President pushes his budget plan

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — President Clinton appealed to the nation Tuesday to rally around a compromise budget plan designed to cut $496 billion from the federal deficit with only a modest hit on the middle class.
"There are only two choices, our plan and no plan," Clinton said.
Democratic leaders and administration officials consistently predicted that the compromise would pass, but Clinton nonetheless delivered a nationally televised prime-time address to try to rally public support — and a few critical undecided Senate Democrats.
"We cannot afford not to act," Clinton said in the 18-minute address from the Oval Office. "I need your help."
Attributing the deficit and economic drift to years of liberal Democratic "entitlement" policies followed by Republican "abandonment" of responsibility for the nation's problems, Clinton said: "Our nation is in economic danger."
Clinton was barely off the air when his nemesis in the budget battle, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, was given an opportunity to respond. He said Clinton's plan would neither cut the deficit significantly nor create any new jobs.
"The president's economic plan calls for more taxes, more spending and higher deficits," Dole said. He was particularly critical of a provision that would make the higher income taxes retroactive to Jan. 1, 1993, 20 days before he even got to office.
Clinton's high-stakes sales pitch opened a frenzied final burst of lobbying in an effort to win Senate votes, the final hurdle this week, just before a scheduled congressional recess.
The passage seemed likely, particularly after Clinton won critical backing from the Congressional Black Caucus, which had threatened to oppose the plan.
Clinton planned to address House Democrats on the plan in the Capitol today. The outcome was far from certain in the Senate, where Vice President Al Gore broke a 49-49 tie to pass the initial version.

Learning as he goes

Habitat for Humanity construction supervisor Marvin Reinke is finding his work is a learning experience.

Struggling to raise a roof

Habitat for Humanity chapter pounds away on 2 fronts

TWIN FALLS — How do you supervise a group of zealous volunteer homebuilders?
Very closely.
"That is one of several lessons Marvin Reinke has learned as construction supervisor for Habitat for Humanity's local affiliate during the building of the group's first home.
"Some of our volunteers can be a little over anxious," Reinke said. "They dive into things and discover they're not doing it right."
Volunteers from across the United States have been working on a home that will be sold to the Banyai family upon completion.

He spoke of a recent occasion when volunteers began putting up sheathing and used too few nails. Reinke was attempting to coordinate the activities of 50 people on that day and was simply too busy to notice the mistake. He said city building inspectors later caught the error, and it was corrected.
However, Reinke's experiences are symptomatic of a much larger problem facing the fledgling local organization.
"Habitat, which hopes to complete its first home by Sept. 1, is struggling to build homes with dwindling resources. In addition to a shortage of funds, board members say volunteers are needed in almost all areas of the organization.
Habitat needs an additional $10,000 to complete its first project on the six-lot parcel of land on the corner of Fourth Avenue West and Blake Street.

"I definitely feel frustrated at times," said Charlie Lenkner, a former chapter president. While Lenkner is grateful to the people and businesses that have contributed time and money to Habitat, he had hoped there would have been a greater community response.
"This community definitely has the ability to raise funds," Lenkner said. "We just haven't found a way to be a part of it (the community) on a large scale."
Lenkner and others involved with Habitat agree that people tend to turn out in large numbers at the work site, but are

Fisherman makes bank, then dies

By Brad Bowlin

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls men on a weekend fishing trip narrowly avoided one tragedy only to suffer another.

John M. Secfried, 68, was pulled from beneath his boat, which had capsized in Magic Reservoir in Western Blaine County Saturday afternoon, but died moments later of a heart attack while sitting on the shore.
Secfried and Darrell Myers, 51, were fishing when Secfried's line snagged. Myers told him to ease the boat backwards to provide some slack, but he accidentally put the boat on full throttle, causing the boat to lurch forward. Capt. Gene Ramsey of the Blaine County Sheriff's Department said.
The sudden movement, coupled with the choppy waves on the reservoir, caused the boat to turn over. Secfried was caught underwater by the boat's canopy, Ramsey said.
Myers pulled Secfried to safety and the two men made it to the shore about 10 feet away.

Town residents flee rising water

The Associated Press
PRAIRIE DU ROCHER, Ill. — An official cried outside the village hall and the last remaining residents evacuated as floodwaters threatened to pour over a levee of this 18th-century town Tuesday night.

After a frantic day of last-ditch, dramatic efforts to save their community, people gave in to the Mississippi River.
"It's coming up faster than we expected," said village trustee Robbie Aubuchon, who cried as he sounded the evacuation siren. "Our odds went down fast."
The last 25 residents in this town of 600 grabbed what they could and headed for higher ground. National Guard trucks need away.
Authorities went to great lengths to save the town in what may have been the final battle of the great Midwestern flood, which contributed to 47 deaths and caused at least $10 billion in damage in nine states.
Tuesday morning, officials had intentionally breached a levee three miles upstream from town, hoping to create a wall of water that would deflect an encroaching surge of muddy Mississippi waters from earlier levee breaks.
But that meant purposefully swamping about 58,000 acres of farmland, more than a dozen houses and a restored French fort. A levee closer to town was Prairie du Rocher's last line of defense.
"Most farmers understood."
"It has to be done," Ron Umbdenstock said as the ugly brown water rolled over the levee and began to envelop his 1 1/2-acre chicken farm. "You'd hate to lose the town, too."
The decision by the Army Corps of Engineers to break the levee came after much discussion and soul-searching in Prairie du Rocher. The community of woodframe and brick houses was founded by French traders in 1722; today, tourists go there for French food and country inns.
Workers began the task Monday night, using a crane on a barge to lower the height of the barrier by 3 feet, to just above the river level. They followed up on Tuesday by punching a hole in it.
"This is our last hope," said police officer Ron Jones. "If it don't work, we're going to lose this town."

Thunderstorms spread from Western Plains to East Coast

Thunderstorms were widely scattered from the Plains to the East Coast on Tuesday, with heavy rain in parts of the Southeast.

Temperatures dipped below the freezing point in the northern Rockies. At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the Plains, the Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the eastern Gulf of Mexico coast, the upper Great Lakes, the central and southern Atlantic Coast states, and northern Maine.

Severe thunderstorm watches were posted for parts of Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and adjacent sections of the Great Lakes. Watches also were issued for parts of North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland.

Heavy rain fell during the six hours up to noon MDT as a high at Cannon Field at Clovis, N.M., on the southern western Plains.

However, heavier rain broke out during the afternoon in western North Carolina, including 1.75 inches in just 30 minutes at Asheville, and 2.50 inches in less than two hours at Mills River, the National Weather Service said.

While a drought has affected parts of the Southeast this summer, rain has fallen in North Carolina in recent weeks. Temperatures around the 48 states at 1 p.m. MDT ranged from 50 at Marquette, Mich., to 109 at Twenty-nine Palms, Calif.

Tuesday morning's low for the lower 48 states was 30 at Old Faithful in Yellowstone National Park, Wyo.

Price tag on rocket blast put at $2 billion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The explosion that destroyed a Titan IV rocket and a spy satellite may have cost $2 billion, making it America's second-most expensive space accident, analysts said Tuesday.

The Air Force was conducting an investigation to probe Monday's blast 60 miles off California's coast and was considering whether to try to recover pieces of debris from the sea floor, said G. Frank Sizing, Titan IV program manager at Los Angeles Air Force Base.

Sizing also said that, contrary to his initial impression, there was no evidence the Titan IV's two strap-on boosters separated prematurely from the main two-stage rocket.

The Titan and its payload blew up 101 seconds after launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base, 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

John Pike, a space policy analyst for the Federation of American Scientists, estimated the accident cost up to $2 billion. That includes more than $1.5 billion for what he believes was a Lacrosse imaging radar spy satellite and several hundred million for the rocket, he said by e-mail from Washington.

"It's the second-most expensive space disaster after the Challenger," Pike said.

The 1967 fire that destroyed an Apollo spacecraft on the launch pad, killing three astronauts, cost about $1.6 billion in current dollars, Pike said.

He said the 1986 explosion that destroyed space shuttle Challenger and killed seven crew members cost $1.5 billion, including about $2 billion to fix shuttle problems revealed by the accident and billions more because the disaster grounded shuttles for 2 1/2 years.

The New York Times quoted unidentified intelligence officials as saying the rocket's payload was not Lacrosse but a trio of solar-powered ocean-surveillance satellites that together cost about $800 million.

If that report is correct, the explosion would be the nation's third-most expensive space disaster, behind the Challenger and Apollo accidents.

Titan IVs cost $300 million to $320 million, up from initial costs of $200 million, but Sizing said the cost to identify the rocket's classified payload or its contents.

The Challenger accident prompted the Air Force to turn to Titan IVs for launching spy satellites.

Workers shored up the levee closer to town, in case their bold strategy didn't work, but there was little left to do but wait and watch.

It was all so much for at least one of the farmers, watching their land disappear under the blanket of swirling water. Understanding is one thing; acceptance is another.

Carol Duffenne yelled at authorities at a Mississippi farm, although she said she had no choice. The family's 120-acre farm was swamped.

"We were the sacrificial lambs," she cried. "Couldn't someone have touched our arm and said, 'Can we ask your permission to destroy your farm?' No one cares about us." We saved this town.

But even Mrs. Duffenne's brother, Melvin Schicker, whose own land was flooded, said he didn't object to the intentional break.

"I don't know it, but what are you going to do?" he said. "You can't whip Mother Nature. We tried it."

The Army Corps of Engineers wasn't concerned only about Prairie du Rocher.

A larger town to the south that is home to 8,200 people and a maximum-security prison. Some inmates were moved to other sections of the prison as a flood precaution.

Elsewhere, floodwaters were receding, and many states have turned their attention to cleanup and damage assessment.

Even in St. Louis, which suffered vast damage to its suburbs this weekend, the Mississippi continued to drop faster than many had predicted. At a propane tank farm, nearly all the 30,000-gallon tanks that had been dangerously floating in the river's overflow had scuttled back to their saddles. Still, nearly 12,000 people remained evacuated.

that prohibits granting minority status to homosexuals — what initiative supporters call special rights. The state does not recognize homosexuals as a minority now.

It also bans same-sex marriages, which are not legal in Idaho presently, and prohibits the expenditure of public money in any way to portray "the state as not recognizing homosexuality as a minority now."

The initiative has been condemned by most public officials and the state Democratic Party as feather-light and divisive. The State Republican Party has declined to take a position on it.

In its campaign to head off the vote, the ACLU attacked as insufficient or unfair both the short and long ballot titles the attorney general provides to summarize ballot issues. It wanted the titles to fully say the initiative was intended to discriminate against homosexuals.

Walton reacted to the ACLU challenge by filing one of his own, although he admitted the only reason he did so was to give the Supreme Court a choice of options had it decided to void EchoHalo's title.

But Chief Justice Charles McDevitt, writing for the court, held that the attorney general's legal description "is not argumentative or prejudicial but instead is a true and impartial statement of the ICA initiative."

It was only the second time in the 60-year history of the state's initiative law that the high court has been asked to validate the ballot titles for an initiative. It recommended a change in the ballot title of an ill-fated 1954 right-to-work proposal.

Each homeowner family is required to contribute 500 hours of "sweat equity," either in the construction of their own home or other Habitat homes. The home is then sold to the family at cost and a no-interest mortgage is issued over a fixed period.

A large part of what the organization does has to do with teaching Habitat families how to be responsible homeowners.

"Some of these people have never worked with a budget in their lives," Reinke said. "Everything about homeownership is new to them."

A "nurturing" committee educates families about the numerous responsibilities of owning a home, Reinke said.

Beyond the nailing of boards and the laying of roof shingles, Habitat workers say their long-term goal is to renovate and rebuild lives.

"There are a lot of people with creative, productive potential," Lenker said. "All they need is a place to stand until they can get on their feet."

less eager to do some of the more mundane activities.

"The grind of finding the money to buy sheet rock" is a "hurdler seed," Lenker said. Habitat could also use people to help with publicity and fund-raising, he said.

Reinke believes part of the homebuilders' problems are similar to those faced by any new organization trying to establish itself.

"By talking to other Habitat affiliates, Reinke said he has learned that the first house is always the hardest to complete because it takes time to develop community trust.

With time, a community will begin to take the organization seriously, Reinke said.

Habitat also suggests they may be hindered by some common misperceptions.

"We're building homes with people and jobs," Lenker said. "I think people often don't realize that Habitat provides more than a 'do-good giveaway' service."

Law holds government agencies accountable for promises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Borrowing an idea from the Silicon Valley city of Sunnyvale, Calif., the government committed itself Tuesday to giving federal agencies more flexibility — but also more accountability — in the way they spend taxpayers' money.

President Clinton signed into law the Government Performance and Results Act, under which federal agencies will have to say what they will do with the money they get and will be measured against those promises.

The law would require agencies to devise strategic plans, set yearly goals for every program and measure how well they actually perform compared to the targets.

More simply, Clinton said at a bill-signing ceremony, the law "requires that we chart a course for every endeavor that we take that uses the people's money for: see how well we are performing, tell the public how we are doing, stop the things that don't work, and never stop improving the things that we think are worth investing in."

cles to efficient government, added that the federal government would "no longer measure only what we put into programs, but what we get out of — not just what we spend, but what we accomplish."

The idea was developed — using an experimental federal grant in 1992 — by Senator Robert Byrd, a computer industry lobbyist. There, the City Council demands that program managers promise from city departments that it gives them money.

The law passed without a dissenting vote in Congress this spring after officials of the Office of Management and Budget visited to Sunnyvale and returned with an enthusiastic endorsement of the idea.

"For much too long, this focus on program performance and results has been missing from the federal government," Sen. William Roth (R-Del.) said in the measure's chief sponsor's statement.

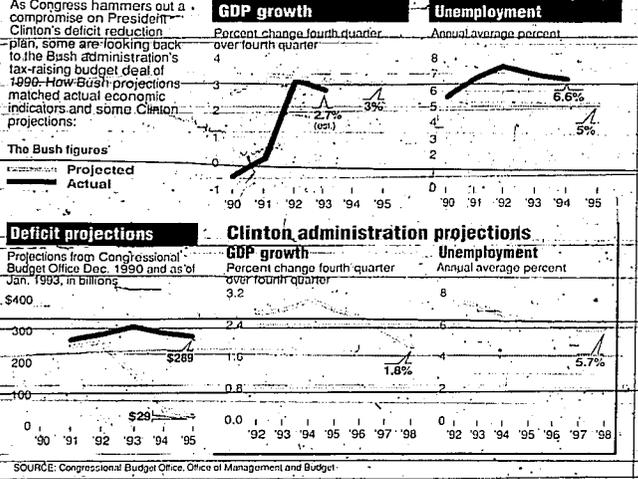

Under the act, 10 agencies will conduct pilot programs in the next three years before the plan takes effect throughout the government in 1997.

In agencies where mathematical performance standards could not be developed — there's no apparent way to quantify how the State Department represents the national interest overseas, for example — subjective goals would be written and Congress would try to judge how well they were achieved.

At the same time, agencies would be given freedom in experimenting in reaching their goals. An agency assigned the task of improving life in the inner cities, for example, might try direct government action in some places, enterprise zone in others and federal grants to entrepreneurs in still others.

Will Clinton's budget plan make a difference?

Wealthiest, poorest would bear brunt of deficit-reduction bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wealthiest Americans and many of the poorest would feel the brunt of the impact from the deficit-reduction compromise that President Clinton and congressional Democrats have forged.

For the middle class, the most direct impact would be relatively small: an increase in the federal gasoline tax estimated to cost the typical driver less than $30 a year.

The package, which Democrats say would pare $496 billion from budget deficits through 1998, is expected to come to a vote in Congress later this week. The authors have yet to reveal many details of the plan.

Both parties say the package's consequences would be dramatic. Democrats say in the long run, it would lower interest rates and foster a healthier economy. Republicans say its taxes would force businesses to eliminate jobs.

But as for direct effects, here, how one of the plan's chief components — Social Security tax — would be felt by Americans:

- Income tax: Only the richest 1 percent of Americans would see their income taxes rise. For them, the top 31 percent rate would rise to 36 percent as of last Jan. 1. This would affect individuals with more than $115,000 in taxable income.
- After their deductions and exemptions — and couples exceeding $140,000. This translates mostly to singles with gross incomes above $340,000 and couples over $130,000. People earning above $250,000 would face a 39.6 percent tax rate.
- Gasoline tax: The current 14.1-cent-per-gallon federal gasoline tax would rise by 4.3 cents on Oct. 1, getting federal figures; the conservative Heritage Foundation has calculated that this would cost the typical driver $29.30 a year.
- Based on state-by-state driving patterns, this would range from a $10.38 increase in West Virginia to a $39.13 boost in Wyoming.
- Social Security tax: About one of every five Social Security recipients now pays taxes on up to half of his or her benefits. These are of single people earning more than $25,000 a year and couples making more than $32,000. Under the compromise, singles making more than $34,000 and couples over $44,000 would pay taxes on up to 8.5 percent of their benefits. The Treasury Department says this would affect 5.5 million Social Security recipients, or 12.8 percent of the 43 million elderly and disabled people collecting benefits.
- Earned income tax credit: About 12 million low-income workers now get the credit, some as a tax refund but the majority, who owe no taxes, as a check in the mail. Under current law, they get an average credit of $1,400 a year in 1994 and a maximum of $2,877. With the bill's $20.8 billion five-year increase, the maximum credit would rise to $3,554 when it's fully phased in by 1996. For the first time, childless workers would qualify for the benefits, because of that and an increase in the income level at which large families could qualify, an extra 6 million people would be likely to enter the program.

Senate OKs cut version of service plan

WASHINGTON — A slimmer, down-version of President Clinton's plan for students to earn some college tuition money through public service work won Senate approval Tuesday. Negotiators must reconcile it with a somewhat broader House version.

Initial steps toward resolving differences already were under way as negotiators sought to have a compromise ready for final passage by end of the week, said a source close to the discussions.

"We're not sure we can do it, but it appears that all sides are agreeable to try," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Senate's 58-41 vote ended a vigorous partisan dispute that forced Clinton's original five-year, $9.5-billion plan to be sharply reduced. Clinton called senators after the vote to thank them.

The Senate's three-year program would cost $1.2 billion. The House approved a three-year arrangement at an estimated cost of $2.1 billion, though funding could vary under the House version.

"The administration is comfortable with either approach at this point," said Bill Segal, who directs Clinton's national service office.

The differences between the bills are really quite small," he said, adding that both were "essentially identical" to Clinton's plan.

The biggest differences are in how many students could take part and how soon. Clinton wanted to allow 25,000 students in the first year and 150,000 by the third year.

The Senate version would allow 20,000 participants in the first year, 33,000 in the second year and 47,000 in the third year, assuming an average annual cost per participant of $15,000. The House would allow somewhat more students than the Senate during the three years.

The Senate numbers resulted from its decision to limit spending to $300 million in the first year of the program, $500 million in the second year and $700 million in the third year.

Other differences were primarily structural.

Both House and Senate versions would allow students who completed two years of community service work to receive $4,725 for each year to apply toward college tuition. Both the House and Senate reduced Clinton's figure from $5,000 to keep it lower than the $5,250 military people can receive under the longstanding GI bill.

Both House and Senate would provide living allowances of at least $7,400 a year and health-care and child day-care benefits.

Drug Enforcement Administration chief resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert C. Bonner, who gave up a lifetime job as a federal judge to become Drug Enforcement Administration chief three years ago, praised the Clinton administration Tuesday for announcing his resignation.

"I think they have gone out of their way to not politicize the head of federal law-enforcement agencies," said Bonner, who was appointed by President Bush but had resigned in 1991, returning under President Clinton.

Bonner said he was not asked to leave, and agreed to stay on until a successor is appointed, which he predicted could take several months. He said he informed Attorney General Janet Reno during a meeting Monday of his decision.

Abortion rights forces win in Senate battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate refused to exclude abortion coverage from federal workers' health plans Tuesday, as the chamber's five Democratic women used a parliamentary tactic to muster a narrow victory for abortion rights forces.

NOTICE OF TAX INCREASE FOR JEROME COUNTY

The College of Southern Idaho Junior College Taxing District has proposed to increase its annual budget by an amount of ad valorem tax revenues that exceeds one hundred and five percent (105%) of the ad valorem tax revenues certified for its annual budget during the previous year by six and zero tenths percent (6.0%) or its ad valorem tax rate by zero and three tenths percent (0.3%) which will increase its property tax revenue by eleven and zero tenths percent (11.0%).

The following schedule is an estimate of what this change may mean to a taxpayer:

	Last Year's Taxable Value	This Year's Estimated Taxable Value	Last Year's Actual Taxes	This Year's Estimated Taxes
FOR A TYPICAL HOME OF $50,000 TAXABLE VALUE LAST YEAR	50,000	56,600	$86.80	$98.88
FOR A TYPICAL FARM OF $100,000 TAXABLE VALUE LAST YEAR	100,000	102,000	$173.60	$178.19
FOR A TYPICAL BUSINESS OF $200,000 TAXABLE VALUE LAST YEAR	200,000	200,000	$347.20	$349.40

All citizens are invited to attend a public hearing on the increased budget request or increased tax increase. The public hearing will be held at the College of Southern Idaho, 315 Falls Avenue, Twin Falls, Idaho in the boardroom of the Taylor Administration Building at 5:30 p.m. on Monday August 16, 1993.

CAUTION TO TAXPAYER: The amounts shown in this schedule do not reflect tax charges that are made because of voter approved bond levies, override levies, supplemental levies, or levies applicable to newly annexed property, or levies applicable to newly created taxing districts.

Paper-Poke Pie

Quarter pie & core 4-6 cups apples and mix with the following:

- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 tbl spoons flour
- 1/2 cup nutmeg
- 2 tsp cinnamon
- 1/2 cup oil (mix & set aside)

Fill unbaked crust and little mixture arranged apple quarters so they fit snugly together. Heap apples in pie shell.

Sprinkle the following topping over the apple mixture:

- 1 cup flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup butter (1 cube)

Then mix until crumbly.

Place all in a heavy brown paper bag (poke) clipping or stapling the escape; place so steam will not and bake at 400° for 45 min. Cut sack off of the pie when pie is removed from the oven. Being cautious of the steam in the sack. Transparent apples from KELLEY Orchard of course are the best!

Researchers find human, animal bones

AKRON, Ohio — Mastodon bones and human artifacts dating back about 10,000 years have been unearthed next to each other in northern Ohio.

"It could have been a site where humans actually killed the mastodons, or it could be where they butchered mastodons that were already dead, or it could be a place where they hunted them," said researcher Ernest Smith.

It's one of a handful of cases of signs of human activity being found near remains of the extinct, elephant-like Ice Age mammals, researchers at the University of Akron said. The remains were found in Holmes County.

Postal Service will finish in the red

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Postal Service expects to finish this fiscal year with a loss of $501 million, Postmaster General Marvin Runyon said Tuesday.

Declines in revenue and continuing costs of reorganizing the agency caused the loss to climb above the expected $73 million loss for the year that ends Sept. 24.

But, Runyon told the agency's governing board, the loss would have been $2.7 billion without the restructuring that eliminated 47,000 postal jobs over the past year.

And Runyon reiterated his pledge that postage rates will not increase until at least 1995.

For the year to date the post office is $334 million in the black, but the just completed third-quarter showed a $188 million loss and the fourth quarter of the year usually has the lowest revenues while operating costs do not fall, officials explained.

School surveys students on abortion

BOEON — Students at Northeastern University will be polled this fall on whether to add an elective surgical procedure — abortion — to their health coverage.

The university said it will try to ensure that the referendum doesn't polarize the campus. "What we're trying to get out of a student survey is some assessment of the level of concern," said spokeswoman Janet Hookalls.

Already, some students are expressing strong opinions.

"I object to it for the simple fact that I consider it murder," said Tina Cardinale, former president of Northeastern Students for Life and a graduate business student. "Why should that be covered by insurance?"

Abortion coverage carries from one American university to the next.

U.S. official protests Mideast fighting

JERUSALEM — Secretary of State Warren Christopher met with a Palestinian delegation Tuesday that criticized American involvement in Lebanon — and nervousness over the possibility that Syria may be gaining a bargaining edge in the Mideast peace talks.

Christopher met for two hours with the Palestinians, and also met with top Israeli government officials.

Christopher and members of his entourage played down prospects for early progress in the peace process.

"We certainly are a long way away from making real substantive progress, but at least the discussions are now focused again on the core substantive issues," said a State Department official who briefed reporters on condition he not be identified.

Glacier may be headed across lake

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Bering Glacier, North America's largest, has begun what may be a two-year surge toward the sea, the U.S. Geological Survey said Monday.

In a worst-case scenario, the glacier's front could advance more than five miles across a lake and drop large icebergs that might disrupt shipping in the Gulf of Alaska, one scientist said.

But another scientist called that unlikely, and a Coast Guard official said the agency was not worried.

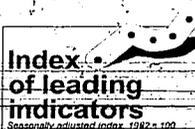

The glacier covers nearly 2,600 square miles between Cordova and Yakutat.

Index forecasts uneven economic growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy will continue to grow but at a bit uneven pace, according to the government's chief economic forecasting gauge, which inched up 0.1 percent in June.

The increase, reported Tuesday in the Commerce Department's index of leading indicators, followed a 0.2 percent rise in May and extended the index's sawtooth pattern since the start of the year. The index fell in January and March and rose in February and April.

Analysts said the index's behavior is symptomatic of the economy's lackluster performance during the first half of 1993 and its muted prospects for the rest of the year.

"The indicators say 'stagnation ahead,' slow but positive growth in the second half," said economist Allan Shatz of Economic Advisers Inc.

"The indicators do not say recession but they do suggest the economy will prove disappointing."

The index is designed to offer a sense of the economy's direction six months to nine months in advance, with three consecutive movements in one direction considered a good, although far from foolproof, bellwether of future activity.

Analysts have been disappointed by the economy so far this year and many have been scaling back their forecasts for the second half of 1993. Some are particularly concerned about the impact of the federal budget package passed for final congressional votes this week.

Other economists, though, are more optimistic. They expect the lowest interest rates in 20 years will help offset the drag of higher taxes.

"We believe lower interest rates are going to have a positive impact on the economy. We believe we are already seeing a positive impact on auto sales and we will start to see the impact on housing," said economist Robert Westcott of the WFAA Group, a Bala Cynwyd, Pa., forecasting firm.

"The economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, the sum of all goods and services produced within U.S. borders, crawled forward at a 0.7 percent annual rate in the first quarter and picked up only to a 1.6 percent rate in the second quarter.

Most forecasts for the second half range between 2 percent to a bit above 3 percent.

In June, six of the index's forward-looking indicators were positive. Five were negative, in order of their effect on the index, from greatest to smallest, the positive indicators were:

- A rise in new orders and contracts for new commercial buildings and business equipment.
- An advance in consumer confidence, as measured by a University of Michigan. However, the index had fallen during four of the previous five months.
- A rise in new claims for unemployment benefits, from an average of 390,000 a week in May to an average of 483,000 in June.
- A gain in stock prices as measured by the Standard & Poors 500.
- A rise in orders to factories for consumer goods.

Court nominee wins Senate confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 96-3 Tuesday to confirm Ruth Bader Ginsburg, a pioneering advocate of women's rights, as the 10th justice and second woman to serve on the Supreme Court.

Ginsburg, a federal appellate judge, will become the first justice named by a Democratic president since 1952.

The Senate vote completed one of the smoothest confirmations in recent years. Many senators said President Clinton's choice of a moderate avoided the pitched battles that engulfed the nominations of Clarence Thomas, who was confirmed, and Robert Bork, who was rejected.

Ginsburg

Ginsburg is to be sworn in next Tuesday at the White House and the Supreme Court. White House spokeswoman Lorraine Voles said.

"The Senate was obviously moved by her intellect, integrity and heart," was the president. Judge Ginsburg will be an outstanding addition to the court," Voles said.

Ginsburg, 60, will replace retired Justice Byron R. White. She will sit down the bench from the high court's first female member, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who was named by President Reagan in 1981.

The most dramatic difference between Ginsburg and White is over abortion. She says the constitution guarantees a woman's right to an abortion; he was never able to read the document that way.

Voting against Ginsburg's confirmation were Republican Sens. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Don Nickles of Oklahoma and Bob Smith of New Hampshire. Democratic Sen. Don Riegle of Michigan was absent.

Senators also voted 72-27 Tuesday to approve Thomas Payzant as assistant secretary of education in charge of elementary and secondary school policy, and confirmed Sheldon Hackney, 76-23, to head the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The two were approved without Senate debate, despite earlier controversy over Hackney's handling of free-speech issues, his president of the University of Pennsylvania and over Payzant's decision to bar the Boy Scouts of America from meeting in San Diego public schools during school hours.

The Senate Judiciary Committee also unanimously recommended confirmation of U.S. District Judge Louis Freed to become the nation's 11th FBI director. A full Senate vote is expected before Congress starts its summer recess Friday.

Ginsburg will join a Supreme Court that has moved steadily to the right during more than two decades of high court nominations by Republican presidents. The court has relaxed the separation of church and state, expanded police powers and limited the appeal rights of death-row inmates.

But the Supreme Court also upheld the constitutional right to abortion and the ban on school prayer in 1992. White was among the justices in the 5-4 abortion vote who said women should not have a constitutional right to end their pregnancies.

But Ginsburg has said emphatically that the Constitution's guarantee of the right to abortion is an essential part of women's equality.

Ginsburg won several important Supreme Court rulings on women's rights cases during the 1970s as the head of the American Civil Liberties Union Women's Rights Project.

But during 13 years as a federal appellate judge she became known as a cautious jurist who stuck close to precedent and sometimes was stingy with remedies for people who won lawsuits.

U.N. envoy halts aid shipments

MONROVIA, Liberia — The U.N. special envoy to Liberia has halted secret shipments of food to tens of thousands of starving people in rebel-held territory, a move relief groups say could cost thousands of lives.

The U.N. envoy, Trevor Gordon-Somers, asked the government of Ivory Coast on Monday to stop private relief agencies from traveling from that country into Liberian territory controlled by rebel leader Charles Taylor.

A copy of the letter, obtained by The Associated Press, said the aid shipments would endanger the precarious peace agreement signed a week ago by the warring factions in Liberia's civil war.

Director Fellini in hospital after stroke

RIMINI, Italy — Italian film director Federico Fellini was hospitalized in guarded condition Tuesday after suffering a stroke.

Dr. Massimo Pieratelli said the 73-year-old director was experiencing some muscle weakness on the left side of the body, but was conscious and talking.

Pieratelli said a CAT scan found Fellini had an obstruction in an artery on the right side of the brain. The cardiologist said there was no sign of any hemorrhage.

"At the moment his condition is stable, but given the type of problem he is listed in guarded condition," However, there are no hemorrhagic lesions. That is a positive sign," said Pieratelli. "At the moment he needs peace and tranquility."

Japanese coalition divided on policies

TOKYO — A coalition set to take power this week is divided on key issues like defense and tax policy, a leader of the broad-based alliance said Tuesday.

Tasuma Iwata, who is expected to be named finance minister and deputy prime minister in the new government, told reporters the make-up of the coalition — ranging from leftists to conservatives — would likely lead to debates on key issues.

The seven-party coalition has the votes to take the reins of government from the conservative Liberal Democratic Party, which Parliament's lower house convenes on Thursday.

Morihito Hosokawa, the founder of the reformist Japan New Party, to be prime minister.

Germany frees Nazi death camp leader

BERLIN — A German court freed the last commandant of the Treblinka death camp — a rare instance of probation for a Nazi war criminal with a life sentence — because he was ill and in deteriorating mental condition.

The May release of Kurt Franz, 78, became known last week as Israel's Supreme Court acquitted John Demjanetz of committing war crimes at the same camp. Franz was convicted in 1965 and sentenced to life in prison for complicity in the mass murder of 300,000 Jews as well as personally killing 139 at Treblinka.

Jewish groups condemned the new court action and voiced fears it might inspire neo-Nazis in Germany.

British use cameras to deter bombings

LONDON — The faces of motorists driving into London's twice-bombed financial district are being recorded in an unprecedented effort to deter IRA attacks, security chiefs said Tuesday.

High-resolution cameras will record drivers' appearances and their license plates "so if our opponents strike again we'll know exactly what they look like," said Cmdr. Hugh Moore of the City of London police.

Will Israel's military action spur revenge?

By Nicolas B. Tuto
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's military gamble in Lebanon has been hailed as a success at home, one that has shored up his image and strengthened his hand to make concessions in the Middle East peace talks.

But the legacy of hatred created by "Operation Accountability" could rebound on Israel in the future if returning Lebanese Shiites seek revenge for the 147 people killed, the 496 wounded, the countless homes lost.

Despite the bloodshed and suffering, new horizons of dialogue were seen for Israel with Syria and Lebanon and there appeared to be new intentions of that moment that could help the peace talks.

For Rabin, 71, ending the shelling without a long stay in Lebanon strengthened his leadership image. He had been needed by right-wing allegations that he tilted on security issues and could not stand up to the pressure in times of crises.

"It was an achievement," Ephraim Sneh, an influential parliament member close to Rabin, said in an interview.

"There is today not the slightest doubt that this government is very decisive and determined when it comes to security and defense."

Some believe Rabin's insecurity was a factor in his decision to unleash a major attack after seven Israeli soldiers were killed last month.

"One of the major reasons for the operation was domestic," said Prof. Moshe Maoz, head of Hebrew Uni-

Lebanese army troops patrol the village of Mashgara on Tuesday. Lebanon ordered its troops into combat readiness to battle guerrillas in the south part of the country.

Analysis

versity's Truman Institute. "Rabin wanted to show he's a tough guy and could inflict heavy losses.

Having shifted off Israel's power, Rabin might now be more willing to make concessions to the Syrians who seek the return of the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights, Maoz said.

Commentator Philip Gilton said Israel's operation was aimed at pinning responsibility for future actions of the iron-backed Hezbollah guerrillas on someone — Syria, Lebanon, Iraq.

"According to the Lebanese press, Syria accepted responsibility for Hezbollah. Admittedly, although it was not spelled out in the agreement, there will be a price for Israel to pay — the Golan Heights," he wrote in the weekly newsletter, The Hornet.

"But Rabin has always been prepared to give up the Golan for peace. He only needed a way to sell the deal to the population of Israel."

Mark Heller of Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies said Israel might be more flexible about withdrawing from its self-declared security zone in south Lebanon if Hezbollah guerrillas were kept in check.

"If as a result of the operation, the credibility of the Lebanese government and the Syrians is enhanced and they can prove they can control problems on their side, it may lead to some progress on the security side," he said.

Foreigners suffer in Russian crimes

MOSCOW (AP) — A British businessman is found stabbed to death in the city's leading business center.

The manager of a Russian-American restaurant is shot dead in his downtown garage.

The body of a Swedish entrepreneur turns up in his apartment with three bullet holes.

Police said Tuesday the Moscow killings, all in the last week, showed that foreign business people and their Russian partners increasingly are being targeted by the violent crime that has engulfed Russia. At least one of the murders in the last week appeared to be a gangland-style contract job.

The motives behind the trend are as numerous as the killings themselves.

Some foreigners fall victim to simple robbery. Others become targets for extortion or, perhaps without their knowledge, parties to organized crime. Some even are bumped off by their own partners.

The Interior Ministry lists 7,015 crimes against foreigners and people without passports in the first half of 1993; mostly property offenses like robbery or theft. Most of the foreign victims were from Vietnam, China, Germany, Bulgaria, Mongolia, Finland and Poland.

"Russian crime is a closed country, which meant few foreigners and few crimes against or by them," said

Vladimir Trifonov, deputy head of the ministry's statistics department.

Paul Rardon, manager of the Moscow office of the U.S.-owned Wackenhut security company, said foreign companies have been targeted for the cash they must keep on hand because of Russia's undeveloped banking system.

Trifonov said the Interior Ministry does not track murders of foreign business people or their Russian partners. He listed 14,904 murders and attempted murders nationwide so far this year, compared with 23,006 in all of 1992.

WHY A LARGER COMPANY CAN OFFER YOU BETTER $59 GLASSES

More and more people are discovering the outstanding eyewear value we offer. That's why we're selling more eyeglasses and contacts than ever — at over 130 stores from Alaska to Arizona.

Of course that's good for us. But we'd like to take a moment to explain why that's also good news for you.

OUR VOLUME BUYING CLOUT

While a small store may order its frames and lenses by the dozens, we buy ours by the thousands. That enables us to buy the latest frame designs and lenses at very attractive prices. They cost us less, so we're able to sell them for less.

That's how we can sell a pair of glasses, complete with frames and single vision plastic lenses, for $59. Additional pairs, same visit, same prescription, only $39. Most bifocals $20 more a pair.

Your choice isn't limited to some bargain bin, either. Choose from over 400 frames in the latest styles by Renaissance, RBM, St. Moritz, Zimco, Converse, Enrico Biaggi and more.

OUR CENTRALIZED LABS

What is the most important aspect of eyeglass quality? The lenses.

While many smaller companies send some lenses to outside labs for grinding, our size enables us to operate our own labs, employing the latest computerized lens-grinding technology and strict quality controls.

That means we have complete control over our quality. How many small shops can say that?

THOROUGHLY TRAINED PROFESSIONALS

Our employees attend comprehensive, on-going training programs where they learn a wide range of ophthalmic skills needed to fine tune your glasses to precisely fit your prescription.

They know which styles of frames will look best on your face, as well as how to adjust those frames to your face for the greatest comfort.

They will also ask you questions about your lifestyle and eyewear needs to help select the frames and lenses ideally suited for you.

Paying less doesn't have to mean getting skimpy service. Our service is as good as anyone's — at any price.

FIRST PAIR OF GLASSES

Fairgoers should pay real costs of putting on show

When the Twin Falls County Fair opens Sept. 4, your $3 ticket will buy you a full day of fun, exhibits, live-stock shows, all-day entertainment and a variety of special events.

That's not to mention the Magic Valley's best entertainment bargain. Maybe it's too good.

Thanks to a decaying foundation under the 50-year-old fair office, the county Fair Board is asking county commissioners for $115,000 in capital-improvement money.

That's a lot of money, but it won't cover all the work the fairgrounds need. A committee this week presented a $292,000 list of renovation projects. Much of that work will have to wait.

In years gone by, the county routinely gave the fair a hefty subsidy—about $80,000 a year. But several years ago that figure was trimmed to about $10,000, on the principle that the fair should be self-sustaining.

It's a good principle. Although the fair is a beloved tradition and a community asset, it nevertheless is primarily an entertainment event. As such, it should be supported by the people who come from all over the valley to see it, rather than by Twin Falls County property owners alone.

That's why the old $2 fair admission was bumped to $3. The extra buck goes into a capital fund for building projects. Last year that fund came to about $60,000.

The capital fund is a fine idea, but it doesn't cover all the costs of keeping the sprawling fairgrounds safe and presentable. That's why last year the county commissioners gave the fair $115,000, the same amount as this year's request.

Last year's payment was described then as a one-time assist. But that was before the fair office's condition came to light.

Unfortunately, we suspect that this kind of recurring crisis is likely to become a chronic condition. No one's to blame. The fairgrounds is simply old and expensive to keep up.

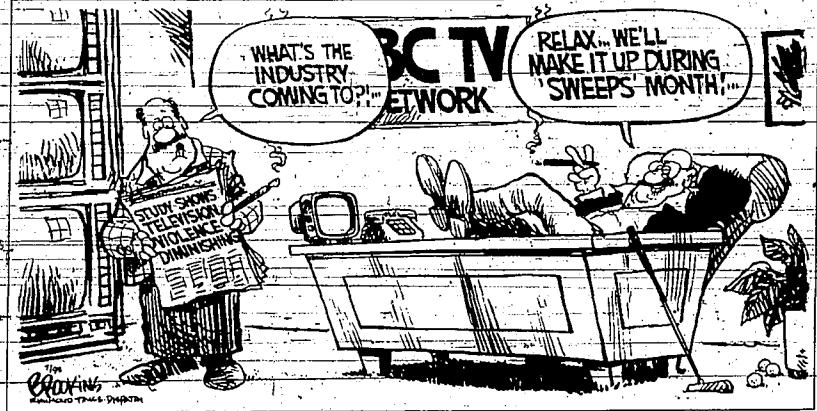

The fair needs a bigger money source to meet that expense, so that the board won't have to go begging to the county every year. We see two ways to get that money:

One way is to trim operating costs, cutting unneeded expenses or eliminating events that don't pay for themselves. We don't know whether such measures are desirable, but they bear examination.

The other way is to raise the ticket price again.

Naturally, many would welcome a price increase. But the situation is plain: If Magic Valley residents want to continue attending a first-rate fair on a first-rate fairgrounds, we must face the true cost of keeping this beloved tradition in business.

Boycott stores that sell pornography

We all watched in horror as news of Jeremie Underwood's abduction and senseless murder was related with front-page coverage a few weeks ago. All we grieved for the Underwood family and friends who were thrust into the worst nightmare a family can possibly go through.

I thought of my own children many times and wondered if I could be as incredibly loving as Jeff and Joyce Underwood were concerning their daughter's tragedy. One question in a letter to the editor particularly haunted me: Has Pocatelli (and our state) passed through the "age of innocence"? Can we no longer let our children pass through the joys of summer and all the wonderful places to experience without our watchful eye?

Reader comment Kelly Walton about it!

I have a suggestion. During the now-famous last interview of serial killer Ted Bundy, he made a startling admission. Pornography played a major role in his evolution toward killing dozens of women. He also stated that of all the sex offenders he knew, to a person, all of them had one slazy common denominator: They were (and are) heavily into hard-core porn and snuff films.

I apologize to the Underwoods if my comments bring up hurts they would rather put to bed. But, unfortunately, Jeremie's story is not the exception. Child molestation has again reached the front page in Twin Falls as five times and witnesses have fortunately been able to help police apprehend a previously convicted child molester and remove him (temporarily, if the American Civil Liberties Union has anything to do with it) from the streets.

And now tragedy has struck again. A 13-year-old girl has been murdered near Minicopa High School in Rupert early on Saturday morning. The truth of this latest tragedy is still sinking in.

Now don't put words in my mouth. I am not saying that pornography is the chief cause of every violation of an innocent victim. Just most of them. I would bet the ranch that Wood (Underwood's sabductor) was heavily into snuff. Let me explain why.

Soft-core porn is capable of giving the average "consumer" a "charge" any time it is read or watched. Temporarily. After a while, the same old snuff doesn't appeal like it used to. The same addiction has already set the hook. For a significant number of men, the urge to locate hard porn is irresistible.

And for some men, only fewer, the downward spiral ends in contact with the munchiest material that could only come from hell itself. Included in this genre of porn are snuff films—where the victim is violated and portrayed to be or actually killed before a camera.

If only a few concerned people would calmly but firmly inform all of the current places of business that sell porn, that they (and everyone else) they have credibility with will take their business elsewhere until the snuff is cleaned off the shelves, we could rid Idaho of one of her few pollutants.

Check out your gas station and video store. Kmart and Payless Drugs are part of the corporation that owns Waldenbooks, one of the major suppliers of sludge in the nation. Be nice. Just say, "I like doing business with you, but I can't until you remove the porn. I can't force you to honor my request, but perhaps the loss of my dollars will." It only takes one or two brave souls to really give the local "entrepreneur" food for thought.

It seems to be a current exercise of conjuncture by a few of my political opponents as to "whom will the Idaho Citizens Alliance pick on next?" The answer? The producers of snuff and the molesters of women and children. Anyone opposing this defense of the innocent will finally show their true colors.

Kelly Walton of Heyburn is chairman of the Idaho Citizens Alliance, the group campaigning for an anti-gay-rights initiative.

Campers, watch for vandalism!

I would like to suggest that new signs be posted at C.J. Strike Campground warning people to "camp at your own risk."

Some friends of ours who used to camp at C.J. Strike warned us of vandalism problems there earlier this year, but we chose to go anyway.

My family recently spent a long-planned three-day weekend at C.J. Strike Campground, where we had grandpa, grandma and our youngest child ready to start lives of their own.

This weekend, we knew, would be one of the best weekends we would be able to spend as a family for some time.

After three days of boating, water skiing and fishing; we were all very disappointed to find that somebody had let the air out of both our boat trailer tires and one of grandpa's truck tires. We were not even offended; somebody by the way we parked or if that somebody was jealous because of our nice boat and trailer or whether it was something else. Nonetheless, it ruined our weekend.

As my husband suffers from health problems and my father-in-law is in his 60s, this malicious little "prank" may have cost us more than just a few hours; wonder if people would put such sums really understand the results of their handiwork. What if it had been a local, elderly fisherman or somebody in a wheelchair?

Health problems are not always visually noticeable; such is the case with my husband.

So campers, I am warning you to be weary of C.J. Strike. Maybe you should post some of your own signs in your camper windows that might read like this: "Please, if you have a grip, knock on our door and we will talk about it," or "Please, if you have damaged my property, this is my life savings and I don't have the money to replace it." Or maybe the signs should say, "If you're jealous of what I have, go back to school, get a degree and get a job. I had to earn my way. So should you."

To the honest people that read, heed my warning. If you are planning a trip to C.J. Strike, bring an armed guard.

Obenchain Insurance 60 car, had already left (local driving). He asked why he hadn't stayed and all the other drivers had (including out-of-town drivers). I gave him a stunged expression and that seemed to satisfy him.

I can only guess why Mr. Fairbanks didn't stay — poor sportsmanship. I only have this to say to someone so inconsiderate, not only to his fans but also to the whole sport: If you can't stand the heat, get off the track.

Life easier if you live simply Everybody thought Uncle Al died in 1958. His plans to build a retirement home in Twin Falls, he called grandma. He was at the Twin Falls Airport.

That evening as we sat up late chewing the fat, he explained how, after 35 years in a Tibetan monastery, he was anxious to see how the world had changed — or hadn't. He was pretty sharp with numbers when he was 30, and now at 65, he hadn't lost a bit (and he still looked 30ish, somehow).

We spent a couple of weeks wandering through store after store, so enthralled was he with our new equipment, that he couldn't wait to get home. After inquiring what the prevailing values were, he snuff-puffing his Cuban cigar and commenced to was philosophical.

"You know, Philip, things are a lot less expensive today than when I left," he stated. "Now wait a minute," I said. "You're comparing apples to oranges." Folks today live in 1,900-foot houses. In 1958, they were only 900 feet. "Yeah, but" (the anticipated my objection). "I'm talking about what folks need, not all the clutter they want. Flour's cheaper. So's ground beef, and gasoline and basic clothing's a whole lot cheaper."

Quick to justify myself, I replied, "Yeah, but look at the cost of insurance of every type and medical care and police protection and public schools and the national debt and taxes."

"Well, Al had been reading the newspapers voraciously the last couple of weeks. He sat and puffed in silence while his computer-like brain spinning silent numbers. "Yup," he said, "some things are higher today, but not houses or cars. Your utilities are some less, and the price of loafs is far cheaper today than when I was doing carpentry years ago."

"What's it all mean, Uncle Al," I said, aware that I felt and sounded like the pupil of a wise and holy man. "Well," he paused. "I'd say God has made life easier for folks who live a simple, uncomplicated life doing just the necessities and trusting in him for the rest. But for those folks who don't trust him, life becomes a complicated, worrisome, expensive passel of business."

Uncle Al had a unique perspective, being sorta dead the last 35 years. I pondered his words and what they meant to my life.

Barry erred in Aug. 2 column

I wish to thank Stephen Hartgen and the editors of The Times-News for carrying Dave Barry's column in the Monday edition. Dave's satire and humor are a real emotional pickup for me after the ephemeral depression that follows reading the front-page news.

However, I feel Mr. Barry made a very serious distortion of fact in his Aug. 2 column when he stated that animals in space at zero gravity always reacted by throwing up. Actually, they have a very difficult time throwing up at zero gravity, the reason being that they cannot determine which way is up.

Help elect new city council

I would like to respond to Mr. Terry Pratt Sr.'s letter urging people to contact the Justice Department and have them investigate. Growing by 100 percent, the only problem with contacting the Justice Department is don't count on any help.

When the Rodney King scandal took place, several news services queried the Justice Department to find out how good their investigative record was when it came to checking out complaints. The results were dismal. Out of several hundred complaints, Justice had investigated only eight, and it appeared that all but two had been whitewashed and swept under the carpet.

I myself filed a complaint a few years ago when police harassment of my family got out of hand after we had made the mistake of reporting a major drug dealership to the Twin Falls police. They never even acknowledged my letter. Furthermore, when I complained to then-Attorney General Jim Jones, he wouldn't only talk about the drug problem. He wouldn't even address the problems with the police. I even sent a package of some pretty damning evidence to Justice, but it didn't matter.

The first line of defense should be to go to the City Council, but by their silence and refusal to acknowledge problems, they become part of the problem. The only answer seems to be, to coin a phrase, "Throw the rascals out."

I hope everyone who has had problems with any city official helps elect a new city council.

Watch dairy development closely

With reference to the dairy proposed by David Funk, Brent Funk and Danny Crane to be located five miles south of Hansen, some new reality is in fact. All who are approached by this dairy should watch this activity very closely.

According to Helen Phipps of the Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission, in a July 28 Times-News article, David Funk "has reserved the right to develop that property."

Even though the Phipps and Crane have started a lake in another location, it appears they still have designs on this location for a dairy.

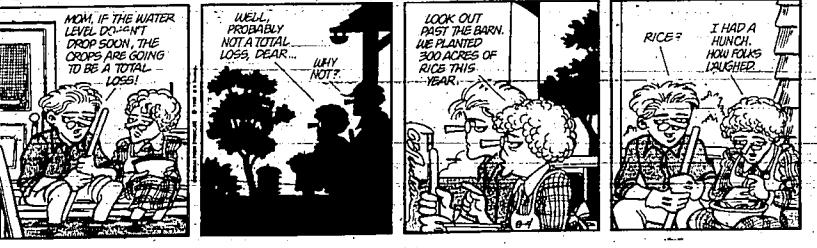

Further, in the legal notices on Page C1 of the Thursday, July 29, issue of The Times-News, David Funk has applied to the Idaho Department of Water Resources for an amendment to a Jerome County water permit as follows: "Use 01/01 to 12/31 (year round), stock water (10 cubic feet per second); commercial (10 cubic feet per second); point of diversion..."

Fairbanks lacks sportsmanship

My family and I attend the races at the Magic Valley Speedway on a regular basis. We not only enjoy the local drivers but also the out-of-town drivers that usually put on a good show and an enjoyable evening of family entertainment. After each race, like many other race fans, we wait for all the cars to return to their pit area so we can enter the pit area and visit with the drivers, get autographs and see the cars. Our children really enjoy this, and so does a number of other children and adults.

On the night of July 31, we stayed, although the races didn't get over with until almost midnight. After entering the pits, one of my sons was extremely upset to find out his favorite driver, Darrin Fairbanks, driver of the

State GOP chairman claims Andrus promoted school lawsuit

LEWISTON (AP) — State Republican Chairman Randy Smith is accusing Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus of fostering the court battle over the adequacy of Idaho's financial commitment to quality education. Smith said Monday that Andrus promoted the lawsuit claiming the Legislature has failed to allot enough cash to provide the constitutionally mandated thorough education by legally siding with the dozens of school districts seeking a boost in state aid. Although the Legislature has allocated nearly $4 billion in state support to schools since 1985, Andrus has been a longtime advocate of earmarking even more money for education, and his siding with the school districts in a bid to achieve that end came as no surprise to legislative leaders. Republican state Schools Superintendent Jeffrey Evans has done the same thing. Smith called it a travesty that the school districts would spend taxpayer money to sue the Legislature of education support, and even though Republican legislative leaders, backed up by House Democrats, have counter-sued the school districts, the Pocatello attorney said the GOP wants to settle the dispute outside the courtroom. House Speaker Michael Simpson, however, has said in the past that lawmakers in other states have told him the worst thing they ever did was settle their education funding lawsuits out of court because school districts have used the threat of renewed legal action as a club to extort more money from the state for their use.

The Legislature has claimed that if any district is failing to provide the kind of education required under the constitution it is because it has inefficiently spent the money allocated by the state. "From what I am hearing right now, they are saying 'Where is the waste? Let's look at the waste in education,'" Smith said. Fourth District Judge Gerald Schlegder has given the state one more legislative session to resolve the dispute with the districts before he steps in. A special working group begin searching for a potential resolution last month amid the acknowledgment from both Andrus and Evans that more money will inevitably be part of any plan. But Simpson has made it clear the only acceptable settlement is one that will not raise taxes. "There is a little bit of a tax revolt going on out there," Simpson said. "It is against all government. So what do I have to compromise with?"

Russian fire officials tour Idaho forest

BOISE — Russian fire officials, on a tour of federal firefighting facilities in Idaho, say they have tree species and forests much the same as those in Idaho, except they are bigger and harder to reach. Three fire officials, including one who included a stop at the Boise National Forest. They will visit four other states and two Canadian provinces before the end of the month. Nikolai Kovalyev, director of fire suppression for the Krasnoyarsk region of Siberia, said his area has the same tree species as the Boise National Forest, but his is a much larger region and hard to reach. They have 5,000 firefighters, 5,000 and use monster helicopters that can carry 80 people at a time.

Court reinstates lewd conduct charge

BOISE — A district court judge will have to decide whether a 4-year-old child can make a credible witness in a sex-abuse case. Mike Poole was charged with lewd conduct in a Jefferson County case. Judge James Herndon dismissed the complaint, holding that the defendant's right to confrontation would be violated by allowing the testimony of the alleged victim and a social worker who interviewed the child. In a unanimous decision released Tuesday, the court reinstated the charge and sent the case back to district court. In a decision written by Justice Byron Johnson, the court said the judge incorrectly applied requirements from a landmark 1989 child sex abuse decision. In that case, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned one of the convictions of Laura Lora. While on the U.S. Court, Lora argued that the Constitution allows criminal defendants the right to confront their accusers.

Trobe optimistic after starting bingo

BONNERS FERRY — A woman from Libby, Mont., took home $400 in prizes from opening night of the Kootenai Indian Tribe's new bingo game. Tribal officials were optimistic about the revenue that the games will produce. "What we have discussed in the Tribal Council is that the money will be used for education and social services for the tribe," said Kootenai Tribal Chief Ramon Abraham. Abraham said players came from Troy and Libby in Montana, Creston and Cranbrook in British Columbia and northern Idaho. In 20 bingo games, Abraham estimated $3,000 was paid out in prizes.

Computer programmer sentenced

BOISE — Former Boise city computer programmer William L. Murray, 37, will serve two-to-10-year prison after admitting he bilked the city out of $117,000 through false billings. Fourth District Judge Alan Schwanzman sentenced Murray, of Emmett, to prison for grand theft, income tax evasion and using a public position for personal gain. After he agreed to plead guilty to the charges, prosecutors dropped several other grand theft counts. Schwanzman also ordered Murray to pay $62,000 restitution to an insurance company that covered the city's loss. Murray, who was a senior computer programmer for the city, falsified invoices for a bogus company or framing him into a take-place. Officials said the city paid Murray through its Idaho Data Systems company between 1990 and 1992. He pleaded guilty in May.

Pocatello property taxes will decrease

POCATELLO — Thanks to a healthy jump in property valuations, Pocatello residents will get a 2.4 percent decrease in the city property tax rate. City officials planned a 4 percent increase in city taxes to finance the $3.6 million budget, but reappraisal after receiving notice from the county that taxable property valuations went up $59 million in the last year. Mayor Peter Angstadt announced the cut Tuesday. Last year's valuation was $800 million and the city raised taxes by 4.5 percent in 1992. The increased valuation of $859 million is an indication that Pocatello is "starting to show its prosperity," Angstadt said. Pocatello lost 260 residents in the 1980-90 decade and Bannock County's growth in the same period was under 1 percent.

Officers file animal abuse charges

CALDWELL — A Canyon County man faces animal abuse charges after officers found his dismembered and decaying remains of more than 20 horses, mules, goats, sheep and dogs on his acreage near Parma. Paul Martin, 63, was arrested Monday after sheriff's deputies and Canyon County animal control officers investigated a report of animal mistreatment. Martin was free Tuesday after posting $2,100 bond. Compiled from wire reports

Inmate walks away from jail after officer fails to read paperwork

MURPHY (AP) — When convicted drug-trafficker Pablo Mendoza Meraz arrived at the Owyhee County Jail, officers had written orders to keep him under tight security until he could be transferred to the state prison. Instead, Meraz, 28, was under minimum security because jail officials failed to read his transfer papers. Weeks later, Meraz was left alone washing cars and walked away, officials said. Today, he's still at large. "They bring us one piece of paper, and the officer who was supposed to read it didn't read it," said Owyhee County Sheriff Tim Nettleton. "I just chewed him out and let him go on."

Nettleton said Meraz was classified as an inmate who could be allowed outside the jail, but with an armed guard. "About 9 a.m. on July 13, the guard who was responsible for Meraz left to move a car that Meraz had finished washing, Nettleton said. When a second guard left the area to get another car, Meraz escaped, Nettleton said. No disciplinary action will be taken against the jail employees, Nettleton said. He would not release their names. Nettleton said Washington state officials also are looking for Meraz, who is from the Yakima area. Ada County Prosecutor Joe Filicetti, who prosecuted Meraz, said he learned of the escape on July 26 from one of his inmates. "The hall was dropped so many times in that case," Filicetti said. "We spent a lot of money investigating him, trying him and convicting him to a life sentence."

Meraz was convicted Jan. 15 of trafficking heroin and sentenced to life imprisonment on March 1. He had been an inmate at the Ada County Jail before sentencing, jail officials said. "Officials did not know when he was moved to Owyhee County or why he was not housed at the state prison," Nettleton said. "I'm guessing they didn't have room in the prison so they just transported him to another county jail," Filicetti said. "I just expected him to be in the penitentiary. A guy with a life sentence should be in the penitentiary." Idaho Department of Correction officials could not be reached for comment Monday. Nettleton said he has eight inmates who are waiting to be sent to the state penitentiary. "They bring them to me and I try to keep them," he said. "I'm not too crazy about the federal having someone over here who I don't know anything about."

Authorities release activists

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Earth First! activists said seven members of their group have been released without bail after 18 days in the Idaho County Jail. According to an Earth First! news release, the protesters had been held in jail for 18 days on bond charges of conspiracy to commit grand theft before their Monday release. The charges were in connection with attempts to block construction of a logging road in the Nez Perce National Forest.

On Friday, a district judge ordered the protesters to prepare hand-written statements telling the court why they should be released. The court also ordered the protesters to appear in court for all required court appearances, the release said. More than 60 state and federal charges have been filed against the protesters, it was reported. Building roads in undeveloped areas in central Idaho, Idaho County authorities could not be reached for comment Monday. Also Monday, up to 40 Earth First! activists peacefully demonstrated on the porch of the Red River Ranger District building, saying U.S. Forest Service supervisors are pressuring government biologists to keep silent on ecological damage in the forest. The construction of 145 miles of new roads would destroy habitat for wolves, salmon, grizzly bears and other wildlife, a fact well known to the biologists as well as the forest service itself, a press release said.

Court upholds ruling in lawsuit

LEWISTON (AP) — A federal class action suit on behalf of inmates at Cottonwood's North Idaho Correctional Institution has advanced closer to trial after U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan of Boise last week upheld a lower court ruling. The decision brought a declaration of confidence on Monday from an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union representing the inmates. "Essentially, from our perspective, it's now a done deal because we know what the facts are," said

Stephen Pevar of the ACLU's Denver regional office. Ryan's affirmation of the earlier ruling by U.S. Magistrate-Mike Williams, essentially declares the institution's inmates indeed have a "protected liberty interest" in having proper advance notification and fair handling of hearings to determine their sentencing status. Inmates allege in their suit that they didn't receive enough notice to prepare for the hearings, and that due process rights were violated when the hearings were held. Ryan's ruling also affirms that prison officials denying such rights can be sued for damages. Since 1972, Idaho has retained inmates at the institution under the so-called "shut-in" program. Sentencing state judges retain jurisdiction over the inmates for a period of time, usually 120 to 180 days. Toward the end of those times, the law requires that hearings be held to determine whether the inmates should be placed on probation or serve what remains of their original sentence. Pevar alleges that due process in such hearings has been regularly violated by institution officials.

NOTICE OF TAX INCREASE

The City of Richfield has proposed to increase its annual budget by an amount of ad valorem tax revenues that exceeds one hundred five percent (105%) of the ad valorem tax revenues certified for its annual budget during the previous year by .3 percent or its ad valorem property tax rate by .9 percent which will increase its property tax revenue by .8 percent.

The following schedule is an estimate of what this change may mean to a taxpayer:

	Last year's taxable value	This year's estimated taxable value	Last year's actual taxes	This year's estimated taxes
For a typical home of $50,000 taxable value last year	$50,000	$60,500	$346.05	$447.22
For a typical farm of $100,000 taxable value last year	$100,000	$100,000	$692.10	$739.20
For a typical business of $200,000 taxable value last year	$200,000	$200,000	$1,384.20	$1,478.40

Public Hearing will be held on August 9, 1993 at 7:00 p.m., at the Richfield City Office 210 N. Main. All citizens are invited to attend a public hearing on the increased budget request or increased tax rates.

CAUTION TO TAXPAYER: The amounts shown in this schedule do NOT reflect tax charges that are made because of voter approved bond levies, override levies, supplemental levies, or levies applicable to newly annexed property, or levies applicable to newly created taxing districts.

West Officials fall short on deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — State officials and tribal leaders will fail to meet their tentative deadline this week for reaching a compromise on changes in the way the Indian gaming industry is regulated.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, had said a compromise bill would be introduced by the time the month-long congressional recess begins next week.

However, the team of negotiators that has been working on the issue is going to need more meetings, said Patricia Zell, the committee's chief of staff.

"That means the bill will not be introduced until after lawmakers return to work in September, which may make it more difficult to get the changes through Congress this year."

"I don't think it's a snag. They've got lots of issues to address. My understanding is that they were going through the bill from beginning to end and they just didn't get through," Zell said.

Representatives of governors, state attorneys general and tribes have been meeting regularly through July to work out their differences.

Current law requires tribes and states to negotiate agreements, or compacts, that determine the structure of gaming operations and provide for their regulation.

States want more power to control the expansion and scope of the industry, including casino gaming in New Jersey, also are trying to control the spread of Indian operations.

Tribes, however, are seeking ways to resolve disputes with states over limitations on gaming operations.

LaRocco jogs with president

The Associated Press

Rep. Larry LaRocco, D-Idaho, took part in what's becoming an exclusive "power meeting" in Washington, an early-morning run with President Clinton.

LaRocco, who ran alongside Clinton for three miles, said in a news release he told the president he wanted to see an additional 1 percent cut in federal discretionary spending.

"I told him that we need to include all the spending cuts possible in his deficit-reduction bill and that we need caps on entitlement spending," LaRocco said in the release.

LaRocco said Clinton listened and asked questions about how the plan would affect small businesses in Idaho.

"He was very interested and asked a lot of questions," LaRocco said. "He said we need to finish the deficit-reduction package so we can move on to health care reform and eliminating waste in government."

Clinton promised a bill-signing ceremony for LaRocco's Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area bill.

Authorities seize wild cats at shelter

SPRINGFIELD — Federal and state officials investigating a private shelter for large wild cats on Tuesday seized a dozen bobcats, cougars and lynx and records on how the animals were obtained.

Agents from the state Department of Wildlife, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and U.S. Department of Agriculture tranquilized and tagged the animals from Cat Tales, north of Spokane.

The six bobcats, four cougars and two Canadian lynx were taken to state-licensed rehabilitation centers. The locations of the centers were not disclosed.

Officials did not explain why the animals and records were seized.

Separate incidents kill toddler, man

The Associated Press

A Shelley toddler was killed in a fall from a pickup truck and an elderly man died when a teen-age driver hit his all-terrain vehicle, authorities reported.

Arnet Moreida, 3, died on Monday when he fell from the back of a pickup truck driven by his father and then was run over by the utility trailer the truck was pulling, police said.

And Monday night, Melvin Davis, 66, of Samaria, was killed when the three-wheeler he was riding into an intersection was hit by a vehicle driven by a 15-year-old boy. Davis was not wearing a helmet.

Radio station raises $2,774 to replace boy's stolen wheelchair

SOUTH SALT LAKE, Utah (AP) — A radio station here collected $2,774 Tuesday to replace a 15-year-old boy's stolen wheelchair.

Don Carter and Dan Banness of KLZX played the same song over and over until listeners of the classic rock station coughed up the cash.

The pair said they were moved when they read that the theft of Kyle More's custom $2,000 wheelchair might keep him out of the Utah School for the Deaf and Blind when classes start in two weeks.

Carter and Banness delivered the money to the boy's mother, Judy More, Tuesday.

Kyle was left crippled, blind and partially deaf after he was hit by a car when he was 10 months old.

"They were just really pleased that somebody cared," Banness said.

The irreverent disc jockeys boozed their morning show fans by threatening to play the rock anthem, "Freebird," by Lynyrd Skynyrd, until the money was raised. The song aired for about an hour and 15 minutes.

Banness said one man came into the station and wrote a $400 check. Two young girls came in and gave all the money they had raised delivering newspapers last month.

Officials rule drowning death was an accident

POTLATCHI — The Sunday drowning of a 16-year-old Kimberly boy in the Palouse River near Potlatch has been ruled an accident by authorities.

Lt. Vern Moses of the Latah County Sheriff's Department said Jamie Lynn Quensell drowned while apparently trying to swim across the river.

The incident, which was reported around noon, happened at the Rock Creek-Road bridge that crosses the Palouse River on the southern outskirts of Potlatch.

Moses said there were erroneous reports that Quensell dived off the bridge. He said rescue attempts by bystanders failed and it was too late by the time ambulance crews arrived at the scene.

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Municipal Pool will close Thursday at 7 p.m. for the Snake River Summer Championships.

The pool will remain closed through Sunday, said Chad Browning of the city Parks and Recreation Department.

The pool will reopen for regular hours on Monday, Browning said.

Small towns may end up with a new phone company

BOISE — A new telephone company, Citizens Telecommunications Co. of Idaho, is seeking Public Utilities Commission approval of its plans to purchase 18 small-town telephone exchanges from GTE Northwest.

The 18 exchanges serve about 14,000 Idaho residents scattered through central and southern Idaho. The exchanges are Aberdeen, Carey, Cascade, Donnelly, Elk City, Fairfield, Garden Valley, Homedale, Horseshoe Bend, Marsing, McCall, New Meadows, Parma, Riggins, Springfield, Sweet, White Bird and Wilder.

The new company is owned by Citizens Utilities Co., which for a 40-year period provided electric and water services to 2,000 customers in northern Idaho's Silver Valley.

Chamber of commerce offers family leave act seminar

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and IEC Management Resource Group are cosponsoring a seminar on the new Family and Medical Leave Act at 9 a.m. Thursday at the Canyon Springs Inn.

John Johnson, Human Resource Consultant for IEC, will discuss details of the Act and explain some of the potential hazards employers face. Johnson will also outline what employers need to do to comply with the new requirements.

Participants are encouraged to bring leave of absence policies for a "hands-on" analysis.

Registration, which includes instructional material, coffee, juice and pastries, is $25.

To register, call Kent Just at 733-3974.

GLENN'S FERRY — A replica of the original ferry that transported pioneers across the Snake River in the 1830s and 1840s will be launched today.

A group of volunteers built the replica. Three Island Ford of the original ferry that crossed the river to the island.

The ferry crossed every day, all day and even at night for 25 cents, according to a pioneer's diary.

The river will be crossed by horses and wagons during the town's annual festival Aug. 14 and 15.

Highway crews plan soil sampling on U.S. 30

Idaho Transportation Department crews will take soil samples on U.S. 30 between Filer and the U.S. 30-93 junction beginning Thursday in preparation for the reconstruction of this stretch of road.

The information obtained during sampling will be used in the drainage pipe design for the reconstruction project.

The sampling will be completed by Friday.

One line of traffic will be closed during the work. Motorists are reminded to use extra caution while crews are working in the roadway.

Sheriff rules out sexual assault in shooting death

RUPERT — Minidoka County Sheriff Paul Fries put to rest rumors that the Rupert girl who was shot to death in her home Saturday had been raped.

While autopsy results on Brendy Thueson, 13, were pending, the initial investigation revealed no sexual assault had occurred, Fries said.

Thueson was found early Saturday morning by her mother in their Rupert home. She had been shot once in the head.

Police have charged a 16-year-old boy, Jeremy Blaine Harris, with first-degree murder in connection with her death. He was arraigned Monday in Cassia County.

Harris will be tried as an adult in the death of Thueson, who was found just before 3 a.m. Officials said guns had been stolen from the Thueson home, but they declined to reveal how many.

Meanwhile, Fries said Tuesday that Jeremy Harris is the son of a man who was involved in a Magic Valley murder 14 years ago.

Lincoln Harris was 23 years old when he was convicted in 1980 of robbing one of two men whose bodies were found in May 1979 washed ashore in the Snake River Canyon.

Jury slaps $1 million penalty against PSI

By Eric Goodell

Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — A $1 million award was granted to a Burley couple last week for injuries and damages resulting from a September 1991 traffic accident.

After deliberating about five hours, the jury decided after a five-day trial that the driver of a truck and his employer, PSI Waste Systems, should pay $900,000 for their part in an accident in which a trailer came loose from a truck and hit a car driven by Elmer E. Thompson Jr. of Burley.

The accident left Thompson blind in his left eye and also caused brain damage. He was awarded $700,000 in damages.

PSI Waste Systems is a supplier of sanitary facilities in the Magic Valley. The trailer that came loose from the hitch contained portable toilets.

Besides finding PSI 90 percent negligent, the supplier of the trailer hitch, Valley Industries and Shelby Industries, was ruled to be 10 percent at fault.

"It was very tragic," said Attorney Bill Parsons, who tried the case along with partner Dick Smith.

The decision might be the largest award ever in Cassia County. Parsons said at the very least, it was the largest award since 1960.

Cassia County juries have been known for their conservative awards, Parsons said.

Thompson's wife, Margaret, received $300,000 and Elmer's business, Idaho Mill and Industrial Supply, was awarded $8,883.

Part of the judgement to Margaret Thompson was to compensate her for the damage her husband suffered, Smith said.

Elmer Thompson had been driving near on Highway 30 near its intersection of 200 West on Sept. 24, 1991, when a PSI trailer came loose from a truck driven by Ronald Martinez.

The jury determined, the trailer coupler was defective and wasn't used in the correct manner.

PSI's attorney, J. Walter Sinclair of Twin Falls, couldn't be reached for comment.

County looks for solution to slide

The Associated Press

BLISS — Where-if anything — can be done to repair a road that is sliding into the Snake River west of Bliss is the topic of discussion in Gooding County.

A landslide has wiped out at least a half-mile of road since it began July 24. And the damage is growing.

Gooding County elected officials and area Idaho Transportation Department personnel are meeting to discuss options.

"It's been a problem for years and got worse in the last couple of months. We knew there was a problem, but not how serious it was,"

Patterson, foreman at the Bliss Highway District. "It's has grown a lot in the last couple of days."

The slide is moving closer to the home of Ted Remaklus.

Twenty-three years ago, Remaklus moved into a home with a superb view of the Snake River.

The landslide has pushed about 100 acres of hillside into the river while moving toward his house.

"It's about 250 yards away. Naturally you have a big knot in your belly like two footballs," Remaklus, 73, said. He lives in the house with his wife Lola and owns 140 acres of land in the area.

"The Army Corps of Engineers feels we're relatively safe," said Remaklus, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel. But, "it's impossible to tell what's going to happen. It's wait and see."

State officials said they don't expect the slide to cause severe damage to fisheries, but there is no way to tell when the slide might end. Authorities have said moisture gathered in a clay layer under the hillside is serving as a lubricant for the heavy soil above.

Despite the creeping threat, Remaklus has no plans to leave.

"Any time something like this happens, it's going to cause a devaluation. Would you buy my house now?" he said. "I'm just going to take it as it comes."

Cassia County will sue landfill operator

By Eric Goodell

BURLEY — Cassia County commissioners have instructed their attorney to prepare a lawsuit against a private Boise landfill operator.

Stephen Bywater said the purpose of the lawsuit will be to have a judge decide whether the county zoning ordinances are valid and whether they apply to Dispose-All, which is building a landfill on Burley Butte west of Burley.

TWIN FALLS — Some Magic Valley stores may come under close scrutiny from the Idaho Citizens Alliance for selling what Chairman Kelly Walton of Burley says is soft-core pornography.

He wants consumers to launch a boycott of stores such as Mr. Gas and Waldenbooks until "smut" is taken off their shelves, Walton said.

"Check out your gas station and video store," says a letter Walton sent to newspapers across Idaho. "Be nice. Just say, 'I like doing business with you, but I can't until you remove the porn.'"

The boycott drew criticism Tuesday from Idaho Voices for Human Rights, which Several of the targeted stores defended themselves Tuesday.

Waldenbooks' Stamford, Conn., head, already enfolded in a fight with Walton over the Idaho Citizens Alliance's anti-gay rights petition.

The citizens alliance "is far out of the mainstream of Idaho thought and willing to use intimidation and bullying tactics to get what it wants," said a news release from Idaho Voices for Human Rights.

Walton declined to name examples of "pornography" that are sold by Waldenbooks or other stores.

"I'm going to leave it up to the individual reader," Walton said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "It's any material that degrades a potential victim."

He said he is concerned with children's accessibility to pornography.

Forest Service delays Black Pine Mountain timber auction

By N.S. Nokkvent
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A proposed timber sale on Black Pine Mountain is a little behind schedule.

But the Forest Service expects to issue a decision on the sale within about two weeks, said Donald Peterson, Burley District Ranger of the Sawtooth National Forest.

Douglas-fir bark beetles have killed thousands of trees on the mountain south of Burley. The Forest Service wants to try to sell the dead and dying timber, while it's still worth something, Peterson said.

He hopes to complete an environmental assessment and issue a decision that calls for cutting about 6 million board feet of timber and get it cut this summer or fall.

A board foot is a measure of timber equal to a square foot board one inch thick.

But to preserve the economic value of the timber, the Forest Service will have to hurry. Once rot sets in or if the trees dry out and crack they are not worth much to a commercial timber company, Peterson said.

That hurry, however, has raised concern that it will result in a sloppy assessment of the proposed sale, according to a letter to Peterson from Linn Kincannon of the Idaho Conservation League.

"In your rush to salvage the economic value of the trees, will other values be preserved?" she said. "The Forest Service also should consider other stands on the mountain that may succumb to future infestations."

Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials are unsure whether removing the trees will be any better than leaving the infested trees and letting nature fix its course.

The Douglas-fir stands in canyon bottoms and on some slopes provide important cover in otherwise open habitat. Removing substantial numbers of those trees could make big-game animals more vulnerable to hunters.

Peterson said Tuesday that those issues and other questions will be covered in the assessment. The forest has no intention of

4 instant scratch ticket games will be scratched

BOISE (AP)—The Idaho Lottery is ending four instant scratch ticket games because all tickets from the games have been sold out of the lottery warehouse. There still are unclaimed top prizes up to $20,000 in the 1994 lottery prizes. Lottery retailers will continue to sell tickets for the games as long as their supplies hold out. Players with winning tickets in the games have until Jan. 30, 1994, to claim prizes. The games are "Idaho Match Three," "Holiday Bonus," "More Red Hot Doubblers" and "Fabulous Fifities."

Death

The jury has agreed to testify against the Blaine County men who were later sentenced to life in prison for murdering the two men from Pocatello.

The two murder victims were kidnapped and taken to Cassia County, then driven to the Milner Dam, just inside Twin Falls County, according to news-agency investigators believed the men were killed several months before their bodies were found. Their hands were tied behind their backs and they were shot in the head. The bodies fell into the Snake River from the dam.

Who testified at his sentencing hearing, Harris blamed his participation in the crimes on his drug involvement and said he wanted to do better for his family in the future. The killings were drug-related, and investigators said 60 pounds of marijuana believed to be in the victims' car were never recovered.

In late July, Dispose-All missed a deadline to submit an application or face a county lawsuit.

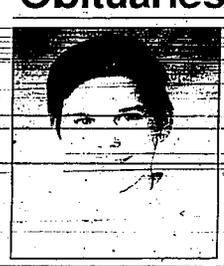

Timber

Female bark beetles bore into the bark and their eggs in the living layer just beneath the bark. When the eggs hatch, they feed on that part, killing the tree.

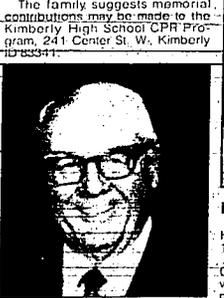

The best way to fight the beetles is to remove trees that are unable to fight back themselves. Peterson said, in healthy trees, much running out of beetle holes in the bark forces the attacking beetles out of the trees.

Doing nothing is going to mean more dead trees, more wildfires. But if timber companies don't buy the timber, the Forest Service is not likely to do anything, Peterson said.

Porn

The magazines are merchandised from behind the counter. They usually flap placed over them so the covers are obstructed; they are not permitted to be sold to minors which is defined by the legal drinking age, and they are not permitted to be read on the premises," she said.

Walton's primary concern is an addiction to violence that he says is fostered by soft-core pornography. "People revert to a harder type of pornography that we're not interested in violent crimes," Walton said. "Soft-core porn is capable of giving the average consumer a charge any time it is read or watched. Temporarily. After a while, the same old st doesn't appeal like it used to. The tragic addiction has already set the hook," Walton said.

"People have the right to put economic pressure on a business owner and shop elsewhere," Walton said. "The additive element is what I'm concerned about." Walton tried to link three recent high-profile crimes to pornography. He offered no specific evidence that it played a role.

He cited the kidnap/murder of 11-year-old Jerilee Underwood in Pocatello, the kidnap/molestation of a Twin Falls 4-year-old girl, and the murder of a 15-year-old girl Saturday in Rupert. His letter said the Rupert girl was raped, but police say they don't think she was.

"We're seeing a constant rebirth in incidence," Walton said.

White's single puts Blue Jays in winning position

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — Devon White, moved out of the leadoff spot to make room for Rickey Henderson, singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning Tuesday night and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the New York Yankees 8-6.

Toronto won its fourth in a row and ninth in 10 games. The AL East-leading Blue Jays have won the first two in a four-game series, and are three games ahead of third-place New York.

Henderson went 1-for-4 with two walks and scored twice in his first game for Toronto. He hustled on the bases to keep a two-run sixth inning alive, and singled to set up White's tiebreaking hit in the eighth.

In the eighth, Pat Borders led off with a double against Bobby Munoz (2-3) and Henderson singled to center. White bounced a single past the drawn-in infield that scored pinch runner Willie Canale and, after a two-out walk to John Olerud by Paul Assenmacher, Mahtor hit a two-run single off Steve Fari, Fernandez followed with his second double of the game.

Pat Hentgen (13-5) gave up 12 hits and four runs in eight innings. Al Leiter, the fourth pitcher of the ninth inning, retired PAUL

Henderson goes 1-for-4 with 2 runs scored

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — Rickey Henderson had a new look Tuesday and so did the Toronto Blue Jays lineup.

Henderson, unhappy in Oakland, was all smiles when he showed up in the clubhouse for his first game with first-place Toronto against the New York Yankees.

"I just put on the Blue Jays uniform and felt good," Henderson said. "The best thing is being with a team that is competing and has a chance to win. Every player wants that."

Henderson, however, did not get to keep the No. 24 he had worn for almost five years. Toronto's Turner Ward kept that number, so Henderson was given No. 14, which happened to be his high school number.

The World Series champion Blue Jays got Henderson, baseball's career stolen base leader, on Saturday night in a trade that sent pitching prospect Steve Karsay and a player to be named to Oakland.

Amid family tragedy, teen-ager earns save, win to lead team into title game

The Associated Press
PANAMA CITY, Fla. — For one shining moment Tuesday, 17-year-old Phil Dillmore triumphed over tragedy.

While his family was completing funeral plans for his parents, killed in a weekend car accident, Dillmore picked up a save and win Tuesday to lead Key West to the Florida Senior Major League championship in Panama City.

Called into Tuesday's semifinal game in relief to preserve an 8-7 lead, Dillmore stood on the mound, took a deep breath, and lined up.

Dillmore struck out the final two batters to propel his team into the title game where he pitched a four-hitter in a 6-1 victory over Jacksonville East. His final day performance and a no-hitter on Sunday were good enough to win Dillmore MVP honors.

Paul Dillmore, 50, and his wife, Priscilla, 46, died in a car wreck on U.S. 98 late Saturday as they traveled toward Panama City to watch their son pitch in the tournament.

Dillmore pitched a no-hitter in Sunday's game, unaware of their deaths.

Upon receiving the news of his parents' deaths from his older brother P.J., the Dillmore brothers went to Tallahassee to stay with sister Jennie, who was hospitalized with injuries from the accident.

Phil returned to the tournament Tuesday with a grandfather and uncle.

"It was meant to be somehow," tournament director Dave Goodwin said Tuesday. "He stood out on the mound, took a deep breath and looked up into the heavens. He paused for 10 to 15 seconds and put his head down and pitched like to say, 'This is for you.'"

"Everybody's hearts went out to the kid," Goodwin said. "While pitching the no-hitter Sunday, Dillmore kept asking anxiously for his parents when he couldn't find them in the stands."

"This has touched our team," Key West coach Chris Valdez told the St. Petersburg Times. "Normally, 15- to 17-year-olds aren't that close to their parents. But when we announced what happened to the team, there wasn't a player who didn't go hug his parents and say he loved them."

P.J. Dillmore, a sheriff's deputy in Key West, said funeral services for his parents will be in about two weeks, after his sister is released from the hospital.

Phil Dillmore, 17, overcomes tragedy in Panama City Tuesday on route to leading his Key West team to the Florida Senior Major League championship.

Undhjem, Collins battle for golf title

The Times-News
TWIN FALLS — Virginia Undhjem of Twin Falls and Celia Collins of Elko head up a championship fight that will provide the first champion for Kelly's breakfast/lunch women's golf invitational Thursday and Friday at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

Sponsor Kelly Hwa is not only providing continental breakfast both days and a luncheon following play Friday, but adding $2,500 to the prize list. And she also will be in the championship fight, trying to keep the loot at home.

A total of 76 players has entered the two-day event which will have two times Thursday and a shotgun start Friday, allowing the field to attend the awards presentation luncheon.

"We anticipate $7,000 in prizes with a 100 percent payoff," said host Professional Mike Hamblin. Payoff will be gross and net in all flights plus closest to pin and long drive prizes.

An elimination derby for the low 10 gross and low 10 net scores of the first round is slated for late Thursday afternoon.

Undhjem and Collins both played in the state amateur championship fight at Caldwell's Purple Sage course last month. Two challengers will be Connie Morgan, a seven handicap, and Annie Huth, who has a 9.

Christie must defeat Lewis in tourney

The Associated Press
ZURICH, Switzerland — Olympic champion Linford Christie must beat world record-holder Carl Lewis in the 100 meters at Zurich to stay in the running for 44 pounds of gold in a track up to $260,000.

Christie organizer Rex Bringer has lined up athletes with 24 Olympic gold medals and 17 world records among them, but reportedly is the richest meet of all time at $3.5 million, shortly before the world championships starting Aug. 14.

Christie's manager, Andy Stanger, confirmed Tuesday that the British sprinter would compete in the 100 in Wednesday's Weltklasse meet.

It will be the second high-profile race between Christie and Lewis in less than a week. Christie beat Lewis in 10.08 seconds in London, England.

"Linford felt a little bit flat after the excitement of last Friday," Norman said. "But he obviously feels ready again now."

Also entered for what could be a hotter 100 field than at the world championships are U.S. champion Andre Cason, with the fastest times this year, 1992 Olympic silver medalist Frankie Fredericks of Namibia, and Jon Drummond, who beat rival American Lewis for second place at Gateshead.

Lewis, an eight-time Olympic gold medalist who has a fiercely loyal following among the Zurich fans, set the world mark of 9.86 at the 1991 world championship in Tokyo.

Bringer and organizers of three other Grand Prix meets in Oslo, Berlin and Brussels have offered 20 kilograms, about 44 pounds, of gold to athletes who win at all four. Christie is on track after winning at Oslo.

A world record Wednesday at Letzigrund Stadium is worth one kilogram, or 2.2 pounds, of gold.

Lewis and Christie got $150,000 each for last week's clash. Terms of their Zurich deal were not disclosed.

Butch Reynolds will be returning to the track where he struck the 400-meter world record in 1988 for the first time since a nearly 2½-year suspension for drug use.

Reynolds, whose mark of 43.29 still stands, will face younger U.S. rivals Michael Johnson, who has run the year's fastest 400, and Duray Watts, the second-fastest of all time after winning the gold medal at last year's Olympics.

Algeria's Noureddine Moreel, who has been training in the Swiss Alps, promised to attack his world record in the 1,500 at Zurich. He blamed a slow starter for a failed attempt at improving the 3 minute, 28.82 second mark last month in Stockholm.

World champion Yobes Ondieki leads a big Kenyan field in the 5,000 meters, where his archrival is 10,000-meter Olympic champion Khalid Skah of Morocco. Ondieki became the first human to run the 10,000 in less than 27 minutes last month.

Pirates end losing streak, beat Cubs, 7-3

CHICAGO (AP) — Zane Smith gained his first victory in two years and Travis Smith and Jay Bell each drove in three runs as the Pittsburgh Pirates snapped a three-game losing streak with a 7-3 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

National League

Smith (1-1) gave up eight hits, one walk and struck out three in seven innings to win for the first time since July 11, 1992. Mark Dewey pitched the final two innings and retired six batters.

Smith had spent the first half of this season rehabbing from arthroscopic shoulder surgery.

The Pirates got 10 hits, including eight doubles off Cubs' pitcher Randy Wolf, who was joined by Carlos Garcia and Bell getting two each. Smith hit and fourth homer in the seventh off Herb Scanlon.

With two outs in the third, the Pirates scored twice on successive doubles by Garcia and Smith. They got two more in the fifth on doubles by Garcia and Bell and a single by Smith.

The Cubs made it 4-1 in the sixth when Eric Yelding doubled, went to third on a ground-out and scored on a throw from an ground out by Rey Sanchez.

They scored two more in the seventh on a single by Mark Grace, a double by Steve Buechele and a single by Steve Lake.

Phillies 6, Braves 3

ATLANTA — Pete Ineavigha's three-run homer was his fourth in the game as the Philadelphia Phillies scattered eight hits in seven innings to win his third straight decision.

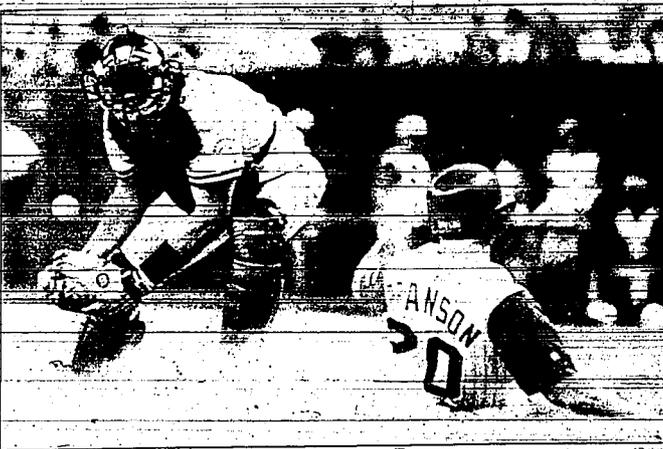

Mich Williams, the fourth Phillies pitcher, worked the ninth for his 30th out.

Ineavigha's 14th homer of the season came in the second off Steve Avery (11-4). He has nine RBIs in his last three games.

The Braves cut it to 3-2 in the fifth on a single by Mark Grace. The Phillies added an unearned run in the seventh. Atlanta got back within one on Francisco Cabrera's run-scoring pinch-double in the bottom of the inning, but Dave Hollins hit his 12th homer of the season in the eighth.

Expos 3, Mets 1

MONTREAL — Montreal's Jeff

Cincinnati Reds' Jeff Branson slides safely across home plate as Colorado Rockies catcher Jayhawk Owens drops the ball during the fifth inning of their game in Cincinnati Tuesday night.

Fassero, making just the fifth start of his career, scattered seven hits over 7 1-3 innings and the Expos scored all their runs in the first inning.

Fassero (7-1), who is 2-0 and has a 0-21 ERA as a starter, had never worked past the sixth inning before. He struck out five and walked two. John Wetteland pitched 1-2-3 innings for his 23rd save.

Bobby Bonilla accounted for the New York run with a home run in the fourth, his 23rd of the season.

The Expos reached Frank Tompkins (5-11) for three runs on four hits and two in the first inning. Larry Walker and Moses Alon drew in the first two runs, with singles and Sean Berry added in the fourth.

Astros 6, Dodgers 1

HOUSTON — Mark Portugal improved his record at the Astrodome to 7-1 this season 27-9 since he joined the Astros in 1989 as he combined with Xavier Hernandez on a five-hit record with three doubles as Portugal (10-1) improved to 44-30 for his career.

Kevin Gross (7-10) allowed four runs on eight hits in six innings. Portugal's glounding drive in Gonzalez with the game's first run in the second. The Astros made it 4-0 in the sixth, scoring three runs with two outs. Gonzalez doubled and scored on a single by Carlos Lee. Hernandez then hit his seventh home run of the season.

Reds 5, Rockies 4

CINCINNATI — Colorado's franchise-record losing streak reached nine games when the Rockies blew a ninth-inning lead and lost to Joe Oliver, a sacrifice fly, in the 10th.

Danie DeBerte hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth off Rob Dilbeck, but the Rockies, who had a lead in the ninth, lost. Jack Daugherty had a pinch double off Darren Holmes with one out in the bottom of the ninth, and Iai Morris singled off Gary Wayne in the 11th with two out.

Reds win it by walking Jacob Brumfield on four pitches to open the 10th. After a sacrifice, Reggie Sanders was walked intentionally and Erickson threw a wild pitch to advance the runner. Oliver hit a fly ball deep to right and scored the Rockies to their 16th loss in 19 games since the All-Star break.

Jerry Spradlin (1-0) pitched a perfect 10th for his first major-league victory.

Marlins 1, Cardinals 0

ST. LOUIS — Charlie Hoach and Bryan Harvey combined on a six-hitter and Benito Santiago provided all the offense with a second-inning home run.

Hoach (6-11) is 5-0 in six starts and has a 1.11 in his other 17 starts. Harvey earned his 32nd save.

Donovan Osborne (9-5) was forced to leave the game in the sixth inning when he was hit on the side of the left knee by a one-hopper smudged by Orestes Destrada. DeTrinitarian Airways was negative.

Thomas, White Sox stomp Rangers, 11-6

ARLINGTON, TEXAS (AP) — Frank Thomas hit a three-run homer to highlight a seven-run second inning and Chicago beat 18 hits as the Texas Rangers 11-6 Tuesday night.

The AL West-leading White Sox won for the seventh time in their last eight games and beat the Rangers for the sixth time in eight meetings this season. Third-place Texas dropped 6 1/2 games behind Chicago.

Thomas had his third four-hit game of the season and Robin Ventura had three hits to extend his hitting streak to 10 games for Chicago.

Twins 6, Red Sox 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Willie Banks batted out of several jams and Kevin Foster hit a three-run homer Tuesday night as the Minnesota Twins defeated the Boston Red Sox 6-1.

Banks (8-7) left runners on scoring position in five consecutive innings from the second through the sixth to win his third straight start. Boston's loss was just its fourth in 18 games.

The Twins manufactured three runs over the first three innings, scoring twice on grounders and once on a balk by Boston starter John Doherty (7-6). Puckett punctuated the victory by hitting his 12th homer of the season off Greg Harris in the seventh.

Orioles 13, Brewers 8

BALTIMORE — The first four Baltimore batters in the sixth inning walked and scored, lifting the Orioles to a 13-8 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Tuesday night. David Segui led off the inning and tied a club record by scoring four runs as Baltimore rallied from a 4-0 deficit. Mark McLemore had four hits and Tim Lincecum honored for the Orioles, who have won three of four three-run or high-four-game losing streak.

Greg Vaughn homered for the Brewers, who have lost six of seven.

With the score 5-11 in the sixth, Brett Heston walked Segui and Lulett. After throwing two balls to Harold Reynolds, Bones was replaced by Mike Fetters who finished the walk and then forced in a run by walking left Tackett.

Indians 9, Tigers 4

CLEVELAND — Wayne Kirby homered and tripled for three RBIs, and Kenny Lofton scored four runs Tuesday night as the Cleveland Indians beat the Detroit Tigers 9-4 in a game shortened to seven innings by rain.

The loss dropped the Tigers under .500 for the first time since they were 3-4 in April. Detroit was 18 games over .500 on June 20, but since June 10-29.

Carlos Baerga drove in three runs and Lofton scored three bases for the Indians, who won their third straight overall and 1-8th in their last 25 home games.

Albie Lopez (3-1) gave up three runs and three hits in six-plus innings, rebounding from a nightmare start at Chicago in which he allowed nine runs in 2 2/3 innings.

Jerry Diers got two outs in the seventh inning for his second save.

Mets' Coleman charged with unlawfully carrying explosive

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New York Mets outfielder Vance Coleman was charged with unlawfully possession of an explosive device today nine days after he tossed a powerful firecracker that injured three people outside Dodger Stadium.

A criminal complaint filed by the district attorney's office after arson investigators completed a report on the July 24 incident in which two children and a woman were injured.

Coleman and teammate Bobby Bonilla were arrested last Friday.

One of the Los Angeles Dodgers when Coleman tossed an M-80, an explosive equivalent to a quarter stick of dynamite, Coleman apologized five days later.

The explosion injured two-year-old Amanda Santos, who sustained second-degree burns to her cheek and damage to an eye and finger, Marshall Savoy, 11, suffered a bruised leg.

Cindy Mayhew, 33, was treated for ear injury.

Win

O'Neill with runners on second and third in the ninth on his second save.

In the ninth, Tom Mattingly hit a home run off single play Danny Tartabull, barely missing a tying three-run homer, doubled off the wall in left-center to score Wade Boggs.

Roberto Alomar tied a career-high with four hits and Mark Avedisyan, dropping from three sixth in the batting order, drove in three runs for Toronto. Tom Fernandez added three hits, including an RBI double that capped a four-run eighth.

A crowd of 48,031, largest for a night game at Yankee Stadium this season, saw New York lose its third straight home game for the first time since last September. Before the game, public address announcer Bob Sheppard asked the fans to refrain from booing the Canadian national anthem, as they did Monday night, and the crowd responded by overpowering scented candles with cheers.

Mattingly, who began the game in an 0-for-14 slump, and Boggs each had four hits for the Yankees. Mattingly had an RBI single during a three-run inning and tripled and scored on a hit by O'Neill in the ninth.

Toronto trailed 4-2 in the sixth when Henderson drew a two-out walk. White followed with a grounder in the seventh on tripled and scored on a hit by O'Neill in the ninth.

Orioles won't appear in any movies soon

BALTIMORE (AP) — The sale of the Baltimore Orioles to an eclectic group including a spy novelist, a millionaire personal injury attorney and a film director has some insurance fans considering the following:

— A thriller based on a Cuban pitching phenom who defects to the Orioles with microfilm on a bone chip in his elbow.

— A class-action suit on behalf of Little League players injured by inhaling dust from the base paths.

— A movie on a starry-eyed governor who built a wildly popular old-time stadium after having a vision.

For a group that has laid out the most money ever for a sports franchise — $173 million — the new owners of the Orioles don't exactly fit the mold of the clubby, privileged world of major league baseball ownership.

William DeWitt Jr. does. The stratagemed Cincinnati businessman is the owner of the Reds and the Rangers along with the son of former President Bush.

However, movie director Barry Levinson, best-selling author Tom Clancy and Baltimore attorney Peter Angelos, who has made a killing handling big business and more color than is usually found in baseball boardrooms.

However, fans shouldn't expect the Orioles to be starting anytime soon in a Clancy-Levinson movie. "Well, we haven't signed the (film) contracts yet, but it's really premature," Clancy cracked Tuesday. Clancy said he knows what he's talking about, the various owners will assume. But on a few points he is clear.

"I will not be putting on a uniform and creaks, and I will not be telling (manager) Johnny Gaites when to switch pitchers," he said. "Beyond that, I really don't know."

Clancy is known for his spy thrillers, "The Hunt for Red October" and "Patriot Games," that have been made into feature films.

Levinson has directed such hits as "Tin Men," "The Natural" and "Diner," which was based on the director's adolescence in waterfront Baltimore. ABC sportscenterer Jim McKay, retailer Leonard "Boogie" Weinglass, the pony-tailed founder of the Merry-Go-Round teen clothing chain who was the inspiration for a character in "Diner," and tennis star Stan Smith are among the investors.

Angelos, who has represented workers in asbestos litigation that analysts say could be worth a billion dollars, was the ringleader who brought his friends, Clancy, Levinson and Weinglass, on board. After being convinced by an investor of bringing an NFL expansion team to Baltimore, he wondered why no one was working to return local ownership to the Orioles.

All of the owners except for those from the De Witt group have ties to Baltimore.

"The Orioles are a big part of what makes Baltimore the city that it is," Levinson said. "Growing up an Orioles fan, it's a thrill to play a small part in securing local ownership."

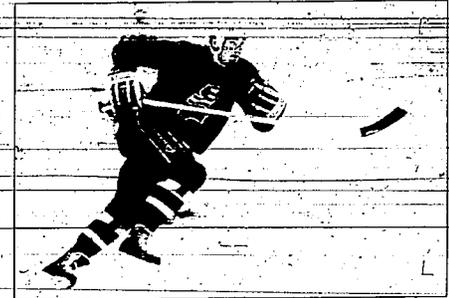

These are not the first celebrities connected with the Orioles. One of bankrupt owner Ed Jacobs' partners was Sylvester Stallone, the former vice presidential candidate and head of the Pence Corp.

Jacobs bought the team from the widow of Edward Bennett Williams, the attorney who represented entertainer Frank Sinatra, columnist William Buckley, labor leader Jimmy Hoffa and gangster Frank Costello.

This new group is certain to increase the popularity of an already popular team. Fans still trying to deny the loss of their beloved Colts football team, set a record for straight sellouts this year at Oriole Park at Camden Yards, the stadium built to resemble an old-time park.

Clancy said part of the motivation behind buying the team was to pay back the city that has been so good to them.

"In Peter's case and my case, we grew up in the Baltimore area and we would not have the stress we have if it wasn't for teachers and families and people," Clancy said. "It's a way for Peter and me to pay the people of the area back."

Drury tries out for '94 Olympic hockey team

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Despite missing out on a medal at the 1992 Albertville Olympics, Ted Drury called it "an unbelievable joyride" he's ready to take again.

Drury is so eager to play in the 1994 Lillehammer Games he put a clause into the contract he recently signed with the Calgary Flames that will allow him to join the U.S. national squad in January.

"All the money in the world can't buy that experience," Drury said Tuesday after his first workout at tryouts for the U.S. Olympic team. "To have an opportunity to do that, again, is something I couldn't pass up."

Drury, a Hockey Bay Area Award finalist last year, was one of the younger players on the 1992 Olympic team. He finished fourth. Now he's 21 and a more savvy player.

"He brings us Olympic experience and a lot of international experience," although in terms of age he's still young, Olympic coach Tim Taylor said.

Cincinnati Reds give Tubbs major league call

CINCINNATI (AP) — Greg Tubbs played in 1,137 minor-league games. His career itinerary included stops at Brydenton, Anderson, Sumner, Durham, Greenville, Richmond, Mexico City, Harrisburg, Buffalo and Indianapolis.

City after city, minor-league park after minor-league park, year after year. And every night for those 10 seasons, Tubbs fortified himself with one thought: Some day, he'll be in the big leagues.

"I dreamed every day about it," he said Monday.

The dream sustained him 37 years after he slipped away without a major-league call-up. He hit .300 at six of his stops — even made a minor-league All-Star team once, hoping someone would notice.

He turned 30 last August without a single day of major-league service, but wasn't about to give up.

"Basically, that's what my career has been, feed off the success and stay sharp mentally," he said. "I had good people they kept telling me, 'Don't worry, your day will come. Be ready for it.'"

When his day finally came Saturday, he didn't know what to do. He got the phone call he'd dreamed of during those bumpy bus rides between minor-league parks.

Major-league manager Bobby Bombard called his apartment to tell him the Cincinnati Reds had bought his contract.

After 4,100 professional at-bats, he was finally going to get the chance to face a major-league pitcher.

"I guess you could say I was overwhelmed," Tubbs said, smiling at the memory. "I was pacing up and down in my apartment. I was excited. It was a thrill. "I didn't think I was going to get called up until the fourth."

With all their injuries, the Reds found themselves needing a backup outfielder to give them a spare body. So Tubbs was heading to Riverfront Stadium Sunday to claim a roster spot. No. 51, (more like a spring training number than a major leaguer's, but he'll take it).

And after a round of batting practice with the rest of the backups, Tubbs got an even bigger surprise. Jeff Brannon wasn't feeling well, so the lineup was getting overhauled. Tubbs was starting in center field. Yes, starting!

Imagine the feeling when Sunday's first pitch was hit. He'll tell you he's in the second, and Tubbs confidently ran it down in front of 34,379 fans. He'd finally made a major-league play.

"It was like a football player wanting that first hit to get the jitters out," he said.

Then, imagine the feeling when he came to bat in the bottom of the third against Andy Benes, one of the toughest pitchers in the majors, and lined a single to center.

"It was like a sigh of relief," he said. "The scoreboard flashed the news, first major-league hit. The crowd applauded politely. First base coach Jesse Cardenal waved the ball turning it into a meme."

The ball rests unceremoniously on top of a paper cup in Tubbs' locker now. Ten minor-league years, one precious baseball. A good trade.

"A lot of players wouldn't have done it," he said. "It made me a stronger individual. It's something I can teach my sons — what it takes to make it in life, whatever their profession may be. You've got to take some bumps; some knees with it; the side of the head, and stay with it."

Ear injury keeps Meeklenburg out of play

The Associated Press

An inner ear problem will keep one-time All-Pro linebacker Karl Meeklenburg out of the Denver Broncos' four preseason games, and more damage could end his career.

Meeklenburg, however, says he expects to be in the Broncos' starting lineup for the season opener against the New York Jets on Sept. 5.

But he risks permanent hearing loss in his right ear if he continues to injure a membrane. He met on Monday with an ear specialist.

"The doctor has said all along that it's my decision what to do," he said. "I was told if I was a high school player, she'd tell me not to play football again."

"This is my career, and it's worth the risk to me. But if I plan on taking the risk of playing football, I want to give myself all the chances I can. She said, the closer you can get to six weeks without hitting the better."

Meeklenburg, a five-time Pro Bowl selection, was hurt two weeks ago when he was hit in the helmet during drills. He complained of dizziness and nausea before the Broncos sent him to specialists.

"Since then he has been cleared to run and lift weights."

Meeklenburg said playing before the membrane has healed could lead to further tearing and a permanent loss of hearing. He would then have to give up to help regain his sense of balance, which could end his season, and possibly his career.

"The Broncos already are thin at linebacker, and the prospect of losing Meeklenburg during the start of training camp for the regular season concerns them. The other starting inside linebacker, Jeff Mills, is sidelined with a pinched nerve."

Bengals

Cincinnati, in line with its usual practice, is having trouble reaching salary agreements with the No. 1 draft choice.

General manager Mike Brown said Tuesday he could not predict when the team might sign John Copeland, the defensive end from Alabama.

"I can't read the mind of the other side," Brown said. "We're not sure what we consider to be an amazing amount of money, but we don't have a deal."

"We talked, but we didn't get any place," Joel Segal, Copeland's agent, said Monday by phone. "We chatted with him, but he really lot to talk about. It looks like it may be slow, and it's not going to be a lot of fun."

The last Bengals' No. 1 pick to be signed and hit camp on this time was linebacker James Francis in 1990. Brown said that is about $990,000 — Brown was in the Bengals' rookie salary pool, which could be paid to Copeland as first-year income. Copeland is the only unsigned player among the Bengals' nine draft choices.

Falcons

Defensive end Rick Bryan will miss camp for two weeks at the Atlanta Falcons' training camp because of a pinched nerve in his neck.

Bryan, who missed last season with a neck injury, decided to return to the team when two physical therapists and team physicians gave him the OK to return.

But Bryan, who has five 100-yard seasons among his eight full seasons in the NFL, missed practice for the week on Tuesday. Bryan said doctors called it a "nerve strain."

"They've pretty much said to avoid my contract for a while, to give it time to rest up," Bryan said.

Browns

The Cleveland Browns are counting on Ed King to handle the right-tackle job this year after playing guard his first two seasons.

"The way I see it now is that's my job to lose," said King, the Browns' No. 2 pick in 1991. "The only way I'm out of there is if I just can't cut it."

King, 23, has made significant progress at right tackle since he was drafted in 1991. One of the reasons for his progress is that he has been working with Cleveland's former quarterback, which could be paid to Copeland as first-year income. Copeland is the only unsigned player among the Bengals' nine draft choices.

Cowboys

Troy Aikman has his name on a Super Bowl Most Valuable Player trophy and on the lips of fans who rever him as the star quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys.

Soon he may see his name on a sign next to Interstate 35.

The Troy City Council voted Monday to call the city Troy Aikman during the regular football season. Troy is a small town in central Texas with a population of 1,394 residents.

"Maybe this will help put us on the map a little bit," said Mayor Tom Vandevender. "Maybe we can get Troy to come down and sign autographs."

That's not a sumptuous breakfast in an antique shop, a barbershop, a cafe and a high school football team with a losing record — is overlooked by most travelers because it's between Waco and Austin.

"You think your eyes, you missed it," said city councilman C.F. Ellis. "Aikman says he's never stopped in the town but might now."

"I know exactly where it is. I pass the town every time I go to training camp," he said. "I'd be extremely honored to have them do something like that for our town."

Player sues Purdue, blames coach for abuse

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Former All-State high school football player Ryan Harmon and his parents sued Purdue University on Tuesday, claiming that coach Jim Colletto mentally and physically abused Harmon before he left the team last fall.

The lawsuit, filed in Morgan Superior Court, claims that while Harmon was on the team "he was physically hit, punched, kicked and shoved with regularity as a method of coaching by Jim Colletto."

He also was called a variety of vulgar names by the coach, the suit claims.

Because of the treatment, "Harmon experienced thoughts of suicide, abuse of alcohol, deterioration of his academic standing and adverse effects on his academic endeavors and depression," the suit claims.

Harmon's parents, Robert and Donna Harmon, claim they were deceived and that the university perpetrated a fraud that induced their son to attend Purdue. Colletto was out of town when Harmon was not immediately available for comment.

Athletic director Morgan Burke said the university had conducted an extensive investigation into Harmon's complaints and "not a single person" affirmed the allegations against coach Colletto.

Harmon, a star offensive lineman for Martinsville High School before graduation in 1991, was recruited by several major universities but decided to sign with Ohio State, where Colletto was on the coaching staff. However, when Colletto was hired at Purdue to replace Coach Fred Avers, Harmon committed to the Boilermakers.

He was redshirted his freshman year but continued to practice with the team and was eligible to play last fall. Records show no indication that Harmon ever played before leaving the team in October.

Erickson optimistic even after losing 15 starters

MIAMI (AP) — Sure, University of Miami coach Dennis Erickson has heard all kinds of people say there's no way the Hurricanes can win the national title this year.

He knows a lot of people don't like his football team. "I'm used to that. It doesn't bother me," he said.

Naysayers can say what they will, but the fact remains: "A lot of guys come here to get to school because they want to win a national championship," said Erickson, who's entering his fifth season and led the Hurricanes to national titles in 1989 and 1991.

Despite a host of new faces in the Hurricanes' starting lineup — including junior quarterback Frank Costello — and several changes in the coaching staff, Miami's objective remains No. 1. Finish, Erickson said. "I wouldn't be a doubter," he advised.

The team lost 15 starters from last season, including Heisman Trophy winner Gene Torretta at quarterback and three receivers who were picked in this year's NFL draft.

"We're probably younger than we've ever been," Erickson said. He said the season will be difficult, particularly with the games at home against Syracuse and at Florida State, Boston College and Colorado.

"It's tough on the road, particularly," the coach said. "It's not the pickin' pandas predict Syracuse will edge Miami for the Big East Football Conference title, the Orangenheim have the Hurricanes' home-game record going against them. Miami has won 51 consecutive home games, the second longest such streak in NCAA history."

"One thing about it is that they have to come down here to play. That hasn't been easy the last few years," Erickson said.

Miami opens the season Sept. 4 at Boston College. When the Hurricanes last played there, in 1991, they escaped with a 19-14 victory.

"The last time I was there was the first time I had a full beard thrown at me," Erickson said. "Believe me, I caught it."

But as usual, Erickson expects Florida State to be Miami's biggest game in this year's SEC bowl. The teams met Oct. 9 in Tallahassee.

"I'd hate to have to play Florida State twice a year," Erickson said. "Once is enough."

GARDEN

In Idaho's high desert, there grows a canvas of light, shade and shadow

When visitors step into Mary Pressey's back yard, they're transported to a faraway time and place. These aren't your garden-variety trums, carnations and petunias.

Joseph's Coat, monarda, obedient plant, balloon flowers, lungwort, and the more usual snapdragons, nasturtiums, daisies and lilacs give Pressey's garden visitors the feeling of stepping into an English cottage garden. Indeed, Pressey says her inspiration sprouted from visits to the gardens of Gertrude Jekyll and Vita Sackville-West in England.

Bill woman does not live by beauty alone. Dill stands in a miniature forest in one cubbyhole of Pressey's garden in Twin Falls, testament to her love of cooking.

Four varieties of thyme jostle for space in the mixed garden, along with French tarragon, three varieties of sage, a couple of mints, some oregano, lavender and dill. She harvests about "four dishes a week" of the savory stuff.

How does she do it? With a little help from relatives, near and far.

Pressey's mother is a constant source of inspiration and advice, but many of the perennials came from her grandfather's 1910 Oklahoma garden.

Grandfather Rudy Detwiler journeyed to Twin Falls with starts from Oklahoma City.

Pressey remembers following him around his Idaho garden during her childhood, asking questions and choosing her favorites. When she planted her first garden, it was with plants from granddad.

With gardening experience in several climatic zones, Pressey played her perennial/herb garden in a quiet Twin Falls neighborhood.

"I don't pay any attention to height or color," Pressey says. "I just know that I like Basket of Gold, or some other plant, so I put it here and there, where I know I'll see it."

Pressey's first year was a little puny. Bare spots were filled in with annuals, but most of the plants were just getting by. The second year, Pressey decided the soil needed a little boost. She shoveled a hundred bags of steer manure into the ground by hand.

Although the flowers have been worry-free ever since, she doesn't recommend the practice: "I spent some time on my aching back for that."

The cottage garden style looks complicated. The crowded, fence-to-fence style, with grass serving only as a narrow pathway, is not usually seen in this country. Some think there must be some complex, time-consuming secret to raising such a garden.

But the perennials come and go with the seasons, with little help from Pressey. She might take her coffee cup in hand and spend maybe a half hour a week deadheading a flower here and pulling a weed there. Other than that, the sprinkler system takes care of the watering, and Pressey never uses sprays or chemicals on the garden.

She muddies just enjoys it.

In the fall, Pressey allows the perennials and herbs to go to seed and watches the snow cover the whole thing. Then, "the first good day in spring, when you first see that green shoot," she cuts everything back severely. The garden springs to life once more.

In all, Pressey says, she grows more than 76 varieties of flowers and herbs whose names she knows. With six varieties of poppies, eight dandelions, at least three daisies, five lilies, four of thyme, three sages, some roses, ground covers and a couple of trees, things can get cozy.

"I go at gardening much like cleaning house; there's cleaning, rearranging, throwing out what you can live without."

Plants too crowded to do well are dug up and divided among friends.

"That's the beauty of gardening, I think," Pressey said, "when friends can share with one another."

IF AUGUST 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are dynamic, controversial, members of opposite sex find you attractive, you broke-front family tradition, could have been separated from me or both parents at relatively early age. You possess credit of showmanship, ability to entertain, many insist you are "the life of the party." Before August is finished, you'll perfect techniques, streamline procedures, an "old flame" might be reignited.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Money, credit previously withheld will be released in your name. Fill out proper forms, be aware of deadline. Within 24 hours you could be flirting with "fame and fortune."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Benefits derived by studying Aries message. You're free to travel, to be vulnerable to love. Many of your aspirations fulfilled by tonight. You're capable now of winning friends and influencing people.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Whether or not you asked for it, you're in leadership role. Focus on occupation, prestige, ability to help others seeking information on how to get along.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You'll handle "family problem" with panache, plans involving travel and, most exciting, romance on high level.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): By asking questions unobscuredly, information obtained concerning hidden finances, financial status of one close to you, possible inheritance. You'll recover "book long gone." Excellent!

DECEMBER (Jan. 23-Feb. 22): Be aware of references, source material, study agreement, be willing to revise, review, to tear down in order to replace outgoing machinery in new methods.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Those who thought you were "counted out" will be "shamed." Get promises in writing, don't give up creative value for temporary appeasement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Music in your life, creative message of opposite sex could have you "out of control." Change of venue necessary if you are to succeed.

Women refuse at high rate

Consider the women in your family who were born between 1956 and 1972. Do any say they don't want children? Census statisticians report 22 percent of the women in that age bracket will so state now. That's American history's highest refusal rate ever in this matter.

"Oldies" goddess of "reverd" was a "British" specialist named Fred - here's to Fred, clink! who died in his bowl at age 41.

That man of yesterday who carried a highly prized railroad pocket watch spent about 138 hours of his life winding said.

A typical blood transfusion moves three pints.

Q. Which came first - "abracadabra" or "hocus pocus"?

A. "Abracadabra" - about 100 years. It showed up in print in 1565. Hocus pocus in 1647. Best recent research suggests both were connected trickster terms from the outset. Abracadabra was favored by the magic-poison peddlers. Jugglers liked hocus pocus.

One thing you can say about those male "medical" specialists called - unless they father more girl babies than boy babies. But then you can say the same about abalone divers and fighter pilots, according to the statisticians.

Q. You said Queen Victoria decreed that men who chose to remain unmarried wouldn't be welcome in Her Majesty's Rifle Corps. Why not?

A. She expressed the interesting opinion that normal married life imposes a man's marksmanship.

Learn to control your diet if you want control over diabetes

Slumber parties in grade school generally mean a sugar high for most children. The only thing that made my friends and me different was the fact we monitored our blood sugar level from the birthday cake to the punch in the cafeteria during the midnight movie to the glazed donuts in the morning.

Every year at an annual birthday slumber party, we would prick our fingers, draw blood and test our blood sugar levels with a glucose tolerance kit. My friend who was diagnosed with diabetes in grade school.

I used to think it would be "cool" to have diabetes and get insulin shots, but no more. Thankfully, there are lifestyle changes that can help prevent developing this disease.

Currently, about 750,000 new cases of diabetes are diagnosed each year. And many of the 6.8 million adult Americans are believed to be undiagnosed diabetics. This is particularly disheartening since uncontrolled diabetes is a significant contributor to heart disease, stroke, blindness, kidney failure, high blood pressure, atherosclerosis and eye disease.

In simple terms, diabetes represents a malfunction in the body's ability to obtain energy from food. When the pancreas does not produce enough insulin, the hormone that allows cells to access glucose (blood sugar) for energy purposes, the result is a high blood glucose level.

Research has yielded more effective ways of managing this disease so that today, diabetic people are living healthier, more productive lives. For the vast majority of diabetics, relatively simple measures such as losing extra weight may be all that is required to effectively manage the disease.

For the population at large, the odds of developing diabetes are about one in seven. Risk factors include being over 40, weighing more than 20 percent over maximum weight and having blood relatives with diabetes.

Also, women who are diagnosed with gestational diabetes during pregnancy have a 15 percent chance of developing diabetes during their lifetime. Women who weigh nine or more pounds of had unexplained miscarriages or still births are at greater risk. People of African, Hispanic and Native American or Japanese-American descent are also at higher risk for diabetes.

Good nutrition, weight control and regular exercise are important for everyone. But for anyone with an increased risk of developing diabetes, these steps are crucial.

Many experts believe that obesity is far more important a factor in diabetes than is sugar consumption. Obesity increases the risk of developing diabetes about fourfold. Many people with incipient diabetes can prevent its development simply by losing weight.

Once diabetes develops, it is important that "diets" be required to control the disease, control nutrition, weight control and regular exercise are important for everyone. But for anyone with an increased risk of developing diabetes, these steps are crucial.

Diabetics who crave a sweet taste must rely on artificial sweeteners and certain sweet-tasting substances such as sorbitol and mannitol that are very slowly absorbed and therefore don't produce a rapid rise in blood sugar.

However, most diabetics can handle diets containing relatively large amounts of starchy foods since these foods do not place a major demand on the body's insulin factory.

Also, unlike other sugars, fructose, the sugar that naturally predominates in most fruits, doesn't require insulin to get into the liver and body cells.

Of stir-fry, soups, tuition bills

The good news is that youngest son got accepted at a fine university back east at half scholarship. The bad news is that that half costs more than twice as much as a year at school in Idaho!

Since he graduated from the U of I a few years ago, he's been supporting himself as a playwright, which means he really knows how to wait on tables! Last year he earned only $200 in royalties.

But hey, maybe just maybe the right person will see or read his stuff and we'll all be in the category of "knowing him when."

His fiancée is a graduate of the U of I, and she was confounded when his official automobile was declared almost dead and the best odds on reaching Massachusetts were one out of 10.

So if you happen to vacation back there in the next couple of years, you just might see a white Idaho pickup with "DORA COUS" written on the sides. Wave!

Here's an interesting recipe for three. It could have used last week when he was home. I imagine you could double it easily.

Valley-cooking

2 cups diagonally sliced bok choy (chinese cabbage)
10 to 12 rashers, thinly sliced (about 3/4 cup)
Combine the pork, the first tablespoon of teriyaki sauce and red pepper and set aside.
Combine the cornstarch, 3 tablespoons teriyaki sauce, white vinegar and water then set aside.
Heat a tablespoon of oil in wok or large skillet over medium-high heat, stir-fry pork mixture until pork is no longer pink, about 2 minutes then remove from wok.
Add other tablespoon of oil to wok and stir-fry onion until slightly softened about 2 minutes then remove from wok.
Stir-fry the bok choy and crisp-tender a minute or two, then add the cornstarch mixture, pork, onions and salt. Stir-fry until mixture boils, about 2 minutes. Serve in radishes and heat through. Serve immediately.

RADISH STIR-FRIED PORK
1/2 pound boneless pork, cut into thin strips
1 tablespoon soy-sauce
1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons teriyaki sauce
2 tablespoons white vinegar
3/4 cup water
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup chopped onion

I know how some of you feel about cold soups. That if God had meant soup to be cold he wouldn't have invented the hot place.

Well, humor me a little. These soups are easy on the cook, can be made ahead and are terrific. Also you don't lose the nutrients through too much heat.

PEACHY SOUP
1 medium cantaloupe, rind and seeds removed and cut into chunks
4 ripe peaches
1/2 cup nonfat vanilla yogurt
1/2 cup nonfat cottage cheese
2 tablespoons Triple Sea or Grand Marnier
2 tablespoons fresh mint, chopped fine
In a food processor or blender combine all the ingredients. Blend until smooth. Then put in a bowl with a lid and chill until desired. Serves 8 or 10. If you want to be a little more frugal to the top. Serves 8.
Not exactly fat free, this next one is great at a barbecue:

AVOCADO SOUP
6 ripe avocados
5 cups chicken broth
2 cups light cream (half and half)
3-4 tablespoons lime juice (fresh preferred)
Dash or more of hot sauce (like tabasco sauce)
Pinch of cayenne pepper
Salt and pepper to taste
Thin-slices of lime, for garnish
Spigs of cilantro, for garnish
Blend the avocados and chicken broth in a food processor or blender. Blend in the remaining ingredients with a whisk.
Chill.
Serve in chilled cups and garnish with the lime-slices and cilantro. Serves 8.
Enjoy!

Heart association book aims at catching young cooks early

By Karen Avenoso
New York Daily News

The American Heart Association wants kids to start cooking with liquid egg substitute and low-fat Cheddar cheese before they can even pronounce "clogged arteries" and "high cholesterol."

The new "Atta-Kids" Cookbook" (Random House, $14.50) invites young cooks into the kitchen to make "Heart Smart" meals that could prevent additional cardiac problems.

"The figures are the same for everyone, from 2 years up," says Dr. Reginald Washington, a pediatric cardiologist and board member of the Heart Association. "Despite recent advances in medicine, the best way to stop heart disease is still prevention. And nothing gets cholesterol a day, no more than 30 percent of calories from fats. Kids should get involved in their own nutrition from an early age, so they'll carry good eating habits with them for the rest of their lives."

The AHA cookbook features standard-kiddy favorites, slightly modified to lessen cholesterol and fat content without subtracting from good taste: baked, unsalted tomato chips, "baugli spaghetti" with no-fat, bottled meatballs and, for an ethnic splurge, low-fat cheese tamales.

Most importantly, Washington says, heart-healthy eating should not be presented as an unpleasant lifestyle change or rigid culinary regimen.

"Don't turn it into a burden, a chore or a punishment," he says. "Kids shouldn't be counting grams of fat and hundreds of calories."

Instead of stirring up complicated terms like "complex carbohydrates" and "polyunsaturated fats," parents can introduce basic dietary concepts, Washington advises. "Say to a child: 'Look at the grease and salt that's left on your hands from potato chips. That goes straight to your heart.'"

Rather than having old bean and skim milk forced on them, children should be helped to make general dietary choices. "Take kids grocery shopping," Washington says. "Help them select items, learn to read labels. When kids participate in the purchasing of the food, they're more likely to eat it."

With time and practice, children may begin to internalize healthy eating habits. "Kids are aware of recycling, protecting the environment," Washington says. "The same kids who get these messages from TV and school can learn about good nutrition."

As for snacks and desserts, neither Washington nor the new cookbook prohibits them.

"We recognize that kids like to snacks can be nutritious and not be presented as an unpleasant lifestyle change or rigid culinary regimen.

SLUMBER PARTY FRENCH TOAST
Serves 3-5
1 stick margarine
1/2 cup dark brown sugar
1/2 cup ground cinnamon
Liquid egg substitute equal to 2 eggs
1/2 cup skim milk
6 (1-inch-thick) slices French bread
1 to 2 tablespoons confectioner's sugar
Place margarine in baking pan and set on burner. Over low flame, heat margarine until melted. Mix brown sugar and cinnamon in separate bowl. Sprinkle mixture over melted margarine. Blend egg substitute and milk to glass plate. Dip bread into egg mixture to coat both sides, and then in bowl of sugar mix. Cover pan with foil and refrigerate overnight.
Remove from refrigerator 1 hour before baking and let reach room temperature. Pre-heat oven to 375 degrees. Bake French toast 25 minutes each foil covering in place. Remove foil and bake for 15 minutes longer. Sprinkle French toast with confectioner's sugar before serving.

ENDANGERED GARDEN PLANTS: When you're buying plants and bulbs, make sure they're not endangered species. "Gardener's Guide to Plant Conservation," published by the World Wildlife Fund, says that endangered species are, in fact, being sold by some nurseries and catalogs. The $12.98 paperback, endorsed by the Garden Club of America, offers tips on what to buy and what to avoid. You can get it from the World Wildlife Fund, Box 4806, Hampden Post Office, Baltimore, Md. 21211. There's a $2 shipping charge.

LAWN MOWER SAFETY: Be careful when mowing hilly ground.

Many people are injured each year when they slip while mowing up a hill and the mower rolls backward. The University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center recommends mowing across a steep grade when using a rear mower. When a riding mower, however, only mow up and down. Avoid slopes altogether if they are too steep.

AROUND THE HOUSE: A household hint, from the Baltimore Sun: Wash painted louvered doors by saturating a 2-inch angled paint brush with warm sudsy water and "painting" slat by slat. Absorb excess water with a clean sponge. Make sure a towel has been placed under the door to catch drips.

RATINGS

The five category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

G - General audiences; all ages admitted.

PG - Parental Guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13 - Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for children.

R - Restricted, under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

NC-17 - No one under 17 admitted.

Muffins: Glorious way to start day

By Ellen Hawks

When the request went out for a "morning glory" muffin recipe for Bernadine B. Biernat, responses arrived from all over. We chose one by Elaine Whorner.

MORNING GLORY MUFFINS
2 cups flour
1/2 cup granulated sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups grated carrot
1/2 cup each raisins, chopped nuts and coconut
1 apple, core, peeled and grated
1 egg salad oil
3 teaspoons vanilla
In a bowl mix the flour, sugar, baking soda, cinnamon and salt. Stir in carrots, raisins, nuts, coconut and apple. In a small bowl beat the eggs, oil, vanilla and stir into the flour mixture until combined. Spoon into well-greased muffin cups filling to the top. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes.

Book fit for 'The King' explores his larger-than-life appetite

New York Daily News

Want to enjoy the fabulous meat Elvis once flew from Memphis to Denver (at least once). Simply take a loaf of moistened, crusty country bread, warm it in the oven, slice it open lengthwise and spread it with peanut butter, jelly and a pound of warm bacon.

Do not share.
Yes, Elvis was larger than life in many ways, especially when it came to his appetite. As David Adler notes in his wonderful and comprehensive cookbook, "The Life and Cuisine of Elvis Presley" (Crown, $15), "As soon as he could walk, he could eat his weight in peanut butter and crackers." Which is pretty much what he was doing at the end.

As he followed his fate, Elvis ate his way from the foods of abject poverty to foods fit for a King. The strange thing is... they weren't very different. True, by the time he was playing Vegas, Elvis no longer had to subsist on the scraps and dregs of his youth. But caviar and quail held no fascination either. Come dinner time after the show (generally 5 or 6 in the morning) Elvis would command the same banquet every time. Cheesburgers and fries, in bed.

With painstaking — sometimes stomach pains-taking thoroughness, author Adler visited all of Presley's chow haunts, sampling the cuisine of his neighbors, his high school, his mall shop, his Vegas digs and his former Graceland chef. Adaptations involving Adler even visited the U.S. Army Cook School in Fort Lee, Va., to get an idea of what Elvis ate in uniform.

From the beginning, Elvis was attracted to foods that would send most nutritionists to grief: therapy oven-fried chicken with potato chip coating was a Sunday favorite, in part because the Presleys were so poor that church-sponsored picnics were often the only time they ate meat. The good folks at the Tupelo First Assembly of God had a soup-and-sandwich mean 'n' Up Salad. But a gelatin made with 7-Up instead of water, as well as cottage cheese, crushed pineapple and a heaping cup of mayo.

With cuisine like this, it should come as no surprise that Elvis simply adored cafeteria food. Still, the rather slim high school student didn't eat it every day. "Realizing that Elvis was skipping lunch," writes Adler, "the (shop) teacher asked Elvis what was wrong. Elvis told him he didn't have the money for lunch. The shop teacher gave him lunch money that day and for many days afterward, Elvis became a shop major."

Just a few years later, when fame came knocking, Elvis began his life-long affair with the cheeseburger. No longer were these succulent patties beyond his financial grasp. In fact, he began leaving shocked mall-shop waitresses $100 tips.

Army food also appealed to Elvis, according to Adler, lending credence to the thesis: If it didn't move (too much) Elvis ate it. But once he had his druthers, it was back to burgers. Forever.

There were, of course, non-meat treats in Presley's life. He enjoyed Eskimo Pies, Hostess Cupcakes, Fudgeicles, Dreamsticks, Girl Scout Cookies, Krispy Kreme doughnuts and hot dogs, rolls... without the hot dogs. "Given his country origins, where virtually all foods were homemade," Adler observes, "Packaged foods in shiny wrappers represented the city, excitement and a larger world. Just as some people chain-smoke, Elvis chain-smoked."

His most famous snack is certainly the fried peanut butter and banana sandwich — he once lived on nothing but for seven weeks. As for the peanut butter, jelly and bacon sandwich story, Adler says it's "a myth."

Chatting with some buddies late one night at Graceland, talk turned to sandwiches. Elvis described his fate, as created by the Colorado Gold Mine Company restaurant in Denver. The others expressed interest. Elvis cried, "Let's go get 'em!" and they did... after first phoning in their order.

By midnight the salivating Elvis was airborne, and at 1:40 a.m. the Lisa Marie touched down at Dever's Stapleton Airport. Twenty of the loaf-long sandwiches were delivered on silver trays and the feasting went on for two hours. Says Adler, "It was typical of Elvis' generosity that he insisted that the plane's crew join in the feast."

And it was true, while related. But in the end, even a healthy diet couldn't have counteracted the buckets of pills Elvis took to swallow like so many M&Ms. Was the overdose a suicide? Adler believes it was not, and his evidence is rather compelling. For the last week of his life, Adler learned, Elvis was trying to slim down for his next tour.

"If Elvis planned to kill himself, would he have spent the last week of his life on a diet?" Food for thought.

Spread the bread with the peanut butter and banana. Melt the butter in a skillet on medium heat. Fry the sandwich, browning on both sides.

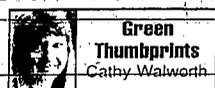

7-UP SALAD
(Serves 1 Elvis)
1 package lemon gelatin
1 package lime gelatin
2 cups hot 7-Up
1 cup mayonnaise
1 cup cottage cheese
1 can crushed pineapple
Prepare gelatin according to package directions, substituting 7-Up for water. Let cool to room temperature, stir in remaining ingredients. Pour into molds. Refrigerate.

GRACELAND OATMEAL MEATLOAF
(Serves 8-10)
2 green peppers, diced
2 medium onions, diced
2 large eggs, lightly beaten
2 pounds ground chuck
1 pound bulk sausage meat
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup ketchup
Pre-heat the oven to 375 degrees. Combine all the ingredients except 1/2 cup of the ketchup in a large mixing bowl. Mix well and shape into a nice, even loaf. Place the loaf in a shallow baking dish and top with the remaining ketchup. Bake for 90 minutes or until well done.

FRIED PEANUT BUTTER SANDWICH
(Serves 1 Elvis)
2 slices white bread
2 heaping tablespoons peanut butter
1/2 very ripe banana, mashed with fork
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Tips to keep your lawn ever green

As ordinary as lawn care, you'd think it would be common to know about taking care of them and our lawns would be forever green. But questions on lawn sprout often:

Green Thumbprints
Cathy Walworth

Q: Should I bag the lawn clippings or leave them on the lawn?

A: Think of grass clippings as dollar bills. The dollars you spent on fertilizer this year. Do you want that money, based up and sent to the landfill? A happy lawn is one that has only one-third of its total length mowed. That leaves small pieces of grass to decompose and return your fertilizer investment, as well as providing a free mulch.

Q: Should I seed my lawn this fall or wait until spring?

A: Success in gardening is often followed by a good imitation of Mother Nature. Nature puts seeds down in the fall. Soil is moist and still warm and most annual weeds, such as crabgrass, are going dormant.

Four to six weeks before the first fall frost is about the best time to plant a new lawn or overseed one.

Q: What can I do to my lawn this fall to help conserve water next year?

A: Lawns will lose water by direct evaporation from the soil surface. Build up a dense turf cover by aerating the soil by overseeding a thin lawn or renovating bare spots.

Q: How do I get a new, thin lawn to fill in?

A: Mowing causes grasses to grow sideways. When grass is mowed regularly it produces side shoots and you have a thick, healthy lawn before you know it.

Q: Can I do anything about crabgrass now?

A: Crabgrass is one of several annual grass weeds that establish themselves in early summer and complete their life cycle and die in the early fall. After it has started to die, it's too late to expect chemical weed control to do any good.

Run the turf with a dethatch machine, power rake or vertical mower. Remove the loose vegetation and thatch, including crabgrass runners, and seedheads.

Fertilize the lawn and water it in. Seed new grass into the thinned areas. These will make a thick, tight turf that will repel weeds next spring.

Pillsbury offers cash for cooking, baking recipes

The Times-News

It's official. Once again, Pillsbury has opened its own "cooking and baking season" for consumers with a call for entries in the 36th Pillsbury Bake-Off Contest and Baking Contest.

Scheduled for Feb. 19-22, the contest will be held in San Diego.

Finalists will vie for $175,000 in prizes, including a new award and lots of merchandise gift certificates. Topping the list of awards is the grand prize of $50,000 in cash plus a $10,000 Sears Kenmore Kitchen Makeover from co-sponsor Sears.

To give you an idea of what makes a winning special treat, try Peanut Butter Banana Cake, which earned Baking Prize of Fort Ord, Calif., a trip to the 35th Bake-Off Contest. Payne said that her favorite sandwich, peanut butter and banana, was the inspiration for the recipe.

For a contest entry blank with rules and regulations call 1-800-933-7700 through Sept. 30 or write to Pillsbury Bake-Off Entry Blanks, P.O. Box 4831, Monticello, Minn. 55565-4831. Entries must be postmarked by Oct. 18 and received by Oct. 22.

This Peanut Butter Banana Cake earned a California woman a trip to last year's bake-off.
2 tablespoons milk
2 teaspoon vanilla

Cream:
2 medium bananas, thinly sliced
Heat oven to 350 degrees. Generously grease and flour 13 by 9-inch pan. In large bowl, combine mashed bananas and margarine; mix well (mixture will look slightly curdled). Add peanut butter; beat well. Add whipping cream and eggs; beat at high speed until smooth. Add cake mix and flour; beat at low speed until moistened; beat 2 minutes at high speed. Pour into greased and floured pan.

Bake at 350 degrees for 45 to 55 minutes until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 15 minutes; remove from pan, if desired. Cool completely.
In small bowl, combine all frosting ingredients; stir until smooth and creamy. Frost cake. In small bowl, combine all glaze ingredients; beat until smooth. Drizzle glaze over frosting. Just before serving, garnish with banana slices. Store in refrigerator.

Makes 12 to 15 servings.
High Altitude - Above 3500 feet: Add 1/4 cup flour to dry cake mix. Bake as directed.
