Half-cent gas tax stalls deficit bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders were a half-penny apart Thursday as they struggled toward an agreement on President Clinton's $500 billion deficit-reduction plan.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the chief House negotiator, urged that the 14.1-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax be raised by 7 cents so that "we have a little more wiggle room" to finance social spending demanded by liberals and business incentives favored by moderates.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., was sticking with a 6½-cent increase and even at that level some rural senators were threatening to abandon the bill that underlies Clinton's entire economic policy.

For the typical driver, that difference boils down to $3.42 out of pocket a year less than one cent a day.

The economic cost of inaction would be enormous, Clinton said, predicting the Federal Reserve would "raise interest rates if this deficit-reduction plan doesn't pass."

"I still remain very confident that the pieces are there" to produce agreement,

White House Budget Director Leon Panetta said after seeking the crucial support of the Congressional Black Caucus.

Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., chairman of the caucus, said that despite a conciliatory session with Panetta, "99 percent of my members are holding fire on this" until they see what is in the final bill. There is "a war of principles" among House members over the bill, with its $250 billion of tax increases accompanied by the promise of an equal amount of spending savings over the next five years, he said.

"Those who resist compromise are going to have to ask themselves some tough questions," Mfume told reporters. "The American people will allow us mistakes ... but when they will not allow is partisan war ... when we point fingers at each other" and do nothing.

As part of an offer for a 6½-cent gas tax increase, Senate negotiators proposed to moderate a reduction in the share of business meals and entertainment expenses that could be deducted; present law allows an 80 percent write-off, both houses voted to allow only 50 percent; the most recent offer, 65 percent.

After the fire

After a year of personal tragedies and conflicts with neighbors, Jerry Adermann says he feels like a stranger in Rogerson, where he has lived for 29 years.

1992 Rogerson fire victim tries to resurrect life from the ashes

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

ROGERSON — When Jerry Adermann's home burned to the ground a year ago today, he thought life could get no meaner.

He was wrong. While the fire stole almost every worldly good he owned, Adermann has lost things more valuable since then.

His marriage is in ashes. A dispute about an overdue water bill has alienated him from many of his neighbors in this rural community.

Adermann, who turns 53 Monday, said he feels like a stranger in the town where he has lived for 29 years.

"I really want to leave, but I got no place to go," he said recently.

He was not home July 30, 1992, when a grass fire burned out of control and consumed his wooden house. He arrived in time to see firefighters douse the smoldering remains of his uninsured home.

To this day, Adermann contends that the Rogerson Water District did not provide adequate water pressure to fight the fire.

Ted Tiffany, chairman of the water district board, denies that poor water pressure inspired firefighters.

Adermann filed a tort claim against the water district, the Bureau of Land Management and Twin Falls County, but he has not found an attorney who will stay on the case.

Early this month, the water district turned off his water.

"It's over my filing that tort claim," Adermann said.

Not true, Tiffany responded. Adermann fell behind on his bill, more than $130 at one point, and the water district cut his service, Tiffany said. Several other of the water district's 32 users also lost their service because of overdue bills.

"It had nothing personal to do with Jerry Adermann," he said.

Adermann's now-estranged wife had paid down his bill to $55 when service was shut off after the July Fourth weekend. Adermann contends that since his bill was being paid down, there was no point in turning off his service.

But he didn't go without water long — he turned it back on. The water district turned it off again, and he turned it back on again.

The disagreement took an alarming twist recently when Adermann and another man flashed guns at each other, and Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies were called.

Gossip swirls about younger members of 'royal' Kennedys

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Will John Jr. marry Daryl?

Is the latest book about Ted true? Has Willie found happiness in his medical career?

And can Joe get his first marriage annulled before he weds a staff member? After 30 years, the Kennedy family soap opera continues, and the audience remains rapt.

"The Kennedys are the closest thing here to royalty," said Iain Calder, editor in chief of the National Enquirer supermarket tabloid. "There's an American fascination with British royals — well, they're the American royals."

To Calder, the hottest Kennedy story is whether John F. Kennedy Jr. is going to marry actress Daryl Hannah.

Paparazzi stalked out Hannah's home this week amid rumors of a secret wedding. Gossip columnist Liz Smith reported Thursday the couple were in Indonesia.

But the 32-year-old Kennedy, once picked as "the sexiest man alive" by People magazine, isn't the only family member in the news this summer.

FBI nominee lands on fast track

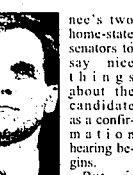

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senators assembled to scrutinize the fitness of U.S. District Judge Louis J. Freeh to become FBI director vied Wednesday to see which one could evoke the closest personal association with the nominee.

As a consequence, the former FBI agent and prosecutor appears to be a shoo-in for the job and likely to be confirmed before the end of next week — exactly the speedy action sought by the White House.

Freeh provided the Senate Judiciary Committee, during a swift 3½-hour confirmation hearing, with the customary promises to fight crime on all fronts while retaining independence from political influence and increasing the number of minority and female agents.

It's customary for a nominee's two home-state senators to say nice things about the candidate as a confirmation hearing begins.

But as this hearing opened, the witness table was jammed with five senators: the two Democrats from New Jersey, where Freeh was born and grew up. The Democrat and Republican from New York, where he has worked for years and now lives with his wife and four sons. And the Democrat from Georgia, Sam Nunn, who did not claim home-state bragging rights but lauded

Weather summary

Summer weather continued across southern Idaho Thursday, although a few showers developed in the northern and eastern sections of the state. Temperatures climbed back to the 90-degree range after one of the warmest nights of the season. Skies were partly cloudy by evening, but no moisture had fallen over the Magic Valley. Winds were light. The clouds resulted from passage of a weak cold front. Another front which passed Wednesday night produced a few lighter showers. The warmest temperature in the state Thursday was 97 degrees at Emmett and Hagerman Soda Springs reported the coldest at 41 degrees. Elsewhere in the nation Thursday, the highest temperature was 115 degrees at Lake Havasu City, Ariz. and Jackson, Wyo., and West Yellowstone, Mont., reported the lowest temperature at 40 degrees.

Severe weather, extreme heat hammer East, South

The Associated Press

Severe weather moved into the East and South Thursday as a cold front mixed with a hot, humid, unstable air mass over the Atlantic coastal states. Thunderstorms on Thursday dropped dime-size hail at Champlain, N.Y. Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the Great Lakes and New England, the south Atlantic and Gulf Coast states, the southern Plains, the central and northern Rockies and the Pacific Northwest. The hot, humid air extended westward across the Gulf Coast into the lower Mississippi Valley, fueling strong thunderstorms across that region. Thunderstorm winds gusted to 58 mph at Hot Springs, Ark. An isolated cluster of thunderstorms with very heavy rain were over eastern Kansas early Thursday. Four inches of rain northwest of Emporia near Donipaw caused flooding. Heat advisories continued across parts of the Carolinas, Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi and Texas. Record high temperatures for the date were set in Wilmington, N.C., 101; Asheville, N.C., 94; Augusta, Ga., 104; Beaufort, S.C., 105; Charleston, S.C., 100; Denver, 98; Norfolk, Va., 102; Richmond, Va., 101, and Tampa, Fla., 95. Washington tied its high for the date at 98, last reached in 1954. Records were set when Charlotte, N.C., recorded its 32nd consecutive day with temperatures above 90 degrees; and Knoxville, Tenn., recorded its 30th consecutive above-90 day. It was much cooler across the Great Lakes under cloudy skies. Temperatures ranged from the 50s in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan to near 80 in the northern sections of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. It was sunny with low humidity and temperatures in the 80s across the northern and central Plains into the middle Mississippi Valley. Sunshine also prevailed across a large part of California, the Great Basin and much of the southern Plateau. The low temperature for the Lower 48 Thursday morning was 40 degrees at Yellowstone National Park.

Rostenkowski criminal probe goes far beyond stamp account

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecutors in the House Post Office case have ranged far beyond Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's stamp purchases, to investigate his checking account, political operations and dealings with top aides. A year's worth of subpoenas, reviewed by The Associated Press, showed prosecutors compelled House officials to turn over the Illinois lawmaker's records for deposits and withdrawals of more than $400 from the House bank. They also have sought information about his 32nd Ward Regular Democratic Organization in Chicago and about his longtime administrative assistant, Virginia Fletcher. Top aides on the House Ways and Means Committee have been summoned before a grand jury. Prosecutors wanted to know about Rostenkowski's automobiles and even his mobile district offices. Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has not been charged with any crime, and has vigorously proclaimed his innocence of any wrongdoing. He also has complained that prosecutors were on a fishing expedition. The file of subpoenas also revealed that information has sought far more detailed information on the Illinois Democrat than on two other

Charles Keating III sentenced to 8 years

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles Keating III was sentenced to eight years and a month in prison and ordered to pay $9.3 million in restitution Thursday for his role in the Lincoln Savings fraud directed by his father. U.S. District Judge Mariana R. Pfäelzer adopted the recommendation of prosecutors in the sentencing, citing the vast losses, thousands of victims and loss of confidence the Kentings inflicted on the failed savings & loans institution. Pfäelzer noted that the standard sentence in such a fraud could be as little as three years and 10 months. But she said that did not reflect an offense that was "staggering in its proportion."

Adermann

Each man denies threatening the other, but both admit displaying weapons. No charges were filed. Now, Adermann just wants to get his life back in order. He doesn't blame his wife for leaving him. After the fire, he did work hard, except for at his lawn-mowing business, and the bills piled up.

Kennedy

Members of the Kennedy family don't try to speculate on why people are so interested in them," she said. "They prefer to concentrate on the jobs and public service in which they're involved. And take one day at a time."

The Filer Memorial Church came to him after the fire, and Adermann said he now attends church there when he can. He paid off the last of his water bill and lives alone in his trailer. Events of the past year taught a hard lesson. "I wish I could have straightened up and done something faster," he said.

Freeh

Freeh's work nevertheless. Their litany of compliments — "Louis Freeh has become a legend on his own, not by chance, not by favor," said Nunn, and Freeh is "a man of extraordinary judgment, great integrity and independence," said Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. — was interrupted only by the babblings of Freeh's youngest son, 1-year-old Connor. During questioning, Freeh: • Told ranking Republican Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, who said the FBI administration misused the Clinton investigation the White House travel office. "I was assured I would have complete political independence." He pledged not to give confidential information to White House aides and to "immediately bring it to the attention of the attorney general" if the White House contacts the FBI again like it did in the travel office matter. • Agreed, at Hatch's request, not to "publicly endorse or lobby against" gun control legislation unless it dealt directly with the FBI. • But the told gun-control supporter Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, that he would not "set... aside or disagree with" an existing memo expressing FBI support for the Brady bill, which would require a waiting period and background check before a person could buy a handgun. • Said he realized the risk of abusing seizures of allegedly ill-gotten gains from drug traffickers and other criminals if the government starts relying on those seizures to pay its own bills. Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said he expected Freeh to be approved by the committee and the full Senate before Congress recesses Aug. 6, in line with White House requests.

Midwest optimism wavers as clock ticks toward Tuesday

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Mississippi River doesn't crest here until next week, but even people as prepared as Ed MacCarthy — whose home is surrounded by an imposing 12-foot wall of sandbags — are fearing the worst.

The retired firefighter paid $500 for a government-backed flood insurance policy that goes into effect at 12:01 a.m. Monday, just a day before the river is expected to reach a record crest.

"I'm losing my optimism," MacCarthy said Thursday. That from a man who is the last person in his neighborhood near the River Des Peres, which is swelling from Mississippi overflow.

All across this city of 400,000, as a menacing surge of water heads down the Missouri River on a collision course with the Mississippi, people are worried.

Forecasters predict the Mississippi will hit 48 feet above flood level, topping by a foot last week's record crest. The city's main flood wall is 52 feet high, but is already leaking in one section.

As the Missouri River barrels through the central part of the city on its way to St. Louis, it is swamping town after town.

Thursday, for example, rising waters washed out a railroad bridge in little Glasgow and forced residents of other towns to hoist sandbags atop tattered levees. Others were simply fleeing.

In the northern part of St. Louis, heavy equipment growled all day and all night as workers reinforced the main flood wall, the only thing standing between the Mississippi and a vast industrial area.

"I'm not telling people not to worry, but let me say this: We've got the workers, and we've got the equipment to get the job done," said Joe Swenk, a supervisor with the Army Corps of Engineers.

The levee is north of downtown and protects utility stations, truck shipping operations, a few homes and some strip malls and small stores. The downtown business area is on higher ground and faces no flooding threat.

Few people had been worried about the St. Louis wall until it sprang a leak last week and started spewing water. Riverwater had eroded the ground beneath the base, tilting it as much as 3 inches. Workers were pouring concrete through newly bored holes to fill the gap under the base.

Another potential trouble spot is MacCarthy's neighborhood along the River Des Peres in the south of the city. Homeowners have long since evacuated — returning home only to water and mow their lawns — and now can just wait and wonder whether the sandbag and gravel levee will hold.

The MacCarthy's are the only family to heavily fortify their home.

"There's a lot of memories here," said Kevin MacCarthy, 37, one of six MacCarthy children raised in the tract house.

"This is everything we've been raised to believe in. You've got to protect what's yours."

The flooding in nine Midwest states has killed 43 people and caused more than $10 billion in damage.

Clark Oil Co. employees work against the clock Thursday to build a sandbag levee around gas storage tanks in St. Louis. The Mississippi River is expected to crest at 48 feet Tuesday.

Though sparse, success stories do exist about the flood of 1993

QUINCY, Ill. (AP) — No one wants to tempt fate or anything, but Jim and Carol Sass think they may have done it.

They think they may have beaten the flood. Their clapboard house is a mess, but it's a victory all the same.

"Maybe some people will think we were stubborn fools," said Jim, 49, a hulking man with determination and wits to match. "But so many people out there have fought and lost. There's got to be some success stories."

This is one.

Take a look at what their front porch used to be: On nice evenings, when the sun got low, they'd sit there having something cool to drink and surveying the farmland's slow curves. They could see all their neighbors' houses dotting the distance, and tell each maple from locust from oak. Their daughter's senior prom picture was taken just down there, on the hand-laid brick path, next to the iron planter filled with geraniums. Maybe they'd take a walk later, after dinner.

Look now: The flood has created a tremendous, hungry lagoon just beyond the front steps. It has eaten up their neighbors' homes, and the mailbox, and that stop sign way out there. The cows were moved to dry ground. Who knows when they'll be moved back.

"It's really so sad," said Carol, 46, looking out into the boggy beach left where the water has receded. "And what a mess it'll be when this murky, disease-ridden, garbage-filled water is gone," her husband added.

Still, their two-story house will be here, and that's no small thing, considering how many of their friends and neighbors lost theirs. It took days of round-the-clock work to keep it pumped out. Scores of friends and strangers and relatives camped out, some on sofas and some on the floor, while helping the Sasses build a 5-foot sandbag levee.

They've been living without water, without sewage, for weeks. They've been using an old motorboat that Carol "used to cuss" but now wants "to paint and drape with medals" as a jitty between home and the "mainland."

"That boat saved their house, hauling back and forth the loads of sandbags Jim says showed up on shore as if by miracle. "Strangers, people we'll never be able to thank, helped fill those bags that saved my house," he said.

Saved? Well, yes, Carol concedes. "But what a clean-up job I'm going to have!" she said. "This doesn't even look like my house."

She exaggerates a little. Outside, it's true, the place is kind of a dump now. The smell isn't pleasant and, but for the waterfront view, the landscape has been flattened. But inside, her grandmother's china cabinet and armoire are untouched. The old walnut tool chest Jim's great, great-grandfather used is just where it's always been. The place is cozy. The mushrooms that sprang from under some mildewed bathroom floorboards were pretty unappealing, as was the onslaught of spiders. But they got to laughing about the mushrooms, and showing them off. And they discovered the spiders were eating the mosquitoes, which wasn't so bad.

Jim gave fishing a try. Caught a couple decent-sized bluegill, too.

They were determined. Maybe stupid, the couple said, but determined to stand their ground. And they did not doubt themselves. Not when they helped their neighbors evacuate. Not when the National Guard came and went. Not even when the water moved well beyond a point they said it would never reach.

They never came close to quitting. Except once, July 13.

Eight feet of water surrounded the bungalow on three sides. It was pumping up from the basement, coming down from the drainpipes, raining in great sheets off the water-soaked hill. Everyone was drenched, soaked from head to toe. "It's hard to think straight in all that water," Jim said.

Sass, a formidable man who thought he'd never quit, was just about to.

"I can't do this anymore. I can't," he thought to himself.

"Then a friend who had lost his house the day before said, he just said real simple, 'We got to dig a ditch.' Well, I said, 'I'm not digging no ditch. I quit.'"

"But my friend Ron, he didn't quit. He picked up a shovel. Pretty soon, I looked around and seven more people had come over to help. They didn't quit, so I couldn't. And you know, before long, maybe 20 minutes later, the sun came out and the rain quit."

"We'd hung on."

Alaska looks to Navy to relieve water shortage

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — As the flooded Midwest struggles with too much rain, two small towns in the continent's largest temperate rain forest haven't had enough of it this summer.

Wrangell and Petersburg are running out of water, and the Navy may be called to the rescue.

The two island towns in the normally soggy Tongass National Forest could go dry next month if the skies do not open up and replenish their reservoirs soon, officials said Tuesday.

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, recently wrote to the Navy, Air Force and Coast Guard to ask about the availability of desalination equipment to turn salt water into drinking water should the shortage become an emergency.

Petersburg, a fishing port 125 miles south of Juneau, and Wrangell, a mill town 155 miles south, are reachable only by air or sea. Trucking in water is not an option.

June and July have been unusually dry and warm on Alaska's Panhandle. Wrangell has had just 1.94 inches of rain so far this month. In a normal July, the town gets 4.56 inches. Petersburg gets 5 inches in an average June, but received about half that last month.

Officials for the past two weeks have asked residents to conserve water, and they may impose mandatory conservation measures if the situation worsens.

Tonnie Barlow owns and manages Wrangell's Dock Side Restaurant, which is saving melted ice from the salad bar to water the flowers and serving water only to customers who request it. She said only a few tourists have complained.

FDA criticizes dietary supplements

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration launched an attack Thursday on "worthless" dietary supplements, releasing a report that concludes hundreds of compounds are promoted with unproven health claims.

Intervening in what he acknowledged is "an acrimonious and emotional debate," Food and Drug Commissioner David Kessler told a crowded House hearing that the safety of many dietary supplements now on the market cannot be assumed, and that some are life threatening.

"The marketplace is awash with unsubstantiated claims," Kessler said as assistants loaded the witness table in the House Commerce Committee hearing room with hundreds of bottles labeled as helpful in fighting health problems ranging from cancer to broken bones.

GOP blocks national service program

WASHINGTON — The Senate fell one vote short Thursday of breaking a Republican filibuster blocking action on President Clinton's plan for a national service program.

Immediately after the 59-41 vote, Democrats offered to negotiate further with Republicans demanding cutbacks in the administration's plan to permit college students to perform public service as repayment for college tuition. "We will try and find a common solution," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the sponsor of the legislation.

He promised another attempt to break the filibuster today.

NAACP bombing, supremacists linked

SALINAS, Calif. — Three white supremacists under arrest for shop lifting and other charges have been linked to this month's bombing of an NAACP meeting hall in Washington state, the FBI said Thursday.

No one was injured in the blast.

FBI agent John Covert would not describe the evidence connecting the men to the July 20 bombing in Tacoma, which shattered glass doors and damaged walls.

The FBI is looking for clues that the bombing is linked to a recent fire at the San Francisco office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Covert said.

Salinas police arrested Jeremiah Gordon Knesal, 19, of Auburn, Wash., and Wayne Paul Wooten of Tacoma, Wash., after they were caught shoplifting socks, underwear and blue jeans Wednesday at a J.C. Penney's store, the FBI said.

Study: Pentagon bypassed competition

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon farmed out at least $6.3 billion in defense work to other agencies in 1990 and 1991, in many cases without competitive bidding or adequate supervision, according to Defense Department documents.

In one case, the Tennessee Valley Authority was given responsibility for a highly classified submarine-detection project. Pentagon auditors later determined TVA lacked "adequate security clearances and procedures."

In a second instance, the Pentagon incurred $11 million in unnecessary costs by having the Energy Department oversee $100 million in research projects on hazardous waste and computer systems. The Pentagon should have issued the contracts itself, the Defense Department's inspector general concluded.

Woman pleads guilty in tampering case

MILWAUKEE — A woman pleaded guilty Thursday for falsely reporting a syringe in a Pepsi can during a nationwide product-tampering scare.

Katherine Wuerfl, 30, made her plea in U.S. District Court as part of an agreement with prosecutors, who recommended no more than 12 months in prison. The maximum sentence is five years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Sentencing is set for Oct. 19.

Congress OKs weapons' funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Overshadowed by the fractious debate over homosexuals in the military, Congress has broken ranks with President Clinton over several major weapons programs and other spending issues in next year's defense budget.

With little notice, the House and Senate Armed Services committees wrote their versions of President Clinton's $263 billion military budget this past week.

Among the major changes:

- The Senate panel shaved $1 billion from the overall budget.

- Both committees approved a 2.2 percent pay raise for military people effective Jan. 1, 1994, despite Clinton's call for an across-the-board pay freeze.

- The Senate panel canceled development of the Navy's AX ground attack plane and the Air Force's multi-engine fighter as well as eliminating $725 million for 24 new F-16 fighters. The House committee also terminated the AX.

Tipping its hand, the House panel said that the Pentagon had indicated that its heralded "bottom-up review" would recommend an end to development of the AX after fiscal 1993, prompting the committees to eliminate $399 million for the aircraft in the fiscal 1994 budget.

- Both committees trimmed Clinton's request of $3.8 billion for Ballistic Missile Defense, once known as the Strategic Defense Initiative. The Senate panel approved $3.2 billion; the House committee $3 billion.

- Both imposed conditions on the troubled C-17 transport aircraft program that has been dogged by cost overruns and delays. The Pentagon will have to certify that the program is on the right track before Congress frees up the money.

Lawmakers said the lack of fanfare was due to the fixation on Clinton's failed attempt to lift the half-century ban on gays serving in the military

'People are fighting over the scraps that are left.'

Clashes over the B-2 stealth bomber and SDI are, for the most part, a thing of the past.

"People are fighting over the scraps that are left," Rep. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said Thursday.

In unveiling Clinton's budget in March, Defense Secretary Les Aspin had described it as a "treading water" plan that encompassed much of former President Bush's proposal with some marginal changes.

Clinton has called for far deeper cuts in the next few years.

"This is probably the easiest," Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said of this year's budget.

Added Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa.: "The major battle will be over next year."

One fight missing from this year's debate was the issue of Clinton's recent decision to continue the ban on nuclear testing another 15 months. The House panel endorsed the moratorium and slashed Clinton's budget of $428 million for testing by $206 million.

In the past, the issue has energized conservatives convinced that testing would ensure the safety of the nuclear stockpile. But with no other countries conducting tests, the arguments were difficult to make.

In addition, conservatives were fighting Clinton on the homosexual issue. "The gays' loss was test banners' gain," John Isaacs, head of the liberal lobbying group, the Council for a Livable World, said Thursday.

Father: Bombing killed son due to testify

ROUSES POINT, N.Y. (AP) — A man killed in a car bomb explosion may have been targeted because he was about to testify in a Canadian drug investigation, his father said.

Lee Carter, 31, died in the blast Wednesday morning, authorities said. He was in his sports car behind a bowling alley where he worked as a bartender when the blast occurred.

The nature of the explosive wasn't immediately known.

Carter lived nearby in a mobile home in this community on the Canadian border 185 miles north of Albany.

Honoring women

Dignitaries break ground for the Vietnam Women's Memorial Thursday in Washington, D.C. Based on the model shown here, the memorial, to be built near the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial, will honor the more than 10,000 women who served in Vietnam. It is scheduled to be placed at this site in November.

U.S. backs Somalia policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — An end to military operations in Somalia could bring a return of lawlessness and famine, administration officials said Thursday in defending the U.N. peacekeeping force in the African nation.

"There is nothing wrong with the U.N.'s basic approach" of securing the peace in Somalia while continuing humanitarian aid and promoting political reconciliation, said George E. Moose, assistant secretary of State for African affairs, in House hearings.

U.N. military actions against fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid have been criticized for increasing violence in the capital of Mogadishu. Italy and other countries have accused the U.N. command of losing sight of its humanitarian mission.

Rep. Ben Gilman, R-N.Y., a critic of U.S. participation in the peacekeeping force, said the "current U.N. search and destroy strategy is a dead end that is only destroying what goodwill the United States once enjoyed in Somalia."

Senate Judiciary votes unanimously for Ginsburg

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously endorsed the nomination of Ruth Bader Ginsburg to the Supreme Court on Thursday.

Full Senate confirmation next week would make her the 107th justice and second woman on the high court.

Ginsburg would fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Justice Byron White. White was the only remaining justice appointed by a Democrat, President Kennedy.

The 18-0 vote followed praise by Democrats and Republicans, who said they were supporting President Clinton's nomination because she convinced them of her knowledge of, and deference to, the law above any personal agenda.

"I'm impressed with her as a person. She's not somebody who's just read about the sting of discrimination. She's felt it," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.

"Judge Ginsburg has been anything but a lockstep liberal," said Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, ranking Republican on the committee, who voted for her despite her view that women have the right to choose abortion.

In 13 years of rulings on the federal appeals court for the District of Columbia, Ginsburg often sided with conservative colleagues such as Robert Bork and now-Justice Antonin Scalia, he noted.

Democrats seemed especially pleased that Clinton's first nominee, and the first by a Democratic president since Lyndon Johnson's time, was such an easy winner.

"Thank the lord," Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., said as he announced the vote. A Senate confirmation vote was planned for next week, before Congress leaves for its August recess.

The committee's action came less than a week after it completed hearings on Ginsburg. During her three days of testimony, she generated little controversy, in part because she avoided answering many questions.

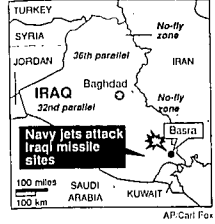

She maintained her support for abortion rights and for the passage of an Equal Rights Amendment, but in many areas, including the death penalty, she declined to discuss by polemical questions or discuss an issue that could come before the high court.

"I thought it was adroit and masterful," said Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., said of her testimony, reminding Democrats of their attacks on previous Republican nominees, who did the same thing.

Navy jets shoot at Iraqi sites

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Navy jets fired at suspected Iraqi missile sites after being targeted by radar in separate incidents, the Pentagon said Thursday.

The two EA-6B "Prowler" electronic warfare jets were patrolling the southern no-fly zone from the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln.

One of the incidents occurred at 3:30 a.m. MDT and another two hours later, said a Pentagon spokesman, Navy Capt. Michael Doubleday.

Both aircraft returned safely to the carrier, which is on patrol in the Persian Gulf.

Each of the Navy aircraft fired a single anti-radiation missile at a different site. The sites were about 30 miles apart, one north of the city of Fallujah and the other southeast of it, Doubleday said.

Doubleday could not assess whether the Iraqi missile sites were damaged.

It was the second such incident within the week.

Asked about the event by reporters, President Clinton said there was nothing remarkable about it.

"It's part of the old understandings under which our planes operate in that area and the circumstances under which they respond," the president said.

Asked whether a pattern was apparent, Doubleday said it was too early to tell whether it amounted to harassment of aircraft patrolling the no-fly zone or resulted from a lack of discipline on the part of the Iraqi troops manning the sites.

Thursday's incident occurred just four days after an Air Force F-4G "Wild Weasel" patrolling in the southern zone fired a missile at a site after Iraqi radar locked onto the plane. At that time, the Pentagon said Iraq fired back, but missed.

Baghdad denied it activated its radar or that the site was hit by U.S. aircraft. It also denied firing a missile.

That incident came two days before U.N. inspectors arrived Sunday to set up monitoring cameras at other weapons sites.

The clashes are the latest in a string of incidents in Iraq since the United Nations established zones through which Iraqi aircraft are not supposed to fly. The zones are designed to protect the Shiite minority in the south and the Kurdish minority in the north.

U.S. patrols operate under standing orders to fire at Iraqi missile sites if they turn their radars on the patrolling planes. It is deemed to be a hostile act and could be preparation for firing.

Siamese twin dies after separation

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A 2-month-old girl who was surgically separated from her Siamese twin sister earlier this week died Thursday morning in her parents' arms, doctors said.

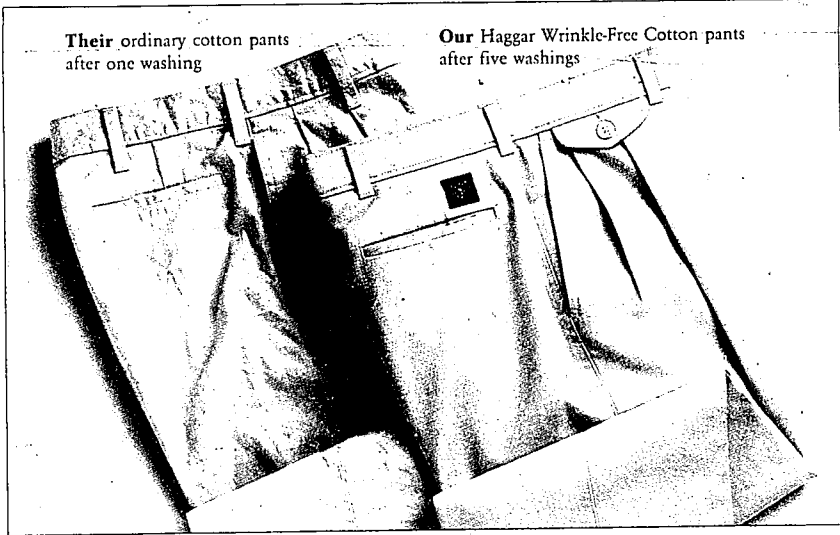

Meanwhile, her sister was doing well and expected to survive.

Tiffany Lynn Breche Lewis died at 9:55 a.m. at the University of Kentucky Hospital. Two days earlier, surgery to separate the girls gave Brittany Lynn Renee Lewis the twins' lone kidney, meaning Tiffany would die.

The larger and stronger of the twins, Brittany was in critical but stable condition Thursday morning.

At a news conference Wednesday, doctors described Tuesday's 10-hour operation in which the twins, joined at the pelvis, were separated, and Brittany was given the kidney they shared. Only a small percentage of all conjoined twins are fused at the pelvis.

A new political game: Who gets the fuel rods?

Most people have heard of "bark barrel politics," in which congressmen funnel tax money to projects in their home districts.

Now a mutant variety is emerging in the nation's capital.

Call it "parked barrel politics." It's a struggle among politicians to park radioactive waste (casks and boxes and spent-fuel rods) in other politicians' home states.

This week's Senate hearing on naval fuels was perhaps the messiest display of barrel parking the public has seen.

There sat Idaho politicians, contending that the nuclear Navy's spent fuel should be stored at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, atop the life-giving Snake River Plain Aquifer. Certainly not before the government has completed an Environmental Impact Statement.

They were, of course, right. But nearby sat politicians from states with naval bases. Storing the fuel temporarily at those bases is no good either, they said. Especially since nobody knows how long this temporary storage might have to last.

They, of course, were right too. Occasionally they were funny as well. Sen. John Warner piously noted that Idaho has "willingly accepted from the American taxpayer enormous sums of money" for decades of nuclear research and development projects.

The implication was that Idaho can't break its pact with the nuclear devil at this late date. But Warner seemed oblivious to his own state's pact with that same devil. Virginia's Norfolk Naval Shipyard is one of two East Coast ports where spent fuel begins its trek to INEL.

Equally amusing was Idaho's Sen. Larry Craig, who needed federal officials for failing to find an alternative to Idaho storage. "This nation has buried its head and hoped that the problem will go away," he said. "But the problem will soon bury us."

Craig neglected to say that he is one of a long line of Idaho politicians who have courted nuclear jobs at INEL, while remaining mostly silent about Energy Department efforts to bring waste to this state.

In fact, Warner is right about Idaho's history. This state (at least one corner of it) has enjoyed the economic benefits of the nuclear age. The current struggle over nuclear waste is the price we pay.

Pressure on Idaho can only grow stronger. Even as the senators were bickering this week, the Washington Post was reporting that the Cold War's end was creating a new challenge: where to put surplus plutonium from dismantled nuclear warheads.

One of the potential sites is, naturally, INEL.

This week's exercise in barrel parking suggests an obvious conclusion: The nation can't put off settling the waste-storage issue much longer.

Nor, however, can Idaho afford to be a passive patsy for all the other states that have benefited from waste-generating programs. If Sen. Warner thinks we're hypocritical for feeling that way, then we will have to endure his disapproval.

Trout class worth attending

Last week, I took advantage of the free fish fillet class at the College of Southern Idaho sponsored by Clear Springs Trout Farm. I was so flustered by the backup of frozen trout in the freezer caught by my three favorite fishermen. I hate to see the fish go to waste, but I detested eating trout with bones.

The class was great! The instructor was very, very knowledgeable and the extra individual bonding instructors were excellent. Every person who left that class knew how to completely bone and fillet trout, including me. I even picked up great barbecue tips. Clear Springs supplied several cleaned trout to practice on and even made available trout-boning knives at cost, and for the slime-squeamish, gloves, and cleaned up.

I was very impressed with the knowledge and quality of Clear Springs employees. It's an easy to see why Clear Springs is such an up and growing company. My family enjoyed one of those packages out of my freezer for dinner. This year's frozen trophies will not end up under next year's tomato plants. Here's to you, Clear Springs, and your willingness to share and teach your knowledge.

Check guarantee card worthless

As a business person, I had a rude awakening from my local bank. I was snookered into taking a check for my services from an individual. I took this check because the individual had a check guarantee card. When the check bounced higher than a ping-pong ball, I was told by the manager of our local bank that a check guarantee card doesn't mean anything when issued to an individual, only when issued to a business which is set up under the bank rules and regulations to cover the business's issuance of checks.

This was the first bounced check I've had in my business for 15 years, purely because I do not take checks. I did think though that a check guarantee card does mean something. Don't be fooled - it is worth less than the bounced check is.

Why are we led to believe from the banking industry that a check guarantee card is worthwhile? Why does our government allow the banks to so lead us to believe?

I am sending a copy of the letter to the Senate Banking Committee in Washington as well as to the paper to see if I can get any satisfaction from anyone. If I do, I'll be in touch with The Times-News again.

Use your rights or lose them

I am writing this letter in response to the many letters of complaints lately. It would seem as though Twin Falls citizens are very unhappy with our civic leaders, local police and Health and Welfare. A Miss Tucker wrote about a 3-year old that was molested and no one would do anything. Just last week, a man was badly beaten in the jail.

Another man was deprived of his constitutional right to keep a judge-ordered doctor's appointment while incarcerated. Another story was about a family being attacked when they stopped at a stop sign. When police were called, nothing was done. Lastly, the cruise and the kids.

Well, all I can say is all of the above people have rights, and it would seem to this reader as though the police and Health and Welfare have violated these people's rights. I am sure that there are more people out there in Twin Falls that have had their rights violated. Well, people, go public. Let it be known. Even you kids; 80 percent of you pay taxes and have rights, even if you can't vote. If you feel your rights have been violated and no one will help you, call the American Civil Liberties Union in Boise. If you feel local law enforcement isn't doing their job, call the Justice Department in Washington, D.C.

They have to investigate every complaint. Police departments hate the Justice Department investigating them because it usually finds something. Oh, by the way, I am 46 years old and have never been in trouble with the law. I have the utmost respect for the law when it is not misused.

Remember, God gave you a voice, and our forefathers gave us rights. Use them or lose them.

A vote for Clinton's economic tax bill is a vote for delayed recovery

Congress has completely missed the point in its debate over President Clinton's budget.

Jack Kemp

It's not "what kind of tax increase" should be unleashed on Americans, but whether tax increases reduce deficits and produce economic prosperity. In light of the clear historical record on these matters, allow me to make a few predictions.

Like the tax increases of 1982 and 1990, the president's plan is based on the premise that people won't change their behavior when faced with higher tax rates. But they will.

It is safe to predict that people will buy less, earn less and invest less as the result of higher taxes. Businesses will pay and hire less. The economy will shrink, and with less revenues, and the deficit will soar. We can predict further that this will not play well with the voters.

As economist Daniel Mitchell has pointed out, after taxes were increased in 1990 the deficit went up, not down. The deficit increased from 3.1 percent of gross domestic product (GDP) in 1990 to 5 percent by 1992 because the tax hike slowed the economy. This cost the U.S. Treasury an estimated $130 billion in tax revenue in 1992 alone. The Clinton tax hikes will produce similar results.

The president wants to raise tax rates to more than 40 percent on wealthy Americans to "force them to pay their fair share." But raising tax rates won't pay the rich. They will shift their money out to producers that have little economic benefit for the nation. Or they will avoid paying taxes by investing in tax-free municipal bonds or by shifting their earnings to non-taxed pensions and fringe benefits.

Harvard economist Martin Feldstein says if the Clinton tax hike causes Americans to reduce their taxable income by just 10 percent, three-quarters of Clinton's expected revenue gains will vanish. But Congress will keep the same spending targets - and the deficit will skyrocket.

A better way to reduce the deficit would have been to expand the tax base by creating new jobs and new businesses. Rather than increasing the tax on capital gains, we should be phasing it out for any asset held for two or three years. And we should completely eliminate the capital gains tax for anyone who invests and creates jobs in America's distressed inner cities.

All barriers to the creation of new businesses and to the expansion of existing businesses should be indexed retroactively for inflation. This includes indexing not only capital gains taxes, but also depreciation allowances, corporate tax rates, and retirement plans such as IRAs and 401(k)s.

We should be instituting a flatter, fairer tax system - one that rewards work, saving, and investing instead of punishing them. The main thrust of New York Sen. Daniel Moynihan's plan to reduce the payroll tax rate - currently the greatest tax burden on middle-income workers - should be adopted. This would expand employment by lowering the cost of hiring additional workers.

We should be capping federal spending so it does not grow faster than the economy. Just capping the growth of entitlements (except Social Security) at the rate of inflation plus population growth would save $257 billion over five years.

Amtrak, the National Endowment for the Arts, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the Rural Electrification Administration, the Small Business Administration, and other government entities should all be privatized.

We should be establishing enterprise zones in every distressed urban and rural community and give every resident of public housing the right to help manage his or her community and work toward home ownership. Educational voucher programs should be expanded so all families - not just the rich - can send their children to the schools of their choice.

The American family is the most overtaxed institution in America. We should phase in an increase in the personal exemption, to restore its value to the Truman-era level, which in current dollars would be more than $6,000. And we should say no to the special interests threatened by the prosperity free trade with Canada and Mexico will bring to America, and pass the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Not enough of the items on this checklist are taken seriously in the budget plan soon to be unleashed by the administration and Congress. Candidate Clinton promised economic growth. But what President Clinton will deliver is an economic package that slows economic recovery and hurts American families.

Jack Kemp, former U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, is a distinguished fellow at The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based public policy research institute.

Does no one hear cry for help?

Why are the Twin Falls police still looking for this child molester that a 4-year-old girl reported? They say they have to reason to doubt the girl's story, but what are they going to do with him when they find him?

They will lock him up, provide him with food and protection from other inmates (who would rather see him beaten for the crime he has committed), then he will go to court and the judges and prosecutors will let him go because the girl is "too young" to testify on the witness stand.

Child protection officials at Health and Welfare will put the girl's testimony on videotape, but they will not be able to use it in court. The girl and her mother will go through counseling, hopefully to learn it was not her fault and she is not alone on her accusations and cry for help but with no avail.

Then the nightmares begin for both mother and daughter who know they are merely victims in a judicial system that protects the mentally deranged attacker. A year or so later, the mother will still feel anger when she picks up the newspaper and reads about another child who was molested and cries for the little girl who was the victim not so long ago.

Punishment should fit crime

We don't have to be pushed around or accept what the sovereignty decides for us. In the case of the new jail - build it on the property we already own that would be in close proximity to the present jail. Added, it is optimal for catering, transportation of prisoners and the judiciary is practically next door. Also, make provisions for expansion if and when needed, hoping it won't be a skyscraper.

Our county commissioners and City Council make some ventures not too brilliant - squandering our money as they have done, etc.

The incarcerated in Jerome don't like the food. Let them know they are not in a place of luxury. How would they like what we lived on - C rations in World War II overseas?

I quite agree with Jackie Walker of Burley in her letter to The Times-News, speaking of prisoners having more rights than the innocent and the privileges they have. She speaks of "an eye for an eye" - that would solve the overcrowding problem; that the death penalty be enforced when a murder is committed and why house and feed him for life. Punishment should fit the crime, including castration for sex offenders.

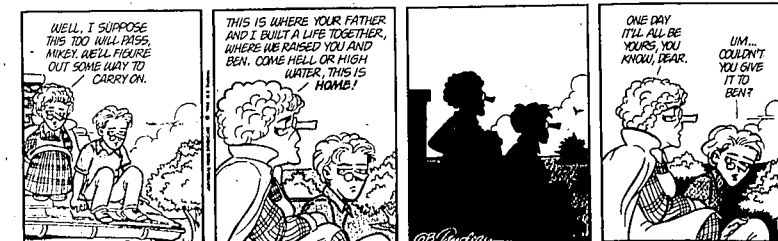

I tried to be kind to a neighbor: I got took for some $13,000 through theft means, cover up, disownership of property and removal of the same. He managed to seek bankruptcy via Chapter 7 - no penalty. Crime was paying very well for him until it was found for pedophile of two females. He was indicted for a trial by jury. Is he in prison? I don't know.

My sympathy for the criminal is at a very low ebb.

Soldier of fortune recommends: Stay out of Balkans

A fortuneless soldier, Bruno, will soon leave Sarajevo for his native Belgium. The civil war in the former Yugoslavia is too brutal for him to bear, he says.

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — You could call him a soldier of fortune. Except he's ended up broke, twice wounded, with terse advice for anyone else tempted to become a mercenary in Bosnia: "Stay out of it."

His name is Bruno, and he asked that his last name be withheld for fear of adverse publicity when he gets home to his native Belgium.

He was a Belgian army paratrooper for five years, then a truck driver, but harbored dreams of real war. In Bosnia he got his wish, but after 10 months he'd had enough. — monotonous rations, combat against former allies, shrapnel wounds, the grim execution of three POWs.

"It's not like what you see on television, or in basic training," he said Tuesday. "I was scared. I'm still scared."

The 25-year-old got to Bosnia almost by accident.

"I woke up one Monday morning and didn't feel like working," he said, so he headed to France with no warning to his parents and applied to join the French Foreign Legion. A few weeks later, at the legion's screening center in southern France, a comrade from England suggested heading for former Yugoslavia and joining the Bosnian army.

"He said it was easy to fight the Serbs and steal their weapons and make a lot of money selling them," Bruno said.

They were given the address of a clandestine Bosnian army recruiting office in Zagreb, Croatia, back then the Muslim-led Bosnian army and the Croats were allies. In October they spoke to a man and woman there who swiftly accepted them, no questions asked.

"They said, 'In three days, you'll go the front,'" Bruno recalled.

There was no promise of pay, but a tacit understanding the soldiers could keep or sell any booty they acquired during the war.

He joined a Bosnian Croat militia unit and was wounded in his first day of combat when shrapnel from a Serb mortar round pierced his hand. After two months out of action, he and four other foreigners shifted in late December to a unit of Bosnia's Muslim-overlooking western Sarajevo.

For the next seven months, Bruno was based on Ignat. It was quiet at first, but turned nasty when the alliance between the Bosnian untrained army and Croat militia unraveled. Bruno said he saw extensive combat against the Croats, including a battle in which several mercenaries were killed and he suffered another shrapnel wound, this time in the leg.

His colleagues in battle included two Englishmen, an American, a Swede and 10 so-called "mujahideen" from the Middle East.

He is unsure whether he has killed — usually he was firing from at least 50 yards and experienced no hand-to-hand combat.

One of his grimmer memories was witnessing an execution of three Serb prisoners of war. They had surrendered, but were machine-gunned one after the other by a Bosnian soldier shortly after their capture, he said.

However, he said he never saw Bosnian soldiers mistreating civilians.

There was no regular pay, he said only occasional handouts of a few German marks to buy always-scarcely cigarettes.

And the food?

"I've been eating bean soup for the past 10 months," he said.

He told his commander a week ago that he'd had enough, and was given $125 for turning in his rifle. He sold his uniform for two packs of cigarettes.

Now, his passport stolen and overland exit routes blocked by fighting, he is stranded in Sarajevo, hoping somehow that Belgian diplomats abroad can arrange a flight out.

He estimated there were more than 100 foreigners with the Bosnian army, most of them without regular pay, but a few of them experienced British soldiers who were paid in advance, by Islamic groups to provide training.

There have been repeated unconfirmed reports of Arabs fighting in the Muslim-led Bosnian army.

In May, a British patrol in central Bosnia stumbled on a "mujahideen" commander speaking in a recognizable northern English accent.

MIA searcher lauds Vietnam cooperation

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Vietnamese showed "outstanding" cooperation in recent investigations of Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War, the commander of the U.S. MIA office said Thursday.

U.S. Army Lt. Col. John Cray told The Associated Press that the 24th round of joint Vietnamese-American field investigations, which ended last week, made progress in the search for clues to the 2,252 U.S. servicemen listed as missing.

Cray said Vietnamese cooperation in the 27-day effort had been rated "excellent to outstanding" by investigators and excavation team leaders working in the field.

"It's come a long way," he said.

The latest searches focused on 130 wartime incidents. Cray's Vietnamese counterpart, Ho Xuan Diem, said searchers found about 18 sets of remains.

On Friday, forensics experts from the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii were to arrive in Hanoi to examine the remains.

Artillery duels rage across border

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli shells landed at the rate of nine a minute at some points Thursday as military convoys moved north, bringing with them fears of a ground invasion.

A Lebanese official in Beirut said the exodus of refugees from southern Lebanon was a "human catastrophe of tragic magnitude."

The nonstop bombardment has targeted suspected guerrilla bases of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, the Palestinian refugee camps of Rashidiyah and el-Bus and about 80 deserted Shiite Muslim villages.

The offensive, the biggest in Lebanon since Israel invaded in 1982, followed attacks by guerrillas trying to expel Israeli troops who occupy a self-styled "security zone" in southern Lebanon along Israel's northern border.

Witnesses said about 100 tanks and armored personnel carriers crossed the border to reinforce Israeli troops in the zone. Police said 12 people were killed and 62 wounded in dozens of Israeli air strikes and artillery barrages Thursday, bringing the toll since Sunday to at least 100 dead and more than 400 wounded. Most of the victims have been Lebanese civilians, police and U.N. officials say.

Thursday's dead included a woman and her 3-year-old daughter who died when Israeli helicopters fired on the village of Majdal Sittim, police said.

U.N. officials said Israeli howitzer shells fell at the rate of nine a minute in peak times, shattering houses and starting fires in fields and woods.

Nearly 500,000 refugees — more than 10 percent of Lebanon's population — have fled northward to Beirut since the Israeli attacks began Sunday, Health Minister Marwan Hamadeh said. He called it a "human catastrophe of tragic magnitude."

Israel says its offensive was designed to create a flood of civilian refugees to pressure the Lebanese government and its Syrian backers into clamping down on guerrilla groups attacking the security zone.

A Shiite Muslim woman protests against Israel and the United States during demonstrations Wednesday in Beirut against Israeli attacks in southern Lebanon.

wounded since since July 8 in the zone, which is patrolled by Israel and its Lebanese ally, the South Lebanon Army militia.

Israel has ignored a longstanding U.N. Security Council resolution demanding it withdraw from southern Lebanon.

A U.N. force that monitors southern Lebanon said two 155mm howitzer shells fired by Israeli gunners hit an observation post manned by Irish peacekeepers, "inflicting severe damage." No casualties were reported.

A U.N. statement said Israeli gunners had fired 22,000 howitzer shells into the region north of their security zone since Sunday, while helicopter gunships and jet fighter-bombers fired 1,000 rockets into guerrilla-held areas.

It said guerrillas had launched 275 Katyusha rockets at the security zone and northern Israel.

Security sources said a fresh barrage of more than three dozen Katyusha rockets were fired after nightfall. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they had no immediate word on damage or casualties.

U.N. officials said hundreds of houses in Shiit towns and villages were destroyed by Israeli artillery fire along a 30-mile arc, some crumbling on their inhabitants. Shells and rockets dug huge holes in the narrow alleys of villages and towns, snarling radio and telephone poles and blocking traffic.

Local radio stations interrupted regular programming to broadcast appeals from refugees inquiring about missing relatives.

In Syria's capital, Damascus, sources close to visiting Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri said he was in constant contact with Secretary of State Warren Christopher in an effort to check the violence.

One source said discussion on a cease-fire was still under way, with the parties trying to agree on the wording of the agreement.

Hariri was in Damascus for Friday's emergency session of the Arab League called to discuss the Israeli campaign in Lebanon.

Attacks cut off Colombia oil exports

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Rebel sabotage of the main oil pipeline forced authorities to suspend Colombia's petroleum exports, the state-run oil company said Thursday.

Rebels of the National Liberation Army blew up a section of the 500-mile-long Cano-Limon pipeline in eastern Colombia on Wednesday, according to an Ecopetrol spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Such explosions usually force the suspension of pumping, but rarely affect exports because Ecopetrol stores large quantities of crude on the Caribbean coast.

Israeli court acquits Demjanjuk

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Supreme Court unanimously acquitted retired Ohio worker John Demjanjuk Thursday of being the sadistic Nazi death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible" and threw out his death sentence.

In ordering him set free, the five judges said his guilt could not be proven beyond reasonable doubt, though they were convinced he had belonged to a Nazi unit whose mission was to exterminate Jews.

Outside the court, the ruling was met with shouts of disbelief and anguish. Inside, Demjanjuk, 73, listened impassively in the dock as Chief Justice Meir Shamgar announced the acquittal. Demjanjuk's son, John Jr., wept and said he was "glad to see that they (the judges) actually had the courage to stop the injustice."

Demjanjuk had argued that his 1988 conviction was a case of mistaken identity and steadfastly denied that he had been the brutal guard who tortured Jews as they went to their deaths at the Treblinka death camp.

This conviction had been based on dramatic testimony by five Treblinka survivors who said he was Ivan, but documents that emerged after the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991 offered conflicting evidence.

Israel said it will not pursue additional charges and served him a deportation order immediately after Thursday's ruling, but it was not clear where Demjanjuk would go.

He has been stateless since the United States stripped him of his citizenship in 1981, and the Israeli Interior Ministry said he was returned to an Israeli jail until a country could be found to take him.

Demjanjuk's family has appealed to U.S. authorities to let him return. In Washington, a Justice Department official said the grounds for Demjanjuk's deportation from the United States were still valid because he lied about his wartime activities on immigration papers. But he did not rule out that Demjanjuk could be readmitted.

A likely destination for Demjanjuk is his native Ukraine, and officials there said he probably would be admitted.

Israel television late Thursday quoted defense lawyer Yoram Shetel saying that Demjanjuk was granted a passport, but he declined to name the country. Shetel could not immediately be reached for comment.

Economist rips Russia currency action

MOSCOW (AP) — A leading Western economist lashed out Thursday at the Central Bank's decision to invalidate billions of old rubles, calling the motivation behind it "criminal."

"Economically it was a senseless decision and politically it was a stupid decision," said Anders Aslund, a Swedish economist and consultant to the Russian government. "Certainly there were criminal motives behind this action."

The Central Bank's decision Saturday to recall rubles printed before 1993 has sent Russia reeling, touching off a governmental crisis and general panic.

"Probably (Central Bank chairman Victor) Gerashchenko felt that having gotten away with it once he could try again," Aslund said.

Gerashchenko mustered a 1991 currency reform in which all 50- and 100-ruble notes were recalled.

President Boris Yeltsin has tried to soften the measure by extending the two-week deadline to Aug. 31, but letting Russians exchange 100,000 (about $100) old rubles instead of 35,000 ($35).

But Yeltsin still contends with hard-line lawmakers eager to chip away at his power base.

Aslund hinted that Gerashchenko may have engineered the ruble action to divert attention from controversy swirling around Russia's main bank.

In the past few months, Central Bank officials have been accused of corruption.

Retrievers gloat over 'monster' root

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Parrish Tupps and Cirilio Trejo took the call last week when a clogged drain caused flooding in several Clearfield homes.

The Roto-Rooter workers knew they were dealing with a root. A big one. This was good.

It turned out to be a gnarled, smelly 64-foot-by-10-inch cottonwood tree root.

"We're like fishermen. We want the big ones. This is the kind of thing that happens to you only once in a lifetime," said a proud Trejo.

Tupps said he realized they had hooked a big one when it started edging out of the pipe July 21. "I started yelling to Cirilio for help because it was starting to look like a Japanese monster. I knew I was messing up with the Godzilla root," he said. "The more it started coming out, the bigger our heads started getting."

It took a 1,500-pound winch working at top capacity to pull out the root. They tugged it out slowly, so it wouldn't snap.

Roto-Rooter Corp. spokesman Toby Genrich said the root makes the pair serious contenders for induction into the company's "Monster Root Hall of Fame."

Roto-Rooter employees throughout the United States have until Dec. 31 to dredge out the nation's longest continuous root.

Tupps and Trejo took the white and tender root to the parking lot of Ogden Roto-Rooter Sewer and Drain Cleaning Service, and figured they'd get rid of it before it started getting brittle and smelling like rotting foliage.

CDC offers tips to avoid mystery illness

ATLANTA (AP) — Sealing even small openings in homes is among the ways government doctors hope to control the mysterious rodent-borne illness that has killed at least 14 people in the Southwest.

But the virus itself, which now has struck in Nevada as well, still eludes capture in the lab, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday.

"It's a little bit like planting fruit trees," said the CDC's Dr. C.J. Peters. "We have a whole orchard planted, but so far nothing has come up or borne fruit."

The CDC said it has confirmed that the new strain of hantavirus caused severe respiratory illness in 18 people: 12 in New Mexico, four in Arizona and two in Colorado. Fourteen have died.

It also found hantavirus antibodies in the blood of a 24-year-old Nevada woman, who is recovering. Hers is the second case outside the outbreak area — the Four Corners, where New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Utah meet. An east Texas woman apparently died of hantavirus last month.

The CDC is investigating another 28 possible cases, including 10 deaths, and is studying whether hantavirus has caused other milder illnesses.

Hantavirus is spread through close contact with rodents and their droppings. Chief suspect is the deer mouse.

The CDC had recommended that people merely avoid rodents, particularly the booming deer mice population. Now, it is preparing specific ways Southwest residents can minimize risk. Health departments should receive the recommendations early next week.

"It's sort of a common-sense approach to establishing a de-moused zone around your house," Peters said. "It's going to require individual initiative. It's not something the government can do for you."

The top priority: Sealing houses against deer mice, which can squeeze through a crack just one-fourth of an inch wide, Peters said.

Homes have a lot of those tiny openings — window air conditioners, attic ventilation and holes where electric lines, plumbing and cable lines enter.

Other tips:

- Take out garbage in rodent-proof containers, not plastic bags.
- Feed pets only one meal's worth, so excess food doesn't attract mice.
- Don't leave old cars or other junk in yards for mice to use as nests.

Set mouse traps in woodpiles and keep piles litter-free.

The measures should help people avoid hantavirus, but ending the outbreak depends on capturing the virus in the lab. The CDC so far has been able only to detect hantavirus antibodies, which indicate exposure.

Isolating the virus, which the CDC has attempted for almost two months, takes a long time, Peters said. It took 30 years for one hantavirus strain found in Southeast Asia.

Scientists are trying to capture this hantavirus a second way. Since the virus forms a protein when it attacks cells, they are cloning patients' cells to search for the protein and thus the actual virus.

"We're going to get this virus, one way or the other," Peters said.

The outbreak hasn't abated. The last confirmed patient in the Four Corners states became ill July 3, and the Nevada woman was affected July 7.

But it isn't spreading farther afield, said CDC epidemiologist Dr. Stephen Ostroff. The CDC has tested 55 people with unexplained respiratory illnesses from 24 other states without finding hantavirus.

The Nevada case isn't surprising because deer mice are just as endemic there as in New Mexico, he said.

BYU puts group on probation

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Brigham Young University student panel placed the feminist group VOICE on probation Wednesday night, one month after a guest speaker talked about a mother God.

But VOICE president Yvette Young was relieved today by the United Club Council's action.

"I'm just happy they didn't kick us off campus.... The political climate on campus made that a legitimate fear."

Young said the student-run council placed her group on probation for failing to follow proper procedure in lining up speakers, including Margaret Toscano, a member of the board of the Mormon Women's Forum.

Other infractions stemmed from two feminist awareness marches.

At a VOICE meeting June 16, Toscano spoke about archetypes of women in art and architecture, and also about how there are few depictions of a "Mother God." That impedes women using her as a role model, Toscano said.

The speech was reported in a front page story in the student newspaper "The Universe" the next day.

But several days later, the newspaper carried an apology to its readers "who were discomfited or confused by an article in Thursday's newspaper concerning Heavenly Mother."

A source at the newspaper, speaking on condition of anonymity, said today the apology was prompted by a complaint about the story from a member of the university's Board of Trustees, a complaint conveyed to the newspaper by BYU administrators.

The apology noted that Toscano had not been approved through official channels, and expressed personal beliefs not in harmony with doctrines of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Texan burned in Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — A Texas man was in critical condition Thursday after being burned by a geyser in Yellowstone National Park, Superintendent Bob Barbee reported Thursday.

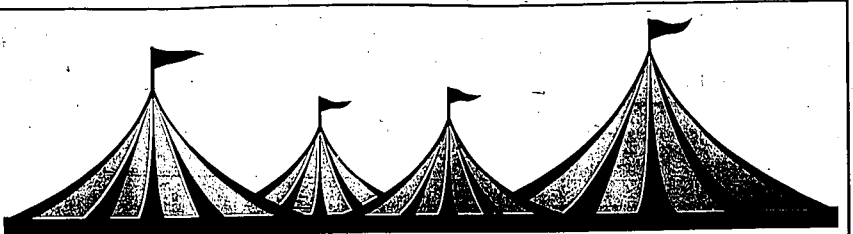

It was the second time this summer that a park visitor was burned by a geyser.

Tim Cooper, 21, of Lubbock, Texas, and a companion were having their picture taken in front of Flood Geyser in the Midway Geyser Basin on Wednesday afternoon when the geyser erupted, Barbee said.

Cooper received second-degree burns to about one-third of his body, but the companion was able to move away, Barbee said.

A park conservationist saw the incident, and rangers immediately provided emergency care. An ambulance took Cooper to West Yellowstone, Mont., and an airplane took him to the Intermountain Burn Center at University Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Pie contest will raise money for library

TWIN FALLS - It's looks that contest - at least this Saturday in a pie-baking contest to raise money for the library.

But because Idaho law disallows the sale of food not baked in commercially approved bakeries, the pies will be judged on looks and not taste, said Jeff Blick, who's helping with the sale.

Those who attend the sale at Kelley Garden Center can bid money for their favorite-looking pie, with the proceeds going to the library. When the sale is over, those who baked the pies can take them home, Blick said.

However, 100 commercially baked pies will also be on sale, and these can be taken home by the highest bidder, he said.

The sale starts at 10 a.m. and lasts until 4 p.m., Blick said. The best-looking pies will be announced around 2 p.m., he said.

Kelley's donated the fruit for the pies and anyone who wants to bake a pie can stop by the garden center for an entry form, Blick said.

Falls Brand Meats donated hot dogs that will be sold, and Falconhurst Dairy donated ice cream, he said.

Proceeds from the sales will go to the library foundation.

Improvement project should start soon on Blue Lakes N.

TWIN FALLS - Work to widen Blue Lakes Boulevard North is expected to start in the next couple of weeks, said an Idaho Transportation Department engineer.

Engineer Scott Malone said PMF Inc. of Twin Falls submitted the apparent low bid to widen the street from the Five Points North intersection at Addison Avenue to near the Skippers Seafood and Chowder House.

PMF's bid totaled $1,069 million dollars, Malone said.

The contract has not been awarded, but Malone expects the papers to be signed soon.

The project, which he expects to take at least two months, will bring this stretch of Blue Lakes North to the same width as the rest of the street, Malone said. Work probably will last into the fall, he said.

"But this depends on the weather and how the contractor wants to phase it," he said.

The project will include installing a traffic signal at the Blue Lakes and Heyburn Avenue intersection.

Military aircraft set for Twin Falls airport Saturday

TWIN FALLS - An F-16 fighter jet, Apache Helicopter and a vintage World War II bomber will be on display at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport on Saturday.

The aircraft will be part of an open house from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m., airport Manager Ron Madsen said.

"This gives people a chance to see their airport," he said.

It also will give them a chance to enjoy an eggs, bacon and pancake breakfast for $3.95, he said.

Besides this, those who want to ride in a helicopter can do so for $35, while airplane rides will cost $10, he said.

For braver heroes, parachute jumps will cost $175, he said.

Besides the military aircraft, others will be on display, such as a plane that the Bureau of Land Management uses to fight fires, Madsen said.

Slide program scheduled tonight at Malad state park

An evening slide program is scheduled for today at Malad Gorge State Park. The program will be presented by park interpreter Hilary Liller at 8:30 p.m. at the Malad Gorge State Park picnic shelter and will last approximately 45 minutes.

Saturday, a guided walk along the edge of the gorge has been planned. People interested should meet at the Malad Gorge footbridge at 4 p.m. and bring some water and sturdy walking shoes. The program will last approximately 90 minutes.

Kimberly spud firm may fight verdict

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent
and Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

JEROME - The owner of a Kimberly potato packinghouse said Thursday he may appeal a jury's $78,000 judgment against his company for fraud and breach of contract.

Russet Valley Produce owner Kenneth Mulberry violated his contract with Jerome potato grower Don Thibault by refusing to continue buying his potatoes, a jury ruled last month.

Mulberry said the potatoes he agreed to buy from Thibault in 1991 turned out to be so poor that he couldn't sell them, so he sued for the return of his $35,000 down payment.

But not only did the jury refuse to award Mulberry the return of his down payment, it also ordered Russet Valley to pay Thibault $78,000 in damages for fraud, violating the contract and "unfair conduct."

The produce company was also found to be in violation of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act of 1930. According to court records, the company wrongfully rejected or refused to pay for potatoes delivered to them by Thibault.

After hearing one of Russet Valley's employees testify that he added dirt, rocks and damaged potatoes to spud samples taken from the Thibault shipment, the jury ruled in favor of Thibault.

The jury also ordered Mulberry to pay $2,000 in damages. A hearing to iron out details about the payments and attorney fees is scheduled for today.

In a telephone interview Thursday, Mulberry denied telling his employee to put bad spuds and dirt into the potato samples. He said the employee was reprimanded the day of the alleged action for showing up late for work.

Even if the samples were sabotaged, it should not have affected the overall quality of the potatoes, Mulberry said.

According to Russet Valley's contract with the Thibaults, the amount of clean, usable No. 1 potatoes is calculated after all

Twin Falls schools to seek funds

By Stefano Esposito
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The School Board voted unanimously Thursday evening to hold another levy election this year and to allocate $145,000 in state funds for an across-the-board 4 percent employee pay increase.

Board members will present a resolution for the specifics of the $400,000 supplemental levy Aug. 10, but no firm date has been set for an election.

"We will make that decision at the August 10th meeting but we're anticipating the 7th or 8th of September," said Chairman Steven Tolman.

The proposed levy is designed to reinstate many of the cuts in programs and personnel that board members said they would have to make following the June 22 defeat of an earlier levy. It does not include $370,000 sought for a 3 percent salary increase.

Since voters rejected the earlier $840,000 override levy, the district has received nearly $145,000 in one-time state budget surplus funds and up to $100,000 in other state money.

Board members voted Thursday night to allocate $145,000 of that money for an employee salary increase.

The money would be used to offset mandatory increased retirement contributions, as well as larger medical premiums, Tolman said.

Tolman said the increase was not automatic, but was "subject to negotiated approval." The next meeting between employees and representatives of the board is set for Aug. 3.

The board also agreed to use the remaining $100,000 in state funds to pay for three new teaching positions. Superintendent Terrell Donich estimated the average salary plus "fringe benefits" would be close to $30,000.

There was some debate over whether the money should be used for textbooks and other supplies in the event that the supplemental levy does not meet with voter approval, but the consensus was that the district needed teachers more urgently than books.

"As you look at the options, the most sensible thing is to get the staff together and look at the supplies on the supplemental levy," Donich said.

"We've gotta have teachers in the classroom or the rest of this stuff is superfluous," Tolman said, adding that there was no sense "hamstringing" teachers by not providing them with adequate tools to educate.

In an interview after the meeting Tolman said it was likely that two of the new teaching positions would be at the junior high school.

Bruneau plans anti-snail event

The Associated Press
and The Times-News

BRUNEAU - A Sept. 25 fund-raiser and public relations campaign are planned to help fight against the Bruneau Hot Springs snail, a federally designated endangered species.

Pingpong balls will represent the snails in the Great Bruneau Snail Race on a one-mile course down the Bruneau Backstreet Ditch. The snails themselves are the size of a pencil point.

"We thought to raise awareness of the issue it needed to be a tongue-in-cheek kind of event," Sherry Collier, president of the Bruneau Valley Boosters, said Tuesday. "That way we could have some fun with it, but raise people's awareness of threats from the Endangered Species Act."

The Bruneau Valley Boosters say the snail's listing could shut down farms and ranches, adversely affecting everyone in their community. They are trying to raise $100,000 for biological research and legal services to stop what they call a government attempt to "steal groundwater rights."

Declining spring flows, believed to be caused by farmers pumping from the aquifer, endanger the snails.

The pingpong "snails" sell for $5 each, and the winner will receive $1,000.

Ex-truck driver repairs fishing poles as gifts to children

Twin Falls resident Roy Hazen says he has given away 119 fishing poles to children, with plenty remaining for future requests.

By Annlise Taylor
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Some children actually send word to Roy Hazen that his fishing poles work pretty darn well.

The 78-year-old Twin Falls man made the poles after all.

Hazen, an avid fisherman, retired 16 years ago and decided he needed something to do.

"I can't sit still, I'm nervous," said Hazen, a Twin Falls resident since 1935. "So, I putter with them."

After driving trucks for Garrett Freight Lines for 24 years and Greyhound Bus Co. for two, he settled down to repairing secondhand fishing poles. He decided to give the poles to kids who couldn't afford them.

Four years ago, he started repairing and giving away poles and has given 119 of them away to date. He has donated about 20 this year, he said.

Hazen picks up the used poles anywhere he can find them - cheap. He buys his reels for $2 and the poles for $3 to $4.

"I started out with people who didn't have money to buy one," Hazen said. "It doesn't matter who. If they ask for them, they get them."

Some of Hazen's "kids" have sent him letters or photographs of their catches.

His face lights up with a wide grin when he talks about fishing and camping.

"I used to make five trips to Blackfoot Reservoir a year," he said. "I have caught rainbow trout that are 4 1/2 pounds and bigger."

In the spring, Hazen advertised his poles over the KLIX Swap and Shop radio show.

Hazen does the handwork just because he likes to give the needy a helping hand.

"Mostly it's because of the kids - if they're fishing they don't get into trouble," he said.

Making came out of ski poles and golf clubs is Hazen's current specialty.

"It gives me something to do," he said. "You can't quit."

Idaho officials seek longer extension on deadline for new landfill standards

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Idaho officials urged federal regulators and Congress on Thursday to give cities and counties more time to bring garbage landfills into compliance with new federal pollution safeguards.

The Environmental Protection Agency is proposing a six-month extension for smaller or solid waste landfills to meet the new environmental standards. Without action by the agency or Congress, landfills must stop receiving waste if they don't meet the requirements by Oct. 9.

In testimony to a Senate panel, Idaho state Rep. Mark Stubbs called for a one-year extension for landfills. He said the EPA proposal wouldn't offer enough help to most rural counties in the West trying to establish expensive new landfills or upgrading existing ones.

"If you can't give us money, give us more time," said Stubbs.

A six-month delay is inadequate, he said, because winter weather would prevent work on landfills.

Sen. Dick Kempthorne, R-Idaho, also advocated a longer extension for local governments.

"Since my arrival in the Senate, the issue that has been raised with me most often by county commissioners and mayors, both within and without Idaho, has been their real difficulties in meeting the Oct. 9 deadline for compliance with the new landfill regulations," Kempthorne said at the start of the hearing.

Local officials, he said, "have come to view the municipal solid waste deadline as counterproductive to sound environmental decision making."

Richard Guimond, an EPA official, conceded that not all local problems would be solved by the six-month extension but he maintained that "it will help out many of the communities impacted."

Supporting the EPA proposal was John Torbert, a Kansas county official testifying for the National Association of Counties. The extra six months, he said, will offer relief to those counties in the most need of additional time.

Torbert and other local officials stressed that federal regulators must provide states with as much flexibility as possible in enforcing the tougher new environmental standards for landfills.

The National Solid Waste Management Association, a group representing private landfill operators, said it opposed a broader across-the-board extension but supported the limited EPA proposal to help smaller landfills.

Daniel Weis, of the Sierra Club, said the EPA proposal was "an acceptable compromise provided that it is not weakened any further, nor extended any longer."

EPA unveiled the landfill standards in 1991, and gave states two years to incorporate the requirements into their programs for regulating and licensing landfills.

The new standards restrict the location of landfills, govern the closing of facilities and set requirements for operation, including liners to protect against leaks and groundwater monitoring.

One problem is that many states, including Idaho, have yet to obtain final EPA approval of their waste management programs, which can go beyond the minimum federal requirements.

After hearing complaints from local officials in several states, EPA recently announced its proposal for extending the compliance deadline to April 1994. The extension will apply to landfills receiving no more than 100 tons of trash a day. That's enough to accommodate a city of about 50,000 population, according to EPA.

The agency will be accepting public comments on the proposal for 30 days and will issue a final regulation by the end of September that will spell out details of the extension.

Salt Lake City mayor settles PBC civil case for $458,000

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Salt Lake Mayor Deedee Corradini has agreed to pay a bankruptcy trustee $458,000 so that she and her husband will not be named in a pending civil suit.

Corradini said the settlement was reached late Thursday afternoon. She admitted no responsibility for the Bonneville Pacific Corp. bankruptcy that has clouded the administration of the city's first woman mayor.

"This has nothing to do with liability," said Corradini, a Democrat who has not decided whether to seek reelection to the non-partisan office in 1995. "It will be devastating to us financially."

A federal criminal investigation into the company's 1991 failure continues, but Corradini said she doesn't expect to be indicted. "I've always felt confident I would not have trouble on that front," she said.

Some $223,000 of the settlement will be a repayment of loans Corradini and husband Yan Ross received from Salt Lake International, an Panama affiliate of alternative energy company Bonneville Pacific. Another $69,000 is to repay travel expenses of the two incurred, ostensibly, for Salt Lake.

Corradini was not an officer in Bonneville Pacific, but was a founder of its parent company and a minority owner of Salt Lake. Bonneville Pacific principals included prominent Salt Lake businessmen, and the company once was a darling of the investment community.

Corradini and Ross paid off a $255,000 loan to Sallah last December. That loan was secured by their Salt Lake home, which Corradini said they now must sell.

The trustee trying to recover assets for creditors and shareholders said that Bonneville Pacific principals enriched themselves and others by providing loans through off-shore companies such as Sallah, that they never expected to be repaid.

Corradini, however, said she and Ross always intended to repay the loans. "In my own mind, I owed a majority of that money back anyway," she said.

However, more than a third of the money is an outright settlement. "We've agreed to pay $166,000 to get this behind us," the mayor said.

The couple also agreed to give the bankruptcy trustee one-third of their stock in FirstCorp, the holding company for First Professional Bank of Salt Lake City.

The couple are the majority owners of the small, closely held bank. No value has been attached to the stock, and the bank is not now for sale, she said.

The settlement is to be repaid over several years, Corradini said.

The mayor said she and her husband figured a civil suit would drag on for years, and the legal fees would be higher than the cost of the settlement. "We'd rather the money go to creditors than lawyers," she said. "It's worth it for the peace of mind."

Vernon Hopkinson, the attorney for bankruptcy trustee Roger Segal, called the settlement a fair one.

Though the agreement has been signed, the formal papers must be prepared and approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Allen.

Corradini Ross and the bankruptcy trustee had been negotiating for several days, the mayor said.

The trustee plans to file a 700-page lawsuit Monday in federal court, naming a long list of defendants allegedly responsible for driving Bonneville Pacific into bankruptcy. It will be an amended version of a Bonneville Pacific suit first brought in 1992.

Several homes to recover $700 million for the failed company's creditors and shareholders.

While Corradini has dodged civil liability, a criminal investigation continues.

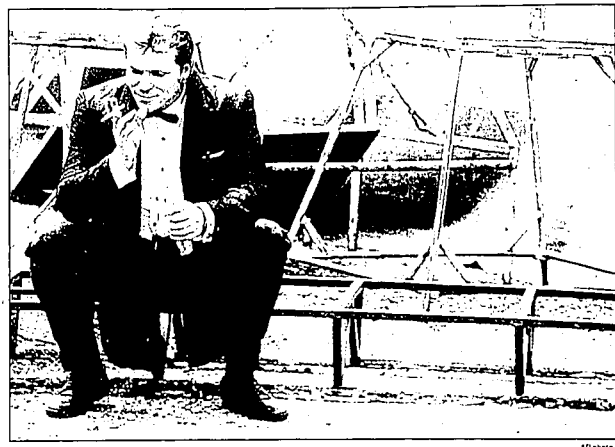

A multi-agency federal task force has been presenting evidence in the case to a grand jury. Corradini said she has not appeared before the grand jury.

The only person prosecuted so far has been John T. Dunlop, a former top officer of Bonneville Pacific. He pleaded guilty in April to three felonies, including insider trading, filing false statements with the Securities and Exchange Commission and helping another file a false tax return.

The plea was part of a deal in which he agreed to cooperate with investigators. Dunlop is to be sentenced next month.

Corradini said she hasn't given much thought to the effects of the Bonneville Pacific case on any bid for reelection.

Kimberly struggles with tight funding

By Anais Taylor Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The School Board rejected a proposal for a supplemental levy election Thursday night after Superintendent John Garner presented the district's financial report.

Jim Wright moved not to hold a levy election, citing a time shortage before school starts and voters' reluctance to pass the measure.

"I don't think we have time for it," Wright said. "We'd have an uphill battle."

The district has cut all 1993-1994 programs by 25 percent, Garner said.

School, office and maintenance supplies took big hits. Two teachers' positions were also eliminated, and the industrial technology class was reduced from six to three periods per day.

Kimberly School District will no longer have home economics, debate and a "middle-first" program, the school board said.

The amount of school supplies such as textbooks, lunch paper, writing utensils, paper and tape will be reduced for next year, Garner said.

"Students may have to supply more paper," said Chairwoman Bev Shevemaker.

The high school and middle school will share a library, the board said.

The cuts come despite a windfall from the state, which has distributed surplus funds to school districts.

Said Garner: "We've already budgeted our one-time money. With a levy, our budget would increase by $46,500."

An alternative to the supplemental levy would be an emergency levy later in the year.

"The only way to add more state funds is to add more children," Garner said.

Members of the public expressed concern about tax burdens from out-of-district students. Garner said the school district could send those students to other districts.

Jerome OKs subdivision in county

The Times-News

JEROME — After three years of negotiations, a subdivision near Big Little Ranches in Jerome County has received approval from the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Kimberly developer Ray Lickley, who must now receive approval from the Jerome County Commission, has plans to build a subdivision south of town. A meeting to present the proposal is set for 11 a.m. Monday.

The first phase will open 33 lots to be purchased by private home builders. Lickley will build to suit, or the construction can be done by the person who buys a lot.

Neighbors in the Big Little Ranches adjacent to the new subdivision had objected to the development that would increase traffic on roads through the Big Little Ranches area.

They had also objected to having manufactured homes in the new subdivision. A covenant to be signed by people buying a lot and building a house or placing a manufactured house in Sawtooth Acres would regulate the type of structure and prevent any "trashy" buildings, Lickley told commissioners.

Anti-gay rights bill faces challenge

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Legislature passed a bill that bars local governments from enacting anti-homosexual rights measures, and the head of a conservative group promised a constitutional challenge Thursday.

The American Civil Liberties Union, meanwhile, threatened to sue to force cancellation of the local anti-homosexual rights initiative votes scheduled in September and November.

Gov. Barbara Roberts intends to sign soon the bill, which won final approval from the state Senate on Wednesday. The measure means "no special rights for anyone, equal rights for everyone," she said.

"This is a bill of trust. It stops dividing Oregonians," Roberts added.

But no cease-fire was in sight Thursday.

Lon Mabon, chairman of the Oregon Citizens Alliance, said his group plans to mount recall attempts against several senators who voted for the bill. The conservative political organization already had targeted 14 House members for recall.

"Within three or four days, we will be announcing that we'll be adding at least six or eight names to the other 14," Mabon said.

ACLEC lawyer Charles Hinkele sent a letter to Secretary of State Phil Keisling asking that he order local officials to cancel the anti-gay rights votes set for September and November.

Hinkele said a 1988 Oregon Supreme Court ruling shows Keisling has the authority to cancel the votes because the bill bars local governments from enacting such laws.

Keisling said he would ask the attorney general for an opinion on the matter. "But all of the advice that we've previously received is that the initiative power is quite broad. It includes the ability of voters to initiate and vote on measures that are blatantly illegal or unconstitutional," Keisling said. "The courts are the ones empowered to make those judgments, but only after voter passage of a measure."

The local measures sponsored by the Oregon Citizens Alliance would prohibit the cities and counties involved from promoting homosexual rights. Votes are scheduled Sept. 21 and Nov. 2.

When Roberts signs the bill, it will nullify anti-homosexual rights measures approved by voters earlier this year in four counties and three cities.

Searchers find hiker's body about 300 yards from where last seen

ZION NATIONAL PARK, Utah (AP) — Searchers on Thursday found the body of a 27-year-old Scout leader missing and presumed drowned in a jagged canyon adjacent to a Zion National Park.

A joint statement by park officials and the Washington County sheriff's office said the body of David Fleischer was found in an extremely steep portion of Kolob Creek called Slot Canyon. It was found between 200 yards and 300 yards from where he was last seen, said park spokesman Danny Davies.

Davies said that distance included a vertical drop of about 200 feet.

Fleischer and two other adults, Kim Ellis and Mark Brewer, led a group of five teen-aged Explorer Scouts into Kolob Canyon the morning of July 15.

Fleischer and Ellis, 37, died in separate accidents within hours of beginning the hike when they were caught in whirlpools below waterfalls that make the hike one of the most thrilling and difficult in the park.

Brewer and the scouts, which included one of Ellis' children, were rescued five days later. Ellis' body was recovered then.

High water flowing down the narrow canyon hampered search efforts. The extremely narrow and rugged Slot Canyon section was the last to be searched for that reason, said NPS incident commander David Bruceell.

The Washington County Water Conservancy District had shut off water running into Kolob Creek from the Kolob Reservoir last week. The canyon had been flooded by waters from the reservoir, which was being drawn down in order to make room for heavy runoff.

District officials said they had notified the park. Park officials said the reservoir lies outside its boundaries and it sways hikers only of high water hazards within the Zion Narrows, which would have comprised the last leg of the scout's adventure.

Timber industry sues over sales

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Mill operators dependent on federal timber have sued the Clinton administration, claiming it has failed to complete reviews of timber sales on time.

"There's very little federal timber left in the pipeline, and now a significant portion of it for the last year and a half has been tied up in consultation between two federal agencies," said Howard Sohn, the president of Sun Hards and Lonerock Timber Co.

The Endangered Species Act requires federal agencies, such as the Bureau of Land Management to consult with the Fish and Wildlife Service or the National Marine Fisheries Service whenever a federal action may affect a threatened or endangered species. But the act allows a maximum of 135 days for that consultation process.

The lawsuit asks the court to force the agencies approve or reject 12 sales awarded by the BLM that contain about 45 million board feet of timber.

An administration spokesman said the agencies are working to free up the timber sales, but said he would not comment on the lawsuit.

"We understand the concerns of the timber industry, and we are moving as fast as we possibly can," said Kevin Sweeney, a spokesman for the Interior Department.

The administration wants to fit the sales into President Clinton's forest plan, Sweeney said.

But timber industry officials say the plan isn't in effect yet and shouldn't be applied to sales that already have been awarded.

Sohn said he and other mill operators had hoped the forest plan would make more timber available, but the plan hasn't removed the issue from the courts.

With air ducts cleaned, dispatchers breathe again

By Eric Goddell
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Cassia County dispatchers made it through last weekend without having respiratory troubles.

That's a welcome relief for Sheriff Billy Crystal.

Several county employees working within the Law Enforcement Building have been hampered recently by ailments ranging from sore throats, headaches and nausea.

That appears to have stopped since the building's air ducts were cleaned about 10 days ago, Crystal said.

"We are reasonably sure the problem's gone," Crystal said.

He said the Boise man who did the cleaning found fungus and mold, which can cause breathing difficulties.

Dispatchers took the brunt of the health problems, often getting sick during weekends.

On the first day, a Sunday, when dispatchers first complained of illness, a tactical van was set up outside the building for dispatchers to do their work.

Doors of the building were kept open often to help purify the bad air.

Crystal said the dispatcher who got the sickest from the air is expected to be back to work in a few days.

Youth Ranch open house scheduled

RUPERT — The Idaho Youth Ranch will hold an open house Saturday.

Youth at the Ranch will conduct tours of the facilities available to house and train young men living at the ranch. Tours will be held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Livestock raised by the youth will be shown and judged at 10 a.m. A free barbecue lunch will be served from noon to 2 p.m.

The public is invited to attend all events.

Stereo equipment stolen from truck

RUPERT — A Paul man reported his stereo and equipment was stolen from a truck Wednesday.

Amador Chavez said between 12:30 a.m. and 10 a.m. someone pried open the left side small window on the truck which was parked on East Idaho Street, according to the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department.

Several speakers, amplifiers, compact disks and a stereo all valued at $1,270 were stolen, deputies said.

Legal questions delay Cassia hospital

By Eric Goddell
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Idaho attorney general's office is reviewing a second legal question raised by the proposed construction of a new hospital in Burley.

The delay could prove costly for Intermountain Health Care, of Salt Lake City, Utah, which is financing the new $16 million Cassia Memorial Hospital.

According to county Commissioner John Adams, commissioners are requesting an opinion on the legality of Intermountain leasing medical equipment belonging to the county.

Rupert resident and Burley attorney Donald Chisholm had questioned the practice.

While county commissioners say there is nothing wrong with the leasing proposal, Chisholm says he is against county government subsidizing health care facilities.

"The impression I've had with the commissioners is that they don't seem to recognize that health care facilities are entirely different entities and have their own income streams," Chisholm said.

Cassia County has purchased equipment for Cassia Memorial in the past. Commissioners say it is in the best interest of county residents, and that it's important for the county to have a positive relationship with the hospital.

Adams said he's confident of the legality of the leasing plan.

Nevertheless, Intermountain, which manages the current Cassia Memorial Hospital, wanted to be sure and asked commissioners to request an opinion from Idaho Attorney General Larry Echols' office, Adams said.

The commissioner said a reply should be received in about a week.

Adams and the other two commissioners have said at previous times that they are disappointed at the delays in construction of the new hospital.

This is the second legal question to be raised about the new facility.

Previously, Minidoka Memorial Hospital near Rupert questioned Cassia Memorial's board about the legality of the county's original plan to lease land it had purchased for almost $700,000 to the hospital.

The land would have been leased to the hospital for $1 per year.

Although the attorney general's office said the plan appeared to be legal, Intermountain decided to purchase the land and was the high bidder at an auction more than a month ago.

Adams said he was unsure whether the land had been officially awarded.

Commissioner Weldon Beck, who sits on Cassia Memorial's advisory board, said the delay is costing the hospital money.

Cassia Memorial Hospital Administrator Richard Packer said previously that he was anxious to get construction started; some materials, including steel, were already purchased so contractors can start work as soon as possible.

Packer said quick construction will hold down inflationary costs.

As well, he wanted to get the new facility under way so that construction can continue through winter.

Even though there have been delays, Cassia Memorial Chief Financial Officer Brian Hickendover said Intermountain fully intends to finance the new hospital.

Adams said commissioners have been happy with how Cassia Memorial is operated, and that is why the county has supported it with equipment purchases.

He said some counties have opted county hospitals, but Cassia County chose not to do that. "We aren't in the hospital business," he said.

Chisholm said that as long as a hospital is economically healthy, counties shouldn't have to subsidize it with taxpayer money.

"If the hospital was broke and needed money in order to keep its doors open, then it would be a dif-

4-H members demonstrate their skill

County, Schmerbauch said.

Projects can be on almost anything, but they must provide information.

Education is the primary purpose for doing the project, she said.

Since the 4-H program is open to children age 9 through high school, the competition is broken down into four divisions by age.

A panel of three judges grades each demonstration.

"They must have an opening, body and a closing," she said.

The children are also judged on organization, visuals and delivery.

Following the demonstration, the judges can ask the kids questions on their projects. "Every 4-H'er has an opportunity to come to demonstrations," Schmerbauch said. "But not everyone does. Just the ones that want to compete at this level."

This year's contest involved nine demonstrations on topics ranging from photography to good sewing habits.

Competitions are held each year. Each county holds its own contest and winners move on to the district meets.

The competitions are usually held prior to the county fair, where the projects are entered-and also judged.

AIDS patient warns Indian youths

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (AP) — Lisa Tiger was a cheerleader who was voted most popular in her Oklahoma high school. The Muscogee-Creek daughter of a well-known Indian artist, she was thankful for how good life had been.

Until last year, when at age 27 she discovered that her boyfriend, Ronnie, had infected her with the AIDS virus.

"If it can happen to me, it can happen to anyone," Tiger told several hundred Navajo youths Thursday gathered at the Civic Center here.

Today Tiger travels the country educating other Indian youths about AIDS and alcoholism, the disease responsible for the separate shooting deaths of her father, artist Jerome Tiger, and younger brother Chris.

"I've always thought of myself as the luckiest person in the world. I've always been happy, with who I am," said Tiger.

Tiger joined Navajo President Peterson Zai, Navajo basketball champion Rynaldi Becenti and Jeremiah Bisui, a seventh grader who will appear in the upcoming Oliver Stone production Natural Born Killers, at the Fort Defiance Agency Youth Gathering.

Lawmakers slow to show support for sport licenses

LEWISTON (AP) — State leaders are reluctant to support the Nez Perce Tribe's drive to assume authority for issuing fishing and hunting licenses on the north-central Idaho reservation.

One partial solution may be adding a Nez Perce member to the Idaho Fish and Game Commission, they say.

Tribal leaders cite the Nez Perce 1855 treaty with the U.S. government that reserved the tribe's right to take fish in all streams on or bordering the reservation. The reservation encompasses most of the Clearwater River, where thousands of anglers fish for trout and steelhead.

Tribes elsewhere in the Northwest have successfully established fishing license systems on reservation waters.

Nez Perce leaders presented their licensing proposal to the Legislature's interim Indian affairs committee during a meeting earlier this month.

Legislators' reactions to the proposal probably won't surface until the committee meets again in October, said State Sen. Gary Schroeder, R-Moscow, who co-chairs the panel.

One major issue, Schroeder suggested, is the tribe's contention the Fish and Game Commission ignores Nez Perce on their own land.

A solution, he said, might be adding an Indian member to the commission by increasing its size to seven members.

The tribe also wants the Fish and Game Department to turn over its property holdings on the reservation.

The state and Nez Perce have negotiated about fishing and hunting issues for years, including licensing authority, Fish and Game Director Jerry Conley said.

"We've always hesitated at that particular agreement," he said. "The feeling is that we really could not compromise on that idea."

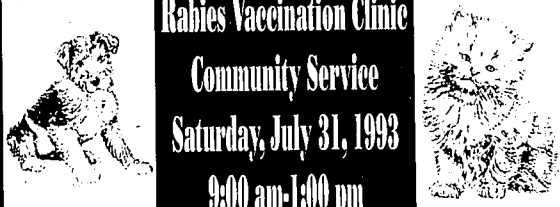

Several court cases, most recently in South Dakota and Montana, have supported Fish and Game's position, he said. Muddying the waters, in Idaho is the fact that most lands on the Nez Perce reservation are owned by non-tribal members, and the reservation cannot be considered closed to general access.

Searchers find boy's body in canal

REXBURG — The brief search for a missing 2-year-old REXBURG boy has ended with the discovery of his body in a canal near his home.

Authorities identified the victim as Logan Baldwin. About 75 people joined in the 90 minute search on Wednesday before the child's body was found.

Targhee forester moves to Clearwater

LEWISTON — Targhee National Forest Supervisor James Caswell has been named supervisor of northern Idaho's Clearwater National Forest.

Caswell's appointment, five months after Win Green resigned as supervisor of the Orofino-based forest, won qualified praise Wednesday from both the Idaho Conservation League and the Intermountain Forest Industry Association.

"It's the kind of the right person for that job because the Targhee has dealt with what the Clearwater is about to," said Michael Medberry, public lands director for the Idaho Conservation League.

Joseph Hinson, executive vice president of the Forest Industry Association, said the timber industry's experience with Caswell on the Targhee has been positive.

Caswell, 47, has been supervisor of the St. Anthony-based forest for 10 years. He previously was a deputy supervisor on the Boise National Forest.

Handbook offers advice on health care

BOISE — The Central District Health Department is working with a non profit company called Healthwise Inc. on an ambitious plan to help consumers make smart health-care decisions.

The plan calls for residents of Ada, Boise, Elmore and Valley counties to receive a thick health handbook to help them determine what's wrong, what they can do about it at home and whether they should call a doctor.

Other services, all free, also would be offered.

"I think the timing is right," Jim Guffire, director of the health department in Boise, said Wednesday. "It's time to bring the consumer as a major partner in decisions about their own health care."

Bonner official blasts environmentalists

BOONERS FERRY — Bonner County Commission Chairman Ron Smith plus the county's troubles on environmentalist groups.

Smith's stance after instance, Smith details how the extremists ignore human needs in the county.

The conservationists are the ones demanding the Kootenai River sturgeon be listed as an endangered species, he said.

"The radical environmentalists are the ones that are causing us to have Subtitle D problems because of their concerns for the landfills," he said.

"They are the ones that filed a lawsuit against the county because of our land use plan. They don't want us to have any kind of a say in what happens to federal lands."

Conflict holds up new school trustee

MOISTPELLER — Norinne Kunz has not been sworn in on the Bean Lake School Board because of questions about receiving health care benefits from the school district.

The former teacher was elected to Zone 4 of the district this spring.

Idaho law forbids trustees from receiving any compensation, or financial benefits from the district.

Kunz has been working with a private attorney and consulted the Idaho Education Association to resolve the difficulty. She declined to give up her health benefits.

The IEA encouraged her to run for the board.

But the school district attorney, Roger Jones, advised her not to take office. State Code states it is illegal for a school board member to have pecuniary interests directly or indirectly with the schools, he said.

MK loses contract again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County transit officials have awarded a major rail car contract to a German-led corporation, rejecting for the second time a cheaper proposal from Boise-based Morrison Knudsen Corp.

The Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transit Authority voted unanimously Wednesday to award the contract for 72 transit cars to Siemens Dieselcar Corp. It's bid was $205 million compared to the $187.5 million bid submitted by Morrison Knudsen.

But spokesman Kevin Brett said the Idaho company would continue to seek contracts in the Los Angeles area, the nation's No. 2 rail market.

Brett said the transit authority failed to give enough weight to cost when it chose Siemens, especially since it faces a $123 million deficit.

Eighteen months ago, the transit authority rejected a lower bid from Morrison Knudsen for a Japanese company's bid of $122 million on a rail car contract. That action was quickly reversed because of public concern over possibly shipping jobs out of the county.

Analysts said Morrison Knudsen contested what was a relatively small project because of its symbolism in a major mass transit market and because a transit agency memorandum questioned the company's technical ability.

Brett said that in the latest rejection, at least the staff publicly acknowledged that Morrison Knudsen was technically qualified for the work. "We certainly feel vindicated," Brett said.

DOE's statements perplex Andrus

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus made little headway on Thursday in reconciling the contradictory statements of a top Energy Department official about the agency's position on congressional approval for immediate resumption of Navy nuclear waste shipments to Idaho.

Andrus

Andrus said he talked by telephone with Thomas Grumbly, assistant secretary for environmental restoration and waste management, about his testimony a day earlier before the Senate Armed Services nuclear defense subcommittee but received no adequate explanation.

"I told him, 'In one breath you say you're opposed, ... and then at the end you say if we can't reach an agreement by next week, I'll be back in here,'" in support of an exemption from federal environmental laws that would allow court-banned waste shipments to resume, the governor said.

"I told him, 'You can't have it both ways,'" Andrus said, but he quoted Grumbly as only responding, "Hopefully, we can resolve this, and it will be a moot point."

But Andrus remained adamant that he will fight any attempt to override U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan's ban on waste shipments, until the government proves that it poses a real threat to national security.

The subcommittee hearing was prompted by the nuclear Navy's campaign to circumvent Ryan's order that bars shipments until a comprehensive environmental study is completed of waste management operations at the Idaho Navy Energy Processing Laboratory. Earlier they could complete that assessment in less than two years.

Admiral Bruce DeMars, the head of the nuclear Navy, had been telling the congressman that it shipments do not resume immediately warships will be contained docked and major layoffs will occur at America's shipyards.

Ryan considered those arguments in his detailed 63 page decision and discounted them, and both Andrus and Sen. Dick Kempthorne said the Navy failed to make a case that there was an imminent threat to national security during the hearing.

In the weeks following the court order, Energy Department officials indicated they planned to appeal of the ruling although the Navy was pressing to take the decision to a higher court, and Energy Secretary

Hazel O'Leary reportedly told House Armed Services Committee Chairman Ron Dellums, D-Calif., that she opposed the Navy bid to circumvent Ryan's order.

Grumbly repeated that opposition early in his testimony before the Senate subcommittee on Wednesday, saying he hoped talks over the following week would help resolve the conflict between Andrus and DeMars.

But he later said, "If our efforts to settle this case prove fruitless, we then would be prepared to work with the committee to fashion a narrow and tailored legislative solution, focused specifically on the particular problems created by the injunction against shipment of Navy fuel to INEL during the time needed to complete" the environmental impact statement.

Ryan had cited sworn statements by naval and department officials that the shipment ban would create no problem for Navy operations into the spring of 1995 when the government said the study should be completed.

Kempthorne said the Energy Department also indicated it has changed its mind about appealing the order and now intends to join the Navy in an expedited appeal of Ryan's decision.

Grumbly said the court order carries broad implications for the nation's nuclear program. "Simply put, were other jurisdictions to emulate what has occurred in Idaho, we could have nuclear waste gridlock," he said.

State requires cleanup at Earth First! camp

DIXIE (AP) — An Earth First! camp in northern Idaho still is not good for the environment, although it is closer to being safe and sanitary, a state health official says.

Earth First! and the Ancient Forest Bus Brigade are staying on some private property near the community of Dixie and the Cove-Mallard timber lands.

Donald Sokolowski, an environmental specialist with the North Central District Health Department, recently visited the camp and pronounced that it violated health guidelines.

"They have improved, but they are not in compliance," he said, following last Friday's inspection.

He and other health officials planned to meet with landowner Robert Amon on Thursday to discuss more latrines and wastewater dumps.

Sokolowski initially ordered

Amon to purchase sewage disposal permits, dig three pit latrines and sumps for "gray water," or the water from showers and dish drains.

Permits have been purchased, while two latrines and one sump were dug, "that shows good faith," said Paul Guenther, the district environmental health director. He is not contemplating legal action.

"I prefer to work in a congenial manner with the folks in there," he said.

"We will move heaven and earth to comply with the latrine regulations, but I would hope that they would understand that until today, it's been raining and snowing," Amon said.

The activists have been cited for attempting to blockade road building to reach the timber cutting. They contend it should be saved as the largest contiguous plot of roadless land in the lower 48 states.

Tales of the undead

Twin Falls teacher writes, publishes vampire novella

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — So what's a 45-year-old math teacher from Idaho know from vampires?

Quite a lot, as it happens. Enough, in fact, to write a book.

Bill White, who teaches math and computer skills at O'Leary Junior High School, has self-published his own novella — "novelle," he calls it — about two vampires who conspire to help defeat a dark rebellion by "ogres, demons, serpents (and) things that crawled through men's nightmares."

Entitled "Conquest of the Damned," it was written in a few weeks on White's home computer, cranked out on his printer and marketed through local bookstores.

"I'm not sure how much it cost me to produce, to be honest with you," White said. "Once I started writing it, the story became more important."

White is a veteran freelance writer — his stories appeared often in "Clart," the Times-News's former shoppers' tabloid but most of them were Westerns.

"My wife and I saw 'Phantom of the Opera' in Reno, and I was intrigued by the story," he said. "I couldn't wait to get home and write my own story."

White said he was impressed by the mastery of the storytelling in playwright Ken Hill's musical comedy version of "Phantom," based on Gaston Leroux's 19th-century novella.

"I wanted to reach that level," he said. "There are no vampires in Leroux's story, but White knew he wanted some in his."

"I read 'Dracula' years and years ago, and it probably gave me nightmares," said White, who as the son of a career Marine officer spent much of his youth in suburban Washington, D.C., and in Pocatello.

'Conquest of the Damned'

The Times-News

Excerpts from "Conquest of the Damned":

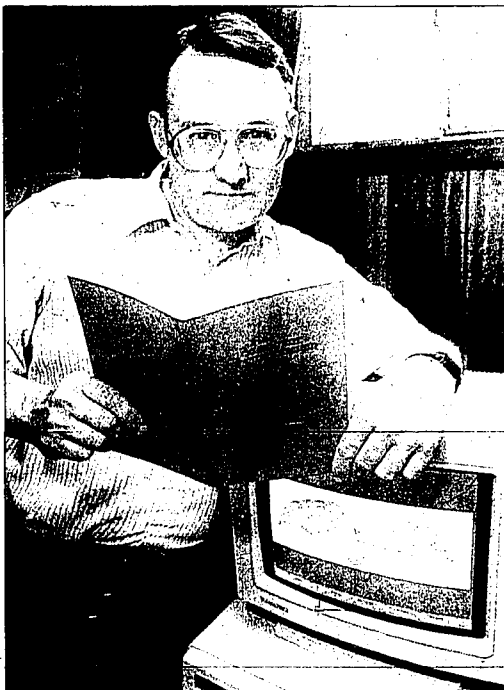

"Come, Evelan. We've been expecting you for some time." It was Szekelyan, King of the Ogres. The odor of old earth newly turned blended with the smell of lotus flowers. I eyed the giant's resemblance to a human. Dull, blackish-brown skin failed to hide his warty bumps up and down his body. His green talons were hardly noticeable in the dim light of the pub. The Ancient One raised his hand, and Evelan, like a zombie, followed him into the mist. I could not move. The thorns of mist crept up my legs and I felt like a thousand stakes had cut through my heart.

"Evelan (the vampire) even feasted upon one said Henry VIII, who as 'Defender of the Faith' gave (her) a lively tingle when she bit into his neck. He was, she said, a bit too spiky for her taste...."

"I started reading everything I could get my hands on about vampires," he said. "I even rented vampire videos."

White decided to set his adventure in Ireland because of the Emerald Isle's brooding atmosphere and its rich folk tradition of trolls, sprites and banshees.

"That meant more research on Celtic folk tales, combined with a healthy Yankee Please see VAMPIRE/C2

Bill White used his home computer to write and publish his vampire 'novelle,' set in 16th-century Ireland.

Hagerman Valley setting inspires landscape artist

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

BLISS — Bob Willhite started painting landscapes in 1986, but it wasn't for lack of something to do.

He's also a professional photographer, a musician, a wood-carver and a full-time park ranger at the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument. In his "spare time," he tends horses at home on the ranch he calls Eagle Rock. There's a lava cliff behind the house where goldeneyes nest.

"I have 10 acres in the Hagerman Valley that's all pasture," Willhite said. "I have an Arabian stallion not broken to ride until the age of 7, and he's a great horse — amazingly gentle and controllable."

Such is the stuff that inspired Willhite to set up shop on canvas. One of the paintings he will display at Art in the Park is set inside his stables, where an old hat hangs on the wall.

Willhite, 46, got interested in art when he was in high school. He asked his mother to buy him a set of oil paints, and then proceeded to haul them around unopened for the next 20 years. He didn't begin using the paints until seven years ago, when his wife gave him an easel for his birthday. After that, the course was set.

"I'd really like to paint full time," said Willhite, who has since switched to watercolor. The sagebrush and vast skies of Southern Idaho help him capture the mood and feel of his compositions.

"I'm very much an outdoors person, a naturalist," Willhite said.

Born and raised in California, he pursued his love of the scenic to the extent of earning a bachelor's degree in forest management from Humboldt State College in Arcata, Calif. He went on to receive a master's degree in forest science from Harvard (the Harvard).

"It was a wonderful experience," Willhite said. "I worked on measuring and quantifying different perceptions people have about

Art in the park

The 34th Annual Art in the Park will be held Saturday and Sunday in Twin Falls City Park.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

The juried show of fine arts, sponsored by the Art Guild of Magic Valley, will showcase 50 artists from throughout the West. A special attraction will be the work of Steven Boyd of Jackson, Wyo. Boyd creates mini-western scenes of my cuts from deer antlers. The artwork is mounted on decorative wood and can be worn as jewelry.

Also new this year is a concession booth from Logan, Utah, featuring Navajo tacos. Norm's "itty bitty food cart" will offer additional treats.

During Art in the Park, artists will submit one painting each to be judged for a $100 prize. A people's choice award will also be presented.

Entertainment will be provided by the Jan Olsen Jazz Trio.

forest scenes." He then published a number of articles on the subject.

When Willhite takes his palette into the forests, he also totes along his camera.

"I've won more awards for my photography than I have for my paintings," he said. "I like to combine both in my work."

Willhite paints on site for a while. Then he shoots photographs to use in completing the work. He has a studio in his home and a shop outside it. He also rents out rooms to other artists.

Willhite's paintings and photographs, with titles like "Ducks of Fire," "Ely Falls" and "Autumns," are sold at Snake River Pottery and Advancing to Go in Hagerman. Framed paintings start at $195. Framed photographs start at $65.

TWIN FALLS — Diamond Rio chose the right name. The group's music is starting to shine up the billboard — and it's a sound with many facets.

When Diamond Rio pulls into Jerome next week, it will tote along a platinum debut album, a couple of top vocal group awards from the Country Music Association and the distinction of being the first group in the history of country music to have a debut single go No. 1.

The excursion into country's leading edge is the result of an unusual blending of bluegrass, rock and jazz.

"I think our uniqueness comes from our different musical backgrounds," said Gene Johnson (mandolin and vocals) in a phone interview last week. "For example, Brian Prout (drums) has a background in rock and roll, while our pianist (Dan Truman) is classically trained."

The rest of the group, Marty Roe (lead vocals and guitar), Jimmy Olander (lead guitar) and Dana Williams (bass and vocals) specialize in banjo, bluegrass and more.

Actually, Diamond Rio started out as the Tennessee Fire Boys. It's a name which, according to Olander, makes you think of "white belts and white shoes and calico shirts." In other words, it didn't fit.

The musicians found a new name when a trucking company called Diamond Rio became interested in the group. "Rio" became "Rio" because Roe "kind of thought it was spelled that way."

No matter. Spelling was not essential when Diamond Rio belted out its jumpy debut single, "Meet in the Middle," and sent it to the top of Billboard's country chart. The song, a hard-driving tale of love and perseverance, was soon followed by another mega-hit, "In a Week or Two."

Musicians spending money to make own studio recordings

The Baltimore Sun

Not so long ago, if you owned a guitar and wrote your own songs, your chances of ending up in a studio, recording your very own album, were about as likely as being struck by lightning while cashing a winning lottery ticket on the way to pick up your Nobel prize.

But good news, guitar players! Your odds have dramatically improved. All you need now is your guitar, your songs and some spare time.

Oh, and be sure to bring your checkbook.

For in the same tradition as would-be Great American Novelists who dip into the rent money to pay a vanity publisher to print their tome, guitar-toting dreamers are no longer waiting to be discovered: They're laying out big bucks — upward of $10,000 in some cases — to record their own albums.

"There are an incredible number of musically inclined people out there who want to pursue this," says Mitch Solomon, president of Oasis Recording Inc., a College Park, Md., studio specializing in acoustic musicians. About 40 percent of his business is producing "vanity albums," offering the recording, graphic design, and finished CDs and tape cassettes.

"It sure seems like a lot of people are just going ahead and doing it," adds Seymour Gunther, a vice president at Chicago's Flying Fish, a respected, non-vanity label publishing a wide variety of acoustic music and often seen by the unpublished as the first leg up the ladder to the big time. This Gunther gets some 2,000 unsolicited self-produced tapes a year from musicians hopeful of looking on with a legitimate publisher, but he seldom buys more than one.

"Ten years ago I'd be lucky to get five self-produced tapes in the mail a month," says Dick Cerri, host of "Music Americana," an all-acoustic show heard Sundays over WLTT-FM in Rockville, Md.

"Now I am deluged with 40 or 50 a month, from all over the country. There's no way I can listen to 'em all."

One explanation for the explosion of self-published music is that it's relatively inexpensive to do it. Musicians frequently record in the living room — the equipment is now fairly affordable — and pay only for the duplication.

Another factor, says Sue Trainor, is that musicians use these tapes as a marketing tool. She's a 41-year-old Columbia, Md., folkie who spent about $7,000 at Oasis to produce and duplicate "From a Closeup," her album of parodies and other original folk tunes.

"This isn't done as a profit-making venture," she says. "It's a promotional venture to keep your name out there so you can continue to get bookings. Also, people, by and large, don't go to a concert if they haven't heard something by the performer. So most people who self-produce see it as a tool to a larger end."

"People would probably be ill-advised to do this if they live paycheck-to-paycheck," says Solomon, whose recording studio is one of about 50 in the Baltimore-Washington area. "On the other hand, it could work out well. We charge $2,500 for 1,000 CDs. The musician can sell them for $12 to $15 each, so if you keep your costs down by recording at home, which is becoming a trend, you could do OK."

Daniel Stern: Growing up silly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Daniel Stern's mother saw him as the loopy burglar in "Home Alone," she exclaimed: "You're doing the same thing you've been doing since you were 3 years old!"

The tall, wry-faced actor, now director of the new sports comedy "Rookie of the Year," confesses to growing up silly.

"I'd stuff a pillow in my stomach and fall down and be a clown when we'd do a kids show," he said. "I could always make the grownups laugh hysterically. I can't remember what I was doing, let alone what I was thinking. Yes, I was silly. I don't know why."

'I'd stuff a pillow in my stomach and fall down and be a clown when we'd do a kids show. I could always make the grownups laugh hysterically. I can't remember what I was doing, let alone what I was thinking. Yes, I was silly. I don't know why.'

— Daniel Stern comic actor

His silliness proved a bonanza when he and Joe Pesci were bested in their criminal schemes by small-fry Macaulay Culkin, and again when Stern joined Billy Crystal as greenhorn cowpokes in "City Slickers."

Stern grew up in Bethesda, Md., son of a Housing and Urban Development official. For all his juvenile performing, he never entertained the thought of becoming an actor.

"I never had a burning desire since I was a kid," he recalls. "I wasn't in a play until high school. I wasn't like, always acting. I just played sports — baseball, basketball, football; wherever there was a ball, I'd be chasing it."

"I graduated high school and went up to New York. I took an acting class with Austin Pendleton, and within a couple of months he hired me to be in a play. Two years later I met Peter Yates, and he cast me in 'Breaking Away.' He hadn't seen me work, he didn't even audition me. That was my first movie."

Like most successful actors, Stern looks back on those early years with a warm glow of nostalgia, even though he and a friend lived in an apartment with no electricity and slept on mattresses borrowed from a hooker's hangout next door.

"A lot of actors have wanted to act since they were 2, and they were under pressure to succeed," he recalls. "I didn't have that. I was just thrilled to be a grownup at 17 and having my own apartment in New York."

The elder Stern was not so thrilled when he saw how his son was living in the big city. But he made no complaint.

"The only peculiar thing in my childhood," Stern said in an interview, "is the amount of confidence that my parents showed in me. When I was 13 years old, my friend and I hitchhiked from Washington, D.C., up to Maine. At 13!

"I was just visiting with my parents a month ago, and I asked, 'How would you ever let me do that? My son is 11. In two years I'd let Mike do something like that? Never!' Their answer was: 'I don't know what we were thinking; you just seemed as though you could handle it.'"

"It was the same when I moved to New York: 'You seem to be able to handle it. Good luck. It's been nice being your parents.'

During lean times, Stern worked behind the counter in a pharmacy and tried his hand at delivering flowers. On his first day, he drove a load to Tavern on the Green, where he backed his truck into a limousine. He telephoned his employers and told them to pick up the truck.

After "Breaking Away," Stern appeared in a succession of films, often in serious roles: "Diner," "Stardust Memories," "Honky Tonk Freeway," "Hannah and Her Sisters," "I'm Dancing as Fast as I Can," "Blue Thunder," "DOA," "The Miqrago Beanfield War," "Coupe de Ville."

"Home Alone" and "City Slickers" became the watershed films for Stern, bringing him star status. They also brought an offer from Joe Roth, then production boss at 20th Century Fox, to direct and appear in "Rookie of the Year."

The story concerns a 13-year-old boy who becomes a whirlwind baseball pitcher as the result of a shoulder operation. He is signed by the Chicago Cubs and leads the perennial losers to the World Series. Thomas Ian Nicholas plays the kid, Gary Busey is the hardbitten veteran who befriends him. Stern plays the loopy coach whose brains were scrambled by a beanball.

Stern previously had directed 10 segments of TV's "The Wonder Years," for which he provided the voice-over. With his acting career going full-time, why would he take on the less lucrative role as director?

"A combination of things, I guess. It always looked like the best job on the set; the guy doesn't have any time to sit around. I've worked with great directors: Barry Levinson, Peter Yates, Robert Redford, Woody Allen, John Schlesinger, and I saw them get to be as creative as they wanted to be. It's a great way to express yourself, fully."

Julie Yet," has been out for barely two weeks and is already climbing the charts.

"I think we just lucked out and hit something that sounded good and worked," said Johnson, still humble after all those hits. "Even with the awards, we don't feel like we are at the top at all yet; we are still building."

Part of that construction involves clocking lots of hours on the road.

And so, the members of Diamond Rio often leave their families behind in Nashville and climb aboard the bus. This year, they will log close to 200 days en route to the top.

"On the bus, we watch movies on a 27-inch TV, and we have a really good sound system," Johnson said. "We bring along our CDs and tapes, and our bunks are equipped with TVs and VCRs."

Luckily, the group members are also friends.

"The biggest thing that makes groups break up is not being able to get along, but our personalities mesh together really well," Johnson said.

It shows on stage, too. Diamond Rio is known for its energetic shows, with lots of fun and audience involvement.

"We are looking forward to doing the shows in Idaho, because we always have great audiences in Idaho," said Johnson, who played at the Twin Falls County Fair with the group last September.

"And Dan (Truman) is originally from Utah." (He was a member of the BYU Young Ambassadors.)

After Idaho, it's on to a late August gig on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" — and more time on the highway.

"We want to be the best and on top all the time," said Johnson of the group's not-so-paltry ambitions. "Sort of like Alabama."

That's the group, not the state — though Diamond Rio will undoubtedly leave its mark on the state at some point, too.

Diamond Rio, which will be performing at the Jerome County Fairgrounds Tuesday, has jumped to the top of country music with a unique fusion of bluegrass, rock and jazz.

Entertainment industry finds cash in recycling

New York Daily News

Don't call them movies. Call them events.

An "event" movie is one the public knows all about before it even opens. They knew all about "Jurassic Park" because they'd read the book. They knew all about the upcoming "The Fugitive" because they've seen the TV show. An event movie has a built-in audience that can help propel the box office over the hump of that all-important opening weekend; it's like marrying into a big family — except lots of cousins at the reception.

The easiest way to come up with an idea for an event movie is not to come up with an idea at all, but to steal one. Or as they say in the business — adapt one.

Novels are fertile ground for stealing — or adapting — because best sellers are read by millions, and readers stay loyal to their favorite authors by buying up whatever they write. But that doesn't keep them from making any number of bewildering changes.

TV shows have increasingly become fertile ground — even "Saturday Night Live" skits such as "The Heads," which opened Friday, and last year's surprise hit "Wayne's World."

This is especially true when they tap into baby-boom nostalgia. People love the shows they grew up on simply because the shows are reminders of golden childhood.

Before the first "Addams Family" movie came out — the sequel is due this Christmas — producer Steve Rudin sat in a theater while the trailer played the "da-da-da-dum" theme. Rudin yelled out, "What is that song?" And the audience snapped back. "It's 'The Addams Family,' you moron!"

But a happy moron, because Rudin knew his project had made it into the realm of "event" movies, with a ready-made audience that knew "The Addams Family" like the back of their hands, or of Thing's hand, anyway. No matter how the movie turned out, it was going to make a pile of money.

"The Soul Stones were my idea," he said.

Soul Stones turn victims into solid rock — even vampires who manage first to escape reptilian skins, dogs from hell and hydra-limbed doormen.

"I wanted a tale like 'The Hobbit,'" he said.

White's two vampire characters, Jesse and Evelyn, are dark heroes, preying upon hapless slaves and monks who wander by. They ally themselves with nymphs, wee people, titans, peguses and unicorns against a rogue's gallery of malevolent creatures of the underworld, less from conviction than because they don't like the alternative.

"I never did like taking stands," Jesse says. "Morality, justice, defending one's beliefs against all odds — it was very much human, and very much foreign to me."

White, who has taught school in Twin Falls for 18 years, may write a sequel to "Conquest of the Damned," after he finishes another story — a Western — he "has to write."

"I'm not making much money on this, maybe 50 cents a copy, and I've just sold a few copies so far," he said. "But I didn't do it for the money. I did it because it was a story I wanted to tell."

"Conquest of the Damned" is $3.50 a copy, and available at Canyon Books and Paperback Plus in Twin Falls, or for $4.50 by mail from White at 186-3 Bitterroot Drive, Twin Falls 83301.

'Mutant League' a lot like Raiders

By Roy Bassave
Knight-Ridder News Service

Video games

Game: "Mutant League Football"
Formats: Sega Genesis 16-Bit System.

Price, manufacturer: $69.95, Electronic Arts.

Recommended ages: 13 and up.

How the game works: The NFL season has begun, and there's a new league in town: the Mutant League, where anything goes. The league consists of 16 vicious teams of aliens, robots, trolls, skeletons and super-humans.

You can set the "Death Index" from Rough all the way up to Annihilation, call wild plays or nasty audibles like "vile vulgurs," "terminator trolz," "rad rockers" and more.

When the QB throws a bomb, it's the real thing, you can watch instant replays to see where the body parts land, and you can throw TNT at the boring marching band.

Some of the players from are Spew Puke, Razor Kid and Bones Jackson, playing on 19 unique fields like Hellfield, War Stadium, Butcher Dome, Asteroid 66.

Good points, bad points: Super animated graphics with bone-chilling sound effects. Play is like normal football but with some new twists for one or two players. Because of the violence, this might not be a good game for young children.

The verdict: Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula never coached a team like this; it's more like an Al Davis-Raiders game.

Actually, his Raiders would fit in rather well and probably win.

Newsday

Who's your all-time favorite movie villain?

Jack Palance's Stark Wilson, the grinning gun-slinger who shoots down a hapless farmer in "Shane"?

Richard Widmark's Tommy Udo, a cackling gangster who pushes an old lady in a wheelchair down a flight of stairs in "The Kiss of Death"?

Margaret Hamilton's snarling Wicked Witch of the West, who put Dorothy through hell when all she wanted was to get back to Kansas in "The Wizard of Oz"?

How about Anne Baxter's conniving theater ingenue in "All About Eve"? Or Joel Grey's tongue-licking entree in "Cabaret"? Lionel Barrymore's cantankerous old Mr. Potter in "It's a Wonderful Life"?

Hmmm, we can smell the sweet spice of their wickedness from here. They are classic depictions of evil that each generation of moviegoers can enjoy hating as much as the last, and we owe the actors who performed them our undying gratitude.

Villains, of course, have been around as long as heroes. It's hard to imagine one without the other. But of the thousands of evil men and women who have been portrayed in movies, only a relative handful stand out. It's one thing for writers to invent heavens; it takes a great performance to make them memorable agents of sin, and they are wonderful creatures.

We are moved to this celebration of great screen villains by the delicious menace of John Malkovich's character in Wolfgang Petersen's current "In the Line of Fire."

Malkovich's Mitch Leary, an embittered CIA agent who intends to vent his rage by killing the president, would be a good bad guy no matter who played him. But Malkovich does more than just perform the role; he leaps inside the character's twisted soul, becomes intoxicated on his bile and relishes the evil that comes out of him.

In the movie's most chilling moment, Leary blows away a pair of amiable duck hunters, point-blank, with the gun he intends to use on the president. The look on Malkovich's face immediately afterward is one of mischievous satisfaction and wonder, the look of a child who has petulantly dumped his oatmeal on the floor and is waiting to see what happens next.

Leary is a psychopath driven by a perverse sense of moral outrage — he views his right to kill the president as a form of emotional severance pay — and Malkovich seizes on the character's lethal blend of intelligence, training and anger to create a deceptively stable madman. He is the perfect counterpart to Clint Eastwood's Frank Horrigan, a dedicated Secret Service agent who blames himself for the death of JFK and who is determined not to allow another president to die on his watch.

Like most thrillers, "In the Line of Fire" builds toward a climactic showdown between the forces of good and evil, and how well it works is equally dependent on the depth of our sympathy for Horrigan and the intensity of our hatred of Leary.

Eastwood holds up his end, as stars are paid to do, and Malkovich delivers a performance of such sinister sincerity it ought to earn Mitch

Leary a spot in the pantheon of all-time movie villains. And who is the best of the bad he will join there? In a list of the classic heavies, the characters seem to fall into one or more of seven general categories.

Psychopaths and Assorted Nuts: These characters can't help what they do, and can't be talked out of it. Think of Patty McCormack's problem child in "The Bad Seed" (she picked someone down the stairs, too), James Cagney's rabid gangster Cody Jarrett in "White Heat" and, more recently, Anthony Hopkins' carnivorous Hannibal Lecter in "The Silence of the Lambs."

Moral Bullies: These characters create mischief out of wrong-headed self-righteousness. Recall E. Murray Abraham's exquisite treachery as Salter in "Amadeus," slowly murdering Mozart as a favor to God. Or Louise Fletcher's emotionally constipated Nurse Ratched, causing bedlam in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." And Gene Hackman's Little Bill Duggett in "Unforgiven," a lawman upholding justice with sadism and a bullwhip.

Entrepreneurial Piends: Some people will do anything to get ahead or make a buck; ruin their mother (Ann Blyth's ungrateful Veda in "Mildred Pierce"), cheat their clients (Michael Douglas's slimy broker in "Wall Street"), seduce a lover into killing her husband for insurance money (Barbara Stanwyck's blond black widow in "Double Indemnity"), Li'l even Barrymore's wealthy Mr. Potter even resorted to stealing in order to break George Bailey in "It's a Wonderful Life."

Political Gargoyles: The Cold War spawned some fabulous ideological monsters. Among the most heinously presented: Angela Lansbury's cold-blooded commie symp in "Manchurian Candidate," a woman willing to turn her own son into a brainwashed assassin. And who can't forget Lawrence Olivier's former Soviet dentist, using his drill as an instrument of torture in "Marathon Man"?

Thugs and Punks: These characters, almost always men, are just no damn good, and they hurt people. Some recent standouts include Scott Glenn's ex-con (the guy who ate the wrong out of the mascot hotdog) in "Urban Cowboy," Dennis Hopper's explosive gashead in "Blue Velvet" and Ray Liotta's paroled rattle in "Something Wild."

Devil's Agents: They may have other motives, but these characters essentially represent evil as a concept. Joel Grey's speechless, leering entree in "Cabaret," Robert Mitchum's shadowy stalker in "Night of the Hunter," Margaret Hamilton's witch in "Wizard of Oz" and, in one of the great voice performances of all time, James Earl Jones' Darth Vader in the "Star Wars" series.

Creeps and Pond Scum: The skin crawls as we recall Marlon Brando's cross-dressing western assassin in "Missouri Breaks," Jose Ferrer's lecherous Turkish officer in "Lawrence of Arabia," Eric Roberts' smarmy Paul Snider in "Star 80," and special mention goes to the two actors, whoever they were, who played the hillbilly rapists in "Deliverance."

No you were the worst, guys. Thanks a lot.

Hollywood villains meet PC problems

The Baltimore Sun

"Round up the usual suspects!"

That might have worked in "Casablanca" 51 years ago, but when today's movie makers are casting the role of the villain, the usual suspects increasingly are off-limits.

Cast a homosexual or bisexual "Basic Instinct," "Silence of the Lambs," "JFK," and the pay guys will protest. Cast a woman ("Fatal Attraction," "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle"), and the feminists will cry foul; Cast Arabs or Jews, Italians or Japanese, just to name a few groups who have been offended by their Hollywood portrayals over the years, and risk a squawk from an organization that likely has "anti-detonation" in its name.

"You cannot make anyone a villain today without raising a storm of protest," says Leonard Malin, a film historian and movie critic who appears on "Entertainment Tonight." "Certainly, sensitivities are at an all-time high."

Lawyers apparently are still fair game ("The Firm" and "Jurassic Park"), as are people with bad teeth ("In the Line of Fire") and, perennially, Nazis.

But as the makers of "Rising Sun" have found, not all former World War II enemies can be cast as the bad guys in today's movies without challenge. The movie uses an investigation of the murder of an American woman in the offices of a Japanese conglomerate as a platform for exploring fears that Japan is taking over the U.S. economy.

"It comes out at a time when there is already hysteria about Asian immigrants and Japanese trade policies," says Karen Narasaki, a Washington-based official of the Japanese American Citizens League, one of a group of Asian-American organizations protesting the movie. "Most of the Asian characters in the movie are negatively portrayed. They're insubstantial. They don't value human life."

Her complaint echoes those of countless other groups unhappy with the image Hollywood has created for them.

Earlier this month, an Arab-American group partially succeeded in getting what its members considered offensive lyrics changed for the video version of "Maddin," due out in October. Disney canceled lyrics describing the Arab homeland as a place "where they cut off your ear if they don't like your face," but retained the next line, "It's barbaric, but hey, it's home."

Last year, "Basic Instinct" managed to offend both gays and women with its depiction of a gay pick-wielding lesbian and bisexual woman. Gay groups disrupted shooting, disclosed the movie's ending to audiences as they entered theaters, and demonstrated at the Academy Awards over this and earlier depictions of homosexual minorities.

Similarly, Italian Americans in groups have decried their portrayal as murderers in many mobster movies such as the "Godfather" series. They and other groups have a similar message: It's not that they should never be portrayed as villains; it's that they're never portrayed as anything but villains.

The real solution is for Hollywood to get its act together and really portray the truth of our society and show people across the board doing everything," says Michaelangelo Signorile, a New York-based gay activist whose recently published book, "Queer in America," discusses media images of the gays. "Then it wouldn't be a big deal to have a gay villain. But when you always have a white heterosexual man as the heroes, it's a problem."

"It's only when the movie companies have shut the door to a few narrow images that these portrayals are taken to be representative of an entire group," says Thomas Cripp, a history and film professor at Morgan State and Harvard universities. "If the door is open wide enough, it's not a problem."

Cripp is the author of the just-published book, "Making Movies Black: The Hollywood Message Movie From World War II to the Civil Rights Era," his second in what may become a trilogy. He argues that African Americans more commonly were ignored or portrayed as buffoons rather than dehumanized in past times. It wasn't until the 1970s, when blacks began making more films, that a wider range of characters — bad and good alike — opened up, he says.

Mitchum memorable maniac

Newsday

Robert Mitchum's scripture-spouting, widow-murdering itinerant preacher Harry Powell in "The Night of the Hunter" deserves a place on any short list of memorable movie psychos. His knuckles are tattooed, with love on his right fist and hate on his left. Intertwining his fingers, he entertains yokels by acting out the eternal struggle of good and evil.

Charles Laughton's film is a stylized morality play, rather than a realistic melodrama, and Mitchum is pure evil, remorselessly pursuing two children for their dead father's stolen fortune.

The essence of Mitchum's creepy performance is that he reveals its rage on a few occasions — in a terrifying animal growl of fury, for instance, when a victim slips from his grasp. Otherwise, this self-annointed minister is calm and serenely confident. He blithely talks to God, asks him for new victims.

His self-assurance hypnotizes fools and his victims into willing cooperation. Shelby White, lying docile in bed with her arms crossed at her chest, is smiling blissfully as he raises his switchblade knife in the air to kill her.

And Mitchum croons hymns in a baritone so honeyed that even Lillian Gish, guarding the fugitive children from him with a shotgun, is unconsciously seduced into singing along with him.

Set in rural America during the Great Depression, the flawless performances are immeasurably enhanced by the atmospheric black and white cinematography and the evocative score.

Hollywood picks best of the baddies

Newsday

Terry O'Quinn, actor ("The Stepfather"): I suppose Robert Blake and Scott Wilson from "In Cold Blood." I remember the situation, the starkness of everything, how they tracked blood all over... really stupid and venal. No monster we can ever create in our minds is as frightening to me as true human potential for the kind of cold-bloodedness these guys showed.

Joel Silver, producer ("Die Hard" and "Lethal Weapon" series): Robert Shaw in "From Russia With Love." He was just so cold and icy and such an incredibly vicious bad guy. Remember he had a blond guy with chisled features who kills James Bond in the first movie. He was like a massive, icy, icy other character that was just the Alvin in the first movie... being of pure hostility and a great tragedy for Hollywood in general.

Jessica Walter, a tress (villainess from "Play Misty for Me"): Oh, Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes." She was so unambiguously horrible, mean and vile. All that southern gentility and, of course, underneath it, a heart of steel. She kills her husband. She just stares at him when his medicine falls out of his reach and she won't pick it up. She gets it in the end, though, because her daughter leaves her.

Charles Solomon, author ("Enchanted Drawings: The History of Animation"): Cruella de Vil in "101 Dalmatians" is a great exaggerated villain. "Sleeping Beauty." She is the embodiment of all the evil sorceresses and dark ladies of fantasy literature. She is remote and beautiful but in a cold, reptilian manner, and you can really feel her power when she turns into a dragon. She is a truly menacing figure.

Robert Rádnitz, producer ("Sounder," "Cross Creek"): Douglas Fairbanks was wonderful in "The Prisoner of Zenda" because he was obviously having such a great time. He was like a great Shakespearean villain and he relished playing it.

Producer Roger Corman, B-movie producer: Definitely Sidney Greenstreet, who played Gutman in "The Maltese Falcon." He was totally evil, but played it with such cynicism and enjoyment that one could really appreciate the utter evilness of the character. Unforgettable.

Lansbury the ultimate shrew in 1962 film classic

Newsday

Frank Sinatra remembers telling his then-good buddy Jack Kennedy that he was working on "The Manchurian Candidate," a thriller about a Korean War hero turned assassin. "Who," the president wanted to know, "was going to play the mother?"

At the time (1962), there was no shortage of grande dames who could play the assassin's right-wing-double-agent mom. But Angela Lansbury's bravura performance throws off so much heat and light that all alternatives wither away in the glare.

These days, Lansbury is so solidly established in the public mind as America's Old Dear that it's hard to imagine that she was once routinely cast as the Ultimate Shrew.

Part of what fascinates here is the way Lansbury's Mother Shaw starts out bad and keeps getting worse. She seems, at first, merely crass and pushy in orchestrating the meteoric rise of her doofus husband (James Gregory), a McCarthyite senator. She is later promoted to cruel, when she dismantles the summer romance of her son Raymond (Laurence Harvey) with a reactionary harangue delivered in an icy, flesh-crawling tone. By the time her true motives are revealed, "Mom" Shaw is traversing greasy depths of pure villainy. Lansbury also seasons this malevolence with a tart-and-smoky sexuality that takes on deliciously creepy dimensions when she French-kisses Harvey before sending him off to do mayhem.

Romantic law tougher on widows

The law in medieval England was quite specific on illicit romantic affairs. A widow caught in the physical act could be fined 20 shillings, but a young unmarried woman so apprehended was only liable for 10 shillings.

If you don't know a "Cavendish" when you see one, you don't know bananas. That's the ordinary yellow kind you get at the store.

Q. When you say most species of mammals aren't monogamous, what do you mean by "most"?

A. About 97 percent. Sizable most, what?

Herbert Hoover exercised with a medicine ball.

Q. Settle a bet: The Plymouth Colonists suffered drought, crop failures and Indian attacks. But no earthquakes, right?

A. Not right. On June 1, 1638, a quake hit them, too. Enough already. Gov. William Bradford wrote that the Pilgrims were all shook up, or words to that effect.

Q. Where does Cuba sell most of its cigars now?

A. Great Britain.

Am told you won't see a three-toed sloth in a zoo. Evidently, the animal can't be kept in captivity. It learns to eat only those leaves its mother eats in the wild. Without that specific nourishment, it dies, no matter how well fed otherwise.

Any jigger will tell you running forward is not as strenuous as running in place.

Q. Where does bourbon rank now on that list of favorite American hard liquors?

A. Fourth. Behind vodka, Canadian whiskey and conials, in that order.

In New York City's Bronx, one out of every eight households has no telephone.

The legal "Age of Criminal Responsibility" varies in various nations. In England, it's age 10.

Did I mention chairs have only been in common use for about 300 years?

Readers sink their teeth into debate on dentures

DEAR ABBY: In response to the lady who was offended at her church's annual mother-daughter banquet because a prize was given to the oldest mother present with her own teeth:

Obviously, she has never taken part in planning the games and entertainment. It's not easy to come up with something new and entertaining every year.

A couple of years ago, we offered a prize to the woman present with the largest bra size. It took only seconds for one of our good-natured members to jump up and claim the prize. I believe she was a 44-D. The applause was thunderous!

Please don't use my name. Not

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

everyone present thought it was funny.

PROGRAM CHAIRMAN DEAR CHAIRMAN: Not everyone who read the item in my column thought it was funny. For example, DEAR ABBY: I was appalled at the letter from "No Town, Please," regarding the mother-and-daughter banquet where they made a joke about wearing dentures.

To many people, dentures are a more personal topic than one's artificial limb or one's underwear. They enhance a person's smile, contribute to one's sex appeal, not to mention that they help a person chew. I have known some women who have never let their husbands see them without their dentures.

Making a game out of the fact that one wears dentures is neither funny nor churchlike. I hope the insensitive woman who caused this unnecessary embarrassment can find a more appropriate game to play in the future.

WARDE F. GRAVEL, D.D.S., BEDFORD, N.H.

DEAR ABBY: About the annual mother-and-daughter banquet at the church where they asked all the mothers who wore dentures to stand up, then they were asked their ages, and the oldest mother who had her own teeth got a prize. I have never heard of anything so ridiculous - not to mention humiliating.

I am a 62-year-old grandmother who has worn dentures since I was 30 years old - and I had partial plates for years before that. Very few of my friends and relatives know this.

Just last week my next-door neighbor of 25 years mentioned something that caused me to tell her that I wore dentures. She was totally flabbergasted.

If anyone should be so crass as to ask me if these are my own teeth, I'll say, "They damn well better be! I paid enough for them!"

I agree with you, Abby; that contest was rude, crude and insensitive. The woman who organized it should be asked if she is still beating her husband.

- FUMING IN AUSTELL, GA.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the lady who was sensitive about the fact that she wore dentures: I am somewhat amused that anyone would feel that way because I have always been very proud of mine. Perhaps it's because my natural teeth were very poor. They were also crooked and yellowish and gave me a lot of trouble. Out of necessity, I had them all pulled when I was quite young.

I am now 66 years young and my people still ask me if those are my own teeth. My reply: "Of course they are ... who else's would they be?"

- BABS
DEAR ABBY: It's no joke to wear dentures, but aren't we lucky someone invented them - otherwise, we'd be sucking our meals through a straw, I've worn them for years, and I don't mind telling anyone I do.

My false teeth are my claim to fame with my grandchildren. They say, "Hi, Gram ... show us your teeth!" I take them out and they scream with laughter, and then I get some hugs.

Wells schedules run, car show

WELLS, Nev. - The second annual Wells Fire Run, a combination poker run and car show, has been planned for this weekend.

BC's Bar in downtown Wells will have a "Welcome to Wells" party beginning at 8 p.m. today. The Bermuda Cowboys will play from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. today and Saturday at the 4-Way Casino. The 4-Way Casino will provide shuttle service for anyone needing transportation throughout the weekend.

Classic cars will be on display at the Wells City Park Saturday and Sunday. The Friendly Circle will serve breakfast for a nominal fee from 7:30 to 10 a.m. both days. Proceeds will go to the Presbyterian Church. The Silver Sage Eches will provide entertainment from 2 to 4 p.m. each day at the park. Several vendors will have beverages and snacks available both days.

The poker run through Wells will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday. Prizes to be awarded are $250 for first, $100 for second and $50 for third, all in silver dollars. A street dance is set for 8 to 11 p.m. Saturday on First Street near the park.

At approximately 5 p.m. Sunday, the Teton Krooz will leave Wells. The classic car touring event, organized by Tex Smith of Driggs, will travel to Twin Falls Sunday evening, to Sun Valley on Monday, to Stovely and Salmon on Tuesday and will end at West Yellowstone, Mont., Thursday.

Registration is $15 and may be accomplished at the Chamber of Commerce office in Wells. The entry fee includes a dash plaque and T-shirt to the first 125 entrants. For more information, call the chamber office at 702-752-3540.

Skating club sets fund-raiser

SUN VALLEY - The Sun Valley Figure Skating Club has planned its annual Fashion on Ice fund-raiser for Monday.

This year's show will focus on a circus theme with fashions provided by Silverado, Prairie Fire, Mercantile, Chicken Lips, Comme Les Filles, Carroll's, Panache, Paula's, Sun Valley Skate Shop, Sports Connection and the Sheepskin Coat Factory. Professional instructors have choreographed the three to four minute group routines which feature more than 60 skaters. Informal modeling will round out the program.

Mickey the Ice Clown will make an appearance, junior club members will offer free face painting and clowns will entertain during the dinner hour.

A barbecue featuring hot dogs, hamburgers, chicken burgers, soft drinks and cocktails begins at 6 p.m. The show starts at 7 p.m., and a drawing and auction will be held at 8 p.m.

Admission is $5 for adults and $2.50 for children 12 and under. Tickets are available at the club office at the outdoor ice rink or at the door.

For more information, call 622-8020.

Council meets in CSI building

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Arts Council will meet in a new location for monthly board meeting, set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. The meeting will be held in Room 113 of the Desert Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

Board members are asked to bring their notebooks and to contact a coordinator if you need to be put on the agenda. Arts organizations should contact the MVAC if notices were to be sent to other representatives of their organization so records can be updated.

For more information, call 734-2787.

Dr. John tickets still available

SUN VALLEY - A few tickets are still available for the Dr. John (with Terrace Simien & The Mallet Playboys) concert set for 6:30 p.m. Aug. 8 at the Trail Creek Cabin Grounds. The grounds will open at 5:30 p.m. for picnic groups.

Dr. John performed the song, "Making Whoopee," for "The Sleepless in Seattle" soundtrack, and Simien was heard on the soundtrack of "The Big Easy."

Cost is $15 for Sun Valley Center members and $18 for the general public. Tickets are available at the Sun Valley Center Gallery, Chapter One Bookstore and Magic Mountain Music, all in Ketchum; Sun Valley Sports Center in Sun Valley; and the Sound Socket in Hailey.

The event is part of the Sun Valley Music Festival and is sponsored by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities. For more information, call Kate Wright at 726-9491.

Food festival set for Wednesday

TWIN FALLS - The Junior Club of Twin Falls has planned its sixth annual "Bite of Twin Falls" for 5 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at the City Park.

Thirty-three local restaurants have agreed to sell their menu specialties, and entertainment will be provided by the Jan Olsen Jazz Trio, Joan Gabert Classical Ballet, Mountain Blend Quartet, JUMP Co. and the Eddy Haskell Band.

General admission is free; participants pay only for what they eat and drink. Proceeds will benefit the Volunteers Against Violence, the Jordan Bashline Memorial Fund and the Wishing Star Foundation. Volunteers Against Violence provides shelter for victims in dangerous or violent situations and/or sexual abuse. The shelter serves eight counties and runs a 24-hour crisis line. It is in need of a new furnace and the addition of a room in the basement so that teen-age boys can have access to the shelter.

The Jordan Bashline Memorial Fund is in need of money to complete building fences along Twin Falls City canals to help prevent further drowning accidents. Labor has been donated but money is needed to purchase fencing supplies. Two major areas located near schools and parks are targeted for completion this summer.

The Wishing Star Foundation provides funding for granting wishes for terminally ill children, such as taking a special trip, meeting a famous person and acquiring a pet, etc. The Junior Club would like to raise funds to assist in granting the wish of a person living in the Twin Falls area.

For more information on the "Bite of Twin Falls," call Lisa Hollibaugh at 423-5326, Judy Godfrey at 736-9909 or Debi Piper at 733-0509.

Dance teacher offers classes

TWIN FALLS - Patricia Ball will instruct intermediate and advanced-level students in Modern Dance Master classes set for 7 to 9 p.m. Aug. 9 and 10 at the Lori Head School of Dance, 434 Main Ave. S.

Ball has a bachelor of arts degree in theater studies from the University of Utah in Salt Lake City. She has performed professionally with the Chicago Dance Medium in Illinois and the Oris Theater of Dance in Tucson, Ariz. She was raised in Buhl and has recently returned from New York City, where she studied dance at the Paul Taylor School.

Cost is $10 for both classes or $6 for one class. For more information, call Ball at 543-8739.

Documentary film on sale

IDAHO FALLS - With the 150th anniversary of the Oregon Trail comes a just-completed documentary film titled "The Story of the Oregon Trail."

Created by an Emmy-winning production team, the film's goal was to break the popular myths and tell the real story of the big move west. It turns out that the truth is much more fascinating than fiction anyway, according to co-producer Mike Trinklein.

"It's an incredible tale that's largely unfold - much more compelling than any Hollywood movie," said Trinklein.

Here's a sampler of the myths we've been led to believe:

- Most of the pioneers on the Oregon Trail were headed for Oregon.
- Pioneers regularly circled their wagons to fend off Indian attacks.
- Pioneer families rode inside the wagons.
- Life on the trail was lonely and desolate.
- Horses pulled the covered wagons.
- Gun fights were common on the trail.

Trinklein got the ideas for the film after noticing an Oregon Trail marker 30 yards from his Pocatello office - a marker that was 15 miles from where it was supposed to be.

"That prompted me to do some research. The more I read, the more I learned that nearly all the popular notions were wrong," he said.

The film is currently for sale on home video at 74 historic sites and museums across the West. The one-hour VHS videotape can be purchased for $19.95 by calling Country Productions at 1-800-473-2238 (7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Pacific time, weekdays).

A catalog that includes the video along with books, maps and other trail-related educational materials is available free by writing to the Oregon Trail, 1281 N. Foothill Road, Idaho Falls 83401.

Jamboree badges available

SUN VALLEY - All-events badges for the fourth annual Sun Valley Jazz Jamboree, Oct. 13-17, are now on sale, according to Tom Hazzard, the event's organizer.

The all-events badges, which give holders access to all jazz venues during the five-day jamboree, are on sale for $50 until Sept. 1, 1993. After that date the badges will sell for $60.

To obtain the badges, send $50 per badge to Sun Valley Jazz Jamboree, 1810 W. State St., No. 216, Boise 83702. A 1993 brochure on the Jamboree is available at the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce Visitor's Center in Ketchum. Call 726-3423 for details.

Golfer looks to last year

Defending Open champ hopes this year is as fruitful

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The defending champion is back but the question remains whether the lofty scores of last year can be equalled.

When the Cactus Petes Idaho State Open begins this morning at Jackpot and Twin Falls golf courses, Utah's Kim Thompson will be hoping to make it two in a row in the $50,000 event. After all, first place is worth $6,000 to a professional.

Last year, Thompson, chased by Milton Swilor, humbled Twin Falls Myny with a closing 61 to post an eye-popping 18-under-par 190 for the three-day test.

Much of that was based on great putting across the lightning quick Twin Falls Myny greens. Thompson made a huge cross-green 12-foot breaker for an eagle on the 11th hole and had another two on a par-4 a couple of holes later to eventually build a three-stroke victory over Swilor.

Swilor isn't listed among the 114 professionals teeing off at Jackpot today. So the question becomes the appearance of a new pressure applicator.

"Nothing spectacular," said Thompson Thursday of his game as he showed up for a practice round at Jackpot. "I'm hoping to get it turned around for the weekend." Twin Falls' Mike Hamblin carded a 3-under 69 under strong wind conditions at the Nevada course Thursday. And there's Boise's Jeff Thomsen, who comes in as the reigning Rooky Mountain Section PGA champion.

The professionals will play Jackpot today and wind up with the concluding 36 holes

Saturday and Sunday at Twin Falls, along with the amateur championship flight.

Flights one through three of the amateurs will play in Twin Falls today and move to Jackpot for the final action.

Completion of the pre-functions for the tournament proper were completed Thursday with the annual pro-sponsor at Jackpot. Although not quite as strong as last year, the Canyon Springs crew of professional Steve Meyerhoeffer and amateurs Milo Pearson, Dr. Steve Weber and Andy Anderson won the team crown with a 12-under-par showing.

Second, at 62.84, went to host Professional Dave Albrecht, Bob McDonald, Dick Burwell and Dave Drewes. Third was won by Scott Larsen, Bill Stanwood, Fred

Eight in a row

Seattle Mariner superstar, Ken Griffey Jr. has homered in eight straight games to tie the major league record. Dale Long of the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1956, and Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees in 1987, share the record.

The victims

- Dale Long against Carl Erskine of Brooklyn on May 28, 1956.
- Don Mattingly against Jose Guzman of Texas on July 18, 1987.
- Ken Griffey Jr. against Willie Banks of Minnesota on July 26, 1993.

Griffey comes up short

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Jr. will have to settle for joining Dale Long and Don Mattingly in the record book for homering in the most consecutive games.

The Seattle slugger had a chance to pass them by hitting a homer in his ninth straight game Thursday night, but he could manage only a double and a single in four at bats in Seattle's 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

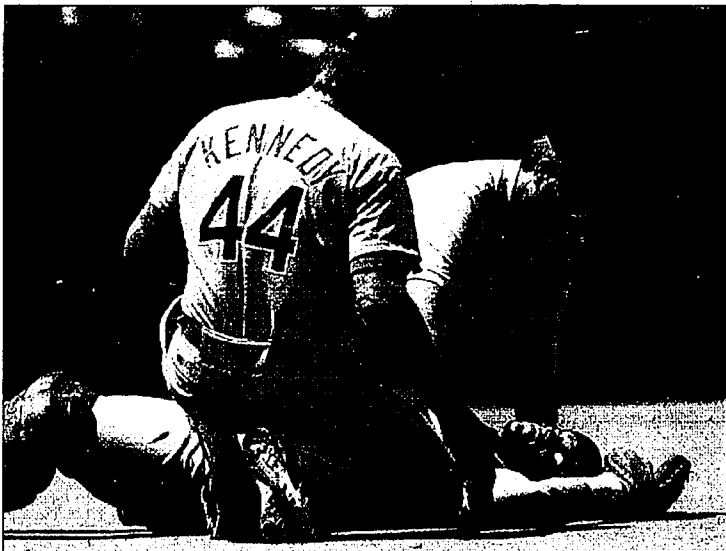

Griffey said he wouldn't comment on his record quest until after the game, but Twins All-Star Kirby Puckett sure had a few things to say about the Mariners' outfielder.

"He can do anything he wants," Puckett said. "He has 30 home runs and we have two months to go. I don't think he realizes what he's done."

"It's on pace to get 50 home runs. He's phenomenal, he's fun to watch and he's definitely the best in the game."

The 23-year-old Griffey tied the major-league record for homers in consecutive games set by Long in 1956 and equaled by Mattingly in 1987.

CHICAGO — It's splitville again for two-time U.S. pairs champions Calla Urbanski and Rocky Marval, figure skating's Bickersons.

This time, less than seven months before the 1994 Olympics, both say it is for good.

Urbanski, 33, of Skokie, Ill., already has found a new partner, Joseph Mero, 28, of Livonia, Mich. She leaves Sunday to begin training with Mero in Italy, where he is performing in a show.

Marval, 27, of New Egypt, N.J., said he soon will begin his search for a new partner. "If I leave the sport now, at least I will leave it on a positive note," he said.

After their 10th-place finish at the Olympics and seventh at the 1992 Worlds, the duo broke up, citing irreconcilable differences. But they got back together soon after and won a second straight national title. But the friction between them remained constant.

Marval waited until he had finished skating with Urbanski on the Tour of World and Olympic Champions and had taken the decision to split was his.

"It came as a surprise to me," Urbanski said.

A little shy: Hall of Fame stage frightens Walsh

The Associated Press

CANTON, Ohio — Bill Walsh says he's suffering from stage fright. The stage will be the front steps of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, where he will be inducted Saturday.

"I've been haunted for the last month, losing sleep as to how I'm going to be able to get up and receive this award," said Walsh, who coached the San Francisco 49ers to three Super Bowl titles.

"... Because the last two or three times I've been in these kind of situations, I've come a little unraveled and haven't been able to express myself at all."

Walsh will be inducted along with Chicago Bears running back Walter Payton, San Diego Chargers quarterback Dan Fouts, Miami Dolphins offensive lineman Larry Little and Pittsburgh Steelers coach Chuck Noll.

"I'm really concerned about whether I'm going to be able to talk," said Walsh, a former TV analyst and now the coach at Stanford. "I think I could be eloquent if given the chance, but I'm not sure I'll even be able to get a word out."

Walsh, always an emotional man during

A look at Pro Football Hall of Fame inductees

Dan Fouts

Fouts passed for 43,040 yards and 254 touchdowns for the San Diego Chargers. Had a 58.8 completion percentage (3,297 of 5,604 passes). Established NFL records for most 300-yard passing games with 51 and most 3,000-yard seasons with six. Had three straight 4,000-yard passing seasons 1979-81. Played in six Pro Bowls.

Larry Little

Played in 183 games for the San Diego Chargers and the Miami Dolphins from 1967-1980. Traded to Miami after the 1968 season. Played in three straight Super Bowls, 1971-73. Was an All-Pro from 1971-75 and played in five Pro Bowls.

Chuck Noll

Noll led the Pittsburgh Steelers to Super Bowl victories in 1975, 1976, 1979 and 1980. Over his 23-year coaching career, his teams were 209-156-1, including 16-8 in the postseason. He took over a team that hadn't won a title since joining the NFL in 1933. He ranks sixth all-time in coaching victories. He played guard for the Cleveland Browns for seven years, including in the NFL championship games from 1953-55. He was an NFL assistant nine years before taking over the Steelers.

Walter Payton

his decade with the 49ers, said it will be difficult to reign in his feelings when he is presented by 49ers owner Eddie DeBarotolo Jr. "It's the worst of the same way, so we could end up crying in each other's arms and being led off the stage," Walsh said. "With that in mind, I can't wait to get it over with."

Walsh had a record of 102-63-1 in his 10 years with the 49ers, producing Super Bowl titles in 1982, 1985 and 1989. He was at the controls as the 49ers drafted Joe Montana, Dwight Clark, Ronnie Lott, Roger Craig, Jerry Rice Tom Rathman and Charles Haley.

Some were standouts in college, some weren't. But it was Walsh who saw something in them as collegians and then was able to consistently pull out that quality later when they were pros.

"It's the gravity of it all and the finality of the moment," he said. "This really stamps the end of my NFL experiences and the end of my association with the 49ers. Then I'll have some of my graying former athletes sitting there with their families, and it's pretty tough."

Payton said his induction was almost anticlimactic.

"The reason I can't get excited about the Hall of Fame is that too many guys already put me there a long time ago," he said. "It was like somebody showed me my Christmas presents three months ahead of time."

Payton rushed for more yards than anyone ever to play in the NFL — 16,276. His 3,838 carries and 110 touchdowns are also records. He also won a Super Bowl ring in 1986 with the Bears.

Dumb, dangerous Mets become frightening fools

By Vic Ziegel
New York Daily News

Commentary

Mets apology — D3

NEW YORK — So now it turns out that the Mets, the worst team in baseball, are also the most dangerous, a frightening collection of fools.

Don't get near them because you'll be hit with a giant firecracker. Don't try and interview them, even after a winning game, or they'll sneak up behind you and hit you with bleach.

Maybe it's not fair to blame every one of the Mets for the actions of a few imbeciles. They are, after all, only millionaire jocks. Dumb jocks getting dumber by the inning. But dumb is one thing. Dumb is one of their more endearing qualities.

It's when the dumb stuff becomes dangerous, that's when somebody from the front office, or the cops, or the player's mommy and daddy has to put an end to it.

Friday, the Los Angeles district attorney's office is expected to announce if charges will be filed against Vince Coleman for injuring three people, including a 2-year-old, with a giant firecracker. The DA will let us know if it's a felony, a misdemeanor or a TV movie. That incident happened last Saturday.

Tuesday night, after the Mets beat the Marlins, actually won a game, a group of sports writers were interviewing Doc Gooden, the winning pitcher. For this terrible thing, they were splattered with bleach. The reporters aren't sure who did it.

One logical suspect would be Bret Saberhagen. The pitcher admitted to the New York Times yesterday that he lit and threw a firecracker that landed near sports writers — again, near their backs were turned — in the Mets' clubhouse July 7.

"I don't like a lot of them (sports writers)," Saberhagen told the Times. "It was a practical joke. If the reporters can't take it, forget them."

The reporters, in fact, did take it. Very little was written about the incident, and nobody was sent to the principal's office. "What are they going to do? Fine me?" Saberhagen told the Times.

There was no fine; he got that right. But if it turns out he's the son of a bleach responsible for Tuesday night's incident, then the club has no choice. This time, it's strike two and out.

Suspend the player. Do something that will cost the player money, something he will understand.

But the truth is, you can't hurt them in the wallet. Not really. Last March, the Mets were so thrilled by Saberhagen's 1992 — 3 wins, 5 losses, 97 innings, one damaged finger — they signed him through 1996, with an option for 1997. It's a contract, with deferred payments and in-

Coleman labels firecracker incident 'inappropriate'

NEW YORK (AP) — Vince Coleman, who may face criminal prosecution and a civil lawsuit over a firecracker-throwing incident, called his actions "very inappropriate" Thursday and apologized to the family whose 27-year-old daughter was injured.

Vince Coleman and his family leave a press conference Thursday after he apologized to the family whose daughter was injured in last week's firecracker incident.

"It was never my intention to bring harm to anyone," he said.

Coleman, accompanied by his wife and two children, read a statement at Shea Stadium after a day game in which the Florida Marlins beat the Mets 2-1. It was the third straight game in which he did not play.

A decision on whether to file criminal charges against the 37-year-old player won't be made before Friday, the Los Angeles district attorney's office said.

Coleman, along with teammate Bobby Bonilla, was a passenger in a Jeep driven by the Dodgers' Eric Davis when he allegedly tossed a firecracker in a Dodger Stadium parking lot after Saturday's game. The explosion injured three people.

Attorney Darrell York, representing Derek Santos and his wife, Marivel, and their 27-year-old daughter, Amanda, said Wednesday a civil suit over the incident is planned in the next few weeks.

The girl sustained second-degree burns, abrasions under her right eye, an injured right index finger and lacerated right corner.

"Vince will certainly be named, there's a high likelihood the Mets will be named and Eric Davis will be named," said Ron Lusolico, Coleman's partner. "It's probable at this point. We have some more discovery to do. It's his car. And the Dodgers might be named, too. It

"Since the incident occurred, I haven't slept, nor have I been able to think clearly about anything else," Coleman said. "I want everyone to know that I now realize that my actions on July 24th were very inappropriate. I have tried to speak to the Santos, but have been unsuccessful. I'll try again today."

"I have two sons, Vincent and Lance. I help them in their times of need. I assist them in their confusion and I comfort them in their sorrow. This help, assistance and comfort I extend to the injured families."

"I am a father first and an athlete second. Amanda (Santos) stood out near a gate to catch a glimpse of a ballplayer, but I want her to catch a glimpse of a true friend and a loving father."

Lynette Coleman called her husband a "good father."

"This was nothing to laugh and joke about," she said. "He never intended to hurt anyone. We love our kids and we're sorry for what has happened."

Mets spokesman Jay Horwitz interrupted those who attempted to interview Coleman after his statement.

"That's it," Horwitz said. "There's no more questions. No anything."

The district attorney's office is waiting for a report from the arson unit of the Los Angeles City Fire Department, which has been examining the firecracker's debris.

It is not clear what kind of firecracker was used, Mike Botula, a spokesman for the district attorney's office, said he "figures" an announcement in that regard will come Friday.

Botula has said that although the district attorney's office is examining the conduct of Davis, it is concentrating on Coleman.

If a felony charge is filed, the case will be prosecuted by the district attorney's office. If a misdemeanor charge is made, the matter will be referred to the city attorney's office.

A misdemeanor conviction could result in a county jail term of up to one year. A felony conviction carries a maximum of three years in state prison.

The chairman of baseball's executive council, said he is monitoring the situation in Los Angeles and other clubhouse incidents between the Mets and the media. Pitcher Bret Saberhagen has admitted throwing firecrackers near reporters. Another unidentified player sprayed bleach on a reporter.

Major league baseball is committed to ensuring that our ballparks and their environs are safe places for our fans, and that our clubhouses are safe places for both players, staff and members of the media," said Bud Selig, baseball's top authority in the absence of a commissioner.

Tom Pedulla, New York chapter chairman of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, said he discussed some clubhouse problems writers have been experiencing with National League president Bill White.

Donald Fehr, head of the players' union, spoke with Pedulla and Claire Smith, the chapter's vice chairman.

"He is eager to do something to improve the atmosphere," Pedulla said. "We did discuss some different possibilities."

Health concerns stalled Lewis' return to basketball, widow says

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics captain Reggie Lewis, who died after a light workout, had not decided to return to competitive basketball until all questions about his health were answered, his widow said Thursday.

"Reggie did everything that he could to avoid this thing ever coming," Donna Harris Lewis said in a statement read by her attorney.

She said her husband's physicians had decided to let him compete again only if the Celtics provided at all practices and games a cardiologist and a defibrillator, a machine which can shock a heart into regular beats.

The Lewises were going to meet with team officials and make that request Aug. 10. But Lewis, 27, died Tuesday, collapsing after shooting baskets at Brandeis University.

After collapsing in an April 29 playoff game, Lewis had been told by a team of physicians that he had a life-threatening heart ailment. He later sought a second opinion and was told he had only a minor neurological problem that caused fainting.

Jeff Cohen, Brandeis athletic director, said Thursday he saw Lewis shooting baskets at the school twice during the previous two weeks. Andy Effenson, the school's facility manager, said Lewis worked out at the gym on his own three times in the previous week.

Lewis also shot baskets during the Celtics' rookie-free agent camp, held July 11-14 at Brandeis, but did not practice with the team.

His wife said that when he died, her husband was not violating his doctor's advice because "he was not exerting energy in a competitive basketball situation."

She said her husband had been scheduled to go to his hometown of Baltimore next week to work out under the supervision of Dr. Gilbert Mudge, the cardiologist who gave him the second opinion.

"Until that time, Reggie would not, and did not, engage in any strenuous competitive basketball situations," according to his wife's statement, read at a press conference by family attorney Jerome Stanley.

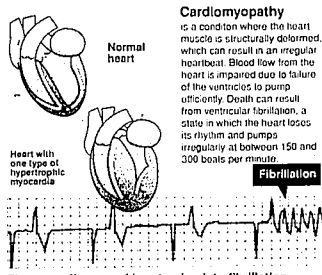

The statement was read at a press conference attended by players and Celtics officials, who announced that services for Lewis will be held Monday at Matthews Arena at Northeastern University, his alma mater.

A tearful coach Chris Ford remembered Lewis as a special person more than a player.

"We're trying to remember the good times and Reggie's smile, which always lightened up the room," said Ford. "He wasn't a guy who told a lot of jokes, but when he said something, it was a gem."

Reggie Lewis: one diagnosis

Celtics forward Reggie Lewis, who died Tuesday after suffering cardiac arrest, had been diagnosed by one team of doctors as having cardiomyopathy, shown here. Other doctors concluded he had a nerve condition called neurocardiogenic syncope, in which the nerves trigger the heart to slow down instead of speed up during peak exercise.

is a condition where the heart muscle is structurally deformed, which can result in an irregular heartbeat. Blood flow from the heart is impaired due to failure of the ventricles to pump efficiently. Death can result from ventricular fibrillation, a state in which the heart loses its rhythm and pumps irregularly at between 150 and 300 beats per minute.

Red Sox rookie posts 4th straight win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rookie Aaron Sele won his fourth straight start, and Mo Vaughn, Billy Hatcher and Ernest Riles homered as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 7-3 Thursday.

Sele (5-0) pitched 5 1/3 innings in his seventh major-league start and tied Don Schwall for the best career start by a Red Sox pitcher. Schwall began his career in 1961 with five straight wins.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Greg Gagne hit a grand slam in the seventh inning, powering Kansas City in a game marred by a near-brain in the eighth inning.

After Brian McRae was hit by a Bob Patterson pitch, he ran straight to the Texas dugout.

Kevin Brown, Willie Upshaw and Kenny Rogers met McRae on the steps of the dugout and put a bear hug on the Kansas City outfielder. Patterson and McRae were both ejected, and no blows were apparently struck.

Philadelphia 6, Cardinals 4

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pinch-hitter Darren Daulton drew an eighth-inning bases-loaded walk, forcing in the go-ahead run as Philadelphia swept the series and had a seven-game lead over the Cardinals in the NL East.

St. Louis reliever Rob Murphy (1-5) loaded the bases on a single, hit batsman and an intentional walk. After the walk to Daulton, Lenny Dykstra's run-scoring single made the score 6-4 and assured the three-game sweep.

Marlins 2, Mets 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Charlie Hough pitched 7 1/3 strong innings to end a three-game losing streak and Henry Cotto singled home the go-ahead run in the seventh inning.

Hough (5-11), the NL's oldest pitcher at 45, gave up seven hits and one run. He was relieved by Matt Turner with one out in the eighth and two runners on base.

Astros 2, Braves 0

HOUSTON (AP) — Pete Harnisch cooled off Atlanta with a four-hitter for his second shutout, and Houston put a two-run slug from Jeff Bagwell.

The loss snapped Atlanta's six-game winning streak and was only the second in the Braves in 10 games since Fred McGriff joined them from San Diego. In the first game, Atlanta scored 84 runs.

Expos 3, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tomo DeLino DeShields scored the tying run, then singled home the winner with two out in the 11th inning to Montreal over slumping Pittsburgh.

Blas Minor (6-4) got the first two outs, then walked John Vander Wal and pinch-hitter Mike Lansing. DeShields, who has eight hits in his last 16 at-bats, lined a single to center to score Vander Wal as the Expos won for the fifth time in seven games.

U.S. boxers take beating at Olympic Fest

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. champions had a rough opening night Thursday at the Olympic Festival boxing tournament.

The judges' electronic scoring had Miller beaten by national Golden Gloves champion Danny Rios of San Antonio, 33-30. Colon lost to another Golden Gloves champ, David Reid of Philadelphia, 33-20.

"I knew I was in control," Rios said. "There were a few thurries that had me worried in the third round, but I was scoring punches too. And when I was in trouble, I heard my family and friends in the crowd and that gave me the strength."

One U.S. champion who had enough strength to win was 119-pounder Aristead Clayton of Baker, La., who beat Eddie Hall of the U.S. Army, 37-20.

Semifinal bouts were held in six weight classes Thursday night, with six more scheduled Friday.

In diving, Mark Lenzi, tired from all the traveling and appearances that come with being an Olympic champion, finished first in the preliminaries of the 3-meter springboard, the event he won at the Barcelona Games.

Lenzi of Ann Arbor, Mich., finished with 624.87 points to beat Joel Posae of Houston, who had 612.12. Two-time defending champion Mark Bradshaw of Columbus, Ohio, wound up third with 604.23, and 1989 festival gold medalist Kent Ferguson of Miami was fourth with 600.96.

Speed moves into driver's seat following Allison's death

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Veteran NASCAR driver Lake Speed will take over for the late Davey Allison at Watkins Glen on Aug. 5 and likely will complete the rest of the NASCAR season in the No. 28 Ford Thunderbird, team owner Robert Yates said Thursday.

Veteran driver Lake Speed, foreground, pledged Thursday to 'give the best' he can. Team owner Robert Yates looks on.

Speed, a 13-year Winston Cup veteran with one victory in 258 starts, will take the ride that Indy-car series driver Robby Gordon had in last week's Diehard 500 at Talladega Speedway.

"I don't think either one of us is concerned if this is a one-race deal or for 12 races," Speed said. "This is a win-win situation. I promise I'll give the best I can."

Gordon, 24, who had entered only one Winston Cup race prior to Talladega, was running fifth when a spin sidelined him. He lost control in front of the pits and hit the outside wall hard.

Without criticizing Gordon for his performance, Yates praised Speed's knowledge of Winston Cup racing.

The last time he competed on road courses was in 1991, and he qualified in the top 10 at both Sears Point (Calif.) and Watkins Glen."

"Talladega, not far from Allison's Hometown, Ala., home, is where the 32-year-old stock car driver crashed his helicopter on July 13, suffering fatal head injuries.

"I would like to thank Robby Gordon for helping us through a difficult weekend at Talladega," Yates said. "He did the job for us, and we appreciate all the things he did for this team, on and off the track. He's going to be tough in anything he drives. If he ever decides to go Winston Cup full time, he would be hard to beat."

"We know Robby's career is in Indy-cars and we need to focus our efforts on winning races and chasing next year's Winston Cup title. It will be a lot easier to focus our efforts if we work with just one driver for the rest of the season."

Gordon is under contract with A.J. Foyt's Copenhagen Lola Ford-Cosworth Indy-car team, so there was no way he could have remained with Yates the rest of the Winston Cup season.

$150,000 isn't enough for Lewis showdown, Christie moans

GATESHEAD, England (AP) — Linford Christie says he's not being paid enough for his 100-meter showdown with Carl Lewis. Some say $150,000 per second is more than enough.

Christie, the Olympic champion, and Lewis, the world champion and world record-holder, reportedly will get $150,000 each for Friday night's race. The total is the highest ever paid for a race in Britain.

"To be honest, I'm not getting paid enough," Christie was quoted as saying in Thursday's tabloid newspapers. "Lennox Lewis and Frank Bruno are receiving $8 million for their heavyweight fight. They can get bruised faces, but I can pull muscles."

Coming a day after a survey showed that 45 percent of British Olympic athletes are in debt, Christie's comment did not go over well.

"Not Enough, Moans Linford," headlined the Daily Star. "Linford Christie a Loser," said the Daily Mirror.

Derek Johnson, a former Olympic 800-meter runner and member of the British Athletic Federation's management board, described the race as a "meaningless, obscenely rewarded exhibition on TV."

'Lennox Lewis and Frank Bruno are receiving $8 million for their heavyweight fight. They can get bruised faces, but I can pull a muscle.'

— Sprinter Linford Christie

"Have we finally prostituted ourselves to television?" Johnson wrote in a letter to the Guardian. "How do we tell our clubs that there aren't enough funds to help them with their modest traveling costs when they see the stinking rich get stinking richer on money fixed up by their own governing body for a joke event?"

The BAF sold the sponsorship rights to the Today newspaper, which has billed the race as the Today 100 Meters Challenge. The British television rights were bought by ITV, which is broadcasting the race live.

The eight-man race gives Christie a chance to prove that his victory at the Barcelona Olympics was no fluke. Lewis was not in the field because he failed to qualify at the U.S. trials. Ladbrokes, the bookmaker, installed Christie as the odds-on favorite at 8-11. Lewis was even money.

"I'm going to win, definitely," Christie was quoted as saying in Today. "The fact is Lewis didn't race in the Olympics because he wasn't good enough to make the American team. He said I won only won because he wasn't there. That annoyed me a little bit."

Christie is unbeaten in eight races this season, while Lewis has failed to win any of his four 100-meter races. Lewis has a 12-1 record against Christie — 11-1 in 100-meter races and 1-0 in the 200 meters.

The last time they met was at the 1991 World Championships in Tokyo, where Lewis won in a world record 9.86 seconds.

"I'm in the shape I was in 1991," Lewis said. "There's no question I'm in under-10-seconds shape, perhaps 9.8."

Christie has three other American opponents in Friday's race — former world record holder Calvin Smith, Sam Jefferson and Mark Witherspoon. Also running are Britain's Darren Braithwaite, Dean Capobianco of Australia and Michael Green of Jamaica.

Bieri breaks 14-year-old backstroke record

NAMPA — Fourteen-year-old Joanna Bieri set a state swimming record at the Idaho State Championship meet in Nampa on July 23-25.

Bieri broke a 14-year-old record when she swam the 100-yard backstroke in 1:04.14.

In August, Bieri will represent Idaho with the Snake River Zone team at the Western Zone Swim Meet in Santa Clara, California.

Economy slows during spring; auto sales help some

The Associated Press

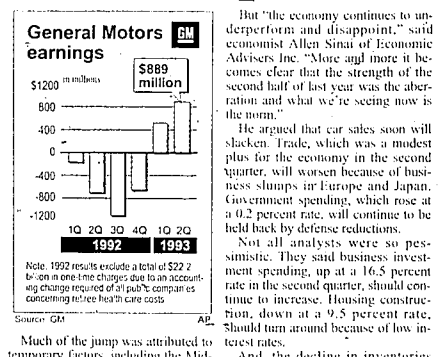

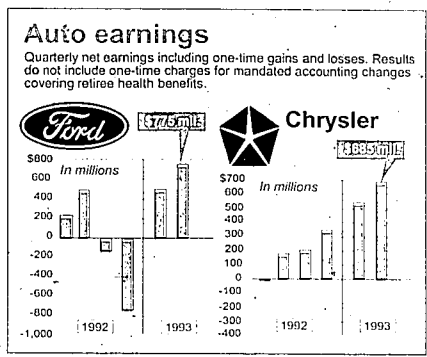

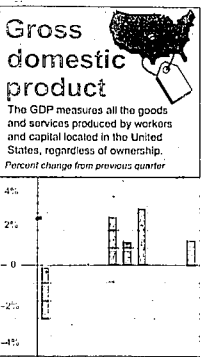

WASHINGTON — The American economy grew at a disappointingly meager pace in the April-June quarter, raising worries that an expected rebound later this year will be weaker than anticipated.

The $5.82 trillion gross domestic product — the sum of goods and services produced within U.S. borders — grew at a lackluster 1.6 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate, the Commerce Department said Thursday.

That marked a clear improvement over the 0.7 percent rate of the first quarter. However, it fell short of the 2.3 percent rate predicted by private economists and the 2.5 percent to 3 percent rate forecast by Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan.

Economists stuck by their assertions that growth will improve during the second half of this year. But they said the more optimistic forecasters, who were projecting second-half growth approaching 4 percent, probably will be disappointed.

"These forecasts that things will be better six months from now are starting to have a hollow ring to them," said economist Norman Robertson, an adjunct professor at Carnegie-Mellon University. "This is a very erratic, sporadic type of economic expansion. ... It goes in fits and starts, and I suspect that we may continue for the balance of the year," he said.

Consumer spending, helped by strong car sales, advanced at a healthy 3.8 percent rate in the second quarter, and business spent heavily on computers and other new equipment.

But those gains were largely offset by a decline in housing construction and a sharp reduction in the pace of inventory accumulation by businesses worried about getting stuck with unsold goods.

Separately, the Labor Department said the number of Americans filing first-time claims for jobless benefits shot up by 43,000 last week to 394,000, the highest level in 10 months.

Much of the jump was attributed to temporary factors, including the Midwest floods and a two-week shutdown of General Motors Corp. production lines to retrofit for new models.

Before Thursday's GDP report, many analysts viewed the first-quarter slackening as simply a pause following a robust 4.7 percent rate during the final three months of 1992.

BORN TO RUN

Richard Grieco plays a quiet youth who lives for drag racing, falls in love with a model, played by Shelli Lether, and finds trouble along the way.

Grieco ends hiatus, stars as street racer fighting corruption

By Jackie Hyman
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Richard Grieco, the former Calvin Klein model turned teen-heartthrob actor, is a study in contrasts: He races cars and grows roses, collects Harley-Davidson motorcycles and writes poetry.

With few roles for post-graduates, the 28-year-old former star of two television series — "21 Jump Street" and "Booker" — is a natural to play a street racer in the Fox TV movie "Born to Run."

The film, directed by Albert Magnoli ("Purple Rain"), debuts Monday on the Fox network and also will be released theatrically in Europe. Grieco recently returned to acting after a year of self-imposed absence. He plays a champion street racer who fights local corruption after his brother gets involved with a mob boss.

"The whole street-racing aspect is the only thing in his life when he feels in control and comfortably," Grieco said. "I've always been interested in cars and Harleys and that whole gambit, and this movie seemed like a good thing to do."

"I love this type of character. I don't think that's done much anymore," he said, "a young person dealing with an adult world. It was done in the 1950s with James Dean and Marlon Brando, and it has a message for everyone about keeping your sense of morality."

Street racers illegally mark off city streets as raceways, and compete late at night, attracting large crowds, Grieco said.

"Quarter-mile street racing has been a big problem and a lot of people have died," he said. "It's become more prevalent because of the existence of the muscle cars, the faster cars," either new cars with large engines or souped-up older vehicles.

Participants form outlaw racing clubs, Grieco said. "Their whole point is this is a club, this is a sport, and if they had access to a strip that was made for this, there wouldn't be as many people hurt," he said.

In his personal life, Grieco races 500-horsepower Trans-Am cars in sanctioned events and has collected four cars and seven motorcycles. But his parents and business associates try to discourage him, he said.

"Everyone gets after me for the racing and the motorcycles, but it's fun," he said. "For me, it's a normal world in the abnormal world I live in. It's a way to sink back into a normal reality."

Grieco spends his spare time writing poetry and lyrics and singing with a band, although the band hasn't yet made public appearances. He also maintains about 120 rosebushes at his Hollywood Hills home.

"I'm out there every day," he said. "It's kind of like my solace. It's this place I can go. Every day, I can pick 10 vases of flowers."

Grieco grew up in a family of six in Watertown, N.Y. He attended Central Connecticut College on a football scholarship, with dreams of becoming a lawyer. Then he began modeling for the Elite agency and moved to New York City, where for six months he represented Giorgio Armani, Calvin Klein and Chanel.

He turned to acting, and spent three years studying. His first television audition led to a year-long role on the soap opera "One Life to Live."

Moving to Los Angeles in 1987, Grieco played guest roles on television series and hit the big screen with "21 Jump Street." He landed his own series ("Booker") and starred in the feature films "If Looks Could Kill" and "Mobsters."

Now, after his year off, he's back with "Born to Run" as a one-hour dramatic series that he's co-producing with Lorimar for CBS.

In the first episode of the series, not yet titled or given a broadcast date, Grieco plays a young man released from prison into the custody of his sister. He becomes involved in her insurance investigation business.

The actor said his goals are these: "Continue doing music like your goals, good goals that people will enjoy. I definitely want to direct. I directed a couple of 'Bookers.' I'd like to continue to improve."

Beyond hard work, however, Grieco also hopes he'll land a role that turns a career into a comet.

"Obviously, you want THAT role," he said. "You could be a great actor and go through your life and never get a great role. If you stick to it long enough and are smart about it, you'll get these opportunities."

Critics torpedo NBC's 'seaQuest DSV' pilot

By Hal Boedeker
Knight-Ridder News Service

LOS ANGELES — "Star Trek," one critic lugged it. "Das Bomb," cried another. "Have you ever seen a turkey swim?" asked a third.

The futuristic submarine show "seaQuest DSV"

(Deep Submergence Vehicle) — one of the fall's most anticipated new series, sank during a screening last week before the nation's TV critics.

The NBC series can't be written off as just another misguided flop. It comes from executive producer Steven Spielberg, who certainly knows moviemakers but can't seem to get the knack of television. His "Amazing Stories" and "Family Dog" were major disappointments.

For No. 3 NBC, which had jabbed critics for calling it "bleaguered" this past season, "seaQuest" could prove a costly setback. NBC is committed to 22 episodes. And a president Herb Wright said each hour costs $2 million to produce, nearly twice the average for the industry. A Spielberg representative put the cost between $1.3 million and $2 million.

Network executives got their first look at the entire pilot last week, along with critics, and they soon realized the episode's reception was disastrous. Critics muttered throughout the screening and giggled at atrocious dialogue, a talking dolphin and a laughable villainess played by former Charlie's Angel Shelley Hack.

"No more group screenings," an NBC exec quipped afterward.

In a candid conversation several days before, Wright said he was worried about the project and might ask Spielberg to become more involved. An executive producer and a main writer left the show before David Burke ("Wiseguy," "Tribeqa") stepped in.

Spielberg takes part in the series on a daily basis and communicates via faxes and phone calls when he's away, Burke said. "He is an icon of sorts in this business, but on this show, he's another guy in blue jeans sitting around the table," Burke said.

Spielberg did not attend a press conference after the screening; he was on Long Island editing "Schindler's List," a film due for release later this year. But he did open his Amblin Entertainment headquarters to critics, and he sent a taped message. He described the show as part fiction, part fantasy, and said it is aimed at the family audience.

"Anybody who couldn't see 'Jurassic Park' can certainly feel safe watching an episode of 'seaQuest,'" he said.

An 8 p.m. ET Sunday time slot will allow just about anyone to see it. But what viewers will find, on the basis of the pilot, is basically an underwater "Star Trek" set in 2018.

Capt. Nathan Bridger (Ray Scheider), who has retreated from life after losing his wife and son, is hoodwinked back into duty aboard the vessel he designed. He dubs the sub "a thousand sand-foot-long Swiss Army knife."

The stalwart Scheider hickers with the scientist top.

(Stephanie Beacham of "The Colbys" and marvels at a Doogie Howser-like computer whiz who wears a Florida Marlins T-shirt. ("World Series Champs 2010").

In a ludicrous plot device, the ship's commander (Don Franklin of "The Young Riders") feigns incompetence so Scheider will have to take over.

That he does to stop an opponent (Hack) with a fatal attraction for the sub. If she can't have it, no one will. "You are as impotent as your boat," she snarls at Scheider from a "Star Trek" like-screen on her own vessel.

So Scheider sends a talking dolphin, sort of a cross between Ed and Flipper, out a mile chute to plant an explosive on the sub. "You don't have to do it," Beacham confides to the mouthy mammal, before he becomes the hero.

The underwater photography, lavish sets and computer-generated effects look spectacular, but the attention needed to be paid to the hackneyed script and one-dimensional characters.

Burke and his crew only finished editing the pilot that morning. "Pilots are introductory in nature, and it's not representative of the series," he said. His impire will soon be a series of plots that play down atomic guns and crashing subs.

Scheider called the pilot "a great big trailer" for the series, which "needs time for all of us to explore ourselves."

There might not be time for that, however, in the competitive world of television after the series debut Sept. 12. Scheider and crew will take on "Murder, She Wrote," "Martin" and a new "Superman" show in a time slot crucial to NBC's rebound from a terrible season.

If the reviews for Spielberg's TV project were horrid, he won races for his hospital. An Amblin exec said it was the first time the gorgeous Santa Fe-style house had been opened for a press conference.

Posters of Spielberg films lined the walls, and a model of a dinosaur sat on a table. As for now, it seems unlikely that "seaQuest" paraphernalia will win prominent permanent display there.

Enjoy summer in the south of France

By Jean Pressout
Knight-Ridder News Service

We're here to endorse a kinder, gentler reality TV, one that's a world apart — literally — from cops on patrol and taken-from-the-headlines Sunday-night dramas.

If you're going to indulge in escapism, why not escape to something pleasant — say, A&E's delightful "A Year in Provence," the third installment of which turns up Sunday at 6 p.m. MDT with an encore at 10 p.m. MDT.

Maybe it's all the tantalizing talk of food, like fresh basil omelette with Aubergine. (Even eggplant sounds sexy in French, doesn't it?)

Maybe it's the haze that settles over rolling green hills and vineyards, or it could be the thick Provencal accents and remarkable peasant faces.

Whatever magic originally pulled us into "A Year in Provence," winter and spring editions of which we watched in March and May respectively, holds sway over summer as well.

This BBC TV production, based on Peter Mayer's best-seller, chronicles the escapades of a couple of Brits who quit the London pressure-cooker in favor of a blithe existence in the sunny Luberon valley.

When we met the Mayles — Annie and Peter (Lindsay Duncan and John Thaw) — back in wintery March, the mistral (a cold north wind peculiar to the Mediterranean coast of France) had them shivering, first inside then outside their 200-year-old Provencal farmhouse.

Outside, because zealous renovators had eliminated one kitchen wall.

But summer in the south of France is hot, hot, hot. July, August and September bring guests, goat races, the grape harvest and games, namely boules (say, boules de France for bocce balls).

To say that the plot lacks definition is to presume a plot. In fact, "A Year in Provence" is about nothing except life lived at a leisurely pace.

In July, it is about unexpected guests who overeat and drink, who insist upon outings to churches and graveyards and who ultimately drive Peter to rip the calendar to shreds and the Mayles to seek refuge at a village inn. Reinforcements (those recalcitrant builders) finally drive visitors from the premises.

Expect no breakneck chases, unless you want to count the cheerless — beautiful little Provencal goats decked out in bandanas and straw hats — which race through the streets of the village in August. You might be tempted to count one wild ride down a mountainside, but when the truck that delivers grapes to the vintner loses its brakes, the ride would turn wild, wouldn't it?

No blood is shed, though in summer's hottest month, life does become a grudge match when Peter takes the alternative Fernand's boules challenge. It helps to understand that in spring, Fernand took large sums of Peter's money in exchange for a cache of counterfeit truffles, but enjoyment of "Summer" in no way depends on having spent "Winter" and "Spring" with the Mayles.

'Sesame Street' adds new puppets, characters, street

By David Zurawik
The Baltimore Sun

HOLLYWOOD — There are big changes in store for Big Bird and the rest of the "Sesame Street" gang this fall — the biggest changes in the history of the show.

New actors, new puppets, new music and a whole new street of people and places are being-added as the greatest kids' show of all time enters its 25th season and decides to tackle some of the complicated issues facing families today.

"This is a season of change for us," says Michael Loman, who was named executive producer in December. "We want to make 'Sesame Street' more responsive to today's children."

The changes Loman announced Tuesday include:

Eight new puppets from Jim Henson's shop, seven of which will be female. "In terms of actors, there's always been as many women as men," Loman says. "But we've been criticized in the past for not having enough female puppets on the show. And I think that's an accurate criticism. And this specifically seeks to address that."

Three of the puppets are members of the Squirreles, a singing group of female squirrels who do Motown music in the style of the Supremes.

A new musical director, Robby Merkin, who did scores for "The Little Mermaid" and "Little Shop of Horrors."

Musical guests will include the Neville Brothers, Little Richard, Marilyn Horne and Elton John.

Merkin's new compositions will stress interactive songs and dances to get children on their feet and moving about during the hourlong episodes each day.

Four new live characters, including one played by comedian Ruth Buzzi, best known for her work on "Laugh-In."

The other new live characters will include an Asian-American woman who teaches dance and an African-American husband and wife with a 6-month-old baby. She runs a day-care center, and he's a park ranger.

A new street called "around the corner," where the new characters and puppets will live and work.

The new street, which adjoins "Sesame Street" at the site of Big Bird's nest will include a playground, thrift shop, dance studio and puppet hotel named Furry Arms.

"By expanding the street and going around the corner, we will have other places to hang out beyond the stoop of 123 Sesame Street, and we will be able to explore family issues which we think are so important to kids today," says

Sonia Manzano, who plays Maria on the show. "When 'Sesame Street' first started 25 years ago, most kids were at home watching television with their parents. "Now, most kids are in day care," she says. "And, so, we're able to deal with the problems these kids might be having by having the new set with an actual day care on Sesame Street and dealing with things, like, 'Yes, your mother will come back. Yes, she has to go to work.' We can go through the routines a child will go through in nursery and day care."

Acknowledging the possibility that such wholesale change could be confusing to the 3-to-5-year-old target audience, Loman says there will be a "transition period" this fall.

"We're planning to use Big Bird as much as possible in the season as a familiar hand who will introduce children to the new characters," he says.

Big Bird was on hand at the Universal Hilton here Tuesday as PBS made children's programming the centerpiece of its promotional push for the new fall season.

But he really wasn't necessary. The ratings for children's programming on public TV were cause enough for celebration.

The preschool audience for public television's kids' programs increased by 37 percent this season over the year before. And, last year, they had jumped by 40 percent over 1990-91. That means kids' viewing is up 77 percent in two years for PBS.

As commercial broadcasters come under increasing fire for not living up to the Children's Television Act of 1990, public television officials are committing more and more resources to kids' TV.

"For PBS, children's programming is not an absentee regulation or a way to lure advertisers," says Kathy Quattrone, vice president for children's programming at PBS. "It's a fundamental part of what we are."

'This is a season of change for us. We want to make 'Sesame Street' more responsive to today's children.'

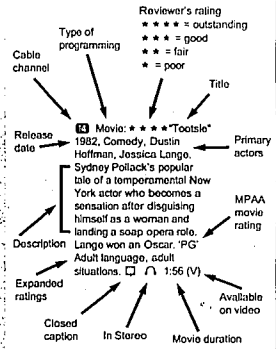

— Michael Loman, executive producer

Todd stages an outbreak in the courtroom to stop Powell from confessing on the witness stand. Nora worries that her guilty clients may go free. Judge Fitzwater refuses to let Nora withdraw from the case. Cudd questions Angela about the nature of their past relationship. Mike reads Shant's book on her father, Victor Lord, and assures him it won't ruin their relationship. Cassie, upset by the book's accusations that Dorian may have murdered Victor, tells Dorian she needs to put distance between them. Dorian discusses Angela with a pile of cash and realizes she was coned.

All My Children

Laurel tells Jack that she would need to kill her ex-husband Denny in self-defense. She offers to turn herself in, but Jack voices the idea. He's convinced she would be charged with murder and Lily will be left alone. Jack and Laurel roll Denny's body up on the Oriental rug and prepare to dump him in the abandoned mine shaft on Dimart's property. Despite the tension, Jack and Laurel try to remove all evidence of Denny's presence and put on a business-as-usual demeanor. Derek offers to be "just friends" with Mimi but she refuses. Mimi learns that Taylor forged her name to get her pregnancy test results. Mimi slaps Taylor who is unrepentant. Taylor chastises Mimi for lying to Derek and Lucas. Later, Taylor convinces Derek to coach her on her final exam for the police academy. Lucas tries to make peace with Mimi but she blasts him for his daughter's manipulations. Dixie accompanies Ted to his meeting with Tad to cover for his illiteracy. Tad blasts Ted for bringing Dixie into their private affairs. Brooke tells Tad she isn't pregnant and will go to a fertility clinic to see if she can conceive. Erica's plans for an evening of "bonding" with her girlfriends go awry. Kendall tells Erica she knows that it was all Dimart's idea. Erica gets Kendall to admit that she has unfair expectations of Erica and doesn't want to leave Wildwind.

General Hospital

Scotty offers to help Katherine pay off her late husband's debts, but finds his own funds frozen in a legal web. Nika comes to both their aid with a loan. Karen cautiously tests Stone's business card and visits the club where he works. Behind Mac's back, Felicia talks to Jagger's case to find his missing brother. Tiffany returns to Port Charles and keeps Sean at an emotional distance. Bill makes up his mind to get out of town for a while, leaving a saddened son with Jenny. Friction between Ned and AJ leaves Jill in the position of intermediary for the benefit of their business. Jagger accepts Brenda's offer for an evening on the Quarantine boat.

The Young and the Restless

Jack and John sit at a restaurant toasting each other over the ruling that Victor's jobbot stock will be returned to the Abbotts. Jack enters Brad's office to gloat over his winning of his case. Brad informs Jack that the battle isn't over because now there has to be a decision over who will run Newman Enterprises. Brad asks for Nell's help in stopping Brad and his business plans for the company. Miles is perplexed over whether or not to give Pete the money from his life insurance policy. John enters the Jabot boardroom to find a celebration party set-up for him. Margaret tells Miles not to support Pete, because that money is his only financial security and that Pete should help himself. Ashley chews Nell out for siding with Jack and betraying her and Brad. Victoria asks Cole how well he knows Nikki. Steve is abrupt with Cole and gives Cole some pages with specific notes and suggestions. Jill tells Liz how bad she hurts because she stayed with Katherine and not her. Victor notices that Hope is wearing the ring Cliff gave to her.

The Bold and the Beautiful

Stephanie wonders how Jack feels about Sally after she stood him up without giving him a reason. Thome feels that Macy has liked her drinking problem but Keith disagrees. Septimian admits she felt relieved when she heard the wedding was called off because she feels Jack can do much better than Sally Spectra. Thome tells Macy he does want to be with her but her drinking threatens their relationship. Kevin sees a guy approaching behind Sly and he's carrying a gun. He tells Sly to open the cash register. Macy and Thome see a man in a misreading that has kept them apart but now they're never going to let anything come between them again. Earl puts the gun to Sly's head and tells Sly he'll blow his brains out unless he opens the cash register. Earl is about to shoot Sly when Kevin comes up behind Earl and hits him over the head with a beer bottle and knocks him out. Later, Sly tells Kevin he's the new head his boy. Eric tells Sheila that Ridge and Stephanie do not feel comfortable having her present at their meeting regarding Belief. Brooke is praying Taylor isn't pregnant.

Days of our Lives

Elhabegged to realize her father is not really dead and torn apart by her conflicting feelings for the father she has alternately loved and hated. Billie is drawn in by Curtis' profession of love for her and reluctantly agrees not to tell his boss she's seen. An amateur photographer who happened to snap pictures of the area where the gunman was standing on the day in question turns over her photos to the police. An unsuspecting Billie is unlocking the door to her apartment, when suddenly a hand grabs her from behind. A master manipulator, Curtis explains that he became a government informant against the mob and was forced to go into the witness protection program, which eventually led to his being caught in the cemetery and his being digged feverishly until he unearths the coffin... and finds Carly inside, barely clinging to life. Jennifer and Austin celebrate when their exposure on Salem's housewife prostitution ring is a success.

Glynnis O'Connor:
Acting is in her blood

"It's nice not being an ingenue anymore," confessed Glynnis O'Connor, the latest actress to take over the role of the very popular and much loved Margie in "As the World Turns." For the record, Margaret Colin originated the part in 1981 and stayed with it until 1983; then came Hillary Bailey Smith, who played the part for six years; and Ellen Dolan, who played it for the last four years. "I've never played a detective before and I enjoy that aspect of the part. Margie is also a working mother, as I and so many others are in real life." (Glynnis has a 3-year-old daughter named Lindsay.)

Margo is almost a superwoman since she does all her jobs so well and still has time left over for her husband Tom. Glynnis' husband is Doug Stern and when the call came for her to return to New York, where she grew up, the Sterns jumped at the chance.

Glynnis started out as an actress at a very young age. She describes herself as pretty headstrong and when she told her actress-mother, Lenka Petersen, that she too wanted to be an actress, her mother knew there was no stopping her.

"I did a movie titled 'Jeremy' with Robby Benson that got some nice notices and then the city kept coming my way. One of my favorite parts was in a Hallmark Mark of Fame TV production of 'Our Town' in which I played Emily opposite Robby Benson's George. The rest of the cast was truly great; it included Hal Holbrook, Sara Thompson, Neil Patrick Harris and Barbara Bel Geddes."

Glynnis moved from movies to the stage to TV with ease and worked all the time. She was lauded for her role in the TV movie "Why Me" in which she played a woman who was disfigured and reconstructed by a plastic surgeon who ended up marrying her. In the theatrical feature, "Those Lips, Those Eyes," she was a stage-struck actress who toiled in summer stock, which Glynnis did at the beginning of her career. When she was asked if she would like to return to the New York stage when the time permitted, Glynnis took a deep breath and said it would require a great deal of energy to do the soap and appear on the stage... and then she paused and said, "My mother did it on one. She was in a soap, appeared on Broadway for eight performances a week and raised five kids. If the part was irresistible, I suppose I would give it a great deal of serious consideration."

In the meantime Glynnis is happy playing Margie in "ATWT." According to the fan mail, the viewers have already accepted the new Margie, which pleases Glynnis very much.

"As the World Turns" airs weekdays from 10 to 11 a.m. on CBS (KSL) and from 3 to 4 p.m. on CBS (KNVT).

'Days' Adair married to Chip Hayes

By Detelou Peterson
Knight-Ridder News Service

Q. There's a pizza riding on this. I say Deborah Adair, of "Days of Our Lives" is married to Josh Brodin. My nephew says she is not. —L.W., Westfield, Mass.

A. Adair's been married for six years to TV producer Chip Hayes, who produces Fox's "Melrose Place." Brodin's wife acted under the name Alice Adair, but she's also Deborah Adair. She can't use the name professionally because "Days" Adair is married to Unlad, Screen Actors Guild rules, there can't be two actresses with the same name. Brodin and his Deborah met when working on the 1987 series "Private Eye." They have a son, 3.

Q. Settle an argument between me and my grandma before we go bonkers. Tell us what happens in Alexandria on "The Guiding Light." I say the doc Grandma says she quit the show. —C., Grand Rapids, Minn.

A. Grandma's right, Alexandra McKinsey, who played Beverly Spaulding, deecided she was being worked too hard, and took advantage of a clause in her contract that let her quit on short notice. Her departure last August took everyone by surprise. "I was burnt out," she told TV Guide.

Q. My mother and I watched "As the World Turns" since the first episode. Before she died, my mother gave me a picture of the original cast. I wonder if anyone on the show might like the picture. I'd like to write to ask but don't know the address. —Mrs. E.S., Grand Haven, Mich. A. It's possible you may treasure the picture more than the show would. They have files of publicity stills. But you might write Helen Wagner, the only current member of the cast who was on hand in 1956 when "ATWT" premiered. Write: CBS-TV, 51 W. 52nd St., New York, N.Y. 10019.

'Talk Soup': A witty look at TV talk scene

By Lynn Elber
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Consider the great digests of knowledge and artistry. Encyclopedias, collections of the year's best, the compendiums that take a world, sort it and serve it up neatly.

Now ponder TV's contribution to the genre: E! Entertainment Television's "Talk Soup," which skins the cream — meaning the most outrageous moments — from the talk show circuit.

In a half-hour each week (check local listings for times), the cable TV show presents 10 clips picked — from 22 talk-fests. A roundup for the week, "Talk Soup Weekend," airs on Saturdays.

"Talk Soup" hears America singing, and a very weird song it is. Watch Gerardo Rivera interview a 1,000-pound man, Harbome, and the woman whose heart he has won.

See "gold-digging" studs showcased by Jenny-Jones. Montel Williams take on teen-age racists. Vicki Lawrence and successful plastic surgeries. Phil Donahue and transsexual lesbians. Maury Povich and transsexual politicians.

Chevy Chase, preparing for the September debut of his late-night program for Fox TV, tried to shake off the talk show label altogether during a recent news conference.

Talk shows, the writer-actor said sardonically, are "those things in the middle of the afternoon where the underbelly of society are made to look like Middle America."

It's clear, however, that many folks get a kick out of poking around that plump old gut. So "Talk Soup" might stand simply as a shortcut for devotees of Phil, Gerardo, et al.

It might, But Greg Kinnear, the program's host and its witty heart and soul, won't let it.

Handsome and polished, Kinnear, at first glance comes across like a sober network anchor guiding us through the day's news. But he quickly makes it clear we are edging, together, into the twilight zone.

Or, as he put it on a recent program, "Welcome, America — slipping into a cultural and moral black hole — and I've got the show" to prove it, folks.

Kinnear's arsenal, both scripted and off the cuff, includes droll asides, doubletakes and meaningful silences — all justifiable reactions to the passing parade.

"And hasn't she found a little piece of heaven in Antonio there?" Kinnear said drily after a clip showed a cocky man telling Montel Williams why he had "mersey sex" with an "ugly" woman. So what's a nice guy like Kinnear doing in the soup?

The son of a U.S. diplomat, Kinnear, 30, was born in Loganport, Ind., but grew up in Washington, Lebanon and Greece.

He graduated from the University of Arizona with a degree in broadcast journalism and expected, Kinnear says, "to have a respectable career in television news."

Instead, he bumped around in jobs that included acting and game show host before signing on as a reporter for Movietime, forerunner to E! Entertainment Television.

Kinnear lost his job when Movietime was sold, heading over to Fox TV to produce and host the short-lived "Best of the Worst," a celebration of the ridiculous and insane in American culture.

El saw the light 18 months ago, rehiring Kinnear for "Talk Soup." Since then, he and "Soup" have found hot, garnering fans and media attention — including suggestions that Kinnear deserves his own talk show or sitcom.

"I'm amazed. Absolutely amazed," Kinnear says of the program's popularity.

"I always felt it was a good show, like we were making more of something than met the eye. I'm surprised other people started to acknowledge that as well."

He's gotten letters from college dorms that arrange "Talk Soup" hours, and from families who gather to savor the show.

"I don't think Hollywood ever gives enough credit to the audience," Kinnear says. "When there's something incredibly stupid happening on television, they know it. And when there's something smart happening, they recognize that as well."

Smart and sassy, that's "Talk Soup."

Anderson talks about divorce

By Ed Bark
Dallas Morning News

LOS ANGELES — Pick a tabloid — any tabloid — and you'll find Loni Anderson on the cover with screaming headlines surrounding her.

In this case, the gossip circle has a limitless diameter. Anderson's abrupt split-up with Burt Reynolds is more than a match for the equally sudden union of Julia Roberts and Lyle Lovett.

NBC nonetheless decided to put Anderson in cross hairs Wednesday afternoon. Wearing a red jacket and black skirt, she led a contingent of prominent new cast members for two returning Saturday night sitcoms — "Nurses" and "Empty Nest."

Anderson is joining "Nurses" as a "self-centered, egotistical" hospital administrator who will have a "romantic infatuation" with Richard Mulligan's character on "Empty Nest." They'll meet via a "crossover" visit from Mulligan on the Sept. 25 season premiere of "Nurses." Anderson will be a guest on "Nurses" the following week. The full-time "Empty Nest" additions are Jéstelle Getty of "The Golden Girls," reprising her batty Sophia character, and "Night Court" alum Marsha Warfield as a doctor running an inner-city clinic in Miami.

Stop skimming, we've reached the promised land. The touchy subject of Anderson's broken marriage inevitably was broached by a TV critic who lauded her for having the "courage" to make a public appearance.

"I hope none of you make me feel that it took a lot of courage to come here today," she replied, smiling. Asked about the huge attention she's received lately, Anderson said, "It's very private, and anything you've read that's been public isn't true."

When an inquiring mind mentioned the tabloids, Anderson shot back, "Do you read them? I don't." Anderson said she hadn't spoken to any journalist about the breakup of her marriage. Not even arch-gadfly Arny Arched, who quoted her in his daily column? Well, yes, she had. And it's true, she said, that Reynolds' decision to end their marriage was a complete surprise to her.

Anderson's 5-year-old son, Quinton, whom she and Reynolds adopted, has a nanny to look after him.

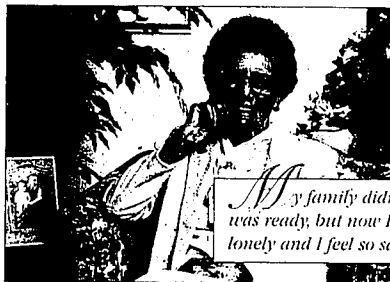

"He's always had a nanny," she added. "And he will be visiting me on the set of "Nurses.""

Another inquisitor wanted to know how Anderson is "coping" of late. "How do you think?" she answered. "Just imagine all of yourselves being in the same situation."

It was time for an Entertainment Weekly reporter to take affront. Celebrities always cooperate with the media when they're selling something, he said. But when bad news hits, they blame reporters for getting the story wrong while refusing to tell their side.

"I just found it kind of off-putting the way you said what you said," the reporter said, unburdening himself.

Anderson maintained a thin smile and said nothing in response. At the close of a 45-minute interview session, she was whisked from a hotel ballroom while Getty and Warfield stayed to kibitz with any interested critics. There were few takers.

Lottery winner offers reward concerning explosion of cat

New York Daily News

A California lottery winner is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons responsible for what is being called a television-inspired animal slaying in Santa Cruz.

Dick Zimmerman, a former TV news reporter who hit the jackpot, says the act — in which a cat was blown up when an M-80 firecracker was placed in its rear end and lit — was inspired by a recent episode of MTV's animated series, "Beavis and Butt-Head."

"I find that amusing, amoral," Zimmerman said in yesterday's "A Current Affair." "It's unbelievable to me that something like this can be part of a script."

MTV maintains the animated incident never happened.

ENJOY ONE OF THE HIGHEST FORMS OF ENTERTAINMENT

The Lipizzan Stallions are horses of nobility - the ultimate expression of art as well as athleticism - but to the full extent these magnificent stallions perform as noble mammals that no other breed can ever equal.

And, and, they are here for all to appreciate. Until Miss Jane can change to see them perform, including their AIRS ABOVE 'HIF CRUISE!' They have, after all, been practicing for the last 400 years.

THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF HORSES' ROYAL LIPIZZAN STALLION SHOW WED. AUGUST 11 ONE SHOW ONLY! 7:30 P.M.

Maguire: Football players need to stay healthy to win

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

With all those million-dollar beer bellies, bulbous biceps and burgeoning buttocks, this could only be the NFL. And who better to bring us up to speed than former Buffalo Bills punter and veteran NBC analyst Pat Maguire.

"If you take a good look down through the years, it's the teams that stay healthy that make it to the Super Bowl," Maguire said.

So much for the Bills. Maguire reveals that Bills QB Jim Kelly "threw his arm out a little bit" last spring in Orlando, Fla., during taping of NBC's "NFL Quarterback Challenge."

So, who won? Troy Aikman? Steve Young? Esiason, maybe? NBC has the results stashed in a General Electric vault, from which nothing ever escapes, but if you're betting, put a fin on the guy in silver and black. OUT TAKES: Bill Glasgow, South Bend, Ind., Tribune columnist and regular on SportsChannel-NBC's roundtable show, "The Sports Writers Inc.," writes: "Thanks for thinking of us. Your piece will live as our most important PR shot. Heard from readers all over the country. Heard from readers who never had seen the show, but were wondering if 'Red' Glasgow still was alive.

"Enclosed: my card." He'd thrown a Fleer 1981 Rudy Law into the envelope. Thanks, Bill. And, by the way, how is Red? Better? Hope...

Besides games in Berlin, Barcelona and Tokyo, the NFL has scheduled a Dallas-Detroit game for London as part of its "International Week," which will be televised to 86 countries outside the United States, the league said.

ESPN International will televise the four games to 60 countries, primarily in the Pacific Rim, and Eurosport will send the game to 26 countries, primarily in Europe.

that is, the depth to get there, not the depth to lose again. That, they've probably got.

"Go four times? Three times? One time? That's tough enough, and they end up doing it three times," Maguire said. "They must stay healthy because they can't afford to lose anybody this year."

Television executives might think the new season starts in September. That's when NBC resumes its glorification of pond scum in "L.A. Law," and CBS rolls out its all-new, all-ramc episodes of "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman," a sort of Madame Curie of the Mesa.

But, as we all know, the TV season officially begins Saturday when ABC gives us the first national telecast of an exhibition game, Green Bay and the Los Angeles Raiders in the Hall of Fame Game at Canton, Ohio.

Saturday night, ESPN has New Orleans vs. Philadelphia at Tokyo, and on Sunday, Maguire will team with Todd Christensen and Tom Hammond for the Pittsburgh-San Francisco game at Barcelona, Spain.

"I'm leaving tomorrow for Barcelona, then Berlin the next week," Maguire said, sounding more like an international seed grain exporter than a football analyst.

In Berlin on Saturday, Aug. 7, Maguire will get his first look of the season at Buffalo, which plays Minnesota. Needless to say, Jim Kelly didn't win the Quarterback Challenge, which will air on NBC during "SportsWorld" on Saturday and after the football game on Sunday.

For the third straight year, Dan Marino of Miami won the accuracy portion of the contest, but he didn't win either.

"Actually, none of them threw very well. They weren't really in that good a shape," Maguire said. "They were throwing into the wind, and it was really kind of tough to execute well."

But it was fun, Maguire said. The players brought their fami-
