Thugs beat fleeing Haitians

AP photo

Haitians pack a truck headed for the countryside Sunday afternoon in Port-au-Prince. Many Haitians view U.S. military ships appearing off the coast to enforce today's U.N. embargo as a prelude to a military invasion of the island. Paramilitary mobs beat some of those trying to flee.

Haiti's military leaders seek ways to forestall embargo

The Washington Post

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Under pressure of imminent U.N. sanctions, leading spokesmen and allies of Haiti's military rulers Sunday called for an all-party government to be formed as an alternative to the international community's demand for the return of ousted president Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

The proposal appeared to be one of several efforts by desperate military leaders and their civilian allies to forestall a U.N. embargo that is to cut off key supplies to their country starting Monday night. In separate interviews, they proposed the alternative government, suggested they would accept mediation by the Pope and called for new talks.

They did not, however, offer a transfer of power to an Aristide government, as the military agreed to do in a pact signed at Governor's Island, N.Y., in July.

Diplomats here said there was no support in the international community for the idea of an all-party government. In Washington, a White House official rejected it, saying: "There is a process in place, based on the Governor's Island agreement. ... We expect all parties to abide by it."

The military rulers, who overthrew Aristide in 1991 and have resisted efforts by the international community to restore democracy here, "are cornered and they don't know what to do," said a senior U.N. diplomat here. Observers suggested that they are seeking any tactic to delay confrontation with the United Nations.

U.S. Marines arrive in Port-au-Prince over the weekend as President Clinton ordered security beefed up for the U.N. sanctions to take effect tonight.

Haiti's military chief, Gen. Raoul Cedras, said in an interview with CNN that he favored new intra-Haitian talks and spoke of supporting what he said was a popular call for Pope John Paul II to mediate the conflict.

The Vatican was the only state to formally recognize the military government after it overthrew Aristide, a Roman Catholic priest whose liberation-theology thinking has antagonized conservative church powers.

The man seen as the most powerful among the military rulers — Lt. Col. Michel Francois — was seeking new negotiations on ways to leave his post as police commander, diplomatic sources said.

Woman killed, others injured by mobs; U.S., Canadian ships arrive

Knight-Ridder News Service

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Paramilitary mobs used gunfire and beatings Sunday to terrorize Haitians thinking of fleeing the capital.

As nine U.S. and Canadian warships — one visible in the thick haze from the capital's port — prepared to enforce the U.N. embargo beginning today, thousands fled. Leave Port-au-Prince in massive exodus on buses and trucks.

Violence halts food — A2

Gunmen killed one woman as she was leaving her Port-au-Prince home with a suitcase, and military-backed gangs beat a group of people waiting at a bus stop in the Delmas neighborhood, according to residents.

The collapsing U.N.-brokered peace accords, which aim to return exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide on Oct. 30, and a three-day period of mourning beginning Monday for assassinated Justice Minister Guy Malary, have put people on edge. Many fear a surge of violence in the coming days.

Hundreds of Haitians waited all day for a ride out of town.

"We have no security. I'm afraid of dying," said Cherie Jean-Baptiste, 15, waiting for eight hours at a bus stop under a Texaco station canopy near the port. She had borrowed $3 from friends to travel to a town an hour north of Port-au-Prince.

Next to her was Joseanne Pierre, 25, and her five children. They were traveling south to the town of Jacmel. "When the country is better, I'll come back," she said. "But it's not safe here for my children right now."

People frantically ran after the brightly painted buses, shouted at them to stop and tried to throw luggage onto roof racks. When that failed, they jumped aboard the flat-bed trucks, which had become solid masses of people. On the metal floors,

Dole wants law giving Congress more say in Haiti.

The Associated Press

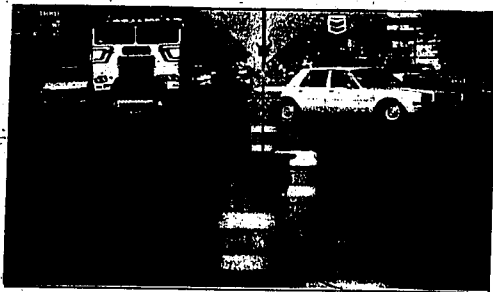

WASHINGTON — Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said Sunday he will offer legislation restricting President Clinton's authority to send troops to Haiti.

The Kansas Republican said his plan was part of the growing demand on Capitol Hill — growing because of the crises in Somalia and Haiti — for more congressional say in determining foreign policy.

Dole, speaking on CBS' "Face the Nation," said he will offer an amendment to the defense spending bill early this week requiring congressional authorization for sending American troops to Haiti unless the president certifies that certain conditions, such as a threat to national security interests, exist.

He said President Clinton could cite national security as a reason for military action in Haiti, "but I think he has to be very careful because my view is, whether you're Republican or Democrat, our Congress has decided that we better be more involved."

Communication mergers spark monopoly concern

Lawmakers consider new regulations to ensure competition in telecommunication industry

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A recent string of multi-billion-dollar corporate alliances aimed at creating a revolutionary information network, spawning business opportunities unheard of since the post-war boom of the 1950s.

But the government is worried the new communication giants may attain monopolistic power, so federal regulators and lawmakers are busy looking for ways to bridge this new frontier of technology and commerce.

Congress appears to be willing to let telephone companies enter the cable TV business as long as there is competition for local phone service, something that does not now exist.

Legislation is being written in both the House and the Senate addressing some of the anticipated problems of mergers like the one announced last Wednesday between Bell Atlantic phone company and the cable giant, Telecommunications Inc. (TCI).

But industry officials maintain the marketplace is changing too fast for government regulation to keep up.

"Not only are current policies hopelessly outdated," said Louis Rutigliano, vice chairman of the Ameritech regional phone company, "but any attempt to propose new laws and regulations that micromanage this industry is doomed to failure because no one can predict what this industry will look like tomorrow, much less in five years."

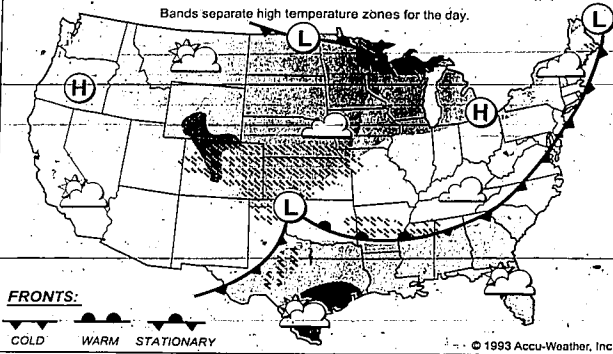

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee on antitrust, argues the recent spate of mergers

Weather summary

The National Weather Service reported no rain Sunday in Idaho.

The storm system centered in eastern Nevada brought only clouds into Idaho Sunday afternoon. The rain was confined to eastern Nevada and northern Utah and was light.

However, clouds were building, especially in southeast Idaho, where a thundershower or two during the evening hours was a possibility.

Otherwise, the low pressure system should move east and bring pleasant weather into Idaho. The exception is in the north, where a storm system moving south from the Gulf of Alaska will bring clouds into the Panhandle region late Monday into Tuesday.

At 3 p.m., temperatures ranged from the upper 40s in the central mountains to around 60 in the southwest part of the state.

Winds generally were in the 10 to 15 mph range from the west to north over most of Idaho. Winds in the central mountain valleys and in the Panhandle were under 10 mph.

Hagerman reported the highest temperature in the state at 65 degrees. Soda Springs reported the lowest at 26.

In the nation Sunday, the highest temperature was 100 degrees at Cotulla and Laredo, Texas. Hibbing, Minn., reported the lowest temperature at 22 degrees.

Rain spreads across much of nation; snow in West

The Associated Press

Snow and rain spread across parts of the West on Sunday as a storm system moved toward the Rockies. Heavy rain was scattered around the Great Lakes and the South coast.

Some of the snow was heavy in the mountains of southern Utah and southwestern and central Colorado. Two to 5 inches of snow was reported by morning near Cedar Mountain in southwest Utah. In Colorado, 4 inches was reported at Divide, with 2 inches at Leadville and 1 inch at Summitville and Empire, the National Weather Service said.

An additional 2 to 4 inches of snow was possible above 8,000 feet in southern Utah, and 4 to 7 inches was possible above 9,000 feet in the mountains of southwestern and central Colorado, the weather service said.

As the storm system moved into the central Rockies during the night, snow was expected to spread across parts of Wyoming.

A winter storm watch was in effect through Monday across the Snowy and southern Laramie mountains of southern Wyoming, with 6 to 10 inches possible by late Monday. One to 4 inches of snow was expected at lower elevations of southwestern and south-central Wyoming, the weather service said.

Showers and a few thunderstorms extended across the eastern Great Lakes during the afternoon along with the aid of low pressure moving into southeastern Ontario.

Other showers and thunderstorms were scattered along a cold front that extended from the lower Ohio and middle Mississippi valleys to the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles.

Another area of low pressure spread north into sections of the mid-Atlantic states during the afternoon, with isolated showers and thunderstorms ahead of a cold front extending across the Florida Peninsula.

Heavier rainfall amounts for the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT were 1.20 inches at Saginaw, Mich. and 1.12 inches at Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Low temperatures Sunday morning were only in the 30s and 40s at many locations across the Pacific Northwest, the Intermountain region and the Rockies, plus the northern and central Plains, the upper Mississippi Valley and the upper Great Lakes.

Mrs. Bush returns to capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former First Lady Barbara Bush was back in Washington over the weekend — this time, on her terms.

There was no media herd, no unsavory politicking and no comment on the new occupants of the White House.

Finally, Mrs. Bush could move and speak freely in the city she called home for 25 years.

It was above all a chance to revisit one of the passions of her private and public life — voluntarism.

The former first lady returned to the nation's capital over the weekend to honor the volunteer service of 50 winners of the 1993 Maxwell House

Real Heroes award.

First, however, Mrs. Bush would have to endure the chore of meeting with the press — the "crowd" she had warned incoming First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton to avoid.

There were half a dozen reporters. The news conference was a tense, 10-minute exchange.

What did she miss about the nation's capital?

"My children, my friends," she said.

Long pause.

"Are you waiting for more?" she asked the journalists.

Talking about the home she and her husband have been building in Houston, she said: "How happy we'll be in that house you've forced us into."

She delivered both comments with a smile, and drew laughter from the media and onlookers.

But when talk turned to George Bush's record, the charm evaporated and she took to the stout defense of her husband that was as much a trademark as her three-strand faux pearl necklaces and tight puff of white hair.

Interrupting a reporter, she shot back: "George Bush appointed more women than had ever been appointed before. I think what we need are more qualified people appointed, men or women."

Opposition candidate decries NAFTA

Dallas Morning News

MEXICO CITY — With more than 20,000 supporters screaming "Long Live Mexico!" opposition presidential candidate Cuauhtemoc Cardenas spoke out Sunday against the North American Free Trade Agreement. He said it would leave Mexico in "extremely vulnerable and fragile" straits.

Mexico needs to stop betting its future on the economic fortunes of the United States and build a prosperous, productive democracy of its own, said Cardenas of the Democratic Revolutionary Party.

"Achieving democracy, we will win the right to life and dignity, to bread, work, health and a roof for everyone," Cardenas told supporters as he officially agreed to run for president. His party, known as the PRD, and the National Action Party, or PAN, are the two major opposition parties in Mexico. The ruling party is the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

Cardenas ran for president in 1988 and was defeated by PRI candidate Carlos Salinas de Gortari, amid accusations of election fraud. "1994 won't be like 1988," Cardenas vowed.

Diplomat Jean-Pierre Laroche, waiting for signals from Haiti's military chief, Gen. Raoul Cedras, who defied a Friday deadline for his early retirement.

A Western diplomat predicted that the embargo would force the Haitian army to comply with the Governors Island accord signed in New York July 3 by Aristide and Cedras. "There's no way these (military) people can hold on for months," the diplomat said. "The last time we had an embargo, they could only last 24 hours before negotiations began."

The word in Haiti Sunday was that the army had stocked up enough oil to keep the country's economy alive for at least two months, but U.N. officials were skeptical. "That's the same thing they said last time and it wasn't true," one official said.

Violence halts food deliveries from dockside

Knights-Ridder News Service

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Several thousand tons of food meant for three-quarters of a million people is stuck at a capital port because of the rising violence here, directors of the three largest food relief programs said Sunday.

The directors said the stoppage and the unseas has forced them to postpone trips to the countryside and around Port-au-Prince. All three groups — CARE, Catholic Relief Services and Adventist Development and Relief Agency — have shipments held hostage.

In addition, they said the U.N. embargo scheduled to start Monday would further hurt them. While warships likely would allow shipments of humanitarian assistance into port, under the embargo terms they won't allow gasoline to pass through, which eventually will curtail deliveries by truck.

"The holdup of our shipment at the port now is very serious," said Glenn Mitchell, food director for the Adventist program, which serves 187,500 people. "We don't have any vegetable oil left. We need that shipment now so people can use it to cook with."

The food goes to children of all ages, mothers, pregnant women, orphans, schools and hospitals.

U.S. Army helicopter pilot Michael Durant rests at Fort Campbell, Ky., Sunday, after arriving back in the United States. Verdict on court's newest justice: Fast start, vigorous performance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judging by her energetic questioning from the bench, Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg is quickly hitting full stride in her new job.

Ginsburg

Intensive questioning last week by Ginsburg in a sexual-harassment case caused one lawyer to abandon his contention that the woman who had filed suit must prove the conduct harmed her performance at work.

"She basically pushed him to concede the case," said Georgetown University law professor Susan Deller Ross.

During her first two weeks of high court arguments, Ginsburg has asked lawyers frequent and probing questions on other issues such as drug forfeitures and civil rights law.

"She has hit the ground running," said Stuart M. Gerson, former acting attorney general in the Bush administration. "She has shown a great deal of energy and preparedness. Being on the court is awe-inspiring, but she is not awe-struck."

New justices often hold back when just arriving on the bench.

Justice David H. Souter waited three weeks to ask his first question in 1990. Now a frequent and incisive questioner, Souter admits finding the job overwhelming at first. Ginsburg's performance is being likened to the equally fast start in 1986 by Justice Antonin Scalia, her former federal appeals court colleague.

"It's not just that she's asking lots of questions. It's that she's asking outstanding questions that get to the heart of the matter," said Georgetown University law professor Susan Low Bloch.

In the sex-harassment case, the lawyer representing the woman, who filed the lawsuit against a Tennessee company, didn't escape close questioning either. Ginsburg suggested he was making the case more complicated than it should be.

"If a woman is told 'you think like a woman' and a male co-worker is not subjected to similar comments, 'doesn't that make their job more difficult?'" Ginsburg asked.

"Do you need anything further than that? The terms and conditions (of a job) aren't equal if one is called names and the other isn't," she said.

Ginsburg suggested an equally straightforward view during arguments on a civil rights case, pointing out that whatever penalties are required, the law has been clear since 1964: "Thou shalt not discriminate."

In another argument, she said a drug-forfeiture law's basic message also is clear: "That's part of the penalty; you forfeit the home where the drugs were kept."

Ginsburg's vigorous performance comes as no surprise to lawyers who argued before her on the federal appeals court.

"The potential is there for her to establish herself early on as a leading member of the Supreme Court," said Charles Cooper, a former assistant attorney general in the Reagan administration. But he added, "Saying that at this stage is quite treacherous."

Her influence in the court's decisions and opinion-writing remains an open question. It will depend in part on what opinions she is assigned to write by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist or the senior justice on the prevailing side of a case.

"It's hard to say that she'll necessarily change a vote in this instance or change the way an opinion is written," said Marcia Greenberger of the National Women's Law Center. But Ginsburg's judicial philosophy and legal skills may be persuasive to other justices, she said.

Some issues are new to Ginsburg, particularly the death penalty.

Fox cancels Chevy Chase's talk show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chevy Chase has reported the news many times: Generalissimo Francisco Franco is still dead.

Chase

Now "The Chevy Chase Show," is, too. Chase became the first casualty of the late-night television war on Sunday as Fox Broadcasting Co. announced it was canceling his show, effective immediately.

He began Sept. 7 and battled David Letterman, Jay Leno, Arsenio Hall and Ted Koppel for viewers. But his show was savagely mauling by critics and it performed a ratings pratfall much as Chase himself had done in his famous send-ups of ex-President Ford.

"Despite the commitment of Chevy and our best creative and production minds, we started slowly and did not perform to expectations," said Lucie

Sathany, chairwoman of Fox Broadcasting. "We saw nothing to indicate that the show would turn around." She thanked him "for giving us his best effort. He is an extraordinarily talented man."

In a statement released by Fox, Chase said: "I am proud of the comedic elements that we were able to intersperse throughout this otherwise very constraining format."

He added that he was looking forward to the February release of his new film, "Cops and Robbersons." Less than a month after Chase's show appeared, an emergency team of writers, consultants and Fox executives was brought in to revamp the program.

Lawmakers move to take foreign policy from Clinton

Boston Globe

WASHINGTON — The turbulent waters of the post-Cold War era never seemed so-roiled as in the last fortnight in Congress. Deprived of the steady theme of the Cold War's ideological crusade, and stirred by the near-instant dissemination of bloody TV images from overseas, many legislators are setting out on their own as foreign policy entrepreneurs.

In their readiness to kibitz in international affairs — particularly from such erratic, unpredictable angles — these legislators have become a new headache for President Clinton and, many observers said, a troubling development in the making of U.S. foreign policy.

Vietnam-era hawks like Sen. John McCain, an Arizona Republican, pushed Clinton to withdraw troops from Somalia; longtime critics of American imperialism like Rep. Charles Rangel, a Democrat from New York, called for U.S. intervention in Haiti. Two of the three top House Democrats have split from Clinton on the free trade pact with Mexico.

"There was a stampede on the Hill to take foreign policy right out of the president's hands," said Sen. Richard Lugar, a Republican from Indiana, assessing the last two weeks.

"You have 535 would-be American secretaries of state up there," said Richard Haass, a former top national security adviser for President Bush.

"Congressional assertiveness in foreign policy adds a major dimension of unpredictability to U.S. policy, and it is very hard to be an effective world power when you are not either predictable or consistent. It increases the likelihood you will be tested by adversaries and decreases the chances your friends and allies will stand by you."

The newborn foreign policy mavericks have been sucked into their new role, said Haass and several of the legislators involved, by a vacuum in leadership at the White House.

"I recognize and support the authority of the president to establish and conduct foreign policy," said Sen. Robert Smith, a Republican from New Hampshire and one of a number of Cold War hawks who called for an immediate U.S. withdrawal from Somalia last week. "But when American troops are deployed in harm's way, the commander in chief, and his administration, must remain engaged. Unfortunately, this has not been the case in Somalia."

Clinton and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine, with the critical help of Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas, were able to reestablish a semblance of order by the end of the week. The Senate voted Thursday night to grant Clinton the March 31 deadline he had requested for a U.S. withdrawal from Somalia.

At the time of the Vietnam War, Dole said, "I supported my president, and I did the same in the Gulf, and I do the same tonight."

But Rep. John Murtha, a Democrat from Pennsylvania who is chairman of the appropriations subcommittee on defense, said Friday that the administration could lose a similar vote in the House. And in many eyes, the damage was done. The president looked cowed by a runaway Congress, which itself seemed panicked by the bloody images from Mogadishu.

"You have some overly-anxious, almost knee-jerk responses. People ought to stop and take a deep breath," said Sen. John F. Kerry. Sen. Sam Nunn, the Democrat from Georgia, had to urge his colleagues to "keep our wits about us." Sen. Patrick Leahy, the Democrat from Vermont, warned that "this is a prescription for international anarchy."

It was no coincidence, Kerry said, that congressional wavering in Somalia was followed closely by the appearance of an emboldened armed mob in Port-au-Prince, which forced U.S. peacekeeping forces to turn back from Haiti. "There is a lot more posturing going on, and the repercussions of that posturing can have a very big downside by creating perceptions of a lack of American steadfastness and purpose," Kerry said. "There is no question the thugs in Haiti were encouraged by the new Somali syndrome."

Nunn and other senators said that the U.S. public and its political leaders need to harden their hearts when confronted by bloody combat footage or images of starving children on CNN and other TV networks.

Owner wants to sell canyon land to city

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Robert Erkins envisions a day when people can walk through Devils Corral and watch herds of elk and antelope grazing in the Snake River Canyon.

He sees, too, the day when scout troops and religious groups could camp by the river in the lower section of the canyon.

"With a small amount of work you can really develop a small natural habitat," Erkins said Thursday in a telephone interview from his ranch in Bliss.

The Erkinses have tried to interest the city of Twin Falls in purchasing Devils Corral — the asking price could be more than $5 million — for a park.

"Devils Corral is located between Shoshone and Twin Falls on the north side of the Snake River Canyon. The city of Twin Falls in purchasing Devils Corral — the asking price could be more than $5 million — for a park.

'The purchase price of Devils Corral will be based on the value of the water and of the unique scenic value of the land.'

—Robert Erkins, in a letter to interested parties

"Here's an opportunity to build one of the magnificent parks" in the region, he said.

City Manager Tom Courtney agrees. He said Friday that the city should purchase Devils Corral.

"There's tremendous potential for a park," he said.

The city has contracted J-U-B Engineers to look over the site, he said. The City Council's primary interest in Devils Corral is as a water source, but a future park there could be better than Boise's park along the Boise River, Courtney said.

"Money is the critical issue," he said. The city and the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce are looking for possible maintain the state parks we have now," Peyton said. "Park acquisition ranks some where below that."

Yvonne S. Ferrell, director of the state Department of Parks and Recreation, said that her office has not been involved directly with the Erkinses' proposal.

The state legislature has provided little money for parks in the six years Ferrell has spent with the parks department, she said.

But Erkins maintained Thursday that he and his wife were "very interested in dealing with the city."

"We're not going to do anything until the city says 'yes' or 'no,'" he said.

Erkins approached Twin Falls first because Devils Corral ties in more closely with that city's commerce than with Jerome's, he said.

Jerome woman wins Fantastic Five jackpot

JEROME — A 65-year-old local woman won $60,751 in the Oct. 12 Fantastic Five drawing, Idaho Lottery, officials have announced.

The woman, identified only as Elva because she asked that her last name not be used, bought her winning ticket at Sagebrush Sam's in Jerome.

Elva and her husband, who have seven children and 36 grandchildren, say they will use part of the money to buy some land near Centerville, pay a trailer on it and use it as a getaway home for the whole family.

Twin Falls man named to state cemetery board

BOISE — Tom Harney of Twin Falls has been appointed to the newly created State Board of Cemeterians.

The board's duties are to examine applicants for cemetery licenses, and hold hearings and proceedings in connection with the suspension of licenses.

Harney is one of three members on the board. His term runs until May 1, 1995.

Jerome County Republicans set meeting for Thursday

JEROME — The Jerome County Republican Central Committee have scheduled a public meeting this Thursday.

The Republicans will elect a chairman and make plans for upcoming elections.

The meeting in the County Courthouse meeting room will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The public is welcome to attend.

Corps of Engineers may start collecting recreation user fees

WALLA WALLA, Wash. — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers district office in Walla Walla is deciding how to start collecting user fees at some of the recreation areas it operates in Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

The 1993 budget law authorized the Corps to charge fees of up to $3 a day per boatload for its beaches, picnic areas, boat-launching ramps and other recreation areas.

It also eliminated a previous requirement for free camping areas at Corps-operated campgrounds.

No fees will be charged at wayside overlooks, overlook areas, toilet facilities or general visitor information areas.

"We are currently looking at sites where the collection of fees makes sense in terms of the cost to collect fees versus the amount of anticipated income," said Phil Hixson, chief of the district's Natural Resources Management Branch.

Nationwide, the Corps receives $19 million a year from fees it already charges.

The new fees are expected to bring in an additional $18 million.

Health Department may manage juvenile center

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — While county leaders met in their annual conference last week, Twin Falls County Commissioners explored a proposal to contract juvenile probation and detention services with the state.

The idea would put services currently contracted through the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department into the hands of the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Steven L. Woodworth, regional director of health and welfare in Twin Falls, said that he would like to see a more unified juvenile justice system.

"What we have right now is a bumpy path," he said.

Woodworth said that responsibilities for juveniles are split between the county — which in many cases provides diversion programs and probation services — and the state, which manages detention.

"The department is trying to provide more services for juveniles," he said. "We just feel that we've reached a point where we can provide a more uniform system."

All of the counties in Northern Idaho's Region 2, except Latah County, currently contract with the state to provide both probation and detention services, Woodworth said.

It makes more sense and provides more services for about the same cost, he said.

Doug Rublatus, the senior probation officer for Twin Falls County's juveniles, said it might be more practical to give detention responsibilities to the sheriff's department.

"When Sheriff Munn was here they did detention," Rublatus said. "Then health and welfare stepped in and it was contracted that way."

Snow Bunny takes on McDonald's

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Undaunted by Ronald McDonald, a group of young entrepreneurs in the Wood River Valley are expanding their small chain of restaurants.

The Snow Bunny Drive-In is scheduled to open this weekend in Hailey, replacing the old Taco Time restaurant.

Canadian investor Jerry Bruck didn't want his Taco Time to compete with the oncoming McDonald's restaurant. So on Sept. 29 he sold his restaurant on Highway 75 to INN Corp., which owns the Snow Bunny.

"Actually, we're not too worried about McDonald's," said Andy Boylan, one of the co-owners of INN Corp. "We're different from them because we have different burgers and we cook them fresh, and we have more kinds of shakes, and we're also getting pizza and a salad bar."

The new Snow Bunny location, on the highway near the airport, should get traffic from locals and tourists heading to Ketchum and Sun Valley, Boylan said.

McDonald's is scheduled to open by the end of the month on the north side of Hailey.

INN Corp.'s owners are already familiar with the restaurant business in the Wood River Valley. The company also owns the first Snow Bunny restaurant, the Alpine Family Restaurant in Bellevue, and the Wrangler Drive-In in Fairfield.

"We like this area up here. It's been working out for us and we're having a good time," Boylan said.

INN Corp. has no further expansion plans now, he said.

In the meantime, the Snow Bunny will offer its "Road Kill-Burger" — with ham, American and Swiss cheese, and a butter-milk bun — and 12 flavors of milk shakes to compete with menu items like the Big Mac and Happy Meal of McDonald's.

When is Halloween in 1993?

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Used to be kids went trick-or-treating on Halloween, which falls on Oct. 31.

But twice every eleven years or so, and 1993 is one of those years, Oct. 31 is a Sunday.

And Sunday night, some civic leaders said, isn't a time for kids to be trick-or-treating.

Twin Falls attorney Monte B. Carlson — who is also the state president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — said Friday that he always assumed Halloween would be celebrated a night earlier this year.

"This isn't brand-new," Carlson said. "I am going to suggest to the six bishops under me that the kids go trick-or-treating on Saturday," he said.

The Jerome Chamber of Commerce is telling residents in its newsletter that churches, schools, and civic organizations are making an effort to hold Halloween activities on Saturday instead of Sunday.

Jerome's Optimists Club, which holds a "spook-alley" for kids aged 12 and under to gather and celebrate Halloween, is one such organization, he said.

Vice President Steve Allison said the spook-alley will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 30 at the Messerschmidt building at the fairgrounds.

"Sunday's a rest day for most people," Allison said.

Some city leaders are more reluctant to handle the hot pumpkin issue.

Opponents not ready to concede race to Echohawk

With only 13 months to go till the governor's election, a lot of pundits and politicians have all but anointed Attorney General Larry Echohawk as the man to beat.

But Echohawk will have to beat state Sen. John Peavey of Carey and former state Sen. Ron Beiteltspacher of Grandeville, and defeat the eventual Republican nominee before he can start choosing drapes for the governor's office.

Peavey and Beiteltspacher have already identified three issues on which to hammer the attorney general for the next seven months: abortion, public-school funding and the environment.

After Mike Burkett decided two weeks ago that he really wanted to run for attorney general, not governor, Peavey and Bei-teltspacher lost no time in aiming some test shots at Echohawk's way.

Both men are staunchly pro-choice, while Echohawk has made no secret of his pro-life views. He's tried to downplay abortion as an issue, though, saying Idaho law is already about as restrictive as the U.S. Supreme Court will allow, and noting that he supported Gov. Cecil Andrus' veto of the highly restrictive House Bill 625 in 1991.

But the acid test on abortion isn't 625 anymore. If two bills — one liberalizing abortion and another further restricting it — come across Gov. Echohawk's desk, which one will he sign?

Peavey and Beiteltspacher also will hit Echohawk for his office's representation of the GOP-run Legislature in the school-funding suit. Peavey was particularly derisive about the counterclaim drafted by Echohawk's office — which, among other things, says school districts pay their teachers and administrators too much, don't charge students enough to play football, and don't charge for parking.

"The people who really, really care about the school issue are going to realize that the language the attorney general drafted for Debbe Falconburg's cat's misfortune with a leg trap has prompted Jerome officials to look for laws governing traps in the city.

Trap that catches cat points to hole in state laws

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Debbe Falconburg's pet cat didn't come home one night last week.

It couldn't. It spent the night in some bushes, with one paw caught in a leg-hold trap.

"Little Bit hadn't come home all night," Falconburg said. When she took her kids to school in the morning she called for the cat one more time and heard her meowing.

"I could see her in the bushes, but she wouldn't come to me," she said. "So I asked a little boy to crawl into the bushes and see what was wrong."

Falconburg said she had a hard time untangling the chain and getting the trap and her cat out of the bushes.

Little Bit's front paw was almost severed by the jaws of the trap, she said. She took the 9-month-old cat to a veterinarian and then called the police.

But the police didn't know if there is a law against setting a trap in Jerome, she said.

"My vet thought Little Bit might lose that paw, but the circulation is real good and it looks like it will be all right," Falconburg said.

The incident has city officials scrambling to determine what city law has been broken by whoever set the trap.

Draw DeSilver On politics

DeSilver lost no time in aiming some test shots at Echohawk's way.

Both men are staunchly pro-choice, while Echohawk has made no secret of his pro-life views. "The people who really, really care about the school issue are going to realize that the language the attorney general drafted for that counterclaim was not very helpful," Peavey said.

As for the environment, both Peavey and Beiteltspacher are seen as closer to the Democratic Party's "green" wing than Echohawk. However, Echohawk could win points with environmentalists if, as many expect, he comes out against Andrus' plan for building a state-owned bombing range in Owyhee County.

Republicans are wasting no time in formulating a "beat Echohawk" strategy. A recent fund-raising letter does everything to link Echohawk to President Clinton except turn photos of them jogging together.

Washington, Oct. 15 — Here are the votes of senators and representatives on major legislation in Congress this week. A "Y" means the member voted for the measure; an "N" means the member voted against the measure; a "?" means that a member did not vote; an "O" means no longer a member; and a "P" means the member voted present. There are no Senate votes this week.

HOUSE VOTES:
1) BILL NUMBER: H.R. 2351
The House voted 281-151 to reject an amendment that would have cut funding for the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for Humanities, and the Institute for Museum Services by 40 percent. Supporters of the amendment argued that the federal government spends too much money subsidizing art. The House eventually voted to extend the funding after defeating the amendment. A "yes" vote is for passing the amendment and cutting the funding.

Mega-resorts may affect Reno

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Local casino operators say they're upbeat about the future, despite growing competition from Las Vegas and its string of new mega-resorts.

"I don't think the Luxor will hurt us," Sands Regency Hotel Casino general manager Bruce Dewing said, referring to Friday's opening of the $266-million, $375 million resort. "I think you'll see people go down there once—I don't think you'll convert a Reno customer to a Las Vegas customer."

The reason, he said, is that tourists who come to northern Nevada select the area because they see it as smaller and more relaxed than Las Vegas.

But other local casino officials acknowledge it's going to be tough to compete against Las Vegas, and Reno must improve to keep the tourists coming.

The Egyptian-themed Luxor was only the first of three mega-resorts slated to open in Las Vegas over the next nine weeks. The 2,900-room, $430 million Treasure Island resort will open Wednesday and the $1 billion, 5,009-room MGM Grand Hotel Theme Park is scheduled to open Dec. 18. The latter will be the world's largest hotel.

"We're finding we're losing Canadians to Vegas, especially the more affluent ones," said Pete Claudianos III, marketing director at the Sands Regency.

"We go up to Canada. The younger (tourists) are getting on the planes to Vegas and the older ones are getting on the planes to Reno."

5 die in 2-vehicle collision in Utah

ROOSEVELT, Utah (AP) — Five people were killed when two cars collided on a two-lane road in critical condition Sunday.

Utah Highway Patrol Trooper Carlos Reed said the accident early Saturday was the "worst I have come upon in many, many years."

Authorities had to pry open both cars to get four bodies from the wreckage because the impact was so severe, he said.

Killed were Linwood Sireech, 48, and his daughter Suzette, 24, both of Myton; Wanda Martinez, 26, Roosevelt; Rozalia H. Kent, 57, Salt Lake City; and Adrian Cesspooch, 49, Randeville.

The survivor of the crash, Arthur Chavez, 32, Salt Lake City, was in critical condition at University Hospital, according to a nursing supervisor.

None of the victims was wearing a seat belt. Kent and Cesspooch had left the Hilltop Lounge and were enroute on State Road 40 near the Uintah and Ouray Indian Reservation, about six miles east of Roosevelt, about 2:15 a.m. Saturday.

Kent, who was driving a Cadillac, crossed the center line and struck the westbound Oldsmobile driven by Martinez, according to police reports.

Park

Continued from A4 both the land and the water rights, he said.

But Erkins has considered splitting the offer — the city would get the water rights and The Nature Conservancy or another preservation group would get the land.

Guy Bonnavier, state director of the conservancy in Ketchum, was unavailable for comment.

Devils Creek Corral has an average flow of 48 cubic feet per second. The first 28 cfs — 20,440 acre-feet per year — can be sold for consumption, such as drinking water or irrigation, Erkins said.

One cubic foot per second equals 449 gallons per minute.

In a Sept. 14 letter to Courtney, Erkins said the water could generate an estimated $90,000 to $120,000 worth of electricity annually before being sold for some other use.

Erkins said that water rights near Milner Dam have been valued at $7 per year per acre-foot — the amount of water needed to cover an acre of land 1 foot deep.

"A Devils Corral that would be $150,000 for one year!" Erkins said. He said that with 6 percent interest, the value of lifetime water rights would approach $5 million.

But hydroelectric development at Devils Corral might preclude a public park, Ferrell said that the park idea could only work if the water rights were not sold for commercial hydropower.

"If the water is used commercially, a park would not be viable," she said.

State Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, who has fought the Erkins in the past over water rights at Devils Corral, said Thursday that he still is wary of any preservation deal.

"(Erkins') sincerity can be measured by his price," Noh said.

Erkins has said that if it is unable to sell it for a park, he would sell it to a real estate developer. But preservation of Devils Corral is still his top priority, he said.

"It's just like when we put Malad Gorge together," he said.

In the early 1970s, Erkins was president of the Magic Valley Recreation Council, a nonprofit organization whose goals were the promotion and preservation of public parks.

With the help of Erkins and federal matching funds, the state purchased the 652 acres which now is Malad Gorge State Park.

The Erkins bought Devils Corral in 1970 and said they have not developed the land since. In 1981, they obtained an exclusive water right to the 48 cfs at Devils Corral from the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

Erkins said that the time has come to do at Devils Corral what he did at Malad Gorge.

TWIN FALLS — Ramah M. Sharp, 79, of Twin Falls, died Friday, Oct. 15, 1993 at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center following a brief illness.
She was born May 26, 1914 in Osgood, Mo., where she attended schools in both Osgood and Galt. On Oct. 20, 1921 she was married to Franklin Sharp in Trenton, Mo. In 1937 they moved to Idaho, farming for 47 years in Twin Falls and Hansen.
She was a member of the First Christian Church of Twin Falls, and was a past member of the Emancipator Club, the Button Club and the Knoll Grange. Her interests were antiques, buttons and needlework. She served as a judge of antiques at the Twin Falls County Fair and co-chaired the organization of a new building for the fairgrounds. She is survived by her son Donald F. Sharp, a daughter Patsy J. Thornequist and son-in-law William Thornequist, all of Twin Falls; four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her husband, Franklin, in 1984 and a brother.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 20, 1993 at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, with Rev. Rick Bender of the Twin Falls First Christian Church officiating. The family suggests memorials be given to the First Christian Church Memorial Fund. The family will receive friends from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday to sign the book.

Commission Chairman Jim Fraley

said that the commissioners are talking with the state in an attempt to centralize control over the new juvenile lockup, which should be operational next September.

"We're doing this so the kids would be working with the same players throughout," Fraley said. "We want to get off on the right foot with the managers," Commissioner Norma Blass said. Groundbreaking at the site in the city's industrial park is scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday.

tion" on an acceptable trick-or-treating date. "I don't know who should make that decision," Just said.

It won't be the Twin Falls County Commissioners.

Race

Continued from A4 to Idaho," state GOP Chairman Randy Smith says in the letter. After claiming Clinton's budget package will "stifle" the middle class, farmers and ranchers; and small business, Smith asks, "portentously," "What would EchoHawk's budget do?"

He also implies that Gov. EchoHawk would create a vast, state-run health-care bureaucracy and impose more unfunded mandates on cities and counties (a favorite trick by the way, of the GOP in Legislatures).

While EchoHawk and his rivals in both parties grid themselves for a grueling campaign, it might be instructive to look at recent Idaho attorneys general who've run for higher office.

It isn't a very pretty picture — particularly for a post often touted as a stepping-stone.

Jim Jones (1983-1990) lost the GOP Senate nomination to Larry Craig. David Leroy (1979-1982) was elected lieutenant governor but narrowly lost his 1986 bid for governor to Andrus; he resigned as U.S. nuclear waste negotiator earlier this year. Wayne Kidwell (1975-1978) passed up a run for governor, lost a GOP House primary to Craig in 1980, and quit as Boise County prosecutor earlier this year after only a few months on the job. And Tony Park (1971-1974) lost a Democratic Senate primary in 1972 and then was defeated for re-election by Kidwell.

In fact, the only attorneys general in recent memory who've gone on to bigger and better things were Robert Smylie (governor from 1955 to 1966) and Allan G. Shepard (Idaho Supreme Court justice from 1969 to 1989).

Cat

Continued from A4 "It's a Fish and Game ordinance," Police Chief James Dahl said. "Basically you can't set them to trap animals without the trap being marked. You can use a cage type, where the door closes and doesn't clamp down around an animal," he said.

But if an animal is injured, police would prosecute for cruelty to animals, Dahl said.

"We're in the process of going through the city ordinances to see what needs to be fixed," he said.

Steve Agate, Fish and Game Conservation Officer, said there was no ordinance against trapping in Idaho. "All laws we have basically try to protect animals. Trappers have to have their name tag attached to each trap or the new system is to stamp an ID number on the traps," Agate said.

Traps set must be checked by the trappers every 72 hours, he said.

If a trap is found without a tag, "we stake it out and hope the trapper comes in 72 hours, or we pull the trap and leave a note for the owner to come and talk to us," he said.

Homes rise out of the ashes

Oakland family moves back to hills 2 years after fire

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — On the day Barbara McFadden moved into her rebuilt Oakland Hills home, birds sang, the sun shone and wisps of cotton wool fog drifted above the sparkling waters of San Francisco Bay.

But what really caught her eyes were the slender redwood columns outlining her back yard.

"Did you see my fence? It's gorgeous," she said excitedly as she waited for the moving truck to nuzzle up the narrow street.

The usual tribulations of moving day somewhat dimmed the joy of returning to her lovingly reconstructed home after two years of fire-imposed exile.

But she still was happy to be back. "It's just wonderful. Wonderful. I am really thrilled," she said. "Up until now, I have just dealt with all the nightmares."

The nightmare began Oct. 21, 1991, the day wildfire raced through the wooded canyons in the hills above Oakland and Berkeley. By the time the flames were extinguished, 25 people were dead and nearly 3,000 dwellings had been damaged or destroyed. Damage was estimated at $1.5 billion.

Two years later, permits had been issued to rebuild more than half the homes burned down, and 378 have been finished.

A $9 million bond issue was passed by voters in June 1992 to boost emergency preparedness, and a special tax district was approved in April to raise $1.9 million a year for fire prevention programs in the hills.

Hillside roads still are narrow and winding, but city officials have funds to widen two of the worst, where dangerous traffic jams built up in the flight from the 1991 fire. The city is considering parking restrictions to improve traffic flow.

The cause of the fire — or rather that of the Oct. 20 grass fire that rekindled into the conflagration — never was determined.

Could it happen again? Fire Capt. Don Parker says the answer is no, at least for the already burned areas, where the drought-parched brush that fueled the wildfire is just a scorched memory.

But the same can't be said for the miles of hills surrounding the San Francisco Bay that didn't burn.

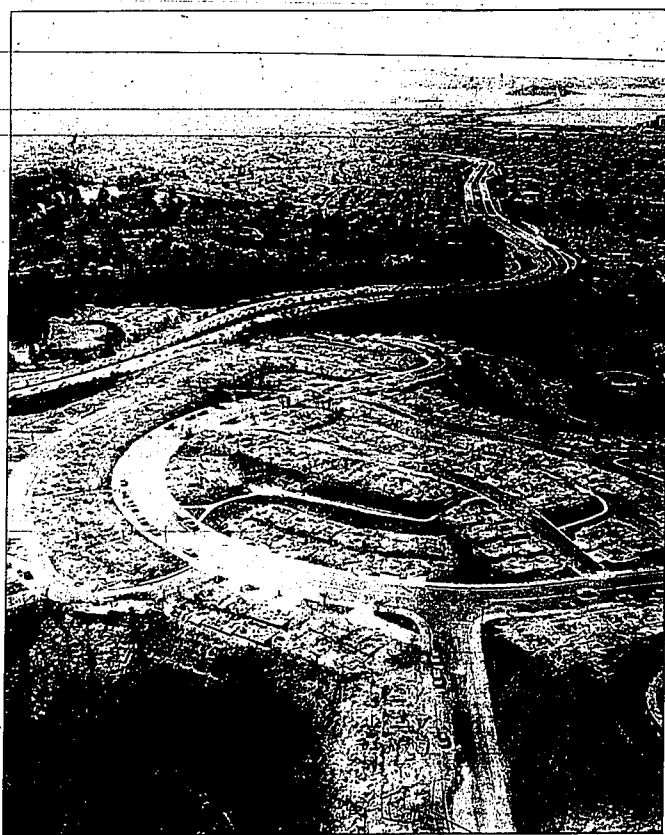

Of 25,000 parcels of land inspected in the hills this summer, 6,000 remain in violation of brush management policies, Parker said.

The city plans to slap a lien on property that is not brought into compliance.

While the larger battles continue, the immediate project, rebuilding the burned-out hills, is expected to be three-fourths completed by next June, said Maurs Smith, assistant to the city manager.

For her part, Barbara McFadden worries about the bigger houses that have been built on some of the burned-out sites.

"In another disaster, instead of having one car coming out of these hills

Charred ground, rubble and chimneys were all that stood Oct. 23, 1991, in the aftermath of the Oakland, Calif., hills fire that burned 2,000 families out of their homes.

per household, we'll be having two or three," she said.

From the beginning, the McFaddens knew they would be back, although they didn't know just how much trouble would be involved.

First, there were the myriad inconveniences of trying to reconstruct legal and financial records. Next came mountains of paperwork as they waded through insurance claims and the permit process.

A month after the fire, the McFaddens thought they'd be back in their house within 12 months. A year later, they knew better.

Last month, it finally happened, with the move back to the comfortable English-style Tudor, rebuilt almost exactly the way it was.

Inside the house, except for the smell of paint and the gleam of freshly finished hardwood floors, Barbara McFadden can almost imagine nothing has changed. But a glance through the window breaks the spell.

Hills that once lay silent under the discreet cover of spreading trees now resound with the thumps, and buzzes and whines of construction. Some lots remain barren patches of grass, while others sport yellow-timbered houses in various states of undress.

The hills weren't the only things to change.

"We're different people now than we were two years ago," said her husband, Chuck McFadden. "We're technically a lot more sophisticated about insurance and building, but beyond that we're tougher and more resilient than we were two years ago. I think that's probably true of everyone who went through the fire."

whatever you have to do to silence the person," Toscano said. "Any stated policies are just subterfuge."

Toscano was excommunicated for apostasy and violating the rule and order of the church.

He plans to appeal. The leaders' statement quoted church founder Joseph Smith to say that when a man condemns others while claiming to be righteous, he is on the high road to apostasy.

LDS leaders back responsibility to church doctrine

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The top leaders of the Mormon Church issued a rare statement affirming their position on church discipline Sunday, a response to widespread publicity about a spate of excommunications.

Five intellectuals and feminists were excommunicated and another was disfellowshipped last month, and Prophet Ezra Taft Benson's grandson, cartoonist Steve Benson, resigned from the church in protest a week ago.

The statement, issued by the First Presidency and the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said the leaders "deeply regret the loss of Church membership on the part of anyone. The attendant consequences felt over time by the individuals and their families are very real."

However, the statement said, "We have the responsibility to preserve the doctrinal purity of the church."

"The general and local officers of the Church will continue to do their duty, and faithful church members will understand."

Paul Toscano, a Salt Lake lawyer who was among the five excommunicated in September, called Sunday's statement dishonest.

"It is essentially disinformation ... to put out a statement to say 'we have a policy,' when in fact the policy of spoken rules is undermined by a whole cluster of unspoken rules," Toscano said.

"Once a person is targeted as a dissembler or critic and leaders are fed up with the criticism, the rule is 'do

Health care costs help Boise hospitals

BOISE (AP) — As health-care costs in Idaho escalate, Boise's two big hospitals are growing and becoming more profitable.

In the past four years, profits at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center have risen 81 percent, according to federal tax records. Across town at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center, the increase was 61 percent.

Both have multimillion-dollar expansions under way. Some Boiseans are concerned the two hospitals' drive to buy equipment and build is helping fuel the increase in health-care costs.

"This is insanity," said Merle Parsley, manager of the Idaho State Insurance Fund. "It's outrageous, and the public isn't going to stand for it much more."

Presidents at both hospitals argue they spend their money wisely. As nonprofit facilities, both are required to pour the money they make back into their respective hospitals.

At St. Luke's, President Ed Dahlberg said his hospital serves many more patients and offers more needed services than it did a few years ago.

For the past three years, Idaho's health-care costs, including physician and hospital bills, have risen at a faster pace than the national average. For example, in 1991, health care costs rose 8.6 percent nationwide, but almost 12 percent in Boise.

Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus highlighted the issue last week when he refused to sign off on $40 million in tax-free, low-interest bonds for St. Al's. The governor will make a final decision after a public hearing Oct. 26.

Andrus suggests hospitals might consider using some of their growing revenues to reduce the amount of money they charge patients.

Utility meters encourage electricity conservation

SPOKANE (AP) — An electric cooperative is promoting a new meter to help users monitor and control electricity use.

Forty-four customers have had PowerStat meters installed since Inland Power & Light Co. began offering the devices a few months ago. Spokeswoman Suzy Johnson said utility officials hope to have 100 installed by the end of the year and 2,000 in five years.

Co-op members with the meters receive cards, each encoded with an account number and an amount of pre-purchased electricity the member has chosen.

When the card is inserted into the meter, the amount of power the customer has purchased is added to whatever balance remains in the meter.

When the balance falls to three days average use, a light in the meter begins blinking so the customer knows it's time to pre-purchase more electricity.

When the balance drops to an hour of power, the meter emits a chirping sound. When it reaches zero, electricity is shut off.

The utility suggests that customers buy a backup card with a small amount of power for use in emergencies. The meters prevent customers from falling behind on paying bills and encourage conservation, Johnson said.

Hatch holds 8-point lead over opponent

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch holds an 8 percentage point lead over his nearest possible contender for the U.S. Senate in 1994, according to a new poll.

Some 48 percent of Utahns surveyed for the Deseret News-KSL-TV poll said they would vote for or were leaning toward Hatch, while 40 percent said the same about Democrat U.S. Rep. Bill Orton.

Dan Jones & Associates surveyed 605 Utahns Oct. 5-6. The poll had a margin of error of 4 percent.

Two percent of those surveyed mentioned someone else and 10 percent didn't know.

Hatch plans to seek a fourth six-year term in the Senate.

Phillies hang on, take Game 2

The Associated Press

TORONTO — The plan paid off — barely. The Philadelphia Phillies patiently waited out Dave Stewart, then sweated out Mitch Williams for a 6-4 victory Sunday night that tied the World Series at one game each.

Jim Eisenreich hit a three-run homer after a pair of walks and Lenny Dykstra later homered in putting Philadelphia ahead. But, as usual, Williams and the Phillies made it tough on themselves.

Williams, who got a big break when Roberto Alomar made a bone-headed play on the bases in the eighth, walked the leadoff batter in the ninth. Kim Batisse, a defensive replacement who made two errors at third base in the playoffs, nearly threw away another ball before Pat Borders grounded into a neat double play to end it.

"It's been happening all year. That's the way he is," Eisenreich said. "He's not 'The Wild Thing' for nothing. Of course we're nervous.

"He gets the job done," he said. "He's blown a couple, but we haven't played good defense."

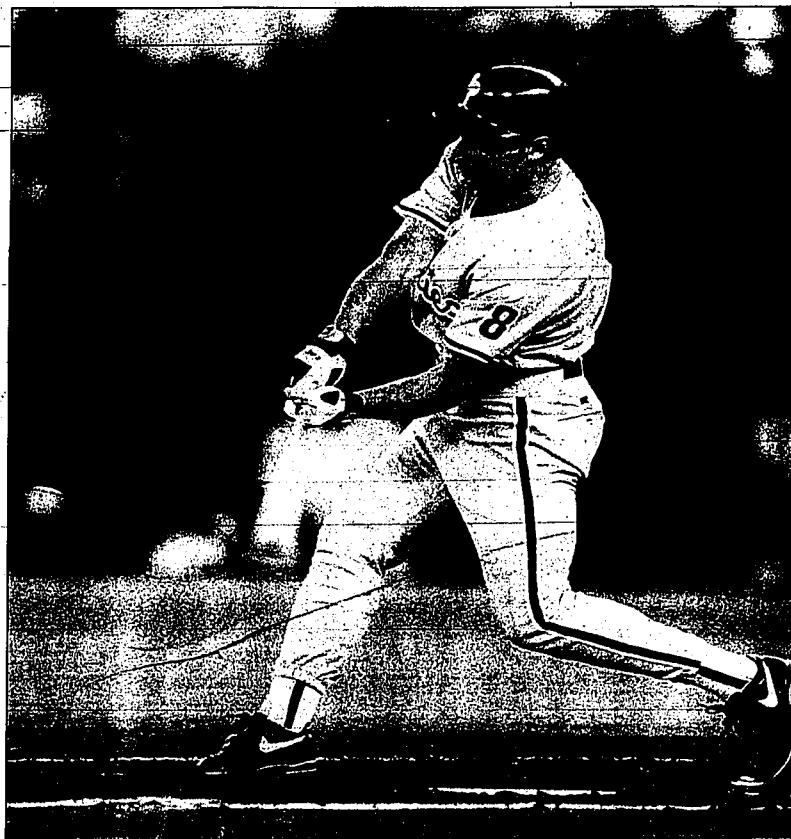

The split sent the series to Veterans Stadium, where the Phillies could have a big edge starting Tuesday night when Danny Jackson faces Toronto's Pat Hentgen.

The Blue Jays lose their designated hitter for the next three games, meaning Paul Molitor must either be moved — perhaps sending AL batting champion John Olerud to the bench — or become a pinch hitter.

"It was just a big win," Dykstra said. "Toronto is a great ball club. This team over here in Philadelphia has all the heart and all the character you could ask for."

Terry Mulholland, coming off a loss in his lone start in the NL playoffs, held off the Blue Jays for 5 2-3 innings, surviving a two-run homer by Joe Carter.

Williams had two wins in the playoffs and pitched 1 2-3 innings for a save. Please see PHILLIES/A8

Philadelphia's Jim Eisenreich swatted a three-run homer in the third inning Sunday to help the Phillies even the series with the Toronto Blue Jays at one game apiece. The Phillies won Game 2, 6-4.

Filer favored in A-3 District 4 tournament

WENDELL — The Filer Wildcats look to extend their Canyon Conference volleyball championship into a trip to the state Class A-3 tournament with the start of the District 4 event at Wendell High School today.

Filer, 11-1 in league play, gets a first-round bye and opens against the Kimberly (6-6) Wendell (4-8) winner at 7 p.m. The Bulldogs and Trojans open the tourney at 4 p.m.

Valley (10-2) is seeded second and takes on 1-11 Glenns Ferry at 6 p.m. Third-place and state two-time-defending champion Gooding (8-4) meets Declo (2-10) at 5 p.m. Those winners play at 8 p.m.

The tournament continues Tuesday and finishes with the title match at 7 p.m. Wednesday. The district winner advances to state. The runner up goes to a playoff with a District 3 team at Mountain Home Saturday.

The JV tournament will be at 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. Wednesday. Gooding (12-0) is seeded first. Filer, Valley and Declo finished in a tie for second at 8-4.

Hagerman, Shoshone picked to duel for volleyball crown

HANSEN — District 4 Class A-4 will tab its state volleyball tournament representatives at Hansen High School Thursday.

First, the Northside and Southside sub-districts will whittle their numbers down to two teams each today and Tuesday.

The Southside matches will also be played at Hansen beginning at 2 p.m. today. Hagerman, undefeated in 10 matches during the regular season, is favored to repeat as champion, as is Shoshone on the Northside.

Murtaugh (3-7) and Castleford (2-8) open at 2 p.m. with the winner meeting Hagerman at 4:15 p.m. Raff River (7-3) takes on 1-9 Hansen at 3 p.m. with the winner facing 7-3 Oakley at 5:30 p.m.

The championship match is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Northside tournament action also begins at 2 p.m. today. Shoshone, with a first-round bye, begins defense of its league championship at about 5:30 p.m. The title match will start about 8 p.m. Tuesday.

The district playoffs Thursday brings together the top two teams from each sub-district starting at 6 p.m.

Donated '61 Yankees baseball stolen before charity auction

MONROE, Wash. — A baseball signed by Mickey Vernon, Roger Maris and the rest of the 1961 New York Yankees was one of the best chances for the Big Brothers-Big Sisters Snohomish County chapter to raise money this year.

Some said the ball might bring as much as $2,000 at the charity's annual auction. Now it won't bring the group a cent. It was stolen Friday night, along with about a third of the items donated for the auction the next day.

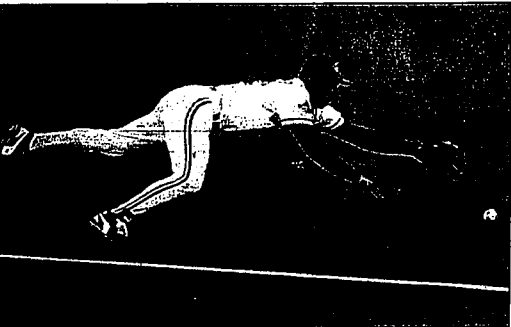

Karen Crowley, the group's community relations manager, said the group had hoped to raise $30,000 from the auction.

Gloves grab some glory with postseason heroics

The Associated Press

TORONTO — In the pressure of the World Series, greats gloves stand out as much as big bats.

For all the famous home runs by Bill Mazeroski, Carlton Fisk, Reggie Jackson and Kirk Gibson, there have been the game-saving grabs of Al Giofriddo, Willie Mays, Sandy Amoros and Ron Soboda.

"It may be overlooked, but you have to play good defense to win," Roberto Alomar said following Toronto's 8-5 victory over Philadelphia in Saturday night Series opener. "When you make good plays like those tonight, the hitter gets upset and his team gets frustrated."

Last year, Blue Jays teammate Devon White helped stifle the Atlanta Braves in Game 3 when he dashed across center field to make a leaping, back-handed catch of David Justice's drive to the 400-foot sign with two men on.

Alomar's plays weren't quite as spectacular. Perhaps people who watch the Blue Jays regularly are too used to his range.

"I'm sure they're over there shaking their heads," Toronto's Paul Molitor said. "Even when you see him every day, you shake your head. The guy is that good."

In the fifth inning, Alomar sprinted to nearly the right-field line to catch Len Dykstra's soft floater, which seemed destined to land for a single or double. Alomar ran and ran, slid across the plastic green carpet of SkyDome, stuck his glove out and the ball plopped in.

Seminoles on top; Tide drops

The Associated Press

Florida State and Notre Dame are heading toward a 1-2 showdown in college football.

Thanks to Alabama's 17-17 tie with Tennessee, Notre Dame moved up to No. 2 in Sunday's Associated Press media poll. The Fighting Irish meet No. 1 Florida State in South Bend, Ind., on Nov. 13.

If they maintain their rankings until then, it will be the first regular-season matchup between the top two teams since No. 2 Miami beat No. 1 Florida State 17-16 on Nov. 16, 1991. Second-ranked Alabama defeated No. 1 Miami 34-13 in the 1993 Sugar Bowl.

Florida State has been No. 1 all season, but the Seminoles were a unanimous pick for the first time Sunday. They received all 62 first-place votes after downing previously unbeaten Virginia 40-14.

Notre Dame rose one spot after beating BYU 45-20, and Ohio State climbed two places to No. 3 following a 28-21 victory over Michigan State.

Alabama fell from No. 2 to No. 4 after Tennessee halted the Tide's 28-game winning streak. Nebraska rose one notch to No. 5 after beating Kansas State 45-28, while Miami jumped two spots to No. 6, and Arizona moved up four places to No. 7 with a 27-24 win over Stanford.

AP Associated Press
TOP 25

Tennessee went from No. 10 to No. 8, and Florida fell five places to No. 9 after losing 38-35 to Auburn, which jumped nine spots to No. 10.

Texas A&M is 11th, followed by North Carolina, Michigan, Penn State, Wisconsin, Colorado, Oklahoma, West Virginia, UCLA, Louisville, Virginia, Washington, Syracuse, Michigan State and Washington State.

Michigan rose five places to No. 13 with a 21-13 win over Penn State, which dropped seven spots to No. 14.

Colorado's 27-10 victory over Oklahoma also had a big impact on the rankings, boosting the Buffaloes four notches to No. 16 and plunging the Sooners eight places to No. 17.

Virginia fell six spots to No. 21, and Washington fell 10 places to No. 22 after losing to UCLA 39-25.

Washington State broke into the Top 25 by beating California 34-7. Cal. No. 21 last week, dropped out of the rankings.

Chris Webber signs $74.4 million deal with Warriors

Knight-Ridder News Service

MORAGA, Calif. — It took a little longer than expected, but No. 1 pick Chris Webber is finally a Golden State Warrior after reaching agreement on a 15-year, $74.4 million contract, the Warriors announced Sunday.

That gives the 6-foot-9 forward-center an average annual salary of $4.96 million, third behind the Philadelphia 76ers' Shawn Bradley and the Orlando Magic's Anfernee Hardaway among this year's draft picks.

However, Webber's deal also includes an escalator clause that takes into account inflation over the next 15 years and could thereby boost his contract's value to $95 million. It's not known if Bradley and Hardaway have similar clauses in their contracts.

For the Warriors, the bigger questions now concern if and when Webber will develop into the panacea for a team that has looked even worse in its first two exhibitions than last season's injury-riddled squad appeared while compiling a 34-48 mark. Webber, who underwent an appendectomy almost two weeks ago, isn't expected to begin light workouts until the end of this week.

"I'm excited that he's coming," Warriors Coach Don Nelson said. "Obviously we need him. We need him to play right away at a young age. ... We need him to be dominant."

Warriors co-captain Tim Hardaway said he's "happy" that Webber signed, but that the team shouldn't look to either him or Mullin to solve their problems.

"The team doesn't need a boost, the team needs to get its own but in gear," Hardaway said. "Webber could do the same thing. He could drop into the same way we're playing. We've got to pick ourselves up first."

Jay Haas wins Texas Open playoff

SAN ANTONIO — Jay Haas, who birdied the last hole of regulation to force a playoff, snafu a 10-foot birdie putt on the second extra hole Sunday to beat Bob Lohr and win the $1 million Texas Open. Haas birdied both playoff holes for his ninth victory during 17 seasons on the PGA Tour. Haas, who won this tournament in 1982, earned $183,802. That pushed his winnings for the year to $383,832, just about clinching a spot in the season-ending Tour Championship.

Mochrie shoots par for victory

NAPLES, Fla. — Dottie Mochrie shot par-72 Sunday for a two-shot victory in the World Championship of Women's Golf. It was the first victory of the year for Mochrie, who won four times in 1992 and was named LPGA Player of the Year. Mochrie's four-day total of 5-under-par 283 at the

Americans clinch Dunhill Cup

ST ANDREWS, Scotland — After winning the Ryder Cup for nothing, the United States triumphed three weeks later in another team golf tournament. This time the payoff was $450,000. The American team of John Daly, Fred Couples and Payne Stewart edged defending champion England on Sunday to win the $1.5 million Dunhill Cup. Although Stewart shot a 74 to lose by four shots to Mark James, Couples carded a 68 to edge Nick Faldo by a stroke. Daly bet Peter Baker 70-7.

Montana, Allen boost KC over San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Kansas City's old timers were too much for San Diego's rookies on Sunday.

The Chargers, seemingly given new life by two rookies, found out what it's like to give Joe Montana and Marcus Allen too many chances. Montana directed a nine-play, 80-yard drive that Allen capped with a 37-yard run in the fourth quarter to beat the Chargers 17-14 Sunday.

The Chiefs (5-1), off to their best start since 1971, won their fourth straight and handed San Diego (2-4) its third straight loss. Eleven of the last 16 games in this AFC West series have been decided by a TD or less, and the Chiefs have beaten San Diego in seven straight regular-season games.

San Diego had gone ahead 14-10 on John Friesz's 4-yard pass to Anthony Miller 1:05 into the fourth quarter, set up by rookie Darrien Gordon's 54-yard punt return.

But Neil Smith blocked two field goal attempts by John Carney, including a 31-yard try with 3:28 left to give the Chiefs the ball at their 20. Smith also blocked a 46-yard attempt by Carney in the third period.

The Chiefs got an immediate boost after the second block when Montana completed a 22-yard pass to Keith Cash. Shawn Lee called for roughing Montana, taking the Chiefs to the San Diego 43.

After three straight incompletions, Montana hit Willie Davis on a 12-yard pass on fourth-and-10, then threw another 12-yarder to Hassan Jones. Allen took a delayed handoff, cut outside and ran 18 yards to the 1, then scored his second TD of the game and 103rd of his career.

Trailing 10-7 and repeatedly hurting itself with penalties, the Chargers got a spark from Gordon. The rookie comebacker from Stanford pulled in Bryan Barker's punt at the San Diego 43, slipped a tackle, worked his way inside and was pulled down by former Charger Martin Bayless at the Chiefs' 3.

Miller got free in the right flat and he-made it into the end zone ahead of Albert Lewis for the Chargers' first lead.

Montana then moved Kansas City 66 yards to the San Diego 17, and Nick Lowery's 35-yard field goal attempt bounced off the left upright.

Montana, back after missing one game with a strained hamstring, was 21-for-39 for 284 yards, including a 15-yard TD pass to Allen in the first quarter. He also threw his first interception of the season. Allen gained 46 yards on 13 carries.

Friesz, making his second start in place of Stan Humphries, completed 18 of 35 passes for 218 yards, with one score and one interception.

Cowboys gun down Niners

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Nine months after the Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers, nothing has changed.

The Cowboys, who beat the 49ers 30-20 last January and then won the Super Bowl, made the big plays in the second half Sunday for a 26-17 victory over San Francisco.

Michael Irvin caught a career-high 12 passes for 168 yards, including a 16-yard scoring pass from Troy Aikman, and Eddie Murray kicked four field goals as Dallas advanced to 4-2. The 49ers dropped to 3-3.

"It was as big a game as they get," Irvin said. "We were in a hole with two early losses. We had to win it."

Dallas broke open the NFC title game in Candlestick Park with 13 points in the fourth period and dominated the last 15 minutes on Sunday against the 49ers.

"I figured the same would be won in the fourth quarter," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "We came from behind three times. It says something about our team."

Owens Jerry Jones said it best about Irvin after the game. "Michael is the kind of guy you want with you in a back alley."

Murray kicked field goals of 48, 39, and 29 yards as Dallas took a 16-14 lead at halftime.

Irvin made a juggling catch of Aikman's pass for the touchdown after the 49ers took a 17-16 lead in the third period on a 12-yard pass from Steve Young to Brent Jones to cap a five-play, 80-yard drive.

Irvin said offensive coordinator Norv Turner "is a genius. The game he called was something. We just kept throwing the short passes and taking what the 49ers gave us. We didn't get frustrated."

Young said before the game: "We want to reclaim what we lost in January," and if not or the Cowboys' big-play artists, they might have.

But they botched a field goal attempt when Ralph Tamm's snap was miscalculated by holder Klaus Wilmsmeyer. The Cowboys then produced Murray's fourth field goal, an 18-yarder to put the game away.

"That was a game we let get away from us," said Young. "We got from almost getting a touchdown to no field goal, then losing the game. We've got to fight our way out of it somehow. We still have a good team."

New York wins NFC East battle

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Dan Reeves' New York Giants are far real.

If there are newsmakers after Sunday, just consider two facts: The Giants (5-1) are in first place in the NFC East six games into the season, and they got there by performing what for them is a near miracle, beating the Philadelphia Eagles 21-10.

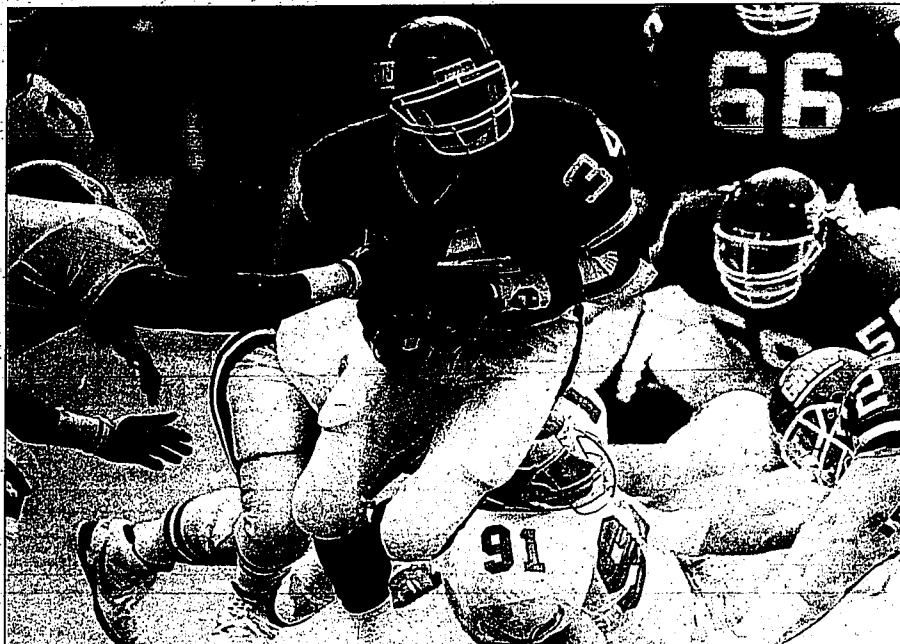

The win ended a five-game losing streak against Philadelphia and was the Giants' second victory in 11 games against the Eagles (4-2).

The Giants and Eagles, who have both performed better than expected this season, now head into a bye week. The Giants are buoyed, the Eagles battered — without Randall Cunningham, Fred Barnett and with a banged-up defensive line — and frustrated after their second straight loss.

"You can blame the injuries and a lot of things," defensive end Clyde Simmons said. "The injuries are a part of the game. If you don't come out here and play well, you are going to get your hands buttoned to you every time. That's what happened today."

As has been the case since Reeves took over as coach this season, the keys to success were Phil Simms, a strong running game and an aggressive defense. The Giants knocked out starting quarterback Bubby Brister with a sprained ankle in the first quarter and then hurried former Jet Ken O'Brien in his return to Giants Stadium.

Simms threw a 17-yard touchdown pass to Ed McCaffrey early

New York Giants running back Lewis Tillman emerges from the crowd Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles for a 6-yard carry. Tillman, subbing for the injured Rodney Hampton, finished with one of Lewis Tillman's two TD runs. Mike Sherrard on a spectacular 51-yard pass play to set up one of Lewis Tillman's two TD runs. It was the most by a Giants back since Joe Morris gained 181 in 1986.

Steelers flex defensive muscle, knock out Saints

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Maybe it was the intimidating image of Mean Joe Greene on the scoreboard's pregame highlights, or Jack Ham's presence in the press box. Whatever their motivation, the Pittsburgh Steelers returned to the NFL on the days when the Steel Curtain defense ruled pro football.

The New Orleans Saints couldn't run, couldn't pass and couldn't hide from perhaps the NFL's best defense Sunday as the Steelers turned five turnovers into a 37-14 rout, what had been the league's only unbeaten team.

Rod Woodson returned one of Pittsburgh's three interceptions for a 63-yard touchdown just 1 1/2 minutes into the game, then made another later in the period to set up Barry Foster's 20-yard touchdown pass as the Steelers surged into a 24-0 half-time lead.

"Our defense is 11 guys flying to the ball, going 100 miles per hour," Pro Bowl linebacker Greg Lloyd said.

New Orleans was so ineffective that the Steelers had as many interceptions as there are quarterbacks in the NFL, including one until late in the third quarter. The NFL's top rushing offense was limited to 49 yards, 110 below its average, by a Steelers defense that still hasn't allowed an opponent to rush for 100 yards since the 1980 season.

"If we don't see the NFL's best defense, we might fight there," Woodson said. "The NFL is supposed to be The Steelers wrapped up Derek Brown and the rest of the Saints for a 37-14 shellacking Sunday. The black-and-blue conference, and the AFC, is supposed to be a finesse conference, but I dare you to play the Steelers and say we're not a physical team."

Foster ran for 75 yards and scored twice before leaving with a bruised shoulder. Backup Leroy Thompson replaced him at halftime and ran for 101 yards as the Steelers (4-2) beat the Saints in a rout.

Redskins lose 5th straight; Oilers win

The Associated Press

Washington (1-5) lost its fifth straight game to Phoenix (2-4). Defensive lineman Eric Swann set up three scores with key plays as the Cardinals had five sacks, forced four fumbles and recovered three.

Swann tackled Reggie Brooks in the end zone for a safety, stripped the ball from QB Mark Rypien and recovered it to set up a field goal, then forced a punt when he got to Rypien again for a sack.

Cardinals running back Garrison Hearst sprained a knee ligament and will be out two to three weeks.

Browns 28, Bengals 17
At Cincinnati, Vinny Testaverde made sure his first start as a Brown won't be his last. Replacing the benched Bernie Coscia, Testaverde matched his career high with three touchdown passes. He had only 11 completions.

"Everybody knew he was a little nervous," said receiver Mark Carrier, who played with Testaverde at Tampa. "After that first drive, he was the Vinny of old that I knew."

Testaverde led an 80-yard drive with the opening kickoff and Tommy Vardell scored his first NFL touchdown on a 28-yard screen pass. Then Testaverde found Randy Baldwin for a 65-yard

TD and connected with Brian Kichen for a 1-yard score.

The Browns (4-2) got their first victory at Riverfront Stadium in six years. Cincinnati (0-6) lost quarterback David Klingler with a bruised lower back.

Oilers 28, Patriots 14
Warren Moon, benched for ineffective play, replaced injured Cody Carlson and was very effective for the visiting Oilers (2-4). He hit 16 of 21 passes, connecting twice with Webster Slaughter for touchdowns. Carlson sprained his groin in the second quarter.

"I'm still unsure of a lot of things going on around here, but I know we won the game," Moon said.

The Patriots (1-5) allowed five sacks and had three passes intercepted.

Lions 30, Seahawks 10
Mel Gray, whose fumble set up visiting Seattle's touchdown in the first quarter, had a 95-yard kickoff return and a 35-yard punt return. Rodney Peete, reinstated as No. 1 quarterback, completed 14 of 26 passes for 157 yards and TD passes of 13 and 11 yards to Herman Moore for Detroit (4-2).

Jason Hanson kicked field goals of 34, 32 and 35 yards for Detroit

Phoenix wide receiver Ricky Proehl is hit by Redskins defenders Danny Copeland, top, and Tom Carter on Sunday during their NFC contest. "The whole morale of the ballclub changed on that play. It seemed like our whole intensity got higher."

"Seattle (3-3) got 11 tackles and a sack from Rod Stephens.

Broncos hope offensive line can hold off Raiders' pass rush

DENVER (AP) — Unlike any other opponent, the Los Angeles Raiders have belittled John Elway over the years. Now, however, the Denver Broncos' quarterback operates behind a much-improved offensive line.

Since becoming the Broncos' undisputed starter at the beginning of the 1984 season, Elway owns a regular-season record of 59-15 (79.7) at home. Against the Raiders, however, he's 6-11 overall and 4-6 at home.

Los Angeles will try to add to that record when it meets the Broncos at Mile High Stadium on tonight.

The Raiders have limited the usually prolific Elway to an average of 100 yards passing in those past meetings, a figure inflated because the Broncos were often forced to play catch-up. They've sacked him 45 times and intercepted 22 of his passes.

"What the Raiders have done in the past against us is dominate our offensive line, and John couldn't get the ball off," Denver coach Wade Phillips said. "They're usually one of the top teams in the league in rushing the passer and in playing pass defense."

"But this year our pass protection has been excellent, which is one of the reasons we're throwing the ball so well. So it's our strength against their strength. We're telling them we're going to throw it, and they're going to come after us, and we'll see what happens."

With a rebuilt offensive line that includes the additions of left tackle Gary Zimmerman and right guard Brian Habib, the Broncos have kept Elway out of harm's way. He's been sacked only eight times.

Not coincidentally, the Broncos lead the NFL in passing, averaging 285.8 yards. Elway is having his best year statistically, completing 125 of 197 passes (63.5 percent) for 1,460 yards with eight TDs against three interceptions.

The Raiders, meanwhile, lead the AFC in pass defense, yielding just 157.4 yards per game. After five games, Anthony Smith had eight sacks to share the league lead.

"I told Anthony I thought he could get 20 sacks this season if he keeps coming off the ball and attacking the way he has been," Raiders coach Art Shell said.

"When we drafted him (in 1990), we knew he had a lot of talent. And he's going to get better and better."

Despite the Raiders' success against Elway, Shell said the Denver quarterback

"seems like he's a more confident player, seems like he's having a lot more fun." He's still a very dangerous guy who can make things happen in a hurry."

Jeff Hostetler will start at quarterback for the Raiders, although he has been slowed by an ankle injury and was replaced last week by 38-year-old Vince Evans, who engineered a 24-20 comeback victory over the New York Jets.

Both teams bring 3-2 records into the game. The Raiders have won eight of the last 10 games in the series, but both teams have lost their last four Monday night appearances.

School bonds should need only simple majority to pass

The Idaho Legislature has consistently decided against returning to the state Constitution a simple majority to pass school bond levies. A vote by the Legislature could put a simple majority proposal on the ballot for voters to decide.

Idahoans ought to have that opportunity. The old reasons for the two-thirds majority no longer hold true: that of protecting the property owner from those who don't own property but vote in elections that can hike property tax. Now, much of the tax base in most counties is commercial and you can be sure business operators pass along property increases to their renters or customers. So who pays?

Those who don't own property but know the inestimable necessity of good education for themselves and their children.

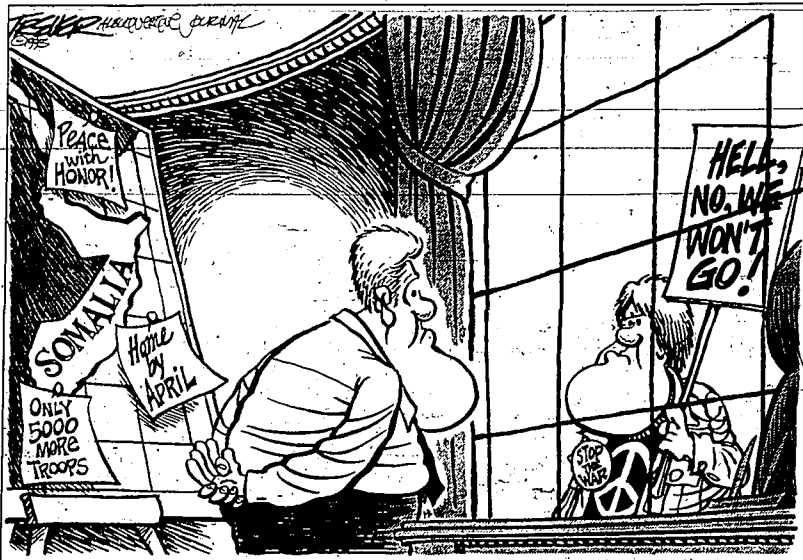

There have been cases galore, in the last two years in particular, of minorities blocking needed expansion to schools. The state has the primary responsibility to fund education. And when it fails, as it so often does, to provide the needed funds, local taxpayers approve supplemental levies to accomplish what legislators did not. Now in court over its negligence in school funding, the Legislature could at least make it easier for locals to keep facilities adequate by requiring only a simple majority in bond elections.

Such an action by the Legislature, we appreciate, flies in the face of a vociferous property tax revolt, even though Idaho's property tax is not excessive compared to surrounding states, as well as nationally. We recognize that, politically, some tax relief or obtaining balancing monies through the sales, income or service taxes may accompany a proposal to amend the constitution. Heavy reliance on property tax for education funding places a heavy burden on Idaho's farmers and ranchers.

With all the system's inequities, Idahoans have usually come through for their kids. But there is reason to be concerned over a growing attitude by some that since they don't have kids in school anymore, they've done their part. We will always owe an adequate education to the new generation, just as our parents and grandparents made sure we were so provided.

Don't ignore Koresh's source for weapons arsenal

No one is drawing the obvious lesson from the tragedy in Waco last April: Look at how David Koresh was able to arm himself.

An inquiry by a former Justice department official concluded Koresh's followers set the fires that consumed them. On the other side of the siege line there were persistent tensions between those who favored patient negotiations and others who wanted to squeeze Koresh and his lieutenants with psychological pressure.

Forensic sleuths pieced together a grisly tableau of the final moments. Death was favored over surrender even for those who could not choose. The remains of 25 children revealed deaths by gunshot, stabbing and bludgeoning. Koresh and at least three other adults were shot as well.

This sordid affair is headed for some anonymous shelf in the federal archives. A fitting, proper memorial would be a review of how the federal government licenses wholesale gun dealers. Koresh's arsenal of weapons is what attracted the attention of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in the first place. The only thing disposed more casually than the licenses is the lethal hardware itself. That lesson cannot be ignored.

It's time for choice in education system

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The young woman tentatively approached the microphone to ask a question following my lecture at the University of Michigan. She said she disagreed with much of what I said, especially my contention that our nation needs to promote values rooted in certain fixed absolutes in order to repair a society that is increasingly dysfunctional and socially chaotic.

I asked her, "If you don't like my value system, what would you recommend to replace it?" She said she wasn't sure.

"What year are you in and what is your major?" I asked.

"I'm a senior and my major is ethics," she said.

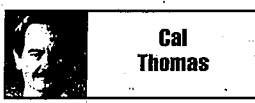

"On what do you base your own ethics?" I queried.

"I don't know," she replied. "I'm still trying to work that out."

Nearly 16 years of schooling at a cost of tens of thousands of dollars have left this student and many like her unable to think. It is the failure of our public education system that has "dumbed down" a generation of young people that they think "wisdom" refers to their teeth.

Could there be a more compelling reason for allowing choices in how the next generation is educated?

California voters will decide next month if they want educational choice in their state. The monopolistic state and national education establishment (which favors choice on abortion, but not choice on where those who are born can be educated) is spending millions of dollars in an attempt to maintain its intellectual and moral chokehold over children.

Whether school choice passes in California or not, a national attempt to press for educational choice has been launched by former Secretary of Education Lamar Alexander and an impressive array of current and former public officials and business leaders.

In a "vision statement," Americans for School Choice calls for "charter legislation to create new schools, responsive to the communities they serve, and free of onerous union rules and government regulations."

The group's objectives are to promote equity by giving middle- and low-income families more of the same choices of all schools — public, private and religious — that wealthy families already enjoy; to empower families with rebated tax dollars to spend at the school of their choice; to encourage innovation by removing government from the backs of teachers and principals and investing tax dollars at the school without strings attached; to create a dynamic marketplace of education opportunities by offering incentives to spur new academic services, including programs for students with special needs and disabilities.

School choice is growing more popular. A

September 1992 Gallup Poll found 70 percent of the public favors a system that would allow parents to select their child's school, including private and religious. Fourteen states have already enacted legislation to offer limited school choice to parents, teachers, communities and principals. Private-sector scholarship programs are now operating in at least six cities to assist low-income students who want to escape schools in dangerous neighborhoods.

Last year, Sweden, which is slowly emerging from economic socialism, decided to shake up its education system by offering powerful incentives to create new education opportunities and give parents wide freedom to choose among them.

Businesses have repeatedly lamented the poor quality of students graduating from American public high schools and colleges. David Kearns, chairman of Xerox Corporation, recently observed, "Public education has put this country at a terrible competitive disadvantage. American business will have to hire a million new workers a year who can't read, write or count. Teaching them how... will cost industry $25 billion a year."

The evidence can no longer be denied. It is as plain as the student who questioned me at the University of Michigan. Neaning graduation, this student does not know what she believes about her major and, at great expense, has been defrauded of a real education.

Perot misses the point of NAFTA — exports

Ross Perot has a bushel basket full of one-liners deriding NAFTA, but, by Stuart Schejver's assessment, none of them is funny or even relevant.

"NAFTA will be good for the United States, Mexico and Canada," Schejver says. "Not a single thing Perot has uttered has changed my mind."

Schejver speaks from experience. He's president of Decorel, a Mundelein-based maker of picture frames. In four years, annual sales have quadrupled to $80 million and his Illinois work force has doubled to 800.

Last year, he opened a plant in Mexico to tap the growing market there and to make specialized products that were being manufactured in Asia. "We have 200 workers there and we haven't moved a single job from the United States," he says, "but we're moving jobs from Asia to North America."

Here is one businessperson who has grasped what NAFTA will do for the United States.

With defense spending tapering off and economic policy unable to stimulate enough growth, the United States must export more products to create more jobs. It makes sense to first strengthen financial ties in the Western Hemisphere. NAFTA will give the United States a chance to do that and to position itself to compete more effectively with European and Asian rivals.

Perot claims NAFTA will only accelerate the loss of U.S. manufacturing jobs. But he ignores an economic maxim that exports and foreign investment — to developed and underdeveloped countries — create and maintain jobs at home. Additionally, these export-related jobs pay considerably more than the average.

After Mexico began to open its markets in 1986, U.S. exports tripled to more than $40 billion last year, creating nearly a $6 billion trade surplus. By most estimates, the number of workers making products for Mexico grew to 700,000 from 274,000.

The United States already is essentially an open market, but NAFTA will require Mexico to become one as well. As it eliminates tariffs and trade barriers, exports to Mexico will increase. A tiny percentage of U.S. workers may lose their jobs due to the increased competition, but many more jobs will be created than lost.

Many U.S. companies build plants in Mexico to get behind the high taxes, not to take advantage of cheap labor. Once the tariffs are gone, a number of firms have indicated, they will return home because they want to utilize more productive, better-educated U.S. workers and then ship to Mexico. Some have said they will follow Schejver's example and move their Asian operations to Mexico and import parts from the United States. Both developments will mean more jobs here.

Perot distorts the evidence and preys on voters' anxieties about a changing, post-Cold War world. Economic competition is intensifying, job security is shrinking, recovery is slow and people are scrambling to make ends meet, but NAFTA and expanded international trade aren't the reasons. Indeed, they are part of the solution.

Now isn't the time to rebuff a neighbor and turn inward. Schejver senses that, and he knows NAFTA will make it easier for him and his nation to create jobs and prosper in the future.

KKVI shows some courage

"Everyday we try to teach our children how to make wise choices, not poor choices. Most of the time, wise choices are met by opposition from some people. It was natural that when KKVI listened to the people of the Magic Valley and chose not to air 'NYPD Blue,' there would be a few who would object. So I say three cheers to KKVI for their wise decision, even though they knew some people would oppose that decision.

To those who feel they missed out on their "fair share" of violence, sex and profanity, they should check out the local cinema listings. There are so many PG-13 and R-rated movies, they should be able to see enough of what they "missed." There's very seldom a movie that a family can go to see that isn't full of garbage.

Again a big thank you to KKVI for making a good choice.

Somalia brings bad memories

Shades of Jimmy Carter and his failed rescue mission that crashed and burned in the desert while enroute to Tehran: Bill and Carol Hillary have been in office less than one year and already 250 thugs have defeated the U.S. Army during the Haitian stand-down.

The United States was at its very pinnacle of respect and leadership during the Gulf War and the guidance of a Republican administration. What a difference a year makes. Now under the "leadership and guidance" of a draft-dodging coward, we are right back crashed and burning in the sands of the desert of despair.

Do those people that voted for this insult to the title "commander and chief" actually think that the "little Hilens" throughout this world aren't aware of his many character flaws? Get real and join the real world.

Keep the South Hills clean

This could turn into "The Great Power Debate."

To Doris Woodland and all others who ride horses in the South Hills or anywhere else for that matter:

I, like thousands of others in Magic Valley, love the South Hills; and my family has hiked, hunted, skied, rode all-terrain vehicles and camped there for years.

Being born and raised on a farm and being a farm wife for years, I know poop when I see it. I'm not a city slicker by any stretch of the imagination, and if I were lucky enough to own a horse, I would ride too, for I'm sure that's also a way to get off the roads and see the "other side of the mountain."

When my family was in the South Hills, there were perhaps six rigs parked across the road from Diamond Field Jacks in an area the Forest Service had made available for easy load and unload, not only for horses but for ATVs, etc.

Just a little down the road from Lower Penstump is another area with fences, toilets and plenty of parking.

I believe the picnic and play areas were set up for just that purpose and loading and unloading zones for their purposes. Of course, as I said before, if one doesn't want to use a designated area, they can always clean up after themselves and leave it clean for others.

Oh yes, I and many others do picnic in the City Park. You'll find me there on Thursday evenings during the summer listening to and enjoying our wonderful city band.

Serbs, Bosnians to exchange prisoners

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Sarajevo residents were urged to stay indoors Sunday as occasional detonations shook the city. But even as they fought each other, Serbs and Muslims agreed to start exchanging all prisoners.

The shelling was lighter than Saturday, when U.N. monitors counted 590 projectiles hitting the city and 69 rounds fired by Sarajevo defenders at besieging Serbs in surrounding hills.

At least 10 people were killed and 57 wounded in Sarajevo over the weekend, most of them Saturday, officials said.

Rebels seize another town in Georgia

TBILISI, Georgia — Fighters loyal to the ousted president clinched another victory on Sunday with the capture of an important inland town after battles that left at least 40 people dead.

Samtredia, now in rebel hands, is an important junction on the main road linking the capital Tbilisi with Poti, a major Black Sea port.

Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze flew Sunday to Kutaisi, about 20 miles northeast of Samtredia, to direct the government forces as they regroup after the loss.

Egypt shootout leaves 4 dead, 2 injured

CAIRO, Egypt — Three suspected Muslim extremists fled on policemen searching their neighborhood on Sunday, provoking a shootout that killed two officers, one of the suspected extremists and a bystander, police said.

Two other policemen were wounded in the exchange of gunfire, police said.

Papua New Guinea quake toll rises

FORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea — Emergency service officials fear at least 62 villagers were killed by two earthquakes that hit the northern provinces in four days, triggering deadly mudslides.

National Disaster and Emergency Services director general Leith Anderson said Sunday that the bodies of four people have been recovered.

The first quake, measuring 7.0 on the Richter scale, struck at noon on Wednesday and was followed by two aftershocks. The second quake, measuring 6.8, struck in the same area at 1 p.m. Saturday.

India tries negotiating with Muslims

SRINAGAR, India — Indian officials tried to talk outnumbered Muslim separatists occupying Kashmir's holiest shrine into surrendering Sunday, but the rebels refused and threatened to blow up the mosque if soldiers entered.

In New Delhi, Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao met with his Cabinet to discuss the crisis at the Hazratbal Mosque, believed to be the center of the armed effort to separate Jammu-Kashmir state from India.

The domed, white marble building houses what is believed to be a hair from the prophet Mohammed; a relic so holy that its brief disappearance 20 years ago sparked a week of rioting.

S. Korea workers salvage sunken ferry

SEOUL, South Korea — Workers salvaged a ferry that sank off the west coast a week ago and recovered 74 more bodies on Sunday, raising the number of confirmed deaths to 261.

Police officials said more bodies might be found as workers continue to search the ferry that capsized in rough seas off Puan, 140 miles southwest of Seoul, on Oct. 10.

Aidid faction stages Mogadishu rally

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — About 1,000 Somalis turned out for a peace demonstration Sunday as part of a campaign by Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid to change his warlord image.

Some chanted "Down with the U.N." and "Down with Clinton" but most of the people seemed content to listen to speakers and sing along to a lilting, traditional poem.

Aidid did not attend the rally. But top officials of his Somalia National Alliance told the crowd they want peace and blame the United Nations for the conflict that has racked southern Mogadishu since early June.

The United Nations has blamed Aidid for deadly ambushes and mine attacks on its forces, saying he started the fighting to shore up his once-sagging support.

The attacks have driven divisions into the multinational peacekeeping force in Somalia to change in the force's policies, while raising Aidid's stature among many in his clan as a wronged freedom-fighter.

The violence has largely abated since Aidid announced a unilateral cease-fire a little over a week ago. He emerged from four months of hiding for a news conference Thursday to foreshadow the release of two captives, U.S. helicopter pilot Michael Durant and Nigerian trooper Umar Shantali.

Supporters of Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid wave pictures and flags at a peace rally Sunday in Mogadishu as part of Aidid's campaign to change his image.

On Sunday, the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, Madeleine Albright, said the world body has called off its search for Aidid, though it still hoped to hold him accountable for the attacks on U.N. troops.

But she added: "We cannot afford to have those that attack peacekeeping missions not ultimately be held accountable."

In Mogadishu, U.N. spokesman Maj. David Stockwell said Sunday that Aidid "is still vulnerable to detention... If he makes himself vulnerable, then we will detain him." He spoke to reporters in the capital.

Germany announced it would withdraw its 1,700 troops from Somalia early next year, around the same time U.S. troops plan to pull out of the African nation.

German sent troops to Somalia in July — in its first major commitment of troops overseas since World War II — with the understanding that they would not be forced into combat.

Aidid now is trying to sell himself as a diplomat and peace-broker in an effort to re-enter the country's puzzle-like political picture.

Although he has continued some of his anti-United Nations rhetoric in recent broadcasts on his clandestine radio station, Aidid has toned down the stridency and spoken of reconciliation.

At the same time the peace rally was being held, some 50 members of the Quick Reaction Force, the U.S. Army group that has been relied on as the mission's iron fist, held target practice a few miles away.

Thatcher details thoughts on American presidents

LONDON (AP) — Margaret Thatcher, in her memoirs released Sunday, said her relations with President Bush were "somewhat strained." But with President Reagan the chemistry never failed — even when she chewed him out.

In "The Downing Street Years," the former prime minister said Bush shared her opposition to swift German unification, but backed off when she challenged him.

"I found myself dealing with an administration which saw Germany as its main European partner in leadership, which encouraged the integration of Europe... and which sometimes seemed to underestimate the need for a strong nuclear defense," Lady Thatcher, 68, wrote. "I felt I could not always rely on American cooperation."

It was her most open acknowledgment that Bush dropped Britain in favor of Germany as the main U.S. ally after the fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989 and the crumbling of communism.

Thatcher was ousted in November 1990 when her Conservative Party legislators revolted, nervous because of her unpopularity and her prickly relations with Britain's partners in the 12-nation European Community. Lady Thatcher is now a member of the unelected House of Lords.

Her 618-page book, for which publishers HarperCollins reportedly paid her the equivalent of $5.25 million, goes on sale today.

However, sections of the book criticizing her successor, John Major, and others who served in her Cabinets have been leaked for several weeks, embarrassing the Conservative government.

Most middle-aged guys are overweight; they don't have to be

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

Do you miss seeing your feet, fellah?

Has the elastic in your boxer shorts succeeded to shock and died around your ankles? Are those buttons flying off the midriff of your shirt lethal weapons? And do you think twice about bending over to pick up a quarter off the sidewalk?

Is that what's bothering you, bunkie?

Then take a walk in the sun. Three times-a-week, preferably.

"You (middle-aged) guys are tough, (when it comes to helping them get into shape)," said Jodi Tesch, an aerobics instructor and exercise administrator at The Club. "Exercise is essential, and so is limiting the fat in their diet. But you have to keep them in control. It has to be their program."

Middle-aged crazy. Crazy for spectator sports: football, baseball, basketball. Crazy for participation sports: eating pizza and drinking beer.

"It's mental," Tesch said. "You're not going to see any significant result until you change your lifestyle."

Trouble is, between the ages of 35 and 55, a man's adaptability to such lifestyle changes slows from Warp Factor 9 to impulse power.

"It's tough to make changes," said Molly Slough, registered dietician at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. "The trick is to change one thing at a time."

That's fitting. One thing at a time — doughnuts, say — got middle-aged guys into this mess in the first place.

And the truth is, a majority of men who can remember "Leave it to Beaver" are overweight, according to the National Institutes of Health. Like Jerry Mathers, the actor who played The Beaver, one-third are now more than 20 pounds overweight.

That sells a lot of Dockers, of course, but it also has serious health consequences. Forty is cardiac country, and the cholesterol and high blood pressure that go with obesity are major risk factors.

But so is obesity itself, and hence the dilemma: Sit on your ever-widening backside, and you could be shortening your life. Jump into exercise with too much gusto and you could end it, or more likely, do something like pull a hamstring muscle and slip back into your sedentary ways.

"A lot of (the middle-aged) guys we see in here were athletes when they were younger and they decide they want to get back into shape in a hurry," says Steve Monson, who operates the Jerome Health and Fitness Club. "These are the guys who end up getting an injury and getting discouraged."

The answer, say the health and fitness experts, is moderation and common sense in all things physical.

"You want an exercise program that's aerobic, that uses your cardiovascular system, and you want one you can sustain,"

Middle-aged flab may inspire gut-busting workouts, but the way to beat the bulge is by a change in lifestyle, according to experts.

Tesch said. "Walking, running, biking, swimming, a treadmill machine — they're all good. A Stairmaster is good. Basketball isn't, because you run down the court and then stand around."

In an article in Reader's Digest last April on overweight, middle-aged men, Dr. Jerry Sukamp, a cardiologist, recommended that the average overweight guy walk at least a mile three to five times a week and work up from there.

"Walking is good if you're really overweight," Monson said. "You can do it at your own pace."

"You can move on to other things," Tesch said. "You want exercise that's going to build your quads and glutials and burn fat."

The idea, she says, is to build muscle and to get used to exercise as something you must do regularly for the rest of your life.

"Start three times a week, preferably an hour," Tesch said. "If you want to see more result, increase your activity gradually."

Help your man slim down — B2

There's a simmering controversy in the medical community over whether people with risk factors for heart attacks should have stress tests — something like the treadmill drill you see in the movies — before they begin serious exercise.

Stress tests are the acid tests of cardiac fitness, but some doctors think they're not necessary for the average Joe unless he has a history of heart trouble. Other cardiologists vehemently disagree, but almost everyone in the health and fitness communities thinks it's a good idea for men who've been sedentary for a while before being vetted by a physician first.

"Always, always," Tesch said. "It helps by giving us a better idea where you're coming from, and if there are physical problems we need to take into consideration."

And then there's the refrigerator.

"You can exercise or you can change the way you eat, but you're not going to lose weight and you're not going to keep it off unless you do both," Tesch said.

Yet Tesch and Slough, like a growing number of health and fitness professionals, are down on diets — in fact, neither can abide the word.

Dieting doesn't work in many cases, they say, and when it does the results are almost always temporary.

Far better, they say, to find a balance between what you eat and how much you burn and then live with it.

Slough offers these guidelines:

- Watch fats, especially butter and margarine. Pass on the french fries and cut back on the burgers. Peanuts and sunflower seeds are bad, too.
- Replace those calories with fruits and vegetables.

If you increase your activity, your appetite might increase, too," Slough said. "But that's OK, because it's possible to replace those calories with ones that are not as high in fat."

You'll lose weight, Tesch and Slough say, but you won't lose it tomorrow.

"The ideal for permanent weight loss is 1 to 2 pounds a week," Slough said. "Weight loss is a process, and it takes a commitment."

But it's not any tougher for a fat middle-aged guy than for anybody else," Tesch says.

"How long it takes depends on the length of time you've put out," she said. "If you've been inactive, you're not going to change it in six months."

The toughest part, Monson says, is pulling the trigger.

"The main thing is to just do it," he said. "Like that Nike Air thing. Do it and see how you react."

Put your marriage before kids

Q. I'm a regular reader of your newspaper column, have read all of your books, and subscribe to your philosophy — especially its "centerpiece" which is that in a two-parent family, the marriage should come first. Trying to get my husband to feel and do likewise has proven to be an uphill battle, however. He comes home from work feeling that since he's been gone all day, he needs to spend most of the evening with the kids, ages 7 and 4. My position is he's been apart from me all day, too, and the marriage should be his first priority. He agrees in principle but can't seem to put principle into practice. Meanwhile, the children are becoming increasingly demanding and disrespectful, any attempt on our part to separate ourselves from them. Any advice?

Parenting
John Rosemond

A. A short 40 years ago, a good father was a male who was first, a good husband, and second, a good provider. The amount of time he actually spent with his children was largely irrelevant to the consideration. Contrary to the myth, he wasn't remote, just busy. He was involved with his work and involved with his wife, and together, they were involved with their friends and activities. When his children needed him, he was there, not immediately, perhaps, but nonetheless in reasonable time. In short, a father's effectiveness as a role model was accorded more importance than the amount of attention given his children. Thus, the maxim: "The greatest thing a father can do for his children is love their mother with all his heart and mind."

Gradually, as that changed. Today, the "good" in "good father" is a matter of how much "quality" time a father spends with his children, how involved he becomes in their after-school and weekend activities, and the like. As the "masculinity" pendulum swings away from macho toward sensitive and caring, being a buddy to one's children has become the mark of a sensitive, caring dad.

The end result of this renewed focus on fatherhood (see recent cover story in Time magazine) is that marriages become that much further displaced in American families. It's bad enough that parenting professionals have for 30 years encouraged women to believe that their primary role in their families was that of mother, now we have the media and a good number of professionals telling men that father and fathering is where it's at. The father, the better, or something like that.

In the first place, children should not have adults of either gender overly-involved in their lives. Adults

Barry's list of absolutely must-have menswear

You men will be relieved to learn that fashion designer Donna Karan has come out with a list of menswear items that you must have. This is a big load off my mind. I hate making my own menswear decisions. I hate everything about buying menswear.

Especially pants. I can never find pants in my size, which is 33-31 (these numbers refer to what are technically known as the "waist" and the "inseam"). I would call this an average size, but for some reason, the pant industry makes only about two pairs of 33-31 pants per year, and they're always gone by the time I get to the department store, leaving me to paw through the Mutz and Jeff Designer Clothing Collection.

In an effort to find something at least close to my size, I end up trying on a lot of pants in those changing booths with the postcard-sized swinging doors that offer you the same level of privacy as you'd get if you tried on pants while standing on a counter in Ladies' Cosmetics. (Actually, you'd get more privacy in Ladies' Cosmetics, because the customers have all been temporarily blinded by complimentary fragrance samples.) Privacy is a problem, because there are always women lurking around the changing area, making sure their husbands buy pants that fit. They know that their husbands hate trying on pants, and will, if left alone, purchase the first pair they put on, even if it does not have the correct number of legs. So the women stand just outside of the changing area, peering in, trying to get Pant News Updates: WOMAN: Michael? How do they fit? MAN: They fit fine.

Neither Dave Barry's 1974 glen-plaid jacket nor his gray-stained blue tie made Donna Karan's Essentials list.

Health notes

IMPROVING ODDS: Giving extra calcium to adolescent girls may greatly reduce the possibility that they will develop the crippling bone disease osteoporosis later in life, researchers said recently. Pennsylvania State University scientists said they found significant increases in bone mass among girls 12 to 14 years old who were given about 10 percent more calcium than the recommended daily allowance. Half of the 94 girls enrolled in the study increased their calcium intake by taking two tablets daily of a commercial form of calcium called citrate malate — roughly the equivalent of an additional glass of milk. By the end of 18 months, sophisticated X-rays showed that this group had 1.3 percent more bone mass than those who received placebos.

ARMS AND WOMEN: Forget face lifts and tummy tucks. With so much celebrity flexing and flaunting going on, more and more women are turning to plastic surgeons to give them shapelier, more sinuous arms. Harper's Bazaar reports. The "batwing procedure" for tightening and defining the triceps has become increasingly popular, says New York plastic surgeon William Resenblatt. It involves an incision from underarm to elbow, the removal of excess flesh and, in some cases, re-contouring the shape of the arm. Cost: Anywhere from $2,500 to $8,000.

CHEERS: Don't go looking for your muse in a bottle. According to popular lore, drinking helped fuel such writers as F. Scott Fitzgerald and Ernest Hemingway. But in all probability, they were successful in spite of, not because of, their alcoholism, according to a new study supported by the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. The study found that alcoholic fathers and sons were actually less creative than non-alcoholic fathers and sons. "Creative people may be alcoholic, but alcoholics are rarely creative," the head of the study concludes.

NOTHING TO SNIFF AT: If you're pregnant and use cocaine but see a doctor at least four times before delivery, you're half as likely to bear dangerously small babies as similar women who get no prenatal care. That's according to a study in the Journal of the American Medical Association that suggests that even if cocaine-using pregnant women get no treatment for use of the drug, routine medical care can make an enormous difference in their newborns' health.

EARLY WARNING: Machinery designed to detect and analyze flaws in nuclear warheads and in experimental laser weapons soon may be used to provide women better early detection of breast cancer. The Energy Department has signed an agreement for a $3.28 million joint venture between the department's Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and a Colorado manufacturer of X-ray equipment to develop improved "digital" detection technology.

Focus on how you brush, not what with

Allentown Morning Call

Oral health-care experts say how you brush your teeth is more important than what you brush with if you want to prevent cavities and gum disease, yet most people don't seem to know how to do it properly or won't take the time.

The most common errors are briskly scrubbing the outer tooth surfaces, which causes gum damage, forgetting to brush the inside of the teeth and neglecting the back teeth, say hygienists.

They say it is very difficult to get people to change their habits, but people should realize the importance of brushing properly because they have irreversible damage.

Recommended brushing techniques may vary. Here is the most common technique taught today:

Place bristles along the gum line at a 45-degree angle. Bristles should contact both the tooth and gum line.

Gently brush the outer tooth surfaces, 2 to 3 teeth at a time by vibrating back and forth then rolling the brush down or up.

Place bristles at gum line on the inside of teeth at a 45-degree angle.

Gently brush using back-and-forth, rolling motion on all inner tooth surfaces.

Tilt brush vertically behind the front teeth and succeed at brushing several times using the front half of the brush.

Place the brush against the biting surface of the teeth and scrub gently with a back-and-forth motion.

Brush the tongue from back to front to remove bacteria.

A spouse's guide to helping him get rid of his gut

• Fat-proof your house. Remove hot dogs, lunch meats, butter, whole milk and other more-than-30 percent-fat foods and replace them with healthier substitutes.

• Control sugar. Keep abreast of new sugar substitutes. Replace sugary treats with sugarless gum, fresh fruit and popcorn.

• Avoid formal diets. Most men do better with a diet that doesn't seem like a diet. A meat-and-potatoes man can switch from a quarter-pound cheeseburger with french fries to flank steak with Worcestershire sauce, baked potato with low-fat sour cream and salad with vinegar-and-oil dressing.

• Be subtle: One woman started talking about food — what was good or bad — as though it were a new discovery. She didn't lecture or threaten with health concerns, talking instead about how well her husband would look in new clothes or how he'd do better on the job. After 20 months, he'd lost 20 pounds.

Your spouse may also take to a contest. Make a bet with him about what he eats away from home and the effect on his waistline. If it's over 30 percent fat, he must pay you.

• Exercise: Physical exercise must be part of a weight-loss program. Swimming, golf or a stationary bicycle are all fine. But walking is one of the best exercises for losing weight. It's a good idea to join him so he doesn't get bored. Most couples grow closer as a result of these walks because they discuss things they usually don't have time for.

A youthful spirit can update an old shirt and an old outlook

Amanda and I canvassed a thrift shop for bargains. She plowed through heaps of faded clothes to find T-shirts and jeans for her two young brothers; found a trim suit and silk-shirt for her mother. Only then did she turn to a rack of limp blouses to find something for herself.

I watched from a bench. Suddenly, Amanda came running, triumphant, holding out a man's worn plaid shirt.

I saw again how beautiful she is at 16, tall and slender with her curly red hair sticking out in wings like some Gothic angel. She wore the uniform of youth — skintight jeans and a short, cotton top with just a glimpse of skin at the waist.

A man sitting nearby smirked and whispered his disapproval to the woman with him. I wanted to shake them. They didn't know Amanda.

When I first met her, she was only 8. Even then, she cared for her brothers, one and a new-born, while their mother worked at two part-time jobs and went to school a few nights a week. The family was befriended by my daughter.

Amanda lived in the poorest

neighborhood in town, but she always had glorious news. She took violin in school. She became a Brownie. She had written a poem.

Often she rallied the neighborhood children for faucous games of hide and seek. Most were older, but all followed her lead. I smiled, thinking of this fragile, willow girl some day ordering people about.

When I moved away, we exchanged greeting cards. Last year, Amanda's mother phoned when her car broke down in a strange town where she had taken Amanda to compete for a modeling job. "I know it was foolish, but I owe her so much," her mother said, weeping.

But dreams of being a model were not shared when I dog-tailed Amanda and scarred her face. No matter, Amanda said she wanted to join the Navy, anyway.

Now, all these years later, we were in the thrift shop in a small

Florida town because the family had lost their home and all their possessions. And Amanda was taking charge, as she always had.

I marveled. I would have been weeping in terror, not sorting through bedding and dishes and thinking an old plaid shirt was grand.

In the car, Amanda took a pair of scissors from her cosmetics case, one of the few things she had saved, and proceeded to cut the sleeves from the plaid shirt, grinning the while. It was the stylish thing to do, she explained.

"A shirt like this costs $39 at the mall," she said. "Don't you just love it?"

I love you, Amanda, I thought. I love your youth, your bravado.

And, yes, I envision you some day in uniform in some foreign land making people snap to.

Oh, Amanda, you lift my spirit. You break my heart.

WOMAN: Michael, I want to see them.

MAN: I said they fit fine.
WOMAN (barging into the changing area, causing guys to stare in scurry, rattike, around their booths, attempting to cover themselves with shopping bags): Let me see them.

I personally consider this kind of behavior to be degrading to the husband. I never shop for pants with my wife. This is why I personally own several dozen pairs of pants that don't fit.

I'd like to buy just one set of clothes, the right clothes, and never have to buy any again. That's why I'm so pleased about the new Donna Karan Fashion Essentials catalog of "must-have menswear items." This catalog, according to an accompanying press release, is being distributed to select consumers.

You will be pleased to learn that the Fashion Essentials catalog does not include a skirt. This is good news, because Donna Karan does sometimes have her male models appear in fashion shows wearing skirts. But for now, at least, you will not be required to purchase one, although this could change; the release states that "Karan will re-evaluate each Essential item to make sure that the product mix remains current."

I was surprised to note that the Essentials catalog also does not include underwear, which most guys I know view as an essential clothing item, both for formal occasions and for mopping up beer spills. What the catalog does include is a 100 percent Scottish cashmere jogging-suit ensemble, consisting of a "hooded zip-front jogger" for $1,960 and a "drawstring sweat pant" for $1,465.

I know what some of you men are thinking. You're thinking that you're not going to spend $3,425 on a jogging suit unless it also comes with a car. I'm sorry, men, but that is exactly the kind of bad attitude that keeps you off the list of select consumers. This jogging suit is essential, and so are all the other items in the Donna Karan Essentials catalog, including the cashmere crew ($650), the biker jacket ($1,200) with cotton mock knit (it doesn't say cotton mock knit what, but whatever it is, it costs $135), the leather vest ($495), the balmacaan ($860), the silk pajamas ($600) and the cashmere robe ($1,925). Altogether, the catalog features 25 essential garments, requiring a basic fashion investment of $18,452.50.

(No, I don't know what a "balmacaan" is: Just shut up and buy it.)

I am certain that all the essential garments in the catalog are very attractive. Unfortunately, I can't really see them. Most of them are, of course, black, and they have been photographed under dim light against a black background. The catalog is a festival of gloom. In most of the photographs, the only thing you can see clearly is the ghostly, floating face of the model, who, like most male fashion models, has a facial expression normally associated with prostate surgery. He's staring into space, as if thinking: "Hey! I'm not wearing any underwear!"

But that's his concern, men. Your concern is bringing your wardrobe up to minimum acceptable fashion standards. So I want you to sell that extra kidney, go to a store that carries the Donna Karan Menswear line, and start purchasing your fashion Essentials. While you're there, pick me up a size 33-31 balmacaan.

should interact primarily with other adults; children primarily with other children. There is a time and a place for the twin to meet, but God did not intend the twin to be even evening and through the weekends. That's why marriage vows read "till death do us part" and not "till children do us part." If words like occasional weekends do transform your ex-husband back into a husband, then you're going to have to take the bull by the horns.

The key is getting him out of the house. As often as you can, arrange for a sitter to take over after he gets home so the two of you can go shopping, to restaurants, concerts or whatever. Find a mature woman or couple who'll take the kids on occasional weekends so the two of you can get away on mini-honeymoons. If he resists, and he probably will, put your foot down.

Make two hours of time with one another for every hour the two of you spend with the kids. After all, there's nothing that makes children feel more secure than knowing their parents are taking good care of one another.

Better Days

By Greg McGreer MSW, CSW, Director

DADDY WHERE ARE YOU?

Drug abuse, crime, physical and sexual abuse, depression, school failure, family break ups have one common factor: The disappearance of fathers from the family. Despite this fact there is little interest in fathers or in the art of fathering. How important is a father? Studies show that 70% of juveniles in state reform school come from fatherless homes. Children from broken homes are nearly twice as likely as those in two-parent families to drop out of high school. Five years after the break up of the marriage more than 33% of the children experience a moderate or severe depression. Ten years after, a significant number are troubled, drifting and under-achieving. Fifteen years later the children are grown up, but girls often experience great difficulty in establishing realistic views of men and make poor marriage choices. The "boys having had no role model, grow up with low self-esteem as men, are overly dependent on women, and emotionally rigid."

Given the evidence of research it is clear that fatherhood by its biological and social nature is more fragile than motherhood. Fathers talk about parenting in a way that is different from mothers. Men talk about their wives as being dependent on them, her perfectionism that drives them away. The instance of how the children should be fed, dressed and soother. Fathers have yet to become equal partners in parenthood. The role requires support, encouragement and a position of respect equal to motherhood. Who needs fathers to have better days? We all do!

A gun at home may provide more danger than protection

Knight-Ridder News Service

Keeping a gun in your home may outweigh any benefits, a new study suggests.

The report in the Oct. 7 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine looked at nearly 2,000 homicides involving people killed in their own homes.

The incidents occurred between August 1987 and August 1992 in three counties in Ohio, Tennessee and Washington. Most of these deaths occurred in the victims' homes, often with their own firearms, the federally funded study said.

Three-fourths of the people were killed by a relative or someone known to them. Only 15 cases involved strangers. Drugs and alcohol often were involved.

"Despite the widely held belief that guns are effective for protection, our results suggest that they actually pose a substantial threat to members of the household," the study concludes.

It also notes an association between domestic violence, gun ownership and subsequent homicide. "Our data strongly suggest that the risk of homicide is markedly increased in homes where a person has previously been hit or hurt in a family fight."

"At the very least, this observation should prompt physicians, social workers, law-enforcement officers and the courts to work harder to identify and protect victims of battering and other forms of family violence. Early identification and effective intervention may prevent a later homicide," the study says.

A recent report by Children's Hospital of Michigan in Detroit confirms that many shootings of children occur in their own homes. Of 37 children admitted with bullet wounds in 1991, 21 were shot in their homes. Fourteen were ages 5 and younger, and 13 were 6-12 years old.

Last year, 40 children were admitted to the hospital with gunshot; 27 of them had been shot in their homes.

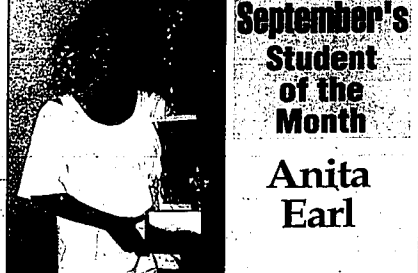

If guns are kept in the home, they should be unloaded and locked up, out of the reach of others, particularly children, experts suggest. Gun locks may deter problems. Ammunitions should be stored separately.

Minister forgets to practice what he preaches

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a fine Christian man who is a minister. We have three school-age children of whom we are very proud. If you can find the column you wrote about five years ago signed "Submissive Wife," please run it again. I know a minister (my husband) who needs to read it. Please do not disclose my location.

DEAR WIFE: I found it.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: Like many other women who write to you, I have a problem. My husband has a mistress. Her name is Television. If it isn't television, it's her sister, Radio.

Television entertains him every night during our evening meal when our family should be sharing the day's events together. Don't suggest rescheduling dinner, because the news is on for an hour and a half, and my husband watches it.

He is a minister and prides himself on "saving people." He keeps the TV tuned to a religious channel when he isn't watching the news. I hear preaching messages, in a sermon and night. Many evenings, I go to sleep while he's embracing his other mistress, Radio.

When I get into his car, the radio is always tuned to gospel music. We can't carry on a conversation because he listens with one ear. He never inquires about my day, my feelings, or anything concerning me or the children. I realize that he is serving the Lord and saving souls, but what about his wife?

When I complain, he quotes the following Scripture: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands..." (Colossians 3:18). What can I do?

SUBMISSIVE WIFE: You can also quote Scripture: "Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them" (Colossians 3:19).

Doctors sometimes need a doctor, and ministers sometimes need to be reminded to practice what they preach. You would both benefit from counseling. If he balks, go alone. What doth it profit a man if he saves souls, but loses his wife?

DEAR ABBY: I almost fell over laughing when I read the letter complaining about the friend who would never choose the restaurant always allowing the writer to pick the spot to eat. I'm sure the writer was referring to me, but please let me say a word in my defense:

When I suggested Chinese food, you told me it gave me a headache. What about a deli? "The waiters are rude." How about that Italian place? "It's too expensive." Do you want to try the Mexican place? "We ate there last night."

So, hey! I give up. Better to enjoy a meal at the restaurant of your choice than to go to my favorite spot and listen to your whining.

DEAR GOOD LOSER: If you want to settle the "who should we eat" question, ask your fussy friend to first give you a list of the acceptable choices, and you will pick the place.

DEAR ABBY: If, as Samuel Goldwyn said, "A verbal agreement isn't worth the paper it's written on," the following must be true: "It goes without saying that an oral agreement is tacitly understood."

LEE'S SUMMIT, MO.
DEAR JACK: Congratulations, you topped Goldwyn.

Droughts beat floods for No. 1

LM. Boyd
What's what?

You'd think those Mississippi floods would be the worst thing that could happen to whatever grows in fields. But they're only next to worst. Drought is said to be the No. 1 crop calamity.

That wild dogs don't bark you know. But were you aware cats in the wild never "meow" to beg?

People in the 9th century thought the pupil of the eye was solid, like a little round apple, literally. The apple-of-your-eye cliché goes all the way back to that.

December is known to be that time of year when the most illegitimate babies are conceived.

The power structure is simple in the earthworm society. As you might expect, the bigger the worm, the more powerful. A common pattern, this, in the animal world. You see it in zoos - lions and barnyards and taverns.

You are only what you are when no one is looking," said the sage Robert C. Edwards.

The little lizard called the chameleon won't put up with other chameleons on its turf. At least, the male won't. To ward off other males, it does pushups.

Q. How much of the old Soviet Union's population makes up Russia?

A. Half, about.

Q. What's a "sackbut"?

A. Early version of the trombone. First mention of it in print turned up in 1533. That was the year Henry VIII married Anne Boleyn. And Catherine de' Medici introduced broccoli to France. And Francisco Pizarro destroyed the Peruvian Empire with the strangulation of Atahualpa, the last Inca.

Claim is all great ballerinas have heads much smaller than average.

Stage actors of old cleaned the grease paint off their faces with pork fat. And became known therefrom as "hans."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

Dear Mr. Wolff: My RHO opened one heart, 1 double, partner responds one spade, and RHO bids two hearts. How much do I promise if I bid three spades? ANSWER: In these situations, a pass would show a minimum-takeout double (you've already promised a spade), a bid of two spades would promise about an ace more than a minimum (18-19 points), so a jump to three spades would promise about 20 or 21 points.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLF

Oh, 'tilt little more, and how much it tilt! And the little less, and what words away! — Robert Browning.

Bridge is sometimes a game of imponderables. Often what seems like a sure thing is actually less. Today's hand is a good example.

After South ducks the spade lead in dummy, he has a clinch two spade winners if he takes his jack. If he submits to greed and wins cheaply, the game will fall. He leads a diamond to dummy's king to lead a low club past East, but East is awake. He takes his club ace to lead a spade, and West's suit is established while he still has the king of clubs. This limits South to eight tricks, and the spade game goes one down.

If South refuses to win his jack, he makes the game. When West continues with the spade king, South wins but East is out of spades. When East wins his club ace, he cannot lead a spade, and South has time to knock out West's king of clubs.

What if South has the first trick with the 10 of spades? That would also have produced two spade winners but it would have lost the game. When East wins the club ace and leads spades through South's A-J, West overtakes to establish his spades while he still holds the club king.

Both plays that produce two spade winners instead of one support the paradox that more can sometimes prove to be less.
