Clinton orders ships to Haiti

President wants U.S. military to help enforce embargo, cites 'important interests' for U.S.

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Clinton ordered six warships to take up position off the shores of Haiti to enforce the U.N. trade embargo scheduled to take effect Monday and repel a small contingent of ground troops for the possible rescue of Americans on the Caribbean island.

Clinton ordered the show of force to back up his demand that Haiti's military rulers abide by an agreement to cede power and allow the return of popularly elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was ousted in a 1991 military coup.

But a senior administration official acknowledged that it was unlikely Aristide would take office on Oct. 30 as provided for in a U.N.-mediated settlement reached three months ago.

U.N. evacuates - A4

Clinton's repeated references to concerns about the safety of 1,100 American citizens living in Haiti appeared to set the stage for possible armed intervention to evacuate the Americans and to pave the way for Aristide's eventual return.

The president also said he was imposing unilateral sanctions on Haiti's military leaders, including a freeze on assets held in the United States and revocation of their travel visas.

The purpose of these actions is this: To ensure the safety of Americans in Haiti and to press for the restoration of democracy there through the strongest possible enforcement of the sanctions.

No place to go

Trapped by various zoning laws, Bob Goff says he may be in danger of losing his home. Sitting on his property, Lee and Linda Jackson have been trying to help him move the trailer.

Bureaucratic boondoggle threatens Buhl man's home

By Bertilia L. Redfern
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Time is running out for a 69-year-old man who lives in a trailer that needs to be moved by the end of the month.

Bob Goff lives in a trailer on the property of Country Korner Kafe owners Lee and Linda Jackson. The trailer stands in the way of their continuing business operations.

The trailer is on the highway right of way. But neither the trailer nor Goff have any place to go. The trailer is too small and too old for moving and relocation permits. And Goff has no where else to live.

The trailer has been parked where it is since 1989. At that time, moving it, or placing it on the property was not a problem, Goff said if it's in the highway right of way, others must be in the same situation, with a trailer park directly behind the Jackson's store and cafe.

Goff said he and Jackson had prepared a site for the trailer in the city's impact area. They had put in a well and septic system and had bought the permit to move the trailer. But then the permit was revoked.

The 1971 model trailer is 340 square feet. But regulations require that a trailer in the city's impact area be a 1976 or later model and at least 400 square feet in size.

Goff said two trailer courts in Buhl would accept his home, but they have no space.

"I understand they have to obey the laws, and they don't want junk trailers in

Inflation dips payments

The Associated Press

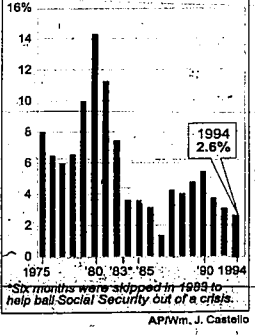

WASHINGTON — America's 45 million Social Security recipients will get a 2.6 percent cost-of-living increase next year, reflecting an inflation rate kept low by a lackluster economy.

It will be the second smallest increase since 1975 when Congress first ordered annual adjustments to keep up with inflation, the Social Security Administration announced Friday. The increase was just 1.3 percent in 1987.

"Without the small annual adjustment ... those who rely on their Social Security income would fall further behind in the purchasing power of their retirement, disability or survivorship benefits," said Horace D. Deets, executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons.

The 2.6 percent increase will mean $17 more each month for the average recipient, boosting the typical benefit to $874. The increase will show up in checks received Jan. 3. "I'm just happy that we're getting something," explained Gertrude Ayers, an 81-year-old widow living alone in Stratton, Ill. "There are a lot here in Stratton who only get Social Security and need every penny they can get."

Social Security increases

New campaign links chlorine, breast cancer

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Aided by former congresswoman Bella Abzug, herself a breast cancer survivor, environmentalists started a campaign Friday to discourage use of chemicals made from chlorine as a precaution against the disease.

"Studies have found that women with the highest amounts of these chemicals in their body have breast cancer risks four to 10 times higher than women with lower levels," said Joe Thornton, who wrote a report on the chemicals for the environmental group Greenpeace.

If future studies confirm those numbers, he said, "organochlorines would be among the strongest risk factors for breast cancer ever identified."

Joe Walker, associate director of the Chlorine Chemistry Council, said the industry group is reviewing the report. "Because breast cancer is such a frightening illness that touches literally all of

Tailhook draws censures

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Holding the top echelon of the Navy and Marine Corps accountable for the Tailhook scandal, the Pentagon Friday censured three admirals and reprimanded another 30 top-ranking officers for failing to stop or report sexual assaults that occurred while they were attending the group's 1991 convention in Las Vegas.

The disciplinary actions were taken by Navy Secretary John Dalton with the approval of Defense Secretary Les Aspin. Among the 30 receiving reprimands was Adm. Frank B. Kelso, the nation's top naval officer.

The three letters of censure are considered grievous blemishes for officials of such high military rank. The lesser reprimands will become a part of the 30 officers' permanent personnel files and may affect future assignments and promotions. Two other top officers were exonerated.

"The naval service has suffered greatly as a result of Tailhook," Dalton said in announcing the punishment. "Some senior officers who were there failed to exercise active leadership and take the necessary actions to prevent behavior that was wrong."

"It's clear to me there was a failure of appropriate leadership at Tailhook '91."

An Inspector General's report earlier this year found that as many as seven dozen women were sexually assaulted and up to 140 service members engaged in improper behavior during the fliers' convention. The activities ranged from attacking women along a hallway "gauntlet" at the Las Vegas Hilton, to other incidents of crude nudity and indecent exposure.

The three harshest reprimands went to Vice Adm. Richard M. Dunleavy, and rear admirals Riley Mixson, director of Navy air warfare, and Wilson Flagg, his reserve counterpart. Dunleavy, assistant chief of naval operations for air warfare at the time of the convention, will retain a two-star rank, instead of the three-star rank he had achieved when he retired in the summer of 1992. The penalty could cost him as much as $100,000 over his lifetime.

"This is not a minor sanction," Dalton said.

town, but this is clear out in the country," Goff said.

The trailer is in good condition, both inside and out.

Buhl's city attorney has sent a letter to the Attorney General, seeking clarification on the issue.

The city received a response Friday. The council will meet Monday Oct. 25 at 7 p.m. to discuss that response and make a decision on the future of the trailer.

The Jackson's temporary permit expires on Nov. 1.

The Jacksons ran into a number of problems recently when they expanded their business. Most of those problems have been solved, except moving the trailer.

Linda Jackson said she and her husband own the trailer and have it properly licensed.

Councilman Chuck Geska said he was certain the law would still require the trailer to be moved, and Mayor Ted Pence agreed.

"Les Jackson asked if they could extend the deadline for moving the trailer another 10 months, so he could find a solution to the problem.

Councilman Tom Tippen said he wasn't prepared to force the issue with winter coming on, and no place for Goff to move.

Mandela, de Klerk share peace prize for efforts in South Africa

The Washington Post

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The world's most famous former prisoner and his ex-jailer — African National Congress President Nelson Mandela and South African President Frederik W. de Klerk — were jointly awarded the 1993 Nobel Peace Prize Friday for their efforts to dismantle the country's apartheid system of racial separation.

Klerk a senior position, perhaps the deputy presidency, in a coalition government led by the ANC.

Since Mandela's release, about 12,000 South Africans have been killed in political violence, with much of the carnage from factional fighting between the ANC and its black political rival, the Inkatha Freedom Party. As election day approaches, Inkatha and parties representing the white right wing have stepped up warnings of civil war.

The Nobel Committee honored the pair for reaching across centuries of racial oppression to negotiate a fragile but as yet unfinished transition to a non-racial democracy. It called their commitment to negotiations a model for resolving racial and ethnic conflicts around the world.

Even so, many here agree with President Clinton, who last month said it was a "miracle" that South Africa had progressed as far as it has in a world increasingly riven by bloody racial and ethnic wars.

Many say the miracle never would have happened without de Klerk's and Mandela's mix-of-stature, temperament, steelness and flexibility.

"This amission makes for a pretty good argument against historical determinism," political scientist Robert Schirre said.

"Had another white leader come to power instead of de Klerk, one could easily see the apartheid regime holding out another five, 10 years. And with a different black leader, someone without Mandela's self-confidence and stature, you could see the ANC feeling pressed to make demands that no negotiating partner could possibly meet."

"The great credit to them is that they have been able to bring their constituencies along through a very difficult process. This is a country where large portions of each leader's support base thinks the other leader is evil incarnate."

House extends jobless benefits

WASHINGTON — The House Friday overwhelmingly voted to extend emergency jobless benefits and pay for the $1-billion in anticipated costs partly through cuts in welfare to elderly immigrants.

The jobless aid bill was sent to the Senate by a vote of 302 to 95, ending a two-week delay caused by Hispanic lawmakers who objected to welfare cuts of $320 million for elderly, blind and disabled immigrants.

Emergency jobless benefits lapsed Oct. 2. Since then about 60,000 unemployed workers who exhausted their regular 26 weeks of checks have been unable to apply for an extra seven or 13 weeks of benefits. Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, has indicated he wants a Senate vote next week.

State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said the United States is concerned that a German dialogue with Iran, "combined with extensive trading ties and favorable financial treatment, may encourage Iran to think that it can improve relations with the West without changing its behavior."

US reproaches Germany on Iran ties

WASHINGTON — The United States and Germany are embroiled in a dispute over German efforts to strengthen ties with Iran at a time when the administration is trying to isolate the Tehran government, the State Department said Friday.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher has raised the issue with German Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel, and German officials have been given confidential U.S. data on alleged Iranian involvement in terrorist activities, U.S. officials said.

Latin leaders talk poverty, trade

SANTIAGO, Chile — Latin American leaders attending a regional trade summit agreed Friday to support the renewal of international sanctions against Haiti and threatened to suspend diplomatic ties to the Caribbean nation.

The leaders also criticized the European Community for maintaining large farm subsidies they said hurt Latin American farmers.

Officials said the group was following closely the situation in Haiti, where a U.N.-mediated plan to reinstate ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide has virtually collapsed. The U.N. Security Council voted to freeze the assets of the military leaders' assets unless they adhere to the accord by Monday. Bolivian Foreign Minister Antonio Arambarib said the presidents would join the sanctions if they take effect and would recall their ambassadors from the Caribbean nation.

Clinton said at a news conference held in the East Room of the White House. "The military authorities in Haiti simply must understand that they cannot indefinitely defy the desires of their own people as well as the will of the world community," Clinton said.

But Aristide, who lives in Washington, urged Clinton not to contemplate military action to ensure his return.

"There is no need for military intervention and President Aristide would not support such an effort," said Michael D. Barnes, a former Maryland congressman who serves as Aristide's legal adviser.

Clinton said that "important American interests" were at stake in Haiti, including the safety of U.S. civilians and embassy workers, the promotion of democracy in the hemisphere and the threat of a massive new wave of immigrants sailing toward American shores from the impoverished nation.

He said that commanders of the warships — including a destroyer, two fast frigates and three heavily armed cruisers would be given broad latitude to stop and search ships bound for Haiti to ensure that they were not carrying prohibited materials, chiefly oil and arms.

Prosecutors: Meese lied about Iran-Contra to cover Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iran-Contra prosecutors' final report concludes that former Attorney General Edwin Meese concocted a "false account" of an Iranian arms-for-hostages deal to cover up President Reagan's role, according to sources familiar with the document.

The still-secret report says prosecutors would have considered seeking Meese's indictment after discovering new evidence in 1992, but the statute of limitations had expired, several sources said.

The report concludes top Cabinet officers participated in a broader cover-up, plotting to make "scapegoats" out of Oliver North and national security advisers Robert McFarlane and John Poindexter, according to the sources and notes they took from the report's executive summary.

The report also portrays Reagan, who has

from public scrutiny by a federal appeals court to give those named in it time to submit responses. Reagan's lawyers recently obtained a 60-day extension.

For now, the report is only available to given conflicting accounts of his role in the scandal, as being personally involved in directing advisers in a failed arms-for-hostages deal in Iran in the sources said.

Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh's report was completed in August but has been sealed since it was submitted to the president's most senior advisers and the Cabinet members on the National Security Council participated in the strategy to make National Security Council members McFarlane, Poindexter and North the scapegoats whose sacrifice would protect the Reagan administration in its final two years," the notes quote the report as saying.

"In an important sense, this strategy succeeded. Independent counsel discovered much of the best evidence of the coverup in the final year of active investigation, too late for most prosecutions."

McFarlane pleaded guilty to four misdemeanors for withholding information, but was later pardoned by President Bush. Justice convicted McFarlane's successor, Poindexter, of five felonies and North of three, but their convictions were reversed or set aside on appeal.

The scandal involved two covert operations: the sale of arms to Iran in exchange for that country's help in freeing Mideast hostages and the diversion of profits from the arms sales to provide military aid to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

The report says a key to the coverup was Meese's role in creating "a false account" of a November 1985 arms-for-hostages deal with Iran to protect Reagan in the scandal's early days, according to the sources.

The sources said the new evidence against

Meese was discovered just last year when prosecutors obtained contemporaneous notes of then-White House chief of staff Don Regan.

"According to the sources' description and notes, the report states:

- The evidence indicates Meese conducted a "damage control exercise" rather than gathering facts amid the public uproar when the scandal first erupted in November 1986.
- Regan's notes show that Meese attempted to assemble a false story — announcing that the president had not known about the CIA-assisted arms-for-hostages deal — when the Administration aides feared the shipment of Hawk missiles was illegal.
- When Meese gave his account to the president and Cabinet, it was not challenged by top officials who knew it to be false, the sources and notes say.

"When Americans are imperiled, ultimately the president has to bear that responsibility," Clinton said.

"Sometimes it doesn't work out," Clinton said, mentioning the battle earlier month "that claimed 18 American lives. I know of no reason why anyone but me should bear the responsibility for that."

He said his administration erred in not realizing that the mission was changing from a humanitarian one to a military and political one and he faulted the United Nations for expanding its mission.

Man tells of amputating leg to escape fallen boulder

DENVER (AP) — Pinned under a boulder for three hours, his left leg broken, his right leg useless, William S. Jeracki knew he had two choices: amputate his leg with a fishing knife or die of exposure.

He cut.

"I'll never know if that was the best possible decision," Jeracki said Thursday, breaking his silence about the Oct. 5 ordeal.

"I'll never know if someone would have come up that road. But I'm here. I'm alive. I feel lucky to be alive."

"Whatever is ahead of me is easy, actually it probably won't be easy, but I'm not going to fear it."

Using crutches, Jeracki walked unassisted into an interview auditorium at University Hospital, his left pant leg tied in a knot below his amputated knee. Jeracki, a 38-year-old anesthesiologist from Conifer, said he planned to go home "as soon as possible," and back to work by Christmas on an artificial leg.

And he insisted that he wasn't special.

"I wasn't a hero," Jeracki said. "All I wanted to do is stay alive."

Jeracki said he was returning from a fishing trip when the boulder he had used to support himself toppled onto his leg.

He said he thought about David Wyman, the 37-year-old bulldozer operator in Pennsylvania who cut off his leg with a pocket knife last summer to extricate himself from beneath a fallen oak tree. He also remembered reading an article about a hunter who was injured and, believing he would die, wrote letters to his family, "then died of exposure."

He waited three hours before deciding to amputate. When he finished, he crawled more than 100 yards to his truck and drove a half-mile to the town of Alice, St. Mary's.

"All that was going through my head was 'push, push, push, push,' he said.

"Getting out of there was what I was thinking about. Civilization wasn't that far away."

Jeracki was reluctant to discuss "the specifics of the self-surgery he performed using his medical training, a rope tourniquet and a knife he carried in his tackle box."

Senate backs Clinton's plan for withdrawing from Somalia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Friday endorsed President Clinton's March 31 date for withdrawing U.S. troops from Somalia. Clinton, rejoicing that a major foreign policy defeat had been averted, said he was gratified by the margin of the vote.

But the president had strong criticism for the United Nations and for those in the previous administration whom he accused of being "naive" in thinking that the operation could be over quickly.

The vote was 76-23 in the early morning hours and marked the first time the Senate had voted to limit funds for armed conflict since June 1973, when Congress agreed to cut off money for all combat activities in Cambodia, Laos and North and South Vietnam.

At an early-afternoon news conference, Clinton welcomed the Senate action and vowed to try to remove all U.S. troops safely by March 31.

He defended his Somalia policy and said he takes responsibility, as commander-in-chief, for the loss of American lives there.

When Americans are imperiled, ultimately the president has to bear that responsibility," Clinton said.

"Sometimes it doesn't work out," Clinton said, mentioning the battle earlier month "that claimed 18 American lives. I know of no reason why anyone but me should bear the responsibility for that."

He said his administration erred in not realizing that the mission was changing from a humanitarian one to a military and political one and he faulted the United Nations for expanding its mission.

Ex-presidents cut autograph deal

NEW YORK (AP) — This is the kind of bipartisan effort that could balance the budget. Former Presidents Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan and Bush cut a 1991 autograph signing deal among themselves that could net each up to $1.5 million.

"They're acting like baseball players," said autograph dealer Herman Darvick, who first caught wind of the agreement.

But spokeswoman for two of the former presidents said Friday the deal was not made to line anybody's pockets. "Money generated by the valuable collectibles will go to the presidential libraries or to charity."

The presidential pact was made in 1991, when all five men were photographed together at the dedication of the Reagan Library in Simi Valley, Calif., Darvick said. It was the first gathering ever of five U.S. presidents.

How many copies of the photos were made and signed? Depends on who you ask, Darvick says 1,500.

Ford spokeswoman Penny Circle says 500 — 100 per signer. Bush spokeswoman Rose Zamaria isn't sure, but says Bush received 300 signed photos.

Regardless of number, each of the five signed each of the copies, Circle said. Now the deal: They agreed not to sign any other copies of the photo. The result: The price of the existing photos would go up in the memorabilia market.

Darvick estimates that each shot, with autographs, is worth $5,000. Some quick math: 100 photos at $5,000 each equals $500,000 per ex-president.

If the figure is 300 per man, the take goes up to $1.5 million.

Not that any of them are starving for cash. Their annual pension is based on the salary of a cabinet official at the time they left office: for Bush, that's $143,800 a year. Each also gets $96,000 a year from the government for staff salaries.

Sniper killing may be linked to drug case

MIAMI (AP) — A rooftop sniper killed one man and critically wounded two others in what may have been an attempt to silence witnesses against two of the nation's largest cocaine smugglers, a law enforcement official said.

At least five potential government witnesses in the trial of Augustus "Willie" Falcon and Salvador Magluta have been shot — three fatally.

One victim in Thursday night's attack is the brother of a key witness expected to testify against the two. That witness survived a 1992 shooting. Falcon and Magluta were the chief U.S. importers for Colombia's cocaine cartels in the mid-1980s, smuggling 75 tons of the drug into the United States, authorities said.

There were signs that the target of Thursday's attack was 19-year-old Ray Cruz, said a federal law enforcement source, speaking on condition of anonymity. Cruz was in critical condition Friday and under tight security at Jackson Memorial Hospital.

The source said investigators also were looking into other motives, including the possibility of a disgruntled employee at the warehouse where

Launch scrapped; rats face early death

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A space shuttle, yet old communications receiver failed hours before Columbia's scheduled liftoff Friday, forcing NASA to scrap its second launch attempt in two days for the medical mission.

"We're going to fly you one of these days. Just hang in there," launch director Bob Sieck told the seven astronauts.

The launch was rescheduled for Monday.

Friday's scrub means premature deaths for the 48 rats aboard Columbia because they must be replaced with a fresh batch for Monday's launch attempt.

Cruz and the other victims worked against Falcon and Magluta, both 38. Lazaro Cruz was wounded in a 1992 hit attempt and is now in the federal witness protection program.

Yeltsin orders nationwide vote on new constitution on Dec. 12

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin took a major step forward with his political reforms Friday, ordering a nationwide vote Dec. 12 on a new constitution to govern post-Soviet Russia.

The time of Soviet power is ending, Yeltsin said, appearing on national television to announce the plebiscite. He said that was "the most democratic way to decide Russia's new constitution."

The vote will be held the same day as elections for a new parliament, replacing two of the major political obstacles to Yeltsin's reforms left over from the previous Communist regime. He has said a presidential election will be held in June, unless the new parliament decides otherwise.

Yeltsin's crackdown on opponents of reform has been popular among ordinary Russians, and it appears likely that sentiment will carry over to the new constitution. In addition, the president controls the news media and has banned opposition parties, ensuring he can contain debate about the measure.

Yeltsin had wavered between having the new parliament vote on the constitution that will replace the 1977 charter still technically in force or submitting it to the voters, who backed him in a referendum on his powers last April.

If the people do back him, Yeltsin will present the new parliament with a fait accompli — a move that shows who is boss and avoids a potentially long and fractious legislative debate over a new charter.

Plans for the constitution were a major source of conflict between Yeltsin and hard-line lawmakers in the previous parliament, who opposed many aspects of the president's draft, including private ownership of land.

Smiling occasionally, Yeltsin told TV viewers the new constitution would be "a major stabilizing factor in Russian life."

The Constitutional Assembly has not come up with a final draft for the constitution and more changes are expected. Yeltsin said it would be ready by Nov. 10 after more than three years in the making, which he called "more than enough."

The plebiscite will pose a single question: "Do you approve the constitution of the Russian Federation?"

Yeltsin has played an important role in shaping the new constitution. He wants to increase his own power and eliminate the vice presidency, a post that proved troublesome by creating a dangerous rival to the president.

Among the other important changes Yeltsin wants is a provision to allow the free purchase and sale of land, which would break with the Soviet past when the state owned most of Russia's land.

Human rights observers with the United Nations and Organization of American States were called back to Port-au-Prince, Haiti, from the countryside Friday for their safety. They were later evacuated to the Dominican Republic.

Agents step up anti-terrorism efforts

MOSCOW (AP) — Dozens of hard-liners still on the loose 11 days after tanks pounded parliament into submission could turn their guns and grudges toward political terrorism, authorities and experts fear.

Some worry that armed extremists, whose groups have been banned by President Boris Yeltsin, could even form an alliance with Russia's increasingly powerful criminal gangs.

"When other means are frustrated, people who want to achieve the ends might turn to terrorism," Richard Clutterback, a terrorism analyst at Essex University in Britain, said in a telephone interview Friday.

The director of the former KGB says his agents are taking the threat of assassinations and political violence seriously.

"We are now facing the task of enhancing divisions designed to identify and disclose terrorist activities," Security Minister Nikolai Golushko said Thursday. "Frankly speaking, the situation is quite worrisome in this respect."

Except for some sniping in the first hours after legislative leaders surrendered at the Russian White House, there have not been any signs of political terrorism. But there is plenty to worry about.

Police said hundreds of assault rifles, grenade launchers and other weapons were distributed to those inside the White House in the weeks before Yeltsin sent tanks and armored vehicles into the capital on Oct. 4.

An unknown number of armed men escaped during the 10-hour battle, some apparently through a network of tunnels extending from the parliament building.

Major Gen. Arkady Baskayev, who commands troops searching and guarding the building, said Friday that unidentified hard-liners had threatened violence.

"They are throwing threatening notes to soldiers standing guard at the White House. There are anonymous phone calls saying, 'We have many weapons, and we shall get revenge,'" Baskayev said.

U.N. civilian mission rounds up monitors as security erodes

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Nearly all of the U.N. personnel sent to Haiti to prepare for a restoration of democracy are being evacuated to the Dominican Republic for their own safety, a U.N. spokesman said Friday.

The spokesman, speaking in New York on condition of anonymity, said that 25 to 30 essential staff would remain in Port-au-Prince, the Haitian capital, with U.N. envoy Dante Caputo, who decided the others should leave.

The rest — about 300 staff members, including human rights monitors — are being shipped out to Santo Domingo, the Dominican Republic's capital, in two planes, one leaving Friday night and one on Saturday, he reported.

Security for Caputo was stepped up because of death threats, said a U.N. source in New York, also speaking on condition of anonymity.

Haitian Justice Minister Guy Malary was assassinated on Thursday. The same day, pro-army gunmen briefly took over a session of parliament.

President Clinton ordered six U.S. warships on Friday to patrol off Haiti to enforce U.N. sanctions aimed at pressuring the military to step aside and let exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide return to power Oct. 30.

Clinton placed an infantry company on standby to protect the 1,000 Americans here if necessary.

But army commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras signaled he would ignore his agreement to step down now.

"If my resignation from the Haitian army would solve the Haitian problem I would do it today, but I don't believe my resignation today ... will solve the problem," he told radio station Tropic FM on Friday.

The accord Cedras signed with Aristide specifies only Oct. 30 as the deadline transition date. But a U.N. spokesman in New York said there was a very clear understanding then that Cedras would leave two weeks before Aristide returned.

Downed pilot takes long flight home

Los Angeles Times

LANDSTUHL, Germany — Army helicopter pilot Michael Durant, whose bruised and horrified face became an unerring symbol of the U.S. military presence in Somalia, is expected to be flown home Saturday after an emotional reunion Friday with his wife at a military hospital here.

"He seems to have bounced back very well," said Col. Robert Mirelson after meeting with the couple several hours after Durant's arrival. "As young and strong as he is and with his attitude, I don't think it will be a very long recovery period."

Military doctors said further surgery on Durant's broken right thigh, into which doctors earlier inserted a pin, can wait until after his return to Fort Campbell, Ky., his home station. Doctors set his fractured right cheekbone and said his other injuries — a shrapnel wound on his arm and a compression fracture of a lower vertebra — were not serious enough to prevent his travel to the United States.

"Our goal is to get him back home as quickly as we possibly can," said Col. David Layland, hospital commander.

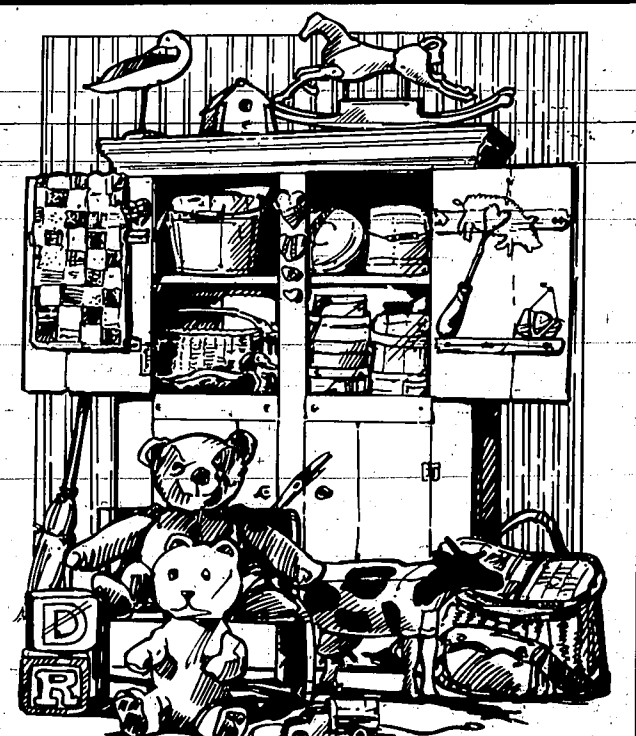

Durant, who was freed in Mogadishu Thursday by rebel leader Mohammed Farah Aidid after 11 days of captivity, was welcomed to Germany by a flag-waving crowd of 200 that braved rain and cold to cheer his arrival. The 69th casualty of the Somalia peacekeeping mission to be evacuated to Germany, Durant had been injured when his helicopter was shot down Oct. 3 in a raid on an alleged gathering of Aidid's associates.

Smiling and clutching the maroon beret of his elite airborne regiment, the shirtless Durant flashed a thumbs-up sign from his stretcher as he was carried from the C-141 transport plane to a military ambulance at the nearby Ramstein air base. Another throng of well-wishers greeted him at the hospital in Landstuhl.

U.S.-Mexico ties ride rough terrain

Disputes over trade, immigration weaken fragile political bridge

Knight-Ridder News Service

MEXICO CITY — A flurry of disputes about trade and immigration has shaken Mexico's relationship with the United States at a crucial moment weakening a bond that until recently had been stronger than ever, Mexican analysts say.

In a measure of how fragile the political bridge is between the world's richest nation and its vulnerable, developing neighbor, it took just one rocky diplomatic week for Mexican officials to publicly express their exasperation with Washington and privately say they feel insulted and betrayed by U.S. leaders.

First, as chances for swift passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement slipped in Washington, Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari expressed his irritation with Washington politics surrounding the free trade debate. He recently appealed to a group of visiting U.S. Congress members to approve the pact without modification or delay, suggesting that Mexico might not support the treaty if it is implemented after Jan. 1.

Then a new U.S. Border Patrol crackdown on illegal immigration from Mexico incensed Mexican authorities.

As U.S. agents strengthened their forces along the Texas-Mexico frontier to stop an estimated 10,000 illegal border crossings a day, Mexican officials last week sent a series of protests through diplomatic channels to the State Department. In a communique obtained by the Mercury News, they said the Clinton administration had created "a negative atmosphere in bilateral relations" by initiating the crackdown without telling the Mexican government.

The two incidents show how close to the surface Mexican mistrust of the United States lies, despite the efforts of a new generation of pragmatic leaders in open Mexico's borders, literally and figuratively, to U.S. influence, products and friendships after years of looking inward.

Mexico, analysts say, has never come to terms with having lost half its territory to the United States, with Washington's frequent meddling in its political affairs and with the U.S. hold on its economy. When confronting its northern neighbor, history has taught Mexico that it has few defenses.

"The understanding of our own weakness compared to the might of our northern neighbor runs very deep among us Mexicans; it doesn't take much to stir up our insecurities," said Federico Reyes Heróles, editor of Este País, a leading political magazine here.

"Today, with all of political Mexico waiting on this pact, with this growing anti-immigration sentiment in the United States that from our viewpoint looks racist, there is a feeling that we are about to be betrayed by the northern giant again." Nothing fuels that sense of betrayal more than the Mexican perception that NAFTA is on the brink of being rejected by the U.S. Congress.

The treaty, which would open borders and ease tariffs on goods between the United States, Mexico and Canada, is the major initiative of the Salinas administration, and Mexican leaders are counting on it to open U.S. markets to Mexican goods and attract foreign investment that the struggling country sorely needs.

If the chill in relations becomes a lasting freeze, not just Mexico but also the United States could lose. Salinas has reached out to the United States, no Mexican leader has before, and as his administration ends and a presidential election year begins, politicians who derive their strength from nationalist rhetoric are waiting in the wings. Those politicians may make it difficult for Mexico to renegotiate the treaty, leaving U.S. companies that have invested millions here in the lurch.

And although Mexico may lack the leverage needed to persuade Congress to support NAFTA, it is having no trouble convincing Central American countries to drop their barriers to Mexican goods. If the United States doesn't ratify NAFTA, Mexican analysts say, it could find itself left out of a massive new market, made up of Mexico and its neighbors.

To sell the pact to the United States, during the past six years Mexico has gone far toward tearing down its protectionist walls. Hundreds of U.S. companies have moved to the country to do business. The Mexican government, which traditionally had shunned hiring lobbyists to push its agenda in Washington, has spent more than $13 million in the past three years on high-powered representation to sell NAFTA to Congress.

But with more U.S. legislators planning to vote against the pact than for it, the Mexican leaders who surround Salinas say they think President Clinton started selling the pact weakly and late.

"We are stunned, after working so hard for this for so long, stunned that there hasn't been more of an effort made, stunned that its future looks so grim," a highly placed Salinas administration official said recently.

Adding to the tension in the Mexican capital about NAFTA is resentment of the U.S. Border Patrol program, which went into effect Sept. 19. Dubbed Operation Blockade, the program has put about 450 new officers along a 20-mile stretch of the international boundary between Ciudad Juarez, Mexico and El Paso, Texas. The program went into effect without consultations with the Mexico-U.S. Bilateral Commission, which, under an agreement worked out several years ago, is supposed to be informed of changes in border policies.

Report: NBC producer's racial remarks causes furor

NEW YORK (AP) — A top NBC News producer's use of a racial slur was taken out of context and distorted in a newspaper account, NBC News President Andrew Lack contended Friday.

"The term was used as part of a staff discussion on how not to perpetuate stereotypes," Lack said in a news release. "The term does not reflect the producer's feelings, beliefs and personal history, and in fact has resulted in a reaction that is opposite to what he intended."

The New York City tabloid Daily News on Friday reported that "NBC

Nightly News" executive producer Jeff Gralnick used the slur "jungle bunny" in referring to Somali warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid at an editorial meeting Tuesday morning.

"He's an educated jungle bunny and the rest of the jungle bunnies are not like this at all. They're illiterates," the News quoted Gralnick as saying. The meeting, attended by Lack and about a dozen staffers, was one of several regularly scheduled during the day. Although anchor Tom Brokaw was present for part of the meeting, it's unclear whether he was there when Gralnick spoke.

Former racist tells of change to tolerance

MOSCOW (AP) — In a six-month period, Floyd Cochran went from milking cows to serving as the fifth-highest ranking member of the Aryan Nations at Hayden Lake.

In another six-month period of his life, Cochran went from recruiting youngsters into the white supremacist group to publicly denouncing the organizations he was involved in for more than a quarter-century.

Cochran, the former Aryan Nations political coordinator, spoke Thursday to 350 people at the University of Idaho about the tactics of the group he abandoned last July, just months after organizing its youth festival.

Among the slides Cochran showed of the group's compound was one of former Twin Falls resident Wayne Jones, who was the security chief, with the caption: "Jones would be killed when white supremacists came to power because he had a cleft palate."

"He said: 'You know that when we come to power your kid and kids like him will have to be eliminated because they're genetic defects,'" Cochran said. "That was when the light went on."

That was, in April 1992, shortly before the annual Hitler Youth Festival at Hayden Lake. By July, Cochran had left the compound.

By January of this year he began lecturing to human rights groups and universities across the country, his role as an advocate of tolerance has made him a "race traitor" among his former friends.

"My answering machine is loaded with threats," said Cochran, adding he often changes motels or plane reservations at the last minute.

"As a youngster growing up in the primarily white town of Cortland, N.Y., Cochran watched his classmates excel in academics and athletics. His forte was racism.

"(Being a racist) gave me esteem and confidence to get me over the insecurities I had with myself," Cochran said. "Because I was an overt racist, I didn't have a lot of people to hang out with. But I justified that by saying that they were uneducated."

Cochran, whose speech meant of his childhood moving in and out of foster homes, served two sentences in New York county jails for breaking into a store and threatening to burn down a synagogue.

After he divorced his wife, he moved to the Hayden Lake compound, where he quickly ascended from janitor to political coordinator.

"It was almost like a homing instinct," he said. "I wanted to be with people who thought like I did and who didn't think that I had these whacked-out beliefs."

Congress votes to cut wool subsidies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress voted Friday to phase out wool and mohair subsidies over the next two years, resolving a dispute that had held up a $71 billion spending bill for agricultural programs.

A measure approved by the House and Senate provides for ranchers to get 75 percent of the usual subsidies for wool and mohair produced in 1994, half for the 1995 crop and none for 1996.

spending bill to cut off payments starting Oct. 1.

However, ranchers complained that doing that would cut payments for wool and mohair shorn in 1993, because payments aren't made until the spring of the following calendar year.

Ranchers said that would cause economic hardship because they have borrowed money against the expected payments. The subsidies will cost $190 million for 1993.

"I'm one of the nation's most vocal legislators, and even I wouldn't allow Congress to terminate that program immediately and retroactively," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee. "A phase-out is the only way to deal with the issue without sending people in many rural communities into bankruptcy."

Texas producers are the biggest beneficiaries of the program, with about 16,000 ranchers in 35 West Texas counties earning $85 million of the subsidies last year. More than 90 percent of the nation's mohair and 25 percent of the country's wool come from Texas, largely from rural Edwards Plateau counties.

Supporters say the payments under the 40-year-old program are crucial to the survival of many wool and mohair ranchers. But opponents say the payments are a waste of money that often go to the well-off.

The House approved its version of the spending bill Sept. 30. The Senate approved the spending bill, early Friday, then approved the other bill phasing out the subsidies. The House then passed the phase-out bill Friday.

Both measures go to President Clinton.

The measure was separate from the $71 billion spending bill for agricultural programs in the budget year starting Oct. 1.

Opponents of the controversial subsidy program had tried to use the

State Board wants money to build, fix campuses

MOSCOW (AP) — Faced with a long backlog of school construction projects, the state Board of Education is asking legislators to deposit an anticipated $50 million budget surplus into a building fund.

Board members, meeting Thursday at the University of Idaho, urged to petition Gov. Cecil Andrus, the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee and the Permanent Building Fund

Advisory Council for help with a list of renovation and new construction work.

The board's budget requests for next year include $73 million in major projects and another $10 million in maintenance work at public colleges.

A recent study indicates about $700 million in maintenance projects at elementary schools and high schools are being deferred for lack of dollars.

Board members said the Legislature was conservative in its estimates of revenues for this year. Income from taxes and fees should produce a surplus of at least $50 million.

Maintenance is important, particularly at Idaho, where some buildings are many decades old, board member Diane Bilyeu said.

There are also problems with growing enroll-

Vegas moves toward family-style resort

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Celebrities and the city's elite gathered this week for a sneak preview of the Las Vegas Strip's latest must-see attraction, the pyramid-shaped $375 million Luxor resort, which opened Friday.

Hundreds of invitee guests Thursday watched as Circus Circus Chairman William Bennett threw a switch that turned on laser lights in front of the hotel, then lit a giant beam skyward from the pyramid's peak.

Thousands of others jammed the Las Vegas Strip behind temporary fences as Bennett unveiled the unique hotel that hotel officials touted as "the next wonder of the world."

The crowd cheered as the intense beam — which on a clear night can be seen from airplanes 250 miles away above Los Angeles — pierced the early evening sky.

"Thank you for bringing Egypt to the desert and creating this oasis of entertainment," Nevada Gov. Bob Miller said to Bennett. "The creative genius that designed this hotel can only be matched by the business genius that allowed it to happen."

The 30-story hotel formally opened Friday, leading the way for what analysts see as this city's transition from a gaming capital to a family destination resort. Hotel officials were bracing for 40,000 visitors opening day, and a similar crush throughout the weekend.

Hundreds of invited guests, and members of the media attended Thursday night's gala, which included a "21" tournament with proceeds going to local charities.

The resort is the eighth Nevada hotel built by Circus Circus Enterprises Inc., whose president, Clyde Turner, praised founder Bennett as having a vision that has made the company "one of the most profitable, if not the most profitable, gaming company in the world."

Bennett praised the 1,800 construction workers who have worked overtime in recent weeks to finish the unusual resort, as well as resort architect Veldon Simpson.

Dancers from the 'Winds of Gods' line the sidewalk in front of the new pyramid-shaped Luxor Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas Thursday evening. The $375-million Egyptian-themed resort opened Friday.

New center to help transportation

MOSCOW — A new Idaho center to study transportation problems could be a "significant beginning" toward solving national transportation issues, Gov. Cecil Andrus says.

The governor was on hand at Moscow Friday as the Idaho Transportation Department, the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory and the Federal Highway Administration signed papers creating the Idaho Transportation Consortium.

It will use an $8 million federal grant, engineered by former senator Steve Symms to develop modern transportation technology.

"Each consortium partner brings to this ambitious enterprise unique strengths...for enhancing Idaho's system of transportation," said University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser.

Nampa teachers may approve contract

NAMPA — Following a standoff that lasted seven weeks into the school year, teachers in the Nampa School District have tentatively approved a salary agreement with administrators.

"Last night, we were back into a collaborative mode and out of the competitive mode that was so dangerous," Nampa Education Association President Shirley Rau said Thursday.

"I don't think either side thinks this was a great settlement for teachers, but it's good considering the money the district had to work with during the year."

Included in the pact are pay increases of 4 percent for teachers who earn at least nine hours of additional college credit. There would be an annual 4 percent hike for teachers who advance in experience.

The agreement does not increase the pay given at the various levels of the salary schedule.

Protesters haven't changed forest policies

MOSCOW — Despite two years of protests that cost taxpayers $400,000, Earth First! activists have failed to alter Forest Service management in the Nez Perce National Forest, Supervisor Michael King says.

"Has it changed how we implement things on the ground? Not really," King said Thursday at a wilderness colloquium sponsored by students from the University of Idaho College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences. "It's cost us money and it's cost us time."

While he never mentioned the Earth First! movement by name, he urged the audience to be made on the activists who oppose building logging roads into the largest roadless area left in the lower 48 states.

Most were charged with violating a closure of the timber sale areas or obstructing law officers through tactics such as chaining themselves to vehicles.

Woman gets out; boyfriend dies in crash

COEUR D'ALENE — Misty Nielsen decided to get out of a truck driven by her boyfriend when it lost its brakes on a trip down a mountainside on a trip to cut firewood.

Jimmy W. Richie tried to drive the truck and a rented trailer full of wood down a Forest Service road. He didn't make it. The truck crashed and overturned and Richie, 33, was fatally injured.

The accident happened Thursday afternoon about a half mile south of Interstate 90 near Fourth of July Pass.

Idaho State Police Sgt. Jay Jensen said when Nielsen, who is pregnant, found out the brakes weren't working, she got out and walked down the road.

"She got out. She didn't want to ride down the hill in a vehicle 'with no brakes,'" Jensen said.

Interim head named for Utah deaf, blind schools

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Wayne Glaus, a retired finance specialist with the state Office of Education, has been named interim superintendent of the Utah Schools for the Deaf and the Blind.

Glaus will serve on a part-time basis and is not a candidate for the permanent position, said Scott W. Bean, state superintendent of public instruction.

Bean appointed Glaus Thursday.

The institution is undergoing a state audit to determine how it ended the 1993 fiscal year with a $245,000 shortfall.

Kent Mohlman, state Office of Education performance auditor, does not expect to complete the audit until February.

Mohlman said he has not found any indication of misuse of funds.

There could be program cuts and layoffs of teachers, staff and classroom aides to make up the shortfall.

"It will break my heart if we have to do anything that takes away from the quality programs," said parent and Institutional Council member Helen Post. "But it will take some real bullet biting to do that and not affect them."

The Utah Schools for the Deaf and Blind serve some 900 children, from birth to age 21, at the main school in Ogden and at satellite schools in Logan, Salt Lake, Orem, Delta, Tooele, Vernal, Richfield and Blanding.

When the shortfall came to light in September, Superintendent David West called for the state audit.

Shortly after that, West submitted his resignation, saying he was leaving for health and other personal reasons. At that time his final day was to be Dec. 1. However, last week West said his resignation would be effective immediately.

Gem nuclear waste official resigns

BOISE (AP) — Chuck Lempsis, who has been chief of staff for the nuclear waste negotiator's office in Boise, resigned Friday to return to private law practice.

Lempsis served in the $115,300 per year position for the most of the time under former lieutenant governor David Leroy.

The office was created to look for a state of Indian tribe willing to become a nuclear waste repository. Although it has not succeeded, a federal audit released this week concluded the seven-employee agency is doing the job it was created to do.

World Killers sentenced to death

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A pro-apartheid politician and an immigrant gunman were sentenced to death Friday for assassinating ANC activist Chris Hani.

News that Clive Derby-Lewis and Janusz Walus had received the death penalty brought cheers from about 500 people waiting outside the courthouse. But Hani's widow, Limpho, was subdued.

"That sentence doesn't bring my husband back," she told reporters as she left the courthouse.

The killing of Hani, the Communist Party leader and a top ANC official, sparked widespread protest and increased racial tensions in South Africa. Next to ANC President Nelson Mandela, he was probably the most popular black leader in the country.

However, it will be up to the post-apartheid government, which is likely to be dominated by the African National Congress, to decide whether to implement the death sentence.

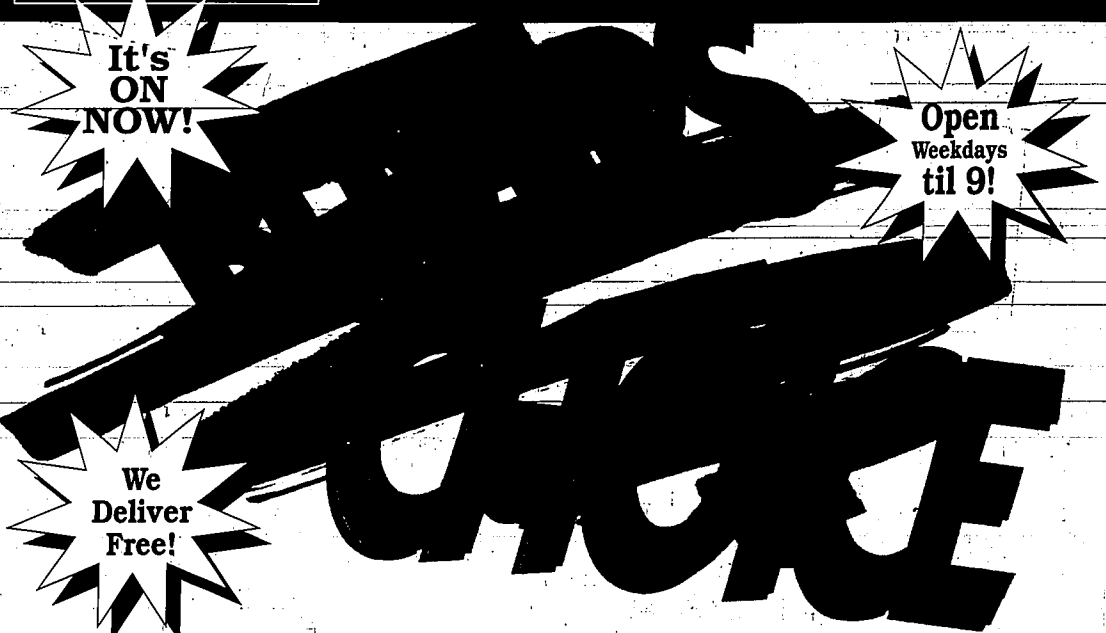

"Today, their very lives, whether they live or die, depends on us," Tokyo Sexwale, a prominent ANC leader, said of the condemned men. "How very nice that is."

The ANC opposes the death penalty, but many of its members have called for Hani's killers to be hanged. Protesters at the courthouse on Friday outlined noses with their fingers to show their support for the sentence.

Derby-Lewis, a top official of the pro-apartheid Conservative Party, and Polish immigrant Walus, described as violently anti-Communist, were convicted Thursday by Judge Frikkie Eloff in a non-jury trial. Neither showed any emotion Friday as Eloff announced the sentences.

France reassesses queen

PARIS (AP) — Two hundred years after losing her head for her lavishness, some French wonder whether Marie-Antoinette was that awful.

The queen's callous response to the news that the masses had no bread — "Let them eat cake!" — epitomized the aristocratic excesses that helped lead to the French Revolution.

But maybe she didn't say it after all, her defenders suggest. And maybe inventing the American Revolution did more to bankrupt France than her opulence, they say.

A recent poll indicates the French are split on whether Marie-Antoinette should have been guillotined. The 37-year-old queen was executed on Oct. 16, 1793, in the Place de la Concorde, for treason, meddling in government affairs and causing France's financial collapse.

Witnesses at her trial, armed mainly with vicious rumor, accused her of lavish feasts and orgies, wearing 160 dresses a year, incest with her son, lesbianism and sending a fortune to her brother, Austrian emperor Joseph II.

But the 200th anniversary of her execution is being marked by nostalgic royalists and a powerful play that draws on manuscripts and documents to reenact her trial. The audience votes on her fate.

The play, "My Name is Marie-Antoinette," premiered Oct. 1 and will run until February. So far, performances are nearly sold out.

Despite occasional calls of "Death to the queen!," most audiences clap for a monarch who, in retrospect, wasn't so bad after all.

Bosnian Serbs hold up relief

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The United Nations air-dropped aid to 150,000 Muslims trapped in a northern enclave of Bosnia and U.N. officials tried today to pry guarantees of safe passage for an overland convoy.

Some assurances were given, but U.N. officials remained skeptical that they would be able to deliver the desperately needed medical supplies and food to the towns of Maglaj and Tesanj. "Apparently, the new assurances from the Bosnian Serbs that we will be able to get those convoys in," said Ron Redmond, spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Buhl to join other cities in suit against state

BUHL - The City Council this week agreed to join the Association of Idaho Cities in a class-action suit against the Division of Environmental Quality, for imposing new water-quality fees.

The fees have increased the city's water budget by $6,400 per year, and the AIC believes the fee is a tax. The city will hold off paying the fees until the suit is settled.

The council also passed an ordinance that deals with weeds, rubbish and debris, applying to city residents and residents of the city's impact area.

Sneaky thieves swipe sneakers from Twin Falls shoe store

TWIN FALLS - Thieves in the Twin Falls area might be wearing new sneakers following a break-in Sunday night at Sneaker World, 108 Addison Ave. W.

Store owner Penny Bowles is not sure how many pairs were taken but estimated the number between 60 to 100. The sneakers cost an average of $47-$48 a pair, Bowles said.

The culprits oddly took a number of single shoes, she said.

Bowles hopes parents might take note if their kids have new sneakers but cannot satisfactorily explain where they got them.

Most of the shoes taken were British Knight and Adidas, she said.

Coming into work Monday morning, Bowles said she was knee deep in shoe boxes.

The thieves also broke into two neighboring businesses - Medical Mart and an ice cream store, Bowles said.

Join rose society today to rid rose garden of pesky weeds

Oregon Rep. Smith withdraws name from anti-range letter

TWIN FALLS - On Friday, Oregon Rep. Bob Smith withdrew from a letter criticizing Gov. Cecil Andrus' proposed Owyhee County bombing range.

The Oregon representatives on Thursday asked Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt to turn down a proposed swap of Idaho and federal land Andrus needs to create the range in the Owyhee desert in southwestern Idaho.

"This project is essentially an Idaho issue and I will defer to the wishes of the Idaho delegation to keep this process moving," Smith said Friday.

Smith said when he signed the letter, he was incorrectly led to believe the training range would cause an increase in low-level flights over southeastern Oregon.

"On the contrary, I now have been informed that there would be no additional impact in my congressional district if the proposal were approved," he said in a letter to Babbitt released Friday. "In fact, the noise decibel level in the area would actually decrease from historical levels under this proposal."

Idaho wants to swap land to create a state-owned range of about 20,000 acres it would lease to the Air Force. No swap can be decided on until after the Air Force releases an environmental study on the range, due in November.

Police nab 'slick' convict who fled Colorado

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Police officers stopped a man Thursday for having the wrong license plates on his truck.

After some checking, they found that he was supposed to be in prison in Colorado and was wanted in Oregon on fraud charges. He is also suspected of recently defrauding some local business people.

"He's bamboozled some people who are some of the big business people in town," said Det. Sgt. David H. Heidemann. "He's slick."

On Tuesday, Heidemann got two complaints from local residents who said they thought they were defrauded by a Johnny Leonard Palmer.

Undercover officers found the man driving his Ford Bronco, which had somebody else's license plates on it, Heidemann said.

Officers asked who he was and he said "Johnny Palmer" - believed to be a false name.

The man had drivers licenses from Washington, Oregon, and Colorado. He also had an Idaho drivers manual in the truck.

He had $702 in cash in his wallet along with two checks in The Club fitness center in Twin Falls, written for $400 and $1,000, according to the arrest report.

He was arrested on charges of obstructing the investigation of an officer, because police believe he gave them false statements.

Officers then checked his name and fingerprints with the FBI in Washington, D.C.

Friday afternoon the Twin Falls police word that they had 48-year-old James Leonard Palmer, who is wanted on fraud charges in Colorado and Oregon.

Palmer had been arrested and convicted of fraud in September 1988. He had defrauded various people in Eagle, Colo., from 1984 to 1987. The judge in that case ordered Palmer to pay $64,388 in restitution and sentenced him to 16 years in prison.

But before he was to go to prison in 1988, Palmer convinced the judge to let him get some medical attention and the judge agreed. Palmer then fled and has been running ever since, Heidemann said.

Police in Oregon suspect Palmer defrauded people in that state by claiming to represent a health club and taking money from them for club memberships, Heidemann said.

But Heidemann said his department is building a bigger case here.

Police suspect that Palmer initiated purchases of condominiums and houses in Twin Falls and accepted renters' security deposits on them before he actually owned the properties.

Palmer was arraigned Friday. And while the charge of obstructing an officer is a misdemeanor, Magistrate Judge R. Michael Redman set Palmer's bond at $30,000.

Palmer told the judge he was a college student trying to turn his life around. Palmer had a valid College of Southern Idaho identification card with him.

Heidemann said police in Eagle, Colo., will probably extradite Palmer to put him in prison in that state.

But local police are still building a case against him. So far they have seven local people who claim they were defrauded by Palmer, but Heidemann wouldn't say who they are.

"If there are more victims out there we'd sure appreciate a phone call here at the detective's division," he said.

This is the first such major fraud case in Twin Falls, Heidemann said.

Meanwhile, Ford Motor Co. is repossessing Palmer's Bronco. He apparently bought the truck on credit and hasn't paid for it.

Ed Board OKs 18 percent budget hike

Twin Falls' Eaton casts only 'no' vote

The Associated Press

MOSCOW - The state Board of Education voted Friday to endorse a public school coalition's bid to increase state funding by more than 18 percent next year, in part to keep up with an expected 5,500 new students but also to improve the quality of education.

Only board member Curtis Eaton, Twin Falls, dissented as the board approved the Public School Coalition's spending request for the 1994-95 school year. It calls for $623.5 million in general tax revenue for public schools, up $95.5 million from the current budget.

The measure will go to the Legislature in January, along with a separate recommendation from Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Andrus and state Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans created a working group to come up with a way that Idaho's public schools can meet the constitutional requirement for a "thorough" public education.

Evans told board members Friday the budget request was based on that panel's recommendations.

Highlights:

- The spending request assumes a student enrollment increase of 5,580 for the 1994-95 school year, even though the increase has been higher than that every year since 1990.

- It seeks $30 million for higher pay for educators. The coalition's report said Idaho teachers lag behind the regional average. The extra $30 million would make up half the gap.

- Another $20 million to update instructional materials and technology.

Bean prices still surging

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Dry edible bean prices have soared since mid-summer, sending farmers rushing to market with this year's crop.

Pinto bean prices paid to farmers have jumped $12 to reach $28 per 100-pound sack - a rise of 75 percent.

Much of the rise - 58 - came in the past month.

The price hike could pump millions of dollars into the Idaho farm economy, but farmers worked hard for it. They harvested 35,000 more acres of beans in 1993 than in 1992, while the average acre yielded 500 pounds less than last year, according to the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Idaho farmers produced 2.1 million sacks of dry edible beans this year, according to USDA estimates.

Some buyers are skeptical about the quality of the beans, after the beans struggled through a record-early summer, and harvest was interrupted by rain.

East of Twin Falls and around Jerome, some beans have had problems with wrinkling and poor color, said Manager Ken High of Kelly Bean in Filer.

But weather has been rough all over for bean farmers. In fact, weather is what has boosted prices - late-season frosts in the Midwest and West subtracted 290,000 sacks from the USDA's production forecasts between September and October.

Fewer beans means higher prices.

"This year's nationwide 23 million-sack harvest is about even with last year's 22 million-sack production. But both years came up far short of 1991's huge 33 million-sack production. Consecutive years of lower production have tightened supplies and helped feed the price surge."

Twin Falls woman back home after search by Jerome officials

By H.R. Weisel

Times-News correspondent

JEROME - The search for a missing Twin Falls woman ended happily when she was found along a road southeast of Jerome early Friday.

Brandt Sorenberger, 20, failed to return home as scheduled Thursday afternoon. She was reported missing by the Twin Falls police department and a plea for assistance in finding her was broadcast over the media.

"Late Thursday night, we received six or eight calls from motorists driving along Highway 93 that they had seen a woman near the highway, but when their car came close she would run off the road and duck down in the bushes," Jerome County Chief Deputy Bill Reid said.

The Jerome Sheriff Search and Rescue unit was dispatched in an attempt to locate the woman.

"We put about 13 men out with spotlights along every road in the area and some searched the fields," Bill Wilson, vice commander of the search and rescue team, said. "We found some tracks and one place in the bushes where it looked like she had laid down."

Deputy Lance VanderMeiden, assisting in the search, said in his report that a passing motorist told him that a white female, wearing a pink coat and dark colored pants, was walking north along Highway 93.

The motorist told me that she stopped to ask the pedestrian if she wanted a ride, at which time the pedestrian ran to the other side of the road, and hid in the field," VanderMeiden said.

When she turned around, the woman was nowhere to be seen, she told the deputy.

At about 1 a.m. Friday, VanderMeiden located Sorenberger standing at an intersection five miles east and one mile south of Jerome.

"She was doing real good, but it was starting to rain, so we were glad the deputy found her when he did," Wilson said.

Sorenberger was taken to her Twin Falls home by Jerome deputies. She could not be reached for comment.

Senate: Ask Indians about bomb range

By Julia Angwin
States News Service

WASHINGTON - The Senate urged the Air Force Friday to consult the neighboring Indian tribes when studying the effects of a proposed bombing range in Owyhee County.

At the prompting of Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., lawmakers included the recommendation within a bill providing $6.7 million to create a state-owned range, which would accommodate the Mountain Home Air Force Base.

"It is not law nor is it binding," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho. He described the amendment as "a reminder" to the Air Force to communicate with the Shoshone-Paiute tribes before increasing military flights over their reservation.

The tribes, whose reservation straddles the Idaho-Nevada border, say they already tolerate four to five sonic booms per day because they live under military airspace.

Reid's amendment asks the Air Force to seek comments from tribal representatives. This goes one step further than a provision he had previously inserted into the legislation requiring the Air Force to study the effects of the expansion on the Duck Valley Indian Reservation.

"I think this is the least we can do to provide these peace-loving people a chance to provide some input on what happens over their own land," Reid said on the Senate floor.

In addition, his amendment asks the Air Force to fly at least 15,000 feet above the inhabited areas of the reservation.

"Sen. Reid was asking for a level that was 14,000 feet above the level required for civilian flights," Craig said in an interview. "I think it's inappropriate for the Senate to micromanage."

But Craig said he didn't fight the amendment because the Air Force showed no opposition. The Reid proposal also got some support from other Idaho officials, including Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, and Gov. Cecil D. Andrus (D).

"There's no problem with this," agreed Kempthorne spokesman Mark Snider.

Added Scott Feynman, the governor's spokesman: "I don't think it's a real meaningful moment in the process of studying the range."

Standoff over grazing fee hike heats up

States News Service

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15 — Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., and Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt have a message for Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M.: If you filibuster the grazing fee compromise, you'll be sorry.

Reid and Babbitt said they attempt to bring a bill that includes an 85 percent increase in grazing fees will only lead the Clinton administration to implement even higher fees by executive order.

Domenici responded Friday that he will not be dissuaded by "sarcasm tactics." He vowed to fight on against what he called unreasonable hikes.

Domenici estimates the fee increase would cost the typical mid-sized New Mexico rancher, running 350 cattle on public lands for 11 months, an extra $600 a year.

The higher fee threatened by Babbitt would cost ranchers an extra $10,164 a year.

"They won't stop me from doing what is right for the ranchers and small townspeople of America's west," Domenici said. "I don't know of many ranchers who can afford to pay an extra $7,000 a year to the government and still maintain the viability of their ranches."

A Senate-House conference committee on Thursday passed a package proposed by Reid and Rep. George Miller, D-Calif. The package includes an 85 percent increase in grazing fees, less than what Babbitt had wanted to levy on ranchers who graze their cattle on public land.

Following passage of the plan Thursday, Domenici promised a fight on the Senate floor when the bill goes back to the House and Senate for approval next week.

The conference-approved plan would raise the grazing fee from $1.86 to $3.45 per animal per month over three years, with the rate set at $2.39 on Jan. 1. Babbitt had wanted to increase the fee to $4.28 over three years.

Babbitt, Reid and Miller held a press conference Friday to tell Domenici, other Senate Republicans and ranchers that if the $3.45 grazing fee is not passed, they will face Babbitt's proposed $4.28 grazing fee and additional rangeland regulations.

"If you want to win a filibuster, good luck," a defiant Reid said. "This fair compromise will go out the window and the bureaucrats (at the Interior Department) will take over."

In the Senate, Domenici is threatening to filibuster the bill and appears to have the necessary support—forty-one senators, including Idaho Republican Sens. Larry Craig and Dirk Kempthorne, have pledged to filibuster the interior spending bill until they receive some concessions.

A filibuster occurs when a senator does not yield the floor on an issue, speaking nonstop as time runs out for the bill's passage. To close debate and stop the filibuster, Democrats need the support of at least 60 of the 100 senators.

Under the compromise plan, the federal government will gain property rights to water and land improvements on federal lands, a switch from current practice that allows holders of grazing permits the rights to water and improvements.

Babbitt promised to implement his executive order privilege and go forward with rangeland reforms if the Reid compromise fails in the Senate.

"I can say with great confidence that the necessary support for the bill will be in place by the time the spring roundup is underway," Babbitt said. Domenici has said changes by executive order would at least allow for public hearings on the changes, which would not occur under the quick legislative action sought by Reid.

Reid and Domenici, now at odds, had previously stood together in opposition against rangeland reforms.

'War on West' will cost Dems votes, GOP says

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — National and state Republican leaders said Friday the Clinton administration's "war on the West" over grazing fees, mining and timber has imperiled GOP chances in next year's elections in Western states.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, speaking at a conference of GOP activists, said Republican candidates had "great opportunities" for victories in upcoming elections because of policies advocated by President Clinton.

"However, Dole warned that Republicans must do more than just oppose Clinton and his programs.

"If we want to be the majority party ... it's got to be because of a better reason than that we're not somebody else," Dole told the gathering of more than 300 party officials and candidates from a dozen Western states.

"It's not enough to say, 'We're different because we're not Democrats, we're not Bill Clinton.

"We've got to have programs. We've got to give people a reason to come to the Republican Party."

He and other party leaders counseled candidates to stress traditional GOP campaign themes: limiting the role of the federal government, cutting government spending and no tax-increases.

Speaking at an earlier session, former New Mexico Gov. Garrey Carruthers predicted that Clinton's environmental policies and energy tax proposals would hurt Western Democrats running for legislative, state and federal offices in 1994.

"I have never seen such an all-out assault on the Western United States by a single administration," said Carruthers.

"The Democrats are doing their dead level best ... to make sure we get back in power."

In brief remarks at the meeting, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., vowed to continue to fight a congressional grazing fee compromise despite threats by the administration to impose even higher fees if the House-Senate deal fails because of GOP and Western-led opposition.

"If this Secretary of Interior wants to declare war on the West and threaten people like me ... then I'll tell you Mr. Secretary, I'm ready for you war and you're going to lose," said Domenici, who has threatened a filibuster to block approval of the grazing fee increase.

Dole pledged his help in the fight.

"We're going to stand there and filibuster as long as we can because of this so-called war on the West waged by the Clinton administration. They've already started that war," said Dole.

Lack of sponsor threatens spelling bee

SPOKANE (AP) — A regional spelling bee in Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho is in jeopardy because one sponsor says it can no longer afford to back the event and the other says it can't handle the task alone.

Eastern Washington University withdrew its sponsorship when the university department in charge of the spelling bee was dissolved as part of a $3.6 million budget cut.

The Spokesman-Review is the other sponsor. Spokesman Shaun Higgins said the newspaper will look for other ways to support education if it can't find a co-sponsor for the spelling bee.

"We'd sponsor this thing, but we can't find a reliable, committed institution to administer it," Higgins said.

The bee, which costs $15,000 a year, has been a fixture for school children in Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho for more than 10 years. Last year, 80,000 students competed in school bees leading to the regional contest.

Utah marriage, divorce rates continue to top national average

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's divorce and marriage rates exceeded national averages in 1990, but only slightly, according to statisticians with the Utah Department of Health.

The numbers are the latest available and show a marriage rate of 11.2 per 1,000 population in Utah, with a total of 19,427 marriages that year. The national rate was 9.8 marriages per 1,000 population.

The Utah divorce rate was 5.2 per 1,000, or a total of 8,950 for the year. The U.S. rate was 4.7 per 1,000.

Marvin I. Levy, deputy director of the Division of Health Care Resources, said caution must be used in comparing one state's figures with another's with national statistics, since differences in marriage and divorce statutes can make them misleading.

For instance, Nevada has marriage rates that exceed 10 times those of other states and a divorce rate more than double the rest of the nation. But Levy said those figures are skewed because of the state's lenient residency requirements.

The health department looked at first and subsequent marriages by state and county, divorce rates, median age of brides and grooms and those who divorce, and education of those who marry.

Salt Lake County led the state in the number of marriages in 1990, with 53.5 per 1,000. Neighboring Millard County had the fewest, with 5.1 per 1,000. Salt Lake County saw 10,153 marriages, or 13.9 per 1,000.

Nevada ranked 8th in the number of marriages per capita in 1990, excluding Nevada.

The figures also show Utahns on average marry earlier than in other states. The median age of a groom in Utah for all marriages in 1990 was 25 and a bride, 23. For a first marriage, grooms averaged 23 years old and brides 21.

The most recent national statistics — for 1988 — showed the average age of a groom for all marriages was 28 and for a first marriage, 25. Brides averaged 26 for all marriages and 23.7 on their first trip to the altar.

Levy said one statistic that stood out shows a disproportionate number of divorces among people who married when they were teenagers.

In Utah in 1990, men marrying under age 20 averaged 8.2 percent of the total divorces and women, 22.9 percent.

Of the total divorces for the year, 12.8 percent of the men and 29.3 percent of the women married as teens.

Similar statistics, though not quite so dramatic, were reported elsewhere, although the last figures available were for 1988.

Pepper spray sends store employees to hospital

SPOKANE (AP) — Three supermarket employees who tried to run down suspected shoplifters Friday were treated at a hospital after the shoplifters sprayed them with pepper spray, a Spokane County sheriff's deputy said.

The three were sprayed as they confronted the four shoplifters outside the east Spokane store, Deputy Jeff Tower said. The shoplifters had taken cigarettes.

One of the four, a 16-year-old, was sent to a hospital after he was accidentally sprayed in the confrontation outside the store, Tower said.

The other three fled.

Pepper spray dispenses finely ground hot pepper in a mist.

It is widely used by police to temporarily incapacitate unruly people without the use of man-made chemicals.

Education

- $10 million to comply with state and federal mandates, such as meeting requirements of the Americans With Disabilities Act. It calls for improved access for handicapped people to public facilities.
- Nearly $4 million to carry out the public school portion of a four-year plan to improve public retirement benefits.
- Madison Junior High School teacher Lee Terry urged the board to put more money into textbooks and modern equipment.
- He said his students must use 1988 world geography texts which don't show the fall of the Berlin Wall or the dissolution of the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.
- Under the current book replacement schedule, he said, Madison students won't get new geography texts until 1998.
- Eaton questioned the extra $30 million to boost teacher salaries closer to the regional average. He said it was unclear whether they were out of line with other average salaries in Idaho, and he couldn't support an effort to move toward the average for only one group of state residents.
- "We want to be careful of adding an expense to our budget and our request to the Legislature that I can't personally defend," Eaton said.
- Evans agreed that other Idaho professionals probably fall behind salaries paid their peers in other states "but they are not as far down that ladder as teachers are."
- Board member Karl Shurtliff said he was concerned about the eventual cost of complying with all requirements of the Americans With Disabilities Act.

"I think frankly the ADA was one of the biggest mistakes we've gotten ourselves into in this country for a long time," he said. "Your dollars are not even the tip of the iceberg on what we're going to spend on this."

He said he would prefer a statewide request for ADA compliance to highlight the real cost.

Evans told board members the spending plan is a new approach — an attempt to focus legislative attention on what constitutes "thoroughness" and reform in one above-maintenance package.

He said the coalition's proposal carries a commitment to long-term school reform. The budget plan was prepared in part to help the state deal with a major lawsuit over school funding, he said.

"Since the school funding lawsuit remains a cloud hanging over all that we do, I believe this request is a good way to focus legislative attention on what constitutes 'thoroughness' for public schools and what resources are needed — at least in the short term — to bring that about," Evans said.

The coalition is made up of school trustees, administrators, teachers, parent-teacher organizations and the state Department of Education.

2 stabbed, 1 arrested in bar altercation

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — One man was arrested after two other men were stabbed outside the Riverside Inn at 1:45 a.m. Friday.

According to a police report, Blas Reyes Jr., 20, was arrested in a car by the railroad tracks outside of the bar. His shirt was torn and covered with mud, he had blood on his clothes and hands, and his right eye was swollen.

His bottom lip was swollen and he had a cut on his index finger.

Reyes is charged with aggravated assault, a felony, the report said.

Daniel Soliz, 24, was arrested and released from Cassia Memorial Hospital for a stab

Chavez told police that Reyes had been bothering him and his family all evening at the bar and at one point threatened him with a knife.

Police had responded to an earlier fight involving some of Reyes' family at the bar. The bouncer told everyone to leave early to prevent anymore trouble, the report said.

Witnesses and family members told police that Reyes was waiting outside and fought and stabbed Chavez and Soliz when they came out separately.

Chavez told police he tried to defend himself but felt himself get cut, the report said.

Lawsuit may block Cassia County from spending tax money on hospital

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A civil suit may block Cassia County commissioners from spending local tax dollars on a new hospital.

Donald Chisholm, attorney for the plaintiffs, said that Intermountain Health Care, Hospitals, a large Utah-based non-profit corporation, needs no financial help from the county or taxpayers to operate a hospital in Cassia County.

If successful, the civil suit will prevent the commissioners from giving county money to the project and will get facts of the county's involvement in the hospital funding on the table.

Because of problems with the existing Cassia Memorial Hospital, officials decided a new building would be more cost effective. IHC already has invested $15.5 million in the project, and construction on the new hospital at 16th Street and Hilland Avenue is under way.

Cassia County prosecuting attorney Steven Bywater, representing the commissioners, said he represents the innkeepers of plaintiffs Chisholm and Truman Bradley, a former Burley city councilman.

Chisholm claims that commissioners "conspired among themselves to keep the public from knowing the source of funds" and says he was stonewalled at a Sept. 7 budget hearing.

Taxpayers are getting a bad deal with the company, in part because the commissioners are "in love with" the idea of a new hospital in town, Bradley said.

The county should float a bond issue to let taxpayers vote on whether they want to spend money, which is the way the old Cassia Memorial Hospital was built, Bradley said.

Over the past several years the commissioners have twice appropriated $100,000 as county contributions to a hospital plant fund — made up mostly of IHC Hospitals' revenues to repair and remodel the old Cassia Memorial Hospital, which the company runs.

In the recent 1994 budget, however, that amount climbed to $850,000.

"We don't want the county to get into it without the consent of the taxpayer," Bradley said. "IHC Hospitals has said they are going to build it at no extra cost to the taxpayers. How did the taxpayers get so involved?"

Bywater said the county is asking taxpayers for $160,000 of that budget increase. The other $690,000 comes from a complex real estate deal with IHC.

IHC bought land for the new hospital with money from the hospital plant fund, but the title to the land was in the county's name to give it a say in health care decisions. The county was then to lease the land back to IHC.

But state law allows a county to lease land for only 20 years, and IHC wanted it for 30 years. The county then sold the land to IHC, for $689,750. Now that the company has paid twice, the county agreed to return IHC's money in the next budget year.

Of the $160,000, about $100,000 will pay for new hospital equipment. The other $60,000 will go towards improvements such as burying an irrigation ditch and widening streets around the new location. Bywater said about $20,000 will be paid back by IHC over the next six years.

Deputy Attorney General Frank Walker sided with the county, saying that the county can spend the taxpayer's money if a new hospital is needed and if the company won't move in without striking a deal.

Bywater said IHC "the investment is so marginal" that the company would build a new hospital only if the county assured that it would:

- Continue to buy $100,000 in new equipment each year.
- Continue to lease old equipment to IHC for $1 each year.
- Not object to IHC using the Hospital Plant Fund for the new hospital.

"Rural hospitals and of themselves are a bad investment. They're dying all over the vine," Bywater said. "And given the national health care climate right now, it's real risky."

Judge throws out jurors in Burley rape case

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Displeased with their attitude, 5th District Judge Roger Burdick this week dismissed prospective jurors for an upcoming rape trial.

"Quite frankly, I have not been impressed with this jury panel's commitment to its duty of citizenship," he said, according to the court records.

Many of the prospective jurors tried to avoid jury duty with menial excuses, Burdick said.

"I don't think that this jury panel understands the importance of its business here, from prospective jurors had sat on folding chairs for two and a half days of jury selection.

Thursday afternoon, one of the defendants, Roy Garcia, pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of battery with intent to commit a serious felony, to wit, robbery, said Mark Ingram, Garcia's attorney.

Garcia's absence from the court leaves Gilbert Chapa as the sole defendant accused of raping a woman last fall and leaving her in a potato field.

The woman, who thought the men were taking her home from a bar, suffered bruises, had part of her hair torn out, had a filling loosened, and required five stitches on her nose, court documents said.

Garcia's absence would leave jurors guessing, which might be prejudicial to the jury, Burdick said. Chapa also was seen conversing with one or more prospective jurors after Garcia's guilty plea, Burdick said. And these also were reasons to dismiss the jury, he said.

The trial has been rescheduled for Nov. 30.

Kootenai County group wants to stop development until use plan updated

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A group of Kootenai County residents wants the county commission to halt development until the county's 15-year-old land use plan is revised.

Commissioners say they'll think about it.

Kootenai is one of Idaho's fastest-growing areas. A delegation told Thursday's county commission session that rapid growth is an emergency that requires immediate attention.

The group included activist Deb Hamm, Coeur d'Alene attorney Scott Reed and state Sen. Barbara Chamberlain, D-Post Falls.

They said until the current land-use plan is revised to address the rapid development, commissioners should stop approving new subdivisions. Then proponents associated with growth, crowded schools, increased traffic and overburdened sewer systems, won't get worse.

"This is really a plea for help from your citizens," Hamm said.

Hamm has already told its planning department to start accepting proposals for changes to the plan, to accommodate developments that have been on hold while revisions are debated. Group members said they didn't think that was the answer.

The group submitted a resolution calling for the Planning and Zoning Commission to make a recommendation on an updated plan by Nov. 15 and the commission to adopt a new land-use plan by Jan. 15. If either deadline is missed, the resolution calls for a 120-day moratorium on development.

"This says we're going to stop things until such time as we get the plan done," Reed said. "Doing nothing isn't an option. That's the worst of all worlds."

Planning commissioners met Thursday night to debate the document from the planners.

They are expected to make a recommendation by the end of this month or next month.

Commissioner Mike Anderson said he didn't want to rush the planning commission, but he's getting frustrated waiting for a recommendation from the planners.

"If you think you're frustrated, think about the citizens that have been working on this thing for two years, along with the planning staff," Hamm said.

Businessman: Growth is good

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — There's a rising tide of anti-growth sentiment in northern Idaho and area businessmen have been "fat and lazy" snatching it, says developer Duane Hagadone.

"We have a larger non-growth or environmental element in our community than many of you realize," Hagadone told the Coeur d'Alene Board of Realtors and a northern Idaho business leader.

Hagadone said despite rapid growth in Kootenai County, new jobs so far have only replaced those lost during the mid 1980s. The current surge in housing mirrors an early 1980s boom that quickly faded.

"Our employment base in this county is not much stronger than it was five years ago in terms of manufacturing jobs," he said. "Our jobs are providing $2,000 less per year per job than they were 10 years ago."

He said the home building industry in Kootenai County is the driving force locally, accounting for 5,500 jobs. But without a job base to support the county construction frenzy, an economic dip is likely.

New program teaches children to be polite

By Eric Goodell
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — To Pershing Elementary principal Goldie McClure, a program instituted by the school this week was a reminder that good things come from being polite.

Pershing's "Kid's Care" program at the Rupert Civic Gym this week gave third grade students a chance to learn ideals that sometimes even adults have trouble with.

"It was a day to remind us to be polite," McClure explained.

Learning to compliment others, as well as learning how to receive a compliment, how to deal with people who are putting you down, and feeling good about yourself all were on the intensive one-day agenda.

A different group of third graders attended each day of the three-day Kid's Care program.

Students learned how to cope with people who love to "pick people apart," McClure said. The principal nicknamed these people "vultures."

The children received worksheets to help remind them what they can do or say to deter these vultures.

For example, if the vulture says, "Hey, four eyes," the student who wears glasses can always reply smartly: "All the better to see you," and then walk away.

The students are told not to use jokes or comebacks when adults put them down, but instead to tell them how they feel when being insulted.

McClure said she sees a need for children to realize they are important. Students also have the obligation to respect others, she said.

Nataly Rodriguez, who participated in the program on Thursday, said she enjoyed the lessons.

As she chomped on a sandwich during lunch break, she said she learned there are things that are best left unsaid.

Kids Care was administered by the Chapter One program. McClure said several adults volunteered to help ensure the program was a success.

McClure said some of these adults commented to her that they were helped by the lessons as well.

Compromise ends Utah headstone battle

CLINTON, Utah (AP) — A woman's 2-year battle to keep a raised headstone over her daughter's grave has come to an end, thanks to a compromise settlement with the Clinton City Council.

Olive Christensen said she is happy with the agreement, which will leave the headstone of Barbara Ann Christensen Shepard to remain in place at the city cemetery.

"I just want her laid to rest where she belongs — that's all I ever wanted," she said.

The headstone is the only raised one in a 2-acre section of the cemetery, and city officials were trying to get it replaced with one that would be even with the ground.

Christensen's daughter died in 1987 in an out-of-state car accident at the age of 31, and she was buried at the city cemetery.

The problems began soon thereafter, Christensen said.

She had purchased three other cemetery plots for her family next to her daughter. But due to an administrative mix-up, other people were buried in a couple of the plots.

In 1988, the city gave her four new plots in a new section of the cemetery. Barbara Ann's remains also were moved there, and two years later, Christensen replaced the grave's flat headstone with a raised one.

However, Christensen was soon contacted by city officials and told that for maintenance reasons, only flat headstones were allowed in the new section.

Christensen refused to replace it, even when the city offered to pay.

A year ago, the city filed suit in 2nd Circuit Court to compel Christensen to replace the headstone.

She countersued, arguing the city hadn't enacted an ordinance on headstones until two years after her daughter's was erected.

Under the settlement, the city doesn't admit any wrongdoing, and no other raised headstones will be allowed in that portion of the cemetery — including at the other plots Christensen owns.

In addition, both parties agreed to drop their suits.

Custer County authorities looking for outside help in search

CHALLIS (AP) — Custer County authorities are looking for some outside help in the search for a 9-year-old Challis girl who has been missing since Monday.

Sheriff Al Finley issued an appeal at a news conference Friday for anyone who was in the central Idaho mountain area earlier this week to telephone the sheriff's office if they saw anything unusual.

Stephanie Crane hasn't been seen since Monday evening at Challis.

Despite a massive search that involved up to 1,000 people not a single lead has been developed. Authorities are treating it as a likely abduction.

Finley said he hoped somebody who was in the area noticed something that would help find Stephanie.

With the opening of deer season, hunters were in the area, he said.

"Let us check it out," he said.

"Anyone who was in the area Monday, give us a call."

About 50 people continued looking Friday, although with diminishing hope.

"Basically, they are doing a few remote areas, but mostly it is areas they have already gone over once and they are rechecking," said Melanie Hawkins, a spokeswoman for the sheriff's office.

The search will continue despite the lack of progress. "It will continue as long as they feel there is a need for it," she said.

"It will continue as long as they feel there is some place to search."

Association for Battered Clergy exists

Things have gotten so miserable for clergy these days that a Lutheran pastor in Georgia has started an organization called the Association for Battered Clergy.

This is no joke. The Rev. Ronald Weinel of Rincon, Ga., thinks that 30 to 50 percent of clergy are in conflict with parishioners at any given moment. If that's true, Weinel ought to have plenty of potential members for his new organization.

Weinel sees the battering coming from three directions. First, from parishioners - he calls them parish antagonists - who love nothing more than a good scrap.

Clark Morpew
Faith today

The second culprit, he says, are bishops and their staff members, who are addicted to power and see their job as tightly controlling clergy, and their upward mobility.

The third group of batterers are the clergy, who often berate themselves for failing to do their jobs well enough to please every parishioner.

Weinel, 60, a chemical dependency counselor and a parish pastor, has spent 35 years in ministry, but after his last parish erupted in a nasty fight, he no longer feels safe.

"Some pastors are driven by guilt and an obsessive need to please," Weinel says. "That's how I got into this business. I came out of a dysfunctional family, and I've spent a good part of my life trying to please people."

Weinel says he started his organization because he believes conflicts between pastors and their parishioners have become epidemic.

"There have always been congregations that tended to have a lot of conflicts," Weinel says. "But I would say in the past 10 years, our denomination (the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America) has been overwhelmed with conflicts."

These conflicts, he says, often involve trivial matters that are difficult to define, but the parish antagonists drive the conflict until they win and the pastor either quits or gets fired.

The parish antagonist has a sick need to attack and destroy authority," Weinel says. "It's an irrational attack, so any complaint will suffice. It could be anything: You don't visit enough, your sermons are bad, you don't care about the youth...."

Weinel's case, one woman began complaining about him and the church council, saying they were not sensitive to the needs of the people. There was never a face-to-face confrontation, but Weinel heard the gossip and rumors circulating through the congregation.

Eventually, the tension in the congregation became apparent, and then attendance and giving dropped off. When Weinel was away at a synod meeting, the church council got together and cut his salary by 12 percent, claiming that's when he knew he was on the way out.

That's one of the problems with congregational conflicts - all the fingers are pointing at the pastor. While the problem was actually created by the parish antagonist, the pastor becomes the scapegoat, and the blame is heaped on the man or woman in the pulpit.

The pastor, of course, crawls away from such fights bloodied and battered and probably heads for the bishop's office hoping to find another job. But jobs are not always available, and many a pastor has waited months - sometimes years - for another church.

There is some suspicion among those battered clergy that bishops and church leaders actually want these angry and hurt pastors to sit out for awhile - either as punishment or to give them time to heal.

"I don't believe that's true. But one can understand how battered clergy might come to believe they're still being punished. A little paranoia never hurt anybody."

Rather, I think, congregations that are looking for a new pastor tend to steer clear of battered clergy. People pretty much want their clergy to be without blot or stain.

The Rev. John Ackerman, a Presbyterian clergyman who runs support groups for clergy in Minneapolis, says attitude can help a pastor sink or swim.

"Those clergy who come from dysfunctional families start getting nervous if somebody looks cross at them," Ackerman says. "So it's important to know something about dysfunctional families. And it's crucial to get support and not overreact to criticism."

His advice: "If you can reframe the criticism and say, 'Oh, I've got another learning experience here, then you can control it. The trick is to not react defensively. Most of the people just want to be noticed, want to be loved."

Clark Morpew is an ordained clergyman and a writer for The St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press.

We need to belong to communities; God fills that need

Recently, we gathered to say goodbye to a longtime member of our congregation. It's not easy to officiate at such memorials. A part of me wanted to be with those in the pews, remembering and celebrating and mourning. I had come to care for the woman as did they. She left an empty place at the table, an empty space in the circle. We gathered as much to hold each other up as to remember her life. Faith comforts and reassures us most when communicated through the touch of a human hand.

On a more joyous occasion, a young couple came with all of their friends and family to be joined in marriage. You could feel the excitement in the air. In-laws to be were getting acquainted. Decorating began, children explored the sanctuary, jokes were told; family stories related. Soon the guests arrived. The excitement began to build. The groom paced the empty aisle. The bride and bridesmaids hurriedly finished their preparations downstairs.

John Kerr
Clergy's corner

Music signaled the start of the service. Soon, the couple were facing each other to say their vows. Love, hope, anticipation had all come to a peak. In the congregation, hands touched hands and remembered. It was a moment that blessed all who were a part of it.

One of our deepest needs is to be with others, to belong to a community. It is fashionable in our culture to celebrate the rugged individualist, but we are created to be together. At the core of our being is a need to share our experiences and, ultimately, ourselves. We give strength to one another in sorrow and multiply our joys. God calls us into community part to meet this need. Even when the Bible uses the word high hospital corpsman, a pharmacy technician and veteran's benefits administrator for the Veterans Administration. He previously served churches in California as a layman. He and his wife, Leslie, have two sons, Richard, 19, and Michael, 13. Leslie Kerr works for Chemical Supply Co. in Twin Falls.

"you," it almost always means "you all." It is God's intent to bind us to one another in love and caring and commitment.

"I have discovered that when God seems absent, it is because I have become isolated from other people. God isn't really absent, of course. I am absent - from relationships with others, from my own sense of who God created me to be and from God. It is in these times that I need to get back in touch.

God has given me a faith community where that can happen. It is one of God's greatest blessings. Would you care to share it with me?

Rebellious sister turns Christian music singer

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Singer Susie McEntire Luchsinger sometimes performs in her famous sister's shadow, but she's always focused on the light.

Reba McEntire's sister "saw the light" in 1984. That's when her life was turned upside down.

"It was the low point in my marriage (to professional rodeo steer wrestler Paul Luchsinger)," said Susie Luchsinger in a phone interview earlier this month. "We went to church, and the Lord spoke to us and impressed upon me to sing for him and for us to go together as a family."

And that's exactly what the Luchsingers did.

Shuttling among concerts, rodeos and churches, Luchsinger sings her "country Christian music," and her husband gives his Christian testimony. The children, 10-year-old E. P., 7-year-old Luchesse and 4-year-old Samuel, frequently join their parents on stage.

It all began in Oklahoma, where Susie Luchsinger was raised. The youngest of four children, she grew up in a family of music-lovers. Her father was also a champion steer roper.

After her graduation from Oklahoma State University, Luchsinger toured with sister Reba, who was, by that time, a country music superstar. The two did guest spots on the "Tonight Show," "Haw" and "The Grand Ole Opry."

But, to borrow a phrase from a popular hymn, all was not well with Luchsinger's soul.

"I used to go to church with my grandmas when I was little, and I was saved at a Baptist church revival when I was 13," Luchsinger said, "but I rebelled against God and went my own way."

On the long road back, Luchsinger developed a new love of old hymns, like "Amazing Grace," which she, now includes in her concerts.

Luchsinger to perform free concert in Rupert

Susie McEntire Luchsinger will perform a free concert at 7 p.m. Friday at the Rupert Christian Church, 1110 Eighth St., and another at 7 p.m. Oct. 23 at the Twin Falls Heritage Alliance Church, 401 Sixth Ave. West.

She will also be available to meet the public between 1 and 3 p.m. Oct. 23 at D & B Supply, on behalf of Roper's, in Twin Falls.

Luchsinger's new album, "Real Love," will be available for purchase at her appearances.

Luchsinger performs with tapes because she can't get around a band. The Christian music field is not as lucrative as rock, pop or country western.

"You don't get rich singing in churches, but we don't lack for anything," Luchsinger said. "The Lord always meets our needs, and we've never gone without a meal."

Luchsinger, now 35, recently appeared on "Nashville Now," CBN's "700 Club," "Miracles Now" with Orin Roberts and The Trinity Broadcasting Network. She also won the 1992 Country Gospel Artist of the Year award from Gospel Voice magazine, a Music City News publication. And she's just finished a stint with Bill Gatcher's Praise Gathering.

Even so, Luchsinger is constantly being likened to her sister, especially since the two are award-winning vocalists. They have the same Oklahoma twang, too.

"People do compare me to Reba," Luchsinger said, "but I'm not against that. The two don't perform together any more ("we're both too busy"), though they do manage to meet for Thanksgiving."

In Atoka, Okla., the Luchsinger family owns a small ranch.

Susie McEntire Luchsinger says she "saw the light" in 1984 during a low point in her marriage and began to perform country music.

"We have enough acreage for seven horses, four cows, eight calves, two steers, three dogs and a cat," Luchsinger said.

The Luchsingers attend the same Full Gospel church in Atoka where they made their commitment to go on the road for the Lord.

"I know that if we keep our children close to us and believe in the Lord and trust in him, he will see us through," Luchsinger said. "The main problem in America is we are too busy, and we neglect our children."

She went on to talk about how she can't stand to see kids going home after school with no one to give them a snack or help them with their homework.

"We need to slow down and put our priorities where they ought to be," she said.

So far, Luchsinger has been able to work out her family's travel arrangements with her children's Christian school. She has a woman who helps home-school the kids when necessary.

Later this month, the Luchsinger family will show the Magic Valley how it fits together.

It fits together with purpose.

Ok, as Luchsinger puts it, "I want to bring people into the manifest presence of God through my music."

ABC News may hire religion correspondent for major shows

The Washington Post

ABC News is "actively pursuing" the hiring of a religion correspondent for its major news programs, including "World News Tonight."

When news division chiefs met with affiliates in Miami during the last week of September, the decision, part of an announced strategy to make coverage "more inclusive," rated a standing ovation from the station executives.

Anchor Peter Jennings and other news managers want better clarification of just how religious and political issues intersect. And they weren't happy about the lack of historical information regarding the Branch Davidian cult before the tragedy in Waco unfolded earlier this year.

Meanwhile, a couple of print interviews with Jennings and "World News Tonight" executive producer Emily Rooney have worried some ABC correspondents, particularly contributors to the WNT feature, "American Agenda."

Rooney has invited at least two "Agenda" contributors from the Washington bureau to attend a staff meeting in New York - where it's expected they'll be reassured that ABC News is not headed for a date with the Far Right wing.

Jennings told the conservative TV Guide that "Agenda" has "revolved around a liberal axis" because "a lot of the activism in terms of the social issues we deal with - education, drugs, the family, health, welfare and the environment - has tended to emanate from liberal circles."

"But now," the Guide article said, Jennings "wants to pay more attention to what conservatives are saying," claiming that their ideas are "more provocative and less predictable on some issues."

In the same article, bearing the headline "Right-Wing Views to Get More Airtime: Peter Jennings," Rooney said, "Most people in the (news) business have a more liberal vision, and we're just trying to tap into the rest of the world."

Archbishop of Canterbury to call followers back to church's roots

By Steve Raby
Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - When Pope John Paul II visited Colorado in August, the leader of the world's nearly 1 billion Catholics called young people back to a deeper involvement with the church.

When the Archbishop of Canterbury visits Colorado Springs later this month, the leader of the world's nearly 70 million Anglicans will be calling American Anglicans back to the church's historic roots.

In Great Britain, the church is called the Church of England, and its members are called Anglicans. In the United States, it is called the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America, and its members are called Episcopalians. Internationally, it is called the Anglican Communion, and its members are called Anglicans.

The visit by George Carey, his second official visit to the United States since he was named the 103rd Archbishop of Canterbury in 1991, is part of a conference sponsored by the Anglican Institute, which moved from St. Louis to Colorado Springs in 1992. The church in the United States is divided by controversy over social and theological issues, including the ordination of homosexuals, and the ordination of women. Universally, the church officially bans the ordination of homosexuals, but hasn't disciplined bishops who have ordained homosexuals, and allows ordained homosexuals to serve as priests. The church ordains women in the United States, Canada and Ireland, but not in Great Britain.

The church in the United States also is shrinking. The September issue of The Colorado Episcopalian newspaper said the church was suffering from an "alarming decline in church membership." Today there are less than 2.5 million Episcopalians in the United States; there were more than 3.6 million in 1965.

The Rev. Don Armstrong, executive director of the Anglican Institute and rector of Grace Episcopal Church, says the institute's mission is to revitalize the church by returning it to its roots.

"The Episcopal church is dying, and the reason it's dying is because the clergy are running around, scared to death rather than leading," he says. "Rather than presenting their congregations with a vision, they're trying to find out what everyone wants. ... The church has lost a historical sense of its identity."

Armstrong is attached to his church's 400-year-old traditions, but also has latched onto some modern conveniences. He writes his sermons on a Macintosh Powerbook laptop computer. And the self-abuses his office CD player features releases by Enya, Mozart, Stan Getz and the Grateful Dead.

Similarly, he deftly deals with both the liberal and the conservative wings in the church.

"The conservatives would want us to condemn particular sins very ferociously. And what the liberals would want us to do is bless certain behaviors as if to say they were not sins," he says. "The problem for me is that God has set up the created order of things, and it's not up to me to question his evaluation of what's good and what's evil."

Mormon hierarchy tries to quell dissent

By Vern Anderson
The Associated Press

church officers average 74 years of age.

SALT LAKE CITY — In one of the bursts of prophetic fervor for which Joseph Smith was known, the six who were disciplined as Mormonism's founder warned that in their 40s and possess "a 1960s mentality that believes in free inquiry," and demand civil rights and human rights and progress.

'They want the saints to believe they are mild-mannered men that wouldn't harm a fly. But the fact of the matter is, they're not like that. They go after people.'

— Excommunicated Salt Lake City lawyer Paul Toscano

Smith's eloquent scriptural treasure, written in 1839 in a Missouri jail, resounds in the modern church as its hierarchy moves to quell dissent from a festamental obedience at the expense of the world's 8.5 million Mormons.

In the weeks since the high-profile scholars and feminists were excommunicated, Smith's words have been cited by the dissidents and churchmen alike, but in vastly different contexts.

For example, at a semiannual general conference two weeks ago, Apostle James E. Faust quoted Smith in cautioning the men of the church against trying to use their priesthood authority to speak at all males 12 and over—unrighteously in the home.

The dissidents, however, say authoritarian leaders are abusing their ecclesiastical authority by demanding an either-or Old Testament obedience at the expense of the New Testament gospel of love and forgiveness.

"They want the saints to believe they are mild-mannered men that wouldn't harm a fly. But the fact of the matter is, they're not like that. They go after people," said Paul Toscano, a Salt Lake lawyer who was excommunicated Sept. 19, in part for criticizing church leaders.

In a tenet of Mormon theology that the church is guided by revelation from God to the faith's prophets, public criticism of church leaders is perceived by most Mormons to be a failure to sustain the leadership and a sure sign of apostasy. It is that principle that is cited by local church leaders in the disciplinary proceedings.

Moreover, there is ample precedent for the current crackdown. Smith himself disciplined 13 of the 24 apostles who served under him. Much of that reflected disagreement with his advocacy of polygamy, a doctrine the church abandoned in 1890.

But according to several historians, only in recent decades of the faith's 163-year history have conformity and orthodoxy been so strongly emphasized. The concept of a loyal opposition, alive in the 19th century, has died a slow death in the 20th.

Opinions vary as to why. Allen Roberts, editor of Dialogue, an independent journal of Mormon thought, believes many of the differences between the hierarchy and today's dissidents are generational.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has never had a president born in the 20th century. Presidents serve for life and the current prophet, Ezra Taft Benson, is an enfeebled 94. Owing to a tradition of apostolic succession, the top 15 established the church — and its enormously successful missionary program — to pave the way for an apostle to return.

"So you have this sense among the rank and file, and it may be true of the leadership too, that there is to be a division and the sheep are going to be separated from the goats," said Toscano, who was excommunicated Sept. 26.

Most of the disciplined and many of their supporters believe the crackdown was orchestrated by Elder Boyd K. Packer, 69, acting head of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles that advises the three-member First Presidency.

Apostle Dallin H. Oaks has denied the actions constitute a "purge" or were coordinated by the hierarchy. However, a committee keeps files on the public utterances and writings of many intellectuals and forwards the material to their local bishops and stake presidents.

"It is a way of keeping busy bishops informed," Oaks said. "But it is up to the bishop to handle it."

At least that is the way Oaks, a former Utah Supreme Court justice and the church's expert on disciplinary procedures, describes the written procedure. But Packer acknowledged last week he had met with Toscano's stake president before the local leader decided on excommunication.

And this week, Oaks admitted falsely telling a newspaper reporter that he had no knowledge of Packer's role in Toscano's case.

The admission came after Pulitzer Prize-winning political cartoonist Steve Benson, the church president's grandson, said his recent decision to leave the church was partly based on discrepancies between Oaks' public statements and his private comments to Benson about Toscano's case.

Toscano believes Packer, who declined an interview request, is taking advantage of the leadership void created by Ezra Taft Benson's incapacity. Packer has identified the differences between the hierarchy and today's dissidents as the three greatest "dangers" to the church.

"I don't see any good signs right now. I don't see a Mormon Gorbachev," said Roberts, who says that with the fall of communism, "the Mormon system may now be the most totalitarian, most authoritarian large institution left."

Cardinal boycotts Madonna show

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Puerto Rico's top Catholic official is saying a prayer that Madonna doesn't perform here later this month.

He's also pressing parishioners to prove that Pepsi, one of the concert sponsors, is not the right one, baby.

Cardinal Luis Aponte Martinez joined a boycott of Madonna's Oct. 26 concert and of Pepsi. The boycott was called by the United Front for Media Improvement, a local citizen's group. The concert is part of the singer's worldwide Girlie Show tour.

"Madonna is an anti-value for the Puerto Rican people, the church and our youth," Aponte Martinez said, calling for the show's cancellation and for Catholics to stop buying Pepsi products unless it withdraws sponsorship.

Cardinal Aponte threatened to cancel church contracts with Pepsi, mainly concessions in parochial schools, unless the company ends its financial commitments to the event.

Pepsi officials have a "firm commitment" to the sold-out concert, concert promoter Larry Stein said. About 26,000 fans are expected to attend, with ticket prices ranging from $40 to $125.

Evangelists to deliver movie 'Jesus'

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Saying the word of God isn't reaching the public, a group of evangelists is hoping to give a copy of the movie 'Jesus' to every household in the area.

"This is analogous to a Billy Graham crusade," said Kenneth E. Burch, a consultant to Campus

Crusade for Christ, which produced the video and promotes the distribution. "We're not having people come to a stadium. We're taking Jesus and the video to their own homes so they can watch it in their dens."

"In the schools, the Ten Commandments, Bible and prayer have been outlawed. The problem we're seeing in society today is no one has a basis for right and wrong," he said.

The movie, shot on location in Israel in 1979, is based on the Gospel of Luke. Campus Crusade edited the original two-hour film to 84 minutes.

Church volunteers will go from home to home distributing Christian pamphlets as well as videos. Similar distribution programs are going on in Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Burch said.

Manager helps Phillies get down, dirty

Visitors' clubhouse manager prepares for Philadelphia's arrival, stocks up on favorites

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Ian Duff is ready to face the Philadelphia Phillies.

"Duff does not [in] pitch or throw. Still, he might have the toughest job while the Phillies are in town for the World Series.

He's the manager of the visitors' clubhouse at SkyDome.

"From what I've seen on television, they definitely get down and dirty," Duff said Friday, a day before Game 1. "I've been in touch with their equipment manager, finding out about what they like."

"As in, the kind of chewing tobacco and cigarettes and other messy stuff that Lenny Dykstra and the rest like to spit?"

"Well, the league doesn't like us to talk about those things," he said. "But yeah."

The locker room, training room and washing machines were neat and clean around noon, ready for the Phillies' arrival a few hours later. How long it will stay that way, no one is certain.

"I've known a bunch of their guys from when

Game Time

Game 1 of the World Series airs at 6 p.m. on TBS/MTV Channel 12.

they've been in here before. Pete Incaviglia, Mitch Williams and John Kruk," Duff said.

"They like to have a good time. They can do whatever they want. The only trashing I hope they don't do is pouring champagne over the clubhouse next week."

The Phillies begin trying to win the championship Saturday night when Curt Schilling pitches against Juan Guzman of the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I can tell you this, we are pretty much about the same," Guzman said. "The only difference is that they look so wild, the long hair, the big guys. They look like truck drivers."

"We do," Schilling said.

The champion Blue Jays, meanwhile, might be found riding in the backs of limousines.

"I would classify us as genteel," Toronto's Paul Molitor said. "We have fun, but we go in our own way. I guess you could classify our approach as business-like."

More World Series — B8

"I know a lot has been made about their characteristics, but when you get down to it, the only thing that matters is how you perform between the lines. Let me say this, though: They're great for baseball."

For fans, and for the opposing players.

"I want to see them," said Toronto's John Olerud, perhaps the most mild-mannered man in the majors. "They look like a roughhouse gang, like they're having a lot of fun."

"You definitely play with a lot of characters as you're growing up playing ball but, no, I don't know of any team with so many players like that."

But, don't confuse personalities with production, Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said.

"They have been characterized as the beasts of the fast, they have been characterized as a bunch of nuts, they have been characterized, many ways this season," Fregosi said before Friday's workout. "I call them a group of diversified personalities.

"If that's being crazy, I like it that way."

Besides, manager Cito Gaston cautioned, his band of steady Blue Jays can play, too.

"Just because our guys are clean-shaven, don't take that as weakness. They're tough guys," Gaston said. "They just might get a haircut more often than the players on Philly."

They sure don't spit or rip their uniforms like the Phillies.

"To see they look like they have a bunch of guys who love the game, want to go out there and get dirty, have fun, beat up on the baseball," Toronto's Rickey Henderson, wearing a headband with "No Fear" written across the front.

"I think when we were in little league or street ball, we used to look the same way," he said. "And we used to go out there and dominate the ball."

Both teams won their playoffs in six games, and came into the World Series rested and relaxed. Schilling pitched twice against Atlanta and was the MVP of the series. Guzman was 2-0 against Chicago.

Bruins beat back Braves, 36-13

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It just could be these Twin Falls Bruins have decided to be for real.

For the second straight week, the Bruins came up with a consistent, potent and defensively sharp team effort to beat the young Boise Braves 36-13 Friday night.

The victory raises the Bruins to within a win over Centennial in Boise next Friday night for another trip to the state playoffs under Coach Jon Jund.

"It's what they can expect coming into Bruin Stadium," lighned senior tackle Geoff Pierce, who put the end to a sparkling two-year-career-in-the-arena — harring-post-season play.

It was the fourth Twin Falls victory in the last five tries against Boise and the 36 points was perhaps a Twin Falls' high in the series, dating back to 1939. That was with only a cursory check late Friday night. It turned up a 35-point effort against the Braves in 1973. The 23 points may be the largest Bruin margin of victory.

"This one worried me," admitted Jund. "We didn't practice real well all week what will the big win over Highland last week and all the distractions this week of homecoming."

"We started a little slow but we just kept playing better and, by the end, I thought we were playing very well."

The Bruins had a couple of early stutters — like a fumble on the fourth-line after a pass completion early in the fray. But senior linebacker John McClusky erased that sting three plays later by turning a flat pass into an interception and touchdown.

Boise then stung the defense back, marching to a score by Joe Radcke and Justin Johnson conversion to tie it.

But the Bruins then reeled off 29 straight points. Josh Amundson scored from the 4 and five plays after the kickoff, Ryan Brown fell on a Boise fumble at the 31. With a minute in the play, McClusky drilled 47-yard field goal — the second longest in school history.

The third quarter was all Twin Falls as it picked up 19 points on three straight possession. McClusky scored on a 20-yard counter run. Amundson went in from the 7 on his last appearance of the night and Vilath Kinnavongsa popped a dive for 27 yards.

That left Boise to score the final points on a 7-yard run by Johnson with 8:33 to play.

Twin Falls quarterback Ryan Stanger releases a pass as Boise's Scott Pierce applies the defensive pressure.

"We had a lot of good things happen tonight. I thought (junior quarterback Ryan) Stanger had a great ball game. We put in a couple of new wrinkles for him and he exploited them. Not much went wrong for us. And I was particularly pleased with the way we played largely mistake free. I especially didn't miss those mental mistakes," the coach ended with a laugh.

Bobcats in good position for playoffs

The Times-News

BURLEY — The Burley Bobcats have come close to completing a rebuilding year the way everyone wants to: on top of the South Central Idaho Conference standings and a cinch to go to the state playoffs.

Burley's stingy defense iced that Friday night when it pitched a shutout at Jerome and came away with a 25-0 decision.

The win, running the Bobcats year to 6-1, moves Burley within a victory over Wood River next week for all the goodies.

A victory would put gold in the trophy case but assure the Bobcats of the home field advantage in the playoff opener against the fifth district third-place team, which now appears to be American Falls.

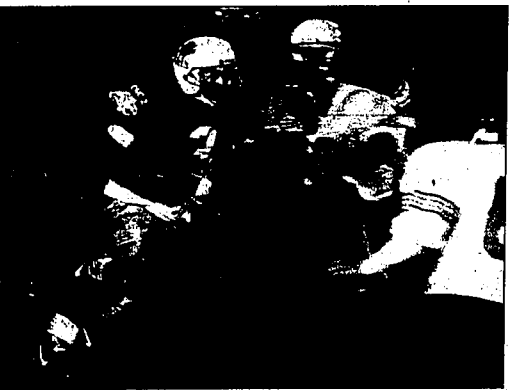

Jerome, which had a three-game win streak snapped, also can move into the playoffs by beating the Bull Indians next week. Jerome would be host for the fifth district champions' home field — probably Shelley.

"Our defense stopped their running game and forced them to pass and we were lucky to contain them," said Burley Coach Bill Hicks. "Jerome controlled the ball most of the second half but our defense just held them."

Hicks said the Bobcats had only one new wrinkle ready for Jerome and spring it on the Tigers early in the second half.

"It basically was a power formation but we spread their defense out and were able to run against them. But, like all well-coached teams, Jerome stopped it the next time out," he said.

Jerome's offense had enough problems going into the game. First, junior halfback Burley's Kody Beck looks for a pass yet Jerome defenders during the second quarter of the Bobcats' victory.

Robert Miller, slated for his first action since the opener against Twin Falls, reinjured his knee in practice and is out for the season. Senior quarterback Aaron Bay was shelved with a separated left shoulder. He tried to throw a little in the second half without much success.

That put the onus of junior signal-caller Mark Schofield.

CSI falls to Ricks defense

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Playing superior defense and making key plays at the end, Ricks College left College of Southern Idaho scrambling in the Region 18 race with a win at CSI gym Friday night.

Trailing until the final few points of the fifth game, Ricks took the match 15-11, 12-15, 15-14, 6-15, 17-15.

"We never made a dig the whole game. We didn't play any defense," said CSI Coach Ben Stroud. "They played great defense. That was the difference in the match."

The Vikings also made several clutch plays after coming back to tie the 13 in the fifth game. Ricks fell behind 14-13, went ahead 15-14 and 16-15 before ending the match on Aletha Gomez's tip.

In that same period, CSI had two spikes hit out of bounds and a set pushed out of reach to negate two solid kills and a stuff block by Jody Graves.

"They made the big plays and we didn't," Stroud said. "We had our opportunities, and we didn't convert."

The two-hour, 20-minute match featured many long rallies with diving saves the norm for both squads.

The third game was the only one not decided in the final couple points. Ricks took a 3-0 lead, quickly fell behind 6-3, then 14-4.

The Vikings never trailed after the opening points in the fourth game leading 6-6 at one point. CSI closed to 11-9 and 13-11 before Ricks finished the contest.

The Eagles, 1-1 in league action, play their final home game against Treasure Valley at 1 p.m. today. CSI travels to North Idaho Friday for a key conference matchup.

Basketball coach turns down job Down Under

The Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Don Monson, the Coeur d'Alene native who pushed University of Idaho basketball into the national limelight in the late 1970s and early 1980s, may have coached his last game.

Monson said he has turned down an invitation to return to Australia's pro basketball league and is uncertain if he will pursue another coaching job.

"I'm realistic enough to know there's not a lot of people who are going to hire a 61-year-old coach," Monson said Thursday from his Spokane home.

Monson returned to Spokane last week after coaching Adelaide in the National Basketball League of Australia.

Monson said he thoroughly enjoyed his experience Down Under. However, he balked when management asked him to sign a three-year contract, spend 11 months a year in Australia and work more with youth teams.

"It was a well-organized situation as far as the team I was working for," Monson said. "The league was probably more organized and better than I thought it would be."

Monson's team, the West End Eagle Super Sixers, posted a 14-12 record and came in seventh in a 14-team league.

"I had a really neat bunch of kids, or players they were very enjoyable," Monson said. Monson's players ranged from 20 to 35 years of age. Two foreigners, usually Americans, are permitted to play on each team.

"You didn't have to worry about kids' grades, or who's in class, or at the study table, or recruits," noted Monson, who was fired last year after nine seasons at Oregon.

Guzman gets eye of Phillies

TORONTO (AP) — Juan Guzman is seeing more of the Philadelphia Phillies lately than he cares to.

"I've watched them on TV and on videotapes a lot this week," said Guzman. Toronto's starter against Curt Schilling in Game 1 of the World Series on Saturday night.

Now it's also time to see the Phillies up close and personal for Guzman.

"Guzman, 2-0 in the AL playoffs, brings a perfect postseason mark of 5-0 into the best-of-7 Series. Dave Stewart is 8-0 in the postseason.

"I don't know if the Phillies know that much about me," Guzman said. "I'll have my good stuff if it doesn't matter. I don't think they're worried."

Guzman already knows a lot about the Phillies' reputation as a bunch of crazy guys. He finds it all very amusing, too.

"They look so wild," the right-hander said. "They have long hair, don't shave, wear dirty uniforms and keep spitting. They all look like truck drivers."

A different kind of wildness can be Guzman's undoing. He walked eight batters in six innings against Chicago but survived for a 7-3 victory in Game 1. During the season, Guzman was 14-3 but was often wild.

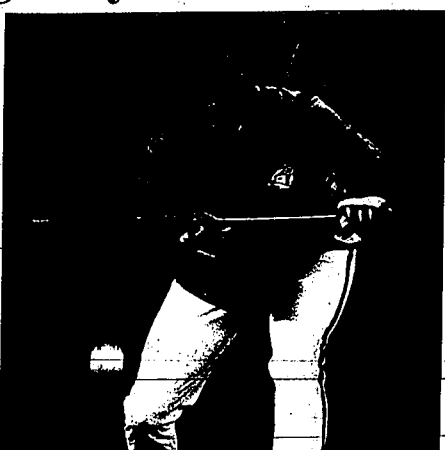

"It was something I've been through all year," Guzman said. "I've been inconsistent. But I have learned from that."

Guzman took some lessons from his Game 1 experience and came back with a 2-0 record in Game 2. He pitched the Blue Jays 5-3 to Toronto to take a 3-2 lead in the playoffs back to Comiskey Park where Stewart wrapped it up.

Guzman retired the first 13 batters at the start of the Game 3 set a playoff record for five one-run, three-hit and one walk in seven innings.

It was Guzman at his best and he'll need a repeat performance to beat Schilling, the NL playoffs MVP despite not winning a game.

"There always seems to be an inning when he's wild," catcher Pat Borders said of Guzman. "He puts a lot of his body into pitching and if his mo-

Sports writers, broadcasters pick major league All-Star team

The Associated Press

Barry Bonds, Greg Maddux, Paul Mollitor and Randy Myers, each with new clubs this season, wound up together Friday on the 1993 Associated Press major league All-Star team.

World Series opponents Roberto Alomar and Lenny Dykstra and rookie catcher Mike Piazza also made the combined squad of AL and NL players.

The team was picked in a nationwide vote of sports writers and broadcasters. The AP's most outstanding player and manager of the year will be announced early next week.

Bonds and Juan Gonzalez, who tied for the major league lead with 46 home runs, and Dykstra were chosen as the outfielders.

Maddux made it as the right-handed starting pitcher and Atlanta teammate Tom Glavine was picked as the left-handed starter. Jeff Blauser of the Braves was named as the shortstop.

Other members of the team include Frank Thomas at first base, Alomar at second base, Matt Williams at third base, Piazza at catcher, Myers, the relief pitcher and Mollitor the designated hitter. Bonds hit .336 in his first year with San Francisco after leaving Pittsburgh. He led the league in home runs, RBIs (123) and was first in hitting percentage and on-base average.

Maddux moved from the Chicago Cubs to Atlanta and led the majors with a 2.36 ERA in a 20-10 season. He finished ahead of Jack McDowell, 22-10 with a 3.37 ERA for the Chicago White Sox.

Mollitor, another free agent last winter, went from Milwaukee to Toronto and hit .332 with 22 home runs and 111 RBIs.

Mollitor will be the DH for the first two games of the World Series at the SkyDome. The Blue Jays must move him, probably to third base, to keep him in the lineup when the series shifts to Philadelphia.

Myers set an NL record with 53 saves in his first year with the Cubs after leaving San Diego.

Alomar batted .326 with 17 home runs, 93 RBIs and 55 stolen bases for Toronto. He beat out Cleveland's Carlos Baerga, who hit .321 with 21 homers and 144 RBIs.

"Some people say I'm the best," Alomar said last week during the AL playoffs, "but I'm not going to say that. There are a lot of good players."

Dykstra helped lead Philadelphia into the World Series, scoring 143 runs. He hit .305 with 19 homers and 66 RBIs.

Gonzalez led the AL in home runs for Texas. He batted .310 with 118 RBIs.

Glavine was 22-6 with a 3.20 ERA. Blauser batted .305 with 15 homers and 73 RBIs for Atlanta.

Thomas enjoyed another big year for the White Sox, batting .317 with 41 home runs and 128 RBIs. Piazza starred in his rookie season, hitting 35 home runs with 112 RBIs and a .318 average for the Dodgers.

Williams bounced back from an off-year to hit 38 home runs for the Giants. He had 110 RBIs and batted .294.

Among the top players who did not make the team were outfielder Ken Griffey Jr., and pitcher Randy Johnson of Seattle. Griffey hit 45 home runs with 109 RBIs and Johnson, a left-hander, led the majors with 308 strikeouts, won 19 games and had a 3.24 ERA.

tion changes just a little, he can have control problems. Usually he can make adjustments."

Guzman, who led the AL in wild pitches, throws a fastball with a lot of movement and must have control of his slider, best when down and away to win. But winning has not been a problem for Guzman, going 40-11 in three seasons with Toronto.

The Blue Jays, trying to repeat as world champions for the first time since the 1977-78 Yankees, will need Guzman to be at his best because Schilling certainly is at his. Schilling deserved better in the playoffs but Mitch Williams was his usual wild self.

Schilling-16-7 this season, gave up two runs and seven hits with 10 strikeouts over eight innings as the Phillies won Game 1, 4-3 in 10 innings. He also tied a record with five consecutive strikeouts to start the opener.

In Game 5, Schilling allowed two runs and four hits with nine strikeouts in eight-plus innings. He carried a 3-0 lead into the ninth but once again Williams and the defense didn't get the job done. The Braves scored three runs in the ninth. Lenny Dykstra won it with a homer in the 10th.

Leyva: It will be fun to see old team

TORONTO (AP) — Nick Leyva was happy to see the Philadelphia Phillies turn into champions. He just wishes he'd been around to watch it happen.

This week, though, Leyva will root against the team that abruptly fired him as manager two years ago. That's because he'll be in the third base coaching box for the Toronto Blue Jays in the World Series.

"There's no hard feelings," Leyva said before Saturday night's Game 1. "I'm actually glad Philadelphia won in the playoffs instead of Atlanta because I still have a lot of friends over there. It will be fun to see them."

Leyva is also looking forward to coaching the inside of Veterans Stadium again. He hasn't been back since the Phillies fired him on April 21, 1991, only two weeks into the season.

"I've driven past the ballpark, but haven't gone in," said Leyva, who lives in nearby Wayne, Pa. "Sure, you have feelings about what happened, and what you might have done differently."

"Nobody likes to get fired," he said. "But what I felt was more like frustration or embarrassment, not anger."

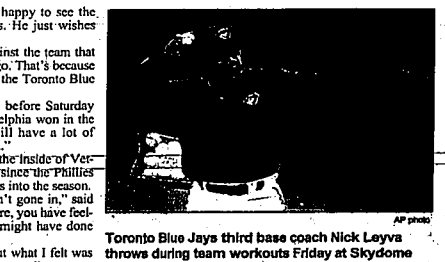

Leyva had been a coach for St. Louis for five years when he was hired by current Phillies general manager Lee Thomas to manage for the 1989 season. The Phils went 67-95 in his first year and 77-85 in his second year, and Leyva was fired.

Thomas hired Jim Fregosi as Leyva's replacement. Fregosi guided the Phillies from last place in the NL East in 1992 to their first World Series appearance in 10 years.

"I think it was a team that we pretty much stripped. We tried to start then what we got now, which is a great clubhouse," Leyva said.

"Going into a job like that, especially with a club that's not a proven club, one that's rebuilding, somewhere down the line it's going to happen," he said of his firing. "You just try to make it last as long as you can and learn from some of the mistakes you make."

Leyva still stays in touch with some of those he saw every day in Philadelphia. In the offseason, he plays golf with Lenny Dykstra and works out with Phillies third base coach Larry Bowa.

Toronto Blue Jays third base coach Nick Leyva throws during team workouts Friday at Skydome in Toronto as the Jays prepare to meet the Philadelphia Phillies in Game 1 of the World Series.

Players association accuses Mariners of avoiding agent in negotiating deal

SEATTLE (AP) — The hot-and-cold relations between the Seattle Mariners and this year's No. 1 overall draft pick, $1.3 million bonus baby Alex Rodriguez, were back on the chilly side Friday.

A grievance filed by the Major League Baseball Players Association accuses the Mariners of circumventing Rodriguez's agent in negotiating a three-year contract, says he should therefore be allowed to void the deal.

Barring a settlement, the case could be heard by the major league baseball arbitrator, George Nicola, within about two months.

Meanwhile, Rodriguez, 18, of Miami, will continue playing with the Mariners in the Arizona Fall League, said Scott Boras, his agent, and Dave Aust, a club spokesman.

"We've received the grievance, we've evaluated it and there's no merit to it," Aust said.

The grievance notice Thursday arrived without warning, he added.

"The first we learned about this was yesterday (Thursday), when this thing came in," he said.

Whether the grievance was instigated by Rodriguez, a hard-hitting shortstop who was the first player chosen in the June draft; Boras, a lawyer in Newport Beach, Calif.; or the association was not immediately clear.

Neither Doyle R. Pryor, the association lawyer who filed the grievance, nor Rodriguez returned telephone calls Friday.

Boras refused to discuss particulars.

"We just wanted to amicably negotiate this grievance ... and we were hoping to do that without notice of this action becoming public," he said.

Throughout the frequently strained negotiations, the Mariners knew Boras "was serving as the legal adviser to Rodriguez's family," according to the grievance filed Thursday.

"The Mariners nonetheless negotiated directly with a non-certified agent and in doing so made material representations which were reasonably relied upon by Rodriguez, his family and other non-certified advisers."

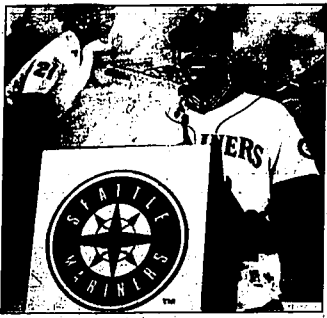

"The Mariners did this in order to induce Rodriguez to sign a below-market-value contract," the grievance said.

Drafting Rodriguez initially may have made him unhappy. He said before the draft that he wanted to play for the Florida Marlins or another National League team so he could see more of his family.

Less than three weeks after the draft, he accused the Mariners of "violating an agreement not to approach him directly and to use only one negotiator and had therefore 'disrespected my mom.'"

Club officials denied any disrespect and blamed Boras for the snafu.

After two months of negotiations by fax, Rodriguez signed at the last minute before the deadline

Seattle Mariners' Alex Rodriguez, the team's No. 1 June draft pick, should be eligible to become a free agent, according to a grievance filed by the Major League Players Association.

for enrolling at the University of Miami on an athletic scholarship.

After signing, he apologized for any misunderstanding.

"I think some people might have some bad ideas about me, but this was a business thing," he said. "I had to make a decision that was best for me and my family. Now I hope to show those people what I can do, and then they'll forgive me."

The Mariners have described the contract as the most lucrative ever signed by an amateur baseball pick.

It provides a $1 million signing bonus, $60,000 if he plays in the minor leagues and $109,000 if he makes the big leagues next year, $90,000 or $109,000 in 1995 and $109,000 in 1996. The figure is likely to be higher for 1996 because the minimum salary probably will be higher by then.

The Mariners also agreed to pay for Rodriguez's college education and to let him make his own trading card deal, potentially worth $250,000 or more.

Boras, an agent certified by the players association, and Rodriguez's older sister, Suzy Dunand, had advised him to hold out for sums reported to range from $2.5 million to $3.2 million — more than double the record $1.5 million the New York Yankees paid to Brian Taylor, the top pick in 1991.

Today is Judgment Day for Virginia

The Associated Press

"Virginia has won its first five games — averaging 38 points and 448 yards. Still, coach George Welsh says the verdict is out on the quality of his 15th-ranked team."

Well, Cavalier fans, here comes de judge.

Today, Virginia plays top-ranked Florida State (6-0) on the road in Tallahassee, and its best hope appears to be that the Seminoles have a meltdown after the monkey-off-their-backs 28-10 victory last week over Miami.

"I don't know what point we're at," Welsh said.

The point of no return as far as an unbeaten season is concerned.

Virginia is led by sophomore quarterback Symmon Willis, who has completed 68 percent of his passes. He is called a young Charlie by Wally Burcham, Florida State's linebacker coach.

The problem for Virginia in the Atlantic Coast Conference game is that old Charlie plays for Florida State. That would be big-play quarterback Charlie Ward.

While Florida State coach Bobby Bowden hopes to add an upsets by "blowing it," coach Lou Holtz said of this 6-0 Fighting Irish game against Brigham Young (4-1): "Burl could be easy if Cougar quarterback John Walsh doesn't get any better protection than he did when he was sacked 12 times in 68-14 loss to UCLA last week."

"We feel a different attitude in the air," Bowden said. "We can see a different bounce in the step of the athletes."

In other games involving the Top Ten, it will be No. 10 Tennessee at No. 2 Alabama, No. 3 Notre Dame at Brigham Young, No. 25 Michigan State at No. 5 Ohio State, Kansas State at No. 6 Nebraska, No. 18 Michigan at No. 7 Penn State and No. 9 Oklahoma at No. 20 Colorado. No. 8 Miami is idle.

In other games, Stanford will be at No. 11 UCLA, No. 12 Washington at No. 22 Arizona, No. 13 Texas A&M at Baylor, No. 14 North Carolina at Georgia Tech, No. 16 Wisconsin at Purdue, No. 21 California at Washington State, Southern Mississippi at No. 23 Louisville, and No. 24 Syracuse at Pittsburgh.

Tennessee at Alabama

The other half of the State of Alabama's Super Saturday doubleheader will be played at Birmingham — 100 miles from Auburn. There, the Crimson Tide (5-0) will have its secondary tested by the passing of quarterback Heath Shuler of Tennessee (5-1).

Notre Dame at Brigham Young

"There isn't going to be anything easy about it," coach Lou Holtz said of this 6-0 Fighting Irish game against Brigham Young (4-1). "Burl could be easy if Cougar quarterback John Walsh doesn't get any better protection than he did when he was sacked 12 times in 68-14 loss to UCLA last week."

Michigan State at Ohio State

Michigan State (3-1) will be trying for a second straight Big Ten upset. Last week, the Spartans upset Michigan. Ohio State (5-0) has not yielded a touchdown in eight quarters.

Kansas State at Nebraska

A victory in this Big Eight game at Lincoln would surely earn unranked Kansas State (5-0) a spot in the Top 25. Nebraska (5-0) is well aware of the Wildcats, having held on to beat them 38-31 two years ago and 38-24 last year.

Michigan at Penn State

Michigan (3-2), which dropped from ninth to No. 18 after losing to Michigan State, badly needs a win in this Big Ten game — its first ever against Penn State. The Nittany Lions (5-0) will be playing their 1,000th game.

Colorado at Oklahoma

This time, the Sooners (5-0) will go to beat Colorado (3-2) for the entire 60 minutes. Last year, Oklahoma led 24-14 with five minutes left, but had to settle for a 24-24 tie.

Zero September inflation rallies markets

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — News of another great month for consumer inflation — no increase at all in September — sparked a rally on Wall Street that drove long-term interest rates to their lowest levels ever.

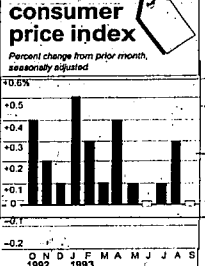

The Labor Department reported that its Consumer Price Index did not move up at all last month as the price of cigarettes and other tobacco products fell by a record amount and gasoline pump prices declined for a seventh straight month.

The unexpectedly good news on consumer prices kept alive a bond market rally that had begun Thursday with good news on wholesale inflation.

The yield on the government's 30-year bond, which moves in the opposite direction from its price, dropped to 7.78 percent, the lowest rate since the Treasury began regular bond auctions in 1977. It is the second straight record, after Thursday's close of 8.58 percent.

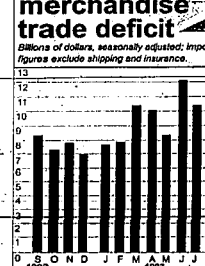

The bond market rally means that rates on home mortgages, which er. Economists said that further good news on inflation could easily push the benchmark 30-year Treasury bond down perhaps as low as 5 percent, a level that would have been unthinkable a few years ago.

The decade of the 1990s is a low inflation decade, totally different from the decade of the 1980s, said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Economic Advisers Inc. in Boston. "Inflation should be low for a long-long time."

But there was a downside to the inflation figures. The 45 million Americans who get Social Security benefits will see their monthly checks rise by only 2.6 percent as January, the second-smallest increase since the government began providing annual cost-of-living adjustments. That will translate into an extra $17 a month for the typical retiree, who now gets $674.

Laura Tyson, head of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, hailed the low inflation report as the most recent in a number of favorable developments. She said she was comfortable with the administration's midyear forecast that the economy would grow at a 3 percent rate through the rest of this year and next.

Sculley steps down as Apple chairman

The Washington Post

John Sculley, the former soft-drink executive who transformed "Apple Computer Inc." from a entrepreneurial upstart into a corporate giant, Thursday resigned as the company's chairman, chief visionary and most recognized spokesman.

Sculley's departure from the Apple board could not be by surprise. It comes almost four months after he relinquished his title as Apple's chief executive in a boardroom coup that was engineered by the company's outside directors, according to a lawsuit filed last month by a former Apple director.

"How hard they fall," said John Swartz, business editor at MacWeek, an industry newspaper. "In January, John Sculley was the best known businessman in the country, sitting next to Hillary Clinton at the State of the Union (address), the model of a New Age CEO. Nine months later, he's unemployed."

Sculley's departure comes as Apple confronts a myriad of financial, technological and management woes.

As a result of a price war in the personal computer market that has chopped prices by 30 percent, Apple closed out its fiscal year last month with only $86 million in profits, down from $530 million in 1992, despite almost a billion-dollar increase in sales. Apple's stock price, nudging $60 in early spring, had dipped as low as $22.

Over the summer, Apple introduced its newest product, the hand-held Newton, with draws after back-handed reviews and the ridicule of the Doonesbury comic strip.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"When angry, count 10 before you speak; if very angry, an hundred."
— Thomas Jefferson.

Visualizing the opponents' distribution requires no more than counting up to 13 in any suit. Often it makes the difference between success and failure. And in the play of a slam, its importance cannot be overestimated.

At one table of a team game, dummy's heart ace won, and when trumps didn't break, South gave West his trump trick. The heart return was ruffed and South then tried the spades. When they didn't break either, he fell back on the diamond finesse. Unfortunately he took it the wrong way and he lost the slam.

In the replay, South played in a similar way except that he took time to count visualize. He won dummy's heart ace, cashed three high trumps and continued with another, giving West the lead. West returned a heart, which South ruffed, and three rounds of spades revealed that there was to be no diamond ruff that suit. South persisted by ruffing dummy's last spade, forcing East to discard his last heart to hold three diamonds. Since East had shown only three black cards and had played five hearts, he was known to have started with more diamonds than West. For confirmation, West had shown four cards in each black suit and had led the heart deuce on opening lead. Clearly West was the one short in diamonds, and South had the odds predominantly in his favor when he took the diamond finesse against East.

ANSWER: Two diamonds. Nice distribution, but not enough strength to make a more aggressive move.
