompson Creek Mine and laid off 200 employees, Challis businessmen have prepared for the worst and hope for the best.

"There are so many things going on that we can't tell what to expect," said grocery store manager Jon Miller. "Basically, our whole town is sitting here waiting, praying, crossing our fingers, hoping that we went overboard in preparing for the worst."

The economic bust that residents expected when Cyprus laid off its last 200 workers hasn't hit yet. Miller says she's ordering merchandise for next Valentine's Day, with no idea what her market will be.

Cyprus families have trickled out of town slowly, sending fathers and husbands ahead to secure new jobs while children finished out the school year in Challis.

If business is down, it's hard to tell by how much, since tourists have taken up the slack. Miller and area real estate agents report brisk home sales to self-employed, retired or semi-retired newcomers. Most businesses report only slight downturns.

Bob Hammond, though, was one businessman hit hard by Cyprus' closure. He owns a convenience store and gasoline distributorship in Challis and supplied fuel for Cyprus. The contract accounted for a large percentage of his business.

When the mine shut down, Hammond said he simply did what he's done to survive other similar economic dives during his business career.

"You just roll up your sleeves and go to work and do what you can," Hammond said.

Even as moving vans roll in and out of town daily, rumors of Cyprus' reopening float through town. Residents, though, have heard too many to put too much faith in the latest.

3 rodent species show traces of mystery virus

ATLANTA (AP) — Three rodent species in the Southwest carry traces of a new type of virus believed responsible for the region's outbreak of severe respiratory illness, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said Tuesday.

The CDC said it has found antibodies against a new strain of hantavirus in dozens of deer mice, one prairie mouse and one chipmunk.

That means those rodents were exposed to the virus, but it doesn't prove which one is the carrier, said Dr. James Hughes, director of the National Center for Infectious Disease.

To determine that, the CDC must isolate the virus in its laboratory. Because hantaviruses grow very slowly, that will take a few more weeks, he said.

However, the CDC's latest tests prove it takes extremely close contact with a rodent or the dirt where it has urinated to catch the virus.

"You'd have to stumble on recent droppings and stir them up in a way that you would inhale the virus," Hughes said.

Simply staying away from rodents and areas where they proliferate should protect people, he said. Anyone who stumbles on a dead rodent or a nest should douse it with bleach before safely disposing of it, he said, and people should avoid stirring up dust in barns or grain warehouses where rodents typically live.

The CDC is investigating 32 possible cases of hantavirus-caused illness, most of them in New Mexico. There have been 16 deaths, and the CDC has found proof of hantavirus in 12 of the patients, nine of whom died.

Utah County commission lowers taxes

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Utah County taxpayers will be paying about 3.2 percent less in taxes for the county's services this year under a plan adopted by the county commission.

James Sutherland, chief deputy clerk-auditor, said the rate is below the certified tax rate set by the Utah State Tax Commission as the maximum amount a county can levy.

The commissioners on Monday dropped the general fund tax rate by 5 percent and increased the health fund 8 percent.

The standard state levy remained even.

Plane crash victims win $9.3 million in suit

PHOENIX (AP) — Six people injured in a plane crash near the Grand Canyon Airport three years ago have been awarded $9.3 million by a federal jury.

Jurors found Grand Canyon Airlines Inc. primarily at fault for failing to properly maintain an engine part which led to the crash.

After flying over the canyon on April 13, 1990, the pilot aborted a landing at the airport in Tusayan because of strong crosswinds and was climbing for altitude when the engine stalled, according to evidence in the case.

Tominaga may run for statewide office

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

Tominaga

TWIN FALLS - Former state Sen. Lynn Tominaga of Rupert is considering running for state auditor or secretary of state next year.

Tominaga, a Republican, is one of several people thinking of challenging incumbent State Auditor J.D. Williams. Williams, a Democrat who lost the 2nd District congressional race last year, has not yet announced whether he will run for re-election.

Secretary of State Pete Cenarusa, a Republican who has served in that position since 1967, also has not said whether he will seek re-election.

"I'm doing some checking right now, visiting with some folks," said Tominaga, now a policy analyst for the Idaho Water Users Association in Boise. "But I'm not going to announce anything for a while, until I see if I can raise the money and whether I'd have a chance."

Tominaga was elected to the state Senate in 1984 and served there until July 1991, when he resigned to go to work for the water users' association.

GOP State Rep. Ron Crane, a Nampa businessman, already has announced his interest in the state auditor's job. State Rep. John Alexander, D-Pocatello, said he might run for the job, but would not challenge Williams in a primary.

Tominaga estimated it would cost between $30,000 and $40,000 to win the GOP primary for auditor, and said that would be a factor in his ultimate decision.

"I'm not a rich man by any means, so a lot of it would depend on the financial considerations," he said.

More than 16 months before Election Day 1994, most political activity has centered on the race to succeed Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, who has announced he will not run for a fifth term.

Three Democrats, a half-dozen Republicans and one independent are considered possible or definite candidates for governor next year, and many of them are openly soliciting support and contributions.

But behind the scenes, several candidates are quietly testing the waters before deciding whether to run for other statewide offices.

For example, two former GOP legislators have said they'll challenge Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter: former Rep. Dean Hangenson of Coeur d'Alene and former Sen. Dean Sorenson of Boise. Otter, a two-term incumbent, is considered vulnerable because of his drunken-driving conviction earlier this year.

Cenarusa, a Carey native, will be 76 this December, and he has hinted he may retire rather than run for a seventh term. Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans, now serving his fourth term, is also rumored to be considering retirement.

2-car collision sends 2 to hospital, slows traffic

KIMBERLY - A two-car collision east of Kimberly hospitalized two people and slowed traffic on Idaho Highway 50 Tuesday afternoon.

Paul Crumrine of Hazelton was driving east when a car driven by 18-year-old Travis Rogers pulled in front of him at the 3700 East Road intersection, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy John Barsness said.

Crumrine, 23, and Rogers, Twin Falls, both were conscious before being taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. No report on their condition was available Tuesday evening.

Two passengers in Rogers' vehicle escaped serious injury. Barsness said Rogers either failed to stop at the stop sign altogether or did not yield to Crumrine's truck.

Test your dog's citizenship Saturday at City Park

TWIN FALLS - The Snake River Canyon Kennel Club is holding a Canine Good Citizen test from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the Twin Falls City Park.

The test evaluates a dog's responses to everyday activities such as meeting a friendly stranger on the street, a new dog in the park or visiting the veterinarian.

Since Canine Good Citizen testing began in 1989, it has evolved into a national program; several state legislatures have passed resolutions endorsing it. Dogs with CGC certificates are allowed in many parks which ban other pets and several apartment complexes demand proof of CGC certificates before accepting new tenants with dogs.

Local opponents to a hydroelectric project at Star Falls, including Sharon and Harlan Gebauer of Murtaugh, are glad Federal Energy Regulatory Commission staffers used information supplied by residents in an environmental assessment of the project.

Environmental study rejects Star Falls hydro project

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH - A federal study rejects a hydroelectric project proposed at historic Star Falls. "We recommend license denial," Federal Energy Regulatory Commission staff said in an environmental assessment of the project.

FERC regulates private power projects. Local opponents of the project are pleased with the decision and pleased that the commission staff used information residents supplied, said Sharon Gebauer of Murtaugh.

Developer Bish Beymer of B&C Energy in Twin Falls said Tuesday that he had not yet looked at FERC's assessment.

Beymer has proposed building a 25.5-megawatt hydro project, including a 20-foot high and 400-foot long dam across the river, just above Star Falls. He's been working on the project nearly a decade.

Even with the developer's efforts to reduce the visual and environmental effects of the project, and even if he followed FERC's recommendations, that couldn't compensate for the loss of cultural, historic and aesthetic qualities of the site, the assessment said.

"The project would unavoidably introduce modern elements that conflict with the natural characteristics of the site that define its historic significance," the assessment said.

It is the only major undeveloped waterfall on the Middle Snake River.

"They're not giving him a lot of room," Gebauer said. The assessment doesn't leave a lot of options for development of the site, she said.

But questionnaires passed to people at the site show that most people who live in the area or who visit favor preservation of the area, Gebauer said.

But the project already had a lot of strikes against it.

The site, 18 miles southeast of Twin Falls, is seven miles downstream of Milner Dam. It was here in the early 1800s that the Hunt party of explorers lost a canoe and one of their group to the maelstrom they dubbed Caldron Linn.

Beymer originally submitted an application for a project at the site to FERC in 1984. He filed an amended application four years later.

A 1990 FERC environmental impact statement recommended against the Star Falls project in part because of unavoidable adverse effects on historical values and wetlands in the area.

Beymer withdrew his application, reworked the proposal and has resubmitted the application.

The Idaho Water Resources Board has ruled against the project. The state Division of Environmental Quality has denied a water-quality permit for the project. The Bureau of Land Management is studying the potential of the river at Star Falls for Wild and Scenic status.

Gebauer said the next step will be to ask congressional representatives to support of the recommendation in the assessment, she said.

City seeks to reduce friction with builders

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A "quick-start" program to issue building permits might ease the strain between the city building department and area home builders.

The program, which the city kicked off Tuesday night in a meeting with contractors, addresses an important issue for home builders, said Lyle Frazier of Rain Tree Construction. A long wait for a building permit can put contractors far behind their building schedules, he said.

"We've been asking for the quick-start program for a long time," Frazier said.

In the past, the city has taken three to six weeks to issue permits for new homes, Frazier said. Under the new program, the city promises to issue residential building permits in four days.

If it works, the city and area contractors might be on the road to a happier relationship, Frazier said he already sees signs of better cooperation between builders and city officials.

"We're working together better than we have in a long time," he said. Relations between builders and the building department have worn thin the past few years as development in Twin Falls has increased. Building department workers have had a hard time keeping pace with the work.

The Magic Valley Builders Association drew up a list of complaints against the building department and quietly handed it to city officials a few weeks ago. City officials released the list to The Times-News late last week.

Among the issues listed were problems with building inspectors and other department workers and the potential for a conflict of interest with J-U-B Engineers handling inspections for the city.

The city contracts with the engineering firm to handle building inspections.

Tuesday, Frazier said builders have no specific complaints about J-U-B and that no conflict of interest has occurred "as far as we are aware."

"J-U-B has done an excellent job," he said. But the potential for a conflict exists if J-U-B inspects its own building plans, Frazier said.

"We're not pushing for a change as much as we asked them (city officials) to look at the whole thing. Is it as effective as it was six or seven years ago?" Frazier asked.

Building inspectors and other department workers, who contractors say act heavily-handed in their efforts to enforce the building code, also made the list.

The inspectors' demeanor particularly irked builders, Frazier said, because the building department is funded through fees that contractors pay for their permits.

"We were getting a lousy job from the building department," he said.

Last summer, this started to change. In August, the city hired a Boise consulting firm to organize focus groups in which builders, engineers, architects and others talked with city building officials.

From the meetings, three areas of concern emerged, said Dawnen Blakeslee of Blakeslee and Associates.

These areas include communication, the

Ada County frowns on Dispose-All

The Times-News

BOISE - Dispose-All Inc. might lose its Ada County contract to run a trash transfer station if the company doesn't comply with state health rules, a Boise newspaper reported Tuesday.

The Idaho Statesman quoted Ada County Commissioner Vern Bisterfeldt as saying the trash firm, which operates in Boise under the name Boise-Ada Disposal, could lose its county contract if the Central District Health Department revokes its operating permit.

The disposal company picks up trash for 18,000 customers in Ada County, then hauls it to a station to separate it and reclaim recyclable materials. The rest of the garbage goes to the Ada County landfill.

The Central District Health Department has threatened to revoke the trash firm's operating permit because health workers say the company is piling trash outside the transfer building, which they say poses a health threat.

"There have been times when solid waste goes all the way to the entrance of the facility," Ron Baird of the health district was quoted as saying.

Besides the dumping problem, officials also say that the company needs to devise a plan to contain water within the boundaries of the transfer station site near Gowen Field west of Boise.

Company president Doug Lomow could not be reached for comment Monday, the article said. But the story quoted a May 7 letter to health officials in which Lomow said: "We believe we have always operated materially in compliance with our permit."

A visit to the transfer station on Monday showed no garbage piled outside of the building, the Statesman reported.

Dispose-All has started preliminary work on a landfill in Cassia County and has yet to apply for a county permit to run a landfill. Lomow has stated that he wants trash from the Magic Valley but would accept out-of-area and out-of-state waste if necessary.

Wildfires burn around Arizona

The Associated Press

Authorities were at least halfway Tuesday toward containing a fire on the slopes of Mount Graham in southeastern Arizona that still threatens communications towers while blazes in northern Arizona also continued to rage.

The blaze is 15 miles southwest of Safford has burned more than 600 acres but was 55 percent contained by late Tuesday, Coronado National Forest spokesman Gary Cornell said.

Containment still was not expected until Thursday.

The fires were among a rash of blazes that have burned 137,000 acres of forest, grassland and desert in the last week as temperatures soared over 100 degrees in the lower parts of the state. There have been no serious injuries or property damage, but three firefighters suffered minor burns.

The Mount Graham fire, known as the Noon Fire, caused the closure of Arizona 366, which leads to the top of the mountain.

Fire Information Officer Erin Connolly said the fire is within a mile of a major electronic communications site that houses equipment for MCI, Southern Pacific railroad and the U.S. Customs Service.

"We're very fortunate more firefighters haven't been injured, because the terrain is extremely rugged," Connolly said. "We have only used more-experienced crews to fight the fire."

The Noon Fire, on Hemlock Peak, is located between the 6,500- and 8,500-foot level.

In the Kaibab National Forest north of Grand Canyon National Park, firefighters brought under control a fire which had burned 1,762 acres of ponderosa pine and other conifers.

A fire south of the Utah border has burned 6,650 acres of mostly grass and sagebrush, said forest dispatcher George Kleindienst.

The blaze began Sunday night during a thunderstorm and spread Monday, but the about 300 firefighters on the fire weren't being hampered by gusty winds, Kleindienst said.

Crews that earlier contained two wildfires northeast of Tucson were watching hot spots, said Dave Beltrich, a spokesman for the State Land Department.

The Markham fire burned nearly 20,000 acres of state, private and U.S. Forest Service land between the Santa Catalina and Rincon mountain ranges north and east of Tucson, Beltrich said.

The Piety Complex fire burned across 4,700 acres west of the San Pedro River and in the eastern foothills of the Santa Catalina range. It was declared out on Tuesday morning.

Blaine School Board adds 5th grade teacher at Hemingway

By Jody Hinton
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County School Board grappled with growth at its regular meeting last week.

The board approved an additional fifth grade teaching position at Hemingway Elementary School in Ketchum to alleviate anticipated overcrowding in next year's classrooms.

The board's decision to fund the position is consistent with its commitment to keep classroom numbers down, Chairwoman Lynn Flickinger said.

Hemingway Principal John Dominic said without the added class, up to 27 students would be in each room.

The next question facing Dominic is where to put the new class. Hemingway has no available classroom space.

Dominic said he plans to utilize the art room and put the art teacher "on wheels."

"It isn't the most ideal situation," Dominic said. The luncheon could be used for large art projects, he said.

The board also discussed growth facing the school district which now has classes in 20 temporary classrooms.

Board members pointed out that overcrowding would soon become a major concern at Bellevue Elementary.

Said Flickinger: "Let's get out there and pass a bond," or the school district wouldn't even have the option of a luncheon to double as a classroom.

Superintendent Phil Homer said that students moving through the system would swell the population at Wood River High School to 800 by the year 1999.

The $16 million bond issue referred to by Flickinger would include funding to remodel and update the high school science labs, described by Homer as "woefully inadequate and well below state standards."

The date for the bond-issue election will be set in July. A two-thirds majority would be required to pass the bond. The last bond election failed by 2 percent of the vote, according to the district office.

Another problem plaguing the school district is a leaky roof at the Wood River High School.

Recent rains have emphasized the need.

The district received a detailed roof report from John Marvel, in association with Armstrong Architects.

Cost estimates for replacement of the 19-year-old, 2-acre roof ranged from $250,000 to $424,000.

Also at the meeting, parents, and Wood River High School Soccer Coach Erik Larson spoke in support of developing a girls' soccer program.

Parents said their daughters have been competing against organized boys' teams.

Board member B.J. Miller worried over potential injuries if the girls were to continue to play with the boys.

"I don't see the girls' opportunity to promote themselves when playing with the boys," Miller said.

"Bob Rubel, whose daughter plays soccer, said, 'The one thing I'd hate to see is to have these girls left idle. With equality the way it is, I don't see how you could not offer soccer to the girls.'"

Coach Larson said if a Wood River program were developed other Magic Valley teams would be initiated.

Flickinger said that the high school was short a sport for the girls and the board made plans to make a decision on the request at the next regular meeting.

In other business:

The board discussed crossing safety on Highway 75 at Elm and Main in Hailey.

Homer directed concerned parents to contact City of Hailey council members about the crossing and said he would meet with the Hailey police chief to determine a way to get children across the highway safely.

The board bid farewell to the following retirees: Ken Moxy, a 28-year Wood River High School math teacher; Doris Parke, long-time secretary at the Carey School; and Calixto Barayzarra, custodian for the Wood River High School.

Also leaving the district after many years of service is Carey School Principal Bob Bash, who will become superintendent in Coludesse.

District adopts program on bullying

By Jody Hinton
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County School District has adopted a new program called "Second Step" to help students discuss bullying, fighting and child-to-child sex abuse.

The program was adopted following a presentation by a curriculum steering committee at last week's School Board meeting.

The committee of parents, teachers and administrators recommended numerous changes in the district's curriculum, which were all adopted by the board.

The "Second Step" program is intended to follow up to a program already in place called "Talking About Touching," said district curriculum Director Bill Quinn.

"Second Step, teaches kids about how not to become victimizers," Quinn said.

Travel agency, contractors to settle claim

BOISE (AP) — A Boise travel agency and two contractors have agreed pay $500,000 to settle a federal claim that they violated Clean Air Act regulations on handling asbestos.

But Global Travel Inc., Jordan-Wilcomb Construction Inc. and Allied Construction Inc. did not admit any liability, in offering to sign the consent decree filed in U.S. District Court and announced on Tuesday.

"We simply settled," Bob Goeyden, director of finance and administration for Global Travel said. "If you don't pay that, you wind up paying substantially more than just to defend yourself against something that should never have come to this point in the first place."

The settlement will not become effective until after a 30-day public comment period that will begin later this month after notice of the proposed settlement is published in the federal register.

The federal government charged the three companies last September with failing to give the Environmental Protection Agency advance notice that asbestos would be involved in the building renovation the contractors did for Global Travel in downtown Boise.

perm process and field inspections.

Building department workers need to communicate better with contractors about changes in building code requirements, Blakeslee said.

The quick-start program allayed many concerns with the permitting process. But the city also started tracking permits on computer so key departments would have a better handle on where individual permits were in the system.

Soon, contractors with a computer modem will be able to tap directly into the city computer to find where their permit is in the process.

A prime object of the four groups was to help inspectors change their focus from enforcement to customer service, Blakeslee said.

Rather than saying "that's just how it is... that's the code," building inspectors must be able to tell contractors why a rule is enforced, City Manager Tom Courtney said.

"If we can't answer why, then we need to look at the regulations," Courtney said at a meeting with City Council, building department workers and the consultants Tuesday.

A task force of builders and others in the industry will work with Dave McAlindin, the city economic development director who recently took over responsibility for the permitting process, to continue the work of the focus groups and try to present more solutions.

Woman addresses trashy mobile homes

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY - The effort to keep trash removed from trailer courts worked, but only temporarily, says a Burley woman.

Virginia Belnap is trying to get things cleaned up again. She talked to the Burley City Council Monday night.

And City Council appears determined to back her up.

A co-owner of the Ravenswood Trailer Court, Belnap approached the City Council several months ago about the problem of unkempt mobile homes in a neighboring trailer court.

The earlier complaints got results.

"I'd like to think whoever's responsible," she told council members.

But now there's a bright-green toilet across the street from her house, she said. One of two mobile homes which burned down earlier this year still remains gutted on the mobile home park property, creating a safety hazard.

"There are children who play in the area," she said.

More abandoned vehicles are near the area, and someone is keeping chickens in the mobile home park, she said.

Council members said they agree that the mobile home park appears to be in violation of city codes. "It looks like we need to go after this guy," Councilman Brent Kerbs said, referring to Hiland Trailer Park owner Paul Chesley.

Bill Parsons said another attempt to clean up the trailer park could be made, but predicted it would take a lawsuit to see results.

Chesley, contacted Tuesday, said he felt the trailer park was clean enough. "I don't want to be a bad guy," he said.

ERIC GOODSELL/Mini-Cassia News Service

This trailer home remains gutted after burning at the Hiland Trailer Park in Burley. Virginia Belnap thinks it is a safety hazard.

He said he wants to talk to people who are complaining about his trailer park.

"Send them on over," he said.

Parsons said Monday that the city could remove the burned-out trailer on the 700 block of Oriental Avenue, using the section in the city code dealing with dangerous buildings. The city could bill the trailer court for removal costs.

Chesley said he doesn't know who the trailer belongs to, and invited anyone to haul the trailer off.

Kerbs, in other comments, said it was important for all city residents to keep their yards and businesses clean. He said he has recently noticed weeds growing up through the sidewalks in front of businesses.

"It looks terrible," he said.

2 boys caught taking coloring books

RUPERT - Two boys, aged 5 and 6, were caught shoplifting three coloring books and a box of crayons valued at $4.86.

The incident occurred June 16 when the young boys were seen taking the items from the Riddle's store on Onida Ave, according to the Rupert Police Department.

The boys were turned over to their fathers, police said.

Company reports railroad ties stolen

RUPERT - A Rupert company reported Monday that 28 railroad ties had been stolen.

An employee at the Ban Corporation on 475 West 100 South said a bank of railroad ties was stolen sometime between late Friday evening and early Saturday morning, according to the Minidoka County sheriff's department.

The thieves used a lift truck to pick up the bank, which contained 25 ties, and haul it away, deputies said. Another bank had been broken into and had three ties missing.

The loss was estimated at $240.

Purse reportedly stolen at yard sale

BURLEY - A Burley woman reported that her purse containing $104 was taken at a yard sale Saturday, deputies said.

Betty Winnmill told the Cassia County Sheriff's Department she went to a yard sale at 1450 Conant Ave. She said she put her purse down momentarily, but when she went to pick it up again it was gone. Total loss was placed at $135.

Cause of building's bad air unknown

BURLEY - Workers still haven't determined the cause of bad air which sickened two dispatchers inside the Cassia County Law Enforcement Building June 13, but a report from the Industrial Commission is expected later this week.

Li Jim Hgens of the Cassia County Sheriff's Department said law-enforcement officers have tried to determine what caused the bad air but without luck.

"We just don't know (what caused it)," he said. He said the Industrial Commission workers have been inside the building and will soon report what they found.

Two dispatchers suffered temporary respiratory problems and headaches. The building was evacuated until it was aired out and determined to be safe.

Woman suspected of having hantavirus dies in hospital

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) - An Indian woman from Arizona who was under treatment for a suspected hantavirus infection died Tuesday after less than 18 hours in University Hospital, authorities said.

The woman in her 60s, who had arrived here around 3 p.m. Monday, died at 8:45 a.m., hospital spokeswoman Annie Olson said. An autopsy was performed at the state Office of the Medical Investigator in Albuquerque to determine the cause of death, she said.

Rodent-borne hantavirus has been linked to an outbreak in the Four Corners area that is now suspected of killing 17 people.

The woman was not identified by name, but Utah health department spokesman Ross Martin said she was from northern Arizona and had sought treatment at Monument Valley Hospital in Utah on Sunday night.

"She was a Native American. We don't know what tribe," Martin said in Salt Lake City. He said there was some initial confusion about where she was from because she didn't speak English. "Apparently she was airlifted from Utah, but she was apparently from Arizona," said Sonya Chavez, spokeswoman for New Mexico Gov. Bruce King.

At a University Hospital news conference Monday in Albuquerque, Dr. Sarah Allen had said the woman — then listed in serious condition — was from eastern Utah. She was preliminarily suspected of being a hantavirus victim, Allen said.

She had been the second patient admitted for hantavirus treatment at University Hospital since Saturday, when a woman from the Navajo reservation in New Mexico was flown in.

The New Mexico woman and a third patient, admitted May 28, were listed in satisfactory condition Tuesday, Olson said.

A fourth suspected hantavirus patient went home last week, Olson said.

Hospital faces fines in nuclear program

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

BURLEY - The U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission will fine Cassia Memorial Hospital $2,500 for "apparent violations" in operating its nuclear medicine program, a commission news release says.

The commission cited the hospital for failing to establish a written quality management program and for 10 instances in which the hospital did not assure that radiation safety activities were performed, a Monday news release by the commission says.

Richard Packer, hospital administrator, said the problems were caused by MIS, a nuclear medicine service that has gone bankrupt since the problems occurred.

"I like to think we are the victim of circumstances," Packer said.

The hospital was fined because it is the licensee for the nuclear medicine program, Packer said.

The hospital is now negotiating a contract with another nuclear medicine provider, Packer said.

Since the violations were found the hospital has come into compliance with all commission rules, he said.

The commission adopted its quality management program rules in January to provide high confidence that medical procedures involving radioactive material are followed as required, the news release says.

"The commission requires that a written directive be used when a patient is administered a significant amount of sodium iodide-131."

The commission inspected the hospital on March 18 and found that in January the hospital violated the written directive requirement when a sodium iodide-131 was given to a patient. "NRC found no indication, however, that the procedure was performed improperly or that the patient was harmed," the news release says.

The hospital also failed to have a radiation safety committee meeting during one calendar quarter of 1992; did not verify the qualifications of a visiting authorized user before he used radioactive material; did not calibrate a survey instrument annually; and did not establish dose "trigger" levels for surveys of the nuclear medicine laboratory and other areas, the news release says.

Inspectors also found that on two instances tests were not performed as required, and four instances in which records were not properly kept, the news release says.

Phase 1 of Downard Bridge replacement set

Mini-Cassia News Service

BOISE - The first phase of the replacement of the 38-year-old Downard Bridge over the Snake River between Rupert and Declo on Idaho 25 is expected to begin June 28.

According to the Idaho Transportation Department, Idaho Construction Co. of Kimberly will begin the $1.88 million project by clearing the site of shrubbery, small trees and debris. Crews will work on new roadbed for approaches to the bridge, then the structure itself.

The project is expected to be completed by September 1994. During construction, traffic will be maintained on the existing bridge. When the project is complete, traffic will be redirected to the new bridge, and the old bridge will be removed.

The existing bridge is a narrow, timber structure built from materials of an even older bridge. The replacement will be a 1,123-foot pre-stressed concrete bridge.

The new bridge will be built on a flatter angle to straighten the approaches for safer vehicle handling. It will be slightly elevated to accommodate higher Snake River flood levels.

The bridge is a major link between motorists traveling from Declo to Rupert and from Interstate 84 to Rupert across the Snake River.

Special prosecutor charges clerk with misappropriation of funds

BOISE (AP) - Special Prosecutor Karl Shurtliff on Tuesday charged Boise County Clerk Arlene Kolar with misappropriating county funds in the first criminal complaint resulting for a two-month financial investigation.

Kolar's attorney immediately discounted the accusation and promised a vigorous defense against it.

In the complaint, Shurtliff, the former U.S. attorney for Idaho, said Kolar received $695,28 check made out to the county last Dec. 29 but converted it to her own use. Shurtliff said she has since turned the money over to the county, but the investigation into possible financial irregularities was continuing.

Haley attorney Keith Roarke, who represents Kolar, said the allegation was the result of "a cutthroat political environment" in the small county of 3,500.

Shurtliff was appointed special prosecutor by the County Commission seven weeks ago after Prosecutor Wayne Kidwell, a former state attorney general, resigned amid a preliminary investigation, claiming he feared county employees were carrying guns in his office.

Since the controversy erupted, nearly 1,000 people in the county signed a petition requesting a thorough investigation into alleged financial mismanagement.

A preliminary hearing on the felony misappropriation charge was set for July 28.

Teen-ager drives off with ice cream truck

AIRWAY HEIGHTS, Wash. (AP) - A teen-ager who drove away in an ice cream truck Tuesday as the driver was making his first delivery led police on a 15-mile chase before being captured, authorities said.

When officers caught up with the Dreyer's Grand Ice Cream truck and arrested the young driver, none of the tasty cargo was missing.

"I'm glad it's in one piece and there's still product on the truck," said the truck's driver, Rick Shock.

Cars from three law enforcement agencies pursued the truck over bumpy back roads starting in this suburb west of Spokane, authorities said. Chase speeds didn't exceed 60 mph.

Suspicious of child abuse can harm innocent parents

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to "Colorado Mother," who kept her child home from school because of a black eye and bruised cheek sustained from a fall against a coffee table, which could have looked suspicious to a day-care operator. I would have sent my child home, too, because this is what happened to me:

Dear Abby

brother's fall) and concluded that we were telling the truth, but I learned that once the report was made, I had a record and was on their "suspicious" list for a year.

My 4-year-old son was fooling around at the Laundromat, climbing up and down when he'd been told not to. He fell and got a nasty bruise on his cheek, but since he felt no discomfort, we let him go to preschool and thought nothing of it. Later, I responded to a knock on my door from a county child abuse investigator! I was appalled. The investigators questioned me, my son and my daughter (who witnessed her system had gone crazy and might take my child from me. Perhaps I overreacted, but I was terrified. Abby, anybody can report a neighbor for "child abuse," and it doesn't matter if you're guilty or innocent, the investigation is made, and the record remains!

CALIFORNIA MOTHER: DEAR CALIFORNIA MOTHER: The same day I received your letter, I also heard from the president of the National Coalition for Child Protective Reform. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: "Colorado Mother" kept her child home from day care because the child had hit her face against the coffee table and got a terrible bruise on her cheek, plus a black eye. The mother feared being accused of child abuse, Abby, you told her she should have sent the child to school, since she had nothing to hide.

As a former assistant commissioner of public welfare in Massachusetts, and a member of the National Board of Directors of the American Civil Liberties Union, I can tell you "Colorado Mother" acted wisely, and you are mistaken.

Schoolteachers are instructed to report a child's "black eye" or bruise on the chance that the child has been physically abused at home. Yes, children have been pulled out of class and interrogated, and even strip-searched (for more bruises) — a terrifying experience for any child. Children have been placed in foster homes temporarily while social workers try to get to the bottom of suspected child abuse. False allegations traumatize thousands of children every year. The National Coalition for Child Protective Reform was organized after a conference at Harvard Law School in an attempt to change this system. We believe that the laws allowing nearly unlimited coercive intervention into families need to be narrowed, and child-protective hot lines must be required to carefully screen allegations before launching investigations.

— ELIZABETH VORENBERG, PRESIDENT, NATIONAL COALITION FOR CHILD PROTECTIVE REFORM, CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

BERG: It is good to know that the witch-hunt of false accusations has not gone unnoticed. Our children should be protected, but parents must also be protected against false accusations.

Scent-imental Salute

American cuisine changes with times

Throughout the last nine years -- and some 365 columns -- we've learned about all sorts of culinary worlds, ranging from "California Cuisine," which seemed so suspect at first, to the "real Oriental, right off" the streets of Singapore and Beijing.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

We've learned how to make a fair loaf of bread, and we've watched this skill be replaced by a machine that worked all night so we could awaken to the aroma of fresh baked bread while still snuggled under the covers.

Since that first column in 1984, we've been learning to redefine the "New American Plate," with larger portions going to the grain and vegetable and fruit sections and less to fat and salt. The proverbial "meat and potatoes" is becoming "potatoes and meat." At times, American cuisine also includes a delightful combination of Cajun, Oriental and Mexican ingredients that awaken our ancestral taste buds.

Through the years, you readers have watched my children grow, leave home, come back, finally graduate and a couple marry. I also have grandchildren now.

Many of you have become good friends and acquaintances.

Here's to your kindness, Friend Husband's patience, my editors' sharp eyes, my old stove and my wonderful, frustrating modern cooking utensil -- the computer. May we all keep meeting like this.

My very first column introduced me and announced all the pertinent facts, including my age (which I had kept out of the paper through diligent safe driving so I wouldn't get a ticket and, therefore, my age in print). It seemed so important then. Now it's funny. I'm just glad to be here to share with you.

That first column featured these recipes, which I still use.

CABBAGE CHICKEN SALAD

- 1/2 head cabbage, finely chopped
- 2 green onions, chopped
- 2 tablespoons slivered almonds
- 2 tablespoons sesame seeds, toasted
- 1 chicken breast, skinned, cooked and chopped
- 1 package oriental noodles
- 2 tablespoons sugar or sugar substitute
- 2 tablespoons vegetable-oil
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon MSG (omit if sensitive)
- 1/4 teaspoon vinegar

Mix all together, except noodles. Refrigerate. Break up noodles and stir in just before serving.

Serves 2-6 depending on what else is on the menu.

BROCCOLI SHRIMP SALAD

- 1 bunch broccoli (2-3 stems), cleaned and chopped
  - 1 can shrimp (any size)
  - 1 small onion, diced
  - 1 medium green pepper, diced
  - 1 can sliced water chestnuts
  - 1/3 cup regular or low fat mayonnaise
- Drop broccoli into boiling water for one minute. Drain and rinse in cold water. Mix in other ingredients, let chill in refrigerator.

Also serves 2-6 depending on the rest of the menu.

Thanks for the memories. Enjoy!

Remember the unforgettable aroma of sizzling onions on the grill at the county fair? What a topping for the All-American hamburger -- a memory in itself!

Never has our allure for the onion family waned. They are cook, crisp, sweet and so mild. They can be sliced, chopped, diced, minced, baked, broiled or sautéed, and for true lovers, eaten "au naturel." They should always be treated with a gentle heat, shorter cooking time and only until just tender.

A hamburger without potato salad and Cucumber Onion Salad is downright unAmerican.

ALL-AMERICAN BURGER

- Cheese-Onion Bun
- 2 cups dry milk
- 2 cups water
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 1/3-1/2 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3 packages dry yeast
- 1 cup water, lukewarm
- 1 cup Cheddar cheese, shredded
- 1/2 cup onion, finely chopped or shredded
- 5 cups flour, approximately

Mix dry milk and water; cook over low heat until scalded. Add oil, sugar and salt. Stir yeast and water to dissolve; cool to lukewarm. Let stand 5 minutes. Mix well. Add cheese and onion.

Add flour, 1 cup at a time, kneading and beating well. Knead last 2 cups by hand. Knead until dough is smooth and elastic. Shape into a ball. Place in a large, greased bowl and turn over. Let rise until double in bulk. Punch down. Form into hamburger-size buns. Flatten with palm of the hand. Let rise until double. Bake at 350 degrees, 15-20 minutes.

Makes 18 buns.

SAUTEED ONIONS

- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 6 medium onions, sliced
- 1/4 teaspoon salt

Going Dutch pays off for Thompson

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS -- Jan Thompson won first place for main entrée in the Dutch oven cookoff, sponsored by West One Bank during Western Days.

This was the first time Thompson entered a Dutch oven contest, and she says it's only been in the last year or so that she has seriously practiced this kind of cooking. She has cooked over campfires all her life, though, so using a Dutch oven came easy for her.

Now, whenever Thompson and her husband, Bob, head out in their camp trailer they take along the Dutch ovens.

"We do most of our cooking outside," she says. "That's the fun part of camping."

Thompson is the proud owner of six Dutch ovens, including one that belonged to her grandmother. She says the old one is wonderful, because it has become so well seasoned over the years.

To preserve the seasoning of her ovens, Thompson avoids abrasive cleaners, uses a mild detergent and rinses well. She wipes the ovens with a hard vegetable shortening.

Her advice to anyone who is considering the purchase of a Dutch oven is to make sure the lid fits properly. Just one oven is all you need.

"But the nice thing about having more than one kettle is you can use them for the main dish, the bread and the dessert," she says.

Thompson's Dutch ovens have legs, and she stacks one on top of the other to conserve coals. To determine how many coals to use, take the diameter of the pot and add three to that for the amount to put on the lid. Subtract three for the bottom. So if you have a 12-inch Dutch oven, you will use 15 coals on top and nine below.

But that is a very general guideline. It can be changed to suit a particular recipe. Or, if a wind comes up and the charcoal burns fast, more should be added.

"It's experience that really counts in the long run, I think, when it comes to a fire," Thompson says.

Here is the recipe for Thompson's prize winning main dish. It's called...
PORK CHOP STEW, CAJUN STYLE
Serves 4

Heat up a 12-inch Dutch oven, using 24 coals on top and none on the bottom.

Brown 4 (1 inch thick) pork chops in:

- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- Season with:
- 1 tablespoon Cajun seasoning
- 2 tablespoons sweet basil
- 1 teaspoon sage
- 1 teaspoon savory salt
- Fresh cracked pepper, to taste

Mix together:

- 2 cans golden mushroom soup
- 1 soup can water
- 1 soup can white wine
- 1/4 cup quick barley

Add to the pork chops. Let chops simmer 20-30 minutes as you prepare:

- 2 medium Spanish onions, slivered
- 4 carrots, cut in 2 inch pieces
- 4 stalks celery, cut in 2 inch pieces
- 1 red bell pepper, cut in 1 inch chunks
- 4 medium potatoes, cut lengthwise in quarters.

Cover Dutch oven and use nine to 15 coals on bottom and 15 on top, depending on how hot the broth is. Bring to a simmer and let simmer 1 hour or until vegetables are tender crisp. To control simmer, remove or add more coals as needed, preferably on top, so you will not burn chops. Check and stir about every 15 minutes to test for doneness.

Serve with crusty French or sourdough bread.

CREAMY LEMON PIE

Use a 12-inch Dutch oven. Heat, using about 24 charcoals on bottom to get oven good and hot. Use a rack and stack 2 (8-inch) aluminum pie pans on it. Precook a packaged 8-inch pie crust (or homemade) 8-12 minutes (you want to feel oven is about 400 degrees) until golden brown. Remove shell and cool it. If you have an ice chest, set it on top of the ice and it will cool down fast while you prepare filling.

- 3 eggs, and beat the yolks (the whites are not used)

Add:

- 1 can Eagle brand milk
- 1/4 cup lemon juice

Take your tea time break in an instant

By Rosemary Black
New York Daily News

Listen. Clink, clink. Tinkle, tinkle. It's the summery sound of ice cubes, sugar and lemon being stirred into one of the 95.5 million glasses of iced tea that will be consumed today in the United States.

Americans love to chill out on tea. Next to water, we consume more tea than any other beverage — and 80 percent of it is iced. So with June designated as National Iced Tea Month and an ever-expanding array of ready-to-drink brews on the market, now's the time to cool off with tea.

Instant iced teas are the fastest-growing of the tea products, representing 7 percent of all tea sales in the United States.

But millions of Americans are opting to brew their own, too, as evidenced by the popularity of iced tea kits. The biggest-selling unit is made by (believe it!) Mr. Coffee, which has sold more than 6 million of its automatic iced tea makers in the last four years.

Iced tea is steeped in qualities that make it appealing on a contemporary level, as well. It's calorie-free, uncarbonated, and has no sodium, fat or sugar. It also ranks lower on the jolt-o-meter than coffee, containing between one-third and one-half the caffeine in a cup of java.

Finally, it's hard to beat the price: Brewed iced tea costs just three cents per serving (not including sugar or lemon).

Brew it yourself? Sure, why not? Even without an automatic iced tea pot, it's one of the easiest thirst quenchers to make. Here's how: Bring a quart of cold water to a full, rolling boil. Immediately pour it over 15 tea bags or one-third cup of loose tea. Stir, cover and let stand for five to seven minutes. Stir again and strain into a pitcher holding three quarts of cold water. Refrigerate and serve over ice.

Today's iced tea aficionados are experimenting with different flavors of tea. They're substituting mint or peppermint tea for black tea, sweetening it with granulated brown sugar instead of white for a caramel flavor, and mixing tea with other beverages, like cranberry juice, mango juice or tangelo juice, to make a punch.

Still, the American penchant for sweet drinks has fueled sales of powdered, instant iced tea mixes — one of the newest is Nestea's sugar-free, decaffeinated instant herb tea, sweetened with Nutrasweet — and spawned the introduction of brewed teas meant to be flavored with sugar.

A glass pitcher of iced fruit tea may be embellished by floating sliced strawberries, raspberries, or rounds of orange and lemon on top. When entertaining, add a splash of Cointreau for extra kick.

TEA SANGRIA

- Makes 6 (10-ounce) servings
- 4 cups boiling water
- 5 regular or decaf tea bags
- 2 cups sliced fresh fruit (apples, peaches, pineapple, oranges or strawberries in any combination)
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 cups white grape juice

In teapot, pour boiling water over tea bags. Cover and brew 5 minutes. Remove tea bags and cool. In large pitcher, combine fruit with sugar. Pour tea over fruit. Stir in juice. Serve in ice-chilled glasses.

Knight-Ridder News Service

My son, a waiter at an Italian restaurant, has certain customers who know exactly what they want and aren't afraid to ask for it. "Young man," they command, and this is a direct quote: "Bring me the eggplant parmigiana. But I want it with no garlic, no cheese, no oil and no breading."

This happens to be a restaurant that doesn't make nutritional claims on its menu, which is fraught with such phrases as "smothered in mozzarella" and "sauteed with butter, mushrooms and cream." Ah, so it's not an especially easy task on a busy Saturday night to ask the chef to come up with a dish of eggplant parmigiana that contains hardly any of its actual ingredients.

But it can be done. And it points up the fact that many people — in fact, I'd venture to say most people — have already taken charge of their dietary destiny and are not waiting for the government crackdown on menu claims to help them.

Michigan nutritionist Gail Posner firmly believes that when we're confronted by health claims on menus, we can cut through the fog by keeping these tips in mind:

- Ask how the dish is prepared. Is it possible to prepare it with just 1 teaspoon of fat, using a nonmonstrated oil such as canola or olive rather than butter or margarine?
- Ask what else comes with the entrée. Posner says often a low-calorie, skinless chicken dish is served with potato chips or vegetables drenched in butter. Make sure the accompaniments are also prepared low-fat-style. For instance, if pea pods on a dish are sauteed in oil, ask to have them steamed, instead.

• Order sauces on the side. There is usually more sauce on fish or pasta than you need. When you get sauce on the side, you can dip your fork into it and use it sparingly yet still get the taste. "This is perhaps Posner's favorite tip. 'You'd be surprised how little sauce you really need,' she says.

• Ask for healthful recommendations. Often foods are available that are not on the menu.

• Accept the fact that the dish you devise might not taste like what's on the menu. So be sure to tell the waiter in convincing fashion that you know the dish is going to taste different but that's how you want it.

Blend together and pour into cooled shell. Carefully set down in Dutch oven, which by this time should have cooled off (the lid should have been left on, though) just a little to about 350 degrees. Cook pie 10-20 minutes, covered. Use 15 coals on top and nine on bottom. Check often to make sure crust doesn't burn. When done, the filling will be set. Test with a toothpick or touch lightly. It will stick to finger if done. Don't overcook, or it will curdle.

Top with Cool Whip, if desired. "It's very rich and very lemony," Thompson says. "It's different. It's not a custard and it's kind of a cream."

Mitch Wolfe, who won second place for his main entrée in the Dutch oven cookoff, says Dutch oven cookery is tasty and very easy to do once the basics are learned.

"It's a piece of cake once you figure out the coals," he says. "That's the most important part."

Wolfe usually puts four coals underneath a 12-inch Dutch oven in a circle and 12 on top.

"Where most people mess up is when they put too many coals on the bottom," he says.

To get a good seasoning on a Dutch oven he rubs a little bit of oil on it and puts it on a campfire for a couple of hours. He leaves the lid off, on another part of the fire. After he removes the Dutch oven from the fire he puts more oil on it.

Wolfe doesn't use soap to clean his Dutch oven. He lets it cool off and then removes the remaining food as best he can. Next, he puts water in and cleans it out again. Then he pours some salt in and uses it to scrub the pot, after which he oils it.

Here is the recipe for the second place main dish. It's called:

TRIP TIP STEW

- Serves 10-12
- Use a 12-inch Dutch oven.
- Cook:
  - 1 onion, chopped
  - 1½ pounds trip, cut in small pieces
  - for about 45 minutes
- Add:
  - 4-5 potatoes, cut up
  - 3-4 carrots, cut up
  - 2 cloves garlic

3 cans of cream of mushroom soup
2 cans mushrooms

Mix everything together. Cover and cook (using 14 coals on top and four underneath and 12 in a circle against the pot) about another 1½ hours until coals are gone and it is done.

Serve with homemade Dutch oven bread.

"It's pretty much of a meal in itself," Wolfe says.

Orville Waymont, who won first place in the Dutch oven cookoff dessert division, says he started using a Dutch oven two years ago. He says he does the cooking at home every weekend, and likes to try new things. He uses the Dutch oven for camping and in his back yard.

On Thanksgiving and Christmas, Waymont uses his Dutch oven in the garage to cook the turkey and pies. A 12 pound turkey takes about 3½ hours in his 22-inch Dutch oven.

The following is the recipe for the dessert that won first prize.

RHUBARB CRISP

- Serves about 15
- Cut up:
  - 4 pounds rhubarb

Pour in bottom of a 12-inch Dutch oven.

Combine:
5 tablespoons cornstarch
Spread on rhubarb. Then pour over the top:

- ½ cup water
- For the topping:
  - 1½ cups flour
  - ½ cups rolled oats
  - ¼ teaspoon salt
  - ¼ cup brown sugar
  - ¼ cup white sugar
  - 12 tablespoons butter
  - ¼ cup chopped nuts

Mix together, except the butter and nuts. Sprinkle over rhubarb. Pat it with the butter and put nuts on top. Cook, using 8 coals on bottom and 15 on top, for 20-30 minutes. Then remove bottom coals and continue cooking for about ½ hour with top heat. It is done when it browns and starts cracking.

"The judges really liked it, because it had the rhubarb flavor in it," Waymont says. "It didn't cook-the flavor out."

Self-esteem: Good or bad?

Much emphasis is leveled of late on promoting the self-esteem of the young. Excellent, excellent. Still, specialists say children are not necessarily in perfect mental health just because they think highly of themselves. They say a lot of self-satisfied youngsters have a tough time getting along with others.

A. Evidently not, research suggests. When stricken, they just roll around the sty for awhile, looking disinterested.

How does your garden grow? Imagine what your home will look like 20 years from now

Here's a quick rundown on what's happening in the garden:

- Our weather has been unpredictable: It got really warm fast. The radishes haven't had enough water if you weren't on toes. Better check to see how things are doing. Spinach might be bolting, too.
- If you haven't already, get the bush beans, onions, carrots, turnips, beets and rutabagas seeded. Set out cabbages, cauliflower and broccoli transplants, too.
- When the cabbage is mature, turn it one-quarter turn and leave it sitting in the garden until you are ready to use it. That will slow things down enough to buy you the time you need.
- Stop cutting asparagus when the spears get weak and skinny. Let them make leaves.
- Lift and divide irises if they need it.
- Prune raspberry canes so that you cut out everything that bore fruit this year. If you wait until later, the task will be much more difficult.

Green Thumbprints
Cathy Walworth

• Pick off faded blooms from summer annuals. Don't let them form seed pods or they will think summer is over and their job is done.

• If your daWodil leaves are still green, fold them over, braid them and do whatever you have to do to leave them alone until they are yellow and can be cut off. They are still making food for next year's flowers.

• Those black beetles springing about the garden are the good guys running down the bad guys. Grandma used to say, "If it's slow, step on it, if it's fast, leave it alone; it'll eat something else."

• Fertilize strawberries with three pounds of 5-10-10 fertilizer on a 100-foot row after harvest.

Thin out runners.

- Battle the birds for your fruit. The only thing guaranteed to work is a net over the whole tree. I've tried two pie pans dangling from different lengths of string so the pans can't nest together, but they do "clang" together nicely when the wind blows. The birds don't seem to care for my taste in music.
- Water the lawn deeply and less frequently this summer. Shallow, frequent watering causes roots to develop in the first inch of the soil and your lawn runs a much better chance of developing thatch.
- Don't spray anything until you know what the problem is. Ask questions. Take a sample of the sick plant to a Master Gardener or a qualified nurseryman. The problem may be something that can be fixed with a change in water or feeding practices.

Here's a fun game to play: Imagine you built a typical new house, 1993 vintage. Now imagine it's the year 2013. What parts of that house are going to seem hopelessly outdated and need remodeling?

Before we get started, think about houses built in 1973 - small kitchens with dark cabinets, small single-pane windows, tiny master bedrooms with a single sink and tub/shower combination, too-large living room and too-small den, useful but not huge closets.

That was state of the art in 1973. Twenty years later, it's dated. Got the idea?

Here are my predictions:

- Automation: Modern three-wire electrical systems won't be adequate in the next century. Although I'm not sold completely on Smart Home technology, I think home automation systems will be much more common - and necessary.
- The important change will be including computer, phone and audio/video lines in the wiring, which will allow parts of the house to interconnect. This will improve home security, energy management and entertainment.

Computers are not a part of house-building in 1993. By 2013, they will bring increased efficiency and comfort to our homes. Don't believe it? Back when I was a kid, I saw a "House of the Future" feature on Captain Kangaroo. I remember it vividly, because it talked about using sound waves to cook food. My brother and I had a good laugh about that one. Nowadays, who would laugh at the idea of a microwave oven?

- Accessibility. The huge baby-boom generation will be reaching their 60s in 2013. What housing changes will these older boomers demand? Fewer steps, for one thing. That means more one-story houses, or houses with the master suite on the main level.
- In the next 20 years, the concept of "universal design" will become much more important, emphasizing adaptable homes that can change as the owners' needs change. Bathrooms and kitchens built in 1993 will need updating to meet this trend.

For example: Adjustable sinks and countertops that can be raised or lowered for use by people in wheelchairs. Improved lighting. Levers instead of doorknobs. Wider doorways. Entry ramps. Roll-in showers.

- Sensible spaces. Look for lofty foyers, two-story great rooms and gigantic bathrooms to shrink back to reasonable sizes. As construction prices continue to increase, buyers will want maximum living space for the dollar.
- Remodeling projects of the future may involve recapturing the wasted space of 1993 houses.
- Flexibility. The typical three- or four-bedroom house - designed for family living - won't be well suited for baby boomers of 2013, whose children will have grown and left home.
- Long before then, these extra bedrooms will have been converted into home offices and media rooms.
- Trendiness. Everyone in 2013 will be ripping out those all-white kitchens of 1993. The hot trend? Knotty pine and harvest gold, of course.

Your most helpful garden tool: Books

By Adrienne Cook
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - New garden books that appear each spring tend to be more work-oriented than those that make their seasonal debut before Christmas; the fall books are more wish-fulfillment.

That doesn't mean this year's spring collection isn't filled with ways to plan for the garden of your dreams. There are books on garden design, on theme gardens and on planning a garden, as well as how-tos on achieving glamorous yet practical gardens.

Planning

"Easy" is the key word to planning this year, with dozens of books competing for the "new gardener" audience, which is good news to all gardeners. Any literature that makes gardening more accessible benefits gardeners and landscape alike.

"Beautiful Easy Gardens" by Laurence Sombke (Globe Pequot, 221 pp., paperback, $15.95) is one of the best. Subtitled "A week-by-week guide to planting, harvesting and enjoying 10 great gardens," the book is set up rather like a vegetable garden's recipe, showing the ingredients (the plantings), the equipment needed (soil type and how to achieve it) and the procedure (the week-by-week guide). Most of the 10 garden plans involve food gardening, and Sombke has thoughtfully included harvest recipes that are as simple and basic as the gardens themselves. The text is easy to understand and full of ideas. This is about as complete a book as any beginner would want.

"Easy Garden Design" by Janet Macunovich (Stony Communications, 162 pp., paperback, $14.95) is more technical and requires the gardener to take a close look at the site, complete questionnaires and draw maps and plans. It takes a landscape-architecture approach, but breaks it down into many steps, making it more accessible to the average gardener than design often is. This is a book you'd want to examine and follow for a year or so before actually implementing ideas from it.

"Easy-Care Shade Flowers" by Patricia A. Taylor ( Fireside, 176 pp., paperback, $14) makes a major contribution to gardening tactics by emphasizing something that any gardener instinctively knows but that I have never seen addressed: There are numerous kinds of shade and each one lends itself to different plants. This book not only defines shade in its many permutations but also tells how it changes seasonally and specifies the plants appropriate to different situations as well as offering specific designs that can be achieved quickly.

Growing Food

If vegetable gardening has taken a back seat in popularity to flower gardening, the rash of books on the subject appearing this spring may turn back the tide.

"The Harvest Garden" by Susan McClure (Stony Communications, 300 pp., paperback, $17.95) is a sprightly and welcome addition to the shelf of vegetable-growing literature. A full of tips, charts, clear line drawings and basic information for beginners and more-experienced gardeners, the book's design and style make it very user-friendly.

"The New Organic Gardener's Four-Season Harvest" by Elliot Coleman (Chelsea Green, 212 pp., paperback, $17.95) promotes techniques that are heavily dependent on installing gadgetry in the garden and may put people off because of the expense and work involved. But Coleman, a longtime organic gardener and prolific author, makes a strong case for the joys of year-round harvesting.

This book and "Efficient Vegetable Gardening" by Paul Doshier, Timothy Fisher and Kathleen Kolb (Globe Pequot, 208 pp., paperback, $15.95), a sort of handbook on raised-bed gardening, are for more-advanced gardeners whose avocation is growing food.

"Breed Your Own Vegetable Varieties" by Carol Deppe (Little Brown, 302 pp., paperback, $18.95) is a good companion to Nancy Bubel's excellent "Seed-Starters Handbook," published in 1988. This new guide for the amateur vegetable breeder explores a fascinating aspect of gardening that gets too little attention. Although it is written simply enough for a fairly inexperienced gardener to use, expect a crash course in genetics as you go through it.

Garden Ecology

The current buzzword in backyard gardening is "natural," and two new books take the idea of natural gardening just a little further.

"Noah's Garden, Restoring the Ecology of Our Own Back Yards" by Sara Stein (Houghton Mifflin, 294 pp., hardcover, $21.95), and "The Naturalist's Garden" by Ruth Shaw Ernst (Globe Pequot, 273 pp., paperback, $15.95), both make a case that gardens are for all creatures as well as plants. Stein's book is in the spirit of her wonderful "My Weeds," published two years ago, and also recalls Rachel Carson. "Noah's Garden" is a thoughtful, profound book that will force a gardener to rethink such conventional affections as lawns; real perennial borders and the destruction of creatures usually considered pests. Ernst's book is a step-by-step guide on how to attract wildlife to the garden.

If garden critters are driving you up a wall, however, "Please Don't Eat My Garden!" by Nancy McCord (Sterling, 160 pp., paperback, $9.95) is full of ideas on how to get such creatures as possums, moles, raccoons, deer and groundhogs to leave your broccoli and boxwoods alone.

Following a chapter describing different backyard creatures and their habits, McCord addresses ways to protect plants, including the following tips:

- "I have heard from many people that Dial soap is particularly effective against deer; Irish Spring is preferred for rabbits."
- "Raccoons hate the smell of bleach or ammonia. You can place small bowls of the liquid near vulnerable crops."

How to keep your house in top shape

The Baltimore Sun

Here are some tips to help you keep your home in top shape.

- When making baby's bed, put two or three crib sheets and pads one on top of the other. When the top layer becomes soiled, simply remove to reveal the next sheet, which is ready to use. No more frequent struggles with having to remove bumper pads, toys, etc. every time you need to change the sheets.
- Remove old wallpaper. Fill a spray bottle with hot water and a half cup of fabric softener. Spray and wait 20 minutes before peeling.
- Clean wire window screens outside (nylon screens will "melt") with foaming bathroom cleaner; hose off before foam dries.
- Dip a soft cloth in a solution of 4 parts water and 1 part fabric softener; wring almost dry and apply to areas prone to static electricity such as glass table tops. This will help repel dust.
- If drain stopper in sink is allowing the water to seep out, place a piece of plastic wrap under the stopper for a tight seal.

Champion lifter readies for another run of meets

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

BUHL — Tony Yost, a 24-year-old from Buhl, has spent the last 11 years concentrating on lifting weights. In fact, he was third in his weight class in junior nationals last year.

But although he has a major meet coming up in November, weightlifting is taking a back seat for the first time since the seventh grade; he's getting married. Right after the honeymoon, however, he'll be back at the Main Street Fitness gym in Buhl and working toward meets in November and March.

Yost hit a personal plateau recently in the Mountain States Regional when, at 165 pounds, he squatted a remarkable 570 pounds. He went on to total 1400 pounds for the three lifts and was voted lifter of the meet.

How does a Buhl product rise to among the top two or three in his class in the nation?

"I started for high school sports," he says. "The wrestling coach got me interested. I enjoyed it and kept doing it."

High school graduation usually is the end of most athletic careers but Main Street Fitness owner Ron Erdman "got me interested again. I had been lifting since the seventh grade and I knew I was strong."

That led to his first shot at a state championship three years ago. Yost and another lifter tied in total weight—but he was named champion because he weighed a quarter-pound less than I did.

Yost currently is in his "off season." "I'm just kind of resting and recuperating. I trained 24 weeks for this (regional) meet, dieting and everything else. It's time now to kick back and enjoy myself for a while. Besides," he said with a laugh, "I'm tired of broccoli and chicken."

When he does return to the training grind, he'll work a couple of hours on Mondays and Thursdays on the squat and about an hour and a half on bench pressing and other conditioning the other days.

"I would like to squat a 600 in the March meet," Yost said. "That's my goal."

While muscle is always considered the major source of strength in powerlifting, Yost says tendons are the key.

"I guess I have good tendon ties," he said. "Some people's (tendons) take a long time to develop. Much longer than muscles. If they don't have good ties in to the muscle and joint, they can never be real strong."

Yost is proud that he has attained this level without resorting to artificial enhancers.

"I'm a natural lifter," Yost said. "I don't use any steroids. I've been drug tested three times. I go strictly to meets that test for drugs because on drugs would have the edge on me and I want to lift against people training the same as I am."

Tony Yost's interest in weightlifting began with high school sports in the mid-80s.

And another step for powerlifters is the "Mr. America" competition where contestants are scored by body development.

"I've played around with that in my head a little," he added with a modest grin.

"But right now I'm just more interested in getting stronger."

The drawback to this physical development is most apparent to Yost when he goes to the haberdashers for a change of clothes. "I have a hard time finding pants," he said. "I can't wear 50s and stuff like that. I can't keep them up. When I get a pair that fit my legs, the waist is usually too big."

Olympic bid by Beijing hits hurdle

The Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — U.S. Senator Bill Bradley, a former Olympic gold medalist, has joined the growing campaign against Beijing's bid to host the 2000 Games — drawing a prompt rebuke from a top IOC official.

The New Jersey Democrat wrote a letter to International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch expressing "my strong opposition to awarding the Games to Beijing while its government denies fundamental human rights to its citizens."

"Holding the Games in China, while its government routinely imprisons and tortures peaceful political dissidents, would confer upon China's leaders a stamp of approval by the international community which they clearly do not deserve," said the letter, dated June 21.

"As a former Olympian, I want to emphasize the profound disappointment I would feel should the IOC decide to award the Games to China," wrote Bradley, who played on the U.S. basketball team which won the gold medal at Tokyo in 1964. "I urge you to choose another, more appropriate venue."

IOC officials reacted angrily last weekend to the resolution, describing it as American political interference akin to the U.S.-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Amateurs seek valley golf title

The Times-News

BURLEY — Defending champion Amanda Patterson leads another charge of the rookies against the veterans when the Magic Valley Women's Amateur brings a two-day run this morning at Burley Municipal Golf Course.

The event begins both days with 9 a.m. shotgun starts, allowing for the presentation of awards at conclusion of play Thursday.

Patterson won her first Magic Valley title over Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course last year and joins with a bevy of rookies.

Kylie Peterson, headed for Montana State's golf team this fall, will be trying to add this major title to the Latham match play crown she collected over the Memorial Day weekend.

Peterson wasn't pleased with her performance in Monday's Larry Por-Am where she carded an 89.

Bradley, meeting with Sixers, says he's ready to play ball

PHILADELPHIA — After being away from basketball for two years, Shawn Bradley said Tuesday he can't wait to start regaining his form, even if it takes awhile.

"I'm ready to go," said Bradley, after undergoing a complete physical and meeting with Philadelphia 76ers team officials for two days.

The Sixers are likely to select the 7-foot-6 center with their No. 2 pick in the June 30 NBA Draft, assuming the Orlando Magic uses the top pick to take Michigan's Chris Webber.

"I want to play," Bradley said. "I've always had that fire and desire within me. The last couple of weeks, traveling around the country, getting to meet people, I can tell that it's time to get back in there. I can feel it right now."

Racers roar into Burley for annual regatta

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — It's the adrenalin. Terry Bingham, chairman of the Idaho Regatta Committee, says racers love the adrenalin that courses through their bodies during speedboat events.

That, along with self-satisfaction, is why they race, Bingham says.

Any money earned at the races doesn't last long, as the boat enthusiasts spend more than they earn. Thousands and thousands of dollars can be spent, with the almost-prohibitive cost of boats, engines, fuel and trailers.

Bingham admits he'd love to be out racing with the brightly-painted craft equipped with huge engines. However, he said just-a-blown-alcohol engine, made strictly with aluminum and titanium, can cost up to $50,000.

Some racers have corporate sponsors; more have business, often family run, which pay for racing expenses, Bingham said.

Traveling to out-of-the-way Burley is a little inconvenient for some of the racers, Bingham said, but an appreciative crowd of excellent water and good set-up make up for it.

That's why the Burley Regatta is such a popular race, expecting to draw a 100 boats to the event, scheduled for June 25-27 at Riverfront Park.

Racing can be a rush for participants, Bingham said. He had the chance to ride in one of the race boats recently. Even at half-throttle, going about 85 mph, was "very thrilling," Bingham said.

"A recent meeting included discussion about tickets, insurance, concessions (like making sure that sellers use Coke cups, Coca-Cola being a sponsor), and rigging a race tower."

Security is also a main concern at the races, and Bingham said off-duty deputies will be patrolling the riverfront.

No coolers will be allowed on the downstream side of the marina, but a beer garden will be in place in both viewing areas.

Bingham said the cooler restriction is in place to help make accommodation for a family viewing area. He said security personnel will be able to better control underage drinking in the area where no coolers are allowed.

Food booths will also be open.

The Colorado River Racing Association is sanctioning the race this year because it would allow both the drag boats and the circle racing.

Spectator stalking Graf appears at Wimbledon

The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — The spectre of the stabbing of Monica Seles haunted Wimbledon on Tuesday as a German man was hauled after shouting at Steffi Graf. "You're responsible!"

Less than two months after an obsessed German fan of Graf knifed Seles because he couldn't tolerate her No. 1 ranking, Graf became the victim of verbal abuse as she began defense of her Wimbledon title with Seles still recuperating.

"Steffi, you're responsible for everything," the man shouted in German midway through Graf's 6-0, 6-0 thrashing of Kirilly Sharpe, an Australian qualifier.

"Oh my God, not him again," Graf said in German, staring at him with a look of shock and recalling how he stalked her and heckled her at the French Open last month.

"You are responsible for what happened to Monica. We blame you," the man had yelled at her in Paris.

Graf, more annoyed than frightened, halted the match against Sharpe between points and walked to the umpire. She didn't ask that the man be removed, only that he be quiet during play.

The man, in his early 30s, remained in his seat throughout the match, newly deployed security guards warily surrounding the court. He then was taken away by police during the next match, between Germans Boris Becker and Marc Goellner, to be questioned for 90 minutes. He told police he flew in from Frankfurt Monday night and

Bulls promise stampede to 4th title next year

CHICAGO (AP) — For the third time in as many years, Chicago Bulls fans crowded a downtown park Tuesday to celebrate their team's NBA championship and hear promises of another victory party next year. The players didn't disappoint supporters who braved 80-degree heat, mud and sweat to catch a glimpse of their hometown heroes.

"If you guys support us like you've done the last three years, then I guarantee another — four-peat," forward Horace Grant told the cheering crowd.

"Certainly, destiny shall be back here for the fourth time," said Michael Jordan, the NBA Finals MVP, for the third straight year.

Greeted with phony fog and thundering music — the usual introduction at Chicago Stadium — the team appeared on the bandshell stage about an hour later than planned.

Not all fans were as sure about next year, but that didn't take the shine off the celebration.

"Everyone feels best about this one because it was so hard to win," John Akalitis, 20, a student, said. "This'll probably be the last one they win."

Fans waved banners and cheered as each player gave a short speech, or in the case of Will Perdue, read poetry.

"As I promised last year, the third title is oh, so sweet," he said. "I know but once again, I had that same feat. Could a fourth title be for us? I don't know, I could be just driving a bus."

The 45-minute ceremony didn't please all of the tens of thousands at Grant Park — especially those so far away they couldn't see or hear. Perched on a guard rail about five feet in the air, Norris Holmes, 36, of Chicago, said she could see the stage but couldn't hear. "Next year, I'm out here as soon as the game's over," she said.

Nearly, 69-year-old Marcella Ochoa listened to a portable radio to monitor the action on stage.

"The only thing I could do was listen to my radio," Ochoa said. "I could have done that at home."

Some climbed trees or street lights attempting to get a better view.

"I can't see anything except a bunch of leaves and a huge crowd," said one 16-year-old boy resting in a branch with a younger friend. "We were here at eight and all the seats and half the trees were already taken."

About 75 loyal Bulls fans spent the night in the park to guarantee good seats.

"I was here last year. I'm here this year. And I'll be here next year," Tony Echevarria, 24, of Chicago, said.

"These are the true Bulls fans here," Allen Keberis, 20, of Chicago, said.

Meanwhile, prosecutors and police continued to tally the deaths, arrests, injuries and damage claims as a result of the bulls' clinching 99-98 win over the Phoenix Suns Sunday.

Police said three people died as a result of random gunfire and 682 were arrested after the game. Of those, 164 were charged with felonies — mostly burglaries — according to the Cook County state's attorney's office.

Rookie catcher hits home run with Dodger organization

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the Los Angeles Dodgers did not sign 12-year veteran Mike Scioscia during the off-season, many wondered if Mike Piazza was ready to inherit the catching job.

Now the Dodgers' only worry is whether Piazza can continue his heavy hitting.

"In my 13 years, I haven't seen anybody hit the ball as hard and as far consistently as him since Dale Murphy in '82 and '83, when he had the back-to-back MVP years," said Dodgers outfielder Brett Butler, a former teammate of Murphy with the Atlanta Braves.

Piazza already has 15 home runs, three more than Scioscia ever hit in one season. Scioscia's career high in RBIs is 66, only 15 more than Piazza collected in his first 63 games.

Scioscia never batted .300, while Piazza was hitting .346 after Monday night's 7-0 victory over Houston, when he drove in five runs.

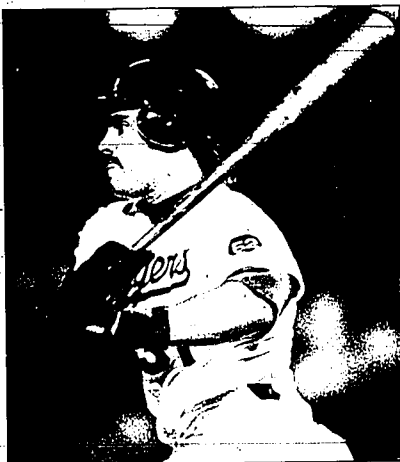

"The sky's the limit for him," Butler said. "The kid's just doing a tremendous job. He's making adjustments, and he's got the poise to be here for a long time."

It's too early to expect the 24-year-old rookie to reach Scioscia's all-time Dodgers record of 1,395 games caught, but not to see him follow Scioscia's lead as the National League Rookie of the Year. Piazza, the Dodgers' minor league player of the year last season, already has been named NL Player of the Week twice and leads the team in homers, RBIs and average.

The Dodgers haven't had consecutive Rookies of the Year since Rick Sutcliffe, Steve Howe, Fernando Valenzuela and Steve Sax won the award from 1979-1982. And no Dodgers catcher ever has won the award.

"I'm just going to keep swinging the bat," Piazza said. "I know I'm not going to keep up this pace, so I'm just trying to ride it as long as I can."

Piazza increased his RBI total to 51 Monday night with his second five-RBI game of the season. He hit his third homer in three days, a three-run shot, and had a two-run single, his 12th hit in 28 at-bats.

"I'm just hitting the ball hard now and I'm getting pitches to hit," Piazza said. "Sometimes, you'll go weeks without seeing a pitch to hit. So when you get an opportunity to drive the ball, you've got to take full advantage of it. And that's what I'm doing now."

A few years ago, Piazza's godfather used his influence with the Dodgers' brass and convinced them to give him a serious look. Piazza's godfather is Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda.

"I've told everybody, I don't want to brag too much," Lasorda said, "but to see him do what he's doing is so gratifying."

Piazza is among the league's top 10 in-home runs, RBIs, total bases, slugging percentage and batting average.

Piazza entered Tuesday night's game against Houston with as many homers as Philadelphia Phillies catcher Darren Daulton, who is trying to become the first major-league catcher in this century to win consecutive RBI titles.

This is the second time through the league for Piazza, who had 69 at-bats last September. Opposing pitchers have tried to mix up their pitches against him with little success so far.

Claims that Auburn paid athlete to play football heads to NCAA

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Nearly two years after Eric Ramsey claimed he received money and other illegal benefits to play for Auburn, the NCAA's Committee on Infractions will hear the case next week in Kansas City.

Former Auburn coach Pat Dye, forced out by the alleged wrongdoing, will attend Dye's successor, Terry Bowden, who wasn't involved in any of the charges, also will attend.

"We're ready to get it over with," said Auburn President William Muse, who will also attend the meeting. The meeting, which starts next Wednesday, will likely last two days.

and Auburn should know if any violations have been handed down for four to six weeks. Auburn attorney Victor Mike-Lude said he expects some disciplinary action to be taken.

Dye's attorney, Sam Franklin, said the ex-coach's participation is aimed at assisting Auburn and the NCAA. Dye is now an assistant to Muse.

"Unless someone tells us different, we'll be there from the start of the hearing until someone tells us to leave," Franklin told The Montgomery Advertiser. "I'm hoping the NCAA will allow coach Dye to be there during the entire hearing. We're going to be there and only step out if we're asked to step out."

Bowden will attend at the NCAA's request. Neither Muse nor Bowden was sure why the new coach's presence was required.

"I would suspect his participation would be to provide assistance to the NCAA," Muse said. "To assure of Auburn's commitment to continue to comply with all the regulations."

Also attending for Auburn will be Lude, faculty representative Jane Moore and attorneys John Scott and Thomas Thagard.

Auburn will be pleading its case to a committee chaired by David Swank of the University of Oklahoma.

Cowboy leader sought medical care himself

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Troy Aikman's summer has been a list of seconds: second thoughts, second opinions, second chances.

Although many a cringe has accompanied Aikman's instincts to stay in the pocket and take a hit, 1993 might have been a disaster for the defending Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys if not for the intuition of their star quarterback.

Aikman probably saved his season — and that of the Cowboys — when he sought medical attention on his own last week after rest prescribed by team doctors did nothing to help his ailing back.

Team physicians prescribed six weeks of rest and downplayed the need for a magnetic resonance imaging test.

But the muscle spasms and aches that prevented him from putting on his pants earlier this month continued to frustrate Aikman, who walked into a suburban hospital Thursday and asked for an MRI.

The next day, Aikman flew aboard owner Jerry Jones' private jet to consult with Dr. Robert Watkins, a neurosurgeon at the Kerlan-Jobe Orthopedic Clinic in Inglewood, Calif.

Aikman

Watkins found a herniated disk, which probably had been deteriorating over a number of years before announcing himself one day last month when Aikman was squatting 300 pounds.

Watkins operated Saturday, slicing away a 1-inch-by-1/2-inch "tough piece of gristle" from Aikman's lower back.

Aikman was released from Centinela Hospital Monday and will return to Dallas Friday for a few days of rest before beginning rehabilitation in California July 5. He plans to join the team shortly after the start of training camp and continue his rehabilitation.

Watkins said the Super Bowl MVP will miss up to 12 weeks while recovering from surgery and recuperating the muscles in his back.

That would force Aikman to miss all of training camp and two regular-season games, although Aikman insists he will be ready for the season-opener against the Washington Redskins Sept. 6.

Barred QB inks deal with Chisox

SEATTLE (AP) — Former University of Washington quarterback Billy Joe Hobert, barred from college ball his senior year because he improperly accepted a $50,000 loan, has signed with the Chicago White Sox.

Hobert received a bonus of more than $75,000 for signing with Chicago on Monday, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported Tuesday. He is to report to the Sox's Rookie League team in Sarasota, Fla., immediately.

"It's just kind of an off-season job until he reports to football," said Hobert's father, Terry Hobert.

Hobert, 22, was picked in the third round of this year's draft by the Los Angeles Raiders.

He hasn't played baseball since he left Puyallup High School, where he was an all-state selection as a senior, but his size, general athletic ability and power-hitting potential drew major-league interest.

He had tryouts with 10 teams, including the Seattle Mariners.

General Manager Harazin becomes latest loss for Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets, accustomed to losing this season, lost a general manager Tuesday.

Al Harazin resigned as general manager after 16 disappointing seasons of running the club. Former GM Frank Cashen took over the daily operations of the team on an interim basis.

The owners wanted Harazin to stay on in a business capacity, but he declined thinking the relationship would be difficult for the next general manager, probably Joe McIlvaine. The Mets still plan to hire a business chief, too.

"Fred Wilpon and I tried to convince him not to do this," co-owner Nelson Doubleday said at a news conference. "We wanted him to stay on and run the business end. Not one person could handle everything. We felt what was going on the field was a reflection of one man having too much to do."

Harazin leaves the Mets with a legacy of losing. New York entered Tuesday's game against Montreal with a record of 21-47, last in the National League East. Even the expansion Florida Marlins and Colorado Rockies had better records.

Last season, the Mets finished in fifth place with a 72-90 record. Most picked the team to at least contend for first place the past two seasons.

"The owners have made it clear to me that they find no fault in my job performance, including the major personnel decisions made by me the last two seasons," Harazin said in a statement. "We made it equally clear that I am welcome to stay on and retain the overall responsibility for the club as COO and executive vice president and that additionally I would have the opportunity to expand my role into a variety of new challenging areas."

"While I respect the decision the owners have made, I have determined that, at best, this would be awkward, and in the long term counterproductive."

Olympic museum set for opening

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Sports leaders and VIPs from around the world have gathered for Wednesday's inauguration of the Olympic museum, a $65 million high-tech facility tracing the history of the Olympic movement.

The 100,000 square-foot museum, set on a hill overlooking Lake Geneva, is the world's largest repository of art and artifacts related to the Olympics.

The museum took five years to build and is the pet project of International Olympic Committee president Juan Antonio Samaranch. The idea of an Olympic museum was originally conceived by Baron Pierre de Coubertin, founder of the modern Olympic movement.

Three-fourths of the construction costs were covered by donors, mostly large international companies such as Coca Cola, IBM and Kodak — all of whom are represented by large marble blocks on the ground floor of the five-story museum. The rest of the costs were paid by the IOC.

The building's facade is made of white marble from quarries of Thasos, a gift from the Greek government. Eight marble columns stand at the entrance to the museum, and a cauldron is ready for Wednesday's lighting of the Olympic fire. German figure skater Katarina Witt is rumored to be the torch bearer.

The museum features the world's largest collection of Olympic coins, stamps, medals, torches and uniforms. The memorabilia include the running shoes Carl Lewis wore in winning the 200 meters at the 1984 Los Angeles Games and French ski champion Jean-Claude Killy's crash helmet.

The museum has a temporary exhibit of Greek and Roman antiquities on loan from seven European museums, including a 4th century B.C. Greek vase and a 6th century B.C. Etruscan torch from Tarquinia, Italy.

Report blasts foreign steelmakers

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An estimated $3.2 billion in foreign steel was sold at unlawfully low prices in the United States last year, the Commerce Department ruled Tuesday. It set steep import taxes against a score of nations...

The department's action represents a victory for American steelmakers, who claimed in complaints filed last year that foreign countries were selling carbon steel in the United States below fair market value, and in some cases improperly subsidized the products...

U.S. timber firms miss out on Japan market

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Many U.S. timber companies are missing out on opportunities to sell wood to Japan because they fail to tailor their lumber to Japanese preferences, a government report said Tuesday...

U.S. efforts to knock down Japan's wood-tariff barriers if American mills continue to neglect Japan's precise demands. "According to Japanese customers we spoke with, many U.S. companies do not appear to be interested in understanding the needs of their Japanese customers and/or tailoring their products to meet those needs," the General Accounting Office said...

1992 by a group of American producers including Arco Steel Co.; Bethlehem Steel Co.; Geneva Steel; Gulf States Steel Inc.; Inland Steel Industries Inc.; LTV Steel Co.; Lukens Steel Co.; National Steel Co.; Sharon Steel Corp.; USX's U.S. Steel Group; and W.M. Steel Co. The decision Tuesday follows two preliminary rulings made by the department in December and January, which determined that a dozen nations unfairly subsidized steel imported into the United States and that 19 were dumping steel on the domestic market.

Eastern Idaho needs boost power demand

The Associated Press

BOISE — Keyed-by-a big increase in eastern Idaho, Idaho Power Co. reports a sharp gain in industrial power demand for the first five months of the year. Systemwide, industrial electric use was up 4.5 percent, even though the number of industrial customers remained the same at 141.

The utility also said its growth in customers indicates continuing population and economic expansion in its southern Idaho service area.

Idaho Power's customer list grew to 316,624 at the end of May, with 2,515 new residential accounts and 542 commercial accounts.

The number of large commercial, irrigation and lighting customers remained unchanged.

During the first five months of 1992, the utility added 3,336 new customers. The company said it's possible this spring's decline in growth was caused by severe winter weather that slowed construction.

The company also said its Design Excellence Award Program, now in its fourth year, is saving commercial building operator an estimated 9.5 million kilowatt-hours annually.

Chinese leave home to pursue American dream

Knight-Ridder News Service

FUJIAN PROVINCE, China — In a makeshift classroom, 16 students and a teacher are studying an English language tape with one aim in mind.

All of them, including the instructor, plan to emigrate to the United States. Most likely they'll do it illegally.

Their motivation is simple. Money. "I want to work in a Chinese restaurant in New York," said Cao Rong Pan, 23, whose father has been working illegally in the United States for eight years.

Most of the young people here who plan to emigrate will try to enter the United States on ships like the ill-fated Golden Venture that arrived in New York two weeks ago, carrying 300 illegal Chinese immigrants.

Cao and others interviewed in this southern coastal province are not looking for greater political freedom, nor are they outraged by China's strict birth control policy (the basis in the United States for granting refugee status to many illegal immigrants from China).

There is one main reason that most Chinese from prosperous Fujian Province enter the United States illegally. That reason, they say, is money, despite what their relatives in the United States tell American immigration authorities. And although the young people can find jobs in China, which has one of the fastest growing economies in the world, they want to earn a lot of money — and they can do that best in the United States, they say.

"They can work in China as farmers," they said, but many farmers are poorly paid. They also can get jobs in China in stores or factories, thanks to the country's economic boom and its many new businesses, which have appeared even in remote rural areas. Such jobs usually pay about 400 yuan, or about $70 per month — enough in rural China to buy all the food and clothes they need, and even such occasional consumer goods as a television, stereo or refrigerator. But these young people are not interested in such jobs, or such wages.

"All I think about all day is how to make money," said Zhang Yue, 23, the self-appointed English teacher, who earns about 450 yuan per month teaching English in his family's home

At left, illegal immigrants huddled on the beach in New York City are among the human wave of Chinese boat people finding its way to U.S. shores. These are from the freighter Golden Venture, which ran around June 6. Many illegal immigrants come from Gaung Tou, at right, in southeast China's Fujian province.

— a good salary by rural standards. Added a man from Gaung Tou village, Yan Xi, 23, who plans to emigrate illegally to the United States and whose cousin was aboard the Golden Venture: "My uncles (who emigrated illegally to the United States) told me that middle class Americans earn $2,000 or $3,000 in one month. "Even if I don't earn that much money, it doesn't matter. I'm thinking of the next generation and the generation after that. My children and grandchildren will earn a lot of money because I moved to America."

The visions of big money are based on the view from China, where a dollar on the black market is worth about 10 yuan. But the young people here do not take into account the amount of money that must be spent to live in the United States. A study released last month by the International Monetary Fund found that someone in the United States who earned $22,204 per year would have as much purchasing power as someone who earned $1,450 per year in China. Her capital income in China was about $1,600 last year.

Zhang and other young adults interviewed throughout the province said they had not seriously considered going to any country other than the United States.

Indeed, they said, their relatives were in the United States, making it a natural choice. "I only have a few friends here, and no relatives," complained Zhang, adding that all his friends from senior high school, as well as his relatives, had emigrated illegally to the United States. "Every month I get a letter asking me when I'm coming."

Indeed, it is difficult to find young men in Zhang's village, which seems to be populated by elderly men, middle aged and elderly women, and children. Zhang lives in Sheng Mei village, about 22 miles east of Fuzhou, the capital of Fujian Province. The village's orange brick houses contrast with the nearby lush green mountains.

At the entrance to the village, the words "Overseas Chinese Gates" are painted on an arch. The gate, like the roads and school in this village, were donated by Overseas Chinese, mostly from the United States.

Many young people in the province said their role models are the Overseas Chinese, from the United States, Taiwan, Singapore and Malaysia.

"China gives a warm welcome to the Overseas Chinese," said Zhang, referring to banquets given by Chinese government officials for prospective overseas investors. "I want to help our country get richer and richer. I will come back and help our motherland like the other Overseas Chinese."

Initially, virtually everyone interviewed said he wanted to go to the United States because he couldn't find a job in China. But with further prodding, they admitted that jobs were unemployed because their relatives in the United States sent them enough money to live on, and because their "occupation" was learning English in preparation for their journey.

"I have a county residence permit, and to work in the city, I need a city residence permit," bemoaned Cao Rong Pan, 23, who lives in a big house built with money from his father and brothers who work in New York illegally.

Then a visitor pointed out that it is no longer necessary in China to work only in the geographical area where one lives; that millions of Chinese now travel to distant provinces to accept jobs in new stores and factories, which provide housing for such workers. "Yes, but all my relatives are in New York," answered Cao. "Why would I work overseas in China where I don't know anyone?"

States would help him save enough money to someday have a business of his own.

Meanwhile, Cao prepares for his journey to New York, studying a book called "New Restaurant English." On the first page of the book is a menu, in Chinese and English. Orange juice, porridge, corn flakes, poached eggs, bacon and eggs, tea, and coffee are among the foods listed.

The book also contains dialogue, under chapter headings such as "Recommending Dishes to the Guest," "Explaining the Tax and Service Charges" and "Complaints about the Food."

About six miles east, in the town of Gaung Tou, many of the spacious private homes have been built with money sent by illegal immigrants to the United States. While sitting at a card table, playing cards with friends, Yang Xi talked about his plans to follow the lead of his cousin and uncles who immigrated illegally to the United States.

Yang owned and managed his own soda business here for six years. He sold the business last year because his uncles in Los Angeles told him that he could earn a lot more money in the United States than in China. Now he is deliberately unemployed, spending his days playing cards with friends. "I'm taking a rest," Yang said. "When I go to America, I will have to work very hard."

Yang had planned to board a ship to the United States soon. But because of the furor in the United States over the illegal immigrants from China on the Golden Venture, he has decided to wait to see whether any of the immigrants are sent home by the U.S. government.

One of Yang's uncles, who hired a lawyer, was granted a residence visa by the United States government last year — an act that encouraged Yang to follow his family's lead and emigrate illegally.

These two weeks ago, Yang's 20-year-old cousin, who was aboard the Golden Venture, called home to say that he had survived the grueling trip from China to New York. He called from Los Angeles, where U.S. authorities sent him because his father and uncle were there. Yang was impressed that the U.S. government had such consideration. "America is a great country," he said with a smile.

'Pretty good, but not good enough. An alert West will insert his 10 to force dummy's club king, and the extra entry will disappear. The best plan takes effect at trick one. On dummy's club ace, South should drop his queen and take the heart finesse. Later he leads a club to dummy's nine to take a second heart finesse, and instead of having only two dummy entries, South should take a third entry to make his game.'
