Farmers shiver over summer chill

By Stefano Esposito
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With memories of last year's devastating early frost still all too vivid, officials wait anxiously to see what effect this year's chilly summer temperatures may have on Magic Valley crops. In Camas County, a cold snap has raised concern about diminished grain yields. "It's unseasonably cold," said Jeff Rast, Camas County Extension agent. "We've had (flows of) 25 or 26 degrees the last three days."

But minimum readings around 40 degrees are forecast over the weekend. Of particular concern to Rast are the barley and wheat crops, because a bumper crop was expected this year.

"We're sure losing potential because it looked like we were going to exceed our county average," Rast said. "We're gonna have a pretty good cutback on the amount of plump kernels we get."

Rast expects it to take about a week to 10 days to determine the full extent of the damage. With late-season frosts, survival usually depends on the maturation of the crop, he said.

"The farther along the grain is, the less damage it will sustain," Rast said. He warned, however, that much of the grain is still in the early stages of development.

Elsewhere in the Magic Valley, experts are less certain how cool temperatures will affect the harvest.

"Everything is a mixed blessing; that's why it is so hard to make generalities," said David Barton, Jerome County Extension agent. "On the one hand, cold temperatures can help to increase the sugar content in beets, as well as reduce insect population growth, Barton said.

On the other hand, potatoes and beans are sensitive to frost.

"You could get a frost on the beans and it would knock out a huge portion of the yield," Barton said. "Depending on the development stage of the beans, the farmer may not have a crop to harvest."

Last year, the bean crop was severely damaged, with the eastern end of the Magic Valley making the heaviest hits. Barton said. Since Wednesday, temperatures valley-wide.

Despite mishap, Tanya's still coming to Filer

By Denise Turner

TWIN FALLS — Tanya's still coming to Filer. Country singer Tanya Tucker was hospitalized in Boise Thursday evening after she fell and cracked her tailbone.

She is scheduled to perform at 6:30 and 9 p.m. Sept. 5 at the Twin Falls County Fair.

She was forced to cancel her grandstand shows at the Western Idaho Fair, but she was soon pushing to get back on the road again.

"She wants to perform tonight, but we haven't decided about that yet," said Dixie Pineda, the singer's publicist, on Friday afternoon. "The only shows we're considering cancelling are tonight and tomorrow night, so there should be no problem with the Twin Falls appearance."

Tucker was booked to entertain at a private party this weekend. Doctors agreed to release Tucker from St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center Friday afternoon.

Fine, but sore, was the verdict from the Tucker crew. And, according to Pineda, there was no problem with the bus in which Tucker fell.

"Tanya just lost her balance in the shower of her touring bus on her way to perform in Boise," Pineda reported. "It was a typical bathroom accident."

Tucker, 34, had 8,700 fans waiting in the stands Thursday night when her Boise performance was canceled. On Friday, she issued a statement through Pineda saying she was sorry she had to cancel the Boise shows. She also said she's received a lot of calls, flowers and best wishes.

"I will be back on my feet much sooner with all the best wishes and support," she said. The singer's hits include "Tell Me About It," "It's a Little Too Late," "If Your Heart Ain't Busy Tonight" and "Two Sparrows in a Hurricane." She was named 1991 female vocalist of the year by the Country Music Association, and she has been nominated for the same award this year.

Tickets for the Twin Falls shows, which also feature Joe Diffie, are priced $12 and are available through the fair office, 326-4396.

Tipoff source comes out

The Dallas Morning News

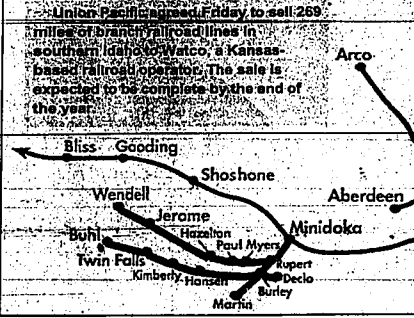

WACO, Texas — A local TV station photographer has acknowledged that he had the conversation Feb. 28 that investigators have identified as the tip-off to Branch Davidians of an impending federal raid.

But KWTX cameraman Jim Peeler told The Dallas Morning News that he did not know he was talking to a secret member when he briefly spoke to a man in a private car bearing postal service signs just before the raid and asked for directions to the Branch Davidians' rural compound.

"There's no denying there was a conversation between (the postman) and myself. I've been up front about it from the word go," Peeler said.

He said he thought nothing of the conversation and only realized its possible significance after Texas Rangers began questioning journalists who witnessed the raid. Law enforcement sources say Rangers determined the exchange between Peeler and contract postal employee David Jones, a longtime Branch Davidian member, was the source of the tip. The sources added the probe found Peeler did not know who he was talking with.

UP picks Kansas rail buyer

Magic Valley tracks change hands

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Union Pacific Railroad has awarded two railroad branch lines in southern and eastern Idaho to Watco, a rail operator in Kansas.

"We both have to come to a final sales agreement on the price, but they'll probably take over the lines by the end of the year," said Union Pacific spokesman John Bromley.

Watco will operate the Magic Valley lines as Eastern Idaho Railroad Inc.

And Eastern Idaho Railroad will hire 45 to 50 workers who worked on the lines for Union Pacific, providing continued employment for most of the Union Pacific workers, said Rick Webb, whose family owns Watco.

Union Pacific is selling off the rail lines in two groups. One line is around Idaho Falls and the second is in the Magic Valley.

Webb said the new Eastern Idaho Railroad will open a headquarters later this year in Twin Falls and two branch offices in Rupert and Idaho Falls. The company is also considering opening a third branch office in Pocatello, he said.

The Eastern Idaho Railroad will continue to offer the same basic ser-

Weather summary

Sunshine, light winds and generally fair skies prevailed over Idaho on Friday as temperatures climbed closer to normal levels. Early morning readings ranged from the 20s to the 50s but temperatures began climbing once the sun rose and reached the 70s and 80s over much of the state during the afternoon. There were no reports of rainfall from any section of the state although a few high clouds moved in during the afternoon. The highest temperature in the state Friday was 90 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley reported the lowest at 24 degrees, which tied with Jackson, Wyo., for the nation's lowest temperature. Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 107 degrees at Laughlin, Nev.

Record heat baked the Northeast on Friday while record lows chilled parts of the Northwest. Thunderstorms were scattered around the nation and caused flooding in Michigan. Atlantic storm Emily, meanwhile, had forecasters warning it was too soon to tell where — or if — it would hit land. The storm remained hundreds of miles from land. Bridgeport, Conn., posted a record high for the date of 93 degrees. Newark, N.J., hit a record 100 degrees, the hottest for the date since 1948. Hot, humid weather was expected in southern New York state through Saturday and heat advisories were posted over parts of Indiana, Kentucky, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia. In Crawford County, Ind., people sought relief from highs in the 90s by playing a visit on the Marcozeco Cave National Landmark, about 30 miles west of New Albany. to the cave," said spokesman Gary Roberson. "It's 52 degrees at any one year." Hot, sticky weather cancelled classes in some areas for students at schools without air conditioned classrooms. Record lows in the Northwest included 42 degrees at Billings, Mont., and 34 degrees at Pocatello. Showers and thunderstorms fell in parts of Pennsylvania, Ohio, the southern Atlantic states, the Gulf of Mexico Coast, Michigan, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. More than an inch of rain fell in Albuquerque, N.M., in 30 minutes. Heavy rain produced knee-deep flooding in Alpena, Mich. Rainfall during the 6 hours ending at noon MDT included an inch at Kingsville, Texas, and almost an inch at Jacksonville, Fla. Temperatures around the nation at 1 p.m. MDT ranged from 54 degrees at Alamosa, Colo., to 100 degrees at Newark, N.J. The morning low in the lower 48 states was 24 degrees at Old Faithful, Wyo.

Forecasts

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Partly cloudy today and tonight. Highs 80 to 85. Lows 45 to 50. Light winds today. Sunday partly cloudy with a few showers. Highs near 80.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley: Partly cloudy today. Highs 75 to 80. Tonight mostly cloudy with a few showers. Lows near 40. Sunday mostly cloudy with widely scattered showers. Highs in the mid-70s.

wide have flirted with the freezing point, Barton said. "It's been real close the last two nights," Barton said. "In fact, I've talked to a couple of people that said they saw temperatures around 31."

Barton said short-term low temperatures by themselves may not destroy crops.

"Although ice forms at 32 degrees, if your environmental conditions and your plants are in pretty good health, they can probably tolerate a little bit lower than 32," Barton said.

Crop damage also depends on the time of exposure. So far, Barton thinks the bean crop has been exposed to freezing temperatures for only short periods. "If it was 30 degrees all night, it would be a big difference than 30 degrees for 15 minutes before sunrise," Barton said.

According to Barton, "frost-inhibiting" compounds are available to farmers, but he said results have been mixed. Unfortunately for farmers, temperatures are not expected to rise as crops reach maturity.

"Probably through the rest of the month, I'll be below average," said Bill Galkin of the National Weather Service office in Kimberly. Galkin predicts high temperatures will remain in the 70s and lower 80s, with lows in the 40s.

vice that Union Pacific offers to businesses shipping and receiving goods by train on the rail line, Webb said. The company will continue to transport agricultural products such as potatoes, grain and sugar beets. But Webb added that the company will soon begin a marketing effort to get back companies that previously shipped their goods by train but switched to trucks or airlines.

"We strive to improve customer service," Webb said.

Union Pacific is selling off its branch lines across the country and focusing on long-haul operations. "A dozen rail companies from across the country expressed an interest in the two Idaho lines, but Union Pacific narrowed its candidates down to Watco and RailTex of Fort Worth, Texas, last month before choosing Watco Friday."

"We felt Watco had the more attractive bid," Bromley said. Neither Bromley nor Webb would say what Watco's price was.

Watco operates two short-line railroads in Washington on a group of four other lines linking Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri. The company has been in the railroad business for 10 years and also operates locomotive and rail car leasing and maintenance services.

Official charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army's acting secretary, John W. Shannon, has been charged with shoplifting a woman's blouse and skirt at a post exchange near the Pentagon, the Army said Friday.

The incident occurred Thursday at Fort Myer, Va., said Army spokesman Col. Steve Rausch. A store detective apprehended Shannon for allegedly shoplifting a woman's blouse and skirt, the spokesman said.

Shannon was given a ticket and ordered to appear Oct. 22 before a federal magistrate in Alexandria, Va., a federal prosecutor said. The charged offense is a misdemeanor.

The picture is President Bill Clinton but the words are from another source in this British beer advertisement.

Beer 'endorsement' may uncap some sales

LONDON (AP) — Bill Clinton doesn't endorse products and American advertisers cannot use his image to hawk cars, soft drinks or anything else. But that hasn't stopped Canadian brewer Molson from running a picture of a large picture — of the president in British beer ads.

Molson hopes the Clinton promotion will persuade more of the nation's many tipplers to try its Special Dry brew.

The image newspaper ads, first appearing Friday, feature a full-page mugshot of the president, hands folded in a contemplative mood.

The other page offers the quote: "One of the things that I've learned this year is that a strong beer can have a really clean taste. My wife is more of a beer drinker than I am, and she's the one who first cottoned on to Molson Special Dry."

Sounds like a presidential pitch, with Hillary Rodham Clinton lending support, right?

Not if you look closer. Fine print at the bottom specifies that the quote came from Sean Purcell, a London beer drinker. The photo, according to more fine print, is merely "a picture of Bill Clinton."

Although White House lawyers would instantly object if this happened in America, Molson says it's on firm legal ground in Britain.

the violence. But the secretary gave no estimate of how long it might take for the security problem to be solved, and other U.S. policy-makers said there had been no change in the administration's expectation that American forces would remain in Somalia at least through the end of 1994.

Despite some hints that he might do so, Aspin failed to spell out any new rationale for why U.S. troops should remain in Somalia, saying only that "unless we return security to south Mogadishu, political chaos will follow the U.N. withdrawal."

The secretary's remarks came as the last of the 400 Ranger troops ordered to Somalia arrived in Mogadishu to bolster security there and hunt for fugitive warlord Mohammed Farah Aidid, whose militia has been responsible for most of the attacks.

Although the news media were barred from witnessing portions of the Rangers' debarkation, military sources said the troops brought sophisticated high-tech technology equipment capable of detecting poswhere public figures are fair game for witty ad agencies. "We have not sought out his permission, but we have gotten legal advice and this is legal," said Sieve Ardill, consumer marketing manager for Molson's British operations. "Being a public figure, the president's image is usable, and that's what we're doing."

"Obviously, our intention is not to offend anybody," he added. White House officials declined comment on the ads.

Clinton rarely drinks beer or other alcoholic beverages because they aggravate his allergies. White House aide Ricki Seidman said in Martha's Vineyard, Mass., where the president is on vacation.

Jeffrey Edelstein, a New York attorney who specializes in advertising law, doubts the White House is happy to see Clinton being used as a beer pitchman.

"It would not be permitted in this country," Edelstein said. Furthermore, in America, all 50 states have laws protecting the right of everyone, from presidents to dog catchers, to stay out of ads unless they are on vacation.

Not so in Britain. Only images of the royal family are taboo, although the kings and queens of Britain help promote fine teas and other products by issuing seals of approval.

Suit challenges constitutionality of new estate tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — A retroactive estate-tax increase in President Clinton's newly enacted deficit-reduction plan violates the Constitution, a federal court suit charged Friday.

The suit, filed by the National Taxpayers Union, asked the District Court for the District of Columbia to bar enforcement of the increase.

However, the suit did not challenge the constitutionality of the far larger retroactive income-tax increases in the new law. No matter how unconscionable such a change, said attorney Mark Levin, the Supreme Court has upheld the validity of a retroactive boost in income taxes.

Levin, who is director of legal policy for the Landmark Legal Foundation, acknowledged the retroactive increase in estate and gift taxes affects few people.

However, he told a news conference, it is being contested as a matter of principle.

"If Congress and the president can get away with taxing the dead, there would be few limits on how unfair future tax laws could become," said David Keating, executive vice president of the National Taxpayers Union.

Keating's group, claiming 250,000 members, advocates lower taxes and less government spending. Landmark Legal Foundation argues in court on behalf of a free-market economy and individual rights.

The tax increases were signed into law by Clinton on Aug. 10 as part of a plan designed to cut the federal budget deficit by $496 billion over the next five years.

About $240 billion of that total would come from tax increases, more than half of which would be retroactive to Jan. 1. The estate-tax changes, affecting only estates worth at least $2.5 million, are expected to raise $2.8 billion of the total.

Higher income tax rates on top earners will bring in nearly $115 billion, the government estimates.

Congress voted last year to freeze the higher estate tax rates but the bill was vetoed by President Bush. Clinton proposed on Feb. 25 to restore the higher rates.

The lawsuit is based principally on two arane clauses of the Constitution that prohibit any direct tax whose impact is not apportioned equally among the states according to population. A direct tax is essentially a tax on property.

The 16th Amendment was written so that an income tax would avoid that prohibition.

The estate tax passes muster so long as it is levied on a distinct legal event — that is, on the death of a decedent — the suit states. But the new law, in effect, "attempts to impose a new tax" on property up to eight months after death.

Until last Jan. 1, estates worth $2.5 million to $3 million were subject to estate tax rates of up to 53 percent; those over $3 million faced rates up to 55 percent.

Since Jan. 1, a top rate of 50 percent has applied to all estates over $2.5 million.

The new law simply restores the 53 percent and 55 percent top rates and applies them to the estate of anyone who has died since Jan. 1.

The suit argues the retroactive increase "is so harsh and oppressive that it deprives taxpayers of property without due process," violating the Fifth Amendment.

All estates worth less than $600,000 are exempt from the estate and gift tax and, generally, an estate of any size may be left tax-free to a surviving spouse. The taxable amount may be reduced by gifts made during the lifetime.

Dr. Jack Kevorkian listens in a Detroit courtroom Friday to Assistant Wayne County Prosecutor Tim Kenny make the state's case against him. Michigan passed a law recently banning assisted suicide.

Kevorkian patient: 'I want to end this'

DETROIT (AP) — Terminally ill Thomas Hyde, trembling in pain, told Dr. Jack Kevorkian, "I want to end this. I want to die," in a videotaped conversation a month before Kevorkian helped him commit suicide.

The 30-minute tape was played during Kevorkian's preliminary hearing Friday on a charge he broke Michigan's law banning assisted suicide. The hearing will continue Sept. 9.

The man known as "Dr. Death" signed autographs as he left the courtroom.

Kevorkian has admitted helping Hyde, who suffered from Lou Gehrig's disease, kill himself Aug. 4 on an island park in the Detroit River. The 30-year-old released a clamp that freed the flow of carbon monoxide to his face mask, placed over his mouth and nose by Kevorkian.

Hyde was the 17th person to die in Kevorkian's presence since 1990.

In the July 1 videotape presented by the defense, the gaunt, yellowed, 60-year-old man sat at a table in his apartment. His fiancée, Heidi Fernandez, was on one side and Kevorkian on the other. They discussed Hyde's debilitating condition and his painful muscle cramping.

"Having trouble swallowing, he wiped saliva from his chin."

"Do you have any reservations?" Kevorkian asked.

"Oh, no," said Hyde, who could barely speak, painfully and haltingly uttering only monosyllables.

"Is it your choice absolutely?" Kevorkian asked.

"Mine, mine," Hyde said, painstakingly motioning his hands to his chest.

"Tom is suffering so," Fernandez said, caressing Hyde's shoulder.

"He wants to be free — to be free of this body. His soul will be free."

'From watching the tape, does anyone doubt that the procedure is meticulously carried out?'

— Dr. Jack Kevorkian.

Kevorkian assured Hyde he could change his mind at any time. "You won't hurt our feelings a bit," he said.

He presented Hyde with a contract, affirming that Hyde was seeking Kevorkian's help of his own free will, to end his "interminable pain and/or suffering."

Hyde scrawled his name on the document. He and his fiancée broke into tears as they embraced.

The courtroom remained quiet but for the soft weeping of Fernandez, who sat in the front row with other Kevorkian supporters.

Right-to-life advocate Lynn Mills sat in the second row. She called the videotape "very sad."

"But I think there was life left in him," she said.

Kevorkian, 65, spoke with reporters during an impromptu news conference outside the courtroom.

"From watching the tape, does anyone doubt that the procedure is meticulously carried out? Or is that a loose cannon on that tape?" Kevorkian asked.

Before the hearing, Kevorkian's lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger, filed a motion to dismiss the charge against Kevorkian on grounds the assisted suicide ban is unconstitutional.

Prosecutors have until the September hearing to respond.

Under the law, which is under review by the Michigan Court of Appeals, helping someone commit suicide is punishable by up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine. The law took effect in February.

Experts back 2nd photo of Billy the Kid

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — It looks like famed Old West gunfighter Billy the Kid may not have been as camera-shy as once thought.

A second ancient photograph appears to match the face in the one known picture of outlaw William H. Bonney, who was hunted down and killed by Sheriff Pat Garrett in 1881.

A computer identification expert and a facial reconstruction anthropologist agreed that the image is probably genuine, the Albuquerque Journal reported Friday.

The established picture of Billy the Kid shows a slouched, slope-shouldered youth posing with a rifle, fitting his reputation as quick-drawing gunslinger and cattle rustler.

The owner of the second tintype, Ray John de Aragon of Las Vegas, N.M., said it was passed down from his great-grandmother, who according to family history was a medical woman who treated the fugitive and became his friend.

Thomas Kyle of Los Alamos, a former government intelligence specialist, said "his computer analysis of the two images shows combined facial and physical characteristics that would exist only once in 1.8 million people.

Kyle admitted his probability estimate was based on subjective criteria, but he said the photos show identical characteristics.

Western historian and Billy the Kid authority Robert Uley of Moose, Wyo., said unless someone can prove otherwise, he was ready to accept the portrait as genuine.

The Lincoln Heritage Trust, which owns the original Billy the

At left, this undated photograph shows what is thought to be famed gunlinger Billy the Kid near the age of 18. If the claim is verified, it would be only the second known image of the outlaw. The well-known tintype image of Billy the Kid is at right.

Kid photo, wants more testing before accepting or rejecting the picture, said director Bob Hart said.

The group that promotes historical, cultural and environmental preservation in Lincoln County, where Billy the Kid was a large-scale cattle rustler, began searching for other pictures in 1988.

"We didn't start this to prove we had the only photo of Billy the Kid," Hart said. "We started it in order to see if there are other photos of Billy the Kid."

The group has sent 24 photos, including de Aragon's, to Chicago analyst Lewis Sadler for identification through computer imaging.

De Aragon, 47, got the photo from his father as a 16th birthday gift. He said the tintype is in a safe-deposit box and he has no plans to sell it.

Kyle said he found close similarity in "circular-shaped ears with free swinging lobes," a long chin, a straight nose with unflared nostrils, the sloped shoulders, the long neck and the hands.

He also said he never expected to see Billy the Kid wearing a suit.

For further analysis, de Aragon enlisted Sharon Long of Laramie, Wyo., a facial reconstruction artist.

"The skull structure of the frontal bone is the same, as well as the jaw, the brow ridges, the projection of the ears, the shape of the lips, the cheek bones and the nose," Long said, adding she was 85 percent sure the photos showed the same person.

Chemical plant blast prompts evacuation

ELYRIA, Ohio (AP) — Fumes from a chemical plant explosion early Friday forced the evacuation of about 5,000 people overnight.

More than 40 were treated for breathing difficulties or other minor problems.

Fire burned for more than 8 hours after the first of at least two blasts at the Aztec Catalytic Co., which makes chemicals for the cosmetics industry. The blasts also caused nearby tanks containing sulfuric acid to leak.

The evacuation order wasn't lifted until late morning.

"It looked like fireworks at first," said Jeff Cooper, who was sitting on a patio near the plant. "I thought Iraq was bombing us."

At least 43 people were treated at hospitals for minor eye, throat and skin irritation or breathing difficulty. None of the injuries appeared serious, hospital officials said.

Plant manager Maynard Bender said up to 15 workers were inside the plant at the time of the first explosion shortly after midnight. None of them was injured, he said.

Authorities and witnesses said there was at least one other explosion, about a half-hour after the first. Bender said he did not know what caused the explosions and was not certain what chemical was released, but it was probably no worse than an irritant.

One cinder block building was demolished and another was heavily damaged, he said.

Fire department spokesman Dave Igneczi said the explosions caused a break in two sulfuric acid tanks about 50 feet from the building that blew up. The acid leaked into a concrete retaining area surrounding the tanks, he said.

"At this point there has been no release into the sewers or into any of the area ground water," Igneczi said.

Igneczi said he did not know how large the tanks were, but they were "substantial." Sulfuric acid is highly corrosive, and its fumes can irritate the eyes, nose and throat. Some of the problems people reported at hospitals could have been caused by acid fumes, he said.

Earlier, agency director Rich Roman said wind kept fumes close to the ground, adding, "You can taste, you can feel it."

Residents were evacuated from a mile-square area around the plant, located about 30 miles southwest of Cleveland. The Red Cross set up cots at a community college.

Civil rights marchers trickle into Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marchers young and old began trickling in Friday to celebrate the 30th anniversary march on Washington, billed as a transfer of civil rights power to a younger set of leaders.

But as college students groomed by civil rights groups held forums on the future of the movement, disgruntled urban activists pulled out of the event, calling it a party for middle-class blacks.

Today's march and rally are to commemorate the watershed 1963 march demanding voting rights and an end to official segregation. It is sponsored by the same civil rights and labor groups that staged the original march, where

Martin Luther King Jr. gave his famous "I Have a Dream" speech.

This time, the agenda is "Jobs, Justice and Peace," with issues ranging from preserving union jobs to changing federal drug sentencing laws and locating soldiers missing from the Vietnam War.

This agenda is advanced by a broad coalition that includes Hispanics, Asians, American Indians, women, gays, the disabled and the elderly.

While the original march drew about 200,000 people, organizers say this time they expect "tens of thousands" of marchers, likely well short of their initial goal of 250,000.

The National Park Service says it expects the march to be peaceful. Neither park police nor District of Columbia police have issued permits for counterdemonstrations.

Most of those coming into town for the march plan to make it a day trip, organizers said. Bus caravans were expected to come into town early Saturday, and most were leaving immediately after the march ends.

Some have questioned why another commemoration is being held.

"March for what?" asked Louvenia Wheeler, as she waited for a bus at Washington's Union Station with her two sons. "We're always marching, and nothing ever changes."

Prosecutors take Mafia approach to sheik case

Welder Brian Brady works in a hole at the World Trade Center in New York. Sheik Omar Abdel Rahman and 14 followers have been arraigned on charges of terrorist conspiracy.

The Washington Post

Justice Department officials plan to prosecute Sheik Omar Abdel Rahman as they would in an attempt to prove that his role as a Muslim spiritual leader included not only providing religious sanction for terrorist acts but also actual directives.

Like an organized crime prosecution, in which a boss seldom may be linked to the specific crimes of his lieutenants, the terrorism case prosecution will try to portray Abdel Rahman as a leader who rarely dirtied his hands with direct involvement in conspiracies allegedly executed by his followers.

But with skillful detachment, the blind-Egyptian-cleric-helped-shape-a-terrorist-enterprise spawned from his belief that the Egyptian government is illegitimate and his American ally morally wrong for supporting it, according to law enforcement sources and Middle East experts.

The cleric and 21 other Muslims in a confederation of extremists operating in the New York area are charged, in varying combinations, with the Feb. 26 bombing of the World Trade Center, an alleged plot to assassinate Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, a plot to blow up the United Nations and other New York City landmarks, and the 1990 murder of militant Zionist Rabbi Meir Kahane.

The suspects represent an ad hoc group of religious zealots who share an allegiance to the sheik.

Much of the government's case against Abdel Rahman will depend heavily on an accumulation of circumstantial evidence and whether prosecutors can convince a jury that vague comments, some in religious language, were actually specific orders. Prosecutors maintain that some of the sheik's comments, tape-recorded by a government informer, are detailed enough to be beyond dispute.

But defense attorneys plan to attack what they call the vagueness of such statements. The federal indictment, for example, says that Abdel Rahman "told a person known to the grand jury that while the bombing of the United Nations would not be impermissible, it should not be done at this time." But according to published accounts of the transcript of that conversation, the term "bombing" was never used, said Ronald L. Kirby, a defense attorney.

Among the other specific allegations concerning the sheik are that he instructed the informer to "proceed cautiously" with the plan to bomb a federal office building and "look for a plan to bomb the United States military." The indictment also says he presided over a meeting in which he discussed whether an informer was trying to thwart a plot to assassinate Egyptian President Mubarak.

Brian Jenkins, a terrorism expert with the international investigative firm of Kroll Associates, said conspiracy cases such as this often come down to the issue of "intellectual authorship as opposed to physical participation in the action." That has traditionally been a weak point that they have to get over in terms of prosecution.

The indictment, which was approved by Attorney General Janet Reno early this week, reverses an earlier Reno decision that there was insufficient evidence to indict the sheik. In the days following the June arrests of several U.N. plot suspects, U.S. attorneys in New York and FBI officials pressed Reno to charge Abdel Rahman. All along many officials believed the sheik clearly was a crucial link between the men charged in both the alleged U.N. bombing conspiracy and the trade center explosion.

At first, a law enforcement official said, Reno thought there was not enough evidence to link the cleric to the plots. "The decision in the first instance was a close call," the official said. "Reno basically said, 'Show me.'"

The evidence emerged over time as prosecutors read English transcriptions of more than 150 hours of tapes secretly recorded by an informer.

The tapes contained conversations between the informer and the sheik as well as between the informer and Sidiq Ibrahim Sidiq Ali, a key alleged conspirator, who discussed Abdel Rahman's knowledge of the U.N. plot.

Prosecutors also developed evidence against Abdel Rahman by revealing previous criminal cases involving some of his followers, particularly the trial of El Sayyid Nosir, who was acquitted in the Kahane killing but was imprisoned on weapons-related charges.

Officials also were concerned that their cases against Abdel Rahman's followers would be weakened if the sheik were not indicted. "The trial sooner or later would have centered around Rahman," one law enforcement source said. Leaving him unindicted "invites the jury to question to viability of the case. It becomes a case of 'Why isn't Mister Big on trial?'"

The government's case alleges a broad conspiracy of sedition in which Abdel Rahman and 14 others are charged with conspiring "to levy a war of urban terrorism against the United States, to oppose by force the authority of the United States and by force to prevent, hinder and delay the execution of laws of the United States," according to the indictment.

In prosecuting cases under the rarely used sedition law, the government must prove that two or more people "conspired to overthrow, put down or destroy ... the government of the United States or, by force to seize, take or possess" U.S. property.

The conspirators' decision, as alleged in the indictment, to blow up a federal building in New York City and kill FBI agents provided a building block for a charge of seditious conspiracy.

First for the alleged U.N. conspiracy and the bombing of the World Trade Center are expected to proceed separately. Seven suspects have been charged in the World Trade Center trial scheduled to begin Sept. 14. Abdel Rahman and 14 others charged in the 20-count U.N. indictment were arraigned Thursday and pleaded not guilty. No trial date has been set.

The government must forge new territory in prosecuting a group that is similar to more traditional criminal enterprises, but also is radically different from organizations it has encountered in the past, sources said.

"A terrorist organization fits nicely into the organized crime construct in that you have a lower echelon of actors carrying out the nitty-gritty, messy work such as making bombs, acquiring explosive materials and recruiting new members," said Victoria Toensing, a former deputy assistant attorney general and an expert on criminal prosecution.

Vegas on Potomac? D.C. mulls gaming

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who come to Washington to see where their money goes may wind up leaving more of it here — at a casino the city leaders have set their sights on building.

Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly is keen on converting part of the city's convention center into a casino, to squeeze more revenue from the 20 million annual tourists who already leave $4 billion in their wake.

By her notion, tourists who spend their days traipsing through the White House and Smithsonian, admiring the monuments and admonishing their congressmen, would welcome the chance to unwind at the cool green of a craps table or the spin of a roulette wheel.

District of Columbia officials recently visited New Orleans, which has also caught the gambling bug with plans for floating casino to add to the French Quarter's consumption of tourist dollars.

Kelly says she envisions a politically correct version of the high-stakes games. "The kind of gaming we are considering would be tame — more like Monaco — than Las Vegas or Atlantic City," the mayor said. "I think every option has to be pursued. We are up against the wall (financially)."

Kelly's plan would have the city politically correct version of the high-stakes games. "The kind of gaming we are considering would be tame — more like Monaco — than Las Vegas or Atlantic City," the mayor said. "I think every option has to be pursued. We are up against the wall (financially)."

build, own and operate a casino at the site of the current convention center. Officials want to use the proceeds to finance a larger convention center — at a cost of about $500 million — that would better suit the district for large conventions.

Opponents say the mayor is wearing rose-colored glasses. "We don't need gambling," said Terrence Lynch, of the Downtown Cluster of Congregations, an organization representing several churches.

"What we need to attract to this city more than a few hundred so-called high rollers are technology-based industries, growth industries and more jobs that teach people better skills than selling 'Twenty-one, blackjack,'" he said.

Others have questioned whether the idea might draw even an even worse criminal element into a city already known for two-armed bandits — and often characterized as the murder capital of the world.

Congress, which can veto action by the district government, may have the last say. Reaction so far has been lukewarm.

Rep. Thomas Bliley, R-Va., the ranking Republican on the House D.C. Committee, which oversees the city's budget, said he would not endorse the casino idea but wouldn't block it, either.

Guard will deactivate famed division

BOSTON (AP) — The nation's first and oldest Army National Guard division fought in two world wars and traces its history to the American Revolution battle with the British at Lexington.

Now, it's another victim of peace. The so-called Yankee Division will be deactivated today during a ceremony at Boston Common.

"We did our share," said veteran Albert Ballancourt, 74. "We proved it in World War I. We proved it in World War II. They're still doing away with it."

The division was created from units that patrolled the Massachusetts Bay Colony beginning in 1636, stood up to the British at Lexington and Concord, and fought at Gettysburg and on other battlefields of the Civil War.

It was the first U.S. division in combat during World War I and supplied troops for Gen. George S. Patton during the Battle of the Bulge in World War II. The division spent much of that war on tedious guard duty in the U.S. South, where the soldiers were known as "those damned Yankees."

The division's formal name is the 26th Yankee Infantry Division. Its 13,000 soldiers are to be reassigned; about 2,900 will be transferred to the 42nd Rainbow Infantry Division in Troy, N.Y.

"I hate to see it," said Don Abbott, 75, a National Guard member. "We never thought it would come to this."

The 26th was formed on Aug. 13, 1917, at the onset of American involvement in World War I, when the Army designated the numbers 26 to 75 to represent newly organized divisions of its National Guard.

"It was a great organization," Abbott said. "It was always prepared, even back in World War I. It was the first one that went over that was actually prepared for fighting."

The division and the 26th Army Band will be deactivated in a colorful, solemn ceremony with horse guards, howitzers and military reenactments.

They are being cut as part of the national reorganization of the post-Cold War military.

Col. Norman Welch, the 26th's senior full-time officer, said the idea is to go out with style.

"We're going to try to make a good thing out of a sad thing," Welch said Friday.

Soldiers and veterans of the division will honor lost comrades during a service at the Statehouse. Then the headquarters company will march across the street to the Common and the deactivation order will be read. The division's colors will be displayed and later placed in the Statehouse's hall of flags.

Fourteen full-time administrative personnel, who work at Camp Edwards in Bourne, will be moved to other posts. The surviving brigade in Massachusetts will be redesignated the 26th Yankee Infantry Brigade and will continue to wear the patch that carries the "Y-D" of the Yankee Division.

Those troops will be able to trace their military legacy to the beginnings of the nation, said Les White, 72, a World War II veteran of the 26th.

Report: General's father served in Nazi unit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The father of Gen. John Shalikashvili, President Clinton's nominee to command the nation's military, served in a Nazi Waffen SS unit that fought the U.S.-led allies in World War II, archival documents show.

According to his own writings, Dimitri Shalikashvili appears to have collaborated with the Nazis almost from the start of the war in hopes that the Germans would defeat the Soviets and thus free his native Georgia from communist rule. It was not immediately clear whether the White House knew details of the late Shalikashvili's wartime service when his son was nominated earlier this month to succeed Gen. Colin Powell as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. "It was certainly known that his father served in the German Army," an administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Friday.

In any case, said White House spokesman Ricki Seidman, "the record stands on its own and his father's history is not relevant."

Several members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, which must confirm Shalikashvili's nomination, reaffirmed their support for the four-star general who for the past year has served as commander of NATO.

"We don't think he should be judged on the basis of what his father did," agreed Rabbi Marvin Hier, director of the Nazi-hunting Simon Wiesenthal Center, which found the elder Shalikashvili's unpublished memoirs in the archives of Stanford University's Hoover Institution.

"But, Hier said, he was interested in investigating how Shalikashvili's father was able to enter the United States even though he had served in the notorious Waffen SS.

The Pentagon said Shalikashvili, who was in Washington and preparing to return to NATO headquarters in Brussels to resume his duties, did not want to comment.

Word of the documents' contents was first made public Friday by the newsletter Defense Daily.

Shalikashvili's father was born in Georgia but had moved to Poland and become a high-ranking officer in the Polish army by the time the Nazis invaded Poland in September 1939.

In his autobiography, which he started writing in 1956 and which was partly translated from Russian, by his wife in 1966, the elder Shalikashvili wrote of briefly being taken prisoner by the Germans and then released.

Shalikashvili

He remained in Warsaw with his wife, who had wealthy German relatives, and appears to have enjoyed a comfortable lifestyle in the midst of the war. The fact that he, alone with other descriptions in the book, indicates he was collaborating with the Nazi occupiers of Poland, said Hier.

In January 1943, Shalikashvili joined the Georgian Legion formed by Georgian expatriates to fight with the Nazis against the Soviets. He was almost immediately shipped off to Normandy where his cavalry remained until after the allied invasion in June 1944.

His unit was then sent to Italy and put under the command of the Waffen SS. "We wore our Waffen SS uniforms with the respective colors of our national formations," meaning, in his case, of the Georgian Legion, wrote Shalikashvili, who held the rank of major.

Some units of the Waffen SS, which was the most trusted arm of Adolf Hitler's army, committed the worst atrocities of the war but it was not clear whether Shalikashvili's unit was involved in any of them.

He was an ardent Georgian nationalist, but he doesn't seem to have been a Nazi by conviction," said Olga Dunlop, an archivist at the Hoover Institution who has read much of the collection donated by Shalikashvili's widow in 1980.

In 1944, concerned that the Soviets were advancing on Poland and would seek retribution against anti-communists, Shalikashvili moved his wife and three children from Warsaw to Berlin, where John went to school in 1944 and 1945.

John was born in 1936 and was 9 years old when the war ended.

Gen. John Shalikashvili

The newly appointed chairman of the joint Chiefs of Staff is also known as "Shall" because of the difficult pronunciation of his last name.

• Born: June 27, 1936, in Warsaw, Poland, the son of a Georgian army officer and grandson of a Czarist general.

• Childhood: Family led Soviet troops to Germany in 1944 and immigrated to the United States following World War II. They settled in Peoria, where young Shall learned English by watching John Wayne movies.

• Education: Bachelor's degree from Bradley University, master's degree (in international relations) from George Washington University, Speaks German and Polish.

• Military career: Drafted into the Army in 1958; received commission, 1959; Vietnam War veteran who advanced through the ranks to eventually command U.S. forces in NATO. Led Force Command, following the Persian Gulf War to aid and protect the Kurds in northern Iraq.

Norway king's wedding anniversary could spark regal romances

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Paparazzi, newspapers, save those pages. Cupid, get to work.

Most of Europe's unmarried princes and princesses will meet next week for a royal cruise on Norway's fjords.

A Dutch newspaper has dubbed the excursion a royal "Love Boat." The unwed bluebloods are attending 25th wedding anniversary celebrations for King Harald V and Queen Sonja on Sunday. Most will accompany their parents, the kings and queens of six monarchies.

But Norwegians, Britons, Dutch, Swedes and Danes will be keeping their eye on two related events: royal parties in Oslo this weekend and a three-day shipboard tour of the westen fjords that starts Monday. The tour will take place in two boats, the Norwegian king's yacht, Norge, and Denmark's royal Dannebrog.

"It's like it was made for royal romances," gushed the Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet.

"Ready for romance," cheered the Oslo newspaper Verdens Gang. "Seldom have so many young people from Europe's nobel houses been gathered."

Among the 14 young and single royals expected to join the celebrations are Great Britain's 29-year-old Prince Edward; Crown Prince Haakon, 20, and his sister Princess Martha Louise of Norway.

Also on the list: Denmark's 25-year-old Crown Prince Frederik and his brother Prince Joachim, 24; Sweden's Crown Princess Victoria, 16; Spain's princesses Elena, 29, and Cristina, 28; 23-year-old Prince Nicholas of Greece and his sister Princess Alexia, 28; and Crown Prince Willem-Alexander, 26, of the Netherlands, with his brothers, Johan Friso, 24, and Constantijn, 23.

The ships are too small for all 40 royals, so the younger generation will spend nights ashore at hotels while the elders on ship, on sightseeing excursions via buses and helicopters, or on hiking trips to glaciers.

Pre-arranged plans include a royal dinner on Saturday and a dance on Sunday, where Swedish newspapers say their 16-year-old Victoria will be the belle.

"Victoria now you have the chance to bring home a fitting prince," said the Express newspaper.

In Britain, newspapers strove to match up their Prince Edward, or Denmark's Prince Joachim, or the exiled Prince Nicholas of Greece with Norway's 21-year-old Princess Martha Louise. That tame despite reports she already has a steady boyfriend.

London's Daily Mail decided that Sweden's Crown Princess Victoria would be a perfect match for Norway's Crown Prince Haakon.

That match may not be in the stars, however. Both junior monarchs are expected to someday ascend the throne of their respective countries — union with Sweden in 1905, are not and Norwegians, who broke a hated, interested in another royal alliance.

Arnolds settle assault suit by photographer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roseanne and Tom Arnold agreed to pay $20,000 to a paparazzi who said Arnold beat him up and broke his camera equipment when he snapped the couple's picture at an airport.

A lawsuit filed by photographer Gary Aloian said he was taking pictures of the pair on Aug. 5, 1990, at Los Angeles International Airport when Arnold got him in a bear hug, punched him repeatedly in the back and broke his equipment.

Mrs. Arnold, according to the lawsuit, egged on her husband.

Arnold

Aloian said in court papers that he suffered extreme back pain and emotional damage and had trouble working because he feared another assault.

Arnold denied striking the photographer but admitted disabling his equipment. The Arnolds agreed to settle on Aug. 9, but it was not widely known until Friday.

Police investigate hijack plot of shipping heir

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Police searched Friday for masked gunmen suspected of plotting to kidnap Thierry Roussel, the father of 8-year-old shipping heiress Athena Onassis.

Police spokesman Capt. Eduardo Lourenco said four men were spotted Wednesday in a car outside Roussel's fruit farm in southern Portugal.

Lourenco gave no further details, but the Portuguese newspaper Diario de Noticias reported that the driver pointed a sawed-off shotgun at a farm employee and demanded to know when Roussel would be leaving the farm and in what vehicle.

An anonymous caller to the farm asked similar questions, about Roussel's schedule, the newspaper said. Police were called to escort Roussel to nearby Faro airport, where he boarded a flight back to his native France.

Roussel married Christina Onassis, the daughter of Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis, in 1984. The couple were divorced three years later and Christina died in 1988. Athena is the sole heiress of the Onassis fortune, estimated at $1.5 billion.

Di, sons leave Disney World for Bahamas

LYFORD CAY, Bahamas (AP) — After three days at Disney World, Princess Diana and her two young sons began a holiday at a secluded Bahamas resort.

The royal tourists were the guests Friday at the Lyford Cay home of the Menzies family, according to the British news agency the Press Association.

Lyford Cay is a peninsula-10 miles from Nassau.

"Yes, they arrived last night," said Cordell Thompson of the Ministry of Tourism. "It is a very private visit."

The princess is a close friend of Kate Menzies, who is vacationing with her.

On Thursday, the princess and her children finished up their visit to central Florida, stopping at a water attraction called Typhoon Lagoon and at the Magic Kingdom.

Michael Jackson returns to stage

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Cheering fans greeted Michael Jackson as he returned to the stage Friday after a reported illness.

He thanked the audience, but said nothing about allegations he molested a teen-age boy.

About 40,000 fans, who appeared mostly to sympathize with Jackson over the allegations, braved monsoon rains and traffic jams to reach National Stadium.

"I love you all. Heal the world," Jackson said to the cheering crowd before leaving the stage at the end of the concert.

Some fans sang "Happy Birthday to You" for Jackson, who turns 35 years old on Sunday. "I love you" and "Happy Birthday" were among the signs raised.

"I love Michael," said student Phamonwan Thammachanta, 18.

Of the child abuse allegation, she said: "I wholeheartedly believe it is not true. It's impossible. He loves children... If it is true it won't change my feelings about him."

Actress Elizabeth Taylor and Jackson's sister, pop singer Janet Jackson, were traveling Friday to join him and provide moral support after the allegations, said the promoter of his concerts in Thailand, Brian Marcar.

Both planned to meet the American pop star in Singapore, where he is to perform this weekend, Marcar said.

Jackson is scheduled to go to Singapore today. From there, he goes on to performances in Taiwan, Japan, Russia, Israel, Turkey and the Canary Islands.

Jackson performed in Bangkok Tuesday to kick off the latest leg of his "Dangerous" world tour, but postponed the second concert Wednesday and Thursday because of what his doctor said was acute dehydration.

41 years late, a Korean War veteran gets his due

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nick A. Flores cheated death during 23 harrowing months as a prisoner of war in Korea.

He survived a winter death march. He suffered months in solitary confinement. He attempted to escape three times, each a failure. He was tortured. His was a soldier's sacrifice, a hell on earth.

Flores endured, and finally came home in 1953.

Back in America, though, the Marine Corps corporal was to suffer again — this time at the hands of the government he had fought to defend.

He was denied an honorable discharge, refused a commendation and told to think "of all the things I have done for my country, it seems I didn't do my share."

Today, as a result of an extraordinary sequence of events, Flores is a decorated hero. The hard times, if not the easy ones, are gone.

Flores might have lived the rest of his life wondering where he'd gone wrong if not for the dogged research efforts of U.S. officials investigating POW-MIA issues. Knowing nothing of his story, the newspaper came upon the Flores file in the National Archives this year and realized he had been cheated.

Flores

honorable discharge but a Prisoner of War Medal as well. "I want to make amends," Boomer told Flores, 62, a slight man with a ready smile.

In Korea, surrounded by disease, despair and death, Flores did more than most people could imagine to defy the enemy, comfort his own and remain true to his country.

"I highly recommend this man for his courage and valor," Master Sgt. William R. Pettit, the senior officer in the POW camp where Flores was kept, wrote to his superiors on Dec. 10, 1953, four months after he and Flores were repatriated.

Flores is known here to give his clothes, food, tobacco ration, and to make moccasins from old boots and gave them to the men that had frozen feet (including myself) to wear," Pettit wrote of Flores' "exemplary conduct."

Yet when Flores returned home to San Jose, Calif., the Marine Corps denied him an honorable discharge. In some ways, it was a slap that hurt more than the weeks-long death march he endured in the snow-covered mountains of northern Korea or the months of solitary confinement he outlasted in POW camps.

Without an honorable discharge he was unable to get union wages. A carpenter by trade, he was unable to work regularly because of a back injury suffered in Korea. Yet the Veterans Administration refused to recognize the injury as service related.

"It has been 14 years of hell here in California since I got home," Flores wrote in a letter to his congressman in December 1965. "I didn't reach the breaking point in Korea with the torture and hell that the Chinese gave me, but I am getting close to it now."

In Korea he escaped his captors three times, was recaptured after each and survived severe punishments.

"He continually opposed the efforts of his captors to indoctrinate him and undermine his loyalty, and steadfastly maintained his allegiance to his country," said a citation proposed in 1954 to recognize his "meritorious conduct" as a POW.

Yet when he got home there was no official commendation. None other than the commandant of the Marine Corps proposed Flores for a Letter of Commendation, but it was turned down by the civilian leadership of the Navy Department.

"Insufficient evidence exists upon which to pass a decision," Albert Frait, the assistant Navy secretary, wrote in denying the award on March 18, 1955.

In 1967, after a further appeal by Flores, the commendation was granted but nothing was done about his discharge status.

Records in the Flores file show that when he was discharged in San Francisco on Oct. 5, 1953, he was given no credit for the time he spent in captivity.

The discharge system worked on a point system. Flores fell just short of the minimum for an honorable discharge.

Instead, his discharge score sheet has lines drawn through the box where he should have been awarded points for Korea.

Flores never saw the score sheet. "When you've been a POW you're happy just to be home and you don't question it," he said in a recent interview, no trace of bitterness or regret.

Flores, who joined the Marines at age 17 and was sent to Korea three years later, piled over the sea wall with the 1st Marine Division in the famous Inchon landing on Sept. 15, 1950. After landing again at Hamhung on Korea's eastern coast, the Marines in late November headed north toward the Changjin Reservoir, where bitter winter winds came howling off the roof of the world.

On the evening of Nov. 29, Flores' unit was overrun by Chinese a few miles from the village of Koto-ri and forced to surrender the next morning.

In early December, Flores says, he slipped away from the column of captured Marines as they marched in darkness through the snow, but he was quickly recaptured.

In June 1951 he tried his second escape. He and his buddy, Army Cpl. Thomas Cabello, of Adrian, Mich., were caught after four or five days and returned to the POW camp, known as Camp One, near the Yalu River, where Flores and others said almost no medical aid was available to the sick and injured. "Men just died. They got dysentery and died," Cabello recalled in an interview.

In his fateful third escape, Flores again teamed up with Cabello. Armed with maps, a compass and flashlight that Flores had stolen from Chinese officers, they and several other fellow captives got by their guard and headed for the mountains. After several days all had turned back except Flores and Cabello.

Eventually the two split up, and shortly afterward Flores was captured when he happened onto what he says was a Soviet anti-aircraft artillery emplacement.

Back in the POW camp, Flores was "hung out to dry" on a wood pole, then convicted of "crimes against the Chinese People's Army" and sentenced to 12 months solitary confinement. Ten months later the war ended and Flores was released. He weighed 87 pounds.

Maj. Gen. Randolph McCull Patte, the commanding general of the 1st Marine Division, was so impressed by stories that returning POWs told about Flores' acts of courage and loyalty that he asked to see Flores when he was released on Aug. 20, 1953. "He said he wanted to congratulate me for what I'd done," Flores said. "He told me, 'I'm sure you'll get one of the highest honors this country has to give.'"

Historic cotton mill on auction block

WASHINGTON, Utah (AP) — A Civil War-era cotton mill ordered built by Mormon pioneer leader Brigham Young went on the auction block Friday.

Years of struggling to keep the Old Cotton Mill open are coming to an end as hundreds of antique items, including the Cotton Mill itself, were up for sale.

"We hope to get the asking price of $585,000 out of the building and land," said Robert Bollinger, ring man for Auction America, Inc. "This is a great building."

Owner Norma Cannizarro turned over control of the property to her daughter when she was no longer able to handle the business. Cannizarro has owned the Mill for nearly a decade and has taken it through extensive restorations. But supporting the mill over the years has proved difficult.

The mill, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Sites, has been up for sale for more than a year, but there have been no takers.

Cannizarro approached Washington city officials for support of the historic site at one time and was turned down.

The mill, one of the first products of "colonization" in Southern Utah, was ordered built by Brigham Young in the mid-1860s. It was one of the country's major cotton producers during the Civil War when cotton from the nation's southern states became scarce, and drew settlers to the area.

Lawyers will appeal King beating sentence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The U.S. attorney's office said Friday it would appeal the 2½-year prison sentences given two police officers convicted of violating motorist Rodney King's civil rights in a 1991 videotaped beating.

U.S. Attorney Terree A. Bowers filed a notice of appeal with the U.S. District Court. The appeal will be heard by the 9th U.S. Court of Appeals, the Justice Department said in a statement in Washington, D.C.

Sgt. Stacey Koon and Officer Laurence Powell were convicted April 17 of violating King's civil rights during the 1991 beating that was videotaped by a witness and shown around the world.

On Aug. 4, U.S. District Court Judge John G. Davies sentenced them to 2½ years in prison and ordered them to surrender to federal prison officials by Sept. 27.

Davies could have sentenced Koon and Powell to up to 10 years in prison and $250,000 in fines, and federal sentencing guidelines called for a sentence of six to seven years. Instead, he said he was imposing lesser sentences in part because he thought King provoked the beating and because the two were good family men.

Davies criticized prosecutors for pursuing the federal trial after Koon, Powell, Officer Theodore Briseno and ex-Officer Timothy Wind were acquitted on most state assault charges in 1992. It was that verdict that set off a convulsion of rioting in which 54 people were killed, Briseno and Wind were acquitted at the federal trial.

Lawyers for Koon and Powell have appealed Davies' decision to deny them bail while they appeal their convictions.

Bowers had said after the sentences were handed down that Attorney General Janet Reno could get involved in the review. It wasn't immediately known whether Reno participated in the decision to appeal.

With good behavior, Koon, 42, and Powell, 30, could be out in just over two years.

King was clubbed, kicked and stomped March 3, 1991, after leading police on a chase that began when they tried to pull him over for speeding.

Judge to reject Utah law banning AIDS marriages

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge said he will strike down a Utah law prohibiting AIDS victims from marrying.

"This statute is clearly in violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act," U.S. District Judge Aldon Anderson said Thursday. "It is probably unconstitutional, too."

Two women with AIDS and their children sued last month for repeal of the never-enforced 1987 law invalidating marriage with a person who has the disease.

Earlier this month, Gov. Mike Leavitt argued the law was unconstitutional, but he wanted to settle the suit out of court. He offered to make sure the law was not enforced until January's legislative session when lawmakers could repeal it.

However, the judge wanted the law overturned immediately to protect their families from insurance companies who might refuse to pay insurance and retirement benefits.

Last week, the state sided with the women as Utah Solicitor General Carol Clavin filed motion asking a Utah law prohibiting AIDS victims from marrying.

"It's never been a case of the state dragging its feet on this," said Palmer DePaulis, spokesman for the Utah Attorney General's Office. "We just wanted to avoid going to court."

Neither plaintiff appeared in court Thursday.

Peggy Tingey had to take her son to the hospital. He has HIV and was running a fever. Tingey was diagnosed with AIDS after her marriage in 1989. She feared her child would be considered illegitimate under the law.

Plaintiff Cindy Kidd was with her family at Camp Heartland in Milwaukee, a special camp for children with AIDS-HIV.

Kidd, who contracted AIDS 10 years ago from a former boyfriend, feared her children would lose health care, insurance and Social Security benefits when she dies.

Accused Pocatello murderer could appear in court early next week

POCATELLO (AP) — If the POCATELLO (AP) — If the murderer could be processed in time, Wood would appear in 6th District Court Monday on charges that he kidnaped and murdered Jerilee Underwood, an 11-year-old Pocatello newspaper carrier.

Wood, 45, waived a preliminary hearing Friday as he would appear before Magistrate Boyd Wood. The session was held in the basement of the county jail, where Wood has been held without bond since being arrested last month and charged with the girl's slaying.

Wood said little other than to tell bargaining negotiations had taken place. But he said he would only

White he voluntarily waived his rights to the hearing. Bannock County Prosecutor Mark Hiedeman acknowledged during a news conference after the hearing that some plea bargaining negotiations had taken place. But he said he would only settle for a death sentence. "I don't intend to do anything less than pursue the death penalty," he said. Hiedeman said he plans to discuss any plea bargaining options with the Underwood family and the parents of the two girls Wood is alleged to have raped. The Underwoods haven't said whether they want the death penalty, he said.

"I think the feeling is they want the system to do the job," Hiedeman said.

Monte Whittier, Wood's public defender, said the prosecutor has "made it very clear to me that ... he's not going to give up the possibility of pursuing the death penalty." Whittier may seek to limit evidence and witnesses, he said.

Wood won't enter a plea at his arraignment, pending a review of up to a dozen motions Whittier intends to file. One of those, Whittier said, is moving the trial from Bannock County.

Moving the trial out of Pocatello is necessary because of the intense publicity surrounding the case and the need to find an impartial jury, he said.

But Hiedeman said he wants the trial to stay in Pocatello using jury members selected from the city. If any compromise is reached, attorneys agreed jury members might be selected from outside the county and sequestered during a Bannock County trial, which could take place in December or January.

Whittier said he recommended Wood waive the hearing due to the amount of evidence against him, though he said Wood's confession to police wasn't the primary reason. "If all the prosecution had was a confession, they couldn't convict him," he said.

Security was tight and police said threats have been made against Wood's life.

Wood faces a dozen criminal charges. Besides the Underwood charges, he also is charged with kidnapping and raping two other young Pocatello girls.

Jaraloe, a carrier for the Idaho State Journal, was snatched from a Pocatello street June 29 as he was collecting from customers. Her body was found eight days later along the Snake River at Idaho Falls, 50 miles north; the day after Wood was arrested.

Boise superintendent decides to retire

BOISE — With 17 years as superintendent of the Boise School District, Barney Parker has announced this will be his last as leader of the state's largest school system.

The 60-year-old career educator on Thursday made his announcement, the opening day of the school year. He will retire before his end, declining to lead the School Board to his contract.

"The most important ingredient to move forward is not found in the buzzwords of restructuring and reform, but in renewal, reneval in spirit and support from parents, patrons, students and the community," he said.

He said he worried about the increasingly political nature of School Board elections and opposition between interest groups.

Fight continues, minority leaders say

BOISE — Guys, woman and the poor continue to fight for equality, 30 years after a historic civil rights march at Washington, D.C., Idaho minority leaders say.

"Progress has been made since the march, but people need to realize that the success that came from it came from a lot of dissimilar groups working together toward a common goal," said Marilyn Shuler, executive director of the Idaho Human Rights Commission. "But there are still challenges ahead, and we need to pull together — all of us."

She will be one of the speakers at Saturday's 30th anniversary of the civil rights march on Washington, an event which attracted 250,000 people, the largest political gathering in this country's history.

The Saturday observance will be held at the Statehouse. It's sponsored by the Boise chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and will be the only event of its kind in the state.

Striking drivers shut down INEL buses

IDAHO FALLS — Hundreds of Idaho National Engineering Laboratory employees drove to work Friday as 28 EG&G Idaho Inc. bus drivers continued honoring the picket lines of striking firefighters.

Traffic was "bumper-to-bumper for 40 miles" on U.S. Highway 20 as employees who usually ride the bus made the hour-long commute to the U.S. Department of Energy installation west of Idaho Falls.

In a show of support for 35 striking EG&G firefighters, 43 bus drivers failed to show up for work Thursday. EG&G spokesman John Walsh said the number fell to 28 on Friday, but more people may have driven to work because they anticipated some bus routes would not be served.

"Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1517, which represents most of the site's 150 bus drivers, did not endorse the walkout, President Randy Olavsson said. Drivers acted on their own behalf."

Candidate backs test plan for salmon

LEWISTON — Drawing down Lower Granite Reservoir on the lower Snake River to help the ailing salmon runs should be tested, says Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mike Burkett.

"I think the old-fashioned drawdown is going to be at least part of the solution to save the salmon," he said Thursday in Lewiston. "The salmon are worth saving." Burkett, a Boise attorney and former state senator, said the test drawdown could be moved up to 1995. Parameters such as a limitation to two months or shorter should be placed on the test drawdown, he said. The drawdowns would create a stronger current through the reservoirs, guiding Idaho's threatened and endangered salmon through.

Crowd flock to Utah dinosaur park

OGDEN, Utah — Attendance at the new George S. Eccles Dinosaur Park is exceeding expectations, with an average of 1,083 visitors daily.

Since the park opened April 15, there have been 116,938 visitors through July 26, according to the parkway committee Chairman Robert Marquardt, the park is doing exactly what the city had hoped: providing more than enough revenue to operate and maintain the entire city-owned Ogden River Parkway.

Court upholds sentence

BOISE (AP) — More than 14 years after the contract killing of Nampa businessman Troy Vance, the Idaho Supreme Court has upheld the conviction of Robert Richard Jones for the slaying.

But just barely. The court divided 3-2 on Friday, with two justices saying a 1989 grand jury indictment should have been thrown out because improper testimony produced it.

Vance was found shot to death in his home in June of 1979. Two men were charged in 1980, but the complaint was dismissed two years later. In 1989, Jones' ex-wife, Sherry Wyszynski, told authorities she was present at meetings in which Jones and Jose Alphonso Martinez were offered up to $30,000 to kill Vance.

With that testimony, a grand jury indictment was obtained and a jury convicted Jones of first-degree murder. He was sentenced to life in prison with no possibility of parole.

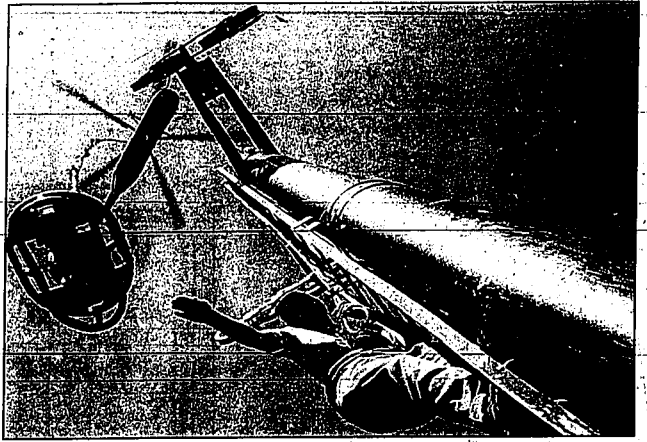

In a decision written by Chief Justice Charles McDevitt, the majority rejected Jones' challenge to the grand jury indictment, denial of his bid to move the trial out of Canyon County because of intense publicity about the case and testimony about a conspiracy to kill Vance.

The appeal said prosecutors allowed illegal, false and misleading testimony from Wyszynski which should not have been allowed because she was named to Jones at the time.

In other court decisions released Friday:

- The Supreme Court ruled that Debi Koester failed to show that work-related injuries caused her disability. She filed for benefits from the state Community Action Program, working as a home care provider at Potlatch.
- The Supreme Court also agreed with the Industrial Commission that Brent D. Hipwell was not entitled to workers' comp, retraining and other benefits from Challenger Pallet and Supply. Hipwell alleged he was disabled by a back injury.
- The Supreme Court rejected an appeal by Lorin Troy from his Kootenai County conviction for injury to children. He argued that certain statements were coerced from him by police. The Supreme Court held that considering the totality of the circumstances, Troy's statements were voluntary.

Coming down

Ryan Bekkerus of Minnesota reaches for a tether hook during disassembly Thursday of a ski lift in Lassen Volcanic National Park, about 50 miles east of Redding, Calif. The ski park could not afford to operate at a loss so the lift was sold to a ski resort in Detroit Lakes, Minn.

Parents want better school deal

ISLAND PARK (AP) — A 17-mile stretch of highway separates 8-year-old Kate Herron's home near Henry's Lake from the nearest school.

But because the Montana line also separates Kate's home from that school, she is among about 80 students who travel 47 miles the other direction each day to the nearest Idaho school in Ashton.

"It's a winter. Kate goes to school in the dark and comes home in the dark," said her mother, Gail Herron.

A number of families who live in Island Park and near Henry's Lake would rather send their children to school in West Yellowstone, Mont. It is closer and more convenient, and it's where the families bank and shop.

As more year-round families move to the Henry's Lake area and the student population grows, some are starting to question the $5,800 out-of-state tuition charged by West Yellowstone schools and the Fremont County School District's reluctance to help pay it.

"Unfortunately there's a state line between us," said West Yellowstone Superintendent John Hargrove, whose district serves about 250 students.

A handful of Henry's Lake children have gone to school in West Yellowstone over the years. Parents usually paid a couple hundred dollars tuition. But in 1985, the West Yellowstone School Board decided Idaho student tuition should be the actual amount spent to educate each child.

This year that was determined to be $5,800.

Several students who attended before the new policy still go to school in West Yellowstone and pay the smaller tuition — under a grandfather clause.

Some of the other Idaho families feel West Yellowstone wants to keep them out. But Hargrove insists his district is glad to take Idaho students if they can pay their way and not impose on Montana taxpayers.

"The issue is not a Montana problem," he said. "They should not be over here asking us."

Idaho law allows the Fremont School District to arrange a "border contract" with West Yellowstone. The state of Idaho could pay most of the tuition set by Montana, but the Fremont School District would have to pick-up part-of-the-tab-and-would lose revenue from the state that is apportioned based on the number of students who attend classes locally.

Border contracts are used in seven other Idaho districts and involve about 170 students who attend schools out of state. But at the Fremont District offices in St. Anthony, officials have been reluctant to open the door to West Yellowstone.

"Those people have legitimate concerns," Superintendent Gary Larsen said, but adds that his district offers good schools and runs a bus.

Andrus tells college heads to cut staff

LEWISTON (AP) — The presidents of Idaho's state universities should turn to the page listing administrators as they look to cut administrative costs, Gov. Cecil Andrus says.

"From what I read in the press, it appears that there is a hesitancy on the part of the institutions to say, 'Yes, administration includes the president's office, executive vice presidents and all the special assistants,'" Andrus said Thursday in Lewiston.

"It doesn't mean faculty and the classroom."

Earlier this year, Andrus asked the state Board of Education to detail possible administrative cost cuts to use in his budget request for the next fiscal year.

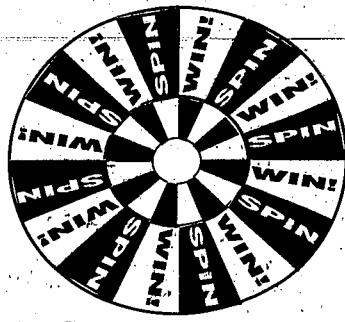

The board ordered the four-year schools to propose significant administrative cost reductions to transfer into teaching.

Board members meeting Thursday in Boise were satisfied by Idaho State University's and Lewis-Clark State College suggested reductions, but not by Boise State or Idaho.

Last April, Andrus pinpointed those two as the schools that need to trim their administrative expenses and ranks the most.

The state's schools have to come to grips with eliminating supervisors just like General Motors and others have been forced to do, Andrus said.

Murder suspect eludes law officers

By Stefano Esposito
Times-News writer

GOODING — Law officers know who was killed Wednesday night, but they're not sure of the name of their prime suspect.

The Gooding Police Department Friday identified the 48-year-old Gooding man found dead in his second-floor downtown apartment as Antonio Tamayo.

An autopsy revealed the cause of death was multiple stab wounds. Gooding County Coroner Dowell Demaray said Friday.

The police department and the Idaho Bureau of Investigation are searching for a 23-year-old Hispanic man, who they believe was alone with the victim in the apartment bedroom at the time of the stabbing.

Tamayo was found stabbed in the bedroom at 1213 Second Ave. E. by a friend who called police, said acting Chief Paul G. Brown. Tamayo died later Wednesday night at Gooding County Memorial Hospital.

Six people were in the apartment above a retail-merchandise store at the time of the stabbing, Brown said. However, four were apparently "socializing" and "listening to music," in a different room, and could not see events taking place in the bedroom, he said.

The victim and the man police are looking for were apparently roommates, Brown said.

"It (the apartment) was rented by the suspect, and then the victim had been staying with him for about two weeks," Brown said. Tamayo and his roommate had been living in Gooding for some time and both men had "agriculturally related" jobs.

When police arrived, the victim was the only person in the apartment. Four people were waiting outside, but the victim's roommate had fled, Brown said. Police are interviewing the roommate's acquaintances.

There remains some confusion as to the man's identity, Brown said.

"We've been in touch with immigration authorities," Brown said. "We had an alien registration number, and we've been told by immigration that it is a false number."

The suspect apparently had "false documents," Brown said.

From initial interrogation of the witnesses, the victim and his roommate were not known to be feuding.

"The witnesses that we talked to said they were unaware of any animosities or arguments," Brown said.

The dead man was a legal U.S. resident. He has a brother in southern California, Brown said. Family members in California will bury the body in Mexico.

Around the valley

Woman hurt after car struck by motor home

KIMBERLY — One woman was hospitalized Friday afternoon after her car was struck broadside by a motor home at the intersection of Kimberly Road and 3300 East Road.

The identity of the victim was not available Friday night.

She was southbound on 3300 East and either failed to stop at the intersection or did not yield to oncoming traffic, Lt. Dan Hall of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department said.

The motor home, headed east on Kimberly Road, struck the car in the passenger side.

The driver was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Her injuries did not appear to be life-threatening, Hall said.

"I think we would have had another fatal if there had been a passenger in the car," he said.

Deputies look into possibility of arson in fire near Hollister

HOLLISTER — A small grass fire near Hollister Friday evening may have been arson, according to the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

Investigators went to the scene of the blaze Friday evening. The fire may have begun in a roadside ditch and spread to nearby Bureau of Land Management property, Lt. Dan Hall said.

Fire crews were called to the scene shortly after 7 p.m. and quickly controlled the blaze, which did not threaten any buildings.

Boy, 16, admits to raping retarded woman, deputies say

FILER — A 16-year-old boy has admitted to investigators that he raped a 50-year-old retarded woman in her home near Filer.

The boy is in custody and charges of rape and committing an infamous crime against nature are pending, Sgt. Bob Gauthier of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department said.

Sometime during the night of Aug. 21 or the early morning of Aug. 22, the boy went into the woman's bedroom and raped her, Gauthier said. After the department began investigating the incident, the boy confessed to the attack Tuesday, he said.

Deputies did not identify the suspect. He and the victim know each other, Gauthier said.

Twin Falls man charged with molesting girl, 6

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man already serving a prison term for molesting a child has been charged with sexually abusing a 6-year-old girl.

Brian Lee "Butch" Atwell, 31, was brought from the Idaho State Penitentiary in Boise for his first appearance on a new charge.

Atwell is charged with touching the girl last year between July 1 and Nov. 30.

Court records show he pleaded guilty to a sexual abuse charge in 1987 and was sentenced to five years in prison. That sentence was suspended, however, and Atwell was placed on three years probation.

In November 1988, he violated his probation by failing to pay costs and being seen with a juvenile girl without other adult supervision.

He was sent to prison, then released on parole. Atwell was returned to prison in March 1993 for another violation. A preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 2.

Damaged cable cuts service to some Twin Falls homes

TWIN FALLS — A cut cable disconnected telephone service to as many as 300 Twin Falls homes Friday.

The cable was cut inside a manhole 750 Shoup Ave. early Friday morning, said Rick Hays, public relations director for US-West Communications in Boise.

Company repair workers spent all day Friday restoring service to customers, Hays said. Many people did not notice service was cut, he added.

Officials believe the cable disruption was accidental, but had not determined the exact cause Friday evening, Hays said.

Property owners share their gripes

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Property owners and property-rights activists pleaded for help Friday at a Republican congressional hearing, saying their rights to use their property as they see fit are being impaired by excessive environmental regulations and other government actions.

"The smell of egoism and the lust for total control permeates every dealing I've had with the federal government," said Custer County rancher Bob Piva.

Piva told U.S. Reps. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, and Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., that when the Forest Service's new grazing management plan for the Stanley Basin cut the number of cattle he was allowed to graze on public land by two-thirds, his ranch lost $400,000 in appraised value.

The hearing was one of a series being held around the nation on property-rights issues. Crapo co-chairs the House's Task Force on Private Property Rights, and Duncan chairs the House Republican Research Committee.

The two congressmen said they would develop legislation to restrict federal agencies from making rules or taking actions that affect the use or value of private property, such as requiring agencies to conduct "takings impact assessments."

The Fifth Amendment requires "just compensation" when private property is taken for public use — such as condemning a house to build a highway bypass.

But the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that in some cases, government actions that bar all productive use of a piece of property can be considered "takings," even when the property itself is not actually condemned.

It's a new, and still, somewhat nebulous concept, and property-rights activists, such as Trent Clark are trying to define it as broadly as possible. Clark, a former staffer for Republican Sen. Steve Symms, headed the Idaho office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service under President Bush.

New secretary of the Idaho Private Property Coalition and a spokesman for Monsanto in Soda Springs, Clark cited several examples of ordinary people who became enmeshed in regulatory bureaucracy — sometimes going to prison — as well as large companies or rich people who successfully pushed takings cases against the government.

"Your Fifth Amendment rights in this country are only good if you're wealthy," he concluded, saying the cost of suing the federal government is too high for most people.

The coalition — composed largely of agriculture and resource-industry groups — has been pushing for a state law to require agency assessments on actions that might affect private-property rights.

The Legislature has passed such a "regulatory takings" bill each of the last three years, but Gov. Cecil Andrus has vetoed it each time.

House Majority Leader Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, who sponsored this year's takings bill, said that when he was young, his father told him no one truly "owned" anything, because the government effectively had a prior lien on all property, and that he'd better get used to the idea.

"I told him he was full of bull, but the longer I live the more I think he was right," Newcomb said.

E911 board members reject bids for center

By Phil Sahn
and Stefano Esposito
Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS — Members of the regional E911 board have rejected both bids to build a system dispatch center after the bids came in almost $500,000 over the projected costs.

Architects had estimated the building costs at $700,000, but the bids came in between $1.2 million and $1.3 million. Rejecting the bids might delay the start on the building, officials said.

"I could not in good conscience recommend accepting the bids," Project Manager Al Sandner said Friday. They were just out of reason as far as I'm concerned."

The dispatch center, to be located in Jerome, is intended to provide improved emergency-dispatch service to Twin Falls, Jerome, Lincoln and Gooding Counties. Computer screens will show the dispatchers each caller's address and the proper agency to send.

Voters approved the system in November 1990 and are paying for it with a $1-per-month phone surcharge. The system will cost an estimated $2.5 million, including the building and equipment.

There's still a chance that construction on the dispatch center still might start in early September as planned, Sandner said.

He and the architects, Barrantone, Bates and Lee of Milwaukee, Ore., will talk with the two Boise companies that bid on the project to see where the cost differences lie.

If they can work out the cost differences, construction might start on time, Sandner said. If not, rebidding the project would take at least another month.

The architects were sticking by their original cost estimate, Sandner said. Sandner conjectured that the difference between the estimate and the bids might be in the building electrical system.

"It's not that big of a building, but the electrical system is complex," he said.

The building will total 4,400 square feet of usable space with 1,700 square feet for equipment.

'I want to get the building just as quick as possible, but I don't think it would be very wise to spend almost $400,000 to $500,000 more just to get on line. I think it will be delayed.'

Lincoln County Commissioner Clarence Tews, who serves on the project board of directors, said he'll accept a delay rather than accept bids that are too high.

"I want to get the building built just as quick as possible, but I don't think it would be very wise to spend almost $400,000 to $500,000 more just to get on line," Tews said. "I think it will be delayed."

Project officials had hoped to break ground on the dispatch center in early September, to have the four-county system running by next May.

If the dispatch center can be occupied by March, the region still can start in May, Sandner said.

Officials were disappointed that only two companies bid on the building and that no one from Twin Falls was among them. The area's construction boom might have kept some area companies from bidding, Sandner said.

"The main reason we were given was that most of them were too busy," he said.

One local building company confirmed that was one reason it did not bid. Anthony Keyes of Starr Corp. of Twin Falls said the company is busy, but company officials also were unsure they could win the contract.

Council member takes issue with chief's hiring

The Associated Press

SPRIT LAKE — A city councilman said he would not have voted to approve Mayor Paul Korman's choice for police chief had he known about the controversial officer's past.

Jeff Alexander on Monday succeeded former Chief Steve Durkin, who resigned amid accusations of abuse of power after five contentious years.

Korman said Thursday he was not concerned that Alexander has filed a tort claim against his former employer, the city of Ketchum, or about an inattentive driving charge stemming from a wrecked patrol car.

Alexander's appointment to the $41,000-a-year job was unanimously approved by the City Council, but Councilman Gene Clary said he would have voted differently had he known Alexander's history.

Korman said he relayed information to council members about Alexander's resignation and driving record, but did not mention the pending $1 million claim against Ketchum.

Alexander declined to comment on his role in the investigation that led to the controversial firing of a police chief and subsequent recall of three Ketchum council members.

Alexander last month was fined $150 and placed on six months' probation after pleading guilty to inattentive driving in his Ketchum patrol car.

Clary said he will watch Alexander closely during a six-month trial period.

Twin Falls sells every bond needed for water source project

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some local investors are apparently willing to put their money where their mouths are.

The city of Twin Falls sold all the revenue bonds for a water project on Thursday and Friday. Money from the bonds will pay for changing the city's water source from Alpheus Spring to an underground source to comply with federal laws.

The city sold all $2.805 million of the bonds to the investment house of Piper Jaffrey Inc. Piper Jaffrey's Seattle office turned around and resold most of the bonds, according to the company.

Rather than go to insurance companies, pension funds and other large institutional investors, 30 percent of the bonds were bought by individual investors, many of them Magic Valley residents, said Dave McAlindin, Twin Falls economic development director.

The city was fortunate to issue the bonds when interest rates are at a 25-year low, which means the investors won't get rich.

Alternative school opens its doors

By Jody Hinton
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — City Hall will be transformed by Sept. 1 into the new Blaine County Alternative School for 20 "at-risk" students.

An unexpected problem with improperly removed lead paint at the old site forced the school officials to arrange for a new home for the school just weeks before its doors are scheduled to open.

The new school site was approved by the School Board, and the lease agreement is awaiting approval by district's attorney, Rand Peebles. Hailey's city administration is moving to the newly acquired Fox Building.

The school will cater to "at-risk" students — those who have had some kind of personal or academic difficulty. Backers of the school say they want to put students back on track to graduation or an equivalency certificate.

Judge will rule on waste compromise

BOISE (AP) — A federal judge here has been asked to formally approve a compromise between the state and federal government that will allow up to 19 more shipments of federal nuclear waste into Idaho but stop more waste from coming into the state.

Andrus

The compromise was reached earlier between Gov. Cecil Andrus and Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary and John Dalton, secretary of the Navy, to end a long-running battle over federal shipments of nuclear waste to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Although the agreement might not be signed for a few days, Andrus said it's just a formality. "All we're doing is working out the language," the governor said. He said he reached verbal agreement with the other officials Thursday on what the agreement would cover.

On June 28, U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan ruled for the state, holding that the Energy Department couldn't make more shipments of radioactive waste to INEL until it completed a full environmental impact study. Officials say that could take two years.

Andrus and the other officials agreed to a 70 percent reduction in the 64 shipments that were scheduled to go to INEL. In exchange, the governor agreed that up to 19 shipments can be made, mainly of nuclear waste from Navy ships or from shipyards, to meet national security considerations.

The federal government also agreed not to appeal Ryan's ruling. The deadline for filing an appeal was Friday, but federal attorneys were given a 30-day extension of that deadline.

It also will allow Ryan more time to study details of the stipulation filed with him Thursday afternoon.

The stipulation also includes an agreement that the government won't ask Congress to overrule Ryan "or attempt to modify the court's decision or the agreement without Idaho's consent."

The agreement also commits the federal government to moving nuclear waste stored temporarily in building 603 at the Chemical Processing Plant at INEL to the Fuel Storage Area of building 666.

Additional shipments of military nuclear waste into Idaho are permitted under the agreement only if the federal government can show "that national security is threatened by the inability of the U.S. Naval Nuclear Propulsion Program to transport shipments of spent nuclear fuel to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory" and the state has the right to approve such shipments.

The agreement requires the federal government to issue a plan for its environmental impact study by November, issue a draft report by the end of June and to issue a final environmental impact report on or before April 30, 1995.

The agreement allows up to nine containers of spent fuel from atomic-powered Navy ships and facilities, including five from the USS Enterprise, two from submarines and two from the Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory in New York state.

Up to eight shipments are allowed from the Charleston Naval Shipyard, South Carolina and Mare Island Shipyard, San Francisco "in conjunction with the cessation of nuclear operations at those shipyards."

The agreement allows two other shipments from submarines, without saying where they come from, for national security reasons.

Twin Falls police looking for man

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Sheriff's investigators are looking for a man suspected of bilking a Twin Falls County woman in a carpet-cleaning scam.

Lopez

On Aug. 17, the man went to the home of a 79-year-old woman east of town. Lopez said he had been sent to shampoo her carpets, according to a written statement by Twin Falls County Sheriff's investigator Dan Mort.

Once inside, the man used the woman's petroleum jelly and tools to perform minor repairs on her vacuum cleaner, and charged her $179. Mort said in the statement. The man asked the woman to leave the "pay to the order of" line on the check blank.

Police are looking for a man named Johnny Lopez, 48. Lopez is 5 feet, 11 inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. He has brown eyes and a mustache. Lopez was last seen driving a gold or tan Oldsmobile with Washington license plates.

Local authorities are working with Spokane, Wash. officials to find a similar id. Lopez has an criminal record of fraud in Oregon and Montana, he said. Mort, added that Lopez may still be in the area.

Anyone with information regarding similar fraud attempts of who knows the whereabouts of Lopez can call Mort or Staff Sgt. Bob Gauthier at 736-4169.

White House bans logging in sensitive Washington area

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration has temporarily banned logging in sensitive old-growth forests and around streams in eastern Oregon and eastern Washington until it adopts a permanent policy for the area, Forest Service officials said Friday.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Jim Lyons was expected to formally announce the interim program, which could lead to as much as a 50 percent reduction in timber harvests on the east side, the Spokesman-Review newspaper reported Friday in Spokane, Wash.

Environmental leaders said they were encouraged that the administration was taking steps to protect eastern forests after initially leaving them out of a plan to protect western forests.

"The situation has been so grim here for so long that I think any movement by the Forest Service is welcome," said John Osborn of the Inland Empire Public Lands Council in Spokane.

Timber industry and labor leaders immediately criticized the plan, saying it would cost thousands of jobs.

"It sounds to me like they have decided to spoon feed the environmentalists, while watching timber workers starve," said Mark Rey, vice president of the American Forest and Paper Association in Washington, D.C.

Mike Draper of the Western Council of Industrial Workers in Portland, Ore., said Clinton has become "Pinochio" by lying to timber workers about his forest protection efforts.

The president promised he would develop a federal forest management plan that would protect wood products-related workers, Draper said. "Today his nose grows again."

John Lowe, the Forest Service's regional chief in Portland, Ore., said in a statement Friday that the interim policy involves a screening process that requires special review of timber sales, where they might:

- reduce the amount of old-growth timber
- impact wildlife habitat associated with old-growth timber
- affect riparian habitat that is important to fish, especially endangered species

"We believe these actions will preserve our options while we review new information," Lowe said.

"This is the best way to reduce the risk of new species being listed as threatened or endangered under the Endangered Species Act and give us more flexibility to continue some timber sales, which we recognize are badly needed," he said.

Clinton announced a plan last month to protect old-growth forests and streams in western Oregon and western Washington, home of the threatened northern spotted owl.

"This proposal is expected to result in logging cutbacks to as little as one-fourth the level of the 1980s on federal lands west of the Cascade Mountains.

It did not specifically address the east-side forests, although scientists prepared the strategy on the belief that east-side harvests in Oregon and Washington would fall to about 524-million board feet a year.

Those lands produced more than a billion board feet annually on average from 1980-89, and 969 million board feet annually from 1990-92.

The Spokesman-Review reported that the Clinton policy actually went into effect on an interim basis on Aug. 18.

The timber harvests will be subject to "significant reduction — up to 25 or 50 percent," said Tim Rogan of the U.S. Forest Service.

The newspaper said logging is prohibited within 300 feet of fish-bearing streams, 150 feet of year-round streams without fish and 100 feet of intermittent streams. Harvesting also is prohibited where old growth is scarce or below its level of 100 years ago.

Spokane rewards well-behaved cruisers

SPOKANE (AP) — The teen-agers who cruised the streets in the film "American Graffiti" never had it so good.

To reward good behavior by kids who cruised this city's downtown this summer, police officers and their families planned to dish out free soda pop and hot dogs both Friday night and tonight.

The activities were planned downtown along Riverside Avenue, where teens gather in their cars on weekend nights to see and be seen.

"I believe a lot of youngsters are under the impression that all officers do is arrest people," said Gordon Grant, an officer in Spokane's DARE drug education program. "The street party is a way to improve relations with the kids that frequent the downtown corridor."

Grant said the party would feature a display of dozens of custom street hot rods and a radio disc jockey broadcasting live from the scene.

Police also planned a contest for the best cars and trucks seen cruising the strip.

In recent years, police have worked to reduce the impact of cruising on downtown businesses rather than trying to ban it, he said.

"The parties are a good way to reach out to teens, Grant said. "I call them the 'gray area,'" he said. "They are teens between 16 and 20, and for most of them, there is nothing in Spokane to do."

"Cars are something the kids are part of," Grant said police hope to make the celebrations annual events.

Bank teller provides lead in theft case

TWIN FALLS — A quick-thinking Twin Falls bank teller may have provided law enforcement with a lead in last week's theft of high-quality meat near Oakley.

Several cases of t-bones, filet mignon and other expensive cuts of beef and pork worth more than $1,200 were taken from a pickup Tuesday when the owner left to fix flat tires. The thief tried to sell meat. The teller had read about the theft in The Times-News and became suspicious. Sgt. Bob Gauthier of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department said.

The woman invited the men into the bank, where security cameras videotaped them, and one man cashed a check, Gauthier said. A teller also was able to write down the men's license plate number. Although the two men are not believed to have taken the meat from the pickup, they may be connected to the people who did, Gauthier said.

Wendell recycling center open today

WENDELL — The Recycling Center will be open today from 9:00 a.m. to noon. The center is located at the west end of F Avenue West.

Bunn's True Value Hardware will now recycle cardboard at the center. Bunn's joins the Wendell Elementary School cafeteria in this effort. Both are major sources of cardboard from shipping boxes containing hardware and food respectively.

Grace Koehler's fifth grade class will man the center this time.

Court rules equipment is illegal

By Steve Koehler Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A 5th District magistrate judge has told the city of Wendell that light bars and sirens on its police cars aren't legal, and the police chief isn't sure how to rectify the situation.

Chief Stuart Lumpkin told the City Council at a recent meeting that Police Chief Stuart Lumpkin had ruled that light bars and sirens on police cars have to be certified. Lumpkin said the judge ruled the light bars have to be visible from a certain distance and the sirens have to be of a certain decibel rating.

But the chief said he knows of no one who can certify the equipment. "There is one crime called 'fleeing and eluding a police officer,'" Nelson suggested that the Idaho State Police might help.

"The two hand-held radars that we have are now illegal," Lumpkin said. "We cannot use them anymore. They do not have the audible tone on them, so therefore the judge will not accept any readings off of those radar guns."

The council authorized Lumpkin to buy new radar units through Montana, because that's the least expensive equipment available.

Wendell council OKs hiring of Spanish-speaking translator

By Steve Koehler Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The city of Wendell selected a volunteer interpreter who translates Spanish for the police department.

At a recent meeting, the City Council voted to hire Carmen Ashley on an on-call basis and to authorize Police Chief Stuart Lumpkin to call upon her when he needs to communicate with Hispanics.

"We're running into more Hispanics now that supposedly don't speak English," Lumpkin said.

At the urging of City Attorney Lynn Nelson, the council agreed to pay Ashley, despite the reluctance of several council members.

"The Hispanics should pay her, really," Councilwoman Connie Bjorn said.

"If we went to Mexico we'd be expected to talk Mexican," Council President Mike Weitzstein said.

But Mayor George Benson disagreed.

"The ones you're dealing with don't have any money," Councilman Dale Bunn supported paying Ashley, but said Lumpkin and his officers should develop some Spanish-language skills.

"I think you boys ought to take some night classes or something — learn that stuff," he said.

Lumpkin said the College of Southern Idaho officers Spanish classes.

"We can do that too," he said. "Lumpkin said he has also used Richard Simerly of Wendell as an interpreter, but Nelson said Ashley was the better choice."

"Carmen Ashley is certified to be an interpreter in the court system," he said. "Richard Simerly is not and never will be. We have some expertise when using her anyway."

"If you get into a real legal situation be sure and want to call her," Benson said.

The city will pay only 2.7 percent interest to the bondholders in 1994.

By comparison, the Consumer Price Index — the current inflation rate — is 3 percent nationally and 3.1 percent in Idaho, according to state economist Tony Jones. In essence, the buyer's of Twin Falls' water bonds will lose money initially.

But the bonds are tax-free investments and their interest rate will climb to 5.25 percent in the year 2008, when the bonds are due.

The city has an "A" rating from Moody's Investor Service Inc., making the bonds rather secure investments.

The average interest rate over the life of the bonds is 4.94 percent, which McAlindin said is low enough to make the city happy.

The city needed the money to change its water supply system to comply with the Safe Drinking Water Act. The act requires that cities get their drinking water from below-ground sources.

Twin Falls gets its water from the Alpebus Spring, which is above ground. Money from the bond issue will pay for construction in November of a new water system that taps into underground water.

The school is also developing an advisory board, including some people who have been involved in starting the Alternative School.

School policy, as explained by Levy, will require commitments from parents as well as students. Meetings of parents, students and Levy will be scheduled every three weeks to evaluate the students' problems and progress.

Devine and Levy said the need for the Alternative School is so great that they expect a waiting list of students wanting to attend.

"The program for each student will be highly individualized, Levy said.

"I would say our goal is to give each and every student the success they need to do whatever they want," Devine said.

By John J. Harberth
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Two Rupert women and a Paul woman have been named to the Minidoka Memorial Hospital board.

Fern Poter and Elvira Richan, both of Rupert, and Margaret Hunt of Paul will serve for three years.

The three were appointed Friday, in a special Minidoka County commissioners meeting, held to discuss issues left over Monday's regular meeting.

Among those issues:
• Dog pound: Commissioner John Rensberg gave an update on the ongoing discussions concerning the new dog pound.

A panel of city and county officials and local residents met recently to discuss concerns and alternative locations to the proposed site at the sewer plant.

After hearing concerns by local residents were heard, the panel is considering increased insulation.

building a garage to transfer the animals and moving the building about 100 feet away from nearby homes.

The final proposal will be presented at a public hearing before approval.

"Time is of the essence," since the current pound will close Oct. 7, Rensberg said. Cassia County has agreed to help in the interim.

• Landfill fees: The commissioners discussed a proposed $60-a-year fee to help pay for the cost of the regional landfill.

A fee charged at the gate hasn't been determined yet.

The current fee is $40. The increase would bring Minidoka County in line with Cassia County, which already has a $60 fee.

• Indigent burial: Commissioner Norman Seibold said an ordinary burial costs $1,100, and a cremation cost $755.

The commissioners discussed adopting a policy that would only cover burials made within the county.

Timber official claims LaRocco wilderness proposal won't work

BOISE (AP) — Congressman Larry LaRocco's wilderness plan for northern and western Idaho offers little hope of ending longstanding battles over roadless lands, a timber industry representative testified Friday.

Joe Hinson, executive vice president of the Intermountain Forest Industry Association, said in testimony prepared for a public hearing that the Idaho Democrat's bill "will be of no help in restoring the Forest Service's timber sale program to an adequate, yet sustainable level."

Hinson said LaRocco's bill lacks the kind of "flexible" language that would smooth the way for timber development in non-wilderness areas of national forests in the 1st Congressional District.

While the Forest Service already has "a blueprint for entering roadless areas in the absence of statutory language," what's needed is "language that would expedite that process and which would foreclose some of the arguments against timber sales."

Under consideration are 4.3 million acres of a statewide total of some 9.3 million roadless acres. Congress already has designated as wilderness 4 million acres of Idaho's 21 million acres of national forests.

LaRocco's bill, introduced March 31, would protect 1.2 million acres as wilderness and another 558,000 acres as special management areas.

After field hearings on the plan Thursday in Lewiston and Friday in Boise, the congressman said Rep. Bruce Vento, D-Minn., chairman of the House National Parks and Public Lands Subcommittee, probably would schedule a Washington, D.C., hearing in October.

LaRocco, who is working with Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus and the three Republican members of Idaho's congressional delegation on a unified wilderness proposal, said he still hopes to get his own bill through the House this year.

But Hinson said Friday that the bill's special management provisions are filled with ambiguities that amount to "lawyer bait," he said. The language would result in "mass confusion among the professional land managers and unbridled greed within the legal profession."

While applauding LaRocco's efforts to end the longstanding wilderness impasse, Hinson said the timber industry was skeptical of the political feasibility of the bill.

"We may all find that the wilderness issue in Idaho is, in fact, as resolved as it will be for the foreseeable future," he said.

But representatives of the Idaho Conservation League, The Wilderness Society and other environmental groups praised LaRocco's efforts while recommending that he add some specific areas to those recommended for protection and amend management guidelines for others.

Among their proposals was that LaRocco drop release language aimed at ensuring roadless land not be used for special management is available for logging and other uses.

The Wilderness Society's Craig Gelrke and Mike Medberry of the Idaho Conservation League said national forest management plans were enough to ensure timber availability on those lands. But Hinson said the congressional release was needed to ensure future management plans did not restrict access to timber acreage made available as wilderness is designated.

LaRocco joked that Hinson and Gelrke should step outside and settle their differences, then come to him with an agreement.

"I realize Congress has to make these decisions," he said. "I just want to have some light at the end of the tunnel that's not a freight train."

Several speakers, including local law enforcement officers and Cassia School District Assistant Superintendent Jerry Doggett, are scheduled to speak.

A dance will be held at the square at 9 p.m.

The teen group currently has 23 members and is looking for adult volunteers to help.

Bus-motorcycle collision injures 1

BURLEY — A minor injury resulted Thursday when a Cassia County school bus and motorcycle collided Thursday afternoon in Burley.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, the only person on the bus was driver Aundrea L. Watson, 27, of Burley. Deputies said Watson made a left turn onto West 16th Street from Overland Avenue into the path of the motorcycle, driven by Jason T. Hatch, 19, Heyburn.

Hatch complained of minor injuries, but deputies said he wasn't taken to a hospital.

The motorcycle sustained an estimated $1,000 damage; the bus about $200.

Deputies said Watson was cited for failure to yield, and Hatch was cited for driving while suspended.

Outbreak sickens 6, closes restaurant

SEATTLE (AP) — A Sizzler restaurant was closed Friday after health authorities confirmed six cases of E. coli poisoning in five women and a child who ate there.

The precise food source of the E. coli bacteria was not immediately identified. The Seattle-King County Health Department, state Health Department and federal Food and Drug Administration were investigating.

None of the six who fell ill was hospitalized and all were recovering, health authorities said. Five were women between the ages of 18 and 62 while the sixth was a 5-year-old boy. One woman and the child were from Snohomish County, the other four women were from King County. They were not identified.

The six ate at the Northgate Sizzler between Aug. 14 and Aug. 18, said Carl Osaki of the Seattle-King County Health Department.

Health officials conducted extensive interviews Friday, trying to identify a food consumed by all six, Osaki said.

Laboratory tests on food samples taken from the restaurant will take about a week to complete, he added.

Food inspectors were searching for a source of cross-contamination, such as a knife used to cut both raw meat and fresh fruit and vegetables, he said.

The restaurant will remain closed at least through the weekend, Osaki said. No problems were reported at any other Sizzler restaurants in Washington.

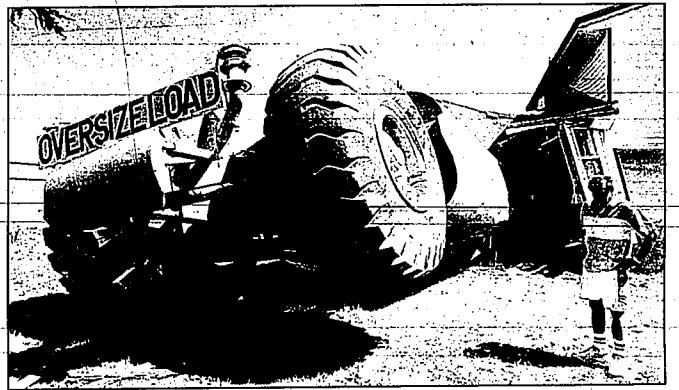

E. coli contamination linked to cantaloupe sickened patrons at a Sizzler restaurant in Corvallis, Ore., in early August. A total of 11 people were confirmed to have the infection and 18 more were presumed to have it.

Last March, an E. coli outbreak was reported at a Sizzler in Grants Pass, Ore., and one in North Bend, Ore. In the earlier outbreak, authorities said all of those who became ill had eaten mayonnaise, although no contaminated mayonnaise was found.

The E. coli bacterium O157:H7, identified in the Northgate Sizzler case, was blamed for three deaths and some 500 illnesses last winter in Washington. Two of those deaths and most of the illnesses were linked to contaminated and undercooked hamburgers served at Jack in the Box restaurants.

A common symptom of E. coli infection is bloody diarrhea. It can also lead to hemolytic-uremic syndrome, a potentially deadly complication that affects the kidneys.

The bacteria are spread through fecal contamination. In previous outbreaks around the country, hamburgers, roast beef, drinking water, raw milk, apple cider and mayonnaise were linked to transmission of the bacteria.

A plain-clothes Utah Highway Patrol officer checks out the damage Friday after an empty water truck rammed into a Kearns residence, pushing the house off its foundation and trapping three people. All three were rescued, and one was hospitalized as a precaution.

Runaway truck demolishes house

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A 64,000 pound water truck rammed into a house in Kearns on Friday, lifting it from its foundation and leaving three people trapped inside.

Firefighters rescued the 66-year-old homeowner, Donald Quinn, and his 13-year-old granddaughter, Jennifer Glenn, from the roof because the doors were blocked by debris.

Another granddaughter, Heather Glenn, 11, escaped through a window.

Quinn was treated at the scene for chest pains and taken to a local hospital as a precaution because he has had a history of heart trouble.

"I've never seen anything quite like it," said Sheriff's Deputy Jim Potter. "You might say the house was totaled. The truck is literally inside the house. They will have to take it down piece by piece."

The truck had been rented shortly before the 11:30 a.m. mishap. Potter said there was no water in it at the time.

Witnesses said the truck was headed east on 6200 South near 5000 West when it went to the shoulder of the road, hit a road sign, drove through a field and then hit the house.

Capt. Russ Westwood of the Salt Lake County Fire Department said the driver of the truck, Byron A. Young, 62, Salt Lake City, told him the brakes were failing so he turned into the field to slow down.

Potter said the truck was traveling about 20 miles an hour when it hit the house on Lobelia Drive.

After the truck came to rest, Young had to crawl through piles of debris and insulation to get out.

Potter said Young was uninjured, but was not properly licensed to operate such a large machine.

Shalala says Utah's program a good 1

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala says Washington could learn a lot from Utah's welfare reform project.

Shalala was in Kearns Friday to meet with local officials and learn more about the Single Parent Employment Demonstration Project.

"It's not easy and anything we can learn from the experience of Utah and what you've done will help with what we need to do with our own programs," Shalala said.

The project has been in place for more than a year and required a complicated approval process from federal and state officials. It encourages single parents to acquire job training and then jobs rather than stay on welfare programs.

Shalala said the Utah project could help federal officials learn how to interface federal and state resources "to make them all fit together."

About 25 women from the group JEDI—Justice and Economic Dignity and Independence for women, protested at the Kearns Office of Family Support Services is headquartered. Some women have complained that the program is inflexible and forces women into low-paying jobs. Friday's protesters held signs that read "A low-paying job isn't better than no paying job."

Stacey Later, a single mother of three, is a nursing student and said sometimes she feels pressure to take a job rather than finish her schooling.

"They're making it hard for the participants to get through and they'll just end up on the system later on down the road," she said.

Nevertheless, Shalala said she liked what she saw in Utah and said the Clinton administration wants to move people from being dependent to being independent and the Utah program could help.

Mace closes Salt Lake school

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Officials closed a west-side junior high school Friday after three students flooded the ventilation system with pepper mace.

Assistant Salt Lake County Fire Chief Max Berry said more than 100 students were treated for burning eyes and throats, chest pains and vomiting after the incident at noon on Friday.

"It was mayhem when we arrived," he said. "Students were running out of the school screaming and throwing up."

More than 50 students and teachers were taken to area hospitals, but most were treated and released. Berry said symptoms from mace usually disappear after about an hour. People with secondary health problems such as diabetes, asthma or recent bouts with the flu were hardest hit.

Principal Paul Hansen said the students responsible for the prank were apprehended and most were cited and turned over to the Salt Lake County sheriff.

Religion

Freedom of choice shouldn't exclude religion

Caring beyond self strengthens one's identity

Mom probably could have saved herself a lot of trouble if she'd just gone ahead and had Dick and Bob as twins. I mean, my older brothers were always together anyway. For as long as I can remember, it was never just "Dick" or "Bob," but always "Dick and Bob." Sort of like "Stanley and Livingston." Or "Lewis and Clark." Or perhaps even more appropriately, "Laurel and Hardy."

One day when Dick was in the fifth grade and Bob was in third, they were playing in a sandlot baseball game. Bob was the smallest and youngest player on either side, so naturally they stuck him out in right field — deep right field. Dick, on the other hand, played first base because of weight, because Dick always played first base.

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

But when Dick and Bob's team ran out to take the field late in the game, a sixth-grader new to the neighborhood walked up to Dick and informed him that he was taking over at first. Dick, a sweet and gentle boy by nature, tried to ignore him. The sixth-grader, showed a head taller and probably 30 pounds heavier than Dick, told him to move ... or else. Dick suggested (politely, I'm sure) that he take a flying leap. Angriely, the hulking older boy pushed Dick out of the way, then shoved him to the ground.

Bob had been creeping in from right field since the first sign of conflict, and he was on the older boy's back in an instant. While the stunned sixth-grader whirled around trying to get his hands on his attacker, Dick wiggled himself around the would-be first baseman's knees. Within seconds, they had him down on the ground and pleading for mercy. As the newcomer hurried from the ball field, his nose bled and his ego in shreds, little Bob, bravely, stood up, held his hand, and "Remember — if you want to fight one of us, you have to fight both of us!"

It didn't take the neighborhood kids long to learn that lesson. Which is not to say that my brothers terrorized the block on anything like that. I mean, Dick is an accountant, for Pete's sake. That skrimish, which, as far as I know, may have been the only altercation either of them was ever involved in, wasn't about domination, intimidation or control. It was about loyalty, and unity. And being willing to stand up for what's right even when you're not the one being wronged.

Funny, isn't it, how those concepts, once so clear-cut and well-defined, become muddled by the ebb and flow of time? Children seem to understand them naturally, perhaps because they are more reliant upon others for their safety and happiness. But as we become more competent, capable and — not coincidentally — independent, community-oriented traits and characteristics seem to become less relevant in a world that values individual conquest above group accomplishment, and where "all for one and one for all" has been replaced by "what's in it for me?"

Take loyalty, for example. There is a time when there are few, higher accomplishments you could pay a person than to call them "loyal." Brave warriors were knighted for it, duels for fought for it, business was conducted through it and passions were subdued because of it. You could always count on your spouse and your friends to be loyal — to be there for you, no matter what. And if your employer considered you a loyal employee, you probably had a job for life.

Loyalty's value has slipped a little, hasn't it. Conventional wisdom holds that a loyal spouse is one who is always on time with the alimony and child support; a loyal friend is one who decides not to press for a mental anguish award when he sues you after stumbling over your daughter's roller skates; and a loyal employer is one who gives you a little advance notice that the pink slip is coming.

Thankfully, I don't think things are actually that bad — at least, not yet. But there's no question that the cultural narcissism of the past couple of decades has left society with a little "I trouble. Don't get me wrong — I'm not advocating a philosophy that places the group above the individual. But I do believe we're missing something important if we're not incorporating group values as part of our approach to strengthening the individual.

You find something special within when you lose yourself in others. Loyalty to something greater than "me — a car, a faith, a family, a community — depends on one's sense of self." It means your life matters to someone or something else. It means you belong.

And who knows? Someday, it might also mean that you get to play first base.

My son entered first grade this week. As I watched him get excited about what to wear and rearrange his lunch box for the fifth time, I couldn't help but share in his excitement. First grade — what an adventure! Life is quite an adventure!

If I am to believe the popular culture and society of today, my children have nothing to worry about. Tomorrow will be much better than yesterday and today because people are opening their minds, broadening their horizons, becoming more tolerant and accepting of all lifestyles and behaviors. Freedom to choose and express yourself however you want is your right! No longer will mankind be restricted or limited by the boundaries of morality or ethics. There are no absolutes, no right or wrong.

If we believe this is true, we have bought a lie. We have been deceived. It's amazing that the former Soviet Union, which for years tried to rid itself of any influence of Christianity, has since recognized what a mistake that was. Now it is open to Christianity and even uses the Bible as a textbook in its schools!

Yet in the United States of America, a teacher can't let a closed Bible sit on his desk without a lawsuit. A graduating student cannot pray at a ceremony. A church may not display a Nativity scene at Christmas for the public.

What has happened? Why has our country changed so much?

Because people have taken their eyes off of the one who created everything. They have taken their eyes off of the one who died so that sinful man might have life. Mankind has gotten so full of itself that there is no room for God. People's hearts have hardened against God.

About Andy Morris

Andy Morris is the minister at the First Christian Church in Gooding, where he has served for 24 years. He was raised in the Magic Valley area and graduated from Valley High School in Hazelton. He received a bachelor of arts in ministerial degree from the Boise Bible College and worked as an admissions counselor for the college for two years. He pastored at the Milwaukee Christian Church in Milwaukee, Ore., for 5 1/2 years before coming to Gooding. He and his wife, Debbie, have two sons, Joshua and Caleb, and live in Gooding.

God's word and abide by it, then we can make our way through the darkness. The lies of today will be exposed by the truth of God's word. (Ephesians 4:17-5:20)

Tragically, it has happened before. In Ephesians, Paul wrote, "They are darkened in their understanding and separated from the life of God because of the ignorance that is in them due to the hardening of their hearts. Having lost all sensitivity, they have given themselves over to sensuality so as to indulge in every kind of impurity with a continual lust for more." (Ephesians 4:18-19)

In spite of all this, I have hope for my children. If mankind will turn to the truth of

Helén Cannon keeps busy with her work

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Helen Cannon's name fits her: she's 80 years old and still bursting with energy.

Cannon runs a CPA practice, writes songs for record companies and tends to her church work. She has little spare time, and that's how she likes it.

"I'm workaholic," she said, "always have been."

Even when it wasn't in vogue for a woman to wear the title.

"I've worked in accounting since 1930, and I've been a licensed CPA since 1955," Cannon said. Along the way, she and her husband, Glen, a retired schoolteacher, managed to raise two children (who have since given them six grandchildren).

"I've done a man's work all my life in one way or another," Cannon said. "I hired help in the home when I needed to, and I worked out of my home while the children were in school."

She attributes her ability to "have it all" before anyone had even coined the term — to a supportive husband (52 years worth) and her Christian faith.

"I owe my way of life to the church," she said. "I've always been involved in a church — always."

By the time she was 15, Cannon was teaching Sunday school in a Universalist church near her childhood home in Iowa. When she moved to Twin Falls in the early '50s, she attended the Christian church with friends.

"One Sunday, the minister preached a sermon on the seven stages of heaven and hell, and I didn't believe with rural Fire District 5. He also is pastor of Trinity Baptist Church.

Crater says he's not the first Christian clergyman to have a weekday job, but this particular combination is unusual, Crater acknowledges.

"I guess ministers are supposed to wear shirts and ties, and here I am in a sweaty (firefighter's outfit)," he grins. "It's a good feeling."

Crater, 42, started with the Burbank Fire Department as a volunteer chaplain in 1983 about the same time he was completing his seminary schooling and starting to preach at Trinity Baptist.

In 1985, then-Chief Dave Hare persuaded Crater to become a full-fledged volunteer firefighter. The department hired him for a paying job in 1988.

His congregation "never expressed any displeasure" about his two-pronged career until he hired on full time at the fire department. Then some worried that he wouldn't have time for them.

"It probably was a harder adjustment for them," Crater said.

MIKE BALSBURY/The Times-News

Since retirement, Helen Cannon has had 11 songs published, and the 12th is currently being recorded.

"I found that the Methodists had changed since my childhood," she said. "They used to preach a lot of hell's fire and brimstone."

Satisfied that the Methodists had settled down, Cannon cast her lot with them. For the past 33 years, she's been treasurer at the First United Methodist Church. This year, she stepped down to assistant treasurer — but she has no intention of completely retiring from any of her financial enterprises.

Once on staff with McMullen & McPhee, Cannon now works on a home computer and handles 12 sets of books each month.

Staffing at the cries of sexual discrimination in the workplace, Cannon said she's had no trouble being a woman in a man's world.

"I think all of the hoopla about discrimination is in the imaginations of the people involved," she said. "Being a woman has helped me, because a man will pay bills to a woman a lot faster."

In 1989, when Cannon retired from McMullen & McPhee, she bought herself a new organ. The chords and rhythm are hooked into the left hand, she explained, making it possible for her to play the instrument even though she has two artificial hips and two artificial knees.

That day she bought the organ, she got up in the middle of the night and wrote a love song to her husband.

Since then, Cannon has had 11 songs published, and the 12th one is currently being recorded by Hilltop Records on an album entitled "America." Its called "The Greatest of These is Love," with lyrics adapted from the I Corinthians. 13 Love chapter of the Bible.

Other Christian songs to Cannon's credit include "The Gift of Love" and "Don't Be Afraid." She's also written love songs entitled "Lilting Melody" and "May I?"

Cannon always intended to be a professional musician, having studied piano and voice for 12 years each as a child. But she graduated from high school in 1930 and soon faced the harsh realities of the Great Depression.

These days, Cannon's back on track musically, though her music has never hit the airwaves running. She doesn't make much money on it either, and most of the records that contain her songs must be ordered through the mail.

But, next month, a friend will deliver Cannon's latest single to radio stations around the valley, and Cannon hopes to tune in and hear a familiar melody one day soon.

Meanwhile, she's having no trouble keeping busy.

Cannon has been a member of Synoptistist for more than 30 years. Occasionally, she's taught business courses at college level. And she's listed in "Who's Who in Finance and Industry."

On Mother's Day this year, her church held a Helen Cannon Day, complete with reception and plaque. The background music was one of her most popular songs, "Heroes of Everyday Life."

Pastor-firefighter battles blazes, sin to save lives

The Associated Press

BURBANK, Wash. — Monday through Friday, Bob Crater stands by, ready to save lives.

Sundays, he works on pastor of Trinity Baptist Church.

Crater says he's not the first Christian clergyman to have a weekday job, but this particular combination is unusual, Crater acknowledges.

"I guess ministers are supposed to wear shirts and ties, and here I am in a sweaty (firefighter's outfit)," he grins. "It's a good feeling."

Crater, 42, started with the Burbank Fire Department as a volunteer chaplain in 1983 about the same time he was completing his seminary schooling and starting to preach at Trinity Baptist.

In 1985, then-Chief Dave Hare persuaded Crater to become a full-fledged volunteer firefighter. The department hired him for a paying job in 1988.

Crater stepped down from the Trinity pulpit in 1991 to concentrate on pursuing an associate degree in fire science. However, he continued to preach as a substitute pastor at various Southern Baptist churches in the interim. Once the pastorate at Trinity opened three months ago, his old congregation called him back.

For everything there is a season, the Bible says. For Crater, that means there's a time to fight fires and a time to fight brimstone.

He said he takes pains to keep the two sides of his life separate.

"I can't be down here being a minister," Crater said. "I'm a professional firefighter down here. When I go outside the building, I see life in a more spiritual way."

Besides, at a rescue scene "You really don't have a whole bunch of time to worry about spiritual things," he said. Crater and his colleagues literally are involved in life-or-death struggles.

The spiritual questions arise later, he said. "You get to thinking about where they were at."

Being a clergyman helps him deal with the aftermath of tragic accidents, like the Easter car crash south of Wallula that took the life of a Walla Walla family. Crater, who was

Book detailing Mormon ceremonies upsets officials

The Associated Press

PHOENIX — When Deborah Laake was married, her Mormon groom pulled her through a bedsheets veil in a symbolic representation of the way he would later bring her into the afterlife.

When she got a civil divorce nine months later, she learned it would last only until death, when she would rejoin her husband in eternal union.

And when she wrote a best-selling book about these and other experiences as a budding feminist in a male-dominated Phoenix-based journalist said in a recent interview, "It's pretty remarkable for people to hate you so much because you write your story."

The book, which has caused a stir in Mormon circles here and in Salt Lake City, is "Secret Ceremonies: A Mormon Woman's Intimate Diary of Marriage and Beyond."

In it, the 39-year-old Laake recalls her youthful devotion to her faith, then reveals secret church rituals and the penalties for breaking their vow of silence.

She explores her life as student, wife and divorcee in a religion where only men are entrusted with the priesthood — a pipeline to God.

Laake

"This book talks about genuine social ills that pervade the church," said Laake, whose two other marriages also ended in divorce and who had two stays in psychiatric hospitals after attempting suicide. "I wrote it to help people who have problems."

Church spokesman Don LeFevre said from Salt Lake City that the book "misrepresents the purpose of our most sacred beliefs."

"Secret Ceremonies" has been on The New York Times best-seller list for weeks. Laake said she didn't think it would be particularly successful and denied writing it for financial gain.

Laake writes of secret marriage rites in which she learned secret handshakes, was given a code name by which her husband would recognize her in the afterlife, was anointed with oil and was equipped with a neck-to-knees undergarment that would protect her from the devil.

LeFevre said Laake doesn't speak for most Mormon women.

"For every Deborah Laake in the church, there are many thousands who have had the opposite experience — for whom their church memberships and marriages have been beautiful and positive experiences," he said. "My wife certainly does not feel like she is ignored."

Church program honors woman

JEROME — Katie Babcock, 18, daughter of James and Janet Babcock of Jerome, has earned the Young Womanhood Recognition Award through the Young Women's program of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

To earn the award, Katie completed four 20-hour projects that reflected Christ-like values. The young women organize and design experiences (projects) to help them understand the values of faith, divine nature, individual worth, knowledge, choice and accountability, good works and integrity.

The award culminates Katie's six years of activity in the Young Women's program. It was presented to her during sacrament meeting at the Jerome 1st Ward on Aug. 21.

Church schedules outdoor service

KIMBERLY — The Redeemer Lutheran Church has planned an outdoor worship service for Sunday.

The service will begin at 10:30 a.m. at the Magic Mountain Ski Lodge. A potluck lunch will follow. Drinks will be provided. Bring table service. The public is invited.

No regular services will be held at the church this Sunday.

Guest will speak at Christian Center

TWIN FALLS — Pastor Tracy Hansen will be the guest speaker at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the Christian Center, 181 Morrison St.

Hansen and his wife, Connie, are former residents of Twin Falls and were involved in ministry at the Christian Center before moving to Texas. They are currently involved with Keith Green and The Last Days Ministries. Hansen is the pastor at the Community Christian Fellowship in Lindale, Texas.

Worship will take place at bandshell

TWIN FALLS — A fifth Sunday worship celebration is set for 6 p.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls City Park bandshell.

Speakers include Randy Davis of the Evangelical Free Church in Jerome and Jim Somers of the Christian Center. Ray Doane of the First Nazarene Church and Ted Britan of the First Assembly of God Church, all in Twin Falls. Music will be provided by the Pentecostals of Magic Valley and other local talent.

The public is invited. In the event of inclement weather, the service will be held at the Christian Center, 181 Morrison St.

The celebration was planned by the Area Pastor's Fellowship and several Magic Valley churches.

Church to conduct Sunday sing-along

JEROME — The First Church of God, 131 E. Ave. F, will host a fifth Sunday community sing-along beginning at 6:30 p.m. Sunday.

"Paul and Shias," a duo from Twin Falls featuring Lyle Arnold and Steve McMullin, will be the guest musicians, playing old-time favorites on the piano and organ. Arnold and McMullin will also lead a sing-along.

The 1993 Vacation Bible Camp kids will sing about camp memories, and Woolfer the Dog will give words of wisdom from the scriptures. Heidi and Spring Pearson will sing "Excuses," and the Church of God Men's Choir will sing and whistle several hymns. Homemade pie will be served after the program, and Arnold will entertain with gospel and school songs during the social hour.

The public is invited. For more information, call Helen Meyers at 324-3562 or the church at 324-2777.

Women's group sets Thursday meeting

JEROME — The United Methodist Women have planned a general meeting for 2 p.m. Thursday at the United Methodist Church, 211 S. Buchanan.

Special guest speakers will be Walt and Betty Kopper, who will share experiences of volunteer work at the Red Bird Mission in Kentucky.

All women are invited to the free meeting.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thomason, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Gender influences roles of spouses

Knights-Ridder News Service

PHILADELPHIA — C.B. Cook in many ways fits the image of the dutiful clergy spouse.

The pastor's significant other works faithfully in the nursery during services, washes dishes in fellowship hall kitchen and brings homemade rolls and pies to church suppers.

But C.B. Cook is no typical clergy wife.

The "C.B." stands for Charles Barry.

Cook, a Center City banker, is among a growing number of men who find themselves charting new terrain as clergy husbands.

"When it comes to the clergy spouse being male, there is a lot more having to feel one's way," said Peggy L. Shriver, a staff associate for professional church leadership for the National Council of Churches. "The same is true with the congregation. They don't know what they should feel free to call on him for."

The result for many clergy husbands is a kind of freedom that the wives of clergy — often treated as unpaid church employees — have traditionally not known. For example, Cook cooks because that's what he wants to do, not because that is what is expected of him.

Such latitude is one of several ways that sex influences the expectations, perceptions and perspectives of clergy spouses, according to a 1993 study for the Trinity Church Foundation titled "Healthy Church, Wounded Healers: Their Families and Their Ministers" and a 1986 survey of 250 clergy husbands by the Alban Institute.

For male spouses, expectations are fluid, roles are varied and, at home, child care is more of a shared responsibility, the studies say. In these families, each spouse's career is likely to be given equal priority.

For wives of clergy, the Sunday-school-teaching, organ-playing, women's-society-leading, all-around-volunteer straitjacket is not as tight as it once was, experts say, but many women are still expected to make parts of it fit.

In 1992, 5,996 women were preparing for ordination in the nation's seminaries, up more than 450 percent from 1,077 in 1972, according to a study on ministers being conducted by the Educational Testing Service in Princeton.

Cook, whose wife, Alice, is pastor of the Newtown United Methodist Church, in Bucks County, Pa., near here, has been a clergy spouse for eight years. He said he jumps in wherever he's needed, says, but many women are just grateful when he does anything, "his wife said."

Missionaries

The following Magic Valley-area residents have been called to serve or returned from serving missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

• Elder Barton Lloyd Hamilton, son of David and Bonnie Hamilton of Jerome, will serve for two years in the Nebraska Omaha Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 9 a.m. Sunday at the Jerome 5th Ward chapel, 520 N. Lincoln, and will enter the Mission Training Center in Provo, Utah, Sept. 22. Hamilton graduated from Jerome High School in 1992, where he was student body president, a member of the National Honor Society and active in sports. He attended the Mesa Community College in Mesa, Ariz., for one year.

• Elder Eric A. Gibby, son of Eward and Paula Gibby of Kimberly, will serve for two years in the Louisiana Baton Rouge Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at the Kimberly 2nd Ward chapel on Birch and Adams streets and will enter the MTC Sept. 8. An open house is planned for 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Gibby residence, 506 Gem Drive. Gibby graduated from Kimberly High School in 1992 and has been employed in Twin Falls.

• Sister Janet Waldron, daughter of DuLell and Rexine Waldron of Twin Falls, will serve for 18 months in the Minnesota Minneapolis Mission. She will speak in sacrament meeting at 10:40 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 4th Ward chapel, 824 Caswell Ave. W., and will enter the MTC Sept. 22. Waldron graduated with honors from Twin Falls High School in 1990, where she was active in music and participated in regional, state and national business competitions during her junior and senior years. She attended Ricks College in Rexburg on an academic scholarship and graduated with an associate of arts and sciences degree in 1992. She also attended Utah State University in Logan during the 1992-93 school year as a business major studying human resource management.

• Elder Jeremy Poulsen, son of Jerry and Corie Poulsen of Twin Falls, recently returned from serving two years in the Hawaii Honolulu Mission. He will report on his mission at 1 p.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 2nd Ward chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard. Poulsen graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1990 and attended the College of Southern Idaho for one year before his mission. He plans to work for Poulsen Construction and continue his education in January.

• Elder William E. Tootson and Sister Elaine Tootson of Twin Falls have returned from serving one year at the LDS Visitor's Center in Washington, D.C. They will report on their mission at 9 a.m. Sunday the Twin Falls 13th Ward chapel on Maurice Street.

Pope Mania: A twist on teen rebellion?

Los Angeles Times

It was dubbed Pope Mania, a Catholic Woodstock or Vatican City 90210.

This month's meeting of teens and parents in Denver's mile-high altitude was equal parts media madhouse, spiritual odyssey and weekend party. It was also, according to some observers, a bizarre chapter in the venerable tradition of teen-age rebellion.

"This, too, is the gathering of a counterculture," wrote Philip F. Lawler, editor of Catholic World Report, about World Youth Day in a recent commentary. "And many of these teen-agers will return from the Rockies with plans as subversive as those of their parents' generation."

Except that this time, the social pendulum swings in another direction. And John Paul II could become to the modern rebels what John Paul George Ringo was to the old.

By car, van and bus they came — searching for answers, praying for inspiration and struggling to hang onto their Catholic identity.

"Popeseck" baffles some adults, especially those schooled in the rebelliousness of the 1960s. High school and college-age kids are supposed to be questioning authority and rejecting religion, they say, so what are tens of thousands of young people doing hanging out with a pope?

Believe it or not, says Lawler, they're doing the same thing their parents did: a generation gap. They're looking for answers besides the ones they're getting in schools, the media and society at large: "The baby-boom generation rebelled against the church big-time. Children are now seeing a set of answers that their parents rejected, but that they haven't had a chance to reject."

World conference under way after rough start

Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — Planning the 1993 Parliament of the World's Religions may not have been a leap of faith, but it was a long stretch.

It began five years ago as the brainstorm of a dozen Chicago Bahais, Buddhists, Hindus and Zoroastrians. They enlisted a few Christians in their effort to reprise the 1893 World's Parliament of Religions, which was held in Chicago in conjunction with the world's fair.

After five years of fits and starts, during which they lost their donated office space and then reorganized with fresh fundings, the planners are about to realize their vision of a centennial celebration and a call to unity among religions in today's turbulent times.

The parliament opens today at the Palmer House Hilton hotel with a procession of participants from around the world in the traditional attire of faiths from Christian to Buddhist to American Indian to Muslim.

It ends Sept. 4 with the Dalai Lama, a Nobel Peace Prize winner and exiled Tibetan Buddhist leader, addressing a 6 p.m. session at the Petrillo Music Shell in Grant Park.

In between, 600 speeches, symposiums, films, exhibits and live performances will include beliefs ranging from mainstream Christianity to Eastern religions to neo-paganism, humanism and witchcraft.

Parliament organizers closed registrations this week, saying their suggested cap of 3,500 had been nearly doubled. Evangelical Christians seemed to be the only Americans to come.

America's established Judeo-Christian community reluctant to participate.

Some attendees will bring specific messages, while others will have less formal responses, said the Rev. David Ranage, president of McCormick Theological Seminary and chairman of the organizing council. "We hope that there are enough common assumptions among us that we can stand together in looking to the future."

Church slowly wades into Russian politics

The Washington Post

MOSCOW — As reformists, reactionaries, nationalists and democrats brawl over Russia's political future, one of its few nationwide institutions, the Orthodox Church, keeps an official silence.

But this year, the church's right-wing faction, which promotes nationalistic and often xenophobic and antisemitic themes, has begun to take a role in politics.

As an institution, the church is only slowly re-entering public life after decades of Soviet repression and remains distracted from politics by its own poverty and internal divisions. But there are signs that the church could be politically influential, and several times among Orthodox scholars interviewed here say only Russia's nationalist right wing is exploiting that potential.

Polls have suggested that as many as 50 million Russians, about 1 in 3, label themselves Orthodox believers. And since 1990, repeated sociological surveys have found that the Orthodox Church and the army are the institutions that enjoy the greatest public confidence, said Yakov Krotov, a religious scholar who covers the church for the Moscow daily Sevodnya.

Still, Andrei Kurayev, a priest who is dean of theology and philosophy at the church's Orthodox University in Moscow, said he believes no more than 10 percent of those who call themselves Orthodox are "devout believers." And it is unclear just who in the church may hold the loyalties of Russians who express confidence in it. "Is it the church as an institution, or local priests or high-ranking clerics?" asked Krotov.

Whatever the church's political potential, it is far right-wing proponents of Russian nationalism and isolationism who have been the first to exploit it.

"The radical right believes that Russian Orthodoxy can be used as an ideological basis for isolationism," Krotov said.

For 70 years, the Soviet state forced the church to abandon any public role. But, in exchange for promises of tolerance — and, according to allegations in the Russian press, cooperation with the KGB — the Kremlin allowed the church to continue religious ritual within its sanctuaries.

When former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev began lifting restrictions on religion in 1988, many Russians flocked into the church's sanctuaries in a mixture of devotion and curiosity that leveled off within a few years.

The church is distracted in part by its poverty, Kurayev said. It is struggling to rehabilitate even a fraction of the often dilapidated places of worship seized long ago by the Soviet state and now being returned.

The church also is preoccupied with internal divisions. The senior cleric in Ukraine has led congregations away to form a church independent of the authority of the patriarch in Moscow. The New York-based Russian Orthodox Church Outside-Russia claims the loyalty of some parishes in Russia, accusing the Moscow hierarchy of having failed to atone for its decades of accommodation with the Soviet state.

Utah Valley, North Idaho grab CSI Invitational leads; CSI meets Cardinals today

By Mike Muller
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Utah Valley State College and North Idaho College took the early lead in the CSI Volleyball Invitational round robin tournament Friday.
Both schools ran up 3-0 marks in the first day. They meet today at 3 p.m. College of Southern Idaho fell 15-11, 15-8, 15-1 to UVSC in the day's final match to drop to 3-1. The Golden Eagles play North Idaho at 11 a.m. and Casper, Wyo., at 5 p.m.

'We made so many unforced errors.'
— Ben Coach

“We played too many matches for the first day,” said CSI Coach Ben Stroud. “We just kind of ran out of energy, emotionally as well as physically.”

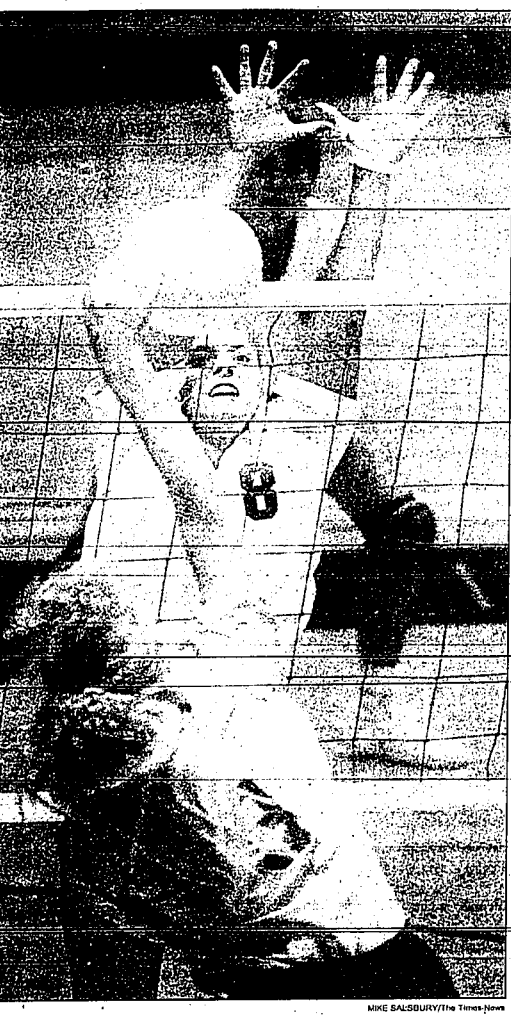

The athletic Wolverines had little trouble with CSI after the first game.
“We made so many unforced errors,” Stroud said. “We did that all day, but they make you pay for them.”
Friday's meeting was the first of several set this season for CSI and UVSC.
“They're really athletic, but we're too,” Stroud said. “It will be interesting to see what happens when our skills get up to that point.”

Against Western Montana, the Eagles fell behind 2-1 in games. After tying the match, CSI won the fifth game in a 22-20 speed scoring contest, where points are also scored on sidouts.
Dimitrova and Reinke tallied the deciding points for the Eagles on blocks.
CSI opened with a 15-10, 10-15, 15-6, 15-7 win over Dixie and followed with a 15-6, 15-8, 13-15, 15-12 victory over Snow.

“We really blocked well today except for the last game,” Stroud said.
Among the Eagle players Stroud singled out were Gergova Dimitrova, Tara Reinke, Kathy Simpson and Jody Graves.
In other Friday action, Western Montana and Casper went 1-2. Snow and Dixie both went 0-3 despite each leading a match 2-0 in games.

Track star awarded $700,000

The Associated Press

BERLIN — Butch Reynolds, the world's fastest quarter-miler, is one step closer to receiving part of a $27.3 million court judgment.
Federal Judge W. Curtis Sewell on Friday awarded nearly $700,000 to Reynolds, who last December won the huge judgment against the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world ruling body for track and field.

Reynolds

The money is for damages resulting from a performance-enhancing drug suspension imposed on the 400-meter world record holder. The IAAF has refused to pay that judgment.
“You know I do feel vindicated,” he said Friday night after finishing second in the 400 at the Berlin Grand Prix meet, just a week after he was part of a relay world record at the World Championships. “Overall, I’m very happy with Stuttgart and I’m very happy with the judgment.”

“You know it’s been so long that my emotions don’t really show. You know maybe tomorrow or when it’s all-over with they will.”
Miami Dane, one of Reynolds' lawyers, said Mobil would make a payment of $691,667 — equal to what it owes to IAAF under its sponsorship contract — directly to the U.S. District Court for Eastern Virginia, where Sewell sits. The court will hold the money in an interest-bearing account pending appeal by the IAAF.
Jayne Pearce, spokeswoman for the IAAF at its London headquarters, would only comment on the original ruling that awarded Reynolds the $27.3 million in damages and penalties from the IAAF.

Coleman camp silent as player ponders future

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — No one in the camp of troubled New York Mets outfielder Vince Coleman will reveal his future plans now that the team says it won't have him back in the wake of a firecracker-throwing incident.

Reinited Friday in St. Louis, Coleman's agent, Kenzie Bly, said neither he nor Coleman would have any comment until the situation in Los Angeles is legally resolved.
Coleman threw an explosive at fans last month in Los Angeles and is charged with a felony.
Coleman's lawyer, Robert Shapiro of Los Angeles, could not be reached for comment.
On Thursday, the Mets said Coleman will not return this season, and co-owner Fred Wilpon vowed the 31-year-old outfielder would never play for the team again.
The firecracker-throwing incident was the last in a line of antics that soured the Mets on Coleman.
He verbally attacked coach Mike Cubbage on the field in 1991. He shoved manager Jeff Torborg and was suspended last year. He hit Dwight Gooden with a golf club this year while taking a practice swing in the clubhouse.
“We have been plagued by embarrassing problems,” Wilpon said.

FSU kicks off college season

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — When you're No. 1, there's nowhere to go but down.
That's the problem facing top-ranked Florida State as it prepares for its season opener today against Kansas in the Kickoff Classic. The Seminoles are a 26-point favorite, and anything less than a decisive victory will be considered a disappointing performance.
“Kansas has everything to gain and nothing to lose,” coach Bobby Bowden said. “We have everything to lose and very little to gain.”
Bowden knows that preseason hype doesn't always translate into immediate success. In 1988, another No. 1 Florida State team opened with a 31-0 loss to Miami before winning 11 in a row.

“We've learned not to pay attention (to preseason rankings),” Bowden said. “In '88, we believed everything they were saying about us. Then we learned they were lying.”
Kansas, 26th in the preseason poll, has made a remarkable turnaround under Glenn Mason. When he became coach in 1988, Kansas was one of the worst teams in the country. But Mason has now led the Jayhawks to two straight winning seasons, including an 8-4 record and Aloha Bowl victory over BYU last year.
“They remind me of us a few years after I got here,” said Bowden, who also took over a losing program and quickly turned it into a winner. “They're getting better every year, and they're playing with a lot of confidence.”

Former Kansas great Gale Sayers has expressed concern that a lopsided loss to Florida State could discourage the Jayhawks and start the team on a downward spiral. But Mason prefers to put a positive spin on the situation.
“This is an opportunity to test ourselves against the best,” he said. “We're just happy to have a chance to play a team like Florida State. I don't think we would have been invited unless someone thought we were up to the challenge.”

NFL teams face Monday deadline to trim rosters

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — NFL teams may make their final cuts Monday under a new system that is as complicated as it has ever been.
But the final result is that each team will finish with a 53-man roster and a five-man practice squad, suiting up 45 each Sunday as has been the case for the past half-dozen years.
This is how it works:
By noon Monday, each team must cut its current 60-man roster to 47 players.
Any player with less than four years in the NFL who is cut must be placed on waivers and is subject to claim within 24 hours by other teams, who claim players in reverse order of last year's finish, starting with New England, 2-14. If a player is claimed on waivers, someone must be cut from the 47-man roster to make room.
Any player with more than four years who is cut is an unconditional free agent, able to sign with anyone.
In that case, he can be added to the roster without anyone being cut from the 47-man unit.

At noon Tuesday, teams may begin to re-sign the players cut to create the 53-man roster with which they will enter the season.
Each week, eight players will be declared inactive. A third quarterback can be the 46th player dressed, but he can play only if the first two quarterbacks do not return to the game.
The likelihood is that many of the players cut will be signed by the team that cut them. In many cases, agreements are made beforehand and players, who are cut don't even clean out their lockers, but simply stay out of practice for a day.
Another change is injured reserve. Any player placed on injured reserve at any time is out for the season. As a result, many players with injuries that will allow them to play again this year will be kept on the 53-man roster.
Once the 53-man roster is set, teams may create a five-man practice squad.

Cubs shock Braves, Marlins dump Giants

ATLANTA (AP) — Derrick May hit reliever Mike Stanton's first pitch for a seventh-inning grand slam Friday night as the Chicago Cubs stunned Atlanta 9-7 following the Braves' big three-game sweep at San Francisco.

The Braves entered the game trailing the Giants by 4½ games in the West and blew an opportunity to gain more ground when the Cubs rallied. The Giants lost 7-4 to the Marlins at Miami.

The Braves held a 6-4 lead over the seventh when reliever Mark Wohlers issued a one-out walk to Willie Wilson and a single to Dwight Smith. Ryan Sandberg then reached on Fred McGriff's throwing error, Wilson scoring.

Wohlers (5-1) walked Mark Grace intentionally to load the bases, bringing up May and Stanton relieved. May hit the 0-0 pitch from Stanton deep to right-field, sent his 10th and first career grand slam.

Shawn Boskie (4-3) with three innings of one-run relief, got the victory and Jose Bautista pitched a shaky ninth inning for his second save.

Marlins 7, Giants 4
MIAMI (AP) — Orestes Destrade hit two homers and drove in six runs Friday night to lead the Florida Marlins past San Francisco.

National League

Francisco 7-4, extending the Giants' losing streak to a season-high four games.

First-place San Francisco maintained a 4½-game lead in the NL West over Atlanta, which lost to Chicago 7-1. The Giants' skid began when they lost three in a row to Atlanta earlier this week.

Destrade led off the seventh and Jeff Brantley with his 17th home run, including eight this month. The two-homer game was Destrade's first, and his six RBIs were a season-high by a Marlin.

Bryan Harvey pitched the ninth for his 38th save.

Reds 8, Phillies 5
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pinch-hitter Brian Dorsett's two-run single off reliever Mitch Williams in the ninth inning rallied Cincinnati over first-place Philadelphia.

Williams, who had 13 straight saves and was trying for his career-high 37th, walked Joe Oliver and Juan Samuel to start the ninth. Jeff Brantley then struck out a sacrifice, advancing the runners to second and third. Both runners scored on Dorsett's single which chased Williams and brought in runner Jim Lincecum.

Anderson gave up a single to Jacob Brumfield with Dorsett advancing to second before Hal Morris followed with a two-run double. Williams (3-4) took the loss, while Johnny Ruffin (2-1) pitched two hitless innings for the victory. Bob Dibble got the last three outs for his 19th save.

Expos 3, Astros 1

MONTREAL (AP) — Dennis Martinez, who rejected a deal to Atlanta a day earlier, hit one run and seven hits in eight innings to help Montreal beat Houston. Martinez (12-8) won his second straight decision after going 9-3 in seven starts before the All-Star break. He is three victories shy of becoming the seventh pitcher in major-league history to record 100 wins in each league.

Mets 3, Rockies 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Sid Fernandez pitched three-hit ball for eight innings and Ryan Thompson hit a three-run homer as New York beat Colorado to extend the Rockies' losing streak to four games. Fernandez (3-4) struck out nine and walked one.

Padres 10, Pirates 6

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Phil Plantier and Archi Cianfrocco each drove in three runs as the Padres beat Pittsburgh. Tony Gwynn added three hits.

The Padres have won four straight, matching their longest streak of the season. They ended a 10-game losing streak against the Pirates, which included eight games this season. Andy Benies (14-0) took a one-hit, 9-shutout into the eighth inning. Former College of Southern Idaho pitcher Steve Cooke led to 8-8.

Indians hammer Yankees in 6th

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sandy Alomar, Kenny Lofton and Albert Belle each drove in two runs during a six-run sixth inning Friday night as the Cleveland Indians came from behind to beat the New York Yankees 9-2.

The Yankees began the night tied with Toronto for first place in the AL East. They've been in that position seven times this year but have never been able to claim the top spot alone.

Jim Thome celebrated his 23rd birthday with two doubles and a homer for the Indians, who ended a string of five straight home losses.

Alomar's bases-loaded double in the sixth put Cleveland up 3-2 and finished Melillo (6-13). Lofton grounded Paul Gibson's first pitch past second in infield for a two-run single. Belle capped the rally with a two-run double, giving him 105 RBIs, off Rich Monteleone.

The Indians added two in the seventh on Thome's solo home run from behind off left fielder second, and Lofton's sacrifice fly. Jason Grimsley (1-0) got his first big league win since 1991, when he went 1-7 with Philadelphia. He pitched 1-1/3 scoreless innings, allowing two hits.

Brewers 7, Angels 6

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Kevin Seitzer hit a three-run homer and the Milwaukee Brewers won their sixth straight game, 7-6 over the California Angels in the opener of a doubleheader Friday.

Seitzer tagged Mark Holmberg (9-1) for his third three-run homer in four days. He connected twice week against Oakland, the team that released him earlier this season.

Rangers 5, Orioles 4

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Reliever John O'Donoghue made an error that enabled Texas to score two runs in the eighth inning and beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-4 Friday night.

runs in the seventh inning, and the Rangers went on to beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-4 Friday night.

Cal Ripken hit two home runs for the Orioles, including a solo shot in the sixth inning off Tim Lincecum. Henke, however, finished his first save and gave Texas its fifth victory in six games.

The scores tied at 3. Texas loaded the bases in the seventh on singles by Doug Strange and David Hulse, a sacrifice and an intentional walk to Gary Redus. Ivan Rodriguez then grounded into a force play at the plate for the second out of the inning.

O'Donoghue relieved Todd Frohwirth (6-7), and Rafael Palmeiro hit a sharp grounder that glanced off the glove of first baseman David Segui. The ball bounced directly to second baseman Harold Reynolds, whose throw to O'Donoghue covering first base was in time. But O'Donoghue missed the ball and it rolled into the Rangers dugout, and two runners scored.

White Sox 7, Twins 3

Twins 7, White Sox 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Winfield singled home the go-ahead run in the fifth inning and Ivan Rodriguez added a three-run homer, giving the Minnesota Twins a 7-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox and a split of their Friday doubleheader.

In the opener, Bo Jackson hit a 446-foot home run that led Tim Lincecum and the White Sox to a 7-3 victory.

Winfield, who doubled in the first game, hit his 451st home run in the second game. His go-ahead single in the fifth inning gave him 2,983 hits and moved him past Sam Rice into 19th place on the career list.

Red Sox 5, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Roger Clemens ended a five-week slump by shutting out Kansas City for seven innings, and the Boston Red Sox beat the Royals 5-0 Friday night.

CHICAGO (AP) — Kevin Butler's third field goal of the game, a 53-yard shot with no time left, gave the Dallas Bears a 23-21 victory over Chicago Friday night in an NFL exhibition game.

Chicago Bears vs Dallas Cowboys

In second down with 12 seconds to play, the Bears lined up for a field goal but it was a fumble and Peter Tom Willis threw an incomplete pass. With 2 seconds left, Butler kicked the field goal that gave Chicago (1-3) its first victory under new coach Dave Wannamaker.

King takes aim at duMaurier title

LONDON, Ontario (AP) — Betsy King went to a 2-under-par 70 Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Dana Lofland-Dormann after two rounds of the lightning-interrupted duMaurier Classic.

Betsy King hold first place in the rain-delayed duMaurier Classic in Ontario.

King had a 9-under-par 135 total for two trips around the 6,331-yard London Hunt and Country Club course in the last LPGA major tournament of the year.

King bogeyed 16 and had just teed off on No. 17 into a gusting wind when LPGA officials stopped play due to lightning and dark clouds.

"At the time, I was kind of hoping to finish the round," King said. "I wish they'd let me finish, but I was really happy after I was out. When we went back out, the wind wasn't blowing so much."

During the 2-hour delay, she practiced chipping and putting and sat around in the clubhouse with some friends. Refreshed when play resumed, King finished with two pars.

Lofland-Dormann had four birdies in her 68. "Before the delay, it was tough because of the wind," said Lofland-Dormann, who birdied 17 right after the delay. "I sat in the lounge and ate shrimp and cake and carrots. They have all the best food here."

Dotie Mochrie had a 69 and is at 137. "I think it's really stacked and tight," Mochrie said. "It's a great leaderboard."

The gusting winds contributed to the downfall of first-round leader Dawn Coe-Jones of Canada. She ballooned to a 74 for a 138 total, tied at three back with Kathy Guadagnino, who shot a 69.

PGA's elite nip at little-known Edwards

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — David Edwards, drenched in sweat and struggling against the odds, held off the push of five foreign stars Friday and retained a one-stroke lead in the second round of the World Series of Golf.

Edwards, one of the shorter hitters on the PGA Tour playing one of the longest, most difficult courses, the pros encounter all year, fought his way to an erratic, 1-under-par 69 that included consecutive sand shots for birdies.

Those came on Nos. 4 and 7 and were from about 70 and 50 feet, respectively.

He had four other birdies and five bogeys in sweltering, 93-degree heat at the 7,174-yard Firestone Country Club course and reached the tournament halfway point in 135, 5 under par.

"That's not the way I like to play, but I had enough birdies to cover up some mistakes and get away with a decent score," Edwards said.

Mistakes were common on the fast, firm fairways and the tricky, bumpy greens that were heavily spike-marked for the later players in the international field of 41 winners of tournaments around the world for the past 12 months.

"You have to be patient," Nick Price said. "You can keep hitting it to 20 feet and never make a putt. The greens are so fast and fiery, you don't want to risk the chance of a 3-putt because birdies are so hard to make, so you don't feel confident in making a run at a putt."

Price, seeking to become the first player since Tom Watson in 1980 to win more than four official events on the PGA Tour, led the five foreign-born players — all now based in the United States — who are the only others under

Stockton zeroes in on greens, 3rd straight win

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Golf is pretty easy these days for Dave Stockton, and it showed Friday as he shot a 5-under-par 67 to share the first-round lead in the Bruno's Memorial Classic.

Stockton, winner of the last two tournaments on the Senior PGA Tour, had six birdies to match Kermit Zarley, Al Kelley and DeWitt Weaver.

Six players were one shot back, making it seem unlikely Stockton would run away from the field the way he has the last two weeks. But there was a question about who his players viewed as the favorite.

"We call him 'Positive Dave.' He doesn't see a spike mark or a bad green out there. He just sees the hole," said Chi Chi Rodriguez, one of the six bunched at 68.

"He's the guy to beat," Tied with Rodriguez were Walter Morgan, Tom Shaw, Larry Mowry, Terry Dill and Bob Charles.

Stockton, whose lone bogey came when his tee shot went into the water on 18, is the only player or with four tour victories this year. He is also the leading money-winner with $700,609.

"I'm playing well. There's no part of my game that's letting me down," said Stockton, who had five of his birdies on the front side for a 31. "Hole after hole, I'm right at the pin."

Weaver said Stockton's techniques even helped him indirectly. Weaver recently watched an instructional tape Stockton did about putting.

"I saw something in it that I hadn't been doing," said Weaver, who had an eagle on the par-5, 526-yard 15th. "I sat there and watched it and watched it, and it's really helped."

Trojans begin rebuilding with Robinson's return

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — John Robinson wants a return to the past in the short way.

He hopes to begin the trip Sunday night when he returns to the Southern Cal sidelines after a 10-year absence against No. 20 North Carolina in the Pigskin Classic.

"We've had a rough edge here for the last couple of years and we feel we must fight to re-establish ourselves as a national power," Robinson said. "We want to go back to the place where we have been."

The Trojans reached the top during Robinson's first stint. They were national champions in 1978 and he won 82 percent of his games over seven seasons.

Southern Cal, 18th in the preseason poll, returns to Anaheim Stadium, the site of an embarrassing 1992 season-ending loss to Fresno State in the Freedom Bowl. Larry Smith was fired soon after and Robinson, who stayed in the area coaching the NFL's Rams, returned.

Robinson hopes Sunday's result is better than his 1976 debut when Missouri handed the eighth-ranked Trojans a 46-25 defeat at home.

"I damn near got fired the next day," he said, laughing. "Robinson's sense of humor and casual attitude is a refreshing change for the players, who felt stifled by Smith's gruff demeanor."

"He's brought back the fun aspect of the team," wide receiver Johnnie Morton said. "Last year, we walked around with our heads down. Now we're more positive." Defensive end Willie McGinst considered leaving school for the NFL draft after last year's 6-5-1 record. He said the atmosphere under Robinson is similar to how an NFL team is run. "He gives us more responsibility and expects more out of us. He treats us like men," he said.

Sydney Omarr Horoscope

IF AUGUST 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are independent, creative, and some people claim you are "spoiled" by members of opposite sex. You can be arrogant, stubborn, and misanthropic; however, you usually turns out "your way" actually is best way. During September, you'll be on more solid emotional-financial ground, but obstacles moved, you'll know that love surrounds and you are not alone. During November domestic adjustment involves residence, marriage, and family.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep options open. Reinvestment in one area opens way to another engagement, opportunity. You'll get promise in writing from "unknown admirer."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on financial arrangements relating to property, home, family relationships. Travel indicated, along with publicity, advertising campaign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Answers are found via meditation, by looking behind scenes. You'll solve mystery and receive "applause" from one you admire. Define terms, perfect techniques.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Deadline exists; let others know you are aware, responsible, and intend to finish what was started. Legal arrangement moves to your advantage. Handsome reward is part of scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Missing key is recovered - door previously closed opens to your advantage. Long-range prospects brighten. Focus on employment, basic issues, pet ownership.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on new project, added independence, love relationship that "heats up." You'll learn more about property values, negotiations that stall, get started again.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Ascend the unusual, do things your way, refuse to be intimidated by "tradition." What appeared lost will be recovered, adding to your prestige. Furniture, photographs will be restored.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You'll have more working room, additional space in which to complete project. Short-trip is part of scenario, involves relative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financially burdened. Those who doubted will now beseech. "Let us on your hand/guide!" Check references, be aware of source material.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Ability to analyze character, predict future, surges to forefront. Take nothing for granted, seek reasons and motivations. Member of opposite sex makes declaration of loyalty.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Remain close to familiar ground. Those who "call you away" don't have your best interests at heart. Domestic dilemma will be resolved. Missing funds accounted for.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You'll be saying, "Some things sure do happen in mysterious ways!" You get the approval, scenario features romance, you win way in spectacular manner.

Romans talked a blue streak

Scholars with nothing better to do counted all the dirty words they believed to be common to the vocabularies of the ancient Romans and came up with approximately 800. Then they did the same with modern English, and only listed about 20.
