Health plan push focuses on forms

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton pressed Friday for a simple one-page form for all medical claims, promoting his health-care overhaul at a hospital where paperwork piles up more than 5 feet a week.

A physician participating in the event appealed to Clinton: "Free me from the shackles and the burdens of this paperwork maze."

Clinton told reporters he hadn't decided finally on how to finance the plan, adding, "You have to give me something to announce" at next Wednesday's unveiling before a joint session of Congress.

Increased taxes on cigarettes and perhaps hard liquor seem likely. And Clinton broadly hinted the plan would include a 1 percent payroll assessment on big companies that opt for their own health-care arrangements.

The president's wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, campaigned for his health plan in Minneapolis Friday.

The administrator of an inner-city clinic in Minneapolis told Mrs. Clinton she spends 75 percent of her time trying to get grants to compensate for money that patients can't pay.

Mrs. Clinton said the administration's plan would put an end to that. She said, "The key issue is making sure everybody has some capability to pay for the services you provide."

Clinton's morning visit to Children's National Medical Center several miles from the White House was the latest in a series of events the White House is staging to focus public attention on his health-care reform package.

"It will simplify your life," Clinton told doctors and nurses at the hospital as the White House released a sample of the proposed national Medical Claim Form.

The form asks a few basic questions, including a patient's name, Social Security number, health-plan name and number, treatment required, whether an accident was involved and the initial and final diagnoses.

"We want to create a single claim form — one piece of paper that everyone will use and all plans will accept," Clinton said.

He said such a form would go to every hospital and doctor's office in the country.

Under the administration's health-care plan, people still could "make some choices," Clinton said, "but it will essentially be one comprehensive package. No longer will hospitals and doctors have to keep track of thousands of different policies."

Groups propose limited logging in owl forests

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A dozen environmental groups proposed Friday to resume limited logging of Northwest timber that has been off limits under a court order protecting the northern spotted owl.

They were responding to a Clinton administration proposal to log even more timber, and their compromise offer amounted to only 60 percent of the renewed logging sought by the administration.

"We're still negotiating right now," said Tom Amontree, spokesman for Assistant Agriculture Secretary Jim Lyons, who oversees the Forest Service.

"Timber industry and labor leaders said the offer was unacceptable.

"This so-called 'compromise' is an insult," said Mike Draper, executive secretary of the Western Council of Industrial Workers in Portland, Ore. "This small amount of timber will do little to provide certainty to our members."

Previously, the environmental groups had not been able to agree on any amount of renewed logging in the area covered by the court order.

The environmental groups, which won the court injunction in 1991 agreed that the logging of 83 million board feet of timber on federal lands should be permitted, according to a joint statement from the groups.

The Clinton administration had sought to log 137 million board feet.

If the administration and the environmentalists can agree on how much timber should be logged, they would ask U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer of Seattle to modify his logging ban to allow that amount.

Nearly three quarters of the timber the environmentalists agreed to log is located on national forests in Oregon; just under a quarter is in Washington, and the remainder is in northern California.

That timber would amount to only a small fraction of the 4 billion to 5 billion board feet logged annually in those three states during the 1980s.

But the offer from the environmentalists marks the first step toward moving a new supply of logs from national forests into Northwest mills since Judge Dwyer determined in May 1991 that government logging plans violated environmental laws.

A board foot is one foot square by one inch thick. It takes about 10,000 board feet of lumber to build a typical single-family home.

Clinton announced a plan in July that ultimately would bring harvests on federal land in the three states to 1.2 billion board feet.

Cancel nuclear test, president tells China

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton urged China Friday to cancel an underground nuclear test, assuring the Beijing government that it has nothing to fear from the world's other atomic powers.

His remarks capped weeks of intense behind-the-scenes diplomacy, including contacts by senior State Department officials with other governments asking them to put pressure on China to scrap the planned test.

Intelligence reports gleaned from satellites and intercepted electronic signals show that China has readied its isolated Lop Nor test site for a detonation, U.S. officials say.

About two weeks ago, China drilled holes into the ground at the desert site in Xinjiang province, and about a week ago it inserted a nuclear device deep into one of the holes, said an administration official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"I'm still very hopeful that the Chinese will not do that, and I have asked other nations that have relationships with China to stay engaged with them not to do it," Clinton told reporters in response to a question about the prospective detonation.

Aides said Clinton had not made the requests himself but had directed administration officials to do so.

"The Chinese are finding their strength today ... in economic growth," the president said. "And I would hope that the Chinese would see their future in terms of their economic strength and step away from this."

Clinton noted that the world's other four declared nuclear powers — the United States, Britain, France and Russia — have all promised not to test their arsenals.

"There is no reasonable threat to China from any other nuclear power," he added.

Clinton declined to say what the United States would do if China tested. "I don't want to cross any more bridges. I want to keep trying to persuade them not to do it," he said.

The administration is not so much worried about China conducting this particular test as about the effect it could have on the moratoria being observed by the other nuclear powers, and on the prospects for achieving a worldwide test ban in 1996.

EPA director cites trade pact benefits

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The North American Free Trade Agreement will provide up to $10 billion for water and sewer lines along the U.S.-Mexico border, but toxic waste cleanup plans are still unresolved, the government said Friday.

The Environmental Protection Agency is assessing cleanup needs along the 2,000-mile border, where industrial plants in search of cheap Mexican labor have generated a vast toxic waste and pollution problem, said administrator Carol Browner.

The agency plans to establish an EPA office in the border region and is developing an overall "border action plan," she said.

Mexico and the United States will spend between $8 and $10 billion for water and sewer lines, she said.

The money is to be raised through grants, expected to be about $150 million on the U.S. side, and by user fees that will appear on the water bills of customers in the area, officials said.

But it was unclear how much additional money might be devoted to cleanup efforts. Browner said there are no estimates yet of the need.

ardous waste, on top of $100-million for municipal solid-waste dumps, and $500 million worth of air pollution control equipment on industrial facilities.

Browner, continuing the administration's hard sell of the trade pact, told a group of reporters there is "a tremendous amount of disinformation" on the "environmental aspects of the agreement."

The environmental community is split on whether to endorse the trade pact, with the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth and several other groups argue it provides insufficient environmental protections.

But Browner argued that endorsements from six prominent environmental groups should be accorded more weight than the opposition of many other organizations.

She disputed an argument by opponents that the trade pact would allow unsafe Mexican produce to be shipped to U.S. consumers. No produce sprayed with pesticides banned in this country would be allowed across the border, she said.

The pact does not allow one country to challenge another's environmental laws and standards as constituting unfair trade barriers, she said.

NAFTA may slow migration — some day

The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Backers of a free trade treaty with Mexico say it will stem the tide of illegal immigration to the United States.

Most experts agree — but don't hold your breath.

The North American Free Trade Agreement is supposed to create more and better-paid jobs for Mexicans at home so they won't have to seek work abroad.

"They'll have more disposable income to buy more American products and there will be less illegal immigration because more Mexicans will be able to support their children by staying home."

week as he launched his campaign for NAFTA.

But it may take years to create enough growth at home to absorb 1 million new Mexican job-seekers each year. And a century of migration has created a cross-border culture no treaty can erase.

"Very little if any" reduction will occur in the next few years, according to Jorge Bustamante, director of the College of the Northern Border in Tijuana.

"We estimate that in the first five years after the beginning of the treaty, there will not be any significant difference in migration."

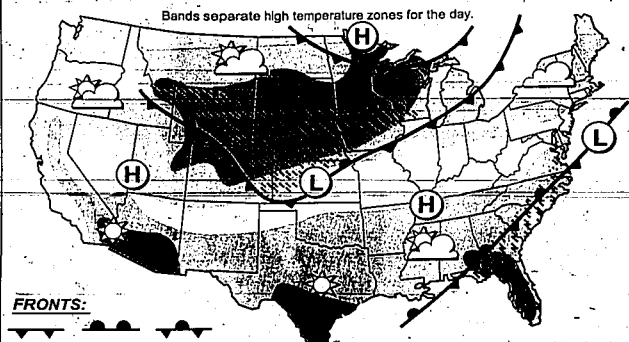

After NAFTA's effects become clear, President Clinton said this. Please see MIGRATE/A2

Weather summary

A few showers may linger today in extreme eastern Idaho, but otherwise Idahoans may look for a dry, mild and mostly sunny day for most of the state.

The National Weather Service predicts the next Alaskan weather system will reach Idaho Sunday and exit the state by Tuesday. This will bring cooler air along with a chance of showers mainly to northern Idaho.

On Friday, skies over the Magic Valley varied from mostly sunny to mostly cloudy with a few signs of showers around the area. Moisture amounts, if any, were light and scattered. Winds were generally light and temperatures continued mild.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 78 degrees at Emmett. Bo will report the lowest at 26 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 97 degrees at Presidio, Texas. Truckee, Calif., reported the lowest temperature at 21 degrees.

Showers, thunderstorms over midlands, East

The Associated Press

Showers and thunderstorms were widely scattered Friday from the Gulf Coast region to the Middle Atlantic states and along another front from the central High Plains to Minnesota.

In most places the rain wasn't heavy enough to cause flooding, though on Friday evening the National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning in northern Delaware, where more than an inch of rain had fallen.

A slow-moving severe thunderstorm also was reported in western North Carolina, while strong thunderstorms formed in other parts of the state as well as in parts of Florida, Kansas, Nevada and Colorado.

Thunderstorms over Carbon County in southeastern Wyoming early Friday afternoon produced 3 inches of dime-sized hail along Interstate 80 east of Rawlins, the weather service reported.

The temperature hit a record low of 51 in Bakersfield, Calif., and dipped below freezing in parts of the Rockies, North Dakota, Minnesota and extreme northern Maine.

Showers and thunderstorms developed along and south of a stationary front curving through the Southeast. A few thunderstorms were over northeastern and eastern sections of Florida. Light rain or drizzle fell in the Northeast.

Showers also were developing along and behind a slow-moving cold front in the central United States. A few thunderstorms were reported in central Kansas, south-central Nebraska and southeastern Wyoming.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at noon MDT included 1.23 inches at the naval air station in Corpus Christi, Texas; .60 at New Bern, N.C.; .54 at Dulles International Airport in Washington, D.C.; and .50 in Chicopee Falls, Mass.

Tropical storm leaves 28 people dead

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Tropical Storm Gert killed at least 28 people in Nicaragua and Honduras and left more than 15,000 homeless before moving out to sea, officials said Friday.

It gathered strength as it moved over the Caribbean toward Belize and Mexico's Yucatan peninsula, reports said.

Authorities in Nicaragua said heavy rains and flooding left at least eight people dead and 10,400 homeless there Thursday.

In Honduras, at least 20 people were reported killed and 5,000 left homeless, said Honduras' civil protection coordinator, Wilfredo Salgado.

Protest disrupts Haitian installation

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — More than 100 protesters disrupted the installation ceremony for Haiti's new foreign minister Friday, screaming slogans against U.N. involvement here.

Uniformed police stood by as the demonstrators rushed into the Foreign Ministry just after Prime Minister Robert Malval told onlookers: "The Haitians' dream of democracy can't be crushed."

The midday demonstration coincided with a U.N. Security Council warning Friday that it would reimpose international sanctions unless the army stops political violence and disarms civilian groups trying to undermine the new government.

Bus-truck collision kills 2, injures 14

WINNSLOW TOWNSHIP, N.J. — A small bus carrying disabled senior citizens collided with a truck on a rain-soaked rural road, killing two bus passengers and injuring 14 other people, police said.

The mini-bus was carrying staff members and clients of the Berlin Senior Care Center when it was struck by an ice truck traveling in the opposite direction on County Road 536 near Sickerfville. The front of the bus was crushed and mangled.

Two women among the 13 passengers on the bus were killed, said township Patrolman Tom Linardo. The injured, including the bus driver and the driver and a passenger in the truck, were taken to four hospitals. At least 11 patients were reported in critical condition Friday night.

Hijackers sought shield from torture

OSLO, Norway — Three men charged with hijacking a Russian airliner said they picked Norway as their destination because they hoped it would shield them from torture in Iran, their attorney said Friday.

The men have asked for political asylum, but face up to 20 years in prison if they are tried and convicted of hijacking in Norway.

In a closed session, a preliminary court ordered the men held for eight weeks pending an investigation.

Defense attorney Morten Husar said the three men identified in Friday's court proceedings as Khalil al-Moghadabi, Bahul, 35, Mansour Mohammad, 28, and Farhad Rahildi, 20, admitted to the hijacking.

School receives recording equipment

WASHINGTON — Steve Wonder donated state-of-the-art recording equipment to a school in the nation's capital Friday as part of Motown Records' education arts program.

The $500,000 worth of equipment will be part of a new recording studio at the Duke Ellington School of the Arts.

"I am very, very pleased and happy to be at a school named after Duke Ellington, whose music brought so much joy to so many," Wonder said at the presentation.

ing Clinton to sell the package. Planned to begin airing television ads on Saturday designed to counter insurance-industry attacks.

"The insurance companies may not like it, but the president didn't design it for them — he designed it for you," the announcer says in the ad being sponsored by the Democratic-National Committee.

The ad is a response to a Health Insurance Industry of America ad, campaign that contends Clinton's proposal will restrict consumers' choice of doctors and other health care providers. The industry spot, which began airing recently, shows a couple at the kitchen table criticizing Clinton's initiative.

Clinton asserted during his hospital visit that there are more than 1,500 insurers in America now.

"Each of them has their own forms and their own different lists of what they would cover."

"We're stuck in a system where we're ruled by the form," Clinton complained.

His proposed new universal medical form contains a box at the bottom for doctors to enter various codes dealing with kinds of procedures and costs.

The White House hopes to prune billions of dollars from the nation's health bills by simplifying paperwork and cutting through red tape for doctors and patients alike.

The proposal is expected to require all health plans to adopt by Jan. 1, 1995, a single, standard form reimbursement rather than the dozens of different insurance forms that hospitals and doctors' offices now must deal with.

The administration also hopes that standardizing the forms will make it easier for states to monitor the quality of care patients receive.

Dr. Lillian Beard, a pediatrician, told Clinton she was swamped by paperwork, spending up to 25 hours a week completing forms.

"This is not what we trained all these years to do," she said. Reducing paperwork was again... Free me from the shackles and the burdens of this paperwork maze."

Vice President Al Gore said that getting a child treated at Children's Hospital could require parents to fill out as many as 26 separate forms. "That's crazy," he said.

Clinton and Gore toured the hospital's records room, where file cases were bulging with records. They were told a 6.5-foot pile of paper is added each week.

Clinton also walked among children in wheelchairs under brightly colored cartoon balloons.

Michael Keys, a member of the U.S. Capitol Police, lamented the mountains of forms required for spinal surgery on his 10-year-old son, Jeffrey Keys.

"You think that you're covered under your insurance, and... you find out you're not," he said. "I'm not a doctor... I'm just a police officer."

gin to take hold, the college's research estimates migration will drop by 15 to 25 percent during the second five years and by as much as half after a decade, he said.

"Can a free trade pact reduce Mexican migration to the United States? The answer is yes, but it depends on how long you're willing to wait for that result," said Steve Cornelius, director of the Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies at the University of California, San Diego.

Cornelius, speaking to a border mayors' conference in June, said elimination of subsidies and other market reforms in Mexico's countryside might at first drive farmers off their land and increase illegal migration until new jobs are created in Mexico.

Part of the problem is that nobody knows exactly how many Mexicans cross the border each year — they don't want to be counted.

"Nobody has a (reliable) figure, not the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service... not the Mexican government, not the universities," said migration specialist Sergio Zendejas of the Colegio de Michoacan in Zamora, a region which generates many Mexican migrants.

U.S. officials made about 1 million arrests of people trying to cross the border last year. But many people were counted several times. A recent Mexican Senate study guessed 1.5 million cross the border.

"The majority of the migrants don't do it because they cannot work because what you can achieve with 50 years of work here you can gain with five years of work or 10" in the United States.

Cornelius said only free traders fers the possibility of creating enough foreign investment to help absorb the 1 million new job-seekers each year, thus cutting illegal migration across the border.

Former lead singer Country Joe McDonald says he is seriously considering a bid for the Berkeley, Calif., City Council, 25 years after playing Woodstock with Country Joe and the Fish.

Country Joe McDonald fixin' to run for Berkeley Council seat

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A quarter-century after he charmed Woodstock with the anti-establishment "Fixin' to Die Rag," Country Joe McDonald may be changing his tune from notes to votes. McDonald, once the lead singer for Country Joe and the Fish, is considering a run for the Berkeley City Council. "One, two, three, who are we voting for? That definitely will be my campaign slogan," he said. He joked that he was partly motivated by "the idea of having my own parking space," but said he's taking a possible race seriously. "I would bring the same creativity to government that I bring to my music," McDonald said. "I'm not going to do it without support and I'm not going to do it if it doesn't make economic sense in my life, because I'm not a rich person." If McDonald runs, he would file papers next summer, the 25th anniversary of Woodstock. "I find that kind of amusing," said the 51-year-old McDonald. McDonald's anti-war ditty, the full title of which is "I Feel Like I'm Fixin' to Die Rag," includes the refrain, "One, two, three, who are we fighting for? Don't ask me, I don't see a damn, next stop's Vietnam." If he runs for office, he would be following one-two-three in the footsteps of the Fish, aka Barry Melton, who made an unsuccessful run for a city judgeship in San Francisco last year. "When Barry ran, I really wasn't thinking (of trying for office)," McDonald said. Then Mayor Loni Hancock said she wouldn't run for reelection and Councilwoman Shirley Dean said she would run for mayor, leaving an open seat. "I had a desire to counterbalance the power in Berkeley," McDonald said. Long famed as "Berzkeley" for its radical politics, Berkeley has taken quite a few steps to the middle in recent years. The once-powerful Berkeley Citizens-Action-Party lost control of the council, debates over foreign politics have been replaced by plans to clean up the streets and in what some considered a naked display of conservatism — public nudity has been banned. McDonald, whose mother Florence was a stalwart leftist and leading light in city politics for many years, said he would run as an independent. "If I was on the City Council, I would be kind of a wild card," he said. McDonald makes no apologies for being a member of the Age of Aquarius. "We were right about it all. I'm not ashamed about anything I did." Now, married to his fourth wife and the father of five children, McDonald wants to concentrate on city problems and try to revive cultural interests.

U.S. officials to visit Siberian prison said to have held Marine

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are making arrangements to visit a Siberian prison to pursue new indications that at least one U.S. serviceman captured in the Korean War may have been held there, a Pentagon official said Friday. It's a lead, and we'll pursue it any way we can," said Marine Corps Maj. Steve Little, a spokesman for the Defense Department on POW and MIA issues. Little said U.S. officials were certain the Russian government would permit the visit since the new information about an American serviceman possibly being held at the prison came to light in a joint U.S.-Russian investigation.

- Cuban jet avoids radar, lands in U.S. — KEY-WEST, Fla. — A Cuban MiG jet landed Friday at Key West Naval Air Station, apparently without any U.S. agencies tracking its flight, government sources said. The MiG-21 landed without incident at the base in the southernmost city in the continental United States, a State Department official said on condition of anonymity. Key West is only 90 miles from the Cuban coast. The Soviet-made military jet is a single seater, but it was not immediately known how many people were aboard. "We didn't see or chase it," a federal official said, asking that he not be identified further. "Neither did the Air Force."
- Fund to help pay bills of burned tourist — TAMPA, Fla. — A trust fund has been established to help pay the medical bills of the black tourist who was kidnapped and set afire by white attackers on New Year's Day. Hillsborough County Commissioner Sylvia Kimbrell said Thursday she organized the trust fund as a "measure of Tampa's humanitarianism." Insurance has paid most of the medical costs, but Christopher Wilson still faces $76,000 in unpaid bills, she said. Paying those bills will be difficult, Wilson told the Daily News in New York last week. Wilson, who shares a New York apartment with his mother, has been unable to work since the attack and is receiving disability pay.
- Police search for missing infant, ill mom — COLONIE, N.Y. — A baby born this week to a woman with a history of mental problems was missing Friday. Police spent three hours Thursday searching near a motel where Beth Potter lives and where she gave birth late Monday or early Tuesday, police Lt. William Lockart said. A search dog combed the area near the motel in this Albany suburb and there were no signs of the baby, Lockart said.

Suit targets mine company pollution

BILLINGS (AP) — Nine conservation groups claim a mining company has unlawfully polluted a mine site near Cooke City and on the edge of Yellowstone National Park. In a suit filed in U.S. District Court in Billings on Thursday, the organizations accuse the Canadian firm Noranda Inc. and its U.S. subsidiary, Crown Butte Mines Inc. of Billings, of failing to clean up illegal pollution at its New World Mine site just northeast of Yellowstone. Crown Butte is seeking permits for a major new mine on the site. The conservation groups are fighting the new mine, and say existing pollution must be dealt with first. "The truth is they have violated the Clean Water Act for years on the very site that they want to put the new mine on," said Doug Honnold of the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, which filed the suit. "We say first you clean up your mess before creating a new one." Crown Butte said its corporate spokesman was not immediately available to comment on the suit. The lawsuit contends the mining companies failed to obtain a permit to discharge pollution at the mine site, which includes parts of the headwaters of the Yellowstone River.

PLO wants to re-open U.S. office

WASHINGTON (AP) — The PLO hopes to re-open an office in Washington next month if Congress can cross several anti-PLO laws off the books by then, Palestinian officials said Friday. The Clinton administration, as well as Congress, has discussed the re-opening of such an office with officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization, State Department spokesman Michael McCurry said. The discussions took place earlier this week when PLO chairman Yasser Arafat was in town to sign a peace accord with Israel.

But administration and congressional officials cautioned that next month might be too soon. "Their optimism on how quickly that might be done could or could not be shared by Congress. We'll have to see," McCurry said. Clinton authorized renewed U.S. contacts with the PLO late last week after a three-year break. When the organization fulfilled U.S. and Israeli demands that it formally renounce terrorism and accept Israel's right to exist, the contacts, for now, are being conducted mostly through the U.S. Embassy in Tunis, where the PLO has its headquarters, because by law the PLO cannot open an office in the United States. The State Department has reviewed all the anti-PLO statutes passed by Congress in the past 20 years, and found about five or six which prohibit the organization from setting up shop here. The administration has begun consulting with members and staff in Congress about repealing those statutes, although it has not made a formal request of the lawmakers to do so, McCurry said.

World Rebels attack despite warning

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Separatist-Abkhazian-rebels-battled Georgian troops for a second day Friday in the city of Sukhumi, ignoring warnings from Russia to halt the offensive or face the "consequences."

Russian military authorities predicted Sukhumi, the Georgian-held regional capital, could fall to the Abkhazian attackers on Saturday.

The city center came under repeated Abkhazian shelling overnight, which cut off power supplies, Georgian government officials said.

Two shells landed in a Russian military compound in Sukhumi where United Nations military observers are based. A U.N. observer team was stranded with Abkhazian forces who were refusing to let them return to base.

Georgia officials said 21 people have been killed and 118 wounded since the attack began Thursday. There were no Abkhazian casualty figures.

Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze, who is in Sukhumi, made an emotional appeal Thursday to Russian President Boris Yeltsin to use his influence to get Abkhazian separatists to end the offensive and abide by the terms of a July 27 Russian-brokered cease-fire.

Since the signing of the peace accord, Georgia claims to have withdrawn 80 percent of its soldiers from the region and is accusing the Abkhazians of secretly stockpiling weapons.

The cease-fire and troop pullout had brought relative calm to Abkhazia, a former resort region along the Black Sea, after a year of fighting that claimed more than 2,000 lives.

The Russian government warned the Abkhazians to stop their offensive.

"Refusal will be considered as a challenge with all ensuing political and economic consequences," Moscow said in a statement.

Vitaly Churkin, Russia's deputy foreign minister, said in Moscow that Russia would withhold $25 million in credits to Abkhazia until it withdraws its forces to positions occupied before the latest offensive.

Churkin, in remarks reported by the Russian news agency Interfax, also noted that Abkhazia depends on Russia for its fuel supply. Russian Defense Minister Pavel Grachev flew to the Abkhazian stronghold of Gudauta to meet with rebel leader Yurydzhin Ardzimba Thursday night. He met Friday with Shevardnadze.

Ex-prisoner ponders use to the Party

BEIJING (AP) — One of the three political prisoners China released this week is an effort to win the 2000 Olympics was cynical Friday about his early freedom.

Wu Xuegan, a former newspaper editor jailed for taking part in the 1989 pro-democracy movement, was sentenced to four years in prison and was due to be released in December.

Instead, authorities told him without explanation in July that he would be freed three months early.

He was released Thursday, a week before the International Olympic Committee decides whether to award the 2000 Olympics to Beijing or to one of four other cities.

The U.S. Congress has opposed Beijing's bid because of China's poor human rights record.

Mother Teresa still years to visit China

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Mother Teresa's desire to visit China may be the reason behind her rapid recovery from malaria, heart problems and other ailments, her heart doctor suggested Friday.

The Nobel laureate was cheerful and back on a normal diet Friday, said Dr. Tarun Kumar Prharaj, a cardiologist.

"Her blood pressure and pulse rate are normal. There is no fever now and there is no chest congestion," Prharaj said.

When the Roman Catholic nun was hospitalized in New Delhi with malaria three weeks ago, she received an invitation from Beijing to visit the Communist nation. China has never allowed her to visit.

Experimental INEL reactor, 800 jobs spared for now

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Clinton administration has backed off its request to shut down work on an innovative experimental reactor program at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, costing the facility 800 jobs.

After asking Congress early this year to end development of the Integral Fast Reactor and spend less than $50 million to shut the program down at INEL, a revised budget reconciliation would double the amount of money to push support to nearly the level scientists had originally requested.

"We're gaining tools everyday that are helping the process," he said.

Utah, New Mexico tribes seek grant money to study waste storage

BOISE (AP) — Indian tribes in Utah and New Mexico have applied for $2.8 million grants to continue studying the prospect of hosting a commercial nuclear waste repository.

"It's very significant," Vern Nelson, a spokesman for the negotiator's office, said Thursday. "They are very serious about pursuing serious negotiations. This is the last step before formal negotiations."

The reactor is designed to recycle and burn its own fuel and plutonium from nuclear weapons, which would help reduce the amount of nuclear waste the nation must dispose of.

The project is in its final phase with engineers and technicians at INEL testing the huge machines they hope will make the laboratory concept a reality within three years.

"The revised program," according to the new administration request, "reduces the near-term layoffs in Idaho, avoids uncertainties associated with testing of reprocessed fuel in a foreign reactor, provides higher quality and more complete test data and achieves reactor shutdown by FY 1997."

The House has already voted to end funding for the project, but the Clinton administration's position opens the way for the money to be restored by the Senate, where Kempthorne and Sen. Larry Craig have managed to generate some support for the project.

"We hope this will get those folks who were on the fence or slightly opposed to listen up," said Dick Lindsay at INEL.

Senators will support attorney pick

LEWISTON (AP) — Idaho's two Republican senators have agreed to support Democratic Congressman Larry LaRocco's recommendation for U.S. Attorney even though Sen. Larry Craig's balky-headed independent review panel never got involved.

Craig Kempthorne

Spokesmen for both Craig and Dirck Kempthorne said the two senators have already notified Senate Judiciary Chairman Joseph Biden of their support for the nomination.

Chairman in Ada County and is currently chairman of the state Industrial Commission.

And David Fish said Craig approved it because he thinks she is qualified and will vote for her for some reason.

Guy Hurlbutt, who headed Craig's committee to review nominations for U.S. Justice Department posts in Idaho, said the panel decided it did not have time to review Richardson's nomination and may not have time to review Pociello.

Richardson, who would replace Republican U.S. Attorney Maurice Ellsworth, is a former Democratic LaRocco has shrugged off Craig's attempt to involve himself in federal appointments that have always been the prerogative of the senior Congressman from the president's political party. Craig would have played that role had President George Bush not lost the election to Democrat Bill Clinton.

Hurlbutt said the committee, which has met twice, may have time to consider the impending nomination of Lewiston attorney John R. Tait as a U.S. District Judge. That judge would be the only lifetime appointment of the three.

currently has four Republicans and three Democrats, is justified by the importance of the federal appointments.

Hurlbutt said the review committee will ask the Idaho Judicial Council to endorse the concept of creating commissions patterned after the Illinois U.S. Senate Judicial Nominations Commissions.

Former BEA head jailed

BOISE (AP) — A former president of the Boise Education Association was arrested and sentenced to 180 days in jail for embezzling $63,670 in association funds, including money targeted for needy schoolchildren.

Tim Gleason, the Boise Education Association's current president, said the teachers union was insured for the loss, but that the payment would not be made until after an insurance company inquiry.

Ronald Thompson, 44, was in the Ada County Jail in lieu of a $75,000 bond after being arrested Thursday on one felony count of grand theft.

"A portion of that money would have gone to charities and organizations that help children buy school supplies and other things they need to get on with school that they can't afford," Gleason said.

Earth First! leaves Dixie camp

LEWISTON (AP) — The Earth First! camp near Dixie was vacated by environmental activists with this week's start of big game hunting season.

The meeting "to set the record straight" because incorrect information was being spread in an attempt to recruit more protesters.

Earth First! spokesman Robert Amon, who owns the land where the camp is located, said the main reason members left was that logging has stopped in the Government area of the Nez Perce National Forest, and work is completed on the road into the Noble Creek timber sale.

INWARD member Cass Davis of Moscow said there were no direct threats at the meeting; just comments like "It's hunting season now and you might end up with a bullet in your head."

But Amon, in a telephone interview from his Moscow motel room, said Wednesday's opening of several hunting units in the area also was a factor.

Amon said he took the prospect of violence seriously, but that Earth First! members left the Dixie camp this week primarily because road and logging crews have stopped working and there was nothing to protest.

Brett Bennett, an employee and member of the family that owns Bennett Lumber Products in Princeton, apparently made statements about the approach of hunting season at a Sept. 2 meeting of Idaho Nonviolent Wilderness Rescue and Defense — INWARD — that members considered threatening.

He said the group would turn using court appearances by Earth First! protesters charged with civil disobedience as forums for their cause.

Bennett said Thursday that a half-dozen Bennett Lumber employees and one from a St. Maries lumber company went to

The group wants to stop logging and road building in the area that contains has been a crucial pristine wildlife corridor between the Frank Church-River of No Return and Goshute Wilderness areas.

But there have been rumors about winter logging in the area, Amon said. "So we'll be around. We're not going to Mexico or anything."

At the board's meeting last week in Boise, Parkinson suggested the board be given notice of any University of Idaho research projects being considered for patenting and licensing to companies.

Parkinson's interest in the foundation goes back to 1988 — before he was appointed to the Board of Education — when he complained to the University of Idaho that the foundation gave preferential treatment to Advanced Hardware Architects of Moscow.

Parkinson vows to quit board if conflicts arise

MOSCOW (AP) — Joseph Parkinson, chairman of Boise's Micron Technology Inc., said he would resign from the state Board of Education if his business dealings were perceived as conflicting with his recent crusade for change at the Idaho Research Foundation.

on research and soliciting companies willing to license the technology. The foundation, the university and the inventor share income from the enterprise.

Parkinson said he also would be willing to remain on the board and keep Micron out of the running for Idaho Research Foundation patent licenses.

Laurence Bonar, the foundation's director, said Thursday that Micron has received notice of two University of Idaho inventions over the past year, but has not submitted a bid. Micron has its own researchers who timed out 114 patents in 1992.

"I can very readily give up my right to bid, and I would be glad to do that if someone thinks it would be in the state's interest," he said Thursday. "Even if one newspaper writes an editorial suggesting that I not bid, I will refrain from bidding, or I will resign from the state board."

The Idaho Research Foundation turned out eight patents in 1992.

At the board's meeting last week in Boise, Parkinson suggested the board be given notice of any University of Idaho research projects being considered for patenting and licensing to companies.

Although Parkinson acknowledged that his concerns about the foundation's activities could be construed as in his own business interest, he said his intent is only to make the process fair.

Student with skin disease allowed to resume classes

NAMPA (AP) — Nampa High School sophomore Raymond Reyna may return to classes, but without the pepper mace he carried for protection from injury to his fragile skin, a school disciplinary committee decided Thursday.

"We made it very clear that future violations would result in recommendation for expulsion," he said. Reyna was arrested by Nampa Police a week ago on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon after school officials discovered he carried pepper mace to school. He also was suspended.

Reyna told school officials he carried the mace for self-protection because his skin easily bruises, tears and bleeds as a result of a rare disease. He worried that older students would harm him because he was a sophomore, he said.

Pearson and Dickinson, both 29, each faced up to 15 years in prison after pleading guilty to soliciting to commit first-degree murder for trying to hire a man to kill Mrs. Pearson for $3,500.

Pair gets year for murder plot

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Kenneth Pearson and Grace Dickinson of Spokane, Wash., were sentenced to one year in jail — with credit for 163 days already served — for plotting to have Pearson's wife killed.

First District Judge Craig Kosonen ordered the jail time Thursday, even though Michelle Pearson pleaded for the release of her husband and Mrs. Dickinson.

In an emotional statement, Mrs. Pearson, 29, who is deaf and has cerebral palsy, said her husband wanted to go to police to stop the murder plans but she wouldn't let him.

Troops leave Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A farewell ceremony Friday for the last Russian troops to leave Poland showed how differently the two countries view the Red Army's invasion 54 years ago.

"Our soldiers are leaving with a clear conscience," Russian Ambassador Yuri Kashlev said. "Their fathers came here fighting against our common enemy. Together with the Polish army they guaranteed the inviolability of Poland's borders."

That was a sharp contrast with Polish President Lech Walesa's assessment of Sept. 17, 1939 — when Russian troops swept in from the east just two weeks after the Nazis attacked from the west.

"The day of Sept. 17 has been a painful and tragic date, opening the way that led Poles to prisons and labor camps, constant fear and humiliation," Walesa said.

But while he recalled the bad feelings associated with the anniversary, he said Poles now can use it to look to the future.

"In Polish territory, there are no more foreign troops," Walesa said. "Poland's sovereignty is finally confirmed."

Relations between Russia and Poland have improved since the fall of communism. Russian President Boris Yeltsin's visit last month was largely a goodwill effort.

The troops have handed over their garriisons, buildings and some equipment to local officials. But Col. Hieronim Cichon, of the Polish government bureau in charge of the withdrawal, said Friday that they also are leaving behind some bills.

He said the Russians owe about $7.2 million in unpaid rent and utility charges. Also unresolved is payment for repairs of environmental damage, with Poland estimates at $2.07 billion.

In the 1980s, Soviet troops were stationed in 39 garrisons around Poland. The phased withdrawal of the Northern Group of the Russian Army began April 8, 1991, when 56,000 of its soldiers were in the country.

French fight invasion of U.S. films

PARIS (AP) — Nothing personal against Yogi Bear or Fred Flintstone, but the defenders of French culture say enough is enough.

With militaristic fervor, politicians, movie stars and producers are mobilizing for full-scale war to slow the transatlantic invasion of American films and TV shows.

"Jurassic Park" will lumber into 450 French movie theaters next month. But the villain of the moment is Ted Turner, accused Friday of "preparing to bombard our continent" with cartoons and colorized Hollywood classics.

The crusade has brought political rivals together in defense of France's embattled audiovisual industry. Former Culture Minister Jack Lang, a Socialist, praised the efforts of his conservative successors to resist U.S. entertainment giants.

"It's intolerable that certain North American audiovisual companies shamelessly colonize our country," Lang said in a statement protesting Friday's launch of Turner's 24-hour TNT and Cartoon-Network across Western Europe.

The London-based satellite channel will give Europeans with cable or satellite hookups the option of watching 10 hours a day of vintage American films and 14 hours a day of "The Flintstones," "Yogi Bear" and other cartoons.

Lang denounced "the illegal launch of an American television channel in Europe which is preparing to bombard our continent with exclusively American images."

He and others contend that the Turner channel's offerings violate a European Community directive that at least half the programming on such networks be European-made. Despite a complaint from the EC, Britain's Independent Television Commission has given Turner Broadcasting System Inc. permission for the new venture, including authorization to broadcast across Western Europe.

Turner's office in London insists its venture is legal. However, a spokeswoman who declines to be named said the channel "will do whatever is needed to come to some compromise," including adding some European-produced programming.

Mediators, Serb president meet to iron out Bosnian cease-fire fire at noon Saturday, raising guarded hopes for a halt to bitter fighting in Bosnia.

Despite talk of peace, the bloodshed continued.

A Sarajevo market was shelled, killing a 2-year-old boy and at least one other person. Eight people were wounded, according to Dr. Faruk Kulenovic of the capital city's Kosevo hospital.

Fighting between government and Croat forces persisted in central Bosnia near Vitez and Gorzki Vakuf. Bosnian radio reported dozens of casualties in what it called the heaviest shelling since May in the divided city of Mostar in the southwest. Croatian radio reported three Croat soldiers killed and 10 wounded in battles for the city.

The central Bosnia and Mostar fighting has obstructed the passage of vital aid convoys for Sarajevo.

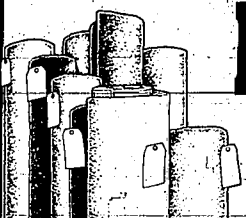

Mediators Lord Owen and Thorvald

Stoltenberg were to brief Milosevic on progress toward ending the war, which has left up to 200,000 people dead or missing and 2 million homeless.

Milosevic is blamed for inciting the Serb rebellion that began the war when Bosnia seceded from Yugoslavia nearly 18 months ago.

1 suit dismissed in restaurant poisonings

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A lawsuit in the Jack in the Box tainted burger case was dismissed Friday, but a broader suit remains pending in San Diego.

Foodmaker of San Diego, Jack in the Box's parent, sued Vons Cos., from whom it bought the bacteriologically meat.

The suit, filed in state court in San Diego, was moved to Los Angeles in July at the request of Vons, which is based nearby in Arcadia.

Meanwhile, Jack in the Box franchisees sued Foodmaker, Vons and Vons' meat suppliers in San Diego in a case that prompted cross-complaints by Foodmaker against Vons and others.

That lawsuit includes all the issues that would have been litigated in Los Angeles and more, said Foodmaker's lawyer, Frederic Gordon.

The Los Angeles case was dismissed by Superior Court Judge David Horowitz.

"It would be a waste of judicial economy and client resources" to pursue both cases, Gordon said.

Foodmaker has settled two lawsuits brought by people who became ill or their families, said spokeswoman Gina Devlin. Forty-four similar suits are pending.

In addition, the company last month announced the settlement of its portion of the lawsuit with the Jack in the Box franchise owners over business loss because of the deadly outbreak of food poisoning in the Pacific Northwest, mostly Washington state.

Negotiations with a few of those franchisees continue, so Foodmaker hasn't been formally dismissed as a defendant, Devlin said.

The company announced last month that it would take a $40.4 million charge to cover the settlement.

A class-action lawsuit by shareholders over the contamination remains pending against Foodmaker, Devlin said.

Man fires at students, kills himself

SHERIDAN, Wyo. (AP) - A man walked onto a school football field Friday with a rifle and a handgun and started firing at children in a gym class, wounding four before killing himself.

Two of the students were hospitalized, but none was seriously hurt. The 29-year-old gunman's motives weren't immediately clear. He shot at random at sixth- and seventh-graders and died at a hospital less than four hours later.

"He just walked onto the field and started shooting at everybody," said Dan Bremkamp, a pupil who was on the field. "At first, we were all in shock and then the teacher said to go inside and get under a table or something."

No one saw the gunman, Kevin Newman, as he approached the field.

"There were two groups playing and he walked onto the middle of the field and started shooting," said Russell Carlson, school superintendent for the town of 14,000 in north-central Wyoming.

One teacher, Vicky Hanft, realized what was going on she "started waving kids off the field," she said. Fortunately, the teachers knew how to react in a serious situation.

Newman shot himself in the head and died at Sheridan County Memorial Hospital.

Investigators found a suicide note in Newman's motel room in Sheridan, said Sheridan County Attorney Matt Redde.

The note indicated he was unhappy but didn't say anything about injuring others or explain why he went to the football field, he said.

Newman, a Sheridan native, had recently received a less-than-honorable discharge from the U.S. Navy, authorities said.

He had been stationed at a naval base in Hawaii and had returned to Sheridan earlier this month.

Classes were dismissed at the school, which has an enrollment of about 550 students in sixth and seventh grades.

A crisis team of counselors would be on hand when classes resume Monday, Carlson said.

Listed in fair condition at Sheridan Memorial Hospital were Danny Schultz and Cory Butler, both 12.

The other two students injured at Central Middle School, Justin Sprague, 11, and Lindsay Beld, 12, were treated for minor injuries and sent home.

Mothballed reactors may be cut soon

OLYMPIA (AP) - The Washington Public Power Supply System is expected to announce as early as November to terminate two mothballed nuclear plants that have been mothballed for more than a decade, the agency's managing director says.

The House Council told a state Senate committee Thursday that an expected regional shift toward natural gas as an electricity source will likely force WPPSS to terminate the plants rather than finish them for power generation.

"I have two plants ready to finish and we feel they could be cost-effective, but this is not what the public wants at the present time," Council said.

Work was stopped in 1982 on WPPSS plants No. 1 at the Hanford nuclear reservation near Richland and No. 3 at Statop, west of Olympia.

They were deemed on indefinite hold because their power might be needed later, and maintenance costs have run about $10.5 million a year.

The reactors were among five nuclear plants that WPPSS and a sortifm of public and municipal utilities, tried to build in the 1970s.

Only the No. 2 plant at Hanford was completed, and it survives as the state's only commercial nuclear reactor.

In addition to the two mothballed plants, two other plants were terminated after forecasts of regional power demand indicated they would not be needed. The terminations led to a $2.5-billion municipal bond default, the largest in history.

Council said he plans to finish refinancing the original bonds for the mothballed plants, which contain a stipulation triggering a default in case of termination. About $500-million in original bonds remains. If interest rates hold, the debt will be completed by November, he said, and a decision to terminate the plants could follow.

He also told lawmakers that WPPSS proposed range.

Brian Goller, a conservationist and range opponent, criticized the move as premature until the Air Force releases an environmental impact study of the range proposal. That report is expected later this month.

"What's characteristic of how this whole process is laid out, Goller said, things are arranged in advance."

Man fires at students, kills himself

Public sentiment against nuclear power makes it unlikely a new proposal to use the plants to help destroy nuclear weapons will go forward.

A private consortium has proposed using the reactors to burn the nation's stockpile of unneeded weapons-grade plutonium and generate power from the material. The group includes Bob Ferguson, who ran WPPSS in the early 1980s during its worst period.

Ferguson is now a vice president for the consulting firm Seize Applications International Corp., which along with two other companies is backing the so-called Isiah Project, named after a biblical reference to turning swords into plowshares.

The proposal would involve the investment of $5.3 billion in private capital and the creation of a company to run the reactors.

"There's something very worthwhile to do here," Ferguson said in an interview. "The proposal is to get rid of nuclear weapons, and that's what we're trying to accomplish."

Proponents say the project would cost less than permanently storing the highly toxic wastes.

But Council-told-lawmakers-the project is a long shot.

"Technically the Isiah Project could be done just about anywhere," Council said. "It's technically feasible, but I just see the Pacific Northwest as an area not conducive to new nuclear power development."

Council said termination would be required in any case for the Isiah Project to move ahead.

The first, in Gooding, he lived in from the late 1940s until the mid-1960s. Dan always wanted to build another home to correct what he thought was wrong with the first. This he did in Wendell and they lived there until his retirement.

Dan is survived by his wife, Mildred of Nampa; four step children, Colleen and Dick Carlson of Bothell, Wash.; Betty and Myrtice Hammer of Nampa; Donald and Anne Sullivan of Nampa and Oliver and Gloria Sullivan of Reno, Nev.; a sister, Harriett Johnson of Denver, Colo.; a half-sister, Leola Hickert of Akron, Colo.; two cousins he was raised with, Blanche Reed and Doris Lind of Fort Morgan, Colo.; 16 step grandchildren; seven step great-grandchildren; and two step great-great-grandchildren. 2 teens escape injury after car hit tree

BURLEY — Two teenagers escaped serious injury Thursday afternoon when the car they were riding in hit a tree.

According to police reports, a 15-year-old male driver swerved his car and hit a mailbox and newspaper box before plowing into a tree about 4:46 p.m. Thursday.

The accident occurred at 500 South Road when a female passenger, 14, lying down in the front right seat, tried to get up by grabbing the steering wheel, causing the vehicle to veer left.

The driver tried to steer back onto the road but overcorrected and swerved off the road.

Horn he overcorrected and the car swerved across the opposite side, hitting a mailbox and newspaper box before hitting a tree head on.

Both youths suffered minor injuries.

Aquifer recharge panel meets in October

BURLEY — The Legislature's interim committee on aquifer recharge will conduct its next meeting at 9:30 a.m. on Oct. 6 in the Minidoka Room 2 of the Burley Inn.

The committee is studying ways to recharge the Snake River Plain Aquifer. The amount of water seeping back into the aquifer has declined in recent years, because of changes in irrigation practices by farmers and several years of drought.

According to the Idaho Department of Water Resources, about 5,000 well pump holders farm about 1.3 million acres in the state.

Artificial recharge is part of a plan the department is developing to manage the state's surface water and groundwater resources together.

Irrigators, water users cover water rules

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Farmers, irrigation companies and municipalities voiced their concerns Friday over the state Department of Water Resources should create new rules for "co-managing" ground and surface water.

At a public meeting Friday afternoon, about 35 people discussed an issue stirring up controversy in the Mini-Cassia area and in other parts of southern Idaho.

Increasing conflicts between surface and groundwater users and a court order have forced the department to start drafting rules that would determine whether and how to "distribute" water in cases where surface water rights are affected by groundwater rights.

Guy Meuleman, distributor for Aqua Control Inc. in Rupert, said he worries about how the state allows new farmers to move in and take water from the Snake River and the Snake River Plain Aquifer, increasing the burden on the water supply.

One issue discussed was whether farmers who use water from the springs should look for alternatives — such as through tunnels — before asserting their "senior rights" to groundwater.

Another topic was whether people who install sprinklers should be required to compensate for the decrease in the aquifer. Also discussed was whether regular checks should be made on how much water farmers are using.

Formal rule-making will follow the series of informal public meetings.

The department wants final rules to be adopted by the first week of April, department Director R. Keith Higginson said.

Some members of the audience expressed concern over the rush to adopt new rules, especially during a time farmers are busy with a late harvest season.

Higginson said that the tight schedule for public input was a result of the court order. The department is appealing that court decision in the state Supreme Court.

Public hearings will be conducted before any new rules are adopted.

Groundwater from the Snake River Plain Aquifer irrigates 1 million to 1.2 million acres. This reduces groundwater by about 1.5 million acre feet of water annually, according to department figures.

An acre-foot is the amount of water it takes to cover one acre with one foot of water.

This was not a problem in the past, but in recent years groundwater pumping has lowered the groundwater level, affecting spring flows and drying up some wells.

The result has pitted senior surface water users junior groundwater users.

Idaho's water law is based on the principle of "first in time, first in right," establishing a priority for those who were first to put the water to "beneficial" use.

If this principle were strictly enforced, the department would be forced to start shutting off the pumps of junior water right owners when senior surface water rights are affected.

This could damage the livelihoods of farmers.

Shutting off or cutting back the pumps of junior groundwater rights could potentially affect more than 1 million acres of farmland.

In some cases it could take several years before affected groundwater flows are restored by shutting off wells.

It may be that because of proximity or aquifer gradient that some wells affect the diminished surface water source more than others.

Those wells may be shut off first — regardless of seniority — to protect the affected groundwater right.

Continued pumping without any consideration of the consequences could have equally severe effects on those who rely on the springs fed by the aquifer.

The flow from the aquifer at Thousand Springs along the Snake River now is about 6,600, about the level of 1925. The spring flows peaked in the 1950s. Changes in irrigation practices and increased groundwater pumping since then has brought the aquifer level back down closer to historic levels.

Power's family: Not knowing fugitive's fate toughest part of ordeal

DENVER (AP) — The family of anti-war fugitive Katherine Power says the hardest part of her 23 years in hiding was not knowing if she was dead or alive.

"When you have a death you're closing the lid of the coffin. You're closing the lid on that life," Power's father, Win, said Friday.

"When you have a person missing, that would never leaves. That would be sore until the day you do find whether the person is dead or alive."

Power pleaded guilty Wednesday to charges of manslaughter and armed robbery for a 1970 bank robbery in Boston in which a policeman was shot to death. The robbery was an effort to get money to finance anti-Vietnam War efforts.

Power had assumed a new identity and lived in several states, spending the last 13 years in Oregon as Alice Metzinger.

Her parents and her five brothers and sisters said at a news conference that they never knew where she was, and at times thought she might be dead or have left the country. All they knew, they said, was what the FBI told them.

The family never gave up hope that she would turn herself in and that they would someday see her again. Her parents, Win and Marjorie, live in Grand Junction, and her two brothers and three sisters live in Denver.

"We would gather at family gatherings and say 'Where do you think she is now? What would you do if she showed up now?' We always had these kind of lively discussions about her. She was never out of our thoughts when we were together," said her sister Claudia Power Jansen.

Power, who grew up in Denver and was valedictorian of her graduating class at now-defunct

Pilot lands plane on golf course

SPOKANE (AP) — An unidentified pilot whose plane apparently ran out of gas landed on a local golf course, left his craft there overnight and took off again at first light Friday.

The man made the emergency landing at about 7 p.m. Thursday, and vanished early Friday.

"It was dark when he came out here and gassed it up," said Herb Brown, owner of the Wandermere Golf Course.

The landing did not damage the course, said Brown, adding he was happy the man was still alive.

"Someone was definitely looking over him," he said. Brown said if the man had tried to land any earlier there would have been golfers on the course, and if he'd tried to land any later, it would have been too dark to see.

Tom Horn cleared in trial re-enactment

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Turn-of-the-century hired gun Tom Horn, hanged 90 years ago for the murder of a 14-year-old boy, on Friday received a posthumous acquittal during a re-enactment of his trial.

The verdict, rendered at the end of a day-and-a-half of courtroom theater that mixed highlights of Horn's 1876 trial with evidence that came out after his conviction, assures only that debate over who killed Willie Nickell and why will continue.

"Settle" defense attorney Joseph Moch said when asked if the verdict would end the debate. "Hell, it's going to start it. ... It fuels it, it throws it into high gear."

The verdict has no legal standing, but Horn's defenders had hoped a verdict of innocent in the trial held by the organizers of the "Tom Horn Kick and Growl," an annual celebration marking Horn's life and times, would give them standing to ask Gov. Mike Sullivan for a posthumous pardon.

The appearance of courtroom theater... Sound crews scurried across the floor of the state district courtroom to place sound levels; witnesses came across more as actors than as individuals involved in a murder investigation and trial.

O'Neal, who paid-rapt attention throughout the event, was somewhat amused by the attention his great-uncle was receiving.

"What's fascinating is it's been going on 90 years and it's still going strong," he said. "... He (Horn) obviously lived off his reputation and this lot in life was obviously fine with him, but I don't think he killed the kid."

Viola Nickell Bixler, a niece of Willie Nickell, didn't think the re-enactment was convincing enough to produce a verdict.

"I guess I was expecting a definite conclusion and I don't think there was any," she said.

Nickell's descendants have, however, written Sullivan to ask that he not pardon Horn.

"We just don't think it is wise or reasonable to change history this many years after the fact," said Mrs. Bixler, 70.

Christian activists transform the GOP

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) - Jim Hanak was elected last year to the Chester County Republican Committee, one of those obscure party posts that often draw little interest but can carry a big voice in recruiting and endorsing candidates for local offices.

Robertson

A soft-spoken man with passionate politics, he represents a growing force that is splitting the personality of local Republican politics across the United States.

Hanak is also state director for the American Family Ministries, a conservative, anti-abortion group. His dual roles represent an evolving nightmare to moderate Republicans: the quiet takeover of local GOP organizations by religious activists they view as obsessed with abortion and homosexuality and intolerant of those who don't share their views.

"These people are zealots," argues Ellen Harley, a state representative from suburban Philadelphia. "They want to impose their idea of God and their idea of values and push the social issues to the fore. That has never been what Republicans are about. A political party should not be about the business of trying to define God."

It's a festering feud that belies all the recent talk of Republican unity against President Clinton's tax increases.

"It is not going to go away," Republican National Committee member Elsie Hillman says of the split. "We just have to deal with it." Because of their strength at local levels, religious conservatives now control or have significant influence over Re-publican parties in at least 18 states: Alaska, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Minnesota, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas, Washington and Virginia.

Since 1988, when religious broadcaster Pat Robertson showed surprising strength in GOP presidential caucuses, Christian activists have realized the influence of low-level party posts, and the ease with which these positions can be won because of low interest.

"I could have been a Nazi or a communist and still have gotten elected," Hanak said last year.

While the Republican National Committee and most state GOP committees remain in the hands of "party regulars," local strength gives Christian activists power to endorse candidates for school boards, county commissions and state legislatures. Christian political leaders deny any attempt to control the GOP, notwithstanding Robertson's 1991 pledge to have "a working majority of the Republican Party in the hands of pro-family Christians by 1996."

Ralph Reed, executive director of the national Christian Coalition, explains, "We are involved in the party but we don't seek to become the party. A political party is not a church. Its job is not to promulgate a doctrine of faith and save souls, its job is to field candidates and win elections."

The important question: How is it with your soul?

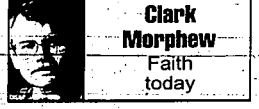

Not a saint? You still can be happy

I am going to tell you something that will probably make you sad - you are never going to be canonized, that is, declared a genuine saint and held up as a holy example forever.

The reasons are many. First, some of you come from the wrong religion, and no matter how hard you try, the Catholic Church will not recognize your holiness.

The thought of the Catholic Church canonizing a Presbyterian, for instance, is startling at best.

Another reason you won't be declared a saint is that you don't save relics: personal items, such as clothing you once wore or even wisps of your hair or fingernail clippings. You probably think it's saintly to keep your robe-organized-and, therefore, you leave all your locks-of-hair-on-the-barbershop-floor. That's a big mistake because saints need relics.

Clark Morpew

The third reason is that you're too busy and too much in the hustle of life. Ordinary folks who actually work for a living just don't have a chance. You get angry with the boss and you grumble as you walk back to your desk. Pop! There goes the holiness!

Or you're walking down the street and a car passes by that you would love to own and you think, just for an instant, that you deserve that car more than the woman driving it. Bam! We lack, saints do not cover.

Finally, you have not rendered any miracles. Yes, fixing the dishwasher was close but not on a par with healing someone of warts, for instance. And you may think that living with your spouse requires the patience of a saint, but how does it stack up against having a vision of angels hovering over the backyard fence?

We're all out of luck, just ordinary people who can't even get to church on time.

But this is odd, a liberating thought. We will never be saints. Isn't that a relief?

Now we don't have to chase after miracles. We can relax a bit and be ourselves. We can laugh and whoop it up whenever we want.

If we have a bad thought, we can enjoy it, and we don't have to feel guilty because, hey, we're just ordinary people. If someone criticizes us, we can shrug it off and say, "What did you expect? I'm never going to be a saint."

In other words, we can be happy.

Recently, I had the pleasure of hearing the Dalai Lama speak to about 75,000 people in a public park in Chicago.

His holiness, the Dalai Lama, is a Nobel Prize winner and the exalted spiritual head of Tibetan Buddhists. His speech was the closing event of the Parliament of World Religions.

The Dalai Lama said many significant things during that evening session. But one thing in particular has stuck in my mind. With a gentleness that stole the heart of the crowd, he said the purpose of life is to be happy.

That is an amazing statement, remarkable in its simplicity and profound in its implications for life. The purpose of life is to be happy. Why hadn't I thought of that before?

If you were to ask just about any priest or pastor on the face of the Earth what the purpose of life is, he or she would probably say it was to serve the Lord or create a better world through sacrifice to the Almighty. But the Dalai Lama says the purpose of life is to be happy.

Pilgrims, this has nothing to do with eating, drinking and being merry. It has to do with fulfillment, of being filled with grand excitement, of the sights and sounds of beauty, lofty thoughts, good friends and noble colleagues.

Does this mean that we can stop praying or meditating? No, because being alone with the divine brings us serenity. Does it mean we don't have to be servants? No, because service for others is a human being can do in this life.

Does it mean we don't have to strive for goodness and the moral life? Of course not. How can a person be happy if his or her life is chaotic and negative?

Here is the truth: you don't have to be a saint, but it is your spiritual destiny to be happy.

Clark Morpew is an ordained clergyman and is religion writer for the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press.

Most denominations in the world today began as the result of the presence of a strong personality whose convictions eventually led to the establishment of a separate movement. United Methodism is no exception to that rule.

In the 18th century, an Anglican priest in England whose career in the church had so far been unremarkable, experienced the overwhelming love of God within himself. That "warming of the heart" led the Rev. John Wesley out into the streets, the fields and the coal-pits to share the good news of Jesus Christ with those who were being overlooked by the state church.

The obstacles he faced were formidable. The common people of England were illiterate for the most part; their lives were sunk in poverty and disease, and the knowledge that they had of the Christian faith was almost nonexistent. What they did know of faith was connected with the upper classes who scorned people of their station.

Wesley preached to the tens of thousands outside the doors of the church. Thousands responded to his call for repentance and to receive Christ as Lord and Savior. The organizing genius of Wesley was such that he began to arrange classes for teaching the Bible, for developing reading skills and for lay persons to learn to take care of each other. Together with his brother, Charles and the coal-pits to share the good news of Jesus Christ with those who were being overlooked by the state church.

When he met with his preachers or the early Wesleyan people, John always asked each one (expecting an answer), "How is it with your soul?" He constantly asked people to inventory their spiritual lives as well as their physical ones.

Now, in our semi-sophistication, few of us ask that of each other anymore. But it is still a relevant question. And the answer that we get as we ask that question of ourselves is a critical one.

How is it with your soul?

Wesley's genius was that he built that

Magic Valley churches form project to tell story of Methodist community

By Diane Schorzman
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The United Methodists of the Magic Valley have a mission — to tell the story of warm-hearted, hard-working Methodists who actively toil for the benefit of their communities.

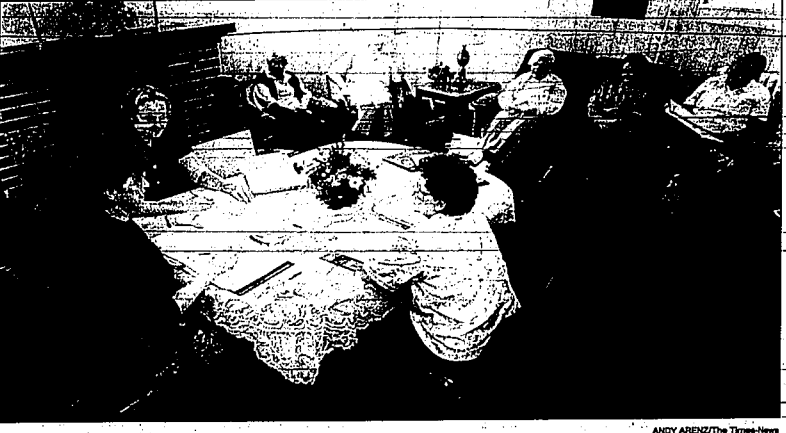

Methodist congregations in the Magic Valley — from Hagerman, to Burley, Gooding to Shoshone — are part of the Magic Valley Project, one of three pilot projects of the Oregon/Idaho Conference of the United Methodist Church.

The purpose of the one-year project, says the Rev. Stephan Ross of the Burley United Methodist Church, is to find out "whether people outside of the church know about us. We want to share our story — that there are United Methodists serving their neighbors in every level of community in the action and service."

The project theme is "Warm Hearts, Working Hands." The message is that the Methodist tradition affirms, as Christians, "we can think and let think, building circles of inclusion while exploring the meaning of our faith in Jesus Christ."

The Rev. Gerry Hill's congregation at the Bull United Methodist Church is already planning ways to move further outside the walls of the church.

"We're hoping to identify at least one area of need in our community and start ministries to meet that need," says Hill. "It's easy to get focused on what we're doing inside the church and forget about others in the community, but that's when the church is really alive and vital, when it moves outside the church."

Kimberly's United Methodist Women plan for big events just ahead. President Donna Huether, left, secretary Pauline Burtrum and Nadeen Stumpf preside over the meeting.

Karen McAlister, president of the eastern district of the United Methodist Women's organization, says women's roles in the church have changed.

In the '50s and '60s, the women served dinner. Now we're more pro-active and probably one of the strongest connecting ties within the church."

Historically, the primary purpose of United Methodist Women (UMW) was to furnish funds for overseas missions, but today the women have other areas of interest as well, from providing babysitting to raising women's political and social consciousness. McAlister says the women support their church, each other and their community.

The eastern district (southern Idaho from Boise and Nampa to Idaho Falls) is holding its annual meeting today at the Kimberly United Methodist Church, Pat Ballard, treasurer of the Kimberly UMW, expects about 100 members to attend. After the morning business meeting, UMW members with 50 or more years of service will be recognized.

The Magic Valley Project will officially begin Sept. 26 with "Shuffle-a-preacher Sunday." Eleven Methodist pastors will trade churches for the Sunday worship service. The Rev. Bill Lineberry of the Rupert United Methodist Church organized the preacher swap, deciding who would go where.

"It's times like this when I almost wish I wasn't a United Methodist so I could experience the joy of becoming one all over again," says Lineberry.

The pulp exchange is a symbolic way for Methodist congregations to join hands and mark the beginning of their project.

Rosh Hashana takes on new meaning — change — this year

The Associated Press

The period ends Sept. 25 with Yom Kippur, God's forgiving "day of atonement."

The "buzz word" for the occasion is change, changing word for behavior and partial outlooks, says Rabbi A. James Rudin of the American Jewish Committee.

"Seeing the two ancient enemies in the Middle East seeking peace and making a change for renewal gives the holy days a special meaning for me for the first time in my life."

After watching the White House ceremonies Monday and handclaps among Jewish and Arab leaders, Rudin said: "It's a time of repentance for the bloodshed, hatred, bigotry and mutual suspicion and a carrying out public repentance and commitment to change. For the first time, I feel the words of the high holy days have meaning not just personally, but nationally and internationally."

NEW YORK — The long blast on the ram's horn is described as symbolically announcing: "Oyez! Oyez! This court is now in session. The Right Honorable Judge of the World presiding."

Using the courtroom image to portray the current high holy days of Judaism, Rabbi Irving Greenberg suggests the divine judge must be pleased at a simultaneous event — steps toward peace in the battle-scarred Middle East.

He said that surprise phenomenon could mean "a point of renewal, new patterns and new directions" not only for the Middle East but the world.

Changing attitudes and overcoming of hatreds and hostilities are among the goals of the 10 "days of awe" and repentance that began Wednesday evening with Rosh Hashana, Judaism's spiritual New Year.

Gathering shows differences in faith

Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

The recent weeklong Parliament of the World Religions in Chicago demonstrated the complications of bringing together 250 faiths under one roof. Held for the first time since 1893, the event was a sometimes chaotic mix of the familiar and the bizarre. Here are a few highlights.

The parliament site, the ornate Palmer House Hotel, had a colorful parade of the faithful: white-collared pastors, russet-robed Buddhists, feather-bedecked American Indians, sari-clad Hindus, white-robed Zoroastrians, dreadlocked Rastafarians.

With 762 programs and 7,700 participants in one week — 1,700 more than expected — the gathering's first day, Aug. 28, was chaotic.

There were surreal moments, too. One plenary meeting dealt with religion's power to bring the world together. At the end, the loudspeakers played John Lennon's song "Imagine" — with its expressed wish for "no religion."

And, pagans of various stripes evidently regard the parliament as a chance to gain some legitimacy.

"Coming out of the broom closet" is the way Phyllis Curran put it. Curran is president of the Covenant of the Goddess, a self-billed church council for American witches. She

QB leads Boise over Minico

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer BOISE — Junior quarterback Ross Austin turned red hot in the second half Friday night and passed the Boise Braves to a 27-10 comeback victory over Minico.

"We just can't cover deep," said Minico Coach John Billze. "That's been our problem all year."

over from the 14, but his point after kick went right, leaving Minico on top 7-6. It was like that when Minico kicked off to start the second half, Boise fumbled on the first play and Eric Flato recovered at the Boise 47. Minico held the ball for eight plays, but on fourth-and-6, dropped a Labra back for a 26 yard field goal.

The Times-News DILLON, Mont. — The College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles hit the road Friday and found it to their liking.

Andretti will join Indy car tour next season

NAZARETH, Pa. (AP) — Under the watchful eyes of his old boss and his new boss, Michael Andretti made it official Friday that his Formula One experiment is over and that he will return to the Indy car world next season.

Both Andretti and Dennis said the driver chose to make the move back to the American-based open-wheel series when McLaren was unable to assure him of his plans for 1994.

"It's a disappointment that I'm not able to finish the year," Andretti said, "but I understand the position Ron is in. We live to go forward."

Andretti said he will return to the Indy car world next season, while Dennis will remain in Formula One. Andretti's decision to return to Indy cars was a surprise to some fans.

Briefly

Penguins star will miss NHL opener PITTSBURGH — Mario Lemieux, who underwent surgery July 28 to repair a strained muscle in his back, is expected to miss the Pittsburgh Penguins' regular-season opener in Philadelphia on Oct. 5.

Raiders' 'Rocket' suffers spasms EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — The NFL debut of wide receiver-kick returner Riggins 'Rocket' Ismail with the Los Angeles Raiders could be put on hold for another two weeks because of back spasms.

Ismail missed a second straight day of practice Friday while complaining of back spasms. Although Friday's session is a light workout without pads, Ismail was also not on the field Thursday, either.

Ismail, who played the last two seasons in the Canadian Football League, signed a contract with the Raiders five days before the season opener, but was held out on a roster exemption.

Ismail was activated for last Sunday night's game at Seattle, but did not play.

Raiders coach Art Shell said Wednesday he expected Ismail to make his NFL debut Sunday against the Cleveland Browns. Then, Ismail's back started acting up.

Olajuwon may be ineligible for U.S.

HOUSTON — Houston Rockets center Hakeem Olajuwon, now a U.S. citizen, may not be able to play for the U.S. Olympic team in 1996 because of a paperwork snafu, the Houston Chronicle reported Friday.

Olajuwon, a native of Nigeria, became a U.S. citizen on April 2, but he still is not eligible to play for the U.S. Olympic team until proper documents have been filed with the Federation Internationale de Basketball.

Focus

The rotunda of the Capitol, above, has been the building's ceremonial focal point since 1824. A mural by Allyn Cox, below, in the House wing of the building shows George Washington laying the cornerstone with a silver trowel during ceremonies on Sept. 18, 1793. From its laughable beginnings, the Capitol has become a premier American monument.

A Capitol bicentennial

National symbol has seen 200 years of American history

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It has sheltered the wounded, from bloody military wars and dirty political wars. It is a hallowed birthplace of grand ideas, and a notorious breeding ground for hubbub and baldersdash. It is a shrine to heroes past and unborn, and the world's greatest stage for democracy.

Thomas Jefferson named the place with a stroke of his pen, when he scratched out the words "Congress House" on Pierre L'Enfant's map of the new federal district and wrote in "Capitol."

And on Sept. 18, 1793, George Washington, anxious to head off demands to move the federal city, then a muddy village, to a place offering more civilization, used a silver trowel to cement the Capitol's cornerstone into a foundation that stretched across the brow of a hill overlooking the Potomac.

In the two centuries that have passed, the Capitol has served as center stage of American political and legislative life, its growth reflecting the continental expansion of the nation.

Over those 200 years the Capitol has been invaded, burned and bombed. Its architect quarreled. It was built, rebuilt, extended.

In the early 1860s, Union troops were sheltered in its legislative chambers. The floor below the soaring rotunda was filled with the wounded from nearby battlefields. Ovens were installed in its maze of passageways to bake bread for a defending army.

"It was 'the big tent,'" the Union soldiers said.

An expanded Capitol continued to rise during the years of the Civil War. And as a new cast-iron dome rose over the old sandstone walls, President Lincoln used it as the premier symbol of national unity.

"If people see the Capitol going on, it is a sign we intend the Union to go on," he said.

More often it has served the purpose for which it was intended, the open, messy process of battle and budgets, of debate and roll calls, of controversy, partisanship, filibusters and compromise.

The Capitol is now an unequalled American landmark, the "swelling dome rising above the marble wings and the white-painted sandstone center overlooking a city that at times believes itself the center of the world. The bicentennial will be officially celebrated with a re-enactment of the laying of the cornerstone on Saturday (Sept. 18). Next month, the newly-restored Statue of Freedom will be returned to its place atop the dome by helicopter.

In the words of historian David

McCullough, the Capitol has witnessed its share of "posturing and humbug" from the 11,373 lawmakers — 1,815 senators and 9,558 representatives — who have served in Congress since its beginnings.

"But let us make no mistake," McCullough said in a 1989 speech. "Victories have been won here, decisions of courage and vision achieved here, moments of high purpose and creativity, which are as great and inspired as any in our whole record as a people."

But at the beginning it was laughable.

Washington was at best an "embryo capital," visiting Irish poet Thomas Moore wrote in 1804, a place "where fancy sees squares in morasses, obelisks in trees ... with shrines unbuilt and heroes yet unborn."

A visitor in 1806 recorded that "so very thinly is the city-peopled that quails and other birds are constantly shot within a hundred yards of the Capitol."

The decision to place the capital city in the scrub oak and brush on the banks of the Potomac, on land carved equally from Maryland and Virginia, was a first example of the political logrolling and compromise that has characterized much of the nation's history.

The deal: The new national government would pick up the Revolutionary War debt of the mostly Northern states that had incurred it. But the capital would "move" south to rest on Southern soil, away from the influences and mobs of such places as New York and Philadelphia.

The site of the Capitol was chosen by L'Enfant, an irascible military engineer, who saw on an obscure slope named Jenkins Hill "a pedestal waiting a monument."

In 1800, seven years after Washington cemented the cornerstone in place, a sugar cube of a sandstone building stood ready to receive the Senate, House and Supreme Court. The rest of the envisioned building waited for time and money.

Today the Capitol has a floor area of more than 16 acres and stretches 751 feet 4 inches from north to south. New space carved underneath the terraces on its West Front and inserted into formerly open courtyards has given it nearly 600 rooms.

And the Capitol is only the centerpiece of six major House and Senate office buildings and a scattering of annexes and outposts.

US West plans major layoff

Restructuring effort could eliminate up to 300 jobs in Idaho

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — US West Inc. said Friday it will cut 9,000 jobs in its phone subsidiary, laying off an undetermined number of workers in the process, as it changes much of how it does business over the next three years. The company said it would take a $3.8 billion charge against third-quarter earnings.

US West said it would slash its workforce by 18 percent as it closes hundreds of offices in small towns and cities throughout the 14 states it serves in the West. Thousands of workers will be moved to larger cities.

Spokesman Judy Pepper said between 200 to 300 jobs would be cut in Idaho by the technological improvements. Those reductions would occur sometime between mid-1994 and the end of 1995 when the Boise operations center is opened, she said. There was no information on whether there would be additional cutbacks in Idaho under the corporate plan.

In Utah, one of 14 states affected, about 25 to 50 jobs will be lost, and other employees will be transferred.

The company said ordering phone service will become simpler and customers will be offered more options at night and on weekends.

Executives said they were making the moves in anticipation of competition from cable, cellular and other communications companies for local phoneing.

It does involve a lot of pain on the part of our employees, families and communities, but it really does reflect the marketplace that is here and emerging in telecommunications," chairman Richard McCormick said in a telephone news conference.

The six other local phone companies created in the 1984 breakup of AT&T are going through similar overhauls. Since 1988, they have collectively wiped out more than 60,000 jobs.

In the past month, Southwestern Bell and Ameritech have said they would each eliminate 1,500 jobs, mostly managers. But US West's restructuring is more sweeping.

The Denver-based company is also cutting the time it takes to depreciate, or account for, the value of important assets, like copper wire and digital switches.

That will result in a $3.2 billion special charge against third-quarter earnings. The job cuts will cost another $610,000, also to be made against the current quarter.

US West will post a loss for the quarter and year because of the charges.

Wall Street reacted favorably, however. The company's stock was up $2.12 to a share to $48.50 Friday afternoon on the New York Stock Exchange.

Separately, US West sought clearance from the Securities and Exchange Commission to offer up to 24 million shares of new common stock subject to conditions that include settlement of a shareholders' lawsuit.

In December 1991, the company announced plans to cut 6,000 jobs from its phone subsidiary. About 5,000 jobs have been cut so far.

The remaining 1,000 are included in the 9,000 cuts anticipated by the end of 1996. US West now employs 50,650 people in the unit. It employs about 10,000 more in other operations.

Dick McKnight, a US West spokesman, said it had not yet been determined how many workers would be laid off over the next three years.

Detention highlights risks of doing business in China

The Associated Press

BEIJING — Things were looking bright for Philip Cheng a few weeks ago. The American businessman had just resolved a dispute with his Chinese joint-venture partner and both sides were sitting down to a celebratory banquet.

That's when the police barged in and ordered what should have been an evening of good food and toasts into a nightmare.

Cheng's U.S. passport was seized under a local court order sought by the Chinese partner, and he was detained for three sleepless nights in a cramped dormitory room surrounded by police guards. Blankets covered the windows.

After the U.S. Embassy intervened, local authorities allowed Cheng to return to his hotel rooms but ordered him not to leave Changsha, the capital of Hunan province. "I thought I was trying very hard to help this province," Cheng said. "It was stupid."

The case highlights the risks of doing business in a country where a fledgling legal system lags far behind its booming economy.

Chinese legislation in the past decade has focused on the economy and foreign investment. The government aware that foreigners demand legal guarantees for their investments, has made economic and commercial law one of the strongest areas of the legal code.

But the problem is how, or even whether, the laws are applied. Local officials regularly flout the law either because they are ignorant of it or know no one will stop them.

In Cheng's case, his Chinese partner, a Changsha trading company, lodged a complaint with a local court accusing him of owing $165,000. Cheng says the money was part of a $1.6 million Chinese firm had agreed to invest in his joint-venture sports helmet factory.

Without even investigating the dispute, the court issued an order on Aug. 26 to confiscate Cheng's passport.
