Jerome abandons move to annex industrial park

By H.R. Weixel
Times-news correspondent

JEROME - The city is dropping its plan to annex the Jerome Industrial Park, City Administrator Larry Paine said Friday.

The decision also means city residents won't vote on a city water project next month.

"If we don't do the annexation then we don't do the water bond issue," Paine said. "The property tax revenue would just not be there for that."

Neither decision will be final until the City Council votes at its Tuesday night meeting. But Paine said the council reached informal conclusions on the issues in a work session this week.

The council previously had approved annexation of more than 70 parcels of property on the south and east side of Jerome, a move aimed at "tidying up" the city limits and providing tax revenue for the new well.

But the prospect of tax increases drew protests from owners of homes and businesses in the affected area.

Paine said the council's latest plan will mean:

- The Industrial Park won't be annexed.
- But land along 16th Avenue East will be, despite objections from property owners there.
- Land along Fourth Avenue East and Eighth Avenue East, from the current city limits to about the One Mile East Road, will be added to annexation plans.

In case residents of those streets are alarmed by news of impending annexation, Paine emphasized that the Fourth Avenue and Eighth Avenue annexations probably won't take place this year.

The revised annexation plan represents a compromise, among council members, Paine said. Members Ernest Brooks and Janer Burdick supported the original and

Store worker bulldogs suspected getaway car

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY - A woman was arrested on shoplifting charges after being captured with the help of a store employee who took a wild ride on the getaway car's luggage rack.

Margaret Thompson was about to take a lunch break Wednesday when the security alarm sounded at King's Department Store, 2281 Overland Avenue, according to store employees and a police report.

Cathy Herrera, 30, and a girl, 17, ran out the back entrance with several employees in pursuit, the report said. Thompson walked behind Herrera's brown 1984 Pontiac and stood at the rear bumper.

Louise Winnett, floor supervisor, walked around to Herrera's window, and told her to give up.

Spuds vend their way to famished

The Associated Press

CHICAGO - In 1976, vending historians say, the Chinese came up with a simple concept.

Put a coin in a machine, out pops a pencil.

In 1993, it's not just pencils. It's pizza, piroshki, potatoes, panthoshe and more behind the glass doors at this year's vending machine trade show.

Americans spend a lot of time, and loose change, on an estimated 4.5 million vending units in the nation. The National Automatic Merchandising Association estimates Americans spent more than $26 billion last year alone.

It's an appetite that goes beyond junk food.

With 260 exhibitors at the show, Eskimo Pies and Twinkies are joined by cappuccino, rice cakes and granola bars.

Looking for a small cup of freshly brewed decaffeinated coffee with sugar substitute? For 50 cents, or 70 cents for a large, Crane National Vendors will serve it to you.

"We've elevated the status of vended coffee," said Richard Ricci, vice president of sales and marketing for the Bridgeton, Mo., company.

Vendors, of course, pay more than four bits for the machines, which grind the beans and brew a cup on the spot. Where an old-fashioned instant-coffee or hotto make its mark on the vending industry with a device that distributes innovative. Kevin Swill, vice president of Innovative Distributors of America, said the machine is a perfect fit for office buildings, airports and hotels.

While panthoshe and coffee were a hot item at the show, french fries were even hotter.

The industry has struggled for years to develop the perfect fries. Ore-Ida banked first on a machine that included its own hot-oil-fryer, but scrapped it for safety reasons, said products engineer Wayne Covington.

Its new machine, being test-marketed at the Pentagon and elsewhere, uses precooked, frozen fries and a convection oven. Each box of fries costs about one dollar. That price includes 280 calories and 13 grams of fat.

Boise-based Ore-Ida operates a Potato processing plant at Burley, so some of the fries may have originated in the Magic Valley if not in another area of Idaho.

If fries are too mundane, Ore-Ida also offers piroshki, a pocket sandwiches filled with sausage, cheese, beef or pepperoni.

And if grazing through those machines leaves a consumer with a sour stomach, the industry has an answer to that, too: a machine that distributes Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

Rock, rap fail in Russia standoff

The Associated Press

MOSCOW - Pledging not to resort to force, President Boris Yeltsin's government borrowed a U.S. siege tactic on Friday and blasted high-decibel rock and rap music at defiant hard-liners barricaded inside parliament.

The lawmakers answered by pumping out tapes of droning speeches on privatization.

The loudspeaker war came on the 11th day of the standoff between Yeltsin and foes of his reforms.

About 5,000 troops and police continued to ring the building, and armed parliament backers still stood at barricades around it.

"Of course we're not going to use any force because we don't want any blood," Yeltsin said on national television, speaking slowly and without emotion. But he warned that accidental shooting could lead to major bloodshed.

A tentative agreement worked out by negotiators had called for lawmakers to give up their guns and for the government to restore power, water and phones to the parliament building.

The government had pinned its hopes on talks to resolve the crisis, which began when Yeltsin disbanded the Soviet-era parliament Sept. 21. He acted to break 18 months of political deadlock in which lawmakers slowed his free-market reforms and cut his powers.

"I just want to tell those staying in the White House that we lay no blame on anybody except their leaders and they're free to come out," Yeltsin said.

Parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov said the government blockade must end and all services be restored to the building before there could be any talks. Lawmakers also demanded live TV transmission of their debates.

"I'm convinced that the dictator will be stripped of power and isolated," Khasbulatov said, referring to Yeltsin. "This regime is finished. This regime is rotting. It's days are numbered."

The tentative agreement came a day after Yeltsin met with Patriarch Alexy II, head of the Russian Orthodox Church, who had offered to mediate. Talks with parliament at a Moscow monastery Friday were inconclusive, and were to resume today.

Lawmakers rejected the deal by voice vote.

Khasbulatov and vice President Alexander Rutskoi looked pale and stumped, but said they would keep up the fight.

The Foreign Ministry in Tokyo said Friday that Yeltsin still plans to visit Japan Oct. 11-13 despite the turmoil.

Having forewarned violence, troops around parliament adopted the rock 'n' roll strategy used successfully by U.S. forces in Panama and unsuccessfully by federal agents at the Branch-Davidian complex in Waco, Texas, blaring music that included Dire Straits' "Brothers in Arms" overlaid with Russian rap-style lyrics.

India quake rubble yields 3 live infants

The Associated Press

HOLI, India - Soldiers masked against the stench of death found three babies alive Friday in the rubble of one of the villages crushed by an earthquake that may have killed some 20,000 people.

The rescues were small spots of joy in a dismal landscape, where funeral pyres piled high with bodies flickered around dozens of villages, and stunned residents, drenched by incessant rains, wandered through the wreckage.

"It was a small success, but enough to motivate my boys to dig further," said Col. Pramit Roy, leader of the searchers at Holli.

As he spoke, Roy proudly pointed at his soldiers in green fatigues while they used shovels to dig through the village, one of many in southwestern India that lost nearly every home in Thursday's quake.

With handkerchiefs tied around their mouths and noses, the men found the babies in three different sites on the same block.

It was the first report of soldiers finding survivors since they arrived 12 hours after the quake ripped apart the rural area before dawn.

Offers of assistance came from many countries, including India's arch-rival, Pakistan. Japan donated $25,000. Britain and Israel offered to send trained rescue units.

Many Indian states, judicial courts,

The Sawtooth Chapter of the American Red Cross is accepting donations of money for victims of this week's devastating earthquake in southwestern India.

Chapter Manager Ruth Young said several people have already given money for victims of the earthquake, which has killed more than 20,000 people and injured at least 10,000.

Red Cross is requesting only cash donations, rather than food, clothing or other items. The money will be pooled and forwarded to the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, which is coordinating the relief effort.

Weather summary

Some mid and high level cloudiness moved across northern and eastern Idaho Friday as a couple of weak weather systems moved south across Montana and Wyoming.

The National Weather Service said no precipitation was reported with these systems.

Overnight low temperatures were in the 20s to lower 30s in the mountains and in the mid-30s to the mid-40s elsewhere, except some readings in the lower to mid-50s across southeast Idaho. Overnight lows ranged from 23 in Stanley to 56 in Burley.

Brisk westerly winds buffeted the Magic Valley most of the day, with velocities around 20 miles an hour. Skies were partly cloudy, with some middle to high level clouds crossing the southern part of the state.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 85 degrees at Caldwell. Stanley reported the lowest at 23 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 109 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif.; Houlton, Maine, reported the lowest temperature at 22 degrees.

October brings record low temperatures to wide area

Winds to the north of these cold temperatures were strong and gusty. Warnings were posted for gale force windover the Great Lakes.

The strong winds should produce lake effect snow in western Upper Michigan and could leave as much as 4 inches, the National Weather Service said. Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., got a half-inch of snow on Friday.

Elsewhere, there were few storms. Rainshowers and occasional thunderstorms were scattered in Michigan, Indiana and northwest Pennsylvania.

Temperatures across the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 32 degrees at Roseau, Minn., to 110 at Palm Springs, Calif.

Andrus seeks full INEL study

BOISE (AP) - Gov. Cecil Andrus wants to make certain that the public has a full choice to participate in a full choice to participate in the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's sitewide environmental impact study.

The governor on Friday released comments he submitted to the Department of Energy on "scoping" or determining the extent of the environmental impact study. The federal agency is establishing the framework for the study.

The study must be finished before the department can resume full shipments of spent nuclear waste to storage sites at INEL. Officials have estimated it will be completed about the middle of 1995.

"The Department of Energy needs to ensure that the public has a full opportunity to contribute to the environmental study of the site and it needs to make sure the right questions get answered," Andrus said.

"DOE by law and under a court order must prepare a full and complete study and it must be produced in a timely fashion and consider a reasonable range of alternatives," Andrus said.

Idaho had some reservations about the scoping proposal.

The announced scope of the environmental study does not represent a sitewide study. "The draft plan considers only issues of waste management and environmental restoration, and is far too general in nature," the governor's comment said.

Fearing she would be run over, Thompson reached for the luggage rack and held on. Winnett said she made a grab for the ignition keys, but Herrera gunned the engine.

"I don't know what possessed me to do that," Winnett said. "I guess I feared for (her Thompson)."

The car drove down the alley with Thompson on the back and stepped in front of two Baker's Food King employees, who were taking a lunch break.

"I was standing there and this car pulls up with this lady on the back. She says, 'Can you guys come help me?' said Martin Goold, produce manager. 'Help you what?' he asked. 'Help me stop this car,'" came the reply.

The driver's door opened, and Herrera ran. The 17-year-old drove off, with Thompson still on the back.

As Adam Peterson, the Food King daily manager, chased Herrera down the street, King's Department Store Manager Darin Stephens pulled up in his pickup and told him to get in.

"We cornered her with the pickup at the corner near the stop sign," Peterson said in an interview.

Employees at King's held her until police arrived. Police arrested and booked her on perit theft charges, saying she had taken a bar of soap, door knobs, and vacuum cleaner bags without paying.

Stephens said the store has problems which shoplifters, so much so that Tuesday night he told employees to watch the store.

Stephens would split the cost with them on the items, 50-50.

Thompson returned to the store, saying she jumped off several blocks down the road when the 17-year-old broke the car and slowed down, Winnett said.

"It really was comical the way it happened, but it could have been serious," Winnett said. "She said, 'It made me mad, that's why she jumped on the car.'"

"I said if it shows one thing, we don't fool around with shoplifters," Winnett said.

The 17-year-old was not charged. Herrera said the teenager had no idea what was going on and had taken no part in the thefts. Herrera said she had driven the car away just because she told her to do it. Herrera admitted to stealing the items. She had hidden them under her sweatshirt.

The car was released to the 17-year-old's parents.

Quake

India's Seismological Office said Thursday's quake measured 6.0. A quake of between 6 and 7 can cause severe damage.

Village after village was reduced to piles of black stones interspersed among yellow fields of sunflowers.

The narrow roads leading to many of the villages have been jammed by people coming to search for friends and relatives, blocking relief workers from delivering food and medicine. Some villages are nearly inaccessible because recent monsoons wiped out roads and bridges.

The quake hit when most people were asleep in poorly made dwellings of mud, stone or wood.

The devastation was so vast that many Hindu survivors were forced to go against their religion by cremating many friends and relatives in one pile of burning wood. In some places, 20 corpses were cremated together.

The government suspended all ceremonies and banquets for a week, and Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao's Cabinet formed a committee to study ways of rebuilding the villages.

President Clinton sent condolences Friday to Rao.

"My heart goes out to the victims of the devastation and to those left homeless," Clinton said in a telegram.

The Pentagon said it will send two U.S. Air Force transport planes this weekend to India with emergency shelter and medical supplies.

The quake, India's worst in a half century, measured at least 6 on the Richter scale. In addition to the thousands killed, at least 10,000 were injured.

Police in Bombay, the capital of Maharashtra, the worst-hit state, said 6,910 bodies had been recovered.

The number of deaths is still unclear. Quoting official sources, Press Trust of India news agency put the death toll at 21,000 and predicted it would eventually rise to 28,000.

Thomas Purey, the acting U.S. consul general in Bombay, also said the toll had crossed 20,000.

"They're finding more and more death and destruction as the rescue operations go on," he said.

Soldiers and policemen have rushed to the quake-stricken region with stretchers, tents, medical supplies, earth movers, bulldozers and mobile hospitals.

The Indian Red Cross was sending cargo planes packed with 200 tons of food, clothing, tents and medical supplies.

In Holi, soldiers found the three babies while digging through crushed stone houses. The troops also found many mangled bodies.

When they couldn't pull them out of the wreckage, the soldiers simply covered the remains with wood and set them on fire.

As in many other villages, most of the survivors in Holi either lived in wooden homes with thatched roofs or were sleeping in open fields to keep animals away from their creeps.

Study outlines on-the-job deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women account for only 15 percent of workplace deaths, but 40 percent of these workplace fatalities are murders, according to the first comprehensive government accounting of how people die at work.

Only 15 percent of workplace deaths among men resulted from murder, according to the Labor Department study released Friday. Officials suggested the difference was due to the large number of women exposed to crime by working late at night.

Highway vehicle accidents — including tractor-trailers, delivery vans and cars driven by salesmen — caused the most job-related fatalities, said the survey. They accounted for 18 percent — or 1,121 — of the 6,083 fatal job injuries in 1992.

But the study by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics showed that homicides — including shootings and stabbings — were a close second with 17 percent of the total, or 1,003 deaths.

"Relative to common perceptions, sales-work is dangerous," Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich explained at a news briefing. "There are a lot of all-night convenience stores that simply are the scenes of crimes."

Although men represent 55 percent of the workforce, they comprise 93

Workplace danger warning hits home during briefing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary Robert Reich was giving a briefing on workplace fatalities Friday when there was a loud bang behind him.

The department seal had fallen from the wall.

"There may be a workplace injury problem right here," he said, to the laughter of reporters. Seconds later, the building fire alarm sounded, followed by a voice over the loud speaker saying, "Please leave the building by the nearest exit."

"As someone responsible for the health and safety of the workplace, I believe we should leave," Reich said, leading the news contingent outside. He tried to resume the briefing on the sidewalk, but then fire engines arrived with their sirens blaring, drowning him out.

Minutes later, the emergency was declared over and the briefing continued — inside.

Reich said the study represented the first national census of occupational deaths. It will be used in government efforts to improve the safety and health of American workers.

In light of the new data on motor vehicle deaths, Reich said he will reexamine a proposed rule requiring seat belts on the job that has been delayed for several years.

Transportation fatalities accounted for 40 percent of job-related deaths, the study found. In addition to high-speed accidents, this figure included deaths from non-highway accidents such as farm and factory mishaps, 7 percent; aircraft, 6 percent; workers struck by vehicles, 6 percent; and 3 percent from other causes.

Assaults and violent acts represented 20 percent of the deaths, including 3 percent from suicides in addition to the murders.

Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, right, meets with the court's newest member, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, at the court in Washington Friday.

Ginsburg takes high court seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg took her seat at the bench Friday in a ceremony marking the first time two women sat together on the nation's highest court.

With President Clinton and more than 300 friends, family and guests looking on, Ginsburg again swore to "do equal right to the poor and to the rich."

She took the same oath Aug. 10, when she became the 107th Supreme Court justice.

Ginsburg's new colleagues shook hands warmly with her as she approached Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist for the oath.

Afterward, she took her place down the bench from Justice Sandra Day O'Connor in an historic moment. Never before had two women sat together on the bench of the Supreme Court.

O'Connor became the first female justice in 1981. That year, Ginsburg predicted to a university audience — that another woman would join O'Connor within the decade.

Ginsburg replaced retired Justice Byron R. White, who sat in the president's row along with retired Justices William J. Brennan and Lewis F. Powell.

Clinton, the first Democratic president since Lyndon B. Johnson to name a member of the high court, smiled as Ginsburg repeated the oath in measured tones.

Attorney General Janet Reno presented Ginsburg's presidential commission to the court.

After the ceremony, Rehnquist joined Ginsburg for the traditional walk down the Supreme Court building's marble front steps. The chief justice took an early exit at the bottom of the stairs as Ginsburg's family joined her.

The newest justice soon looked perplexed and exclaimed, "I'm looking for my husband." A few moments later, Martin Ginsburg bounded down the building's front steps to join the family portrait.

The high court, which begins its 1993-94 term Monday, held its first photograph session with Ginsburg when the justices met for coffee shortly before the investiture.

As it has in the past, the court refused new media organizations' request to televise the courtroom ceremony.

Ginsburg, a pioneering women's rights advocate and former federal appellate judge, is expected to be a more liberal justice than White. During the early 1970s she made the then-radical legal argument that the Constitution generally requires equal treatment for men and women.

Ginsburg joins a conservative court, but one that seems to lack an overriding ideological agenda.

O'Connor and Justices David H. Souter and Anthony M. Kennedy generally are viewed as more moderate and cautious than Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas.

Justices Harry A. Blackmun and John A. Paul Stevens, Midwestern Republicans, are the court's most liberal members.

Mandela urges U.S. investment in South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nelson Mandela beseeched financiers Friday to place their trust and funds in a new South Africa emerging from its pariah status and looking to become economically stable.

Mandela, president of the African National Congress, called for the end of economic sanctions on Sept. 24. During a 10-day tour of New York City and Washington, he has urged bankers, government officials and others to come to the aid of his recession wracked country.

The ANC also has been on a public relations spurt to alert all that it no longer favors its former policy of nationalizing companies. Mandela also has to convince people that violence and perceived political instability are not hindrances to investment.

"We do not want anybody to fear the future," Mandela told about 500 people at an all-day conference on institutional investment in post-apartheid South Africa. Also addressing the conference were the U.S. deputy secretary of state, Dr. Clifton Wharton, and the governor of the South African Reserve Bank.

"We welcome your interest in our country and would warmly welcome your involvement in us in its reconstruction," Mandela said.

For those who doubted his sincerity, Mandela asked, why would the ANC change course after spending all this time working to include every political party between the far right and the far left in the process that is changing South Africa to a democratic nation?

Pilot buried 25 years after begin shot down in South Vietnam

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Twenty-five years after he disappeared in a plane crash in South Vietnam, Air Force Col. Carl Karst was buried at Arlington National Cemetery Friday.

Vietnamese officials turned over Karst's remains in 1989, but they were not identified until last month by the U.S. Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii.

Karst was 38 when he was shot down while flying a Cessna O-1 "Bird Dog" reconnaissance plane on a routine mission Nov. 16, 1968. A command pilot from Galatia, Kan., Karst had been in the Air Force

Strike may close Kennedy Center

WASHINGTON — As striking musicians picketed outside the Kennedy Center on Friday, the center's chairman told playwrights inside that the strike could temporarily shut the center's doors.

"I have to say that it may be that we close for awhile," James D. Wolfensohn said at the end of an awards luncheon.

The Opera House Orchestra, 67 part-time musicians who perform for visiting ballets and musicals, has been on strike since Sept. 1. Wolfensohn says the only issue is that the musicians want to be guaranteed a certain number of weeks' pay whether they work or not.

The musicians say that's not true — that the center wants to get rid of them. Because of the strike, a visiting production of "Phantom of the Opera" is being performed with taped music.

Singer Pickett gets jail time for DUI

HACKENSACK, N.J. — Soul singer Wilson Pickett was sentenced Friday to a year in jail and five years' probation for hitting an elderly pedestrian while driving drunk.

Pickett, 52, also must pay a $5,000 fine, continue to receive alcohol treatment and perform 200 hours of community service related to drunken-driving education. Superior Court Judge Arthur Minuskin ruled.

Pickett pleaded guilty to a charge of assault by auto. He admitted he was intoxicated on April 1992 when he hit an 86-year-old man who was hospitalized for several months with head injuries.

Drug-dealing sheriff ordered to prison

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A former sheriff convicted of dealing drugs seized as evidence was sentenced Friday to 16 years in federal prison.

Former Nassau County Sheriff Laurie Ellis, 53, was convicted in July on drug and obstruction-of-justice charges.

Prosecutor Jim Kinndi sought a stiff penalty.

"You are sentencing Andy of Mayberry," Kinndi said. "You are sentencing a shrewd politician who abused his trust."

Defense attorney Steve Weinbaum said Ellis would likely have to serve about 85 percent of his sentence, or about 13 years, adding that they plan to appeal.

General Doolittle buried at Arlington

WASHINGTON — Gen. James H. "Jimmy" Doolittle, the aviation pioneer and World War II hero who was laid to rest at Arlington National Cemetery on Friday in a burial service with full military honors.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin and Gen. Merrill MePekin, the Air Force Chief of Staff, stood side-by-side at the grave site and greeted the procession, which included Doolittle's son, retired Air Force Col. John P. Doolittle and his wife, Priscilla, as well as three grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

A highlight of Friday's service was the Air Force fly over, an ceremonial tribute marked by the appearance of a restored B-25 bomber that was brought in from Minnesota. Doolittle was given a 21-gun salute.

Rapper denies gang murder charge

LOS ANGELES — Rapper Snoop Doggy Dogg and two co-defendants pleaded innocent to murder charges Friday in the shooting death of a reputed gang member.

The 21-year-old rapper, whose real name is Calvin Broadus, was charged with murder last month after the slaying of Phillip Waldenarian, 22, in a Los Angeles park.

Broadus' bodyguard, McKinley Lee, allegedly shot 22-year-old Waldenarian during a confrontation. Broadus was arrested hours after appearing at the MTV Music Video Awards on Sept. 7.

Officers' hijinks could prompt charges

HALEAH, Fla. — Officers who allegedly broadcast love songs made kissing sounds or moored like cows on their police radios face criminal charges and could be fired, their boss said.

When the officers allegedly interrupted the department's amateur radio channel, it blocked all other police calls.

"It could have meant somebody's life out there," said internal affairs Detective Jimmy Garcia.

Jose Arjojo, an attorney for the Police Benevolent Association who is representing the officers, said his clients deny the charges.

"It's a sad day for the department," said Police Chief Rolando Bolanos. "It creates a tremendous amount of embarrassment for us."

Charity golfer faces cheating charge

INDIANAPOLIS — A golfer in a charity match was arrested on a theft charge for allegedly shaving at least 13 strokes from his score to better his chance of winning, police said.

Charles D. Carey was arrested Thursday after playing in the tournament in Westfield, just north of Indianapolis.

Hamilton County sheriff's detectives, responding to a tip, followed Carey during his round at Hanging Tree Golf Club. Carey claimed he shot a 67, good enough for second place in the event held to raise funds for the American Diabetes Association.

Nations pledge Palestinian aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Urged by the United States to "seize the moment," delegates from 43 countries pledged $2 billion Friday to bankroll Palestinians as they prepare to take administrative charge of Gaza and part of the West Bank from Israel.

The World Bank and a Palestinian steering committee will play roles in managing the assistance, while the United Nations will take charge of immediate relief needs. But organizers of the conference were hard-pressed to describe the operation in any detail.

"The conference today is a striking success however you measure it," said Secretary of State Warren Christopher. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen said contributions eventually would exceed the $2.4 billion the World Bank estimated was needed for development over the next five years.

Christopher, meanwhile, brushed aside questions about the Arabs' refusal to end their economic boycott of Israel. "We have enough to do to carry out this major task," he said.

Bentsen said the 43 countries and 47 delegations attending the five-hour conference had pledged more than $600 million for the first year while commitments approaching $2 billion had been received for five years.

Among the pledges was $100 million from Saudi Arabia, the oil-rich Persian Gulf state that championed the Palestinians' cause over more than four decades of conflict with Israel.

Israel, which has recognized the once-reviled Palestine Liberation Organization, joined the Clinton administration in leading the charge. The Rabin government pledged $25 million in grants and $50 million in aid despite a shaky economy that depends on $3 billion a year in U.S. aid and private contributions from supporters.

Vice President Al Gore opened the five-hour conference urging businessmen around the world to help out, as well.

The theory is that an economically sound Palestinian administration would be inclined to live in peace with Israel and join with it to promote economic well-being throughout the region.

Israel Foreign Affairs Minister Shimon Peres, right, and Finance Minister Avraham Shohat speak before the conference to support peace in the Middle East Friday at the State Department in Washington. Delegates from 43 countries at the conference pledged $2 billion in aid to the fledgling Palestinian state.

The conference began on a sour note, however. Despite another round of U.S. appeals, Arab countries that are both rich and assumed to be politically moderate still were hedging on whether to maintain an economic boycott of Israel.

A senior U.S. official told reporters Thursday in New York after Christopher had met with a dozen Arab leaders, that not one Arab nation had agreed to abandon the boycott.

At the White House, President Clinton arranged a meeting between Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, who took the lead in overtures to the P.L.O., and Crown Prince Hassan of Jordan.

Unofficially at peace with each other for 16 years, the two nations agreed last month on a framework for a peace treaty. Jordan, whose population is at least 65 percent Palestinian, wants to be part of the emerging Israeli-Palestinian economic coalition.

Gore said of the conference, "The presence of so many parties from both inside and outside the Middle East itself sends a strong signal of hope." He also exhorted Arab countries to end the economic boycott of Israel, which dates back more than 40 years.

Christopher said the agreement on Palestinian self-rule signed last month at the White House "challenges all of us to seize the moment."

Peres announced the Israeli offer of assistance in his opening statement. "Israel will work closely with Palestinians and Jordanians to ... help create a flourishing economic triangle," he said.

"We shall do it as neighbors. We do not seek to replace military presence by economic domination."

One eagerly awaited pledge was from Saudi Arabia, which has agreed to contribute despite deep disillusionment with the Palestine Liberation Organization over its support for Iraq in the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

So far, the biggest single pledge is $600 million over five years from the 12-nation European Community.

First lady asks researchers for support

NEW YORK (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton said Friday research on disease-causing genes will ultimately make nearly every-one uninsured unless health insurance is reformed.

"Because of work currently being done on the human gene project, it is likely in the next years that everyone of us will have a pre-existing condition and be uninsurable," the first lady said.

She called that revelation "stunning and brilliant" and credited it to Nancy Wexler, a clinical neuropsychologist whose research on Huntington's disease led to the isolation of the gene that causes it.

Mrs. Clinton made her comments at a Manhattan luncheon for Wexler and three other winners of the 1993 Albert Lasker Medical Research Awards.

The first lady won wide praise earlier this week when she testified for the administration's health care plan before five congressional committees.

On Friday, she said Wexler herself might be uninsurable if she left her job at Columbia University because of a hereditary risk for the disease she spent 25 years researching.

"What will happen as we discover those genes that control breast cancer or prostate cancer or osteoporosis or any of the other thousands of conditions that affect us?" Mrs. Clinton asked.

"More and more of us will be left out of the health care insurance market," she said.

About 350 people, many of them doctors and scientists, attended the luncheon, where Mrs. Clinton asked for their support for health care reform.

"If we can find a vaccine for polio, if we can find the structure of DNA, if we can begin to understand the nature of the gene, surely we can make the political decisions necessary to fix and treat a health care system badly in need of it," she said.

"I hope you will share the same sense of purpose and the same commitment you have shown in labs and classrooms and operating rooms and research centers every day."

Wexler, two other scientists and a former congressman were named Lasker award winners Thursday. Since 1946, 50 Lasker-award recipients have won Nobel Prizes.

Wexler learned in 1968, when her mother was diagnosed with Huntington's disease, that she had a 50 percent chance of inheriting the illness, which leads to severe brain damage and death. She began a global research effort that led to the discovery of the gene in March.

Tests are now available to tell people at risk whether they carry the disease.

Leading gauge signals steady, slow growth

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's economic forecasting gauge recorded its strongest gain of the year in August, suggesting an improving though hardly booming finish for 1993.

Meanwhile, factory orders increased during the month, pulled higher by aircraft and autos. And a private survey of corporate purchasing managers showed continued, albeit slow, improvement in manufacturing in September.

"We're moving from very slow growth to moderate growth," said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Economic Associates in West Chester, Pa. "The economy's expanding, but not at a rate that will make us feel good."

The Index of Leading Indicators jumped 1.1 percent in August, flashing its most positive report in December, the Commerce Department said Friday.

It was the third consecutive increase, following slight gains of 0.1 percent in both June and July.

Ten of the index's 11 forward-looking indicators rose, the first time that many were up since December 1992.

"The broad-based nature of the increase and the fact that it was relatively large is an encouraging sign and indicates the economy is set to accelerate as we move into the very important Christmas season," Zandi said.

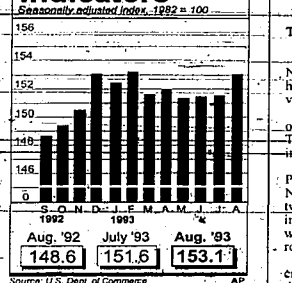

The economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, the total of goods and services produced in the United States, grew at a lackluster 1.4 percent annual rate during the first half of this year.

Zandi and most other analysts are expecting a growth rate between 2.5 percent and 3 percent during the second half. But they warn that won't be good enough to produce a rapid increase in employment.

New orders to factories increased 9 percent in August to a seasonally adjusted $25.2 billion. But the backlog of unfinished goods slipped to 2.7 months, the lowest level since July 1988. It was the sixth consecutive drop and the 21st in 24 months.

That's a bad sign for employment at factories, said economist Lynn Reaser of First Interstate Bancorp of Los Angeles.

Index of leading indicators

Flurries from the backlog, like companies aren't having very much difficulty completing orders with their existing workforce," she said.

"There's not much of a cushion if orders were to fall off."

Perot family venture sees benefits from NAFTA

The Washington Post

While Ross Perot has been arguing that the North American Free Trade Agreement would hurt the United States, one of his own business ventures shows how it could help.

The billionaire business executive's family owns a vast industrial park near Fort Worth, Texas, which has been producing a steady stream of exports to the United States.

A real estate development company run by Perot's son, Ross Jr., has argued that if the NAFTA agreement lowering trade barriers between the United States, Canada and Mexico is implemented, the resulting expansion of trade will likely buoy the industrial park and the surrounding area, known as the Alliance corridor.

"To the extent that NAFTA results in an increase in the flow of goods north and south, we think that Alliance as a transportation center stands to benefit from the industry's growth at the development company."

In his national campaign to defeat NAFTA, the former independent candidate for president has argued at rallies, on television and in a book that the trade agreement would weaken the U.S. economy. Perot's stand has aligned him with organized labor and other groups urging Congress to reject the pact.

However, one of the companies involved in developing the Alliance industrial park took the opposite position on NAFTA in a document submitted to the Commerce Department in 1991. In the same month, formal negotiations on the agreement began.

"The free trade agreement will benefit the United States economy by expanding trade opportunities, lowering prices, increasing competition and improving the ability of United States companies to exploit economies of scale," said Alliance-Corridor Inc., which is headed by Ross Perot Jr.

The Alliance development encompasses about 17,000 acres that the Perot family began buying in the early 1980s. The acreage is owned by Alliance-Corridor, which is owned by the Perot family.

Perot said in an interview this week that his son runs the project, but that he shares its ownership.

Book paints intricate picture of Nazi holocaust crematoriums

PARIS (AP) — A new book with floor plans, photographs and letters found in recently opened KGB files recounts in horrifying detail how the Nazis built and operated the death machines that virtually exterminated European Jewry.

"The Crematoria of Auschwitz: The Machinery of Mass Murder," published this week by France's National Center for Scientific Research, describes how a dozen private German companies competed for lucrative contracts to build and equip the gas chambers and ovens during World War II.

The German engineers, construction technicians and bricklayers struggled to cope with frequent breakdowns of equipment and constantly sought to increase destructive capacity.

The first oven, installed at Dachau in 1939 to dispose of "naturally deceased" political prisoners, cremated two corpses an hour. By the end of the war, a single crematorium burned more than 1,000 corpses a day.

More than 4,300 were burned daily in Auschwitz alone, according to the author, Jean-Claude Pressac, who once flirted with historical revisionists theorizing about denying the Holocaust or suggesting it began in July 1942, not in 1941 as previously thought. Before then, they were killed less efficiently.

Pressac said in an interview published in the Paris daily Liberation.

"There was a time when the revisionists were the only ones to address those questions. But I never doubted for an instant the existence of the gas chambers," he was quoted as saying.

Holocaust experts say Pressac's straightforward, 100-page analysis of the chilling documents will provide irrefutable proof to combat those who claim the Holocaust, in which an estimated 6 million Jews died, didn't happen.

The book won't silence the revisionists because they enjoy their notoriety too much and don't want to be convinced, said Nazi hunter Beate Klarsfeld, whose New York-based foundation published Pressac's "Auschwitz: Technique and Operation of the Gas Chambers" in 1989.

"But Pressac, a pharmacist who studied chemistry, knows more about gas chambers and ovens than anyone," she said. "His work stands as the most complete reference book on the question."

It will also renew historical debates. Pressac claims that the systematic gassing of Jewish women, children and elderly men began in July 1942, not in 1941 as previously thought. Before then, they were killed less efficiently.

He also estimates the total number of Jews killed at Auschwitz at 800,000, not 1 million as previously thought.

His new findings are based on previously unpublished documents, from the Bauleitung SS, the organization in charge of death-camp construction for the Nazis.

The documents were taken to Moscow by triumphant Soviet troops after the war and put in the archives of the KGB, the former Soviet secret police.

Recently opened by the Russian government, the files contain two-thirds of the Bauleitung SS archives.

The remaining documents were left behind and are now in the Auschwitz museum in Poland.

Mexico asks U.S. to stop border block

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico has asked the United States to end a blockade of the El Paso border region aimed at halting illegal immigration.

The deployment of about 400 U.S. Border Patrol agents along a 20-mile section of the border between El Paso, Texas, and Ciudad Juarez has sharply cut border crossings, along that sliver of the border.

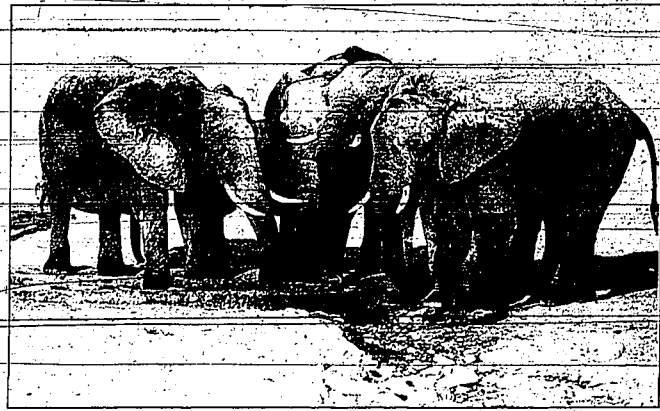

But it has not affected the rest of the vast frontier, which Mexicans cross by the millions each year.

Foreign Minister Fernando Solana raised the border blockade in talks Thursday with U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher, according to a statement issued by the Foreign Ministry.

The U.S. operation has "created unnecessary tensions that affect the traditionally good relationship of the communities on both sides of the border," the statement said. "It is necessary ... to put an end to this type of operation."

Many U.S. industries and especially agriculture have depended on illegal Mexican labor for half a century.

Some surveys indicate that illegal immigration had already declined slightly this year, due to the economic slowdown in the United States. But the issue has become explosive in states such as California and Texas.

Elephants gather at a drinking hole at the Hwange game park in Zimbabwe Monday. With the help of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and a British charity, about 1,000 elephants are being moved to new pastures hundreds of miles away to save them from slaughter.

British charity, U.S. join to save 1,000 elephants from slaughter

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — In the biggest operation ever mounted to save elephants from slaughter, about 1,000 elephants are being moved on flatbed trucks from dry brush to new pastures hundreds of miles away.

With funds from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the British charity Care for the Wild, the project could be completed by December. About 470 elephants have been moved since the mission, known as Operation Noah, began in August.

If the elephants remain in their natural home, the Gonarezhou nature reserve 300 miles southeast of Harare, they would have to be shot. A recent aerial survey counted about 6,000 elephants in Gonarezhou, which means 1,000 are being moved.

Ecologists say the 2,000-square-mile park can sustain only half that number, and the excess has caused severe environmental damage, including the destruction of 2,000-year-old baobab trees.

There are just too many elephants in a park that's already pretty bleak in terms of water and vegetation. The only alternative to moving them is culling them," said U.S. government spokesman Stephen Bruckner.

Killing the elephants is "unpalatable for Americans, and anyway, it's lovely to see these elephants alive, in their crates and heading to their new areas," he said.

After being dazed from a helicopter, the elephants are hogtied and winched onto trucks, where they are injected with an antidote to regain consciousness. They are then driven to lush, private reserves in southern Africa.

Game rangers say eight elephants have died from stress or suffocation on the move, which takes anywhere from eight to 48 hours depending on the destination.

The current moves must stop in December, when rains and hot weather make transport difficult and dangerous. Two thousand more elephants are expected to be moved next year, bringing the park's total down to its desired elephant population of 3,000.

Last year, hundreds of elephants died of starvation and dehydration during a severe drought in southeastern Zimbabwe.

About 200 were moved to private ranches with wells, an exercise that set the stage for this year's program.

Conservationists have long commended Zimbabwe for efficient wildlife management and anti-poaching operations that led to rapid expansion of elephant herds while numbers diminished in most other African nations.

No damage reported from Mexican quake

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An earthquake roughly as strong as the one that devastated India struck the same day off the coast of Mexico, but caused no reported damage.

The Mexican quake was centered in the Pacific Ocean, 50 to 100 miles off the coast of the Tehuantepec Peninsula. Several mid-sized but harmless quakes have struck the area near the Guatemalan border during the past two weeks.

Several people in the nearest city, Tluchitan, said by telephone that they did not even feel Thursday's midday quake.

The Mexican quake registered 6.2 to 6.7 on the Richter scale, according to seismologists in the United States and Mexico.

Mexico's National Seismological Service said the quake was felt as far away as Veracruz, 300 miles away on Mexico's Gulf Coast.

The Indian quake, which Tuesday was recorded at 6.0 to 6.4, but was centered in a populated region. As many as 20,000 people were killed.

According to an international earthquake reporting network, an average of 120 quakes between 6 and 7 are measured each year, but many do little damage because they occur at sea.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake, as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph.

Pope stresses truth in media

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II said Friday that the "good of the human person" must be the overriding aim in the gathering and reporting of news.

Addressing the board of directors and executives of The Associated Press, the pope said journalists should judge their efforts by criteria such as upholding individual dignity and rights, objectivity and a respect for the truth.

He cautioned against any "temptation to use the power of the media for its own sake."

"I express the hope that you will always be guided by a deep commitment to the liberating power of the truth and a concern for the objective requirements of the common good," he told the delegation in the Consistory Hall of the Apostolic Palace.

Spanish burro tops Ferrari in race

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — It may not have plush seats or a tape deck, but if you want to speed through Lisbon's traffic a burro is the way to go.

Portugal's Socialist Party has been competing about the growing gridlock in the capital, so on Friday it ran a race between a burro and a Ferrari 348 TS coupe on a 1.6-mile course from suburban Colares to one of the most entrances of the capital.

The burro, ambling along in the clogged and narrow road, beat the Ferrari with four minutes to spare.

The Socialists gearing up for coming local elections, have promised to extend Lisbon's small subway to surrounding suburbs.

Separatists capture more of region

Sukhumi airport was abandoned by Georgian troops Wednesday night and thousands of soldiers and armed civilian volunteers fled into the nearby mountains.

Clash deepens Georgian crisis

Tbilisi, Georgia (AP) — Government troops retreating from the breakthrough region of Abkhazia clashed Friday with paramilitary forces intent on restoring ousted President Zviad Gamsakhurdia to power.

The new fighting deepened the crisis facing Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze. His demoralized, poorly disciplined army now is fighting on two fronts, against the Abkhazians and against Gamsakhurdia's supporters.

On Thursday, a civilian helicopter carrying food and clothes for refugees in Abkhazia crashed into a snowy mountain, killing all six people on board. The Interior Ministry said the helicopter was not shot down.

More than 3,000 people have been killed and 150,000 made homeless in 13 months of fighting in Abkhazia, Georgia's northwestern province along the Black Sea. An estimated 50,000 Georgians have fled in the past week alone.

The goal of the separatists is either independence or annexation to Russia. Since they broke a cease-fire agreement and launched a major offensive two weeks ago, they have pushed nearly all of Shevardnadze's forces out of the coastal province.

Shevardnadze has warned that the loss of Abkhazia could enflame secessionist movements in other parts of Georgia and doom the small country to disintegration. Rebels in the South Ossetia region also are fighting for secession.

The retreating government troops fought Friday with Gamsakhurdia's gunmen along the border between Abkhazia and the neighboring province of Mingrelia.

Interior Ministry spokesman Valerian Gogolashvili said the rebel gunmen captured a police commander and seized weapons from a unit of 120 government soldiers.

Gamsakhurdia, the country's first democratically elected president, was deposed in January 1992 by former allies who accused him of turning into a dictator.

Last week, he took advantage of the fighting in Abkhazia to return from exile in southern Russia to Mingrelia, his home region and political stronghold. He has demanded that Shevardnadze resign or face leaving the country "bit by bit."

Government reinforcements poured Friday into Poti, Georgia's major port on the Black Sea, about 200 miles west of Tbilisi, the capital. Gamsakhurdia has claimed that his troops, known as Zviadists, were poised to seize the port.

"We believe the Zviadists will attack there first, so we have ensured they will not succeed," said Major Soso Margishvili, spokesman for the Georgian National Guard.

In Tbilisi, Jaba Ioseliani, leader of the country's largest pro-Shevardnadze paramilitary organization, announced Thursday that he was mobilizing all of his estimated 5,000 men.

Ioseliani said his force, known as the Mkhedrioni (Horsemen), would march to the city of Kutaisi in central Georgia to defend it against the pro-Gamsakhurdia forces led by former National Guard officer Lati Kobalia.

"I am going to hang Kobalia," Ioseliani told reporters.

Representatives of the United Nations, the International Red Cross and other relief organizations in Tbilisi appealed Friday for donations of food, fuel, medicine, warm clothes, tents and blankets for refugees from the war.

Twin Falls fair board will meet Monday

The board's agenda includes a report on capital planning and scheduling for the 1994 Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo.

Jerome voters can choose mayor, councilmen at polls

JEROME — Voters will have opportunity to select a mayor and a majority of City Council at the November election.

Mayor Gerald Oster's term will expire this year. He has said he will run for another 4-year term.

Three of the four council seats will be on the ballot. Two of the vacancies will be filled for four-year terms and one seat filled for a two-year term. Terms of office for Elza Hall and Ernie Brooks will end this year.

Dennis Moore was appointed by Oster when Rocky Jackson resigned. The deadline for turning in nomination petitions is Tuesday. Forty valid voter signatures are required on each petition. Petitions can be picked up and turned in to City Clerk Kathy Miller in the City Hall.

Owyhee ranchers remain worried about bomb range

BOISE — Cattle ranchers in Owyhee County say they still have serious concerns about Gov. Cecil Andrus' proposed training range but are willing to work on finding a solution, according to a joint statement Friday by the Idaho Cattle Association and the Stockmen's Training Range Review Committee.

The statement identified several areas of concern about Andrus' plan for expanding the existing Saylor Creek Training Range, which serves planes from Mountain Home Air Force Base.

Those concerns include wildfire management and rehabilitation; preserving Owyhee County's livestock industry; protecting property values in the county; the economic and social effects of airspace restrictions; and possible disruption of ranches by state and Bureau of Land Management trades.

However, Eric Davis, chairman of the stockmen's committee, said that "Owyhee cattlemen are still willing to work toward increasing the training range available to Mountain Home."

Northside Canal Co. will cut irrigation water Oct. 10

JEROME — After a good water year, the North Side Canal Co. will cut irrigating water off Oct. 10.

Stock water for cattle pasturing in fields will be available until Nov. 1, Manager Ted Diehl said.

"We've had a real good year and have a good carry-over," Diehl said.

Inside city limits, irrigation water was shut off Oct. 1, City Administrator Larry Paine said.

Sprinkling rates for city water will go off as water meters are read between Oct. 28 and Nov. 30, Paine said.

"People need to know if they continue to sprinkle after the date of the meter reading, their rates will go up," he said.

Jerome hospital seeks donors to fill needs, tree display

JEROME — An open tree in the St. Benedict's Family Medical Center reception area can use a few more leaves.

The tree, created by local artist Gus Flowers, has both stationary and quaking leaves, with engraved names of people and organizations making contributions to the hospital.

Donations designated on the tree have provided development and purchase of equipment for the kidney dialysis center, special birthing rooms, the emergency center, and construction of a medical arts building.

Continued expansion of the medical center will be made with donations, said Bill Last, president of the Foundation Board.

A donation of $100 puts an engraved leaf on the golden tree, a $500 contribution is shown by an engraved quaking leaf and a $1,000 donation is designated on an engraved plaque and a quaking leaf.

Contributions can be sent to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, 709 N. Lincoln, Jerome, for more information, call Bill Last at 324-5309.

TWIN FALLS — In a surprise move Friday, county commissioners awarded Scott Hedrick Construction an $884,000 contract to build a 10-bed regional youth lockup.

Commissioner Jim Fraley had said Wednesday that a decision would not be made until Oct. 13.

"We decided we can get this thing moving," Fraley said Friday. "The quicker, the better."

Fraley

The commissioners expect to end up with 12 beds in the building, but won't approve spending for the last two cells until October 1994.

"We're going to budget another $125,000 next year and use that for the alternatives and for a contingency fund," Commissioner Marvin Hempelman said.

Adjusted for 12 beds, the winning bid totals $919,000 — $24,000 more than the county has in its budget for the center.

Twin Falls County has $740,000 in state subsidies and $125,000 from its 1993 budget to fund the lockup.

"We can find the money somehow, somehow," Fraley said.

When completed, the center will be available to hold juveniles arrested from six counties: Blaine, Camas, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, and Twin Falls.

Meehl ruled in March against the commissioners in that case.

Moore then rejected an $800,000 bond issue, forcing the county to shrink the lockup.

Fraley contended Friday that had the "Frugal 14" not interceded, the county would have been able to build the larger, 18-cell lockup for only $100,000 more than the current costs for the 10- to 12-cell building. And the lockup would have been built and functioning by now, he said.

"When we get to 18 beds — whenever that will be — we will have spent well over $2 million" of the taxpayers' money, Fraley said.

County commissioners said they hoped to have the center operational before the start of next year's county fair. The county has been holding juvenile lawbreakers in a make-shift eight-bed lockup in the Flowers and Produce Building at the fairgrounds in Filer.

Weather permitting, the contract calls for construction to be completed within 300 calendar days.

The subcontractors will be All Ways Plumbing of Twin Falls, Terry's Heating & Air Conditioning of Twin Falls, Geitzen Electric Inc. of Buhl, and Shilo Automatic Sprinklers Inc. of Nampa.

Hedrick is also the contractor for the South Idaho Correctional Institute in Boise, and was responsible for the construction of Robert Stuart Junior High School on Caswell Avenue.

A formal ground-breaking ceremony has been scheduled tentatively for Oct. 18.

Since Friday marked the beginning of the 1994 fiscal year, the commissioners also renewed contracts with detention centers in Filer, Mini-Cassia and in St. Anthony. Juveniles arrested in the Magic Valley will continue to be sent to these lockups until the new center is built.

The commissioners will be in Sun Valley Oct. 4 through Oct. 7 attending the annual Idaho Association of Counties conference.

Police arrest 3 in bomb scare probe

By Mick Normington

TWIN FALLS — Three teenage boys were arrested Friday in connection with a bomb threat made in September at the Twin Falls High School.

This was the second group of three boys arrested this week for crime at the high school.

Det. Sgt. Bill Hanchey arrested three boys, ages 15, 16 and 17. The 15-year-old confessed to calling in a bomb threat at the high school on Sept. 8.

The 17-year-old also confessed to being an accessory to the crime, but confessed before officers read him his rights. The 16-year-old asked for a lawyer. All three are Twin Falls residents.

Calling in a bomb threat is a felony.

Hanchey said the three boys were booked and released into their parents' custody. All three are students the Magic Valley Alternative High School, which meets in a separate building across town.

"The motive behind it, as far as I can tell, was kids having a joke and trying to cause trouble," Hanchey said.

He said he interviewed almost 50 people since the bomb threat.

The Twin Falls Prosecuting Attorney's office will take over the charges against the boys on Monday, Hanchey said.

"The school will prosecute to the limit," he said. "This affects all the students of the school. And there's always a danger of somebody getting hurt when you have emergency vehicles racing to the school."

The high school has had many other bomb threats this school year, but Hanchey said the threats solve only the Sept. 8 case.

Hanchey also arrested three other male students for burglarizing cars in the high school's parking lot this week. The three, two 17-year-olds and an 18-year-old, signed letters confessing to breaking into cars and stealing stereos equipment and wallets.

Prosecutors will also pick up that case next week, he said.

Hanchey has remained as the resource officer at the high school. His job was in jeopardy of being cut when residents voted against a levy increase for the school district last month.

But Hanchey said some local parents have donated money to cover some of the costs of his job, which has helped him stay at the school, he said.

Banned, censored, burned

TWIN FALLS — On the wall behind the cash register at Waldenbooks in the Magic Valley Mall is a display of the many books that have been banned or burned in America in recent years.

Among them are Kurt Vonnegut's "Slaughterhouse Five," Stephen King's "Carrie," William Bower's "The Living Bible," Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," and others.

The display is part of National Banned Books Week, which is this week.

Banned Books Week is sponsored by the American Library Association, but libraries in the Magic Valley aren't observing the annual occasion — only a few bookstores are.

"It always provokes discussion, every year. I don't know how sales of the books have been, though," said Susan Cook, manager of the Waldenbooks store.

Cheryl Welch of Chapter One Bookstore in Ketchum said she's putting together displays for the front window and inside of the store to commemorate the week.

But city librarians in Buhl, Burley, Filer, Gooding, Halletch, Ketchum, Jerome, Twin Falls, and the College of Southern Idaho, said they aren't observing Banned Books Week.

The American Civil Liberties Union announced that there have been 395 attempts in the United States to ban books in public schools, libraries and book stores in the past year.

Some of the books challenged, censored or banned in this country are:

- "Blubber" by children's book author

Judy Bloom was challenged in Ohio in 1991 because "bad is never punished. Good never comes to the fore. Evil is triumphant."

- "Carrie," banned in Lurchwood, Iowa, schools in 1987 and challenged in Nevada and Vermont when labeled "trash" and "harmful to young girls."
- "Catch-22" by Joseph Heller, considered "dangerous" for objectionable language and challenged in Texas and Washington. The book was banned in 1972 in Strongsville, Ohio, but a judge overturned the banning in 1976.
- "The Catcher in the Rye" by J.D. Salinger, considered "dangerous" for vulgarity, violence, and sexual content. The book has been banned in some Washington, Michigan, Ohio and Florida schools.
- "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory"

Consent is no defense for sodomy, judge rules

The Associated Press

HAILEY — In rare cases involving sodomy, consent cannot be used as a defense argument, a district judge has ruled.

Fifth District Judge James May said in a nine-page ruling that sodomy is illegal in Idaho. He agreed with Chief Deputy Prosecutor Douglas Nelson that consent is irrelevant as long as sodomy is illegal.

Gerogrio Hernandez Ruiz is charged under Idaho's "infamous crime against nature." He's charged with raping an 18-year-old Blaine County woman last December. Trial is scheduled for January.

May refused to dismiss the charge on the ground that "infamous crime against nature" is vague and air-invasion of privacy.

Defense attorney Kathleen Rivers maintains that under such guidelines, the victim herself could be prosecuted for sodomy. She said she plans to appeal.

The Idaho chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union also has attacked the law as unconstitutionally vague.

"I believed consent to be a constitutional defense under federal law, at least when heterosexuals are involved," she said.

"The law doesn't specify what 'infamous crime against nature' involves, but calls for a prison term of at least five years.

Fire rages through pallets stacked at Green Giant

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

BUHL — A spectacular fire burned a 40-foot by 50-foot block of wood pallets stacked 18 feet high outside the Green Giant storage warehouse early Friday morning, the Buhl fire chief says.

The fire started under suspicious circumstances around 1 a.m. near the ground on the south side of the stack, Buhl Fire Chief Tom Owens said.

"We can't call it arson until we know it is," Owens said. Buhl Fire Department and Twin Falls County Sheriff Department officers are investigating the cause of the fire, he said.

The intense blaze quickly spread through the dry hardwood pallets stored in the stack of 6,500 pallets, causing about $110,500 in damage, Owens said.

Two Green Giant employees working a graveyard shift saw the fire, called the Buhl Fire Department and started dousing the flames with a garden hose, he said.

Eighteen fire fighters from Buhl and the Buhl

Rural Fire Department fought the flames that reached about 100 feet over the pallets, Owens said.

Fire fighters used a deluge water gun that shot 1,000 gallons a minute on the top of the stack, he said.

"They also used a 'blower' to knock piles of burning pallets over so they could be spread out and doused, Owens said.

Several employees from Green Giant, Hayes Construction Co. Inc. and Winn & Co. Inc., also a construction company, helped put out the fire by removing pallets from the stack that were not yet on fire, Owens said.

The two construction companies also offered heavy equipment to put the fire out, he said.

The fire was under control by 6:30 a.m., Owens said.

Had the fire not been reported soon after it started, the warehouse could have caught on fire, he said.

In all, the Green Giant yard has about 20,000 pallets, most of which were in different stacks that did not catch on fire, Owens said.

Kids' Klub at MVRMC today

The Times-News
TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has planned a Big Kids' Klub program for 10 to 12-year-olds today at the second floor conference room at the medical center. The class is designed to help children adjust to having a new baby in the home.

Child advocates promise to take fight to Legislature

POCATELLO (AP) — A consultant to Idaho State University President Richard Bowen said child advocates will press their case for health care and other children's issues harder in the Legislature's 1994 session. Alice Kskela warned legislators who she said were "not kindly disposed" to children's issues. She spoke up or ship out because we're going to have a voice in the Idaho Legislature.

Kskela, host for the second annual Child Advocacy Dinner of the Idaho Infant-Toddler Coordinating Council on Thursday, said child advocates need to "come together with one voice."

Attorney General Larry Echohawk, a Democrat running for governor next year, told the group "promise of America was threatened by the next generation" of abused and neglected youth.

Dino-dung a big hit

HANKSVILLE, Utah (AP) — There's a scene in "Jurassic Park" where actress Laura Dern, playing a paleobiologist, is up to her elbows in stegosaurus excrement. If only she'd known how much that stuff's apparently worth.

Twenty-three pieces of fossilized stegosaurus dung, scooped from the area around Hanksville, Utah, recently sold for $4,500 at Bonhams, a London auction house.

Owner Jan Stobbe, 36, a Dutch geologist, said the dung sold to an unidentified British buyer for 10 times as much as he thought it was worth.

Among other items sold at the auction was Stobbe's collection of fossilized dinosaur eggs, including a rare nest-of-ten sauropod eggs which went for $33,900.

Paleontologists estimate the eggs were laid between 70 million and 100 million years ago in the late Jurassic to early Cretaceous period by a giant herbivore.

"It's just the right time with 'Jurassic Park' to get such things on the market," Stobbe said. "But even so, they're amazing prices."

LDS Church faces challenge of maintaining orthodoxy

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church, shaken by disciplinary actions in its intellectual community, faces the challenge of maintaining orthodoxy and accommodating differences among millions of members, a historian says.

Thousands will gather today for the faith's 163rd Semi-Annual General Conference, where church leaders traditionally outline the boundaries that safeguard Mormon orthodoxy.

"Every Christian institution must negotiate that fine line between being absolutely clear about what it stands for and enclosing within its boundaries all who believe in Christ," said Jan Shippy, a professor of history and religious studies at Indiana University-Purdue University, Indianapolis.

The two-day conference follows disciplinary actions against a half-dozen feminists and scholars, four of whom have been excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the past three weeks.

At church-owned Brigham Young University, a feminist English professor and an anthropologist both are appealing the school's decision, claiming their dissent politics and writings, not academic failures, marked them for expulsion.

Supporters and those disciplined within the sanctioning purge of church members who differ from leaders on doctrine, history and women's roles in the church, the Mormon Church is governed at all levels by an all-male priesthood.

Historic Oaks of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, dismisses that argument. The Council is second in authority only to the faith's governing First Presidency.

Oaks declined an interview with The Associated Press. But he told National Public Radio last week that labeling as a "purge" actions taken against six of the church's 6.5 million members "is an exaggerated and perhaps a self-serving characterization."

'Every Christian institution must negotiate that fine line between being absolutely clear about what it stands for and enclosing within its boundaries all who believe in Christ.'

— Jan Shippy, professor of history and religious studies

Church spokesmen have said the disciplinary actions were taken by local clergy without prompting by top leaders.

Historian D. Michael Quinn, who was excommunicated last Sunday, believes church leaders did want to deliver a dramatic warning to Mormons everywhere by contented it to a religious strike in Utah, the heart of Mormonism.

The Mormon intellectual community is centered in Utah but spans the nation, and some publishers at upper 30,000. All six of those disciplined live in the state.

"There were a number of people they could have gone after, but did not," Quinn said.

Historian Shippy, a Methodist who has studied Mormonism for 30 years, said the spate of sanctions may be perceived by church leaders as individual cases. But collectively, she said, "if the church is not sending a message one is nevertheless being received."

Shippy said the current situation is grounded both in the nature of the faith and the church's explosive growth since the end of World War II.

Like the Roman Catholic Church, the Mormon Church has a clear, hierarchical line of authority that defines orthodoxy. Mormons, however, believe in divine revelation by the church president, who is considered prophet and seer, and by individual members.

So crucial is the Mormon belief in revelation, or individual freedom to make choices within the spectrum of good and evil.

But in order to maintain orthodoxy, the only avenue of revelation for the whole church is through the hierarchy.

Personal revelation is for the individual; it is alone, Shippy said.

When individual Mormons challenge the hierarchical authority, something has to give — as in the recent excommunications, she said.

"It creates human tragedy of enormous dimensions, but it has all through history," Shippy said. "Joan of Arc got burned at the stake."

Meanwhile, she said, the Mormon Church is facing the same task as the early Christian church did in the fourth and fifth centuries, when it expanded to Europe, England and Ireland.

In 1945, there were fewer than a million Mormons, most in the Intermountain West and Southern California. Now there are more than eight million around the globe.

Still, Shippy said, the church has managed to maintain orthodoxy through clear statements of doctrine in lessons used by 44,000 missionaries and the sophisticated clear-cut links between congregations worldwide.

Sermons delivered during general conference, for example, will be televised via satellite throughout North America, the Caribbean and Europe, with videotapes in dozens of languages available.

While these positive means have been successful, the recent excommunications amount to a negative reinforcement that tells members, "You can go this far, and no farther," Shippy said.

Thus, she said, the church seeks to fulfill its institutional mission to preserve the gospel for the next generation.

"It is tough," Shippy said. "It might not be any fun to be an intellectual right now, but in a time of dramatic change in the culture, it's probably a lot of fun to be an institution."

Oregon congressman favors pulling fish and wildlife program from BPA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of a congressional task force on the Bonneville Power Administration urged the BPA Friday to transfer the agency's fish and wildlife program to another government agency that would do a better job restoring salmon.

Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore., asked BPA Administrator Randall Hardy to initiate talks with the Northwest Power Planning Council to define the terms of such a transfer.

"As you well know, much of Bonneville's critics complain that the BPA's fish and wildlife program is at best redundant and in some cases operates at cross purposes with other federal, state and tribal fish and wildlife agencies," DeFazio said in a letter to Hardy.

BPA spokeswoman Duley Mahar said Friday the agency would consider DeFazio's recommendation.

"But she said the BPA is responsible for administering the program under contract to the council, which would do a better job restoring salmon."

"We are open to anything. We don't have closed minds about exploring any avenue that will help fish and wildlife restoration in the Northwest," she said from Portland, Ore.

"But there are other considerations that need to be worked out. We can't just turn it over. It's not that simple," she said.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and National Marine Fisheries Service are two of the likely candidates to undertake BPA's responsibility for fish and wildlife.

"Today we've got experts from three agencies, including Bonneville, four state fish and wildlife departments, and at least five tribes working on the same set of problems," DeFazio said.

"The council would need to streamline its operations and reduce its staffing levels. The fish and wildlife program would be a great place to look for greater efficiency," he said.

DeFazio said Hardy personally indicated during a congressional oversight hearing in Boise, Idaho, last month that he would consider the change.

The BPA came under heavy fire at that hearing from Idaho Attorney General Larry Echohawk speaking on behalf Gov. Cecil Andrus. The governor often has criticized Hardy's management of the BPA.

Churches plan anti-abortion demonstration

BURLEY - To protest abortion, members of over 20 Mini-Cassia churches will line the sidewalks across Overland Avenue and Main Street to form a "Life Chain" in the shape of a cross Sunday. "This is not meant to be a demonstration against local abortionists," said Pastor Ben Orchard of the Congregational Bible Church. He said the Life Chain will protest the acceptance of abortion nationwide. Orchard expects over 800 cities to participate, including some in Canada. Last year 57 people joined hands in Burley, over 1 million nationwide. Signs saying "Abortion Kills Children" and "Jesus Forgives and Heals" will be distributed. The event will take place from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Church robber sentenced to 20 years

BOISE - Steven Lee Hyde has been ordered to serve at least 20 years in prison for robbing a congregation of churches in Boise last February. Fourth District Judge George Carey on Friday sentenced Hyde to life imprisonment, with a minimum of 20 years. Hyde also goes to trial in Canyon County on Tuesday on charges that he robbed a congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses members in Nampa on Feb. 18, the same night as the Boise robbery. Hyde faces 10 counts, each of robbery, and using a firearm during a felony.

Weekend jail no longer free in Rexburg

REXBURG - Violators who want to serve jail sentences on weekends in Madison County will have to pay $80 to do it. The Madison County Commission passed a resolution this week requiring the charge. People serving jail terms weekdays won't have to pay to stay. "We just don't have room in the jail for those just wanting to stay on weekends," said Sheriff Greg Moffat. Officials said the change is designed to cut down on the number of people who want to serve their jail time on weekends, which is causing overcrowding. Surrounding counties do the same thing, they said.

BLM crews put out Elmore range fire

BOISE - Bureau of Land Management crews put out Idaho's largest range fire of the season in Elmore County late Thursday. BLM spokesman Randy Earley said the 1,500-acre fire apparently was man-caused but remained under investigation. It started near some railroad tracks and burned into heavy grass and sagebrush between the Ada County line and the Snake River. More than 30 firefighters from the BLM and Forest Service responded to the blaze, along with one helicopter and four water tankers.

New group eyes Lewiston bus service

LEWISTON - Bus service in the Lewiston area could be shifted to a new organization after the city and Nez Perce County came to the rescue last winter. Lewiston took over operation of the Lewiston-Clarkston Valley's bus service in February this year, renaming it Valley Transit. Nez Perce County provides financial support. That was after the previous operator, Banana Belt Senior Citizens, went bankrupt. The bus service is open to all on demand, but is targeted at the elderly and disabled. It does not operate on a fixed route. Regional Public Transportation hopes to take over bus service. It will serve north-central Idaho, as well as three Washington counties. Compiled from wire reports.

Court favors county in jail project suit

BOISE (AP) - There's a big difference between a "request for proposal" for a public works project and a call for "bids," the Idaho Court of Appeals says. The court on Friday unanimously upheld Canyon County in a lawsuit over construction of the county's new jail. A "request for proposal" from a public agency is a statement that the agency desires an ultimate goal but can't specifically say what's needed to meet the goal. A bid request defines the scope of the work required and calls for bids to do it, the court said. Several engineering and architectural firms joined in a lawsuit asking $71,000 damages. They contended the county issued a "request for proposal" to build a new jail, but rejected all the proposals. Canyon County later signed a personal services contract with a jail expert, who supervised the project. The county awarded a construction contract through competitive bids. The engineering-architectural companies asked reimbursement for the cost of preparing proposals. But the Court of Appeals, in a decision written by Chief Judge Jesse Walters, noted the request specifically stated that if a suitable proposal were submitted, it would merit further negotiations. The RFP did not provide that the lowest cost proposal, or the most elaborate, would win the contract, the court said. The respondents (the county) exercised their discretion and chose the individual and proposal they thought best suited the county's needs, the court said. "The RFP contained no guarantees and did not create any duty in the (county), except to follow the process and act with appropriate discretion as specified in the RFP," the court said. In another decision released Friday, the Court of Appeals reversed the conviction of Brian Jeffrey Maland for unlawful possession of beer. In a Kootenai County case, Maland, 18 at the time, was charged with being in possession of an open case of beer in the back seat of a parked car containing two other people. The Court of Appeals concluded the state could not prove "constructive possession" or that Maland had "dominion or control" over the beer.

School district faces student sex harassment lawsuit

BOISE (AP) - The Idaho Human Rights Commission has filed suit against the Bruneau-Grand View Joint School District, alleging female students were sexually harassed by male students. The lawsuit, filed Sept. 13, claims female students including two daughters of Owyhee County Prosecutor Paul Byers were sexually harassed at Kimrock Junior-Senior High School. Byers said the harassment occurred during the 1991-92 school year and involved sexually offensive comments and touching by male students.

Two California murder suspects arrested

SANDPOINT (AP) - Two suspects in a California slaying have been arrested after being lured into Sandpoint to check on a bogus child custody matter. Michael Miguel Corasso, 27, was arrested Thursday on a first-degree murder warrant from Sierra County, Calif. He is accused of clubbing a man to death in a remote area on Sept. 12 and taking his money and vehicle. Randi Allen, 24, was arrested for being an accessory to murder after the fact. The two were in the area about a week and were staying at the home of a local couple, Bonner County Sheriff's Detective Harvey Thompson said. Allen had been calling her ex-husband in Reno, Nev., from Idaho to check on their children. He told her the police were looking for her, so she called the Sierra County Sheriff's Department to find out if she was wanted.

UI Greeks change alcohol policies in wake of fall

MOSCOW (AP) - University of Idaho fraternities and sororities are revising their policies on drinking in a preemptive strike against stricter alcohol rules. Hard liquor is out while beer, wine and champagne will be limited and approved monitors will be watching at every fraternity or sorority function on the Moscow campus. The changes were approved Wednesday night by the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council, which governs sororities. "I'm very optimistic it will change things around here that need to be changed," Interfraternity Council President Shelby Leforgee said Thursday. But the new alcohol limits, while in some cases twice as high as fraternities and sororities initially proposed, are a far cry from keeping students from getting drunk. Each person will be limited to a dozen 12-ounce beers, two four-packs of wine coolers or one 250-milliliter bottle of wine or champagne. A 180-pound man drinking seven beers over three hours would have a blood-alcohol level over the legal limit of .10 percent. After 12 beers he would hit .205. Even a 240-pound person drinking over six hours would reach the limit after 12 beers. "I don't consider a 12-pack a responsible amount," said Cameron Lewis, director of the local Lakeside chemical dependency counseling and treatment center. "For some people 12-beers will get you highly intoxicated and for some people 12 will barely get you a buzz," Leforgee said. "I'd rather have a policy that says 12-beers than no policy at all." Heavy drinking at two frat parties last month resulted in freshman Regena Coughlan falling from her sorority house fire escape. Coughlan, 18, of Spokane, Wash., remains paralyzed from the waist down. After her accident, Coughlan's blood-alcohol level was .25. University of Idaho President Elnora Zinser, withdrew recognition of the Beta Theta Pi and the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternities this week, and the state Board of Education has called for a review of campus drinking policies. "We wanted to show the state Board of Education that we can take a stance," Leforgee said. "We can make our own policies. We can enforce our own policies and govern ourselves."

Religion

Common spirit guides us all

Clergy corner

From believing the "right thing?" flow could they believe in a God of love and compassion without my Christian background? Had someone gotten there before me? (And they liked Jesus!)

This year, we are doing a walk for hungry people again. It's called a CROP Walk/Jog. We're doing it at 10 a.m. Oct. 16 at the National Guard Armory on the College of Southern Idaho campus. Everyone: Mormons, Native Americans, Protestants, Catholics, Jews, Jehovah's Witnesses - whatever the religious or perhaps "non-religious" heritage - is invited to walk in the spirit of love and compassion for those with basic needs. Is there a common spirit that is so big that we could all let go of some of our distrust and disguise and be guided as children who are not caring to insist on being different? What a dream!

Yet aren't there already many persons whose hearts ache for the refreshment, joy and freedom of a common, caring spirit? From my childhood, I have heard people say, "Don't we all believe basically in the same things and in the same God?" Of course - inwardly brushed-off-such-and-such. "I knew about Creation, 'The Fall,' the 'election of Israel,' prophecies, the 'Virgin Birth,' the 'vicarious atonement,' resurrection and eschatological things! And I knew that other religions had their beliefs and priorities. And they were different and dangerously inferior. Salvation insisted upon the difference."

Is there hope for me?

I hope to see you at the CROP Walk. Maybe I'll see him again, too - in the friendly eyes, the caring hands ... and the joy.

Are ministers too docile?

A new survey conducted by the United Methodist Church has revealed some startling results that may signal long-term trouble for one of the largest Protestant denominations in the nation.

The survey asked Methodist lay people to choose qualities they most valued in their clergy. The laity in most cases said they like their pastors docile, obedient and unimaginative.

The survey, conducted by the Office of Research in the General Council on Ministries, asked Methodists if they wanted their pastors to be caring or courageous, cooperative or competent and honest or imaginative. In all three cases, the laity picked exactly the opposite characteristic that I would have chosen.

Clark Morpew
Faith Today

Survey analysts say these data confirm that the United Methodist Church, with 8 million members, is in a period of serious decline. That's not news, of course. We have known for some time that Methodism was in trouble as the membership of the church dropped by 1,000 to 1,500 people a week during the last two decades.

In fact, we also know that all mainline churches are declining: the Baptists, the Lutherans, the Episcopalians and the Presbyterians. And if similar surveys were done in those denominations, the results would be the same.

Perhaps this explains a lot about you - lay people. I mean, now I understand why there is so much conflict between parishioners and clergy these days.

You don't want the gospel preached in its purity. You don't want to be challenged. You don't want your congregations to reach out into the world. You don't want your pastor talking about the great issues of this life. You don't want your preacher trying to stir your emotions.

This presents a real dilemma. On the one hand, the reality is that the laity are in a mood to pull the wagons into the circle and shut themselves off from the radicalness of the gospel and from the world of trouble. On the other hand, here come your clergy, armed to the teeth with gospel ideas and plans for ministry to the world.

And the two meet like freight trains running on the same track in the middle of the night. Bam! Another conflict erupts, a pastor is psychologically maimed and the congregation moves forward covered with its own blood. Then another pastor moves in filled with courage and enthusiasm. There is a honeymoon period. A new pastor can expect a year, maybe two, of peace and happiness. Then it begins to happen again.

Yes, this survey explains much about lay people's attitude in this troubled day. You want things to stay the same. You want innovation kept to a minimum. You want sermons that don't challenge you to change. You want poor people, homosexuals, minorities, the handicapped and anyone who acts, dresses or looks different to stay away from your church building.

My goodness, no wonder the mainline Protestant churches are declining. Further, it appears you will tolerate the decline as long as you don't have to endure change. No wonder these old-line churches are growing grayer by the Sunday. Your churches no longer have a ministry. You no longer speak to youth and you have lost touch with the world as it exists today.

The saddest thing about this situation is that clergy, simply in order to survive, will bow to the wishes of the laity. It may not be easy for an imaginative and courageous pastor to become dull and cowardly, but let a preacher go through a couple of vicious congregational conflicts and I'll guarantee the best clergy will succumb.

In the survey, only 3 percent of respondents said they want their pastor to have the following positive characteristics: competence, independence, determination, courageousness, maturity, fair-mindedness, straightforwardness, dependability, forward-looking attitude, imagination and ambition.

More than 40 percent of those taking the survey said they want their pastor to be cooperative, caring and honest. Those are all good characteristics to have if clergy are simply expected to maintain the status quo.

But if clergy are also expected to drive the congregation's mission forward or shape public opinion or make the church grow, there had better be some courage in the preacher's soul.

I fear for these old churches as they plot toward tomorrow having already accepted that they are dying. What, I wonder, can awaken them from this self-induced slumber?

Pastor Dan Rieke was raised in Seattle and served as a missionary in Cameroon, Africa, under the former American Lutheran Church. He is also the president of the Magic Valley Interfaith Association of Twin Falls. Rieke and his wife, Beryl, have three children, Karis, Joel and Cynthia.

Protestants, Catholics and Mormons - walking together.

"Is that possible? Having been raised in a very conservative religious home, I remember finding plenty of faith with other religions - even to wondering if the Pope might be the 'Anti-Christ.' Other 'sects' were either misguided or unspiritual. I was to be 'in' but not 'of' an evil-tainted world while waiting for the imminent return of Christ. Nothing else was of any real importance.

Then I went as a missionary to Africa and met 'pagans' living in the rural bushlands of northern Cameroon. I learned the Arab-based Fulani language. After eight years as a traveler and teacher among numerous tribes from several African countries (six years as a teacher in a seminary), I discovered many things that surprised me. I saw people with warm hospitality, caring, devotion, compassionate grieving and family love regardless of religious attachment. How could this be? Is this a different form of love and compassion than that which came

On move to halt world hunger

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

CROP walk information

TWIN FALLS - It's called CROP Walk/Jog and it involves planting one foot in front of the other, and growing a world without hunger.

"I'm anticipating lots more walkers this year," said the Rev. Dan Rieke, who's helping with local arrangements for this year's annual event. "This is the first year the LDS churches have participated on an organized basis, and I like the fact that we are all motivated by the same spirit of concern and that we all perceive in God a concern for hunger and for the homeless."

Last year, 110 walkers in the Magic Valley raised about $5,000. This year's goal is simply to sign up more walkers and take in more money.

CROP (originally titled Christian Rural Overseas Program) is the name given to

In Twin Falls, walkers gather at the College of Southern Idaho to map out their scaled-off routes. Most tackle the 6.1 mile (10K) trek down Washington, Addison and Blue Lakes. Some opt for a shorter "run" on the CSI hiking trail. A few run the distance.

Stopping at refreshment stations along the way, walkers range from senior citizens to young joggers to parents pushing baby carriages. One of this year's participants may travel by wheel chair.

All of the walkers wear CROP stickers and buttons. T-shirts are not purchased so that more money can be given to help those in need.

"I like the fact that administrative costs are kept very low in this organization," said Dabj Kraft, who's explaining the Magic Valley walk along with his wife, Tina. Right now, Church World Service reports that 16.6 cents per $1 is spent on management and fund raising.

Each local group is also allowed to keep 25 percent of funds raised for a local hunger program. This year's area CROP committee has targeted the Magic Valley Homeless Task Force as one possibility.

Elders from all be distributed at local churches on Sunday, so that those who don't wish to walk may sign up to sponsor someone else. Various denominations, from Presbyterian to Lutheran to Episcopal to United Methodist, are on board this year.

Other organizations sponsoring walkers include Neighbors in Need, St. Edward's Soup Kitchen and the Homeless Task Force.

CROP committee members are making banners for walkers to carry. These will plan to walk should wear sturdy shoes and clothing appropriate to the weather. "We are going to walk, rain or shine," Rieke said.

Vietnamese orchestra pioneers holy music with 'Messiah'

By Bruce Stanley
The Associated Press

'If you can't talk across a table, sing across it, and greater things get done.'

— Stanley Steadman

HANOI, Vietnam - The symphony orchestra of communist Vietnam is taking what would once have been a heretical step: It is playing religious music, starting with Handel's celebration of Christ, the "Messiah."

The 80 players and 40 chorists, with the Vietnam National Symphony Orchestra are rehearsing for two late October performances with coaching from four American English teachers representing the Mormon Church.

"We hope that through the music, we can help bridge the gap between Vietnam and the U.S.," said Stanley Steadman of Salt Lake City. "If you can't talk across a table, sing across it, and greater things get done."

Do Dunge, who has conducted the financially strapped orchestra since its founding in 1984, said it has never played religious music, or collaborated with Americans before.

But the Mormons' enthusiasm, and their offer to finance the performance, won him and his ensemble over.

Vietnamese authorities often have clashed over the years with Christians and other religious groups that want greater freedom, but the situation has relaxed in recent years.

Still, the Vietnamese have asked the Mormons to play down references to Jesus-Christ and religion, said Steadman's wife, Miss.

"Steadman, who sang the 'Messiah' hundreds of times in 35 years with the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, calls it the greatest sacred music of the Christian world. He is introducing the Vietnamese orchestra to an edited 45-minute version of the two-hour composition, to tailor it to Vietnamese listeners.

"They're not ready for the whole load of hay," he said.

George Frederick Handel, a German, wrote the "Messiah" in 1741. Based on words from the Bible, it tells the story of Christ's birth, death and resurrection.

"Handel's 'Messiah' is important because it's international music, not because it's Christian," said Pham Hong Hai, the orchestra's assistant conductor.

"I like it just like Beethoven and Bach," said Phuong Lan, an alto who calls herself nonreligious. "I don't feel funny about singing it."

The chorus will perform the oratorio in English. "Even if people don't understand the words, the melody is beautiful, so it will attract them," Lan said during a break from her first rehearsal.

The orchestra sees the project as a chance to rebuild its neglected chorus and create new Vietnamese fans of Western classical music. Choral music has suffered from a shortage of trained conductors and a pay scale for composers that offers no premium for complex choral pieces, they say.

Vocalists and instrumentalists earn about $3 a month and hold other jobs. But Hai said audiences have grown rapidly.

The orchestra used to rely solely on Vietnam's Ministry of Culture for funds, but now can solicit outside sources. One result: The number of performances has increased from six in 1989 to 30 in 1992. Hai said he expects to help stage up to 70 concerts this year, mostly financed by foreigners.

Still, classical music does not have a wide following in Vietnam, where most young people prefer pop. Dong said only half of the 1,500 people he expects to buy tickets for the "Messiah" will be Vietnamese.

The four American coaches working with the orchestra and chorus on the "Messiah" - Steadman and his wife, and LaVar and Helen Bateman of Provo, Utah, are supervising rehearsals.

Gideons dispense 'Good Book' to world's corners except schools

By George W. Cornell The Associated Press

Although the Gideons are sometimes stopped by court rulings from distributing Bibles at public schools, the century-old organization still is going strong, dispensing the "Good Book" far and wide. "We make the Word of God available to those folks who want it in various environments," said Wendell McClinton, executive director of Gideons International, based in Nashville, Tenn. It distributed 38.5 million Bibles last year in 156 countries and 70 languages, including 7.9 million in this country and the rest in countries around the world. "In the former Soviet Union certain countries, we're distributing over 400,000 Bibles a month," McClinton said. Seventeen million Bibles have been delivered there since the Berlin Wall came down. "We consider it an open door." The organization provides Bibles in hotel rooms, hospitals, penal institutions, colleges and in military facilities. Local Gideon units sometimes try, against obstacles, to supply Bibles to public school students. "On any aspect of that touchy subject, McClinton insists on a firm

Wendell McClinton Makes Word of God available

Court declined to accept a Rensselaer, Ind.; school district's appeal against a federal appeals court ruling that Gideons could not give Bibles to fifth-grade students. Allowing it had been upheld last year by a U.S. district court judge, noting that nonreligious groups such as Boy Scouts and 4-H clubs were allowed to distribute literature to students. But the appeals court rejected the practice, and the Supreme Court declined to intervene at this point. Michael Whitehead, Southern Baptist social-concerns counsel, said the high court has not banned all Bible distributions at public schools. He noted this case involved Gideons entering elementary classrooms. "Perhaps distribution in high schools or in hallways or with parental consent would still be permissible," he said. However, this is something McClinton won't talk about, or any of the questions it involves. Church state separatists maintain it would amount to unconstitutional government backing of religion. McClinton, 60, on the Gideon staff for 30 years and the executive director for the last five years, said it receives a steady flow of letters expressing appreciation for Bibles placed in hotel rooms and elsewhere.

"We receive communications every day from people all over the world who have had a blessing as a result of the Word of God being available," he said. That response "comes from all directions." The organization was started nearly 100 years ago, in 1898, named for the courageous Jew, persecuted by the Romans. With a small band of 300, he drove out of Israel a huge, oppressive force of idolatrous Midianites. Although the Gideons have a paid staff of only 60, it has 120,000 volunteers of all various ages and backgrounds - 70,000 in them in the United States and 50,000 in foreign countries, all donating their time and efforts. However, the organization has a substantial budget of $50 million annually, used to produce its own Bibles and 45 printing plants, with which it runs plants in this country and in 18 countries abroad. "We have the Bibles printed to our specifications," McClinton said, noting that they're both in modern and King James versions in English and in various other translations in languages spoken elsewhere. In the years since the organization was formed, it calculates it has distributed free more than 600 million Bibles.

New breed of churches borrows from TV, music to draw people into fold

By Paul Sloan Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO - Spotlights swirled against the dark stage as a voice crackled through the loud speakers: "And now!" the announcer boomed, with the Chicago Bulls theme playing in the background. "The starting lineup..." The men were pastors. And so began one Sunday morning service in Moraine Valley Church in Palms Heights, Ill., part of a new breed of churches borrowing from sports, sit-coms and rock 'n' roll in an attempt to draw people to the fold. A movement is under way across the country and overseas that is luring people not only from the pews of more-traditional churches but from Sunday brunch. It's the spread of the contemporary multimedia evangelical church, where members prefer saxophones to organs, stage lights to stained glass. Where the pastor's message often sounds like a self-help class. And where your Sunday best often means clean jeans and a Polo shirt. Critics have dubbed the style "McChurch" and "hopping mall Christianity," charging that such churches are more interested in filling pews than teaching the Bible. But there's no denying their popularity. Unlike many mainline denominations, the churches - said

Christians are held on weeknights, something many such churches do. As word of Willow Creek's popularity in the church began getting calls, sometimes as many as 100 in a week, from pastors wanting to imitate the style, church employees said.

In response, the Willow Creek Association was established in January 1992. Today more than 500 churches, from Florida to Singapore, pay $199 a year to belong. Their leaders attend conventions and buy instructional videos and scripts. Knowledge of television is a prerequisite to understanding what's going on.

OGDEN, Utah (AP) - An Ogden attorney's application for a "THNXGOD" license plate was denied because state Division of Motor Vehicles officials decided it would be offensive. Kathy Bebout said her thought the plates would be perfect because she was able to buy the new Pontiac Grand Am after paying to God and receiving a $2 hourly raise. However, the Utah Tax Commissioner's Division of Motor Vehicles nixed her request. The division's form letter read: "The division reserves the right to deny requests that may carry connotations offensive to good taste and decency or which would be misleading" as stated in Utah Code 41-1-417. Bebout said she couldn't believe "Thanks God" was offensive, so she called the division. "The only explanation she received from two tax commission officials and the attorney general's office was that the word 'God' on a plate could offend atheists." Tax commission spokeswoman Janice Perry agreed Bebout had been told the plates would offend atheists. Division employees follow written policy guidelines. But Perry said the reasons for the refusal extend further. "I think at either end of the spectrum we could find people who would be offended by the sign," Perry said. Perry said references to "God" or any other named entities are not allowed on plates because they would be viewed as sacrilegious by some people.

Did Jesus pull a fast one?

Nailing a person to a cross was one of the cruellest ways of putting people to death. The custom was to pull a fast one on the idolaters. These idolaters were unable to recognize the kind of god that Jesus worshipped (John 8:43), for they worshipped and prayed to something that could neither hear, see, talk or walk. Bruins keep Meridian winless, 26-3

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

BOISE — Whether it was because their top gun was down or they just decided to start playing football, the Twin Falls Bruins took complete control of winless Meridian in the second half Friday night to collect a 26-3 victory.

The victory came after Twin Falls again was lackluster offensively and duped a few times on defense.

Late in the first quarter, they remembered Josh Amundson and started giving him the ball and that amounted to a 13-3 half-time lead. But then in the third quarter, Amundson left with a shoulder injury and suddenly all the Bruins stopped up.

John McClusky had nine straight carries for 89 yards and two touchdowns over the next six minutes and the defense, sparked by two big Albert Baez hits, became impenetrable. "I guess they knew the free lunch was over," joked Twin Falls Coach Jon Jund of the Bruins' sudden maturity after Amundson's sudden absence. "Not really. I think we were in totally unprepared to play because Meridian was winless and then simply decided to put them away."

Amundson, the Bruins top ball carrier all year, is believed to have a slight separation in his right shoulder.

"I'll be ready next week," he said of the Bruins' home date with undefeated Highland in Bruins Stadium Thursday. Meridian used a lot of tricks — some that worked, some that didn't. In the opening minute, Shawn Hens suddenly expanded a yards-off-tackle-to-put-Meridian-inside the Bruin 10, but senior Geoff Pierce accounted for three straight tackles and Meridian had to settle for a 19 yard field goal by Wes Beverly.

three pass on it's own 22 yard line for one of those tricks that didn't work.

Meridian's last three straight times scoring from the 8 on the first play of the second quarter.

He also scored on the last play of the period when he took a middle screen from Jon Axtman and turned it into a 50 yard bomb. Albert Baez, McClusky and the defense contained Meridian well.

F & G sets steelhead, trout rules

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Steelhead management went to two-year cycles with standard limits and, with one exception, bull trout became protected throughout Idaho Friday when the Idaho Fish and Game Commission met here.

Steelhead regulations for 1994-95 were included with the resident rules that will make up the next biennial brochure. The decision came after a plea from Mitch Sanchez, executive director of Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited, to be cautious in steelhead management, noting regulation should be based on dam counts and capacities of Idaho harvesting hatcheries. He said ISSU fears over-harvest during fall seasons could result in dramatic reductions for spring.

But commissioners decided they held the power to invoke any emergency season or limit reductions during seasons.

This came after Fish and Game Department officials said that the harvest of steelhead was always proportional to dam counts. They said publicity word of mouth and success were most responsible for putting steelheaders on stream banks and that the number of anglers was the major regulator of fish taken.

Steve Huffaker, fishery division official, said 12 years of study indicate that 60 percent of the Idaho harvest comes in the fall season. The department sells about 30,000 steelhead cards a year. Of that total, about 10 percent fill their cards to the full 10-steelhead per year limit while only 30 percent catch two or more steelhead.

The commission, which at one point discussed abandoning the four-fish possession limit, said the two per day, four in possession and 10 for the season would give the "steelhead" angler a better chance to compete with locals in that they could take four fish during one trip.

The bull trout (Dolly Varden) closure also drew considerable discussion, Salmon area representative Norm Guith noting that steelhead on the Salmon river currently are harvested back to 25 every day. Why do we justify to those fishermen a closure when the river is alive with them?" he asked.

Guith said "the broad brush approach tells me you don't want to manage." Commissioner Dick Hansen of Bay View, objected that a bull trout closure would follow "the same path" Idaho has been taken down for steelhead and salmon.

Hansen said the commission has always been reactive to federal pressure instead of leading.

His fall harvest by anglers had little effect on the plunge of anadromous fish stocks in the Columbia and lower Snake Rivers. He said the same was true of Idaho bull trout.

He said he disliked the inference that Idaho steelhead were over-harvested.

Pistons, Spurs trade stars Rodman, Elliott

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Detroit Pistons on Friday traded troubled forward Dennis Rodman and Isiah Morris to the San Antonio Spurs for Sean Elliott and David Wood.

"We hate to see him go," Pistons director of player personnel Billy McKinney said at a news conference at The Palace of Auburn Hills. "But it was best for all of us to get a new start."

"Last season was a troubled year for Rodman, who was the NBA's leading rebounder at 18.3 per game, just down from his 18.7 the previous year. He first threatened to retire last summer because he was upset that coach Chuck Daly left to take a job with the New Jersey Nets.

Elliott, a first-time All-Star last year, was the Spurs' second-leading scorer, averaging 17.2 points. Wood was San Antonio's backup power forward, averaging 2.4 points and just over one rebound.

Rodman skipped training camp last season and missed the first five games, frequently staying out of touch. He later explained that he was too upset over his divorce to play.

Rambis returns to Lakers who welcome him to family

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Unrestricted free agent forward Kurt Rambis has re-signed with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Terms of the contract were not revealed Friday. "We're thrilled to have Kurt back with us," general manager Jerry West said. "Although he's been gone for several years, we've always thought of him as a part of the Lakers family."

Rambis, 35, began his 12-year NBA career with the Lakers after signing a free agent contract with the club before the 1981-82 season.

The 6-foot-8-inch Rambis was a member of four NBA championship teams with Los Angeles during his seven-year stint with the club, averaging 5.3 points and 5.9 rebounds in 493 regular-season games.

Pendleton drives in 5 runs; Braves win

Atlanta first baseman Fred McGriff tags out Colorado's Joe Girard caught in a rundown between first and second Friday in Atlanta.

ATLANTA — Fred McGriff was razzing Terry Pendleton before the game, saying he was tired of carrying him on his back.

So Pendleton, the catalyst in 1991 and 1992, for the two-time NL champion Atlanta Braves, decided to get serious.

He drove in a season-high five runs and the Atlanta Braves put the pressure on San Francisco, beating the Colorado Rockies 7-4 Friday night to take a half-game lead in the NL West.

The win improved Atlanta's record to 11-0 against the Rockies. The Braves began the day tied for first place with San Francisco, which played later in Los Angeles.

Before the Giants took the field to warm up, many players watched the Braves-Rockies game on a small television in the clubhouse. The Braves and Giants both play at 1 p.m. MDT on Saturday.

"I feel like I haven't carried my load," said Pendleton. "Before the game Fred and I were kidding around and he told me his back was sore from carrying me."

"Then he turned serious. 'It was a big game for me, but even bigger for the ballclub. And don't forget Steve Avery — his effort was a big plus,'" Pendleton said.

The Braves won their 102nd game, tying the franchise record set in 1892 and tied in 1998 when the team played in Boston.

Avery (18-6) gave up four runs on five hits in eight innings. He struck out a season-high seven and walked two. The Braves are 28-7 in games started by Avery.

Teetering Lewis retains title with left hook in 7th

The Associated Press

CARDIFF, Wales — Frank Bruno had Lennox Lewis figured out. Well, almost. "Bruno did his homework and kept me from throwing my right hand early," Lewis said after keeping the WBC heavyweight title early Saturday morning at Cardiff Arms Park.

"But he must have forgotten I have a terrific left hook. I said to myself, 'I'm going to let him see my hook.'"

Looking in trouble and looking like anything but an undefeated champion, Lewis unleashed a left hook in the seventh round. It thudded against Bruno's jaw and the challenger came apart, as he did in two previous unsuccessful title bids.

Until that moment, Bruno had fought intelligently and patiently and was seemingly in control, although American judges Tony Castellano and Jerry Roth had the fight even at 57-57 after six rounds. British judge Adrian Morgan scored it 59-55 for Bruno.

Lennox Lewis lands a straight left to Frank Bruno during their WBC heavyweight title fight Saturday at Cardiff Arms Park in Wales, England.

Bruno praised Lewis and said, "I think I did well, honestly, considering the so-called experts said I would last only two or three rounds. So I did bloody well, old chap."

against Tommy Morrison and eventually against Riddick Bowe, the unbeaten holder of the WBA and IBF titles.

Lewis might have spent some bargaining chips on the chilly Welsh morning. His performance certainly won't raise his stock in the United States and could cost him when it comes time to negotiate the big-money match with Bowe.

Bruno, who seemed to be the favorite of the crowd, had an estimated 20,000 fans in an uproar early in the seventh round when he seemed to hurt Lewis with a left hook and then followed with a series of short punches.

"He thought he had me," Lewis said. "But actually, I just lost my footing. I saw every punch coming."

Then Lewis unleashed the left hook that turned the fight. Bruno, the 31-year-old challenger trying for the third time to be a heavyweight champion, dominated the first half of the fight and had Lewis in trouble early in the seventh round. Lewis followed with a barrage of head punches that sent Bruno into a neutral corner, where Lewis continued his attack.

Then as Lewis hit Bruno with a left to measure him for a fight, referee Mickey Vann pulled in trouble early in the seventh round. Lewis leaped back to the assault with another barrage and Vann stopped the fight at 1:12 of the seventh round.

Many blame CBS for waning interest in Major Leagues

Knight-Ridder News Service

LONG BEACH, Calif. — A short and tempestuous era — some will say error — will end when the final out of the World Series is reported and CBS signs off on its costly four-year partnership with baseball.

How costly? CBS paid $1.06 billion for the rights to cover baseball for four years ($245 million a year from 1990-93), far more than NBC and ABC combined paid for six years in the previous deal. CBS has written off more than half of the total cost of the contract in losses.

How costly? Rightly or wrongly, CBS is viewed as a scapegoat in the death of the traditional Saturday game of the week as well as the new realignment and added playoff tier due next year.

A rather heavy cross to bear so heavy that CBS is letting the end of its reign on baseball quietly.

"We've loved being around the game, so it's bittersweet as we come down to the final season," said Jeremy Handelman, CBS' vice president for program planning. "A lot of people who had no chance to work baseball before, this has been very enjoyable."

"On the business side, it's no secret we had some significant financial losses," said a CBS spokesman. The company had been successful regarding where the network was at that time. But if we had it do over again, we wouldn't do it. The same price.

"I don't say that to denigrate the property, but I'd be laughed at if I didn't say that."

Analyst Tim McCarver had similar sentiments in the disbanding of a broadcast crew. "The memories I have are of the hard work everyone put in to put on the best show possible," he said. "I guess there's some regret to see us go and for the job to suddenly come to an end. You get close to the guys you work with in a situation like this."

"We made some mistakes early on, but I think the mistakes were corrected. I think we can put on as good a baseball show as any network could put on."

McCarver agrees with one facet that the frustration with CBS' investment and its financial freefall overwhelmed critics' perspectives. "I think initially that perception possible existed, but some of it waned as the years went by," he said.

Everyone seemed to forget that CBS was third in the prime time race at the time, and needed baseball's prestige and ratings potential to keep affiliates and boost its profile. That hardly seems pertinent now, though, as people talk the final score.

MONEY: By the time the network aired its first game, the ad market had softened and experts were already predicting losses. CBS wrote off more than $500 million of the contract before the third year of the deal was concluded.

RATINGS: Already in decline before CBS' first season, Nielsen's regular season numbers have gone from 5.6 in 1988 for a weekly Saturday game to 3.4 in 1993 with random Saturdays (3.6 in 1992 with one game remaining). The League Championship Series, at 15.0 in 1987, hit an all-time low 10.5 last season.

The three World Series telecasts have earned 20.8, 23.9 and 20.2 and helped the network to prime time ratings wins, but are still far off from the early '80s era when they averaged 23 or more, topped by a 28.6 in 1986.

IMAGE: CBS' production, hailed for its NFL and NBA coverage, was also panned. Producer Ric LaCivita, with the blessing of Executive Producer Ted Shaker, attempted to reinvent coverage of the game. Both men were fired. LaCivita on the eve of last year's World Series.

Jack Buck and McCarver never got to speak as a broadcast team in the first two years, either, a surprise since Buck is a broadcast legend and McCarver, a former successful major league pitcher, was widely considered the best analyst in the game. And Sean McDonough's work as Buck's successor has been widely panned.

Some critics have gone as far as to blame CBS' generosity for bloated salaries and the declining ratings for baseball's image problems. Handelman says that kind of criticism forgets there are two parties in every deal.

Lehman blazes in Buick

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — Tom Lehman shot a course-record 63 to lead the first round of the Buick Southern Open.

Lehman's round, which included a 5-under 31 on the back nine, gave him a 135 total for 36 holes. He chipped in for eagle on both par-5s on the back side, which he played first. He played the four par-3s on the Mountain View course at Callaway Gardens in 6 under.

"It was one of those days when I could do anything with a golf ball," Lehman said. "Things got going and stayed going. I hit the fairways and that's the secret to this course."

The previous record was set two years ago by David Peoples, Robert Gungz, Steve Jones and Louis Brown.

Billy Andrade and Peter Persons were three shots back, Andrade shot a 70 Friday, while Persons had a 66.

The group at 139 included Neal Lancaster, Fred Funk, Willie Wood, first-round leader Jim Hallett and Bob Estes.

John Daly, who shot a 70 Thursday, quit midway through his second round. After finishing a 43 on his front nine, Daly walked off the 18th green, went to the parking lot and left the course.

Daly's trouble apparently began on the par-5 15th, where he took a 9. He bogeyed two of his next three holes, losing six shots to par in four holes.

Trevino, Dent share early Vantage lead

CLEMMONS, N.C. (AP) — Lee Trevino and Jim Dent matched bogey-free 68s and shared the first-round lead Friday in the richest event on the Senior PGA Tour, the $1.5 million Vantage Championship.

"I'm clicking on all cylinders right now. I'm totally relaxed out there. My confidence is really up," Trevino said after putting nine "3s" on his scorecard.

"The confidence came from a victory last week which was awfully important to me."

"The year was coming down to an end and I wasn't doing anything. I'd been practicing hard but nothing was happening. I was kind of down," Trevino said. "But winning last week, it gave me the confidence. I'm running on right now. I'm really up."

And, with his 7-under-par effort in a tournament that offers $225,000 to the winner, a new range of possibilities opened up for the man who has dominated senior play for the last three years.

"If I could win here, there's enough tournaments left that I could maybe get back in the money-winning race, player of the year, all that."

"No one wouldn't that be something after missing three months," said Trevino, who sat out the first part of the season as a result of surgery on his left thumb.

Dent, a runner-up in this event the last two years, tied Trevino with birdies on three of the last four holes and a 31 on the back nine.

As usual for the long-hitting Dent, his effort was built around a domination of the par-5s.
