House passes flood relief measure

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The House approved $3 billion Tuesday for Midwestern flood relief after putting aside a five-day fight over how to pay for it.
President Clinton said he will ask for $1.1 billion more. "It could get worse," Clinton told governors from six flood states on a day the Missouri and Kansas rivers were still rising.
"There are still a lot of problems out there," the president later said. "A lot of things could still go wrong. The front needs to break up so the south at least can get some rain or we're going to have some agricultural disasters there."
The governors and the president helped pressure the House to put aside procedural arguments which had delayed the bill since last Thursday. It finally passed, 400-27, and was sent to the Senate where speedy action was anticipated.

Kansas City's turn now - A5
The largest share of spending, $1.92 billion, would go for direct aid to flood victims and to cover crop losses. The remainder would go for jobs, repair of housing, highways and flood-control works; loans; and a variety of other relief. The bill also increases the farm disaster payment for losses beyond 75 percent of the crop.
The money for crop losses could also be used to compensate victims of drought in the Southeast as well as hail and other weather disasters elsewhere.
In the House, no one objected to the spending, only to whether Congress should first find a way to cover the cost with offsetting cuts elsewhere.
On Thursday, the House narrowly refused to consider the bill before those offsets were agreed upon. On Tuesday, swayed by pressure from the governors, Clinton and angry victims, it voted 224-205 to act on the bill.

Twin Falls visit

Idaho Attorney General Larry EchoHawk said during a stop in Twin Falls Tuesday some lawmakers have raised constitutional issues concerning the revised anti-gay initiative.

Lawmakers prompt EchoHawk to review revised anti-gay petition

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Idaho's top lawyers will take a second look at whether the proposed anti-gay rights initiative violates the U.S. Constitution, Attorney General Larry EchoHawk said Tuesday.
Speaking to a luncheon meeting of the Twin Falls County Democratic Party, EchoHawk said inquiries from legislators have prompted the review.
The Idaho Citizens Alliance, led by Burley contractor Kelly Walton, filed its original initiative in March. But in a legally required review, EchoHawk blasted the measure as "fundamentally flawed," adding that it "violates the most essential constitutional principles upon which our society is based."

Partly in response to EchoHawk's review, the ICA rewrote and resubmitted its initiative. State law does not require the attorney general to review the revision.
But since the alliance has started gathering petition signatures to put its revised initiative on the 1994 ballot, EchoHawk said, several lawmakers have raised constitutional issues with his office.
"The initiative would prohibit cities and counties from enacting gay-rights laws; bar schools from doing anything to 'promote, sanction, or endorse' homosexuality; forbid the use of public funds to promote, make acceptable, or express approval of homosexuality; and limit library books discussing homosexuality to adults."
Most of the legislative inquiries deal with whether the initiative violates the free-speech and free-assembly protections of the First Amendment and the Fourteenth Amendment's guarantee of equal protection of the laws, EchoHawk said.
"We'll probably tie all of those questions up in one lawsuit," he said.

KKVI seeks peace over police show

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The name of the show is "NYPD Blue," but its true color is hazy in Twin Falls, at least.
The American Family Association, a national monitoring group, is urging churches across the country to protest the new ABC program. Letters have been received by a number of Magic Valley congregations.
The Rev. Ray Doane, pastor of the Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene, is one of about 100 people who have signed petitions sent to KKVI Channel 35 (able to TV in protest of the show. Some of the protesters may picket the Blue Lakes station Aug. 30.
"I'm not planning to picket," said Doane, who explained that he and some of the members of his church are simply concerned about the amount of sex and violence on television. "It's not that I am trying to control a station, but our First Amendment rights do give us freedom of speech and the right to criticize."
Doane is among a group of community leaders invited to a private screening of the pilot episode of "NYPD" next month at KKVI studios. The purpose is to gauge community reaction.

"It's impossible to have a democratic vote from everybody who watches the station," said KKVI General Manager Dick McMahon, "but this will give us some idea."
What will the community leaders see in that viewing room?
In a recent Dallas Morning News story, ABC described the "NYPD" pilot episode as a "unique blend of realism and smoldering situations."
It includes numerous profanities, most voiced by a rogue cop named Andy (Dennis Franz). None can be printed in a family newspaper, but they do include "a common four-letter vulgarity beginning with the sixth letter of the alphabet."
An erotic bedroom scene between young Kelly (David Carruso) and patrolwoman Justice (Amy Brenneman), was shot with four close-ups of Brenneman's backside and a revealing side view of her breasts.

Court voids death sentence in Jacobson slaying

The Associated Press
BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court Tuesday unanimously voided the death sentence imposed on James Kevin Pratt for the 1989 killing of a U.S. Forest Service law enforcement officer at the end of a two-day crime spree across the Idaho Panhandle.
The high court held that executing Pratt, 34, would impose on him a harsher penalty than Idaho judges have imposed on others convicted of murder under similar circumstances.
Chief Justice Charles McDevitt said a death sentence was excessive since Pratt had no prior record of violent conduct and that the jury rejected the prosecution claim that he and his brother, Joseph Earl Pratt, were "lying in wait" to kill Forest Service officer Brent "Jake" Jacobson.

Jacobson was the first Forest Service law enforcement officer killed in the line of duty. A law enforcement officer and fire management technician with the Forest Service, Jacobson was born in Utah but moved to Twin Falls with his parents in 1952. He attended Twin Falls schools, graduating from high school in 1965, and later attended the College of Southern Idaho.
He joined the Forest Service full-time in 1974 following service with the U.S. Navy and attending Idaho State University and Utah State University. He had been a member of Forest Service fire-fighting crews during his college years.

Joseph Pratt was sentenced to 25 years without parole for his role in the murder. His sentence was based on the fact that he did not fire the shotgun blast that killed Jacobson.
In another death penalty case, the court unanimously upheld the ordered execution of Timothy Alan Dunlap, 24, for the 1991 shotgun slaying of Soda Springs banker teller Tonya Crane during an attempted robbery.
Dunlap, who was also sentenced to death for murdering another woman in Ohio a few days earlier, said shortly after his arrest that he wanted to die because "it's time for the evil in my body to be put to rest."
"Both cases [the high court rejected other claims ranging from challenges to jury instructions to the contention that jurors, not judges, must impose the death penalty — an argument that has repeated been discounted by the court.
McDevitt was joined by Justice Linda Copple Trout and Acting Justice John Bengtson.

Whooping cough battle continues in Magic Valley

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Health workers will decide today whether to recommend earlier-than-usual whooping cough immunizations for infants as a Magic Valley outbreak of pertussis continues.
"We're swimming in pertussis," said Cheryl Becker, nurse epidemiologist for the South Central District Health Department. "We've had between 25 and 30 cases."
The Magic Valley had only 12 cases of pertussis in all of 1992, Becker said.

In June, the department considered it an outbreak when only nine cases of pertussis were reported in two counties within a few weeks.
But since then, cases of pertussis have been reported every week — 11 in one week alone — and spread from just two counties in the Magic Valley to all but Blaine County and Lincoln County, Becker said.
"They're occurring all over the district," Becker said. "We've had three cases in the last two days."
Pertussis can be dangerous and even fatal to infants, she said. Infants cough, making a whooping noise, until they can't catch their breath and turn blue, she said.

In older children and adults the symptoms can be a much milder but include consistent cough, lasting weeks, Becker said. Because they do not display classic symptoms of pertussis, people may be caring for the illness as if it was bronchitis, she said.
It is likely that many people who have pertussis have not visited doctors, and their cases are not included in department statistics, Becker said.
Two children, each about 1 year old, have been hospitalized with pertussis, Becker said.
But the sickness has afflicted people of all ages including a 78-year-old man, she said.
The department will consult with a doctor and the state epidemiologist today before deciding whether to recommend that infants receive immunizations earlier than normal, Becker said.
"It is not going to be a recommendation made lightly," she said. "Our main goal is to protect the health of uninfected individuals and to treat the sick."
A cool summer has kept people indoors and in close contact with visiting friends and relatives longer than usual, perhaps contributing to the outbreak and its persistence, Becker said.

Thunderstorms rumble on; South continues to bake

The Associated Press

Thunderstorms doused the Midwest on Tuesday, bringing more water to the region's raging rivers.

In the South, the weather was scorching hot.

Heat advisories were issued for parts of Kentucky, West Virginia, Mississippi, South Carolina and Alabama. Atlanta reached 90 degrees during the afternoon, breaking the 37-year-old record for the date by 1 degree.

White the South baked, temperatures were unseasonably cool in the interior West. Low temperature records for the day were set in Alamosa, Colo., (33 degrees) and 43y, Nev. (34 degrees).

Rainshowers and thunderstorms extended Tuesday over parts of New England, eastern New York state, the Gulf Coast, the Mississippi and Missouri valleys, North Dakota and eastern Montana.

A severe thunderstorm watch was issued for eastern Minnesota, western Wisconsin and Lake Superior.

Temperatures around the nation at 1 p.m. MDT ranged from 55 degrees at Yellowstone, Wyo., to 103 degrees at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Blasts rock key cities in Italy

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A car bomb exploded in downtown Milan late Tuesday, killing at least five people. An hour later, suspected car bombs jolted the ancient heart of Rome, injuring 24 and heavily damaging the church the pope heads as Rome's bishop.

No one claimed responsibility for the blasts, but officials said they had the same aim as recent bombings: sowing chaos in a country wracked by a devastating corruption scandal.

The premier called a meeting of security officials, saying the government would not be cowed by attempts to create "panic and disorder."

The Milan explosion hit about 11:15 p.m. (3:30 p.m. MDT) near Piazza Cavour, about a half-mile from the La Scala opera house.

Milan police said that a Moroccan man sleeping in a park, three firefighters and a policeman were killed, and seven people were wounded, none seriously.

State TV said the officials were apparently called to the scene by a telephone warning of a blast.

Hold trade pact, Dems ask Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton was asked Tuesday by 104 congressional Democrats to put the North American Free Trade Agreement on hold until Congress has dealt with health care reform. The White House rejected the idea.

"The debate over NAFTA will be difficult and divisive. It will detract from our efforts to build a broad coalition of support for health care reform," the 103 House members and seven senators said in letters to Clinton.

But White House press secretary Dee Myers said "NAFTA and health care are proceeding on separate tracks," and "There's been no change in our stance on NAFTA. The president still feels we can conclude it by the end of this year."

Majority Whip David Bonior, D-Mich., who drafted the House letter, said Tuesday at a Capitol news conference that the free trade debate will be divisive and cannot be allowed to impede health care reform.

"If we fail to act on health care reform, over the next two years one out of every four Americans — 63 million people — will lose their health care coverage for some period," the Michigan Democrat said.

"We cannot afford to delay. We cannot afford to get tangled in side issues," said Bonior, a leading opponent of the trade pact.

The administration wants to implement the continental-trade agreement in January. The treaty would phase out tariffs and other barriers to the free movement of goods, services and investment over a 15-year period.

Myers said the administration is awaiting completion of the congressional budget talks before deciding when to forward the health care and free trade legislation to Congress.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, who heads the administration's health care reform effort, has said she would like the health reform package sent to Congress in September.

ABC and "NYPD Blue" have cut a deal.

Minus 15 seconds from the extended-forecasting scene, the network will air the show intact (with nudity) when it premieres Sept. 21, ABC president Robert Iger said it's "safe to assume there's going to be an adult advisory."

"NYPD" executive producer Steven Bochco, who created the landmark "Hill Street Blues" series, said his new one-hour series will continue to include nudity and strong language to compete with the explicit programming on pay cable.

There's violence, too. Franz's character is shot four times at point-blank range in the pilot.

McMahon is caught in the middle of all this.

A few months ago, KKVI dropped an episode of "Civil Wars" because it contained a nude scene. There was lots of positive response, McMahon reported, but many viewers were upset.

son in the Pratt decision, Justices Stephen Bristline and Byron Johnson agreed the death penalty was excessive but reached that conclusion differently.

Pratt was ordered resentenced on the murder charge. The maximum penalty would be life in prison without possibility of parole.

It was the fifth time that a condemned Idaho murderer has escaped Death Row. No one has been executed since 1957.

McDevitt, in his opinion, cited two of those cases — Karl Windsor and Shawn Scroggins in supporting the Pratt decision. The death sentences of Windsor and Scroggins were both overturned as excessive by the state Supreme Court. Both are serving life sentences.

The other two cases involved Jamie Carboneau and Bryan Lanford, both of whom were sentenced to life in prison without possibility of parole after the U.S. Supreme Court overturned their death sentences.

In reviewing the cases against both Pratt brothers, the Idaho court threw out their convictions for attempted felony murder against Jacobson's partner Steve Barbieri, ruling that there was no such crime in Idaho law.

"That reduced the prison sentences imposed on the two men for more than a dozen other crimes to a minimum of 40 years. Joseph Pratt does not begin serving his 25-year-term for Jacobson's murder until after completing those sentences."

tions together and issue a second opinion," he said. That opinion probably will be released sometime this fall, he said.

ICA Chairman Walton said Tuesday that, based on EchoHawk's first opinion, he didn't expect much from the second one.

"It will be interesting to see how they handle some of the changes we made, since they were in direct response to points they raised," he said. "I would think it would be, at the least, a softer denouncement."

Last year, voters in Colorado approved a ballot measure, Amendment 2, that is similar in some respects to the ICA initiative. However, Amendment 2 has been in legal limbo pending a constitutional challenge.

The Colorado Supreme Court last week refused to lift a court order barring enforcement of Amendment 2, saying the measure probably violates the Fourteenth Amendment by depriving gays, lesbians and bisexuals of equal access to the political process.

Both the ICA and the Idaho chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union also have challenged the initiative's official ballot titles prepared by EchoHawk's office. The state Supreme Court has yet to rule on those challenges.

Vitamin could reduce birth defects

BAR HARBOR, Maine — Fortifying flour and other grains with the vitamin folic acid could cut the rate of birth defects in half at virtually no cost, researchers said Tuesday.

Many women are not getting enough of the vitamin to prevent birth defects even with well-balanced diets, and fortifying the food supply is the safest way of getting it to them, the researchers said.

"This is the most important medical finding of the latter part of the 20th century," said Dr. Godfrey Oakley, director of the birth-defects division at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta. "It's like the Salk vaccine — it's that magnitude of importance."

Senate fights to avoid possible filibuster

WASHINGTON — Senate leaders sought a compromise on President Clinton's national service plan Tuesday in the face of a potential filibuster by Republicans complaining about its cost.

A vote to cut off debate on the proposal was canceled and Democrats admitted they lacked the 60 votes needed to adopt the bill over GOP objections.

"Discussions are under way in an effort to reach agreement and permit passage of the bill," said Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. He said the cloture vote would be rescheduled if no agreement could be reached.

Defendant, prosecutor clash in trial

XENIA, Ohio — A woman who saw five of her 10 disabled adopted children die within nine months died Tuesday with a prosecutor who questioned her ability to care for so many youngsters.

At a coroner's inquest into three of the deaths, Cane County Prosecutor William Schenck asked 31-year-old Kathleen Carroll whether there was a limit to the number of children she and her husband, Timothy, could care for.

All but three of her children had disabilities. Schenck said physical therapists had complained that the children were not improving as fast as they might because Mrs. Carroll often canceled appointments.

Mrs. Carroll said she did so only when the children were sick, the family was on vacation or if she had car trouble. "I am not superwoman," she said.

Lawmakers ask Clinton for new plan

WASHINGTON — Some nervous Democrats urged President Clinton on Tuesday to abandon his deficit-reduction plan and write a new one with a smaller tax increase and more spending cuts.

Clinton and his allies reacted immediately, saying any such delay could mean major trouble for the economy.

"You delay at a couple of months, you are going to have less deficit reduction, higher interest rates, more fragility, uncertainty in the economy, more consumer confidence going down," Clinton told reporters at the White House.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., who voted for a version of the president's plan when it passed the Senate by one vote last month, said "I remain to be convinced" on the compromise now being written.

Jim Bakker will remain in prison

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Former televangelist Jim Bakker, convicted of bilking millions of dollars from his ministry's contributors, will not be released from prison this year, the U.S. Parole Commission ruled Tuesday.

"This was his last available remedy, so at this point in time, he will be serving his sentence to expiration," said Mark Sakaley, a spokesman for the Justice Department.

Bakker was convicted here in 1989 on federal charges of defrauding contributors to the PTL ministry he founded.

Lawyer asks court to overturn verdict

BOSTON — A lawyer for Pamela Smart, the former high school instructor found guilty of coaxing her teenage-age lover to kill her husband, asked the U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday to overturn the 1991 conviction.

Attorney J. Albert Johnson maintained the trial was poisoned by publicity.

The media's intensive coverage "gave rise to the impression of being present at a Roman circus," he argued in his petition.

Clinton unveils crackdown on immigration

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton asked Congress for more money and new legal tools Tuesday to crack down on illegal immigration and the crime organizations and terrorists who exploit weak U.S. defenses against illegal aliens.

Prompted by hundreds of Chinese boat people and an immigrant sheik linked to the World Trade Center bombers, Clinton said, "We cannot tolerate those who traffic in human cargo, nor can we allow our people to be endangered by those who would enter our country to terrorize America."

Worked out with representatives of both parties on Capitol Hill, Clinton's plan received bipartisan support from members of Congress who at tended the White House announcement.

The plan would not shut the nation's borders but would continue welcoming legal immigrants and legitimate refugees while keeping out those with no right to be here.

"To treat terrorists and smugglers as immigrants dishonors the tradition of the immigrants who have made our nation great, and it unfairly taints the millions of immigrants who live here honorably and are a vital part of every segment of our society," he said.

The plan, spearheaded by Vice President Al Gore, has two elements.

New legislation would allow expedited exclusion of undocumented aliens "who do not have credible claims for political asylum," the use of racketeering laws against gangs that organize illegal immigration by sea or by land and increased penalties for alien smuggling.

An additional $172.5 million for next year's proposed budget to add 600 Border Patrol agents, enhance the State Department's criminal system that lists foreign criminals and suspected terrorists who should be kept out, expand pre-inspection at foreign airports of U.S.-bound passengers and hire more officers to handle the expedited exclusion hearings.

"It's a good bill, absolutely," Sen. Albion O. Amodei, R-Nev., told Clinton after the announcement. D-Conn. had severely criticized the government for allowing Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman to remain free while appealing a denial of political asylum even though some of his followers were arrested in the World Trade Center bombing and a purported terrorist plot to bomb other New York sites. Abdel-Rahman, who lost his appeal, is now in custody.

Both of California's Democratic senators, Dianne Feinstein and Barbara Boxer, also applauded it. They have been pressing for action against illegal immigrants whose care is costing their state millions.

Boxer said funding the extra $172.5 million should not be a problem.

"If we can't get our arms around this immigration problem, we can't afford anything else," Boxer said in an interview. "In the long run, this will be cost-effective" given that one-quarter of federal prison inmates are illegal aliens.

Feinstein said the present asylum process "is a mockery."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, left, talks to President Clinton Tuesday, after Clinton asked Congress for more money to stem the tide of illegal immigration.

"That's why we asked Mexico to couldn't handle them with dispatch, take those three ships, because we she said.

FTC sets up guidelines for 900-number services

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who dial 900-number phone services will be warned of the cost of the calls and will get a chance to hang up before being charged, under rules issued Tuesday by the Federal Trade Commission.

The final regulations governing the operation of 900-number lines require a warning at the very start of the call that details the fee, tells callers they have three seconds after a tone is sounded to hang up if they don't want to pay.

The FTC adopted the rules on a 4-0 vote. They will take effect Nov. 1.

The regulations, which implement a law enacted last year by Congress, expand on rules by the Federal Communications Commission. The FCC regulations include a requirement that telephone companies block access to 900 numbers from individual phone lines, if so requested by the customer.

They also require phone companies, to provide toll-free pay-per-call information lines, customers to be sent pay-per-call disclosure statements annually and prohibit any prefix other than 900 to be used by a pay-per-call service.

Under FTC rules, print and broad cast ads must carry details of the fees that callers will be charged for any call that would cost at least $2.

The regulations also set ground rules for resolving disputes between consumers and 900-line operators over bills. Companies will be required to correct an incorrect bill or notify the customer in 90 days of plans to do so. They investigate the complaint or to insist on being paid for the disputed charge.

Advocates sue Clinton over policy on homosexuals in military

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's weak, old policy on homosexuals in the military came under crossfire Tuesday as gay rights advocates sued to overturn the directive while key lawmakers voted to tighten it.

In the first of many anticipated legal challenges, the ACLU and Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund filed suit in U.S. District Court on behalf of several gay, lesbian men and women, contending the new policy deprived them of their constitutional rights.

The suit said the policy "prevented homosexuals to serve in the military if they don't reveal their sexual orientation" was "restrictive, confused and self-contradictory."

"American citizens should be judged according to their abilities, not their skin color, their gender or their sexual orientation," said William Rubenstein of the American Civil Liberties Union.

But a few liberals wavered from the coalition; members of a House panel voted to repeal the existing ban on homosexuals in the military, and instead approved by voice vote a measure that goes beyond Clinton's "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue" policy.

Many lawmakers say loosening restrictions could undermine military morale and cohesiveness.

"The opposing actions underscored the continuing volatility of the issue that Clinton promised during his presidential campaign to confront."

The lawsuit, which named Defense Secretary Les Aspin as the defendant, charged that Clinton's policy subjects homosexuals "to investigation and discharge because of the perceived prejudices of others."

Five of the seven plaintiffs allowed their names to be used in the suit, risking expulsion from the military. Two chose to remain anonymous.

"I'm not an activist. I'm a regular Joe soldier who wants to be able to serve his country like any other able-bodied adult without having to lie about myself," said Army Reserve Sgt. Steven Spencer, a MASH unit nurse at Camp Mather's Wash.

"I don't think I should be discharged, but I'm willing to accept it as a price for the freedom of all people," he said. Spencer, 26, said in a telephone interview he felt Clinton was courageous for trying to address the issue. "I think he did the best that he could... I feel that his hands were tied by Congress."

Others named in the suit were 1st Lt. Donta Holloway of the New Mexico National Guard; Air Force Staff Sgt. Harold McCarty of March Air Force Base, Calif.; Army Reserve 1st Lt. Kenneth Osborn of the 304th Materiel Management Center, West Los Angeles, and Navy Reserve Lt. Richard von Wohlf of Naval Air Station, Moffett Field, Calif.

Meanwhile, the House Armed Services Committee adopted a Senate committee proposal that would give commanders more leeway than the Clinton policy to discharge homosexuals.

The proposal, which could become law as part of next year's military budget, was drafted by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga. It states that military service is unique and homosexuality creates an unacceptable risk of disorder.

Diseases linked to agent rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government expanded its list of diseases officially linked to Agent Orange on Tuesday, but the controversy about health effects of the Vietnam era defoliant was far from over.

Experts said further study may connect still other cancers to the herbicide.

A study by the National Academy of Sciences said three more were connected to the yellow-orange compound. They are Hodgkin's disease, a type of cancer, and a metabolic disorder, called porphyria cutanea tarda.

Some Vietnam veterans halted the move, saying that their long concern about exposure to Agent Orange and "dioxin" is already.

Members of the National Academy of Sciences committee said that additional research may connect still other cancers to the Agent Orange.

Dr. Harold Fallon, chairman of the committee and dean of the school of medicine at the University of Alabama, Birmingham, said that in addition to the three diseases clearly linked to Agent Orange, there are three cancers that should be "a high priority to investigate."

"There was limited evidence for the three cancers in some studies, but it was not conclusive," Fallon said at a news conference.

The three disorders suspected of linkage to Agent Orange are cancers of the respiratory system (lungs, larynx or throat), prostate cancer, and multiple myeloma, another type of cancer.

To reach its conclusion, the academy of science committee reviewed thousands of toxicology reports and some 250 human disease studies related to herbicides, Agent Orange and to dioxin, a toxic contaminant in the defoliant. Most of the reports were on measurable chemical exposures in industry.

Fallon said one of the biggest problems in studying a link between Agent Orange and disease is determining the extent of herbicide exposure of U.S. troops who served in various parts of Vietnam.

U.S., Ukraine ink defense deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Les Aspin and Ukrainian Defense Minister Konstantin Morozov agreed an agreement Tuesday for future defense contacts and discussed concerns about nuclear weapons remaining on Ukrainian soil.

Aspin, at a Pentagon ceremony, said the document calling for a greater exchange between the two nations on military matters, will "promote confidence and enhance understanding." Morozov said it "creates a basis for deeper and... wider relations between our two countries."

It calls for an annual exchange of visits between the two defense ministries and a 10-member, 10-member group of defense officials to expand defense contacts; and sets up a series of exchange visits between service chiefs and military delegations to discuss such issues as military housing, law, logistics, command and control structures and medical services.

It's Kansas City's turn: Rivers reach record crests

Frank Davis looks over a flood retaining wall in Kansas City, Kan., where the Kansas River has flooded. Davis was trying to make a delivery to a business at the mouth of the river.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — This time, it's Kansas City's turn. After near-danger in Des Moines and a still-lingering threat to St. Louis, now the folks in Kansas City are feverishly shoring up levees and waiting for the water to go down.

Businesses and homeowners in low-lying areas along the Missouri and Kansas rivers banded in a surge toward record crests, the latest chapter in the inexorable onse of floodwaters across the Midwest.

After week after week of town after town falling victim to the Midwest's tolling rivers, the people in Kansas City are all too aware of what can happen and, often, how little can be done.

"See those treecops pulling out of the river? I saw the river swell up the levee near those trees," said David MacGregor, 48, a resident of Kansas City, Mo.

"The river is pretty much in the driver's seat now," said Bill Sanders, a police officer in Kansas City, Kan. "Though both rivers crested at midday Tuesday at record levels, the tantalizing question remained unanswered: Would the levees hold?"

"We've had water on the levees for a very long time, and they were made to pass water quickly, not to hold it," said John Ferrell, a spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers. "We have some levees that are almost Jell-O-like, and they are showing weakness."

At least 4,500 people were evacuated from the Armourdale district of Kansas City, Kan., as a precaution beginning Monday night when levees there sprang some spotty leaks.

The Kansas River crested at 54.9 feet, 22 feet above flood stage, but levees are 57 feet high. The Kansas emptied into the Missouri, which crested at 48.8 feet at Kansas City, Mo., 17.5 feet over flood stage. Most of the city is protected by a floodwall 57 feet high, however.

Levees were topped or breached, the most serious flooding would be in low-lying light industrial and commercial areas and a few residential neighborhoods. The heart of the city is on higher ground.

Most buildings in the flood plain had sandbags piled at their doors, and windows on many were boarded up.

It is not just the saturated levees that pose a threat, Ferrell said. "There is water all over the north central part of Kansas that is flowing down toward us," he said.

And there is all that water flowing downstream toward the Mississippi River and St. Louis, where a crest of 48 feet is forecast next week, almost a foot higher than last week's record.

Just upriver from Kansas City, the Platte County community of Waldron, Mo., lost its battle against the Missouri River early Tuesday when a 100-foot section of a levee breached, allowing muddy water into town.

Most of its 60 residents already had been evacuated.

Flooding there also threatened Interstate 29, the county's last north-south roadway. The interstate already was closed for 70 miles from the Iowa state line to St. Joseph, Mo., and crews built levee walls along the highway near Platte City.

"Everything we are looking at is at a very critical point," said Carl Hupp, the county's emergency management director.

Levees were battered but still holding at St. Joseph, where many of the 6,000 residents of the city's slough side had left Monday as a precaution.

The Missouri began dropping at St. Joseph early Tuesday, but heavy rain overnight farther upstream in southern Nebraska and Iowa could make it rise again.

About 85,000 residents of St. Joseph and outlying areas remained without running water. The Missouri River flooded the city's only treatment plant Saturday and officials said it might not be fixed until Friday or later.

Water service resumed Tuesday to commercial and industrial customers of the Des Moines Water Works, based on the flooding July 11 on the Raccoon River, but businesses were told they must conserve.

The more than 250,000 people served by the water works in and around Des Moines were told their tap water might be safe to drink by early next week.

For the first time in a month, the Mississippi River fell below flood stage Tuesday at Dubuque, Iowa. At dawn, the river had fallen to 16.7 feet; flood stage is 17 feet. Flood gates, levees and other structures built after the spectacular 1965 flood kept the water from causing much damage.

Blue-collar section of KC now ghost town

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — The bustling Kansas River turned a blue-collar section of Kansas City into a ghost town Tuesday.

Fear, fueled by pesky levee leaks, prompted the overnight evacuation of 500 businesses and 3,500 residents. But in the light of day, all appeared well in Armourdale: The river crested at record level, but the levees — for now, at least — were holding.

Well, all was not completely well, perhaps. Not a single civilian was seen on the streets Tuesday afternoon. Only National Guard Honorables and police patrolled the deserted streets, which usually bustle with scores of trucks tumbling in and out of manufacturing plants.

"It's a necessary thing to do," National Guard Sgt. Michael Reinlow said of the evacuation.

Reinlow, a 23-year-old University of Kansas student from Overland Park, stood guard at a bridge leading into Armourdale. His job: to keep people out and in prevent any theft.

Ron Vachter, a fire inspector, said protecting the manufacturing plants from flooding was particularly important because of their store of acids and other chemicals.

"We don't want acid flowing all over to contaminate the water," he said.

Ironically, the threat of flooding forced the shut-down of two major plants that manufacture goods used with water — soap and detergents. The smokestacks of Procter & Gamble and Colgate Palmolive, which makes Irish Spring soap, stood idle along the blighted waters of the river.

The General Electric Railcar Wheel Service, a thousand rebuilt wheels sat on the front lot awaiting shipment.

Normally, flatbed trucks are backed up for a mile at the Proliferated Steel Corp., which grinds up old cars for recycling. That was not a problem Tuesday, obviously.

Officials said they could not estimate the losses to businesses and workers because of the evacuation. But that work will begin all too soon.

Many of the businesses shut down were bars and nightclubs, including — ahem — the Risky Business Bar.

Fire destroys plant

ANACORTES, Wash. (AP) — A fire that gutted a seafood processing plant burned all night and into the morning Tuesday, crumbling a pier and threatening chemical tanks.

About 450 people living within a half-mile of Shannon Point Seafoods left their homes Monday night after an evacuation order prompted by fears liquid ammonia and Freon tanks might burst.

The fire broke out Monday afternoon when a machine overheated.

Flooding stops railroads in their tracks

Journal of Commerce

Floods that have cut a destructive swath through the nation's midsection seized the railroad industry's epicenter Tuesday, blocking eight major lines in Kansas City.

There, all major railroads save for Consolidated Rail Corp. and CSX Transportation meet.

"The yards are not flooded (at Kansas City), but you can't get in or out," said John Bromley, a spokesman for Union Pacific Railroad in Omaha.

He said bridges across the Kansas River all have been raised, effectively cutting all access.

Burlington Northern, Southern Pacific and Kansas City Southern reported operations halted as flood walls were closed and the Missouri and Kansas Rivers crested.

Rail detours continue, ranging as far east as Cincinnati and as far north as Portland, Ore., for shipments normally moving through Kansas and Missouri.

The Union Pacific mainline west from Kansas City was underwater, Bromley said, as was the carrier's mainline north from Kansas City to Omaha.

The Santa Fe suspended operations between Kansas City, Kan., and Chicago. The railroad again put ballast cars on the Mississippi River bridge at Fort Madison, Iowa, to hold the bridge down.

Norfolk Southern Corp. reported 13 miles of track underwater at Hannibal, Mo. The carrier was diverting west-bound transcontinental traffic to Memphis for connections to the Union Pacific, Burlington Northern and Southern Pacific.

Americans, Koreans mark 40th anniversary of the Korean War

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Rather than a forgotten war, the Korean conflict was the beginning of eventual victory over communism, veterans and their families were told by U.S. and South Korean officials Tuesday.

"Your attendance here confirms that the Korean War is not the forgotten war," President Clinton said in a message read to more than 500 people at a ceremony just 40 years after the conflict ended in an armistice.

"On this 40th anniversary of the cease-fire, I pray that tomorrow will give peace a place in the world," Clinton said in a letter voicing "my eternal gratitude to those Americans who served in Korea and most especially to the families they left behind."

The Korea veterans "served America valiantly during one of the most difficult periods of this country," he said. "Their experience reminds all Americans of our great debt to those who have risked and sometimes lost their lives in defense of our liberties."

Deputy Veterans Affairs Secretary Hershel Gober's reading of Clinton's message brought polite applause.

Signers of the July 27, 1953, armistice didn't realize at the time "they were signing the death certificate for communism," said Gober.

Only years later "people began to realize ... communism was not invincible or inevitable. It was stopped dead in its tracks by those who fought the Korean War ... Korea was the beginning of the end for communism."

Korean Ambassador Han Seung-soo said the 1950-1953 conflict may be called a "forgotten war," but his country will remember forever that the United States and its allies saved his country and inspired it to become democratic and prosperous.

The Korean republic stands today "a strong, proud and democratic member of the community of nations," he said.

"I hope that our progress — the democracy and capitalism that prevail in so much of Asia today — may be some small measure of comfort for those heroes who fell and for their families who endure. They did not die in vain and we have not forgotten," Han said.

The audience stood in a moment of silence honoring Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, who died Monday. He had been a Far East, United Nations and U.S. 8th Army commander during the conflict. His passing "closes a page in history that we have all written on," said John Kenney, a 187th Airborne Infantry Regiment veteran who was master of ceremonies.

The anniversary observance began with a 19-gun salute and placing of a joint wreath of red carnations and white chrysanthemums at the cemetery's Tomb of the Unknown by Ambassador Han and Korean War Veterans Association President William T. Norris of Hall Moon, N.Y.

NASA will try again Aug. 4

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA has set Aug. 4 as the third launch attempt for a satellite-delivery mission by Space Shuttle Discovery.

The flight is 2½ weeks late because of a failed electronics switch at the pad and, more recently, a faulty steering mechanism in one of the two solid-rocket boosters.

Technicians planned to replace the bad steering mechanism Tuesday. The unit failed in the final seconds of the countdown Saturday, and Discovery's computers immediately halted the countdown. The first launch attempt was the Saturday before.

NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham said workers could have had Discovery ready to go Aug. 3. But managers decided to give the launch team some time off this weekend.

Get out your checkbook

Here's a postscript to Tuesday's comments about the fight over Idaho public-school funding:

If you've had trouble grasping the importance of this suit, a little arithmetic might help.

On Monday, Robert Huntley, the lawyer for the 48 school districts that are suing the state, said any settlement would have to include fully funding an estimated $700 million in building projects.

Presumably that would come on top of the costs of bringing school programs up to the level the districts are seeking. State legislators have estimated those costs at $250 million the first year and $80 million a year thereafter.

Put it all together and you've got roughly a BILLION dollars in up-front costs alone. That's about $1,000 from the pocket of every person in the state, including those too young to have pockets.

Do the voters in those 48 school districts know what goal their officials are promoting?

definitely can wear it:

• The city beach at Coeur d'Alene. The City Council there recently decided to repeal its earlier ban on skimpy bikinis.

• The steps of the state Capitol. A group of exotic dancers wore thongs there last week, to protest not being able to wear them in bars. Nobody stopped them.

Everybody clear on this? Public places in front of children, unsuspecting passersby and TV cameras - yes. Sleazy bars, no. If you can explain this, please do.

Uphold our barroom morality

Let's say you've just brought home your new thong-back bikini, and you want to know where you can wear it.

(OK, OK - we know most of our readers don't buy thong-back bikinis. But for the sake of discussion, let's say you've just bought one.)

We're none too clear on this, but here are the facts as we know them:

We know you can't wear it in a bar. At least, not if you're an exotic dancer. State liquor control authorities say if you do, the bar will lose its license.

But here are two places you

Addition makes more sense

Why does the county want to put out so much money for a new juvenile facility when an addition to the present jail with no connecting exits nor entrances between the adult facility would keep us from having to purchase more land?

It would keep travel costs down because the people in jail would be close to the courthouse. Food could be prepared in one kitchen instead of two. Administrative duties could be shared between the facilities rather than paying two complete sets of administrators. And as population fluctuates, workers could move between the two facilities at less cost to the county and employees.

Also, doesn't Twin Falls have enough empty buildings that could be renovated at less cost than a new facility? Has everyone forgotten our motto of philosophy of use, repair, renovate and make do with what you have rather than tear down, throw out and start with new, more expensive and not always necessary innovations?

Also, we seem awfully concerned about adequate facilities for 18 juveniles who have committed crimes yet don't seem as much concerned about non-criminal families who desperately need affordable, livable housing. The "news" talks about the lack of affordable rentals and affordable houses to buy as if this is a sudden disaster. The lack of affordable and livable housing has been a problem for a very long time. We know of people who have had trouble finding rentals for more than 10 years.

I'm not a bleeding heart that wants to give away the world. I'd just like to see our efforts go toward making non-criminals more comfortable and safe than making "new and comfy" facilities for those who knowingly break the law.

My wife and I voted!

Look at root of the problem

Your consternation over the detention center vote is laudable, but The Times-News has taken little interest in the problems of young people, given their desperate plight. I again ask you to illuminate just what is going on with young people. I believe a 25 percent high school dropout rate is high percent of students parent homes with the adult working, a high involvement with alcohol, teen-age pregnancy out of control, no appropriate juvenile detention facilities and one comes to the realization that our young people are at sea and nobody really cares.

We have "Band-aid" stop-gap programs in the hope that it will all go away, but the bottom line is we don't like our children. How can we excuse what is coming down at all levels of the system and face each day ignoring a minority that has not only been abandoned but scapegoated as well.

The annual commotion over school funding carries the message that, "Kid, you are not important," which is a cover for avoiding the reality of what's up.

One of the strong but ignored results of Desert Storm was the 25 percent to 40 percent drop in discipline problems because alcohol was unavailable. Enforce the 21-year-old law and the schools may not need more money. But our Legislature and our political system are beholden to the alcohol industry and in spite of massive under-age consumption, how long has it been since an alcohol retailer was denied a license for under-age sales? Ask any enforcement person what the biggest problem is with young people, and the answer is always the same - alcohol.

The adult community sees any regulation of this industry the first step to prohibition, and so nothing is done. Until that changes, the "Band-aid" and the posturing will continue. Sorrow kids.

Twin Falls businesses are great

This letter is a public thank-you to some individuals in your city for showing that there is still honest and moral people in this country.

On July 9, we were heading back to California from a vacation at Mount Rushmore. Just outside of town, I noticed a transmission oil leak and I stopped at the first repair shop I saw - Oasis Auto Repair at a Chevron station on Highway 93. The owner/mechanic is Erin Evans. He diagnosed the problem as a bad seal and said it should take about four hours and $140 to fix. This was about noon on July 9.

At about 5 p.m., he announced the car fixed and I paid him. While we were sitting in the driveway and small talking, we noticed there was still a leak. He crawled underneath and apologized that he had not solved the problem. He offered to give me back my money or repair it again on Saturday, July 10. We decided to spend the night at the nearby KOA campground.

We arrived at the KOA and began to set up our tent trailer, which would not go up. They promptly refunded our money and we (the six of us, wife and four children) stayed at Motel 6 near Oasis Repair.

On July 10, Erin began work on my van, hoping to be done by our noon checkout time. When he couldn't, Motel 6 gave us an extension to 1 p.m. and Erin was finished by then. Unfortunately, the transmission still leaked. Needless to say, he was very frustrated. We could not stay any longer, so he gave me my money back and a free case of transmission oil.

We made it home in 12 hours and used 7 quarts of transmission oil. On July 13, I took the car to the local Chevy dealership. They also diagnosed a bad seal, but after the repairs it still leaked. They discovered a porous transmission case and put in a new transmission.

I realize this is a long letter and I hope you can publish it in its entirety. I hope some of you locals give Erin some business because of his honesty. I hope to return to Twin Falls again and spend some more time there visiting your wonderful community. Thank you, Oasis Repair, Motel 6 and KOA, for your efforts.

INEL must heed the needs of Idaho

The naval fuels controversy is the latest in a long series of events in which eastern Idaho supporters of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory have reacted differently from the rest of Idaho.

Unlike the rest of the state, traditional supporters have not called for environmental impact studies on the Navy or the entire site. They certainly did not cheer Judge Ryan's ruling, and it mattered not that two damaging reports were released just days before the judge ordered a complete environmental study.

But with time to think about it, how many of us would not want to see this crisis as an opportunity? The Navy has special needs; its secret facility cannot be opened to the same kind of scrutiny as a civilian facility. But the military's environmental record is not exemplary, and the phrase "national security" has lost much of its power. It is time for the Navy to change, too.

Surely we would agree with fellow Idahoans in Twin Falls, Boise or Moscow that a bright future for the INEL should rest on confidence in its safety, its protection of our aquifer and its openness to public scrutiny. We cannot march into the future armed only with the smug certainty that "they" are wrong and we know better.

Jerry Brady

In the next few years, INEL's supporters must build bridges of understanding to the rest of Idaho that are based on firm scientific ground. If Westinghouse's own report says a storage building is deficient, it must either be disputed or the problems corrected. If the environmental impact statements are the means this country used to assure openness and public safety, failing to write them only compounds the impression we have something to hide.

The INEL faces an uncertain future. The federal government is deep in debt, defense spending is declining and the nation does not need all the laboratories it now has. To succeed in the future, INEL must face outward to private business and the needs of Idaho, the region and the nation, not inward as in the past. In doing so, it will need statewide support as never before.

INEL could help Idaho meet its most critical needs, such as fish passage down the Columbia, cleanup of mine tailings, productivity in the mining industry and in agriculture, clean water and clean air. INEL could help manufacturers of all kinds and use its technology to create new industries throughout the state. But it can only do this after first entering into a new covenant with the people of Idaho, a covenant based on candor, trust, peace and science and environmental compliance.

A year from now, a revolutionary new contract will be in place between the Department of Energy and one of three or four consortia of contractors bidding for it. An election will be on the horizon in Idaho. Environmental studies about the safety of INEL will be under way or nearing completion. The next years thus present an opportunity to start all over.

We should do so with an appreciation that INEL's supporters and its traditional critics share a common commitment to the health, safety and economic advancement of all of Idaho's people.

Jerry Brady is the publisher of the Post Register in Idaho Falls and board chairman of a new economic development program in eastern Idaho, Initiative 2000. These remarks were based on a speech he made during a July 7 conference on the future of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Center would waste money

I have to smile when I read about the Twin Falls detention center. The people who are supposed to run this don't seem to be shy about spending other people's money.

The $800,000 is just a starter. They will waste $2 million if you people don't stop them. They have several counties to draw from.

If the people who want the detention center would look to Gooding with the old tuberculosis hospital, for about $150,000 to $200,000 you would have an excellent building for all the counties and have room to have classrooms also to teach a trade. I'm glad the people of Twin Falls voted down the silly 18-bed center.

Use your head and check into the Gooding tuberculosis hospital. You will save money and have a building that would do you proud. You can buy a lot of gasoline for $700,000.

Movies are ruining our kids

I know you have all been looking forward to this! My movie review of Jurassic Park.

First, this was a pretty good movie. The special effects were first rate. This movie was so realistic that I could have sworn they actually existed. This is where the problem develops that bothers me. I looked around after the movie and saw a lot of little children leaving the theater. I started thinking and realized that I wouldn't take my child to this movie. Why would so many other parents take theirs?

I think that a Tyrannosaurus Rex eating humans, cows, goats and other dinosaurs really doesn't deserve a PG rating. When I realized that the previews (trailers in movie lingo) on TV never alluded to all the violence that was in this movie. They showed us little dinosaurs running across a meadow field and little kids petting a friendly docile plant-eating dinosaur. They showed a little action to remind us that there is a plot. But not once did I see a dinosaur eating anything in the previews. If they did, we parents would think twice before taking the kids to this movie and Jurassic Park wouldn't be one of the top-grossing movies of all time.

I'm going to say something that many of you already know but some of you are trying to deny. "Hollywood is selling out the moral, ethical and conservative values of America for money (they, do I sound old)." They realize that they can make a bundle of money by attracting kids (with parents in tow) to come to their movies.

This is evident in Teen-age Mutant Ninja Turtles, The Terminator and Batman. They realize that making stories about whales is nice but doesn't make the big bucks like Arnold shooting someone in the head.

The blame must also fall on parents who, tired from working two jobs, having to clean house, cook and pay bills and trying to have a little free time to themselves, put their child in front of the TV to baby-sit. They would never let a live baby sitter cuss and show their child lewd pictures of people having sex and of graphic violence. But they'll let their child have free reign of the TV for the exact same program content. It's rather ironic!

To sum it up, our children will one day rule this country and the world. They will be so used to violence that they will no longer be shocked by the extent of it in society. It seems like there is nothing we can do to stop it. Hollywood is so entrenched in our society that it has absolute power to shape our thinking. The best I can hope for personally is to protect my son from its awesome power for a small portion of his life. I urge other parents to do the same - for our children and our society.

Car bomb wounds 2 Peruvian guards

LIMA, Peru -- Maoist rebels detonated a car bomb outside the U.S. ambassador's office early Tuesday, seriously wounding two Peruvian guards, police said. A man described as a rebel was shot to death at the scene. The 6 a.m. blast shattered windows, splintered window frames, and clipped concrete in the front of the four-story building, located on a bustling downtown avenue.

Police said the rebels pushed a van loaded with 330 pounds of dynamite toward the building before carrying. The explosion set off a fire and destroyed an armored personnel carrier in front of the building.

U.N. will not change military strategy

MOGADISHU, Somalia -- American envoys said Tuesday that the United Nations would not change a much-criticized military strategy that has killed dozens of Somalis and displaced aid operations.

Political and economic programs, however, will be stepped up alongside military action to regain control of southern Mogadishu, U.S. special envoy David Shinn said.

"The military option is very much there," said Shinn, senior coordinator on Somalia at the State Department. "Strong resolve still has to be used and it will be used."

Shinn spoke at the end of a 10-day trip to Somalia and neighboring nations intended to reassess U.S. policy toward the 27-nation coalition.

Civilians ride out 3rd day of Israeli attacks

NABATIYEH, Lebanon (AP) -- Civilians flattened themselves on the floors of their homes Tuesday to ride out Israeli air and artillery bombardments aimed at Shiite Muslim and Palestinian guerrillas.

The United Nations said more than 120,000 villagers had fled north since Israel launched the operation Sunday. Undeterred so far, guerrillas fired more Katyusha rockets into northern Israel, where 150,000 inhabitants huddled in bomb shelters or reinforced rooms.

More than 47 people were reported dead and 241 wounded, most of them Lebanese, since Israeli jets, helicopters, Panthers and howitzers began striking at suspected guerrilla bases across Lebanon.

The raids fomented an escalation in attacks by guerrillas on Israeli troops occupying a "security zone" in southern Lebanon to protect Israel's northern villages from guerrilla attack.

Two militia groups that have vowed to attack the U.S.-sponsored Middle East peace process and drive Israel out of Lebanon killed seven Israeli soldiers and wounded seven in the zone in attacks beginning July 8.

Israeli officials said Israel's forces intensified attacks Tuesday and would continue until the rocket assault on northern Israel ceased. But Israeli newspapers said the Cabinet had rejected sending in ground troops.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres predicted the fighting would end soon. "I think we are talking in terms of days, not weeks and not months," he told reporters.

At sundown, four Israeli fighter-bombers destroyed 10 houses and damaged 26 in the southeastern village of Zella, injuring seven people in the Hezbollah bastion.

Yeltsin accused of evading responsibility for ruble panic

MOSCOW (AP) -- President Boris Yeltsin's opponents accused him Tuesday of trying to evade responsibility for a nationwide currency panic, as Russians jammed banks to exchange old rubles for new Russian bills.

Central Bank Chairman Viktor Gerashchenko joined the finger-pointing, telling The Associated Press that Yeltsin knew of the bank's plans to invalidate old bank notes "in general terms" before the weekend decree.

But it remained unclear whether Russians would blame Yeltsin for the ruble fiasco -- and if so, how much damage it would do to his free-market reforms.

Starting Monday, billions of pre-1993 rubles became invalid under a Central Bank order that stunned Russian consumers out of their political apathy and caused deep fighting in the Yeltsin administration.

The order struck hardest at ordinary workers who are paid in cash and make most of their purchases in cash.

"This only hurts the middle class," said Natalya, a red-haired woman in her mid-50s who clutched a black purse to her side as she was viciously jostled by a crowd outside a bank on Tverskaya Street.

Ticket offices also were jammed with shoving, cursing crowds who lined up to buy tram tickets for old rubles, hoping they would later be able to turn in the unused stubs for new currency.

Police still looking for molesting suspect

TWIN FALLS - City police were still looking Tuesday for a man suspected of molesting a 4-year-old girl and trying to entice other girls into his vehicle over the weekend.

It Jim Kistler said police have no reason not to believe the girl, who told her parents that a man picked her up outside her home, molested her at a house, and dropped her off at an elementary school several blocks from home.

Police are seeking a suspect who was previously convicted of lewd conduct with a child, but who has not registered under the Idaho's sex-offender registration law.

Police urged people to be on the lookout for a dark, 1969 Chevrolet pickup truck with a white camper shell and Idaho license plates.

Twin Falls County man, 62, charged with molesting 2 girls

TWIN FALLS - A 62-year-old Twin Falls County man has been charged with molesting two girls between September and April.

William R. Brown, who lives on Mountain View Drive outside the city limits of Twin Falls, was being held in the Twin Falls County jail in lieu of $3,000 bond Tuesday, charged with two counts of lewd conduct.

A 10-year-old girl told investigators she was molested in September, and a 4-year-old girl reported being fondled sometime between October and April, according to sheriff's deputy Dan Mott's affidavit.

If he posts bond and is released, Brown is forbidden from contacting either girl or their families.

Water line repairs leave houses without water

TWIN FALLS - Repairs to a 10-inch water line on Washington Street South left 100 to 150 households without water for 3 1/2 hours Tuesday.

Workers noticed a leak Monday night when water appeared in a roadside ditch near the Washington Apartments, Water Superintendent Joe Koon said.

The leak was small enough to allow delay of repairs until Tuesday, when workers replaced a feet of pipe. Crews normally repair leaks with a clamp, but in this case they had to splice the repair into the line, Koon said.

"It happens once in a blue moon," he said. Washington Street South receives heavy truck use, and the vibrations apparently cracked the bottom of the water pipe, he said.

Burley man seriously injured in 3-car accident in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS - A Burley man was seriously injured in a three-car pileup on Addison Avenue East in Twin Falls Tuesday afternoon.

Kelly J. Rasmussen, 37, was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with neck and back injuries after his car was struck from behind and pushed into a van, Sgt. Jim Milton of the Twin Falls Police Department said.

Traffic was stopped on Addison Avenue near Highview Lane at 2:18 p.m. when a pickup truck driven by Courtney Henson, 18, rear-ended Rasmussen's car, Milton said.

Henson was cited for inattentive driving, Milton said.

Sheriff's deputy hit in leg when motorist sideswipes car

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls County Sheriff's deputy was injured during a traffic stop Tuesday morning.

Deputy Perry Barnhill, 25, was hit in the leg - possibly by a hubcap - when a woman sideswiped his patrol car at Red Cap Corner near Kimberly, Sheriff Wayne Tonsley said.

The deputy was examined at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center emergency room and released. He had no broken bones and no cuts, but may have suffered ligament damage, Tonsley said.

Barnhill will be off duty for about two days. The name of the woman who hit his car was not available Tuesday.

Benefit auction set for Friday for man who lost home in fire

GOODING - A benefit auction will be held at 5:30 p.m. Friday for Larry Driesel, who lost his home last week in a fire.

The sale will be held 1 1/2 miles south of Gooding at Miles' Auction Barn. To donate items, please contact Gary Osborne at 934-5550.

Gooding County officials ponder landslide

By Stefano Esposito
Times-News writer

BLISS - While Gooding County officials remain uncertain how to deal with Saturday's huge earth slide across a roadway into the Snake River, one thing is certain - the area is still unsafe.

"I think there is continuing danger," said Ben Willhite, who has witnessed the effects of landslides as park ranger at Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument. "I don't know that we're going to see massive movement like the one that just occurred, but there is going to be a continuation of movement for a long time." Willhite said movement could "go on for decades."

The slide blocked off the Old Bliss Highway cutting off access to a bridge over the river.

Willhite was not optimistic that anything could be done to stabilize the area.

Willhite was among nearly 40 local, state and federal officials who met for approximately two hours Tuesday morning near the site.

One of the group's immediate concerns was the possible threat to aquatic life because of silt in the river, as well as the problem of unstable power lines in the area.

"Idaho Power has reported to us that they were setting a portable substation so they can restore some of the power around there, mainly because the line they've got at the slide area is just about to go," said Gooding County Commissioner Win Henslee.

There was also talk of building an emergency road, said Gooding County Commissioner Win Henslee.

"(The Bliss Highway District is) thinking of going down the old sheep trail, which would come in above the present slide," Henslee said.

The closed road could cause problems for some area farmers.

"One of the big concerns are people who have farmland across the river on the opposite side where the slide took place," said Twin Falls Senator Joyce McRoberts. McRoberts said it could be difficult for farmers to get across the river to irrigate their land.

Tuesday's gathering, which included representatives from the Soil Conservation Service and the Division of Environmental Quality, provided an opportunity for the county to receive offers of help from various agencies.

"Most agencies with geological capacilities offered technical help," Henslee said.

Those agencies will gather information about the site and it will be compiled into a single report, Henslee said.

"That will furnish some information for the county commissioners and the Bliss Highway District to help make decisions on what to do with the situation," he said.

Henslee could not say for certain when this would happen.

"We're just getting the ball rolling here," he said. "I'd hate to guess on a time frame."

Tee-ball tourney

Jacob Wayment keeps his eye on the ball, but connects with the tee during the Twin Falls Recreational District Punk League jamoree. Wayment, who plays for Professional Securities, ended up hitting a single during the season's finale which featured 18 teams of mostly 7- and 8-year-olds Tuesday at Harmon Park.

Farmer chooses new spot to set up proposed dairy

By Mychel Matthews Goodman
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN - A local group that feared its plans for the historic Stricker Ranch were being jeopardized by a proposed dairy can breathe a little easier now.

Murtaugh-based farmer David Funk, who planned to build a dairy three-quarters of a mile east of Stricker Ranch and south of Hansen, has chosen a second location for his dairy, according to Helen Phipps, of the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission.

Funk's original proposal was met by a loud outcry by those who objected to the proposed location of the dairy. They included members of The Friends of Stricker Ranch Inc., and neighboring residents.

Letters to the editor poured into The Times-News from people opposed to the dairy to be located near the tourist attraction.

Funk could not be reached for comment. Stricker, a stage stop along the Oregon Trail, is currently undergoing restoration by the Friends of Stricker Ranch and attracts 1,500 to 2,000 tourists each year, according to the group's President Johnny Meyers.

Phipps said that there is nothing prohibiting Funk from building the dairy so close to the historical site or near residences, since the location is zoned agricultural.

"Idaho code is really specific," she said. "It says each one of us has a right to farm and that includes livestock raising."

Phipps added some landowners in the area had signed a "waiver of nuisance," a document required by the Planning and Zoning Commission in places where urban and rural land uses may overlap.

When people build new homes in agricultural zones they are required to waive any nuisance claims they have against agricultural operations, she said.

"The board felt that (the waiver of nuisance) may serve as a black and white reminder to people that they're going to get the flies, the odor, the animal noises and tractor operations late at night."

"We initiated this kind of waiver that says 'hey, you're not going to complain about this.'"

"Sometimes it works," and sometimes it doesn't, she added.

In the meantime, Funk has chosen a second location for his dairy, Phipps said, approximately 2 miles east of Rock Creek Road, and about a mile south of the Toothill Road.

Phipps said that although both sites have been granted commission approval, she does not know what Funk plans to do with the property near Stricker Ranch. Funk has reserved the right to develop that property, she added.

Pretty weed rears ugly head

By N.S. Nokkewent
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - It's beautiful, it's a nuisance and it's spreading.

It's the weed commonly called purple loosestrife, which grows in wet areas along streams, rivers and ponds. It can choke the flow in an irrigation ditch, and it can take over entire wetland areas.

"If it gets loose, it can wreak all sorts of havoc," Bill Seclery, a vegetation specialist for Snake River Chemical Co., told a small group at a hearing at the Twin Falls County Weed Bureau Tuesday.

Bureau Superintendent Sheila Rock said she hopes to get the plant under control in this area "before it gets out of hand."

Nancy Cole, botanist for Idaho Power Co., explained the tendency of the prolific weed to crowd out other wetland plants, such as bull-rushes and cattails, eliminating or reducing food, nesting and cover plants for wildlife.

"The entity is part of a coalition working to control the weed," most experts agree that eradication of the Eurasian immigrant is out of the question.

"A mature plant can produce from 100,000 to more than 1 million tiny seeds each year. And it can be very tough to get rid of," she said. "It's very successful at being a weed," she said.

It has been found in most counties of Idaho. But in southern Idaho, most populations still are small and controllable, Cole said. While the plants are small they can be easily pulled out.

For small plots of 50 or 60 plants the best way to control them may be to "just walk out there and pull them out of the ground," Seclery said. But the dropped plants should be burned, not taken to a landfill, he added.

"You're not going to get rid of loosestrife," he said. But with pulling and with chemical sprays and biological controls, it is possible to keep it in check.

Purple loosestrife. Can choke irrigation ditch flows

He discussed three chemicals that can be used on loosestrife. The danger is that patches of ground left bare by treatment are vulnerable to reinfestation or to invasion by other noxious weeds, he said.

One problem with the plant is its looks. It is popular as an ornamental plant and has been sold in the past in area garden centers.

Seeds can be ordered through most seed catalogues. Though some states prohibit the sale of such noxious weed seeds, Idaho's Department of Agriculture has not banned the sale in the state, Seclery said.

For help or information about the weed, contact the Twin Falls County Weed Bureau at 743-9000.

Building to house surgery center

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A $2 million medical office building under construction near the College of Southern Idaho will house an outpatient surgery center, according to the building's future owners.

The 21,000-square-foot building at Falls Avenue and Washington Street will be the new home for The Surgery Center & Magic Valley Ear, Nose & Throat Association when completed in April.

The group that will own the building include three car, nose and throat doctors: Larry Maxwell, Peter Doble II and Mark Grefenson. They currently lease a suite of offices at Doctors Office Park from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Recent medical advances have led to a non-hospital shift from "inpatient surgery," which requires hospitalization, to outpatient surgery, which does not.

"Most operations are performed in an outpatient surgery procedure," Maxwell said.

Outpatient procedures are less costly and require less time for recuperation than inpatient procedures do, he said.

The new medical building will include a hearing-aid center, a voice laboratory and a facial plastic imaging center, according to a news release by the doctors. It will also have examination and treatment areas.

Doctors in The Surgery Center will perform ear, nose, throat and facial plastic surgery procedures.

Their services will include sinus and ear operations, tonsillectomies and adenoidectomies, nasal septal and rhinoplasty surgeries, eyelid surgery, face lifts, and hair restoration surgery, the news release says.

"The essence is because we specialize we have specialty equipment that the hospital doesn't have," Maxwell said. "It is also a long-term commitment by this group of doctors to the future of Twin Falls and the Magic Valley."

Brennan Construction of Pocatello will build the medical complex.

State probes misuse of 4-H Club funds

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls County Extension office employee has been suspended in an investigation into possible misuse of 4-H Club funds.

Officials would not identify the employee Tuesday and said no wrongdoing has been proved, but apparent discrepancies in the 4-H program books prompted the investigation, said Extension Agent Bob Ohlenschlaen.

"A number of transactions left some doubt," he said.

The investigation concerns private funds raised by the 4-H Club and does not include county or taxpayer money, Ohlenschlaen said.

Ohlenschlaen said he was advised to suspend the employee in accordance with the county employee policy handbook.

An internal audit turned up possible problems in late April, with possible discrepancies in the books dating to 1989, he said. AP

Rabies warning: Vaccinate pets

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A rabid bat picked up by a cat here last week demonstrates why people should vaccinate their pets, officials say.

"This just proves you should keep your animals up-to-date on rabies vaccination," said Cheryl Becker, nurse epidemiologist for the South Central District Health Department.

Chances are relatively small that a vaccinated animal will contract rabies, Becker said.

The bat found in Twin Falls last week tested positive for rabies, said Roger Perotto, chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

A cat picked up the bat within Twin Falls' city limits and brought it in its mouth to its owner, Perotto said.

"It's not rampant in the community, but we have had two cases this year," Becker said.

A Purcell couple found a rapid bat on its porch in early June, she has said previously.

It is not unusual that bats have rabies, Becker said.

That is why people should never touch a dead bat, she said. Instead, they should use a shovel to pick one up, place it in a plastic bag, and take it to the health department for testing, she said.

Tour focuses on irrigation practices

TWIN FALLS — The Chamber of Commerce has scheduled a "water use and quality" tour for Thursday. The tour will start at 8:30 a.m. Thursday at the College of Southern Idaho Canyon Building parking lot.

The bus will travel to Miller Dam where Twin Falls Canal Co. Manager Vince Alden will discuss the history and future of the irrigation tract. Other stops will include a bypass power plant on the canal and examples of gravity irrigation that produce minimal to zero sediment run-off.

The tour will conclude near the Twin Falls Sewerage treatment plant. The bus will return to CSI at approximately 4:30 p.m.

Reservations are required and are open to both chamber members and the public. Cost of the tour, including lunch and other refreshments, is $20 per person. For more information, call the chamber at 733-5974.

Man charged with assault in incident

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man faces a charge of aggravated assault stemming from a fight in which he is accused of poisoning a pellet pistol at another man.

Alan T. Cantu, 19, was driving through the TI Millage home project on Washington Street South Monday evening when he and another man got into an argument, according to an officer's statement in Cantu's case file.

Cantu said in a statement to police that the other man came up to his car carrying nunchucks. Cantu then grabbed the pellet gun and pointed it at the man, prosecutors say.

No shots were fired and nobody was hurt. Cantu was being held on the Twin Falls County jail Tuesday in lieu of $8,000 bond. A public defender was appointed to represent him and a preliminary hearing is set for Aug. 6.

Hailey rezones parcel barring large retailers, keeps business downtown

By Stephen Schowengerdt
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The City Council agreed that the business district will be downtown — and that's where its new development will take place.

Mayor Keith Rogak said he was touched by the huge turnout of more than 250 to Tuesday's public hearing to rezone two parcels of land — one of which would have allowed a Kmart to move into town.

"What's refreshing about this evening is we've never wavered from our support of the core," said Rogak. "I'll not forget this night ever, to have all of you show up."

Robertson, that he couldn't find an active, current application for the rezoning. Robertson said that the application had not been filed for three years.

Meanwhile, the message was loud and clear from Bluff City residents who packed the Wood River High School Auditorium if they do not want Kmart in town.

Residents initially lined up at the podium 20 deep to speak and continued to filter to the microphone during the public comment period for the 47 meeting.

Some residents complained that a large retailer would destroy the "small-town" atmosphere of the valley, while some merchants argued the chain would bring business.

"This is an issue that affects everybody in this valley," said Doug Green. "It could be the biggest issue in a long time because it's not an issue of economics, but of the soul and spirit of a place."

"We're here for quality and a way of life," said William Torney. "We came here to get away from the city."

In addition, a petition was submitted to the council by valley resident Tim McNeal with the signatures of 1,200 Twin Falls residents opposing any large retail outlet in Hailey.

One pharmacist added the Kmart would threaten his business.

"Our business will certainly be affected," said Gene Steiner. "Their size is what's scary to me, and they don't take care of their employees."

Some residents also said two business areas north and south of town ter learning of the discrepancies, Ohlenschellen took the information to county Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan.

Because the investigation involves a county employee, Bevan suggested an outside agency look into the matter, and the Idaho Bureau of Investigation was called in.

Mike Burgess, senior special agent with the bureau, said he has not determined if money was misused, but "some checks are not tallying with the books."

Neither he nor Ohlenschellen would say how much money is involved in the investigation.

Any money, possibly involved would be from the 4-H program operating fund, Ohlenschellen said. He esti-ated this fund totals $3,000 to $4,000 a year.

Burgess started looking into the matter in late May and said he hopes to have more information within a couple of weeks.

While the 4-H money does not involve taxpayer funds, Extension does oversees the operating budget.

Ohlenschellen fears the matter might harm the 4-H program.

"Anything this happens it tends to cast a shadow on the program," he said.

Historical Society Board member attempts to save society, museum

By Eric Goodell
Times-News Correspondent

BURLEY — Without help, the Cassia County Historical Society might be just that — history. But plans are in the works to bring new life to the organization and the accompanying Cassia County Museum.

Interest in the 10-member Historical Society Board has dwindled to the point where there is only one active member — Glenn Draper.

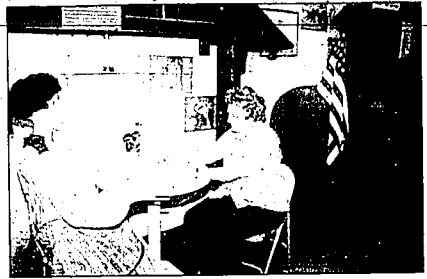

"The overall board has kind of given up," County Commissioner Weldon Beck said Monday at the commissioners' meeting.

Beck recently sent letters to people who he thought would be interested in the historical society. About 25 of them attended the Monday meeting.

"They decided to meet again at 2 p.m. Aug. 9 at the courthouse in an attempt to re-organize the board. Bylaws state that seven of the 10 board members or 10 percent of the 74 paid historical society members must be in attendance for the reorganization to occur.

"After the revamping, bylaws might be changed to reduce the number of board positions. Whatever is done, Draper and Museum Curator Rachel Martindale hope that the museum and historical society get more support.

"Throwing money at the museum is not the answer, Draper said.

ERIC GOODSELL/Mini-Cassia News Service
Cassia County Museum Curator Rachel Martindale, who sits across from an old-time mannequin, hopes that the museum receives more support.

"What we need is more help from the community," he said. Martindale said she's always looking for good volunteers.

"The museum hosts about 3,200 visitors every year. "We get a lot of good comments," Martindale said.

"In fact, she said, many people say it is the best county museum they've been to.

"Many county residents haven't been to the museum or don't even know where it is located, she said. Draper said he remembered several years ago when employees of area companies spent time in the museum.

"We had a lot of help," he said. "Now our volunteers have disappeared."

According to an audit of the museum performed last year, the museum is spending about as much money as it is taking in every year.

Last year, the museum received a $10,000 grant from the county. Memberships to join the historical society cost $5 per couple and $3 per person.

Children stand at Rupert city pool in Neptune Park, waiting for a chance to jump into the water.

Lifeguards, instructors keep Rupert's summer swimming program afloat

By John J. Harberth
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — For someone on the outside it may seem like the easiest job in the world.

Sitting around the swimming pool working on your tan. Then if it gets too hot just go for a little swim.

But there's a lot more to being a lifeguard than just lounging around the pool all day sipping up the rays.

Because without the work of lifeguards and instructors, Rupert's summer swimming program couldn't stay afloat.

Carol Cueva, a Minico High School senior, is both an instructor and lifeguard at the city swimming pool in Neptune Park.

"This is my second year lifeguarding and first year instructing," she said. "They both have their ups and downs."

Cueva said she enjoys lifeguarding because it allows her to give some of the under-privileged and neglected children who come to the pool the extra attention they deserve.

As an instructor she teaches all levels from pre-school on up.

She said the best part of teaching is seeing the kids succeed.

"I like it at the end of a class and all

'I like it at the end of a class and all the kids are fish. You can just see how happy they are with themselves and how proud they are.'

— Carol Cueva, swimming instructor and lifeguard

"the kids are fish," Cueva said. "You can just see how happy they are with themselves and how proud they are."

Both instructors and lifeguards must go through extensive training. Instructors must complete a Water Safety Instruction class.

The 30-hour class teaches everything from the correct strokes to making up lesson plans, according to Amy VanLouten of Rupert, another instructor and lifeguard at the pool.

Students must also attend an additional six-hour class on working with children. Lifeguards must go through a 40-hour class, but not before they have been certified in CPR and first aid.

"They must be certified yearly for CPR and every three years for first aid, VanLouten said.

The swimming program has been part of the Parks and Recreation Department for several years, according to Dave Landrum, the recreation supervisor.

"I took swimming lessons here when I was a kid," added VanLouten, who attends Boise State University.

The swimming program is broken down into five two-week sessions.

"Even with the cold weather the sessions have been maxed out," Landrum said.

"The final session begins Aug. 9, at the pool.

Landrum offered high praise for the young people working as lifeguards and instructors.

"We have an excellent bunch of people here," he said.

Several of the lifeguards have come from the swimming team.

"That's how we get the local youth excited about being a lifeguard," he added.

Cassia County lawyer to recommend lawsuit be filed against Dispose-All

By Eric Goodell
Times-News Correspondent

BURLEY — Cassia County attorney Stephen Bywater says he will recommend a lawsuit be filed against Dispose-All to ensure county landfill ordinances are obeyed.

Bywater said Tuesday he would urge commissioners to file the declaratory judgement against the Boise-based landfill company, which is building a dump on Burley Butte.

The company neglected to submit an application for the landfill Monday, and officials again told commissioners the firm is exempt from zoning and solid waste ordinances.

Bywater said Dispose-All officials did not explain their actions.

Dispose-All President Doug Lomow was not available for comment.

Commissioners say they will grant Dispose-All's permit if it meets the requirements and goes through the proper channels.

But so far commissioners haven't persuaded Dispose-All to submit the forms, including financial and engineering information, as requested.

Bywater said the Monday deadline was set to help establish Dispose-All's intentions and to allow the landfill dispute to be settled "before anyone spent too much money."

Because there wasn't a quorum of commissioners on Monday, no decision was made on what action to take against Dispose-All.

Bywater said the county is monitoring work on Burley Butte.

Susan Duncan, a resident living near the landfill site, said little construction has occurred lately.

Blind inspirational speaker returns to Burley with band to promote 1st album

By John J. Harberth
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — When Craig MacFarlane returns to Burley next month with his band, many of the students that he inspired will be glad to see him.

Unfortunately, he won't be able to see them. That's because MacFarlane is blind.

In early May, he spoke to several hundred Burley High School students with his message of inspiration.

Blindness, he told the audience, was "only a minor inconvenience."

And a look at all that he has accomplished in his 30 years proves him right.

In addition to being a talented musician "mastering" 11 instruments, he is also a gifted athlete.

MacFarlane has earned 136 medals, 103 of them gold, in everything from downhill skiing to wrestling and track and field.

MacFarlane has decided to include Idaho as the final stop of his 32-city U.S. tour, according to Timothy Henriksen, an investment representative at the Edward D. Jones & Co.

MacFarlane has worked at the nationwide financial organization for the past three years as an inspirational speaker.

He is currently on the road promoting his first album. One of the songs on the album, "I'll find love again," is No. 2 on the Canadian charts.

During his coast-to-coast tour, part of the proceeds are donated to a "blind" charity or organization at each stop, Henriksen said.

He said that MacFarlane's tour will be in cities where he has spoken to high school students before. MacFarlane has talked with students at more than 11,000 schools.

MacFarlane and his band will be performing at the Cassia County Fairgrounds at 7 p.m. on Aug. 6.

On Aug. 7, he will be in Blackfoot and Monday, Aug. 9 he will do a final show in Jerome at the high school football field.

Henriksen said some of the money raised from the Burley concert will go to support the Mt. Harrison Foundation, a Mini-Cassia organization attempting to build a performing art center in the area.

Tickets are available at Book Plaza, the Bookstore and Mr. Gas. The cost is $7 for advanced seating and $8 at the gate.

Man says he was threatened with gun

RUPERT — A Rupert man told police two men threatened him with a gun Saturday morning after they slashed one of his tires.

Jeremie Karlson told police he was in front of a house on D Street shortly after 1 a.m. when two men drove up and challenged him to fight, according to the Rupert Police Department.

Karlson said a vehicle stopped next to his pickup, and the driver got out and pointed a pistol at him, police said.

After the suspects drove off Karlson discovered his tire had been punctured.

The suspects were described as male Hispanics, around 17 or 18, wearing long sleeve shirts.

The damage was estimated at $175.

Items reported taken from vehicles

BURLEY — Auto parts and electronic equipment were reported stolen from several vehicles south of Burley Monday, deputies said.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, Rell Dean Baker said the items were taken from property at 1350 S. 9 West.

Missing items included a carburetor, distributor, stereo, speakers and four tires and wheels.

Total loss was placed at $1,880.

City Hall demolition to take place soon

BURLEY — The demolition of the old City Hall isn't expected to take place for a few more days, officials say.

City Clerk Bud Bringer said the Boise-based salvage company is expected to arrive soon to demolish the 70-year-old building.

The new City Hall, in which meetings have been held since late last year, was built just east of the old building.

Olympics worth $456 million to NBC

The Associated Press
NEW YORK Sports' biggest television prize, the Summer Olympics, went to NBC on Tuesday, carrying its biggest price tag ever $456 million.

The International Olympic Committee awarded NBC its third straight Summer Olympics after day-long talks Tuesday with all three networks.

The winning bid, of which 60 percent goes to the organizers, was $55 million more than NBC paid for the Barcelona Olympics, an undertaking that resulted in a $100 million loss for the network.

"As a former resident of the city of Atlanta, I'm proud to be associated with this undertaking," NBC president Bob Wright said. "This is the most important sporting event that will take place in this country in probably 20 years."

And this time, NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol said, "We anticipate making money."

The announcement ended ABC's bid to get back into the Summer Olympics business for the first time since 1984.

the talks without comment, but ABC Sports spokesman Mark Mandell said: "Obviously we were very interested and thought we had a very competitive bid. We're sorry it didn't work out, but it's not the end of the world."

CBS was an early casualty in bidding, dropping out about 45 minutes after a second round of talks began at 2 p.m. EDT.

"As we reviewed the bids submitted to us, it became clear to us that the market is a little bit more complex than it was in the past," IOC vice president and TV negotiator Dick Pound said. "In the final analysis, it became clear to us that the superior bid was submitted by NBC."

NBC lost at least $100 million on the Barcelona telecasts, largely due to the Triple-Net pay-per-view experiment, and also lost an undisclosed sum in Spal in 1988. The pricetag for the Seoul Games was $300 million.

NBC, ABC and CBS, in that order, began offering bids for exclusive U.S. rights to the 1996 Games at about 10 a.m. EDT Tuesday. The first round lasted until about 2 p.m.

"I guess we all go in alone and they make merry with us," Ebersol said when the second round started.

NBC's original bid was $456 million to ABC's $440 million and CBS' $405 million. In the second round of talks, NBC held firm while the two other networks' each bumped their bids by $10 million.

NBC's plans call for 168 hours of coverage, up slightly from the 161 hours it did from Barcelona. Also, to generate more ad revenue, the opening ceremonies will be moved from Saturday afternoon to Friday night in prime time.

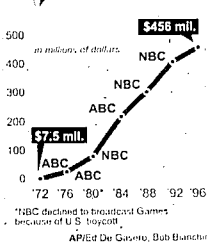

Billy Payne, president of the Atlanta organizing group known as ACOG, initially set his sights on $600 million from U.S. TV for the Atlanta Games, the first in the United States since the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics. At the same time, network sources indicated they would feel more comfortable in the range of $375 million to $400 million.

While less than what the Atlanta organizers wanted, NBC's bid was more than many industry watchers expected.

ABC was considered the front-runner with NBC a close second and CBS trailing the field. In fact, some network watchers believed CBS' bid was only a courtesy to the IOC.

Scandal-plagued soccer team comes under fire again

PARIS The French soccer federation Tuesday condemned Olympique Marseille for barring several television networks from covering its season opener last weekend, and a top television executive urged club owner Bernard Tapie to quit.

The club, under fire over a match-fixing scandal on its way to last season's victory in the European Champions Cup, barred camera crews from the state-owned networks France 2 and France 3, the private channel M6 and the Franco-German channel ARTE.

Marseille's brash owner, Bernard Tapie, who a day earlier had attacked a France 2 crew trying to film his luxury yacht, said the four networks had no contract to film his club's games.

Lower-profile sports enjoy their day in the sun at U.S. Olympic Festival

The Associated Press
SAN ANTONIO Figure skating and swimming are over. Basketball had the day off. Boxing, gymnastics, diving and track and field come later in the week.

Tuesday was reserved for some of the smaller sports in the U.S. Olympic Festival, such as archery, racquetball and speed skating, in which the athletes perform with much zeal but receive far less notice.

Two people who got themselves noticed Tuesday were speed skaters Becky Sundstrom and Todd Porter, each finishing with three gold medals.

Sundstrom, 17, of Glen Ellyn, Ill., added the 1,000- and 3,000-meter titles to the 1,500-meter she won Monday night.

Porter, of Saratoga Springs, N.Y., won the 1,000 and anchored the gold-medal 5,000 relay team. He won at 500 meters Monday night.

On the archery range, Darrell Pace of Hamilton, Ohio, outshot fellow Olympian Jay Bars of Mesa, Ariz., 110-101 to win the gold medal. Pace was Olympic gold medalist in 1976 and 1984, and Bars won gold in 1988.

The women's gold medal went to Janet Schaffer of Mesa, Ariz., who beat 1992 Olympian Jennifer O'Donnell of Farmington Hills, Mich., 106-90.

After qualifying rounds Saturday and Sunday, the archers were seeded and then went head to head by shooting 12 arrows from 70 meters.

"This new Olympic round is an adrenaline giver," Pace said. "If you want a good high, come and shoot a few arrows on this line. I love the pressure of one-on-one competition."

The North baseball team improved to 2-0 with a 10-3 victory over the East (0-2). Andy Thompson of Sun Prairie, Wis., drove in three runs and drew three innings of scoreless relief to get the victory.

Thompson's two-run single tied the score 3-3 in the fifth. The North used at three errors, a hit batsman and three bases-loaded walks to score seven runs in the sixth.

Baseball owners to discuss revenue

The Associated Press
NEW YORK Baseball's ruling executive council on Tuesday called a special major league owners meeting for Aug. 11-13 in Kohler, Wis., to discuss various revenue sharing proposals.

Richard Ravitch, management's chief labor negotiator, wants large-city teams to increase the amount of revenue they share from gate receipts and local broadcasting contracts.

Although the clubs in June unanimously said they would work toward increased revenue sharing, it is not yet clear how much more money large-market teams are willing to give up.

Ravitch said earlier this month that if teams do agree to a plan, he then would make a proposal for a new collective bargaining agreement with the players' association.

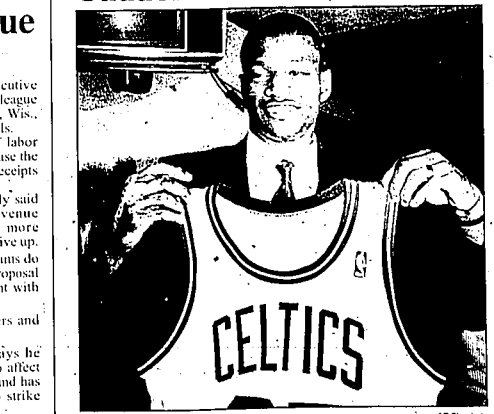

Formal discussions between the owners and players have not taken place in months.

Players' union head Donald Fehr says he believes management might be stalling to affect the timing of a possible work stoppage, and has said players are considering whether to strike later this season.

After Dec. 31, the owners could impose their own work rules.

The sessions in Wisconsin will be the 11th owners meeting in 12 months. They are also scheduled to meet again on Sept. 8-9 at Boston.

High-jumper breaks his own record

The Associated Press
SALAMANCA, Spain Javier Sotomayor of Cuba broke his world record in the high jump Tuesday with a leap of 8 feet, 0 1/2 inches. His old mark of 8-0 had stood for four years.

The bar teetered but did not fall on his second, record-breaking attempt at the Salamanca Invitational track and field meet. Sotomayor leaped from the pit to be mobbed by athletes.

"This record could last several more years," Sotomayor said.

Sotomayor, 25, set the previous record on July 29, 1989 in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

"I wanted to set the record here because it's a small city in which I feel like I'm in Cuba," he said.

"The people recognize me in the street and ask how I'm doing, the children surround me and I find myself in a good mental state."

American Mike Powell, the world-record holder in the long jump, won his event with a mark of 28-6 1/2, longest in the world this year.

"I want to jump nine meters this year and I thought I could do it in Salamanca," said Powell, whose jump translated to 8-70 in meters. "But records aren't easy. I'm very happy with my performance at this meet."

Cuba's Ivan Pedrosa took second with a leap of 27-1 1/2.

Open opens with power

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS, Idaho Open golf begins building toward its Sunday climax today with a special power display to go along with a junior clinic and club giveaway.

The first projects of the five-day program begin at 1 p.m. at Twin Falls Municipal Clubhouse with Pepsi-Cola hosting junior golfers with a luncheon. Immediately following, Rocky Mountain Section PGA members will help trim 150 clubs to junior sizes to fit the children attending the clinic.

The clubs will go to the first 150 attending.

Two-time national long drive champion Art Sellinger will conduct the clinic. And when that is over, he will officiate at the section's long drive contest, which will send its six longest drivers to the district championship at Murray, Utah, and a chance at the national finals in Florida.

Professionals and amateurs will compete in the power event. East year's contest turned up a large number of 300 yard plus drives. Bob Kittel of Woodland, Calif., won that at 358 yards, 1 foot and by 12 yards over runner-up Dan Hernandez of Boise.

The action resumes Thursday morning with Jackpot Golf Club hosting the pro-sponsor tournament. It begins with a 10 a.m. shotgun start and is sponsored by Taylor Made. A dinner for the field following play is sponsored by West One Bank.

The pro-sponsor offers irons and woods to the winners, irons for second place and woods for third place teams.

Friday morning gets the competition underway. The event, which offers $50,000 in prizes, has attracted a record number of professionals, according to PGA Section news releases.

Celtics player collapses, dies while shooting baskets

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) Reggie Lewis, the Boston Celtics star who collapsed during a practice session Monday, died Tuesday night when he choked while shooting baskets in a light workout.

The 27-year-old captain fell to the gym floor late Tuesday afternoon at the team's practice facility at Brandeis University. There was no organized team practice.

Local paramedics found him in "complete cardiac arrest" and he was pronounced dead at 7:30 p.m. E.D.I. at Waltham-Weston Hospital.

"We've lost a very treasured member of our family today," Celtics senior executive Vice President Dave Gavitt said from the team's offices. "It's a time of incredible grief."

Gavitt called Lewis "a gentle, kind, wonderful, considerate guy who just had so much to give to the city of Boston."

Lewis was taken to Brandeis at about 4 p.m. He was admitted in critical condition at Waltham-Weston Hospital at 5:14 p.m., and Nick DiLessa, the hospital's vice president of patient care services.

Ann Weiss, who was at the Brandeis gym, said Lewis was not doing anything too strenuous.

"When I looked over, Reggie was on the floor," she said. "We went over to look at him and he was gasping for air."

He said Lewis was limp and shaking and after a few minutes, "he stopped breathing."

Deo Dossion, a senior on Northeastern's basketball team, said he spoke with Lewis on Sunday about plans to start working out with about 12 local college players.

Dossion said they were to begin practicing Monday, but the session was pushed back until 6 p.m. Tuesday because many players didn't have transportation. He said Lewis had been taken from Brandeis when the players arrived.

Lewis, a first-round draft pick out of Northeastern in 1987 and Boston's top scorer in the past two seasons, originally was diagnosed with a caring-threatening heart disorder after he collapsed April 29 against Charlotte.

The 6-foot-7 swingman got a second opinion that he was suffering from a nerve ailment and might be able to resume his career.

Lewis' Celtics first-round draft pick in 1987 out of Northeastern, had not participated in any team practices since his collapse April 29 and was preparing for a pickup game Tuesday.

After that episode, Lewis said he was scared and "started having flashbacks to that Hank Gathers thing." Gathers, a star at Loyola Marymount, died of a heart problem after collapsing during a game March 4, 1990.

Among those at the hospital Tuesday night were Celtic teammate Rick Fox and former

Lewis' death raises legal questions

Boston Globe

BOSTON — Even as Reggie Lewis' survival was hanging in the balance Tuesday night, the cross-sounding but inevitable legal questions began to surface. Questions such as whether the Boston Celtics are in any way liable for his being back on a court at Brandeis University and whether doctors who gave him the green light somehow opened themselves to lawsuits.

The standard for medical malpractice is a straightforward one: "It's what the average, reasonably prudent doctor in that specialty should have diagnosed, diagnosed under the circumstances he faced," said Neil Sugarman, president of the Massachusetts Academy of Trial Attorneys and a malpractice specialist in Boston.

Celtics stars Dave Cowens and M.L. Carr. "He was a great athlete," Cowens said. "He was one of the guys who bucked the odds and became a professional athlete."

In 1986, the Celtics announced the death of Len Bias, the team's top draft choice. Bias died two days after being selected, his death attributed to cocaine use.

On the one hand, Sugarman and other lawyers say, that standard is quite broad, and Lewis' most recent physician, Dr. Gilbert Mudge, is highly respected in his field. Yet Mudge's judgment that Lewis was OK was in conflict with that of at least some of the 12 members of a medical team assembled last spring to diagnose the Celtics' captain after he collapsed on the court — and that disagreement could become the focus of a lawsuit.

"It's not a question of balancing numbers, how many more doctors are on one side than another," Sugarman explained. "And since medicine is still an inexact science, sometimes there are different diagnoses considered; more than one, two, three or four diagnoses are possible that all may be within the realm of respectability."

Lewis did not participate in the Celtics rookie-free agent camp from July 11-14, although he attended some of the sessions.

He wasn't part of the Celtics group that played in a summer league that ended Sunday in New York.

Lewis averaged 20.8 points a game in each of the past two seasons. He had 17 points in the opening playoff game against Charlotte in which he collapsed in the first quarter.

Lewis was taken to New England Baptist Hospital after the game but left after three days and entered Brigham and Women's Hospital, both in Boston.

Tests at New England Baptist were analyzed by 11 cardiologists, none having examined Lewis or met with him. Lewis was told he had a serious heart condition.

New England Baptist and the Celtics released a statement saying Lewis had "cardiac abnormalities." Team physician Arnold Scheller said Lewis had a life-threatening condition and probably would not play again. Scheller was not immediately available for comment Tuesday.

Lewis underwent additional tests at Brigham and Women's under supervision of Dr. Gilbert Mudge.

On May 10, Mudge announced the findings, saying Lewis has a "normal athlete's heart" and he was optimistic Lewis could play again although he had not been given clearance.

He said doctors conducted 25 tests telling the heart whether to speed up or slow down. Mudge was not available for comment.

But hours later, one of the 11 doctors who originally viewed the results at New England Baptist said he still believed Lewis had a heart problem.

Fire sale continues: Padres hit lowest major-league payroll

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres, the minimum-wage kings of major-league baseball, finally cut into the bone with their budget knife. And fans might as well forget about next year, because baseball's cheapest team is building for the mid-1990s.

The magic number now for the Padres is 109, as in $109,000, the minimum big-league salary. Thirteen players — more than half the active roster — now earn that sum.

The Padres reduced their payroll to the lowest in the majors by trading pitchers Bruce Hurst and Greg Harris to the Colorado Rockies for catcher Brad Ausmus, pitcher Andy Ashby and minor-leaguer on Monday.

On Tuesday, they apparently reached their goal by putting reserve infielder Kurt Stillwell ($1.75 million salary) on waivers and designated catcher Bob Geren for assignment. They also purchased for contract of outfielder Jarvis Brown from Class AAA Las Vegas. Brown becomes the 12th rookie on the roster.

With Stillwell's salary out of the way, the Padres' player payroll fell to $10.3 million, a reduction of $18.9 million since opening day.

The list of talent that has been traded or allowed to leave via free agency since last season is staggering, including 1992 home running Fred McGriff and batting champion Gary Sheffield, All-Stars Benito Santiago and Tony Fernandez, and major Randy Myers.

But Tom Werner, the managing partner of the team's 15-man ownership group, said Tuesday that he views the Padres' moves as less of a fire sale and more of an adjustment to economics.

"I think that part of what has happened in baseball is that owners have acted like drunken sailors in the way they've spent so that player salaries have escalated way out of control, and markets go up and down," Werner said. "We couldn't sustain a $30 million payroll in San Diego and survive."

"I've been saying and I think people don't want to hear it, but here in San Diego we are in a very difficult geographic market, and I don't think anybody in our circumstances would act any differently unless they're willing to throw millions and millions of dollars into a hole."

While Werner presses for revenue sharing between the larger markets and smaller markets such as San Diego, rookie general manager Randy Smith has been dealing well-paid veterans for youth.

Smith said the 35-year-old Hurst, who's still recovering from October shoulder surgery, wasn't in the team's plans for 1994 and that the Padres plan to give Harris the rest of his four-year contract he wanted. Harris is eligible for free agency after next season.

"We're building for late '94, '95 and '96," Smith said. "We feel that it's important that we know who's going to be part of that. With Greg Tuesday was a day of practice for the basketball teams. The North men and South women concluded most of their practice Wednesday. The North men will play the West for the gold tonight and the South women will meet the East.

"Thank God we have practice Wednesday. At least we'll be able to work on some things. If we come back and win on Wednesday, nobody will remember this game."

The North, behind Rodney Eford of Marquette, overcame an early deficit to win Monday's game. Eford scored 22 points and had nine rebounds, while Norm Caranahan recruited 11 rebounds and 19 points.

Blue Jays soar past Orioles with rally

TORONTO (AP) — Pat Borders beat out an infield single in the eighth inning Tuesday night, capping a three-run rally that lifted the Toronto Blue Jays to a 6-5 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Paul Molitor hit a one-out infield single and Joe Carter also singled, John Olerud greeted Jim Poole (1-1) with a single to lead the bases, bringing Greg Olson on for the Orioles. He fanned Tony Fernandez for the second out, but Ed Sprague flied a two-run double to tie it.

Borders followed with a sharp grounder to shortstop. Cal Ripken went to his left and made a diving stab, but his throw was too late to get the slow-footed Borders, who slid head first into the bag as Olerud scored.

White Sox 7, Indians 4

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas went 4-for-4 with two home runs and five RBIs and Jack McDowell became the first 10-game winner in baseball as Chicago won for the 13th time in 18 games.

Thomas, 11-for-18 (61.1) with four homers and nine RBIs in his last five games, hit a solo homer off Jeff Mutis (2-3) in the sixth and a three-run shot in the seventh, an inning later to rally the White Sox from a 3-2 deficit.

McDowell (14-6) worked seven innings and Roberto Hernandez got the last two outs for his 21st save.

Yankees 5, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Danny Tartabull homered in New York's four-run second and Michigan native Jim Abbott won for the first time in Detroit in four years.

Abbott (8-8), from Flint, Mich., won his third straight but for only the second time in his career at Detroit. He won his first start there in 1989, but failed in four consecutive starts there. Steve Farr earned his 21st save.

Hill Gaultskow (6-0) allowed four runs on four hits in just 1.2-3 innings, leaving after walking three straight batters to force in two runs.

Rangers 1, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY — Rafael Palmeiro's home run in the seventh inning broke up Kevin Appier's month-long bid to Texas for the first time.

Palmeiro's 21st homer, on a 1-0 pitch, was the only hit Appier allowed in his third complete game of the season. Appier (11-5) fanned 11 and had retired 16 straight Rangers before the drive into the Royals' bullpen.

Brewers 3, Red Sox 2

MILWAUKEE — Jaime Navarro pitched five-hit ball for eight-plus innings for his first victory since June 16 and Robin Yount hit his 25th career homer as Milwaukee won its third straight for only the second time this season.

Colorado shortstop Freddie Bonavides fires a throw to first Tuesday to complete a double play as Atlanta's Ron Gant slides into second.

Navarro (6-8), who had lost five straight, retired 12 straight in a row in one stretch and was hurt only by Aro Vaughn's 15th home run, a solo shot in the seventh, Jesse Cravens got the last three outs for his second save.

Milwaukee, which ended Boston's 10-game winning streak Monday, beat Red Sox right-hander Danny Darwin (9-8) for the first time in three tries this season.

Phillies 10, Cardinals 7

PHILADELPHIA — John Kruk went 5-for-5 and drove in three runs as the Philadelphia Phillies started their key series against St. Louis by beating the Cardinals 10-7 Tuesday night.

Dave Hollins added a two-run homer as the Phillies extended their lead over the Cardinals to five games in the NL East.

Reliever Roger Mason (2-7) earned the victory with 2-3 innings. Mitch Williams got the last three outs for his 27th save.

Padres 8, Cubs 0

CHICAGO — Andy Benes pitched a five-hitter and Tom Gwynn had five hits and drove in three runs, leading San Diego past Chicago. Benes and Gwynn are the only big stars left on the Padres after cost-cutting trades this season.

It was the second shutout and fourth complete game of the season for Benes (11-7), who struck out eight and walked none.

It was the third time this season Gwynn had five hits in a game. He singled his first three times up and doubled twice.

SEATTLE (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. of the Seattle Mariners hit a 441-foot grand slam in the third inning against Minnesota on Tuesday night to move within one game of the major-league record of eight consecutive games with a home run.

It's the third longest home run streak in major league history, trailing only the eight-game streak that Dale Long had for Pittsburgh in 1956 and Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees matched in 1987.

Griffey, 23, hit Kevin Tapan's third pitch over the wall in centerfield for his fifth career slam and 29th home run of the season, tied with Juan Gonzalez of Texas and Barry Bonds of San Francisco for the major league lead.

New York over Florida. Dwight Gooden (10-10) pitched seven innings for the victory, giving up three runs and five hits. John Franco got the last four outs for his seventh save.

Kent, who has 12 home runs, also hit a three-run 1-2-3 inning off host Pat Rapp (1-3). Rapp pitched 7.2 innings, allowing four runs on six hits.

Expos 8, Pirates 6

PITTSBURGH — pinch-hitter Lou Luster singled in the tiebreaking run in a two-run eighth inning as Montreal beat Pittsburgh after blowing a four-run lead.

Tailing 6-5, the Expos tied the score against Joel Johnson (0-1) on consecutive doubles by Larry Walker and Moses Alou. After an intentional walk and a fly out, Luster grounded a single up the middle for his ninth pinch hit in 26 at bats (.346).

Astrus 6, Reds 5

HOUSTON — Kevin Bass' three-run homer powered Houston past Cincinnati.

Tom Browning (7-6) was the loser, going only 2 1-3 innings and giving up six runs on eight hits.

Winner Brian Burrows (4-3) allowed five runs and seven hits in 5 2-3 innings. Dwayne Jones got the final three outs for his 21st save.

Braves 10, Rockies 5

DENVER — Fred McGriff hit two home runs, including an inside-the-park shot, and drove in four runs as the Atlanta Braves beat the Colorado Rockies 10-5 Tuesday night.

The Braves are 9-0 against the Rockies this season, averaging 7.1 runs a game.

John Smoltz (9-8) pitched ten-hit ball over eight innings for the victory as the Braves won for the seventh time in eight games since McGriff's arrival. Since then, Atlanta has scored 81 runs.

Coleman may face charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prosecutors said Tuesday they will wait for results on explosives tests before deciding whether to file charges against New York Mets outfielder Vince Coleman, who allegedly tossed a lighted firecracker that injured three people.

"We have not made a decision and probably won't until the end of the week, probably Thursday," said Michael Botula, spokesman for the Los Angeles district attorney's office. "We are waiting word from explosives lab to see what kind of explosive it was."

If a felony charge is filed, the district attorney's office gets the case. If a misdemeanor charge is filed, the city attorney's office would handle it.

William Hodgman, the deputy district attorney, met with Coleman's lawyer Tuesday.

"We're just not going to make any comment until all the facts are in," attorney Michael Navair of Santa Monica said. "We hope Vince is presumed innocent."

Coleman was not scheduled to be in the starting lineup Tuesday night against the Florida Marlins and no reason was given.

"The Mets will have no comment on the case since no decision has been forthcoming from Los Angeles," Mets assistant general manager Gerry Hunsicker said. "Obviously, we're not happy with it, and we don't comment on that kind of conduct."

Third baseman Howard Johnson said, "It's embarrassing for the New York Mets. I hope this will teach some guys a lesson down the road."

The incident occurred Saturday in the players' parking lot at Dodger Stadium. Coleman, teammate Bobby Bonilla and Eric Davis of the Dodgers were in a Jeep. Davis, the driver, said the firecracker belonged to Coleman.

Reds like idea of expanded playoffs

CINCINNATI (AP) — If baseball's expanded playoff format was in effect this year, the Cincinnati Reds wouldn't just be in turmoil. They'd also be in playoff contention.

That's reason enough for Reds general manager Jim Bowden to support it.

Instead of having to make up a double-digit deficit with San Francisco, the fifth-place Reds would have a chance to catch second-place Atlanta in the National League West and make the playoffs. All the talk about next year would turn to present tense. "Now you're in the pennant race," Bowden said.

Bowden owners voted last month to expand the playoffs for the first time in 25 years, adding two more teams from each league beginning in 1994. Only the Detroit Tigers and Texas Rangers opposed the move.

The format will mean more television revenues for owners, who also hope it increases interest in late-season games because more teams would be in playoff contention.

"Your attendance would be a lot better during the summer, especially in September," Bowden said.

Bowden also likes the idea that a team with the Reds' record still could wind up playing for the pennant. The league's highest-paid lineup got off to a poor start and has been mired in fifth place in the division since late May, in part because of injuries.

"Those teams that are penalized with injuries for a good portion of the season, once they get everyone healthy, if they get their act together, they really might be the best team in baseball," Bowden said. "But they might finish in second place because of the injuries."

The owners didn't decide how playoff teams will be paired for the best-of-5 first round. Owners are expected to vote on that aspect of the playoffs in September.

One option is to have the top two teams in each division play. Bowden, who is representing Reds owner Marge Schott during her one-year suspension, favors having first-place teams cross over and play the No. 2 teams in the other division.

"For the integrity of the game, I'm supportive of the crisscross theory," he said. "Usually at the end of the season, you're playing mostly clubs in your own division and you can make a difference in who the second-place club is."

"There's a possibility you could sit certain players down or get pitchers ready for the post-season and have a direct effect on who that second-place club is."

The Reds have a history of heartbreaks that would displease them in supporting an expanded playoff.

They had the best overall record in the major leagues during the 1981 strike year, but finished second in both halves of the season. They have finished second in the division five of the last eight years.

Of course, an expanded playoff also would have made it more difficult for them to win the World Series in 1990. They would have had to play either the New York Mets — the No. 2 team in the East — or the Los Angeles Dodgers — second in the West — before advancing to the NL championship series. They were 6-6 against the Mets and 9-9 against the Dodgers during the 1990 regular season.

Conflicts follow Ryan to Houston Oilers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Was it just another training camp fight or a sign of what Buddy Ryan hath wrought?

On Monday, Houston Oilers running back Spencer Tillman was flattened by linebacker Wilber Marshall. On Tuesday, Tillman reacted quickly when he was shoved down by linebacker Lamar Lathon during a morning workout at the Trinity University campus.

Players on offense and defense were laughing as they left the field. Lathon and Tillman eventually shook hands.

But Lathon said a message is being carried out by the defense, which is responding to Ryan's instructions to play more aggressively. He suggested there could be more fights.

"(Ryan) wants us in practice to wrap up and make the tackle, not just run by him and say you have him," Lathon said. "It makes you better practice habits and puts you in better focus for practice." Ryan, starting his first season as Oilers defensive coordinator, is introducing the Oilers to the 46-defense, with its aggressive style of blitzes and bump-and-run tactics.

The defensive methods don't always make the offense happy, but Lathon said he's not concerned.

"For the most part, the offense doesn't like to practice against this defense," Lathon said. "Our thing right now is we feel we're the biggest squad on the field and we're going out every day and try to prove it."

The Oilers ranked high in team defense last season but they've faded in the second half of their final playoff games the past two seasons. Ryan is preaching victories instead of statistics.

"If those guys (offense) have thin skins and they don't understand aggression and they don't understand coming out here and getting some of their frustrations out, then they're in the wrong business," Lathon said.

"I don't really don't care how my teammates react to that. I think everybody's mind-set is to leave it on the field. So if people don't understand that, it's no big deal to me."

George stays away from Colts' camp

The Associated Press

Jeff George is not a happy camper. The Indianapolis Colts quarterback, who reportedly wants to be traded, is being fined $4,000 a day for missing training camp.

George's fine total increased to $52,000 Tuesday, but there was still no sign of him at training camp in Anderson, Ind.

"I've had no contact from him at all," Colts coach Ted Marchibroda said. "I haven't heard a word from him."

If George continues to miss practice, he may not be ready to start the Colts' exhibition opener Aug. 7 at Seattle.

"The more time he misses, the certainly can't help him," Marchibroda said.

George was due in camp July 15, but he reportedly stayed in Fort Myers, Fla., before returning to Indiana on Monday.

Bills Defensive end Bruce Smith made it official Tuesday, signing a four-year, $13.5-million contract with the Buffalo Bills.

NFL training camps

"I'm not complaining, but it that way," said Smith, the NFL's defensive player of the year in 1990. "I'm very happy. I'm a wealthy person."

The contract is almost identical to the one signed last week by Bills running back Thurman Thomas.

Dolphins Miami safety Louie Oliver signed a one-year contract, giving him a shot at the free-agent market next year. The strategy is risky for Oliver because the NFL is expected to have a salary cap in place for the 1994 season.

Oliver signed for an estimated $900,000. He brought a two-year, $2.8-million deal. After Dolphins cornerback J.B. Brown signed a two-year, $2.5-million deal last week, Oliver said he was worth more.

Beats Chicago cornerback Donnell Woolford signed a three-year contract extension worth more than $3 million. Woolford led the Beats with seven interceptions last year.

Dallas' Clayton Holmes, left, goes up to grab an interception Tuesday as Los Angeles Raiders receiver Alexander Wright looks on.

Dannell's abilities," said Ted Phillips, the Bears' chief financial officer. "We believe he is probably one of the top cornerbacks in the league."

The moving of Kanavus McGhee from outside linebacker to defensive end is officially being classified as a job opportunity by the New York Giants.

The chances are just as good it's a make-or-break opportunity for the 1991 second-round choice, who hasn't done much in two seasons with the Giants.

In 30 games, McGhee has only 12 tackles, which averages out to $50,000 a tackle based on his $300,000 annual salary.

Browns Hassan Jones, a 29-year-old wide receiver who signed with Cleveland as a free agent after seven years with Minnesota, retired.

As a backup last year with the Vikings, Jones caught 22 passes for 308 yards and four touchdowns. He was an injured reserve for four games with a back injury.

Phoenix Suns player questioned in woman's slaying

GLENDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Phoenix Suns forward Jerrod Mustaf was questioned about the murder of a woman described as an acquaintance, his agent said Tuesday.

Glendale police said Alicia Hayes, 29, was found shot to death in her apartment Saturday morning. Glendale is a suburb of Phoenix.

"He has not been arrested," said Michael Starham, Mustaf's agent. "He has been questioned and has been fully cooperative with the authorities."

Police spokesman Marshall Downen declined to comment about any aspect of the investigation, including whether Mustaf had been questioned.

Starham said Hayes was an acquaintance of Mustaf, who played sparingly last season.

"They weren't boyfriend and girlfriend, as I understand it," Starham said from Greenbelt, Md.

Starham said Mustaf left Phoenix on Saturday and was stopped by security officials upon his arrival at Washington's National Airport.

"He was told to call the Glendale Police Department and he did. Then he called me," Starham said. "It does look coincidental. But he's just one of 10 or 15 people being asked about a lady who appears to have been murdered."

Hazel and Alvin Hayes told The Phoenix Gazette their daughter lived alone and had moved from Milwaukee last year to be closer to them.

They told the Gazette their daughter, who was a bank employee, was pregnant. They also said she was cautious and would never have opened her apartment door to strangers.

Joe Walton puts playbook on diet for college football

CORANAPOLIS, Pa. (AP) — Don't worry, prospective Robert Morris College football players. Former NFL coach Joe Walton promises to trim his voluminous playbook.

A little Walton said the famous playbook that so many Pittsburgh Steelers disliked will be streamlined in his shift from pro football to college football. Walton, the Steelers' offensive coordinator in 1990-91, has never coached college football.

But Walton also said Tuesday the playbook "will be a good text to see if the players will get through college."

"One of the myths I'm looking forward to dispelling is the difference between coaching at this level and in the NFL," he said. "Teaching and coaching, it won't be any problem because I feel certain we will attract bright young men to Robert Morris."

Robert Morris will field its first team in 1994.

"To have someone of Joe's stature, both nationally and in western Pennsylvania, coming to Robert Morris is tremendous," athletic director Bob Mellee said.

Walton will not only be adjusting to college football, the college will be adjusting to football. Under NCAA regulations that go into effect in 1994-95, Division I basketball schools must compete in at least I-AA in football if they also field a football team.

But, unlike most Division I-AA football schools, Robert Morris won't offer scholarships. The Colonials thus will be at a distinct disadvantage when recruiting against bordering state schools such as Youngstown State and Marshall, which have thrived in I-AA.

Walton of Beaver Falls is a former tight end at the University of Pittsburgh. He played for the Washington Redskins and New York Giants from 1957-64. After scouting for the Giants, he was an assistant coach with the Giants and Washington Redskins before coaching the New York Jets to a 33-57-1 record from 1983-89.

The Jets were 11-5 in 1985 and 10-6 in 1986 and made the playoffs both seasons, but Walton was fired after a 4-12 season in 1989.

Walton then returned to his native western Pennsylvania but the Steelers' offense mostly floundered in his two seasons. Many players, particularly quarterback Bubby Brister, complained his playbook was too crammed and overloaded with jargon.

Food facts

Book includes recipes for outdoor adventure

Like peanut butter? Especially when you need an energy fix?

Then probably you'll love a mixture of peanut butter, honey, margarine, powdered milk, sunflower seeds and raisins: It's a power combination guaranteed to give you vigor enough to jog up a mountain.

That's one of purposes behind the 150 recipes in a paperback called "The Upscale Outdoor Cookbook," by Carl Taylor-Carlson, president of Venture West Inc., in Milwaukee, who has been leading adventure travel tours since 1982.

The recipes are from dishes she's made while camping, backpacking, canoeing and skiing cross-country.

Exotic-sounding dishes such as ham-and-herb pasta, chicken tarragon stew, couscous and beef, and riverbank Kahlua ice cream are included in the collection. And although Taylor-Carlson talks about such techniques as starting brownies on an automobile engine, the recipes also are intended for quick meals at home.

"The Upscale Outdoor Cookbook" is $8 from Serendipity Inc., P.O. Box 17163, Milwaukee, Wis., 53217; or call 414-449-1600.

Americans' tastes change as 1980s lose their appeal

We're just a rebellious people, it seems. We rebel against our parents, school, church, authority of most every kind — and now we're rebelling against an entire decade, reports Family Circle magazine.

"There's a growing backlash against '80s Puritanism. We all want to be healthy, but not dieted," registered dietitian Susan Male Smith says.

Her list of the "in" foods and things of the decade include garlic, juicing, "near" beer, pizza, bacon, broccoli, pasta, grilling, blenders, takeout food, dinners, antioxidant vitamins, lifetime eating, clear anything and low-fat frozen yogurt.

And those '80s "ins" that are now out: citrus, designer water, cocktails, fast-food burgers, oat bran, arugula, sushi, frying, food processing, microwaving, restaurants, "stress formula" vitamins, liquid diets, artificial colors and sorbet.

Bored eating cold cereal? Play tic-tac-toe with it

Here's a good excuse to play with your food: Cheerios has added Xs to its boxes of little Os. They've even put a detachable game board on the back of the box — to play tic-tac-toe, of course.

The new version of Cheerios is scheduled to be available nationwide this month. It's the first time Cheerios has changed the shape of its product since the little "O's" made their debut in 1941. However, General Mills only plans to offer the product through September.

Popular "baby" carrots are carved up adults

Have you noticed baby carrots on your grocery's produce shelves?

Sales are booming — in fact, producers say they've increased between 30 and 50 percent.

Only thing is, these aren't "baby" carrots at all. They're jumbo carrots that have been cut down and peeled so they're ready to eat. Growers introduced them about three years ago, and they caught on.

Look for carrots that have a healthy reddish orange color. The smaller the core, the sweeter the carrot. If the baby carrots have a whitish cast, immerse them in water; they're just a little dehydrated.

Carrots are rich in beta carotene.

Survey: Urge to economize loses its appeal in past year

Shoppers are pinching fewer pennies this year — using fewer coupons and spending less time monitoring newspaper ads for specials.

According to a nationwide survey of more than 2,000 shoppers conducted earlier this year by the Food-Marketing Institute, consumer efforts to economize have fallen off slightly since 1992.

Last year 45 percent of all shoppers passed the ads for specials before they shopped. This year only 40 percent are doing so. AS for coupons, only 36 percent of shoppers used them all the time; in last year's survey, 43 percent said they did.

But shoppers haven't given up all their economizing ways. In fact, there has been an increase in the number who buy more store brands or lower-priced brands instead of the more expensive national brands.

Alice Schenk combines a tangy collection of fresh and canned fruit for her prize-winning salad.

And the winner is ...

Fruit salad proves cool summer treat, favorite in outdoor/picnic contest

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Once again, farm cooking triumphs: The winner of The Times-News outdoor-picnic recipe contest is Rupert farm wife Alice Schenk.

Schenk grew up cooking, but she credits her mother-in-law with helping her fine tune the art.

"I married into a German family," she said, "and my mother-in-law gave me her German recipes."

Schenk's picnic contest winner, simply called fruit salad, isn't a German dish, but it's one of the dishes passed down to Schenk from mother-in-law Vt Schenk. The elder Schenks live a mile down the road.

And there's a new generation of Schenks testing the cooking on the family sugar beet farm. Alice Schenk's children, Megan, 10, Matthew, 7 and Sarah, almost 5, are eager to gobble up Mom's hobby.

"Megan's starting to dabble in cooking," her mother said.

Meanwhile, Alice Schenk is working on her master's degree in health education, coaching track at Minto High School and doing some writing for the Mindoka News.

Several Schenk family recipes have appeared in Successful Farming magazine, and others are scheduled to appear in fall and winter issues of Quick and Easy Country Cooking.

The outdoor picnic recipe contest was a snap for Schenk. "My husband is a deacon at the Paul Baptist Church," she said, "so we go to lots of potlucks and picnics."

Here is Schenk's winning recipe, along with the two runner-up recipes. Other recipes submitted in the contest will be featured at a later date.

Schenk said this salad is one of her all-time favorites — for picnics, for the field and for potlucks. It's quick and easy, too.

Try a twist to summer ice cream.

Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph

Vary your ice-cream creations by trying some of these suggestions from the National Dairy Board and the Western Dairy Farmers' Association:

- Red, White 'n' Blueberry Parfait: Layer vanilla and strawberry ice cream with strawberries and blueberries. Top with sweetened whipped cream.
- Banana Crunch: Layer banana ice cream with crushed toffee. Top with whipped cream and a sprinkling of crushed toffee.
- Cocommy Fudge Bakes: Roll scoops of vanilla or butter pecan ice cream in toasted coconut. Place in single layer in freezer and freeze until firm. Serve drizzled with hot fudge sauce.
- Double Raspberry Coupe: Layer vanilla ice cream and raspberry sauce in tall glasses with raspberry purée. Top with whipped cream and fresh raspberries.
- All-American Favorite: Top a brownie with vanilla or chocolate chip ice cream. Drizzle with hot fudge sauce and/or butterscotch topping.
- Gatumed Cookie Deluxe: Top a large, soft, chewy-style oatmeal cookie with butter almond or butter pecan ice cream; drizzle with caramel ice cream sauce. Graham crackers, cookies or wafers also can be used.
- Strawberry Pie: Arrange scoops of strawberry ice cream in purchased chocolate crumb crust. Drizzle with strawberry and chocolate toppings. Freeze until firm. Garnish with fresh strawberries.
- Pictures Good Enough to Eat: Cut a block of ice cream into serving-size slices; freeze until firm. Serve on individual plates along with an array of small candies, licorice laces, chocolate chips, toasted coconut, berries and sliced fruits that can be used to create funny faces, cars, scenes, etc.
- Rainbow Dome: Use several pints of ice cream, each a different flavor and color. With a spoon, line a 1-quart mixing bowl with layers of slightly softened ice cream, alternating flavors, as much of the ice cream as possible is used. Firmly pack the ice cream into the bowl and smooth the top; freeze until firm. Unmold by quickly dipping bowl into hot water; invert onto a serving plate and freeze until firm. To serve, cut in wedges.
- Watermelon Bowl: A variation on the rainbow dome — line a 1-quart mixing bowl with 2 pints softened ice sherbet. Mix chocolate chips into softened raspberry sherbet; fill center of bowl and smooth the top. Freeze until firm. Unmold by quickly dipping bowl into hot water; invert onto a serving plate and freeze until firm. To serve, cut in wedges.
- Peanut Butter 'n' Jelly Shake: Blend peanut butter and favorite jelly in blender until smooth; add vanilla ice cream and milk and blend until desired consistency. Pour into tall glasses.

People showed concern with horse roundup

Thank you to Linda and Larry Martin of Mountain Home, an unidentified gentleman and his son, the emergency medical services and the sheriff's department of Elmore County for their assistance in the Bennett Mountains over the Fourth of July weekend.

The man and his son, whose names I didn't get, rounded up our horses and sent for help, offered the calming presence and flagged down more assistance.

The Martins, although strangers to us, prepared to ride in search of any injured persons, presented medical help for our horses and were very helpful. The EMS and sheriff's department were headed in our direction.

The main thing that stands out in my mind was the genuine concern and willingness from people.

If there was ever a disaster, these are the people I'd like to have around. They have a lot of heart and set a great example that I won't ever forget.

Mom OK following heart attack while on vacation

On June 9, as my mother and I were traveling through Twin Falls to attend my son's graduation in Washington, my mother suffered a cardiac arrest.

I would like to say thank you to all those who assisted in the emergency treatment and care: Brent Jussell, who started cardiopulmonary resuscitation within seconds; Pete Snyder, who assisted Jussell; paramedics Ken Baisch, Scott Rairigh, Stephanie Hillius and Jeff Webster; nurses Jackie Turner, Joyce Chaffey, Tim Wangler and Jennie Peterson; Drs. Ronald Fullmer and Wayne Wright; the personnel in the intensive care unit; second floor nurses; Darlene Schiers of Pocatello; and others whose names I don't know but are remembered in my heart.

After two weeks in the hospital, mother flew home with a new pacemaker and is doing well. Twin Falls and its people will always have a special place in my heart. May God bless each of you.

Love with a married man: Mostly pain and little gain

DEAR ABBY: Five or six years ago, you printed two letters in the same column dealing with the hopelessness of being in love with a married man. Will you please print them again? I carried them in my wallet, but my purse was stolen.

NEEDS REINFORCEMENT
DEAR NEEDS: Wise is the woman who admits that she needs reinforcement; here they are:

DEAR ABBY: This is probably just like a million other letters you've received from women who have had affairs with married men. But this one contains a piece of advice that hasn't been emphasized nearly enough.

Last year I started seeing an absolutely fantastic guy from work. I knew he was married, but we played it cool and thought we could handle it. It was terrific while it lasted, but it had to come to an end. (The old story: We got too serious. He didn't want to hurt his wife and kids. Then he got "noble" and told me he couldn't allow me to invest any more time in a man who couldn't marry me.)

I'm not blaming anybody but myself. I'm a mature woman and should

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

have known better. The moral to this story is: If you must have an affair, don't choose someone you will see at work every day. When it's over, the daily contact is torture.

STILL HIRING
DEAR STILL: You seem to have overlooked another "must" or two: "Thou shalt not commit adultery" and "Thou shalt not steal." Read on.

DEAR ABBY: May I give you readers the benefit of my very valuable experience? I address this to any woman who is "in love" with a married man.

Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays.

Never call him at home. Don't ever expect him to take you out in public, but be prepared to entertain him at your place. He may bring a bottle of wine or the steaks occasionally, but in actual dollars and cents, you will spend more on him than he'll spend on you.

Never depend on him in times of personal crisis.

Don't believe him when he tells you his wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and hasn't slept with him for 10 years.

Don't ever expect his wife to divorce him, even if she catches him. She knows you are not his first and won't be his last. Also, she is not about to give up her social status, financial security and retirement income because of you.

However, her discovery will probably terminate his affair with you, so be prepared to get some new clothes, circulate, and find another married man whose wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) and hasn't slept with him for 10 years.

Sign me ... HIS WIFE

DEAR ABBY: Do you think married women dress to please their husbands?

MAZOOK IN S.F.
DEAR MAZOOK: If they do, they are wearing last year's clothes.

3-potato salad packed with flavor, nutrition

By Charlotte Balcomb Lane
Orlando Sentinel

Americans have always loved potatoes but only in recent years have they started to pay attention to the differences in varieties.

In this low-fat Three-Potato Salad, several types blend to create a colorful, nutritious treat. Potatoes fall roughly into two categories — dry-mealy, such as white-skinned russets and brown-skinned Idahoes, and waxy, such as red-skinned new potatoes and yellow-fleshed Fims.

Mealy potatoes have lots of starch and a dry texture. In salads, they tend to absorb dressing and crumble into flourishy mush. Waxy varieties, such as red-skinned potatoes, hold their shape in salads. These potatoes have a moist texture, sweet flavor and less starch than mealy varieties.

Dousing the cooked potatoes with white wine while they are warm helps keep them firm so they crumble less when tossed.

The wine also adds flavor without making the salad taste sour.

Sweet potatoes need to be peeled before eating.

Dousing the cooked potatoes with white wine while they are warm helps keep them firm so they crumble less when tossed.

However, the peels of mealy and waxy potatoes contribute fiber, nutrients and flavor.

THREE POTATO SALAD

- Serves 15
- 6 small red-skinned potatoes
- 4 medium-sized russet potatoes (white-skinned variety)
- 2 medium-sized sweet potatoes
- 2 cup dry white wine*
- 1/2 cup green onions, finely chopped
- 2 tablespoons fresh parsley, finely chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano or tarragon leaves
- 2 stalks celery, finely chopped
- 1/2 cup green, red or yellow bell pepper, finely diced

DRESSING:

- 1/2 cup white-wine vinegar or cider vinegar
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
2 tablespoons low-calorie mayonnaise
Scrub potatoes under cool running water. Pierce skin with a knife but do not peel. Cook on high (100 percent) power in a microwave for 25 to 30 minutes, turning several times. Cook in batches if necessary. Potatoes should be soft to the touch, but not shriveled.

Place in a brown paper bag and allow to stand for 15 to 20 minutes, until cool enough to handle. Peel the sweet potatoes and cut into 1/2-inch cubes.

Slice and cube remaining potatoes. Combine in a bowl and pour white wine over all.

Toss and allow potatoes to absorb wine. Sprinkle with chopped-green onions, parsley, thyme, celery and bell pepper.

Combine vinegar, olive oil, salt, pepper, mustard and mayonnaise to make a dressing. Stir well to blend. Pour over potatoes, and allow to cool to room temperature. Served chilled or at room temperature.

*Test kitchen notes: Chicken broth may be substituted for the wine. Increase the amount of vinegar by 2 to 3 tablespoons.

Grilled salmon goes well with summer

By Rita Calvert
The Baltimore Sun

For some dazzling flavors filled with summer's essence, try this simple meal on the grill that leaves you free from pot-washing and cleanup. Salmon fillets are coated with a zesty four-ingredient mixture that is pleasantly reminiscent of sweet and salty teriyaki. The honey causes the shiny golden glaze as it grills.

Whole vegetables thinly sliced cook very quickly on the grill and pick up a nice smoky flavor. Cut them about 1/2-inch thick in lengthwise slices—Choose your favorites from zucchini, crookneck squash, eggplant, onions, tomatoes, bell pepper of any color, sweet potatoes or white potatoes.

Place salmon fillets in shallow bowl or plate. While grill is heating, mix garlic, soy sauce, honey and lime juice and pour over salmon. Let marinate for 15 minutes.

Place salmon fillets on grill over hot coals or cook about five to six minutes on top, while basting with marinade mixture. Turn and grill for the same amount of time on the bottom side, basting again. Serve immediately, surrounded with grilled vegetables. Serves four.

GLAZED GRILLED SALMON FILLETS

- 4 (6-ounce) salmon fillets, from center cut, skin removed
- 3 cloves fresh garlic, minced
- 3 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1/3 cup honey
- 2 tablespoons lime juice

Place salmon fillets in shallow bowl or plate.

While grill is heating, mix garlic, soy sauce, honey and lime juice and pour over salmon. Let marinate for 15 minutes.

Place salmon fillets on grill over hot coals or cook about five to six minutes on top, while basting with marinade mixture. Turn and grill for the same amount of time on the bottom side, basting again. Serve immediately, surrounded with grilled vegetables. Serves four.

Italian dessert gains fame in 'Sleepless in Seattle'

By Ellen Hawks
The Baltimore Sun

Tiramisu, pronounced tier-chee-zoo, has recently gained recognition in "Sleepless in Seattle," a comedy in which a widower played by Tom Hanks thinks tiramisù is something sexual, rather than a light, sweet, Italian dessert. A recipe is in order.

TIRAMISU

- 6 egg yolks
- 1/4 cups sugar
- 1 1/2 cups mascarpone (a soft creamy) cheese
- 1 1/2 cups whipping cream
- 1/2 cup water

2 teaspoons instant coffee granules

1 1/2 tablespoons brandy
2 (3-ounce) packages ladyfingers
Combine egg yolks and sugar in the top of a double boiler and beat with an electric mixer at medium speed until thick and lemon colored.

Bring water in the bottom of the double boiler to a boil, reduce it to low and cook the lemon-colored mixture for 10 to 10 minutes, stirring constantly.

Remove from heat, add mascarpone and beat until smooth.

Combine water, coffee granules and brandy and brush the mixture lightly on the ladyfingers. Line the sides and the bottom of a trifle bowl or 3-quart soufflé dish with ladyfingers and pour in 2 1/2 of the filling.

Layer remaining ladyfingers on top and cover with remaining filling. Garnish if desired with whipped cream and grated unsweetened chocolate. Cover and chill for 8 hours. Yields 10 to 12 servings.

*A substitute for mascarpone, which is most often available from gourmet shops; 2 (8-ounce) packages of cream cheese; 1/3 cup sour cream; 3/4 cup whipping cream.

Use 1 1/2 cups of this mixture in the tiramisù and save any left over to use in cannoli shells.

Grab some decorating ideas on home tours

By Gary Krino
Orange County Register

Roving through model homes qualifies as a sport for many. And if models aren't enough, there's always a home tour or design house to choose from.

A great way to spend an afternoon? True. But model homes, home tours and design houses can offer more than an opportunity for casual looking. They are a prime chance to apply what you see to design questions in your own living space.

Here are some tips that should help tailor any trip through models, tour homes or design houses to your own specific needs.

Before you set out, take a close look at your house, condominium or apartment to determine exactly what you want to get from the models, tour homes or design house. It will help save time and focus your thoughts on what areas are important to you.

Take along a notebook and a camera. Jot notes as you go and make drawings of room plans. Before you use the camera, get permission from the person in the sales center (for models) or the tour guide (for home tours or design houses).

If you see a model or tour home that is especially appealing, ask if a designer was involved. If so, take down the person's name and try to get the phone number for future reference. At design-houses, pick up the business cards of designers whose work impresses you.

If a tour home grabs you, attempt to get the owner's name and phone number so that you can talk to that person in depth and perhaps arrange a more complete tour at a later date.

At design houses, don't walk in with the attitude that since designers did the work, it's going to be expensive. Not necessarily so, especially considering the sluggish economy.

Pay attention to details. How are collectibles grouped for best display? How are pictures arranged on walls? What methods are used to get the most from closet storage space? How are mirrors used to give the illusion of space in small rooms? How are colors and fabrics mixed and matched?

How are floor coverings coordinated from room to room so that they flow smoothly rather than clashing? What little tricks have been used to give a designer look on a limited budget?

Also pay attention to the total look of rooms and the atmosphere created in each. As you go from house to house, you should begin to get a feel for the atmosphere you're most comfortable with. Then you can get down to creating that same atmosphere in your own living space.

Look for designer trends. If you see something new popping up in more than one designer's work — perhaps a different sort of window treatment — it's probable that it's a trend you might like to investigate.

This might sound just a tad strange, but ask if you can look at the interior of the garage to determine if there are any storage tricks you might want to take advantage of in your own garage.

Not everything at models, tour homes and design houses is going on indoors. You can also gather plenty of information on landscaping, patio decor and pools and spas. Take special note of plants in pots. They are versatile because they can easily be moved or replanted to suit your taste and to freshen the look from time to time.

A few tips for a more healthy garden

Here's a quick checklist of things that need attention in the garden:

- Water. Slow, deep, penetrating, infrequent irrigations work better to moisten root zones than frequent, quick, superficial sprinklings.

- Harvest peas, beans, cucumbers and summer squash constantly to keep the plants producing. Leaving the fruits to get too mature will cause the plants to slow down or even stop flowering.

- Twist cabbage heads a quarter turn. This will break enough roots to slow down water absorption and the cabbage head won't split.
- Watch for bugs, and at the first sign, zap the critters.

- Take cuttings of shrubs and other ornamentals such as roses. Take four- to six-inch tip cuttings, strip the leaves off the lower ends, dip in rooting hormone and put them in a moist, light putting soil. Keep the humidity relatively high around them to keep them from wilting and drying up. Depending on the species, they should root in anywhere from three weeks to several months. And if they don't, you haven't lost anything.

Green Thumbprints

- Cut out all raspberry canes that have fruited. Cut them at ground level. Cut out weak and spindly canes, leaving seven to ten new strong canes to grow per hill.

- Throw a net over the cherries to keep the birds out.

- Lift and divide irises.
- Pick off faded blooms from summer annuals. If allowed to set seed, they'll think the season is over and die out.

- Shear the hedge so it is narrower at the top than the bottom. Lower branches need to see the sun and will die if the bottom is not kept wider.
- Attack trips in roses and gladiolus with Orthene.

- Pinch side buds on large flowered dahlias so that only the top bud is left on each stem. The plant will put all its energy into the one flower and you'll have bigger dahlias.

If you need rubber O-rings, try creativity

Q. My 33-year-old kitchen exhaust fan works fine, but I haven't been able to use it because I can't find substitutes for the little rubber washers on the mounting bar that prevent noise from vibration of metal against metal. Any suggestions? — G. Michels

Gene Austin
Do it yourself

A. Most home centers and hardware stores sell rubber O-rings of various sizes for faucet repairs. You should be able to substitute these for the original rubber washers. If you have an old auto or bicycle inner tube, you can also cut rubber washers from it, using a metal washer as a pattern.

Q. The back of my house is covered with painted bricks. Some of the mortar joints are in poor condition.

Can these bricks be repointed or will the paint prevent good adhesion of the new mortar? — J. Roche

A. If the mortar joints are properly cleaned to a depth of 1/2-inch or more, the mortar should adhere satisfactorily. Paint on the surface of the surrounding bricks should not be a problem. Let the new mortar cure for several months, then touch it up with paint to match the rest of the wall.

Personal briefing: Home news you can use

Knight-Ridder News Service

HOME, SWEET HOME: From the oh-give-me-a-home department: The Federal National Mortgage Association's 1993 National Housing Survey found that 50 percent of Americans believe this is "a very good time to buy a home," compared with 38 percent who agreed with the statement a year ago.

The most important reason for the upsurge in home-buying confidence is the availability of lower interest rates.

NO CLEAN SWEEP: We may want to own a home, but cleaning it is something else again.

According to a survey conducted for the Black & Decker Dustbuster Vac, more than 43 percent of female respondents and 21 percent of the men say they are doing less housecleaning now than they did five years ago.

And only 25 percent of the women and 23 percent of the men claim that they are pitching in to do more around the house, suggesting that a significant amount of the housework being done five years ago is not being taken care of by today's busy households.

BE COOL: Household tip of the week, from the Baltimore Sun:

Get maximum efficiency from your window air conditioner.

Use exhaust fans when needed to reduce demand on the unit. Make sure the air conditioner is on the shady side of the house.

ALL HANDS ON DECK: Now, you can build your own backyard deck ... by computer.

"Build Your Own Deck, a software program coming out this summer from Books That Work of Palo Alto, Calif., allows you to design and then get a three-dimensional look at the finished product. Popular Science magazine reports.

It's the first of a planned series of home-improvement programs.

A 386 or more powerful PC with Windows software and 10 megabytes of free disk space is needed.

Ads may make home projects seem too simple

By Nick Harder
Orange County Register

Have you seen the magazine advertisement that shows a man sitting on a porch, brushing a stain on a piece of furniture while his child and trusty dog watch? Does it make you feel warm and cozy? Does it make you want to rush out to buy the stain so you can be part of that cozy picture?

Just don't have your dog nearby if you do. What that advertisement doesn't show is all the fur from your dog — and anything else blowing around — getting in the stain as you apply it. The ad doesn't show the guy being a grumpas he picks the fur from the finish. It doesn't show him cursing as he looks over his finished piece and sees that the dog's fur has solidified into the stain and he has to do it over.

Maybe I'm just being picky, but there are a lot of things that bother me about print and TV ads and shows that make things seem easier than they are or that don't accurately reflect what do-it-yourselfers have to go through. It's the kind of thing consumers need to view carefully.

For example, one of my favorite TV how-to shows is "Iometime." I think the show does a great job of using easy-to-understand terms to explain the steps viewers need to take to do a job right.

And if you purchase one of the show's videos, you also get a paper blueprint you can use to follow what they're doing on the tube. That's good, because you can't always take your television and tape machine outside while you're doing a project.

And you can get tired of hitting that pause button or going back time and again to a spot where you need to follow the steps closely.

My one gripe about the show is that it can gloss over some time-consuming projects, making them seem a lot quicker than they really are.

"Well, now that we've done the footings and attached the ledger board to the house, the rest of the deck should be a breeze."

Give me a break! They didn't show how your back went out because digging for the footings was like going through concrete. And they didn't show the three extra trips you had to make to the lumberyard, hardware store or home center because you didn't get all the items you were supposed to or didn't get the right ones.

Of course, now that I'm doing some TV spots for Orange County NewsChannel, I can appreciate the effort to condense. TV time is valuable.

But as one who also does projects at home, I can tell you that I don't appreciate being teased by advertisements or how-to segments that don't tell me the whole truth. You can't always stain furniture white sitting comfortably on the porch swing.

You can't usually construct a deck in a single day.

Not only will most do-it-yourself projects take longer and require more effort, but the real problem is that you're likely to be disappointed with yourself to the point you won't do anything again before the turn of the century.

And that's the real shame. If you approach a home project realistically, you'll be more patient with yourself, you'll do a better job, and you'll be more satisfied once it's done.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Some cry up Haydn, some Mozart, just as the whim bites. For my part, I do not care a farthing candle. For either of them, nor for Handel." - Charles Lamb.

The defenders had an argument about defensive philosophy after they allowed today's game to make. "Had we been signaling count at trick one," said East, "you would have known that your heart ace could cash."

"Perhaps," replied West, "but it wasn't the signals or my shift that caused the problem. It was a failure to visualize South's distribution."

West led the heart king, East playing the queen and South fudging regarding the ace. Afraid to get his heart ace ruffed, West shifted to the club deuce. East won his ace and returned a club, and South made off with his unmakeable game. After a trump to dummy's ace revealed the trump loser, South gave the defense no second chance and discarded his low heart on one of dummy's high diamonds.

Should the defenders agree to signal count in situations of this sort? There are arguments on both sides. However, prevailing opinion sides with signaling attitude first and distribution second (except in obvious cash-out situations).

In any event, in today's hand, the argument was moot. East knew that South had six spades at most. If he also had a singleton heart queen, he would hold six minor-suit cards. Therefore, a club return at trick three was not vital, a heart return was. The club loser could go nowhere; the heart loser could, and did.
