Senate rejects limits on troop use

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton fended off a challenge to his powers as commander-in-chief Tuesday night as the Senate rejected a Republican effort to bar U.S. troops from serving under a foreign commander.

By a vote of 65-33, the Senate turned aside a measure that would have prohibited spending defense dollars on any United Nations operation in which U.S. soldiers were under the operational command of a foreign officer.

Instead, lawmakers voted overwhelmingly for a non-binding resolution calling on the president to consult with Congress before placing any troops under foreign command and asking for a report within 48 hours.

It adopted, 96-2, a measure stating the sense of the Senate that U.S. troops "must be under the operational control of qualified commanders, and must have clear, effective and robust command and control arrangements; appropriate rules of engagement; and clear and unambiguous mission statements."

Sponsoring this measure were Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and John Warner, R-Va. Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, were the only opponents.

The action, while a triumph for Clinton, was a prelude to a sterner challenge to his war-making powers, expected later in the week by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The White House continued to negotiate with Dole on measures requiring prior congressional authorization for the use of the military in Haiti and Bosnia.

Congressional dissatisfaction with the administration's foreign policymaking has fueled Senate efforts to curb the president's power.

"I think the administration has been given a warning light," Nunn said of the debate and subsequent votes.

The Senate spent much of the past two days debating the president's right to place U.S. troops under the control of foreign commanders, with the arguments crossing party lines.

"I don't see how you can prospectively tell the commander in chief what he can do with armed forces," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz.

Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said, "We ought to say, 'Mr. President, slow down, slow down. We don't think you've thought through this.'"

But Nunn also said, "We should say to ourselves, the Senate of the United States, 'Slow down, you're about to alter the balance of power between the president and the Congress.'"

U.S. boards ship bound for Haiti

The Associated Press

ABOARD USS CARON (AP) — A U.S. Navy frigate stopped a ship carrying cement off the Haitian coast Tuesday in the first maritime interception since an oil and weapons embargo was reimposed against Haiti.

The Belize-flagged vessel, named the San Antonio, was carrying the cargo from Tulo, Colombia, across calm seas when it was stopped about 30 miles off the northwest tip of Haiti. A U.S. Coast Guard law enforcement team from the USS Klakring went aboard, the Navy reported.

The ship's Venezuelan master, who was "very cooperative," reported he was carrying 970 metric tons of cement, an item that is not prohibited under the embargo, the Navy said.

"No contraband, no problems, so it was a successful, safe boarding," said Cmdr. Peter Squiccianni, the commanding officer of the Caron, a destroyer.

The San Antonio's master told the boarding party he had decided on his own to bypass Haiti and take his cargo to the Turks and Caicos Islands, along with his 14-member Colombian and Ecuadorian crew.

The two-hour boarding was carried out as the commander of the embargo fleet watched from the Caron, along with six U.S. pool journalists.

Six U.S. warships and three Canadian ships are tracking all ship movements around Haiti, radioing each vessel to ask its destination and cargo.

All ships that are bound for Haiti or take suspicious courses will be stopped.

Haiti roundup

President Clinton slapped new sanctions Monday on military and police leaders he said were blocking the return of democracy to Haiti. Clinton also vowed to strongly oppose efforts in Congress to restrict his ability to send troops to the island nation.

Sanctions

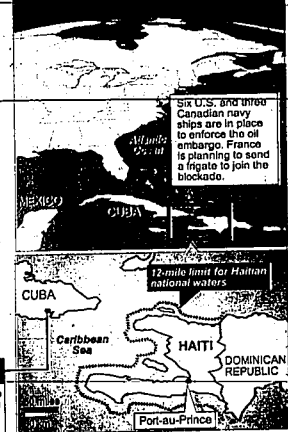

- Sanctions to be imposed at 11:59 p.m. EDT Monday if Haiti's leaders defy United Nations agreement:
- Ban on supply of petroleum or petroleum products to Haiti, excluding small quantities for use in cooking or essential humanitarian needs.
- Ban on supply of weapons and ammunition.
- Ban on supply of military vehicles, equipment and spare parts.
- Ban on supply of police equipment and spare parts.
- Freeze of assets abroad of Haiti's de facto authorities or "their agents."

Shots strike Twin Falls residence

By Phil Sahm Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Someone shot at 309 Quincey Street home Monday night, and a Twin Falls police lieutenant said the shooter might have been aiming for the same house that was shot at in late September.

"We think that they got the wrong house," Lt. Jim Kistler said Tuesday.

A bullet went through the living room door at 309 Quincey at about 10:05 Monday night, according to a police report.

On Sept. 25, shots were fired at the house next door, 319 Quincey Street. A 16-year-old sleeping at 319 Quincey the night of that shooting lives at the Skyline Trailer Park in south Twin Falls, and shots were fired at the boy's home there on Sept. 29.

Monday night, Cecil Torres, who lives at 309 Quincey, was taking a bath before going to work when he heard the bathroom window rattle, the police report states. His wife and two children were in bed when the shots were fired.

Torres checked the living room and found a hole in the storm door and front door. A police officer already had been called by a witness, and Torres and the officer traced the bullet path across the living room and into the kitchen.

The 9-mm slug tore through a picture and embedded in the kitchen wall, according to the report. Torres found a second bullet hole near the bedroom where his son was sleeping.

Witnesses reported seeing a small "dirty white" yellow, or tan pickup speeding along Quincey around the time of the shooting.

One person reported hearing three shots and watching the truck turn a sharp right at Addison Avenue. One person who lives on Quincey reported hearing three shots and seeing a "small car" speed by.

Panel recommends ways to aid salmon

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Northwest lawmakers got their first formal introduction to a $1 billion salmon crisis Tuesday as a team of experts outlined preliminary options to save the fish, including experimental changes at hydropower dams.

The National Marine Fisheries Service's salmon recovery team told Northwest senators and representatives that tests should begin at one Snake River dam to see whether threatened salmon stocks benefit from lowering reservoir levels and allowing more water to pass through.

The preferred test would draw down the water level 50 feet at Lower Granite dam in southeast Washington state. But team members emphasized they don't know whether such drawdowns help young salmon migrate to the Pacific Ocean by speeding up river flows.

They urged a wide variety of actions to save the fish from extinction, affecting a wide variety of river users, from farmers and fishermen to barge operators and electric ratepayers.

Several lawmakers briefed on the plan said they were disappointed more experiments haven't already been completed. Any alternative will prove costly, they said.

"I think this is at least a $1-billion-a-year problem," said Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash. "What is a shock to me frankly is that very little scientific research has been done in terms of monitoring and knowing what is going on in the water with these species," Dicks said after the briefing at the Capitol.

Local churches have until next June to respond. A second draft, taking the response into account, will be prepared for a churchwide assembly of lay and clergy delegates in 1995.

Lutheran report lauds 'created goodness of sexuality'

The Associated Press

Masturbation is healthy, the Bible supports homosexual unions and teaching teens how to use condoms to prevent disease is a moral imperative, says a task force leading the nation's largest Lutheran body into the sex wars.

Four years in the making, a draft statement going before the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America declares that the core of human sexuality should be loving, committed relationships — and not limited to heterosexual marriages.

"It is the binding commitment, not the license of ceremony, that lies at the heart of biblical understandings of marriage," says the statement. "In those circumstances where a legal marriage is not feasible, communities of faith may wish to consider other ways of publicly affirming and communally supporting a loving, binding commitment between two people."

The 21-page report — "The Church and Human Sexuality: A Lutheran Perspective," a copy of which was released to The Associated Press — is to be sent later this week to 19,000 pastors and other church leaders in the 5.2 million-member denomination.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service reported a cold front pushing south into Idaho Tuesday afternoon, bringing some clouds and stronger winds across much of southern Idaho.

Wind speeds across southern Idaho were in the 10-20 mph range with gusts up to 35 mph. The rest of the state had winds of less than 10 mph.

The cold front was dry, so no precipitation is in the forecast for the state during the next 24 hours. Winds were expected to decrease to 15 mph and less overnight.

Temperatures under partly cloudy to mostly cloudy skies at midday ranged from the low 40s to the upper 50s. The Panhandle and central mountains were in the 40s and mid 50s while southern Idaho was in the upper 50s.

The highest temperature in the state Tuesday was 66 degrees at Payette. Stanley and Soda Springs reported the lowest at 20 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 97 degrees at Coalla, Texas. Wisdom, Mont., and Truckee, Calif., reported the lowest temperature at 18.

Rain falls from New Mexico to Ohio; snow in Montana

The Associated Press

Rain and thunderstorms extended from the southwestern Plains to the Ohio Valley on Tuesday, with a third day of heavy rain in Texas.

Snow fell on parts of Montana.

Tornado watches were posted for parts of Texas and Oklahoma, the National Weather Service said, and flash-flood watches were issued for parts of Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over eastern New Mexico, the southern Plains, the lower half of the Mississippi Valley and the Ohio Valley, in addition to the Tennessee Valley and western Alabama.

Thunderstorms produced as much as 7 inches of rain overnight across northeastern Texas, southeastern Oklahoma, and southwestern Arkansas, on top of the 4 inches that fell Sunday night and Monday. Bonham, Texas, reported 12 inches of rain in two days, the weather service said.

Hail an inch in diameter fell at Midland, Texas, and hail as big as golfballs fell at Odessa, Texas, the weather service said.

Late Monday, a storm system that might have been a tornado killed a man at Emory, Texas, about 60 miles east of Dallas, and a teen-ager drowned while swimming in high wind at Galveston.

On Tuesday, street flooding blocked some underpasses and downtown intersections in Tearkanna, Texas, local officials said.

Rain also fell over Upper Michigan and northeastern Minnesota.

Showers over northwestern Montana changed to snow by late morning, leaving about an inch of snow on the ground at Browning, Byrum, Choteau, Cut Bank and Pendery, the weather service said.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to noon MDT included 1.86 inches at London, Ky.; 1.17 near Dallas; 1.14 at Fort Smith, Ark.; and .94 at Jackson, Ky.

In the South, Montgomery, Ala., warmed to a record-high of 88.

Shooting

The car stopped at the 200 block of Quincy and three more shots were fired, according to the report.

A third witness reported seeing three young men in a small pickup wearing "military" gear, and backing up. Clothing with insignia of the Los Angeles Raiders football team is popular with many urban youth gangs. One of the riders was holding a shiny gun, the witness said in the report.

The witness said he heard two shots when the truck was between Blaine Street and Shoup Avenue and when the truck reached Quincy and Heyburn Street, three more shots rang out, according to the report.

Police on Tuesday had no suspects in the shooting. Kistler said he did not know if the shooting involved gang members.

Illness stalls Denny case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The troubled jury deliberations in the Reginald Denny beating case suffered new setbacks Tuesday when one juror was reported to be fearful and two jurors became ill.

One of the two saw a doctor.

It was the first day back for the jury after it acquitted two black men of 16 counts and the convicted after of reduced charges in attacks during the 1992 riots, including the videotaped beating of Denny, who is white.

The multiracial jury met for 34 hours, but was sent back to a hotel after lunch when the illnesses were reported. Deliberations were scheduled to resume this morning.

Supervising Superior Court Judge Cecil Mills emerged from the closed courtroom and said the jurors felt they had been making progress but said they needed rest.

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk said through a court spokesman he did not know what was ailing the woman juror who sought medical attention.

Salmon

The NMFS has declared the Snake River's sockeye salmon an endangered species and its chinook runs as threatened under the Endangered Species Act.

The recovery team is led by Donald Bevan, former dean of the University of Washington's School of Fisheries at Seattle. The preliminary version of a draft recovery plan presented to Congress members Tuesday is being submitted for peer review before NMFS proposes a formal draft plan.

"There are many missing pieces of scientific information that have to be put together before we can make some decisions about some of the more expensive alternatives for salmon recovery," Bevan said.

"There's a lot of research being done in the Columbia River and a lot of money has been spent. But until recently, not only the research people, but society in general was not much concerned with looking at the weak stocks of salmon," he told reporters after the briefing.

"That has changed. We wouldn't be here if it had not changed."

A separate economic analysis is still in the works. Team members said Tuesday they had no estimates on the costs of various fish protection systems nor the impact on specific industries.

In addition to reservoir drawdowns, the team is exploring alternatives involving improved passage ways to help fish get around dams, improved transportation systems to ship or truck fish around dams, fishing limits in the ocean and Columbia River and restoration of fish habitat.

"The cost is going to depend on some choices made down the track. There are lots of things we can do to make it better for fish," said John Harville, a team member and retired ecologist from Portland, Ore.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said the proposals didn't appear to be much of a departure from the efforts already under way in the region to protect salmon.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, said he was most pleased with the emphasis on improvements in techniques to transport fish around dams.

"The briefing indicated there doesn't seem to be a movement to go after any additional water from the Snake River system," Craig said. "That's good news. It appears to be that the Snake could drain a lot of economic life out of Idaho."

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers conducted experimental drawdowns in March 1992 at Little Goose and Lower Granite dams. Results were inconclusive, and another drawdown scheduled next year was postponed until 1996 so researchers can collect more "baseline" data.

Lutheran

ed Church of Christ is the only major Protestant denomination to permit the ordination of homosexuals.

In the last two years, the Episcopal Church, the United Methodist Church and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) have rejected proposals to loosen church strictures on homosexuality.

But the issue has not been vanished from the sanctuaries than from the streets, as attested by the raucous protests by gay church members and their supporters after the votes. The Methodists, Episcopalians and Presbyterians all are engaged in new studies of homosexuality.

Within the ELCA, the 67-member Conference of Bishops has already expressed reservations about the report. The ELCA falls on the moderate end of mainline Protestantism and is more liberal than the 2.6 million-member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

A motion earlier this month to postpone work on the sexuality statement indefinitely was withdrawn, but bishops expressed concern the proposal could threaten the new denomination's unity.

The wide-ranging report — developed after what task force members said was probably the most "impassioned discussion of sexuality in the history of American Lutheranism" — begins with a confession that the church has too often overlooked "the created goodness of sexuality."

For example, the task force urges learn the pleasures their bodies can give them. "Masturbation, a means of self-pleasuring, is generally appropriate and healthy," the task force said.

In many places, the report upholds traditional church teachings. Marriage is affirmed as a divine and blessed estate, and teen-agers are encouraged to be chaste until they enter "a permanent commitment."

The report attacks adultery, promiscuity, sexual abuse, prostitution, anti-gay violence, pornography and the exploitation of sexuality in advertising and entertainment.

"This is not everything goes. There are some things we stand against," the Rev. Karen Bloomquist, director of the sexuality study, said in an interview Tuesday.

Bloomquist said the statement balances tradition with the contemporary realities of sexual relationships among unmarried people, heterosexual and homosexual.

The report cited certain "moral imperatives," including sex education regarding such traditional concerns as monogamy and abstinence while adding "preventive practices such as the use of condoms."

Bloomquist said one group the task force kept in mind while urging the church to affirm relationships between unmarried people was those elderly couples who cohabit but remain single for economic reasons.

Homosexuals in particular "have heard much condemnation but little life-giving Gospel addressed to us as gay and lesbian Christians," the report said.

The task force said it recognizes many Lutherans take literally the biblical condemnations of homosexuality in the books of Leviticus and Romans, and oppose homosexual acts as contrary to God's law.

But the task force urged Lutherans to challenge such attitudes. They argue that "responsible biblical interpretation" strongly supports the acceptance and even the blessing of committed same-sex unions and emphasizes what they say is the preeminent biblical command — to "love your neighbor as yourself."

The passage in the 13th chapter of the letter from the apostle Paul to the Romans continues, "Love does no wrong to a neighbor; therefore, love is the fulfilling of the law." The report said such love "is pivotal for evaluating homosexual activity. ... Gay and lesbian persons are indeed among the neighbors we are called by Christ to love."

Even before it reaches parishioners, the report has proven controversial.

At their meeting this month, the bishops worried over the report's equation of marriage with the term "loving, committed relationship." They also objected to the use of Scripture in defending homosexual relationships and adopted a statement opposing any official blessings for gay and lesbian unions.

Clinton aims to clear NAFTA hurdles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with new worries about the North American Free Trade Agreement, President Clinton sought Tuesday to work around congressional objections to paying for it with a $2.5 billion tax increase.

There are still some practical things to work out," Clinton said of the administration's plan to replace federal money lost under NAFTA with increased fees on international airline and cruise tickets and higher rail and truck fees.

Some conservative House Republicans are threatening to withdraw support for the three-nation trade agreement unless the administration drops its plans to raise international transportation taxes.

A battle over taxes related to NAFTA is just what the administration doesn't need at a time when it already faces strong opposition to the trade pact from organized labor and some top congressional Democrats.

The increased taxes would offset money lost when NAFTA wipes out most tariffs and other barriers to trade among the United States, Mexico and Canada. Tariff reductions would deprive the U.S. government of about $400 million a year over the next five years.

"We will have to work through the whole issue of how we deal with the fact that if we pass NAFTA we have to reduce tariffs," Clinton said as he met with a group of undecided House members. "That's a $2.5 billion tax on American consumers

... that we will reduce. Under our budget laws, that has to be replaced in some way."

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor, in testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee, said the administration wants to double the fee charged on rail transport across international lines to $15 per crossing. The $5 fee on airline and ocean liner tickets and on commercial trucking movements across the Mexican and Canadian borders would be doubled to $10, Kantor said.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said the administration thinks it can raise the money it needs while holding the increase in the air, sea and truck fee to $2.50.

Myers insisted that congressional opposition to the tax increase was "a relatively small piece of NAFTA and a problem that we think we can solve."

Kantor sounded much the same chord, saying the administration was in a "negotiating process" with Congress and open to compromise. "We'll come up with a consensus approach to paying for the small loss in revenue," Kantor said. "Members may have even better or modified options that we're more than happy to look at. This is a difficult problem. We have a difficult budget situation."

Rep. Dick Armye, a Texas conservative who is among House Republicans who support NAFTA, said the tax issue was "not a problem the president created."

"We will resolve this relatively small problem," Armye said. "It really is a cleanup issue."

A vote in the House, where the agreement will be the hardest to pass, has been set for Nov. 17. Clinton met with wavering lawmakers a day after conservative Republicans raised objections to higher taxes linked to NAFTA. In a letter originated by Rep. Thomas W. Ewing, R-Ill., and in among the signers: the lawmakers said:

"It would be difficult for many of us to support a NAFTA which includes tax increases. While revenue from the increased economic activity generated from the NAFTA should be more than enough to offset any loss of tariff revenue, if an offset is needed we should cut spending rather than raise taxes."

As part of its NAFTA sales pitch, the administration today will turn the White House south lawn into a giant poster fair featuring companies that expect to benefit from increased trade under the pact.

Some 200 companies, half the Clinton Cabinet, 150 members of Congress, 1,000 workers and former Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca were expected to turn out for the NAFTA pep rally.

Also today, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., was expected to announce his support for the trade pact at the White House after meeting with Clinton.

GOP takes advantage of lull, attacks health plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Escalating the partisanship in the health care debate, the Republican Party unveiled a television ad Tuesday deriding President Clinton's approach as a bureaucratic morass that would cause inflation and massive job losses.

The GOP salvo was timed to take advantage of a lull in the White House effort to sell its health plan and, party officials said, to erase any public perception that Republican calls for health care reform amount to endorsements of Clinton's proposal.

The ad campaign also suggested the initial split of bipartisanship that greeted Clinton's plan is fast crumbling. Yet even as the Republican National Committee ad criticized Clinton's overall plan, it also underscored divisions within the GOP ranks over how to approach health care reform.

RNC Chairman Haley Barbour acknowledged considerable differences between the major Republican plans but said all would lead to more affordable health coverage "without socialized medicine or crippling the economy."

The 30-second TV spot is scheduled to begin airing Wednesday, nationally during Cable News Network programming and also in the Washington area.

Although it will air into next week, the advertising campaign is modest — costing roughly $80,000. Barbour said the national party was urging state GOP organizations to buy more time in the local markets.

The ad represented the first, but probably not the last, foray by the Republican Party into a healthcare ad war that has been waging for weeks and will likely carry well into next year, when Congress is expected to adopt some version of health care reform.

In its spot, the Republican Party sharply criticized Clinton's proposal and urged viewers to call a toll-free number so they can be mailed summaries of four different plans advanced by congressional Republicans.

The GOP ad opens by endorsing health care for all Americans, even in the event of job loss or moving.

But it says this goal can be achieved "without Bill Clinton's government-run system, or his 100 new government bureaucracies. Without his government price fixing, rationing and delays. Without his mandates on small business that would cost up to 3 million Americans their jobs."

Day-care kids source of serious infections

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Any parent knows that children in day care often bring home flu and runny noses.

Now, scientists have found that youngsters sometimes expose their families to more serious infections, such as meningitis.

Several reports presented at a meeting on infectious diseases Tuesday described cases in which outbreaks that spread through day care centers also made parents sick — in some cases, more seriously than the children.

Researchers say one clear message for parents emerges from the investigations of these episodes: Wash your hands after handling your children.

"It works," said Dr. Janet Mohle-Boetani of the Santa Clara County Health Department in California. At the conference, sponsored by the American Society for Microbiology, health experts described outbreaks in which germs that cause severe diarrhea and meningitis spread from day care centers to the youngsters' homes.

Dr. Cynthia Whitman of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention outlined an episode at a Las Vegas day care center last year in which 51 children and six staff members got sick from a particularly nasty form of E. coli.

Ordinarily, E. coli is a harmless resident of people's digestive tracts. But one variety, known in medical shorthand as O157:H7, can make people extremely sick and even kill. This strain is often passed through undercooked hamburger and unpasteurized milk, but also spreads from person to person.

In the Las Vegas outbreak, 39 percent of the sick children took the infection home to their families. And when this occurred, 19 percent of family members caught the bug.

Those who got sick often had severe, prolonged and bloody diarrhea. One child was so sick that doctors at first thought his bowel had been injured.

House rejects new rocket for shuttle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Tuesday to halt NASA's efforts to build a more powerful space shuttle engine, as lawmakers eager to slow concern about the budget deficit put the rocket motor on the edge of extinction.

By a commanding, 401-30 margin, legislators voted to end work on the advanced solid rocket motor, which is under way in Mississippi.

Nation

White House relies on voluntary efforts to cut greenhouse gases

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton appealed to both businesses and individuals Tuesday to pitch in and combat global warming as he unveiled his plan to reduce the nation's "greenhouse" gas emissions.

Clinton

"In concert with all other nations, we simply must halt global warming. It is a threat to our health, to our ecology and to our economy," Clinton said in a White House ceremony where he announced his Climate Change Action Plan.

The goal is to reduce the nation's emissions of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases to 1990 levels by the year 2000. Clinton assigned a task force to look at further reductions beyond that.

The president's plan relies mainly on voluntary cooperation by business and industry to undertake energy efficiency measures and curb emissions that are caused in large part by burning fossil fuels. Some environmental groups have criticized the plan as not tough enough.

The plan will entail $1.9 billion in federal government spending, most of it diverted from other areas of the budget, and seek $60 billion worth of voluntary participation by business and industry.

If the companies do not fully embrace the plan, the administration held out the prospect of the regulatory hammer in the future.

"If this doesn't get it, we'll go back and find out how to get it through another way," warned Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary. She said, however, "Voluntary is not a dirty word."

Although the plan does not include a proposal for higher fuel efficiency standards for autos, the administration remains committed to "yearly improvements" in fuel economy, said Transportation Secretary Federico Pena. Responding to environmental critics, Clinton called for nationwide cooperation.

"We frankly must all take more personal responsibility," he said. "It will take all of us to make it work."

"So I say to all the American people, if your utility offers you help in conserving energy in your own home, seize it."

Similarly he called on businesses to take advantage of help offered by the Environmental Protection Agency's expanded effort to encourage more efficient lighting, and by the Department of Energy's new efforts to promote more efficient industrial motors.

"You will save money, and you will help your country and your fellow citizens," Clinton told a South Lawn audience that included many utility and business representatives, who praised the initiative.

Clinton was joined by Vice President Al Gore, who had criticized former President Bush for not taking strong action against greenhouse gases. Gore called global warming "the highest-risk environmental problem the world faces today" and said the plan "will do the job effectively protect our environment, establish the United States as the world leader we must be in confronting this problem and at the same time enhance our economic strength."

The administration said 60 companies already have pledged to reduce emissions and 40 motor industry representatives have agreed to promote use of more efficient electric motors.

Researchers find brain protein-fat link

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Researchers have found one natural brain protein that triggers craving for fatty food and a second that blocks the desire and can curb body weight in animals by up to 50 percent.

Blocking the triggering protein also can produce dramatic weight loss, researchers said.

Drug companies are rushing to take advantage of the discoveries, which could lead to drugs that block fat cravings without interfering with appetite for protein and carbohydrates, the researchers said.

It is the first time scientists have identified substances that act specifically on the appetite for fats, the researchers reported Tuesday at the annual meeting of the North American Association for the Study of Obesity.

"We are extremely close to linking specific brain areas to specific appetites," said Sarah Leibowitz, a biologist at Rockefeller University in New York City.

Leibowitz identified a protein in the brain called galanin and has shown that its level rises throughout the morning to stimulate an appetite for fat at lunch and continues to rise until dinner time. She also has shown that it rises in adolescent girls at puberty, preparing them to take on more fat in anticipation of pregnancy, when they need energy reserves to nourish offspring.

"It's a beautifully designed system, but not for society, unfortunately," Leibowitz said. Because pregnancy in Western societies is often delayed until long past puberty, girls see the weight gain as undesirable and it can lead to the eating disorders common in young women, Leibowitz said.

Public ill-formed on health

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans have never heard of "managed competition," they don't know what a "single-payer" health system is and they are confused about who the uninsured are.

A survey released Tuesday indicates the public "is still poorly informed and uninformed" about the debate raging over President Clinton's health care plans, said Drew Altman, president of the Kaiser Family Foundation.

Fifty-nine percent of those surveyed by the foundation and the Harvard School of Public Health said they knew what a health maintenance organization was.

But most people had never heard of "managed competition" — a theory Clinton has borrowed from that would mix market forces and regulation to hold down health costs — or "single-payer," the shorthand term for a government-financed health system, like Canada's, advocated by congressional liberals.

And despite the president's repeated warnings that soaring medical costs are threatening the economy, many Americans think the country spends too little on health care, according to the poll.

It found the public thoroughly confuse about who the 37 million Americans with no insurance are.

Many thought these Americans were poor, unemployed or elderly, when the reality is that most are young and middle-aged workers and their families. Only one percent of the aged are uninsured.

"If people see the uninsured as someone else and do not feel they are at risk, it will be very hard to marshal the public support to pay for universal coverage," said Altman.

The survey found a large bloc of voters — close to 30 percent — undecided about whether the Clinton plan, Republican proposals or the status quo would be best for them.

Fifty-one percent thought the country spends too little on health care; 40 percent said too much.

The United States spends 14 percent of its gross domestic product on health; most other countries spend less than 10 percent.

Most people were under the misimpression that Clinton's plan would pay for nursing home care. Nine percent thought it would not cover drugs, and 12 percent thought there was no mental health coverage, both are in the plan.

People were curious about what health reform would do to their out-of-pocket costs, insurance premiums and taxes. They were less interested in its impact on the deficit or future health costs.

Observatory boosted to higher altitude

WASHINGTON (AP) — By firing small jets 10 times in one-minute bursts, NASA engineers have raised the orbit of the giant Compton Gamma-Ray Observatory by 66 miles and saved it from crashing to Earth.

Without the boost, the observatory would have descended dangerously low altitude next April. The jet firings over a two-week period lifted the high point of the observatory's orbit to 280 miles.

Low interest rates spur sight boom

Knights-Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — The increase in U.S. housing starts in September is a sign the housing market is finally getting a boost from the lower interest-rate environment, analysts said Tuesday.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that housing starts rose 2.8 percent in September to 1.351 million units on a seasonally adjusted annualized rate, the highest level since February 1990. Permits edged up 0.8 percent to 1.252 million units.

The starts level was the highest since a rate of 1.437 million units in February 1990, a Commerce official said.

In its report, Commerce said starts rose 12.3 percent in the Northeast, 5.3 percent in the Midwest and 2.8 percent in the West. However, starts fell 0.5 percent in the South.

A rebound in the multifamily sector was behind much of the increase with starts for buildings with five units or more rising to 171,000 in September from 122,000 in August.

Analysts said the increased homebuilding will likely contribute to economic growth in the months ahead.

"This is a classic response to good" housing fundamentals such as low interest rates and affordable home prices, said Robert Dederick, chief economist at The Northern Trust in Chicago.

Even though the single-family sector showed a decline in starts, the industry as a whole is up 1.76 million units on a "solid level" of growth, Dederick said.

For the first nine months of the year, starts are up 3.9 percent over the same 1992 period.

Analysts had actually expected starts to decline in September after a big surge in August and September were unceremoniously dented by the decline in the single-family sector during the month.

Single-family starts fell to 1.141 million units on a seasonally adjusted basis in September, from 1.176 million units in August, showing a gain of 6.7 percent for the month, from a previously reported increase of 7.8 percent.

The housing starts level is now likely at a level where it will hold for the balance of the year and be a "positive contribution to the economy in the third and fourth quarters," said Carl Steen, research analyst at Marina Fiorini Ramirez Inc., a financial consulting firm in New York.

"All the strength was in the (multifamily) levels," and "we might see some retraction of the numbers next month," he said. "Most so. Steen pegged starts for the balance of the year at between 1.3 million and 1.4 million units.

Also encouraging was the continued rise in building permits, a part of the leading economic indicators index, said Hugh Johnson, chief investment officer at First Albany. The gain in permits means L.E.I. will likely register its fourth consecutive increase in its September report.

The decline in mortgage rates was the biggest factor in helping the overall index, Johnson added. Last month, the 30-year fixed-rate mortgage slipped to a low, on a national average, of 6.82 percent, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

"On balance," "this is a very positive report," and the strength will continue in October, November and December," Johnson said.

First Security income rises

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — First Security Corp. reported its earnings rose to $28.25 million in the third quarter, a 17.1 percent increase over the same period in 1992.

It was the highest quarterly net income ever reported by the regional banking and financial services company.

Spencer F. Eccles, chairman and chief executive, said the profit records set in six of the growth in interest-earning assets, a big reduction in the banks' provision for loan losses, a lower cost of funds and higher non-interest income.

One factor in the strong asset growth was the growth in consumer and residential mortgage loans in Utah and Idaho, he said.

The company's earnings for the first nine months rose to $79.34 million, a 25.2 percent increase over the year before. The return on assets was 1.4 percent for the third quarter and 1.36 percent for the nine months.

Opinion

Editorial

Public deserves to see juvenile crime cases

Idaho officials who want to rethink the confidentiality of juvenile court proceedings are right. Increasingly, the crimes committed by teen-agers are not kid stuff.

Under Idaho court rules, criminal cases involving suspects under age 18 are handled in closed-door hearings. Afterward, the records are kept confidential. From the arrest all the way through whatever sentence may be served, the public has no access to information about the case.

There's a good reason for this practice — or was. The theory is, young offenders are fundamentally different from adult criminals. They need to be straightened out, not punished and stigmatized.

It's a good theory. If a mixed-up 14-year-old steals a TV from a neighbor's house, it doesn't make sense to brand him as a burglar, with a public trial and his name in the newspaper. Better to steer him toward good citizenship while his character is still pliable.

But the theory doesn't take into account the kind of crimes often being committed by teen-agers these days.

G. Richard Bevan, Twin Falls County's prosecuting attorney, says juveniles commit some of the most serious crimes he prosecutes.

The same can be seen nationwide. In every major city, young gang members commit robbery, rape, murder and assorted drug offenses. Much of the crime that makes inner cities unlivable is perpetrated by teen-agers.

The most shocking crime to take place in Twin Falls this year involved juvenile suspects. In July, someone opened fire on a group of young Blue Lakes Boulevard "cruisers."

Five young men were wounded. Two 16-year-olds were arrested. Further details of the case have disappeared in court system confidentiality.

Why? What good is protecting the perpetrators of violent crimes? Where's the social value in keeping secret the identities of armed predators?

On the other hand, the value of public disclosure is obvious. If young criminals are tried in public, then citizens can know whom to protect themselves from. Other youngsters may be deterred from committing similar crimes.

Some members of the Legislature are said to be interested in loosening juvenile court confidentiality. We encourage them to work on the issue.

Not all cases would have to be made public. Perhaps only the violent ones. Or perhaps those involving youngsters past a certain age, such as 14 or 16.

One way or another, the rules deserve rethinking. The world has changed. Some boys will still be boys, but other boys (and girls) are thugs.

All litterers should be fined

In reply to the woman who was outraged because her husband was fined $82 for littering, claiming "it was only one Kleenex."

It's too bad that every person who discards "just one" tissue or beer can or Big Gulp container isn't ticketed and fined. If more culprits were caught, perhaps our streets and highways would look good all year long instead of just after Johnny Horizon Day.

In answer to the letter opposing the printing of Cal Thomas articles, I especially respect the statement labeling his articles as devil.

I sincerely hope The Times-News continues printing Mr. Thomas' articles. They are certainly right on target.

Facts about low-load policies

In response to the letter to the editor from Jay Morris on Oct. 14, "If you have no critics, you likely have no successes," according to Malcolm Forbes:

"At Life Trust Corp., we have many critics because we work directly for the consumer, not a life insurance company. We charge a fee for our service, which is fully disclosed in writing; and at Life Trust, that fee will never exceed 1 percent of the death benefit. As the letter correctly pointed out, it is not always in the best interest of the consumer to purchase a low-load contract. James Hunt, an authority with Business Week Assets Magazine, gave the consumer an understandable guide: 'Refuse to accept a policy whose surrender value is zero or anything near zero.' If you follow that guide, you won't lose money purchasing insurance."

In the letter to the editor, the consumer was 35 years of age and the premium was $1,300. The average acquisition costs, including agent commissions would be 150 percent to 200 percent or a cost of $1,950 up to $2,600, which can be seen with the zero value in the policy. A low-load would save the consumer from $950 to $1,600, including the 1 percent fee. According to the letter from the individual from Washington, D.C., that is not a bad loss for the consumer. To us, we feel any money saved is beneficial to the consumer. If the client is 55 years old and the premium is now $2,880, the cost would be from $4,320 up to $5,760. The low-load, including a maximum fee would save the consumer from $3,320 up to $4,760.

If the consumer read the article in Money Magazine, June 1992, "Secret Ways to Cut Life Insurance Costs," according to Money, "Up to 90 percent" or the Consumer Reports Magazine, August 1993 issue, "Low-load policies may not be in the best interest of agents, but they are in the best interest of consumers; they would always compare before purchasing."

Remember, at one time, we were life agents. At Life Trust, we made a conscious decision to give the consumer the opportunity to compare a loaded policy, those sold by life agents, to a low-load policy. Amazingly, the choice most often made is "give me the low-load."

Air quality changes necessary

Why did Idaho National Engineering Laboratory Union leader Duane Allen openly support the seven amendments to the Idaho Air Quality regulations at the Oct. 5 hearing in Pocatello? Why did this man, who represents workers from every Department of Energy site, risk speaking publicly to make state air quality regulations tougher and demand more documentation for INEL projects involving radioactive materials?

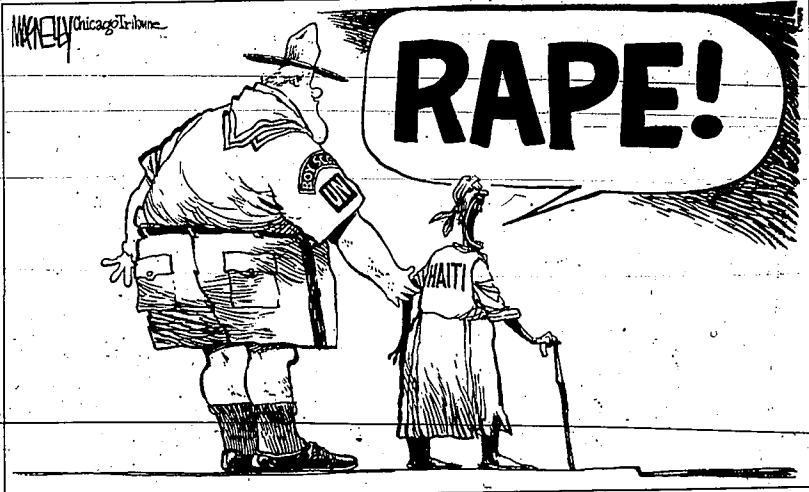

Maybe because the seven amendments are straightforward requirements to have the state make sure all legal safety and containment analysis and regulations are verified before state air quality permits are given away.

While projects and experiments like Complex 21 (the clustering of all nuclear weapons plants in Idaho) are on line to come to our neighborhood and our aquifer, shouldn't we make sure our state regulations protect us and its workers? The air quality permits that kept out the Fort St. Vrain nuclear waste are the only defense our state has to protect itself.

Without the seven amendments, the "new" air quality regulations would (1) prohibit legal analysis of public exposure to people who drive by the INEL on Route 20 (this has been inserted by the state lawyers who fought me on my appeals of air quality permits); (2) ignore the original state "independent" monitoring team suggestion to require National Environmental Protection Agency compliance before permits are given away; and (3) totally remove whomever the bureaucrats (i.e., the governor) to decide "if a permit is required or whether a waiver" is granted.

Why have state lawyers rewritten and weakened nuclear air permit requirements? That's a good question to ask Attorney General Larry EchoHawk at the Statehouse, Boise, ID 83720.

Ranchers control politics

Recently I wrote to the State Land Board protesting its plan to reduce grazing fees on state land. I also stated that the real reason for its proposed action was to sabotage the plan of the Interior Department to raise grazing fees on Bureau of Land Management and Forest Service lands.

Well, the ranchers won. The state loses a bunch of revenue and the public again learns that livestock people completely control the politics in this state.

Mr. Cennarus, having a conflict of interest, should not have voted on this issue.

I herewith propose a day of national mourning for the plight of those poor people who graze livestock on public lands. My heart bleeds for you, every one.

Our nation was founded by men with moral values and integrity. As we hold to these values, our nation will be strong.

We appreciate very much the views and stand Cal Thomas has in his column. I am not ashamed of being a Christian and believing the Bible and know that in the Bible we find the answer to a strong nation under God.

Twin Falls loses small town aura

I read in The Times-News Oct. 15 that we are going to lose the Woolworth store. At least I could find my way there without braving Blue Lakes.

Twin Falls has lost the aura of being a small town that attracted me in the first place. I was saddened by the downtown losing all the stores that I used to like to shop at like Newberry's, Woolworth's, Idaho Department Store, Sears and Kings. Some merchant ought to get smart and open a good small department store and five and dime. There are too many specialty gift shops and furniture stores. I used to like to put the babies in the stroller and go downtown and shop, going in and out of the stores, getting a little fresh air and stopping at Newberry's for a piece of homemade cake and a drink.

I, for one, get claustrophobic inside the Magic Valley Mall. It is so big that it wears you out trying to shop and there is no fresh air. The stores are too big with too much merchandise to choose from. Whoever decided that big and more is better?

Traveling Blue Lakes to get there and then trying to find a parking space close to an entrance is no fun. I wonder where the cops are while the pickups and speeders are traveling wide open to get to a stop sign. Whoever designed these huge shopping centers was not thinking of the elderly or the young. Mothers dragging their small children through them is cruelty. Then the kids beg their mothers for everything they see that they think they want.

Mother buys it knowing full well that she can't afford it and gets home with merchandise that she doesn't need or really want. That is entertainment?

You can't even go for a Sunday ride anymore without having to dodge the trucks and speeders. If you catch a fleeting glance at some attraction at the side of the road, you are lucky.

Second Avenue is about as bad as Blue Lakes. Trucks and vans should not be allowed to park near corners or driveways. You can't see the oncoming traffic. I almost got wiped out last Tuesday when I tried to get out of a parking space just past the parking booth near the Aroma Cafe. A pickup coming way past the speed limit really burned rubber to miss me when I tried to get on Second. I could not see around the van parked in back of me and took my chances. Do people in pickups think that they are gods? Look out, here I come.

Guess I will have to move to Jerome or Buhl or Wendell or someplace where my lifestyle can be a little slower and safer.

Vickers shows concern

I recently had the opportunity to visit with Jim Vickers from the Twin Falls City Council. I was very concerned about the fees being charged for the hauling of my trash. While discussing this with Jim, he informed me that Parks and Sons Inc. is taking a 1/2 percent increase for the hauling but the federal mandates have forced the county to build a new landfill and the county's estimated costs will take up the rest of the increase. There are no additional charges being assessed by the city.

Jim assured me that the city will be studying other ideas as to how we might lower costs to the smaller users that do not generate as much trash.

Thank you, Jim, for taking my time to help me understand why my bill was raised. Good luck in the upcoming City Council election. You certainly have my support and vote.

Group no longer endorses treaty

Thank you for the article on the Christian Coalition Leadership School.

I would like to make one correction, however, regarding the Christian Coalition's support of the North American Free Trade Agreement. The Christian Coalition originally endorsed NAFTA on the basis that NAFTA supported free trade and empowered individuals. In current form, NAFTA has taken on so many changes that the Christian Coalition is no longer actively endorsing the treaty.

The Christian Coalition Congressional Scorecard, mentioned as the source for where the coalition stands on issues, is a listing of how the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate have actually voted on certain issues. While the 1993 summer issue of the Scorecard does not list NAFTA because it has yet to be voted on, several other pro-family issues are addressed.

Anyone interested in receiving a Christian Coalition Congressional Scorecard to see how our congressmen and senators vote on issues critical to the family may write to the Christian Coalition, P.O. Box 1990, Chesapeake, VA 23327.

Oppose present NAFTA

To senators and representatives: We are gratified that you have announced your opposition to the present North American Free Trade Agreement. We know from reading the agreement that not only farmers and agricultural industry in Idaho will be put at a disadvantage wherever the price of labor, supplies, transportation and health and safety compliance are involved. That means virtually 100 percent of Idaho farm products will be higher priced than similar Mexican products.

We can see that clean up of pollution in the maquiladora zone will be borne largely by American taxpayers, not the polluters.

We agree with Sen. Craig's statement that the United States will be outnumbered on the trade panels handling disputes. We see that only present health, safety and environmental protection laws are recognized by NAFTA, and that future proposed laws will have to receive NAFTA panel approval before our Congress can pass them. These are terribly grave violations of U.S. sovereignty and individual rights.

Further, there is no mechanism in NAFTA whereby aggrieved individuals can be assured of right to a fair trial by their own elected officials.

On these grounds, we are unequivocally opposed to this present trade agreement which is not fair to small businesses, farmers, workers, consumers or individuals.

Therefore, we call upon you to take the courageous step of insisting on a roll-call vote when NAFTA comes to a vote in the Senate. Senators who have to hide behind the anonymity of a voice vote to do deserve to represent the people.

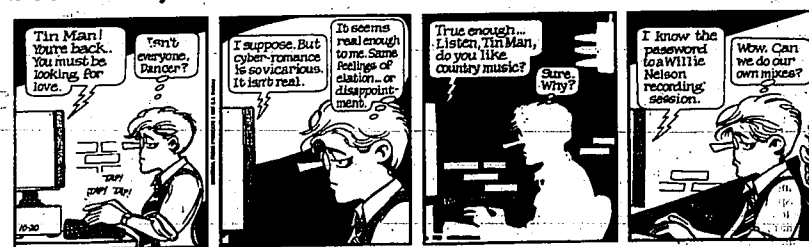

Sens. Kempthorne and Craig and Reps. LaRocco and Crapo, we have the right to ask, and we want a reply from you to the effect that you will call for a roll call vote on NAFTA.

For the people and the Constitution, No NAFTA Inc.

Bhutto reclaims position

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Benazir Bhutto reclaimed the prime minister's post Tuesday, getting her second chance in five years to try to do something about the social and economic woes of this impoverished Asian nation.

But her political honeymoon is expected to be briefer than in 1988, when her dramatic rise to power restored democracy and set off widespread celebrations.

"Pakistan is passing through a tough period. We are facing severe economic problems," Ms. Bhutto told the National Assembly after she was elected prime minister 121-72 over the man who replaced her in 1990 — Nawaz Sharif, leader of the conservative Pakistan Muslim League.

Ms. Bhutto was congratulated by legislators at the assembly and later at the ornate office of the president, where she was sworn in. But her return to power did not bring ordinary Pakistanis out into the streets.

Many are frustrated with politicians, including Ms. Bhutto, who have been unable to form effective governments or ease epidemic poverty in the nation of 120 million people.

Average annual income, $400 a person, has not been rising, and no more than a quarter of Pakistanis can read or write. Powerful drug barons also are challenging government authority in some regions.

"The people of Pakistan are no longer interested in a change of faces. They want improvements and reforms," said Ms. Bhutto, wearing a traditional, Islamic-style, white headscarf.

Her liberal Pakistan People's Party narrowly led national elections Oct. 6 and had to form a coalition government that includes several smaller parties and independents.

Ms. Bhutto, the first woman to lead a modern Muslim state when she ruled in 1988-90, is expected to have a tough time surviving a full five-year term.

Georgian leader appeals to Russia

TBILISI, Georgia (AP) — Rebels captured Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze's hometown on Tuesday, and he appealed to Russia and other neighboring states to help his embattled country.

"The hardships of war ... are being exacerbated by economic disaster and the threat of famine," Shevardnadze said in a televised address.

The rebels, who want to depose Shevardnadze and return former President Zviad Gamsakhurdia to power, cut a vital supply route Sunday by capturing the town of Samtskhe, it straddles the road linking Tbilisi, the capital, to Poti, a key port on the Black Sea.

On Tuesday, the rebels took Shevardnadze's nearby hometown, the village of Lanchkhuti, the Georgian Defense Ministry said. Although the village has little strategic value, its loss was a symbolic blow.

Shevardnadze appealed to Russia, Azerbaijan, Armenia and other members of the Commonwealth of Independent States to help keep Tbilisi's supply route open.

"We cannot cope with this mission ourselves," he admitted in his TV address.

Kasparov keeps world chess title

LONDON (AP) — Garry Kasparov retained his world chess championship Tuesday by playing a draw with Nigel Short in the 19th game of their Professional Chess Association title match.

Kasparov's aggressive attack playing white forced a quick and confusing conclusion in the competition. After a rook exchange on move 22, analysts thought Kasparov had the better position and they were surprised when he offered a draw on move 26. Short — who experts agreed stood little chance of unseating the 30-year-old Russian — gladly accepted.

Short, 28, thus effectively surrendered any mathematical possibility of winning the 24-game match. Kasparov now leads 12-7, but will have to at least draw another game in the match to claim outright victory and the winner's five-eighths share of the $1.7 million purse.

Mayor asks Yeltsin to move Lenin

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow's mayor proposed Tuesday what once would have been unthinkable: evicting Lenin, Stalin and dozens of other Communist luminaries from Red Square.

Mayor Yuri Luzhkov's request to President Boris Yeltsin — the first such official action taken — was an attack on the holiest of communism's relics, all buried along the Kremlin wall except for Vladimir Lenin.

The mummified remains of the Soviet founder have been on display under glass for decades inside the red marble-and-granite mausoleum built on Josef Stalin's orders.

Lenin, whom generations of children were taught to revere and whose brain is preserved for scientific study, remained untouchable even when anti-Communist mobs toppled Soviet monuments after the failed 1991 Soviet coup.

Among Communist heroes buried amid the spruce trees behind Lenin's tomb are former Soviet leaders, cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin and American journalist John Reed.

The bodies of about 500 revolutionaries killed during the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution also line the red-brick Kremlin wall.

Israel frees Palestinian

DEIR EL BALAH, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Released after 23 years in jail, Israel's longest-held Palestinian prisoner returned home Tuesday a symbol of the changes brought by the peace accord with the PLO.

"My happiness will be complete when all prisoners are released," said Salm Hussein Zurai, 53, who was greeted by hundreds of supporters around his family home chanting: "The olive branch lives on!"

Zurai, sentenced to life in prison after an attempted seaborne raid on Israel in 1970, was the first of thousands of prisoners expected to be freed by Israel over the coming weeks.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said details of future releases would be discussed during talks on implementing autonomy for Palestinians in the Gaza Strip and the town of Jericho in the occupied West Bank. The talks, in Tabu, Egypt, resume Wednesday.

"I think that in the next few days the issues will be raised and clarified and decisions will be made," Rabin said.

Police investigate highway shooting

JEROME - A shooting at the crossroads of I-84 and U.S. 93 was reported to Jerome County Sheriff's Department, Tuesday, but witnesses could not adequately identify the person who fired the shot.

"We had a report there was a truck going under the overpass when somebody in a pickup fired a shot," Sheriff George Silver III said.

Witnesses said they saw smoke coming from the barrel of the gun, he said, but they couldn't give a license plate number. "The description they were able to give could have fit plates from any of five states," Silver said.

The incident is still under investigation. Anyone who has information concerning the shooting is asked to call the sheriff's office at 324-8844.

Afternoon traffic accident leaves 1 person dead

TWIN FALLS - One person died in a traffic accident Tuesday evening shortly before 4:50, a dispatcher with the Idaho State Police said.

Details were sketchy at press time. The accident happened near 2500 North and 2700 East in Twin Falls County. The dispatcher did not know how many others were involved in the accident, or if they were injured.

Twint Falls man charged with lewd, lascivious conduct

TWIN FALLS - A 39-year-old Twin Falls man has been charged with lewd and lascivious conduct for allegedly fondling a 9-year-old girl on Oct. 9.

George S. Harris, 315 Shoup Ave. W., allegedly fondled the girl's vagina and placed her hand on his penis, according to a 5th District Court affidavit.

Court records show Harris pleaded innocent. Harris is scheduled to make his first appearance in District Court on Nov. 1. Bond was set at $25,000.

He also faces a charge in connection with an allegation that he tried to fondle the breasts of a young woman.

Shipping dates postpone rose planting until spring

TWIN FALLS - New roses for the Commemorative Rose Garden will not be planted until spring.

According to Cathy Walworth, Magic Valley Rose Society president, the Rose Society was told by a supplier that a fall planting would not be a problem but has since found out that the company's production schedule doesn't allow for shipping until April. Other rose growers ship year-round but do not carry the varieties of roses that have been requested by donors.

Walworth said that the group does not feel it would be fair to plant only the few roses that this fall and not plant the rest until spring.

She said the Rose Society thanks those who have made donations and will send a written acknowledgement with a certificate and explanation. The group will continue to accept donations throughout the fall and winter and will plant all the requested roses as soon as they can be shipped in the spring.

Sunburned girl accuses man of sexual battery

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man has been charged with sexual battery of a minor.

Nichol Black has been charged in an incident that allegedly took place July 2 according to a 5th District Court affidavit.

Black allegedly offered to rub lotion on the back of a 17-year-old girl who had suffered a sunburn.

While rubbing on the lotion, Black allegedly grabbed the girl's bra and then rubbed her stomach and breasts, the affidavit states.

The affidavit states that the girl said she was afraid to try to stop Black.

Hospice could lose Medicare payments

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - State regulators have accused a hospice care company of violating Medicare rules by failing to provide required benefits to some of its patients.

Magic Valley Staffing Service Inc. has until the end of the month to correct "operational deficiencies," or the Department of Health and Welfare will recommend ending federal Medicare payments to the hospice care company, a department official said.

"It's quite serious," said John Hathaway, acting bureau chief for the department's Bureau of Facility Standards.

The company's owner, Gary Thieton of Twin Falls, said the violations result from changing federal rules, and that the company provides good care.

The hospice company's job is to care for terminally ill patients until they die. That care may include in-home nursing, temporary hospitalization, and "respite care," in which the hospice takes care of a patient temporarily to give family members a break.

One family sought help from the company after the mother became ill, according to a Health and Welfare report. The family needed respite care because the daughter was recovering from shoulder surgery, the father was elderly and had a pacemaker, and a niece who helped had back problems, the report said.

"The agency did not respond to the family's requests for respite, and the family just coped until Mom died," the report said.

The hospice violated four serious rules called "conditions," which a hospice must meet to participate in the Medicare program, Hathaway said.

The violations are:
• The hospice did not ensure its services met acceptable standards of practice, the report said.

• The hospice did not give some patients

"informed consent form," a document that spells out what medical treatments will be provided under certain conditions. Two forms given to patients were "incomplete, vague and misleading," the report said.

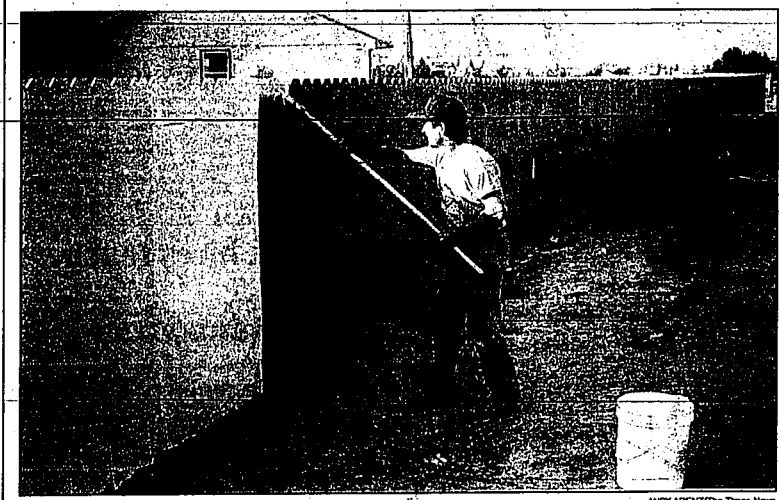

• The hospice's clinical records were incomplete, the report said.

• Based on this lack of documentation it was not possible to determine that patients' rights to receive hospice benefits were protected," it said.

• The hospice didn't arrange Medicare payments for hospice patients who were temporarily hospitalized, Hathaway said.

Citizens to show opposition to drug, alcohol abuse by painting town red

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - For the fifth consecutive year, Twin Falls residents and businesses will don red ribbons to proclaim their opposition to drug and alcohol abuse.

Red Ribbon Week will get into stride Saturday with the first-ever Red Ribbon Walk, beginning at 10 a.m. in the parking lot of Gem Linn, 403 Main Ave. W., (the old Sears building) and ending with refreshments and entertainment at City Park.

"The goal is to increase community awareness of illegal drug use and alcohol abuse," said Margal Lanting, co-chairman of Red Ribbon Week.

"The more we can bring the topic to people's attention, the more likely they are to seek out education," Lanting said. Red Ribbon Week, along with DARE and other programs that target drug and alcohol abuse, is having a positive impact, especially on young children, she said. Lanting heads the Twin Falls School District's Student Assistance Program, which includes efforts to provide students with the social skills necessary to combat peer pressure to drink or take drugs.

The number of students, especially elementary school students, taking drugs and alcohol is gradually declining thanks to the community's effort, she said.

"Red Ribbon Week fits into that effort, Lanting added.

"The pressures out there to use and abuse come from adults as well as peers," she said. "We've targeted the entire com-

Close of Weaver case brings juror relief

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

HAZLETON - A juror in the Randy Weaver case said attending the white separatist sentencing hearing on Monday brought an end to an important emotional experience for her.

"I really felt I had to come to a closure," said Dorothy Mitchell, a juror in the Weaver trial and an O'Leary Junior High School teacher.

During the eight-week trial that ended in July Mitchell said she grew to know Weaver, his life and family extremely well.

Mitchell, who testified on behalf of Weaver at the sentencing hearing, said she cried in relief when U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge gave Weaver just an 18-month prison sentence.

"He could have sentenced him to a lot more," Mitchell said. Weaver will likely be released in early 1994 with credit for time already served, she said.

Weaver had faced up to 15 years in prison and $500,000 in fines for failing to appear at a 1991 trial on a charge of selling a sawed-off shotgun to a government informant and for violating conditions for his release before that trial, according to The Associated Press.

After the sentencing Mitchell met Weaver's two daughters and his two sisters, she said.

They thanked her for testifying on Weaver's behalf at the hearing and expressed gratitude that the jury did not hand down guilty verdicts in the more serious charges against Weaver, she said.

Weaver and family friend Kevin Harris, 26, were acquitted in July after an eight-week trial on murder, conspiracy and other charges in connection with a gunfight that erupted on Aug. 21, 1992 on remote Ruby Ridge near the Canadian border.

Weaver's wife, Vicki, 42 and son, Samuel, 14, and Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degam were killed in the shootout and subsequent 11-day siege.

Mitchell said she would have preferred to see Weaver set free at the sentencing hearing, so that Weaver could be reunited with his two daughters.

But she added that Lodge made a good argument for placing him in prison briefly.

"I was really happy," she said. "I feel like there is a weight off my shoulders."

Embezzlement trial begins for bookkeeper

By Barbara Neiwert
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - Ketchum resident Janet Hamilton appeared in 5th District Court yesterday to face five charges of embezzlement plus charges of grand theft and forgery.

The trial, stemming from an earlier grand jury indictment, is expected to take at least two weeks.

In his opening statement presented Tuesday, Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney Fritz Hammerle said Hamilton embezzled nearly $750,000 from local philanthropist Tom Hornel, formerly of Hornel Meats, during the three years she worked as his bookkeeper.

Hammerle said that under the terms of Hamilton's employment she was to receive $30,000 for the first year of her part-time employment, followed by a $60,000 annual salary for the second and third years, making her total salary for the three years $150,000. Hamilton's attorney, Jim Harris of Boise, disputed those claims.

Harris said the trial will show that in addition to Hamilton's salary, Hornel allowed her to assume more responsibilities and be compensated for her partnership-like relationship to him.

Hamilton said Hornel approved:

• A 10 percent commission on the appreciation in value on property she was instrumental in purchasing.

• A 2.5 percent commission on the gross value of income producing properties.

• A $100,000 performance bonus at the death of Hornel's mother and his subsequent inheritance.

• And $200,000 in severance pay.

Hamilton also claims Hornel agreed to let her take cash advances on her salary to pay for such things as a Corvette, bank, mortgage payments, remodeling of her condominium, and help with her daughter's college education.

In his opening statement, Harris said Hornel had made a number of disastrous business deals, and that while he was receiving $1.5 million to $2 million a year from his trust account, he was living on a line of credit.

"His life was, in short, a mess," Harris said. During the course of her employment, Harris said Hamilton got Hornel out of a lot of businesses and partnerships he had invested in, "perhaps unwisely."

During the trial both sides will dispute whether several Wood River Valley properties were sold to her.

Pickup injures girl on sidewalk

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - A Jerome girl was hit by a pickup on a sidewalk in front of the police department Tuesday.

Three teen-age girls were walking on the sidewalk along South Lincoln Street outside the city police department front door, when an older model pickup came over the curb and hit one of the girls.

"They were drinking around and I thought they might come out in front of my truck, so I drove up on the sidewalk," said the driver, Jason Dilka, 17.

The name and condition of the injured girl were not available. She was taken to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center by ambulance.

A Dilka was held on the traffic incident at the Jerome County juvenile facility he threatened officers, according to Sheriff George Silver III.

Dilka was also charged with aggravated assault and branding of a firearm as a result of an alleged incident that occurred Monday night. According to Silver, Dilka allegedly pointed a gun at two construction workers near the Jerome High School.

"We take this very, very seriously and dangerous to everybody," Silver said. "We are going to let people like this go so fast. We'll arrest them, cuff 'em, stuff 'em (in a patrol car) and book 'em. In this we took a hard line stance and stopped it," he said.

Dilka's father was killed by a police officer in the 1970's when the father put one of the officer's eyes as the officer attempted to stop a fight at a Jerome tavern, Silver said.

Judge to rule on Niagara Springs

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Attorneys for two state agencies, Idaho Power Co. and the View Trout Co. urged 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbut Monday to approve an agreement to share water from Niagara Springs.

And a Wendell activist who has raised questions about the agreement said his concerns have been satisfied, more or less.

"I'm like everybody else," said Bob Burks, a retired farmer. "I'm not happy but everybody had to give something."

Hurlbut, who oversees the Snake River Basin water-rights adjudication, said he probably will issue a written opinion on the agreement sometime next week.

The judge vacated a trial date for next Monday in a suit by Kim Vetter against the state Water Resources and Fish and Game, since the agreement would resolve the issues raised in that suit.

The agreement would settle a decades-long dispute over rights to the clear, cold waters of Niagara Springs, which don't flow in sufficient quantities to satisfy everyone's claimed or licensed water rights.

Your Honor, a lot of blood, sweat and tears have gone into this settlement agreement," Rim View attorney William Ringert told Hurlbut.

The deal guarantees a minimum stream flow in the reach of Niagara Springs Creek above two fish hatcheries of 15 cubic feet per second (cfs) in the summer months and five, or 10, cfs the rest of the year.

A separate minimum flow below the hatcheries is set at 70 cfs in the summer and 60 cfs otherwise.

A steelhead trout hatchery owned by Idaho Power and operated by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game could divert varying amounts of water from the creek each month, ranging from 50 cfs in the summertime to 120 cfs in March and April. The hatchery now has a water right to 132 cfs.

Rim View's commercial trout hatchery, owned by Boise businessman Earl Hardy, will be entitled to 150 cfs year-round. However, some of that water will be discharged from the Idaho Power hatchery.

And the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, which holds a 1912 water right for 20 cfs to support a nearby wildlife management area, will receive between 7 and 10 cfs, depending on the month.

All of those allocations — except the minimum flow above the hatcheries — would be reduced if the flow from Niagara Springs falls below a base level. The base flow varies between 217 cfs and 230 cfs, depending on the time of the year.

The agreement also settles a long-running dispute between Hardy and other water users over the lack of a measuring device at his headgate.

The deal obliges Hardy to install a meter at his facility's intake, in conjunction with a planned hydroproject power, by November 1996. However, he'll have to install the meter even if the hydroproject falls through.

The agreement also states that Hardy probably will install a meter at the point where the Rim View hatchery receives used Idaho Power water, even though it doesn't have to under the agreement.

Hurlbut's only major questions about the agreement were about how it might affect a pending challenge to Idaho's "presumption" law.

Under the 1985 law, expansions of valid water rights beyond their original limits are presumed to be valid, with a priority date as of the completion of the expansion, as long as they haven't harmed other water users.

A trial on the constitutionality of the presumption law is set to begin Dec. 14 at the adjudication building in Twin Falls.

Besides Hurlbut's approval, the Niagara Springs deal depends on Rim View receiving permission from the state Division of Environmental Quality to reuse Idaho Power's water.

Senate considers Stallings for post Friendly tone of hearing surprises former lawmaker

By Ned Martel
States-News Service

WASHINGTON — Senate questioners spared former Idaho Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Rexburg, from painful interrogation at a Thursday hearing to consider his nomination to become U.S. nuclear waste negotiator.

The friendliness surprised even Stallings who was ready for a standard dose of partisan pressure, as many Clinton Administration nominees have endured.

"I spent a lot of time preparing for some tough ones," he said, describing the months since his job offer from the White House last spring.

Nearly two years ago, Stallings made plans to give up his House seat to launch a bid for the Senate, which he lost last November.

The job president Clinton picked Stallings to fill requires he find a home for the proposed Monitored Retrievable Storage facility, a holding station for nuclear waste on its way to a permanent burial site.

The negotiator must work with local communities that have applied to house the MRS as they are awarded federal grants to study their land's suitability. The negotiator must also hear from neighboring communities who might be affected by the nuclear waste they would have to store.

Stallings told senators he would try to educate the public that an MRS is a temporary solution to the nation's long-term waste problem. He also said an MRS would not present safety problems once the radioactive material is put into "dry" storage in the facility's concrete vaults.

Stallings' confirmation seems assured after Sens. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, and Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., praised the nominee. Stallings also met privately with Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn. Wellstone's anti-nuclear activist allies called for the committee to leave the post vacant, but did not criticize Stallings' qualifications for service.

But Wellstone did not indicate he would interfere with the former congressman's quest to run the negotiator's office, which is scheduled to be shut down in January 1995.

If confirmed, Stallings would succeed David LeRoy, an Idaho Republican who based the office in Boise, reportedly to distance its mission from the Department of Energy.

Although Stallings plans to work more often in Washington, D.C., than LeRoy did, he would not close the Boise office, he said.

"I'm going to maintain the independence" that LeRoy made a priority, Stallings said, adding he does not answer to the Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary but must negotiate with her deputies. "I'm not going to bash DOE."

Since he left office, Stallings and his wife have remained in the Washington area. They had planned to move once their son finished high school, but Clinton's offer has kept them from putting their house up for sale. His new job would pay him $123,000, slightly less than a congressman's salary.

Currently, four Native American tribes have received $300,000 each to hire engineers and experts to survey and evaluate their land's ability to host MRS. The hearing would broaden the search to other communities, perhaps drawing from sparsely populated areas where military bases have recently been closed, he said.

To his knowledge, no Idaho community is in the running to site the MRS, he said.

Wallop, the highest-ranking Republican of the Senate energy committee, said Stallings had successfully answered the panel's questions about his eight overdrifts in the now-defunct House Bank. Wallop also said Stallings had allayed the panel's concerns about a loan Stallings' campaign made to the then-first-term congressman, who bought a second car with the funds.

The loan, which Stallings paid back with interest, prompted the House Ethics committee to explain to him that he had made a mistake when he did not clear the loan with them first. Stallings had received clearance from the Federal Elections Commission and thought their approval was all that he needed, he said.

"Questions about your use of campaign funds for loans and House Bank overdrifts have been reviewed by staff with my full cooperation and, in my mind, are settled matters," Wallop said. "However, I do question your judgment in seeking the second most thankless job in federal government," Wallop pointed, describing the most thankless task to Dan Dreyfus, who runs the entire civilian radioactive waste operation.

Burley may raise electric rates

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — City Council members Monday considered increasing electric rates by 15.9 percent. "This is the first electric rate increase in ten years," Mayor Frank Bauman said.

The city should increase residential rates to 4.454 per kilowatt hour from the present 3.75 cents, Mike Elliot, a consultant for CH2M Hill, told council members Monday. The proposed new rate will meet a nearly 16 percent increase from the Bonneville Power Administration, which supplies the city's power.

"We don't like doing this, that's why we've absorbed (rate increases) in the past, but can't absorb this one. It's too big," councilman Derlin Taylor told an audience of about 35 people.

The effect on Taylor's own family, with four children, would be an increase of slightly less than $8 a month, he said.

Taylor said the city will use $250,000 of the city's electric reserve budget in the next three years to handle the increase. The $650,000 budget is used for emergencies to replace damaged equipment.

Taylor said he didn't know if the city could bring the reserve budget back up to its current level. Elliot recommended a minimum reserve of $400,000, but city auditors have recommended more.

Elliot warned that final approval must come soon in order to meet the BPA's increase, which started Oct. 1. Citing drought problems, the BPA announced a 15.93 percent increase earlier this year. Rupert has approved a rate increase of 15.9 percent.

The Council will take public comment at its next meeting Nov. 1. In other business, the council heard the state Division of Environmental Quality's pitch that it's drinking water monitoring program serves as a "buffer" against new federal regulations.

"If we go away tomorrow, (federal water quality) tests will still be there," said Greg Misbach, DEQ district engineer in Twin Falls.

"If you guys go away tomorrow, that saves us $12,000," council member John Christian replied.

Idaho Association of Cities, a state lobbying group, will ask the 1994 legislature for emergency funds to help cities as they break away from the state drinking water program.

The council has not decided whether to break from the state's program. About 20 people opposed a plan to build duplex and apartment-style homes in their neighborhood.

Developer Truman Bradley wants to build 12 single family dwellings on nine lots on 19th Street between Elba and Hiland avenues.

He must ask the Planning and Zoning Committee for permission to change a covenant that restricts development to only one detached single family home not to exceed 1 1/2 stories in height.

Neighbors fear that the development would lower the value of existing area homes, many of which have spacious yards.

"They might turn into rental units," said Robert Stolk, who has collected 45 signatures on a petition against the plan. That is enough signatures to stop the development, he said.

Minidoka holds off on playground buy

By Eric Goodell
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — A plan to purchase additional playground space at Acequia Elementary looked good at first, but eventually turned sour.

Respecting the wishes of Acequia teachers, trustees of the Minidoka County School District Tuesday tabled a plan to purchase the 3.5-acre plot a block east of the school.

For about two years, the school board has discussed buying the land, even before it was officially for sale.

Teachers, thinking there isn't enough playground for the students, first supported the idea. But now concerns have crept up. Dr. Robert Pavlock said at the Tuesday board meeting.

Teachers fear the land is too far away from the school, and it might be difficult to supervise students traveling back and forth and playing on the grounds.

There would be a delay in notifying school officials if a student were injured on the proposed playground, teachers told assistant superintendent Dr. Richard Goodworth and Pavlock when the two recently met with school officials.

The decision to table the matter wasn't unanimous. Trustee Bill Hepworth thought the School District should buy the land.

Acequia Principal Lew Roberts said a committee will review possible improvements on the existing playground, and it will look again at the land purchase. But Hepworth said the land might be sold to another buyer by then.

He said other schools have playgrounds a distance away from the school. He noted, however, that a church blocks the view of "the property" from Acequia Elementary.

In other action, the school board heard a report from Minico High student James Swenson that thefts are down at the school.

Swenson, who represents Minico on the school board, said theft in the boys' locker room was a big problem last year. He said security measures by teachers have reduced thefts.

But thefts have increased at the girls' locker room, Swenson said. Trustees said they will consider having better lockers installed in the locker rooms. The lockers in the boys' locker room can be broken into easily, Swenson said.

Soda Springs slayer

to be executed Oct. 29

BOISE (AP) — A district judge Tuesday ordered a man who killed a Soda Springs bank teller during a 1991 robbery to be executed on Oct. 29.

But the execution order, signed Tuesday by 6th District Judge William Woodland and forwarded to the Idaho Supreme Court, doubtless will be vacated for appeals through the federal court system.

Sixth District public defender Monte Whittier said Tuesday he will ask Woodland on Wednesday for a stay of execution so he can prepare a federal court appeal.

If that's turned down, Whittier said he will file the same request with U.S. District Court in Boise as quickly as the paperwork can be prepared.

Timothy Alan Dunning, 25, Sellersburg, Ind., pleaded guilty to killing Tonya Crane, 24, two years ago as he robbed Security State Bank in Soda Springs. He was captured a short time later after a manhunt in eastern Idaho.

Rupert to stop paying state to monitor water

The Times-News

RUPERT — City Council members unanimously voted to stop paying the state to monitor drinking water quality, despite warnings that they would have no protection against federal fines, fees and regulations.

"I guess we're a strange bunch in Rupert, we don't like being pushed around," councilman Dwinelle Allred said of the state's threat to disband the "buffer" water quality program of the state Division of Environmental Quality.

"If we go away, that federal mandate doesn't change," replied Greg Misbach, a DEQ engineer in Twin Falls.

Allred said a bill for $8,740 in fee assessments came as a surprise this year, and council members fear the fee could climb ten percent annually.

Allred said the city would look into a different way to fund water quality monitoring.

Mare Island stores nuclear fuel after order

VALLEJO, Calif. (AP) — Spent fuel from a nuclear submarine is being temporarily stored at Mare Island Naval Shipyard because of a judge's order stopping shipments to the usual storage site in Idaho, the base said.

The 360-foot USS Baton Rouge docked at Mare Island on Monday to start a deactivation process, base spokesman Richard Bruckopoulos said Tuesday. Part of that procedure, expected to last about nine months, includes removing the radioactive fuel.

Bruckopoulos said Navy policy prevented him from disclosing any details about the fuel. But he said it is solid, non-corrosive and non-flammable and is packed in shielding containers made to withstand combat.

Mare Island, scheduled for closure in April 1996, repairs and overhauls Navy vessels. It and other bases sent spent radioactive fuel to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory until June 28, when a federal judge halted shipments until an environmental study could be completed for the facility.

The federal government filed an appeal last month after rejecting U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan's amendments to an agreement with the state of Idaho that would have allowed up to 19 more Navy spent fuel shipments to the INEL over two years.

But arguments are not expected to be presented for about five months.

"Until the situation in Idaho is resolved, fuel will be maintained at the site," Bruckopoulos said.

Environmentalists and anti-nuclear weapons activists are concerned about possible hazards from the stored fuel. Analysts say submarines use extremely enriched uranium because they go for a long time between fuelings.

A nuclear submarine's reactor contains 25 to 30 million curies of radiation, said Hans Kristensen, a researcher at Greenpeace International. The Chernobyl disaster released 50 million curies.

But Bruckopoulos said storing the spent fuel at Mare Island posed no threat. There have been no accidents or leaks from the containers in the 500 times they have been shipped over the past 35 years, he said.

A person standing next to one of the containers would receive 1 million times less radiation than he would from natural "background" sources, Bruckopoulos said.

BSU student dies after inhaling laughing gas

CALDWELL (AP) — A Caldwell man died after apparently inhaling nitrous oxide — commonly called laughing gas — taken from a local hospital.

Dustin Kyle Grint, 20, a former Albertson College student, was pronounced dead at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house shortly after 4 a.m. Tuesday, Caldwell Police Chief Bob Sobba said.

Grint was not breathing when paramedics arrived, and their efforts to revive him failed. He apparently died of asphyxiation, or lack of oxygen. But Canyon County Coroner Vicki DeGaus said it could be a week before results of an autopsy scheduled for Wednesday would be available.

Sobba said Grint and two other males cut through the fence of a storage area outside West Valley Medical Center and stole a cylinder of laughing gas about 3:15 a.m. An investigation was continuing into the theft, he said.

The three apparently had been drinking alcohol sometime prior to stealing the nitrous oxide, but Sobba said it was unknown whether alcohol contributed to Grint's death.

The Canyon County coroner's office said the nitrous oxide they were inhaling was in pure form. The gas is diluted to a concentration of only about 2 percent when used for medical purposes.

Kappa Sigma President Tom Burwell said Grint, who was attending Boise State University this semester, was a former member of the fraternity at Albertson College.

Andrus seeks order forcing river changes

BOISE (AP) — The Andrus administration wants a federal judge to direct the government immediately to change the way it manages the Columbia and Lower Snake rivers so Northwest salmon runs can be saved.

In its petition, the state said the fact that the rivers' hydropower dam system destroys 70 percent to 90 percent of the migrating salmon each year proves the state's contention that by refusing to modify river operations the government has failed to take sufficient steps to restore the runs.

That should be enough, the state argued, for U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan to end further litigation on the state lawsuit, filed earlier this year, to overturn a federal determination that existing river management poses no threat to the fish.

The dams and reservoirs, Gov. Cecil Andrus said on Tuesday, "were designed without regard to juvenile fish survival, and until we recognize the need to fix the dams and operate the river differently, we won't save the salmon."

The Snake River sockeye salmon has been declared endangered and the spring-summer and fall chinook runs have been designated as threatened.

The governor's latest attack on the downstream interests opposed to his proposal to dramatically draw down reservoirs behind the dams came as a government team in Washington told congressmen that its salmon recovery recommendations will include another experimental drawdown to increase water flows to speed salmon to the ocean. That draft plan will call for a variety of other actions that will affect a wide range of river users from farmers to fishermen and barge operators to electric ratepayers.

Court revives rail suit

BOISE (AP) — Even though a railroad meets state and federal requirements, that doesn't relieve it of the responsibility to provide safety devices where necessary, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Tuesday revived a lawsuit filed after a Canyon County woman and her three children were killed in a 1989 crash at a Union Pacific Railroad crossing in Canyon County.

The lawsuit was filed by heirs of Cheryl Farris and the three children.

The district judge granted summary judgment to Union Pacific, which argued it met all applicable federal and state requirements for warning devices at the crossing.

But the Court of Appeals, in a decision written by Chief Judge Jesse Walters, said a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling requires sending the case back to 3rd District Court for further consideration.

Meeting federal and state requirements does not relieve the railroad of putting up additional safeguards if "a reasonably prudent person" would demand extra precautions to protect the traveling public, the court said, and that's a matter to be decided at the district court level.

Challis girl search takes national scope

BOISE (AP) — The scope of a search for a missing 9-year-old Challis girl has gone nationwide.

The Kevin Collins Foundation for Missing Children has set up an office in Challis and will send 400,000 fliers to law enforcement offices, social service agencies, magazines and other groups.

Stephanie Crane was reported missing the night of Oct. 11. About one-thousand people have looked for her in Custer and Lemhi counties.

"A lot of kids have been found nationwide. Kidnapping causes a great deal of movement, and that creates a great deal of problems for law enforcement," Foundation president David Collins said.

"This is a huge country, and the rest of the country doesn't know who she is."

Over the weekend, volunteers distributed fliers about Stephanie in other Idaho cities. The foundation is located at 700 Main St. in Challis.

What it won't cost you to refinance your home with us.

The no-fee, no-closing-costs, no-waiting Home Refinance Loan.

It's no mistake. Right now at Zions Bank, you can refinance your home with a seven-year, fully amortized loan at the low fixed Annual Percentage Rate (APR) of 7.10%. If you have a calculator right at hand, that works out to 84 monthly payments of just $15.14 per $1,000 borrowed.

And just in case seven years isn't long enough for you, a ten-year loan with a 7.45% fixed APR is also available. (To you calculator people, that's 120 monthly payments of $11.84 per $1,000 borrowed.)

The real surprise is this: You'll pay absolutely no closing costs or fees with this loan. No appraisal fees, no title insurance fees, no points, no origination fees, no filing fees, no fees period. And nothing will be added to the amount you end up borrowing — which makes this a great way to refinance your home.

Now, if you thought we'd forgotten that time is money, you can relax. Most applications get through our approval process in a short time and with no hassles.

To apply for a Home Refinance Loan, simply call us anytime — 24 hours a day, seven days a week — at 1-800-847-3118. Or, if you prefer, complete and return our coupon. This is a limited time offer, so act fast to get rates this low.

You'll discover that Zions Bank really does give you more for your money. And it won't cost you one red cent.

Win $5,000 with tasty wheat germ recipe

Five grand sure would come in handy to pay off all those bills you plan to rack up over the holidays, wouldn't it?

Well, you'll have a chance to snare the big bucks if you win top prize in the Kretschmer Wheat Germ Recipe Contest. The company is looking for healthful, original recipes that contain at least a half-cup of their wheat germ (original or honey crunch flavor) but no more than than 12 ingredients.

You may enter a recipe in one of three categories: Muffins, Biscuits, Coffecakes and Other Breads; Cookies and Other Desserts; and Main Dishes. In Main Dishes, recipes must use wheat germ as a coating or extender (of ground meat or poultry).

Recipes will be judged on taste, use of lower-fat ingredients, convenience and originality. In addition to the top prize, there are three $1,000 first prizes (one per category) and three $250 second prizes.

Send entries to Kretschmer Wheat Germ Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 530, Barrington, Ill. 60011. Entries must be postmarked by Dec. 15 and received by Dec. 20. For complete rules, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Kretschmer Wheat Germ Recipe Contest Rules, P.O. Box 543, Barrington, Ill. 60011.

Try freezing last of summer's tomatoes, instead of canning

You don't have to can that last batch of tomatoes from the garden or farm market.

Just wash, core and freeze the whole tomatoes. When you need some, rinse the frozen tomatoes under very hot water and the skin will peel right off. Then they are ready for use in cooking just like fresh tomatoes.

Winning essay might get you at restaurant in New England

It may not be $110 million Powerball, but this contest may appeal to disillusioned city-types looking for a new career.

Henry and Elsie Kirch, who own the Ossipee, N.H., Duncan Lake Restaurant, apparently known for its great blueberry pancakes, have decided to call it quits after 19 years.

But instead of selling the 80-seat homey eatery and adjacent seven-room house ("Real estate is not moving up here," says Elsie), the couple has decided to award it to the person, or persons, who can write the best one-page essay on why he (or she or they) should get the restaurant, and how he (or she or they) would run it.

As with other recent real-estate competitions, this one costs $150 to enter - and there must be at least 2,300 entries before the judges (the Wakefield Lions Club) select a winner. The odds of winning that many would-be restaurateurs to pay the fee may be just as slim as the odds of winning. But, says Elsie Kirch, "the odds are better than the lottery."

For more information - or to enter - write the Duncan Lake Restaurant, RR 1, Box 206 A Elm St., Ossipee, N.H. 03864. Entries are due by Nov. 1.

Americans ate more fat, oils in 1990 than 20 years before

Fat chance: Working the fat off our diets?

Forget it - Americans ate an average of 63 pounds of fats and oils in 1990, a 10-pound increase since 1970, American Demographics magazine reports.

Average consumption of butter is down a bit - from 3.4 pounds in 1970 to 4.4 pounds in 1990, but consumption of margarine has pretty much remained steady, at about 11 pounds per person, and consumption of shortening and salad and cooking oils actually has increased. However, there's some good news: There's still and cooking oils are the primary ingredient in many butter substitutes.

Philadelphia cook writes healthy gourmet cookbook

The book and the cook: Here comes a new cookbook, "Recipes From the Healthy Gourmet Cooking Classes," by Carol Ditzler Swinburn, who runs Healthy Gourmet classes in the Philadelphia area.

You can get a copy by calling 215-793-1012. The cost for delivery by mail is $12.95 plus $2.50 shipping (and 93 cents sales tax for Pennsylvania residents).

Kick off game day with, clockwise from bottom, Football Fan Fleets, Championship Turkey Crescents and Quarterback Sandwich.

Tasty Turkey Tailgating

It's fall - the lazy days of summer are at an end, the kids are back to the books in school and it's time for football again.

Football season brings with it the traditions of marching bands, cheerleaders - and tailgate parties. And when you're planning a football party, who better to turn to for casual, easy, menu ideas than former NFL player and avid cook, Lynn Swann.

For many years, Swann was one of those playing the game rather than enjoying it at home. Now each fall, as his thoughts return to the gridiron, the former Pittsburgh Steelers star and Super Bowl champ looks forward to game days to combine football with his other passion - cooking. Like millions of Americans, he finds televised games provide a great excuse to invite friends over for an "at-home" tailgate party.

Of course, like you and your guests, Swann doesn't want to miss the kick-off, so he is partial to recipes that combine convenience with great taste. That's why he uses turkey. It's an easy way to make tasty treats, and it's a creative alternative to ordinary chicken and hamburger.

Kick-off the celebration with fun and easy finger foods such as tempting Championship Turkey Crescents, which team up turkey breast with spinach, Swiss cheese and tarragon. Turkey Time-Outs, served with a variety of homemade sauces, are the perfect sideline snack and popular with kids as well as adults.

The Quarterback Sandwich provides a creative twist on an old favorite. Surprise your guests with a hearty turkey sandwich made in a crusty, round Italian loaf instead of the usual elongated sandwich bun. Layer on an array of ingredients - sliced turkey cold cuts, tomatoes, green peppers, sliced black olives and mushrooms - and then slice in wedges like a pie.

And as a quick and simple side dish, try Referees' Favorite Potato Salad.

For easy eating on game day, try the Football Fan Fiesta. Roll-smoked turkey breast, cheese, shredded lettuce and salsa into a flour tortilla for a tasty treat that can be held in one hand.

CHAMPIONSHIP TURKEY CRESCENTS

2 cans (8 ounces each) refrigerated crescent roll dough

2 packages (6 ounces each) Louis Rich Deli Thin Oven Roasted Turkey Breast

Filling:

1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped spinach, thawed and drained

1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Swiss cheese

1/3 cup mayonnaise

2 tablespoons finely chopped onion

1/2 teaspoon tarragon

• Heat oven to 375 degrees.

• Unroll crescent dough; cut each triangle in half lengthwise to form long triangles. Roll as directed on package to form "mini" crescents. Place on ungreased baking sheet. Bake 15 minutes or until golden brown. Cool slightly. Slice crescents in half lengthwise.

• Meanwhile, combine filling ingredients. Spread scant tablespoon of the filling ingredients on bottom half of each crescent. Top each with 1 slice turkey and top of crescent. Place sandwiches on baking sheet. Cover loosely with foil. Bake 15 minutes.

Makes 32 appetizers.

Comments:

• Mini crescents can be baked ahead.

• Sandwiches can be assembled and held refrigerated up to 2 hours before heating.

1/2 cup barbecue sauce

1/4 cup salsa sauce

ZIPPY ORANGE SAUCE:

1/2 cup orange marmalade

1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

1 tablespoon vinegar

Dash of nutmeg, optional

• Heat oven to 400 degrees.

• Place turkey nuggets on shallow baking pan. Bake 12 to 14 minutes (10 to 12 minutes if thawed).

• Meanwhile, mix each sauce in small bowl.

Serve with turkey nuggets.

Makes 40 appetizers.

Food storage means cooking for more when cooking for 1

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Vinora Hansten's approach to food storage and preparation is adventuresome, thrifty and resourceful.

She likes to try out new recipes of all sorts. And, when she lacks an ingredient, she makes a substitution.

"I like say if I'm going to bake banana bread, I could go ahead and use some carrots or some squash or apples graded down to the same amount," she said. "You know there's none of us millionaires going to run to the grocery store for one little dabbly thing."

Cooking for one doesn't present a problem for Hansten. She fixes enough for two and puts the other serving in the freezer. Sometimes, she refrigerates leftover vegetables and meat for later use in soup.

She cans the produce her daughter-in-law and other people give her from their gardens. And she does some gleaning on farms, after the harvest.

"There's no need today for people starving to death, because there's tons of apples and tons of potatoes and onions that people can go pick up for nothing," she said. "Any farmer is happy to have you out there."

Please see FOOD/C5

Vinora Hansten prepares apple pudding cake which she will cut into servings and freeze for future desserts.

Letters of thanks

Kelly contribution helped with Paint Magic project

On behalf of Region V of the Department of Health and Welfare and the Paint Magic Team from Region V, I would like to extend sincere thanks to Richard Kelly of Kelly's Nursery for the kind contribution of plants for the Paint Magic project. I know that Mrs. Hansen was extremely pleased and appreciative.

The house looked great and the plants certainly added to the overall appearance.

Again, our heartfelt thanks.

Many helped with recent Shrine screening clinic

On behalf of the Magic Valley Shrine Council and as director of the Shrine Orthopedic Screening Clinic, I would like to personally thank all those Shriners and ladies who helped at the clinic.

I would also like to personally and publicly thank Kathryn Gourley and Kathy Wendling, as well as Dr. Mark Spencer and Dr. Lorraine Tamam from Wendell. The doctors donated all of their time from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 18 to screen and examine 68 children.

The majority of these children were referred on to Shrine hospitals for evaluation of various elements. Without the efforts of these two doctors, the screening would not have been a success.

The Magic Valley Shrine Council looks forward to the next screening clinic and greater participation from physicians throughout the Magic Valley in ensuring that the children of this area do receive necessary evaluation and treatment.

Thanks to all who made Thousand Springs success

The Nature Conservancy of Idaho would like to thank everyone who made the Thousand Springs Festival of the Arts such a tremendous success. We would especially like to thank our sponsors: Clear Springs Foods Inc., Glavin Bean Processing and First Interstate Bank in Twin Falls.

The festival would never have happened without the hard work and dedication shown by our volunteer committee: Diana Faulkner, Suzi Huxhold, Jeff Fox, Catherine Stupp, Lolly Wilson, Carter Wilson and this year's poster artist, John McClusky.

In addition, we would like to express our heartfelt thanks to all the festival musicians and artists who gave so generously of their time and talents and the many local individuals and businesses who were so magnanimous in their support. We're looking forward to next year.

Wife wants family ties bound with blood

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 14 years just received a "Dear Daddy" letter from a 23-year-old girl.

He said he had slept with the girl's mother ONE night, three days before her husband returned from the service.

Phil rushed to have dinner with this girl and her fiance, and now believes that she is his daughter.

Abby, how does he - or she, for that matter - know this to be a fact without a blood test?

This girl has been told by her mother since she was 13 that Phil is her father, and she believes it! I'm not saying it is not possible that she is his daughter, but I would like proof first.

Lucky for the girl, my husband is a decent, honorable man, and since he has met with her, he doesn't want to hurt her by asking for the blood test right off. He wants our son and me to meet this girl and get to know her.

I told him I do not want to establish a relationship with someone who only might be his daughter. Abby, I would accept her willingly if I knew it was a fact.

Meanwhile, this has started to put a wedge between my husband and me - and today I'm calling a therapist.

My message to her and others is: Only facts are important; speculation is not. If you learn that you are not his biological child, it will have done damage to MY family.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old senior in college. I've never had a boyfriend - actually, I've never been on a date or even been touched by a boy in a romantic way. I'd like to have a boyfriend, but I don't want to get hurt.

I don't want to have sex out of wedlock, and my friends are always telling me guys don't want to date you, you're not "put out."

I know I have missed out, and when I see other girls who have boyfriends, I get jealous. I also have mood swings and get very depressed as the week progresses from Monday through Friday. There is a counseling department in the college I attend, but I am too embarrassed to go.

I have no male friends. If I'm not with my girlfriends, I am in my room alone.

I am not gay. I am attracted to men. But whenever I meet someone who shows any interest in me, I run. If a guy asks for my phone number, I usually give a wrong number because I wouldn't know what to say if he called.

Sometimes I wish I could find a way to get involved in an arranged marriage - in about three years - because I don't know if I will be able to handle the dating and courting a relationship entails.

I have never discussed this with anyone else. It would be embarrassing. Can you help me?

HIDING IN THE DORM
DEAR HIDING: An arranged marriage is no guarantee to happiness.

Although you profess a desire to date, you seem to lack confidence and appear to fear the dating game. Counseling will help you build your self-esteem and confidence. It will also help you learn social skills, which are important if you want to attract a boyfriend.

Please don't be embarrassed to seek help. You desperately need it. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR WANTS: Insisting on a blood test is not unreasonable.

DEAR UNREASONABLE: I am a 21-year-old senior in college. I've never had a boyfriend - actually, I've never been on a date or even been touched by a boy in a romantic way. I'd like to have a boyfriend, but I don't want to get hurt.

Food

Storing these things is not a problem either, she said. One way to do it is to put them into a cardboard container inside of a heavy freezer box (she gets hers from a pet supply store) and stuff old newspapers between the inside and outside container.

Produce packed this way will keep nicely in a shed or garage throughout the winter, Hansten said. If the temperature gets down around zero, she moves the boxes to her spare bedroom.

Hansten said carrots will keep well in a bucket of sand set inside a 10-gallon cream can with its narrow top sawed off. Or, the cream can may be buried in a hole dug its full length plus three or four feet to spare. This way, the inside bucket is not necessary. Cover the can with straw, put a board over the top and put dirt over that.

Instead of storing all your apples this way, you might cut some up and make...

APPLE PIE FILLING

Makes 7 quarts
6 quarts fresh apples
3/4 cups sugar
1/4 cups A. T. Thick Gel*
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg (optional)
2/3 cups cold water
5 cups apple juice
X cup bottled lemon juice
*A. T. Thick Gel is found in the gelatin section of the supermarket.
Peel, core and slice apples 1 inch thick into container of water with 1 tablespoon fruit freshener added to it.
Into a large kettle put water, Thick Gel, sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg, apple juice and lemon juice. Boil on medium heat, stir constantly until thick.
Put 4 cups of the apples into a 1-quart fruit jar, and add the 1 cup hot liquid leaving 1/2 inch head space. Wash off jar; put lid on, and process in water bath for 35 minutes at sea level.
"It is #1 apple pie filling," Hansten said. "You can have it on hand any time and every time."

Here's another way Hansten uses apples.

DUTCH APPLE PIE

Makes one 9 inch pie
For the crust, combine in a large bowl:
1/2 cups flour
1/4 cups sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Cut in:
1/2 cup oil
Add:
2 tablespoons cold milk
Knead and form into a ball. Place in pie pan and press along bottom and sides. Flute top edges. Cool in refrigerator.
Combine in mixing bowl:
5 cups cooking apples, cored and sliced thin
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon lemon juice (fresh or bottled)
Pour into pie shell.
Mix the following with your fingers until crumbly; then sprinkle over top:
1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter
Place pie in brown paper bag. Fold and seal under. Bake in preheated oven at 350 degrees for 1 hour and 45 minutes. No peaking in bag. Serve warm or cold.
"It makes a beautiful pie," Hansten said. "It's a super number one for anyone who's in a hurry."
When apricots are in season, Hansten makes...

SPICY BARBECUE SAUCE

Makes 12 pints
12 cups ground or chopped apricots
2 cups lime juice or lemon juice
6 cups sugar
1 and 1/2 cups A. T. Thick Gel
2 quarts catsup
30 whole allspice, crushed
40 whole cloves, crushed
Mix apricots and lime juice in a heavy, thick 8-quart pan.
Stir in sugar and Thick Gel and bring to boil, stirring constantly. Blend in remaining ingredients and boil for 1 minute. Fill jars. Leave 1/2 inch head space. Adjust lids. Process in water bath for 35 minutes at sea level.

baked ham, barbecued chicken or turkey.

And here's a good way to preserve these remaining fresh tomatoes.

MANDARIN SAUCE

Makes 12 pints
8 cups tomatoes, peeled and chopped
4 cups onions, chopped
2 cups pincapple tidbits, reserve juice
4 cups green peppers, chopped
5 cups sugar
8 tablespoons soy sauce (optional)
1 cup sugar
1 cup A. T. Thick Gel
1 cup water
Combine tomatoes, onions, pincapple and green peppers in an 8-10 quart

pan. Add:
5 cups sugar
3 cups vinegar

Bring to boil. In a bowl, add the pincapple juice and Thick Gel to the 1 cup sugar and water. Gradually add pincapple liquid to the hot mixture, and let boil another 5 minutes, stirring constantly, until thick. Remove from heat. Spoon into pint jars, leaving 1/2 inch head space. Process immediately in hot water bath for 35 minutes at sea level.

"This is good over fried or baked chicken or on pork chops - or just about anything you want to put it over," Hansten said. "It is outstanding."

Tailgate

1 round loaf (1 pound) unsliced bread
4 lettuce leaves
1 package (12 ounces) Louis-Rich Variety-Pak
1 package (6 ounces) sliced Swiss cheese
8 long wood or plastic skewers

- Combine first four ingredients and half the dressing in a bowl. Let stand 15 minutes; drain.
- Meanwhile, cut bread in half horizontally. Hollow out bread from both halves leaving a shell about 1-inch thick. Sprinkle remaining dressing on each bread half.
- Line bottom half of bread with 2 lettuce leaves. Top with half the meat and cheese slices, vegetables, remaining meat and cheese slices, lettuce and top half of bread.
- Insert 8 long skewers in a circle through sandwich to secure. Cut into wedges.
- Makes 8 sandwiches.

Sandwich can be made, wrapped in plastic wrap and refrigerated up to 4 hours before serving.

Nutrition Information Per Serving: Calories - 380; protein - 19 g.; carbohydrates - 32 g.; fat - 20 g.; cholesterol - 50 mg.; and sodium - 1050 mg.

Prep Time: 20 minutes.

REFEREE'S FAVORITE POTATO SALAD

4 medium potatoes, peeled, cut into 1/2-inch cubes, cooked
8 slices Louis Rich Turkey Bacon
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 small cucumber, diced
1/2 small onion, chopped

- Cut turkey bacon into 1/2-inch pieces. Heat in skillet on medium 8 minutes or until lightly browned, stirring occasionally.
- Combine mayonnaise, mustard and garlic powder in large bowl. Add potatoes, turkey bacon, cucumber and onion. Refrigerate. Makes 6 (1/2 cup) servings.

Letters of thanks

Kelly contribution helped with Paint Magic project

On behalf of Region V of the Department of Health and Welfare and the Paint Magic Team from Region V, I would like to extend sincere thanks to Richard Kelly of Kelly's Nursery for the kind contribution of plants for the Paint Magic project. I know that Mrs. Hansen was extremely pleased and appreciative.

The house looked great and the plants certainly added to the overall appearance.

Again, our heartfelt thanks.

Many helped with recent Shrine screening clinic

On behalf of the Magic Valley Shrine Council and as director of the Shrine Orthopedic Screening Clinic, I would like to personally thank all those Shriners and ladies who helped at the clinic.

I would also like to personally and publicly thank Kathya Gourley and Kathy Wendling, as well as Dr. Mark Spencer and Dr. Lorraine Tangen from Wendell. The doctors donated all of their time from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 18 to screen and examine 68 children.

The majority of these children were referred on to Shrine hospitals for evaluation of various elements. Without the efforts of these two doctors, the screening would not have been a success.

The Magic Valley Shrine Council looks forward to the next screening clinic and greater participation from physicians throughout the Magic Valley in ensuring that the children of this area do receive necessary evaluation and treatment.

Thanks to all who made Thousand Springs success

The Nature Conservancy of Idaho would like to thank everyone who made the Thousand Springs Festival of the Arts such a tremendous success.

We would especially like to thank our sponsors: Clear Springs Foods Inc., Glavin Bean Processing and First Interstate Bank in Twin Falls.

Special thanks would also have been given without the hard work and dedication shown by our volunteer committee: Diana Faulkner, Suzi Huxford, Jeff Fox, Catherine Stapp, Lolly Wilson, Carter Wilson and this year's poster artist, John McClusky.

In addition, we would like to express our heartfelt thanks to all the festival musicians and artists who gave so generously of their time and talents and the many local individuals and businesses who were so magnanimous in their support. We're looking forward to next year.

Wife wants family ties bound with blood

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 14 years just received a "Dear Daddy" letter from a 23-year-old girl.

He said he had slept with the girl's mother ONE night, three days before her husband returned from the service.

Phil rushed to have dinner with this girl and her fiancée, and now believes that she is his daughter.

Abby, how does he—or she, for that matter—know this to be a fact without a blood test?

This girl has been told by her mother since she was 13 that Phil is her father, and she believes it. I'm not saying it is not possible that she is his daughter, but I would like proof first.

Lucky for the girl, my husband is a decent, honorable man, and since he has met with her, he doesn't want to hurt her by asking for the blood test right off. He wants our son and me to meet this girl and get to know her.

I told him I do not want to establish a relationship with someone who only might be his daughter. Abby, I would accept her willingly if I knew it was a fact.

Meanwhile, this has started to put a wedge between my husband and me, and today I'm calling a therapist.

My message to her and others is: Only facts are important; speculation is not. If you learn that you are

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

not his biological child, it will have done damage to MY family.

—WANTS THE BLOOD TEST FIRST
DEAR WANTS: Insisting on a blood test is not unreasonable.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old senior in college. I've never had a boyfriend—actually, I've never been on a date or even been touched by a boy in a romantic way. I'd like to have a boyfriend, but I don't want to get hurt.

I don't want to have sex out of wedlock, and my friends are always telling me guys don't want to date girls who don't "put out."

I know I have missed out, and when I see other girls who have boyfriends, I get jealous. I also have mood swings and get very depressed as the week progresses from Monday through Friday. There is a counseling department in the college I attend, but I am too embarrassed to go.

I have no male friends. If I'm not with my girlfriends, I am in my room alone.

I am not gay. I am attracted to men. But whenever I meet someone who shows any interest in me, I run. If a guy asks for my phone number, I usually give a wrong number because I wouldn't know what to say if he called.

Sometimes I wish I could find a way to get involved in an arranged marriage—in about three years—because I don't know if I will be able to handle the dating and courting a relationship entails.

I have never discussed this with anyone else. It would be embarrassing. Can you help me?

—HIDING IN THE DORM

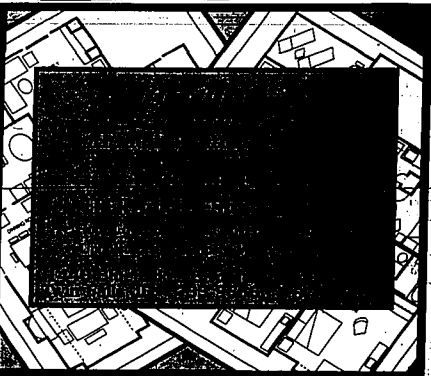

DEAR HIDING: An arranged marriage is no guarantee to happiness.

Although you profess a desire to date, you seem to lack confidence and appear to fear the dating game. Counseling will help you build your self-esteem and confidence. It will also help you learn social skills, which are important if you want to attract a boyfriend.

Please don't be embarrassed to seek help. You desperately need it. Good luck and God bless.

Food

Storing these things is not a problem either, she said. One way to do it is to put them into a cardboard container inside of a heavy freezer box (she gets hers from a pet supply store) and stuff old newspapers between the inside and outside container.

Produce packed this way will keep nicely in a shed or garage throughout the winter, Hansten said. If the temperature gets down around zero, she moves the boxes to her spare bedroom.

Hansten said carrots will keep well in a bucket of sand set inside a 10-gallon cream can with its narrow top sawed off. Or, the cream can may be buried in a hole dug its full length plus three or four feet to spare. This way, the inside bucket is not necessary. Cover the can with straw, put a board over the top and put dirt over that.

Instead of storing all your apples this way, you might cut some up and make...

APPLE PIE FILLING

Makes 7 quarts
6 quarts fresh apples
5 1/2 cups sugar
1 1/2 cups A. T. Thick Gel*
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg (optional)
2 1/2 cups cold water
5 cups apple juice
1/2 cup bottled lemon juice
*A. T. Thick Gel is found in the gelatin section of the supermarket.
Peel, core and slice apples 1 inch thick into container of water with 1 tablespoon fruit freshener added to it.
Into a large kettle put water, Thick Gel, sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg, apple juice and lemon juice. Boil on medium heat, stir constantly until thick.
Put 4 cups of the apples into a 1-quart fruit jar, and add the 1 cup hot liquid leaving 1/2 inch head space. Wash off jar, put lid on, and process in water bath for 35 minutes at sea level.
Put #1 apple pie fillings, Hansten said. "You can have that on hand any time and every time."

Here's another way Hansten uses apples.

DUTCH APPLE PIE

Makes one 9-inch pie
For the crust, combine in a large bowl:
1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Cut in:
1/2 cup oil
Add:
2 tablespoons cold milk
Knead and form into a ball. Place in pie pan and press along bottom and sides. Flute top edges. Cool in refrigerator.
Combine in mixing bowl:
5 cups cooking apples, cored and sliced thin
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon lemon juice (fresh or bottled)
Pour into pie shell.
Mix the following with your fingers until crumbly; then sprinkle over top:

1/2 cup flour
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter
Place pie in brown paper bag. Fold and seal under. Bake in preheated oven at 350 degrees for 1 hour and 45 minutes. No pecking in bag. Serve warm or cold.
"It makes a beautiful pie," Hansten said. "It's super number one for anyone who's in a hurry."
When apricots are in season, Hansten makes...

SPICY BARBECUE SAUCE

Makes 12 pints
12 cups ground or chopped apricots
2 cups lime juice or lemon juice
6 cups sugar
1 and 1/3 cups A. T. Thick Gel
2 quarts catsup
30 whole allspice, crushed
40 whole cloves, crushed
Mix apricots and lime juice in a heavy, thick 8-quart pan.
Stir in sugar and Thick Gel and bring to boil, stirring constantly. Blend in remaining ingredients and boil for 1 minute. Fill jars. Leave 1/2 inch head space. Adjust lids. Process in water bath for 35 minutes at sea level.
Hansten said this is a good glaze for baked ham, barbecued chicken or turkey.

MANDARIN SAUCE

Makes 12 pints
8 cups tomatoes, peeled and chopped
4 cups onions, chopped
2 cans pineapple tidbits, reserve juice
4 cups green peppers, chopped
5 cups sugar
8 tablespoons soy sauce (optional)
1 cup sugar
1 cup A. T. Thick Gel
1 cup water
Combine tomatoes, onions, pineapple and green peppers in an 8-10 quart

pan. Add:
5 cups sugar
3 cups vinegar
Bring to boil. In a bowl, add the pineapple juice and Thick Gel to the 1 cup sugar and water. Gradually add pineapple liquid to the hot mixture, and let boil another 5 minutes, stirring constantly until thick. Remove from heat. Spoon into pint jars, leaving 1/2 inch head space. Process immediately in hot water bath for 35 minutes at sea level.
"This is good over fried or baked chicken or on pork chops - or just about anything you want to put it over," Hansten said. "It is outstanding."

Tailgate

1 round loaf (1 pound) unsliced bread
4 lettuce leaves
1 package (12 ounces) Louis Rich Variety Pack
1 package (6 ounces) sliced Swiss cheese
8 long wood or plastic skewers

Combine first four ingredients and half the dressing in a bowl. Let stand 15 minutes; drain.

Meanwhile, cut bread in half horizontally. Hollow out bread from both halves leaving a shell about 1-inch thick. Sprinkle remaining dressing on each bread half.

Line bottom half of bread with 2 lettuce leaves. Top with half the meat and cheese slices, vegetables, remaining meat and cheese slices, lettuce and top half of bread.

Insert 8 long skewers in a circle through sandwich to secure. Cut into wedges.
Makes 8 sandwiches.

8 slices Louis Rich Turkey Bacon
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 small cucumber, diced
1/2 small onion, chopped

Cut turkey bacon into 1/2-inch pieces. Heat in skillet on medium 8 minutes or until lightly browned, stirring occasionally.

Combine mayonnaise, mustard and garlic powder in large bowl. Add potatoes, turkey bacon, cucumber and onion. Refrigerate.
Makes 6 (1/2 cup) servings.

Comments:
This recipe can be prepared, covered and refrigerated up to 1 day before serving.

Tip: To prepare potatoes in microwave, combine potatoes and 1/2 cup water in 2-quart microwaveable casserole; cover. Microwave on HIGH 10 minutes or until tender, stirring halfway through cooking. Drain.

Sydney Omarr Horoscope

IF OCTOBER 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are sensitive, psychic, mother-er exerted much influence, you have gourmet appetite. You know plenty about management, commerce, and industry - people with money have confidence in you and this proves born during later years. You'll test in November, could be involved in political, charitable campaign. New love provides excitement during December.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Nothing nebulous, it's all solid, leadership, promotion, direction, money. Focus on organization, deadline, intensity of purpose. Older individual says, "You've earned this commission!"

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New, deal provides incentive to revolve project, long commitment. Focus on travel, distribution, participation in import-export project. Focus on publishing, advertising, delineation of information.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Attention revolves around individual, preciously distant, property value, standard regulations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't equate delay with defeat - promised financial aid really is in the way. Older individual you once helped will return favor - presto.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You'll be saying, "This is my kind of day!" Clear, high, circumstances take sudden, dramatic turn in your favor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You'll exude a subtle kind of personal respectability, individual, preciously distant, will offend the feelings. Wish comes true in dramatic fashion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Review Aquarius message. Utilize powers of persuasion - you'll win allies, you'll also be amazed by "secret helpers." You'll know that you'll stand alone. Leo, Aquarius persists...

King of the chicken dish

Q. Which "king" does the "king" in "Chicken a la King" refer to?

A. Clark King, a 19th-century New York Hotel proprietor. So say the word tracers.

Q. What's a "motel"?

A. Onetime name for "motel." About 55 years ago, it didn't take.

Q. You might ask the devout in Classified to say a little something to St. Bernardino of Siena - patron saint of advertisers.

Q. Who invented modern boxing gloves?

A. England's early bar-knuckled champion Jack Broughton. Argument continues over what those gloves were designed to protect - hands or faces. Both, no doubt. Broughton wanted to legitimize the sport. He wrote some rules, too.

Q. Husband, that sophisticated of an earlier news page, hysseeded most of his complaints in this manner: "Some folks can look so busy doing nothin' that they seem indispensable."

Our Love and War man came into his line of work fairly late in history. First marriage manual known was in Sanskrit, dating all the way back to 200 B.C.

Yes, mushrooms eat animals. Some mushrooms, some animals. The oyster mushroom eats roundworms, for example.

Seventy-seven percent of the husbands tell pollsters they'd marry their current wives, if they had it in, all over again, but only 50 percent of the wives say they'd marry the same husbands. That means wives are less satisfied, no? Maybe not. Could be it means husbands aren't telling the truth to the pollsters.

House opens up to embrace a declaration of independence

By Pamela Sherron
Chicago Tribune

From spring to fall, the windows to Susan and Bruce Miller's white Colonial home are almost always open to the sights, sounds and smells of what's going on outside.

One morning, a breeze rustles wind chimes and carries the sounds of a delivery van's mechanical whine as it brakes to a stop.

Another day brings the drama of two birds landing in a dead-hang on the feeder near the Millers' kitchen window.

"I love seeing all the movement that goes on outside," says Susan, 50, who had polio as a child and now uses a motorized wheelchair. "I love seeing people walk by and work on their lawns. I even love knowing someone is getting a delivery."

For Susan and the estimated 43 million others with disabilities in the United States, being part of the outside world translates into true barrier-free living. By design, the changing seasons and activities of others in the Millers' Winnetka, Ill. home are very much part of this home's interior.

Miller lives in a 10-room, 3,750-square-foot house that manages to be both accessible and attractive. It's a stunning example of design oriented for someone with physical disabilities, one free of the ramps and railings that say a person with a disability lives here.

The combination of aesthetics and accessibility — known as universal design — has become more important

Design home with disabled in mind

Chicago Tribune

Long before the Americans With Disabilities Act went into effect last year, people with disabilities recognized the need for universal design to meet their needs at home.

While the ADA calls for removing barriers in public places, it also has helped raise awareness that homes can be attractively designed without limiting the movement of a disabled person. "It's important for people with disabilities to know they have beautiful options in design," says Marjorie Rimland, president of the Illinois chapter of the American Society of Interior Designers.

But some options are not even considered because of budget limitations. "The bathroom is often the most expensive to redesign," says architect John Nelson, who says barrier-free remodeling may add an additional 10 to 20 percent to the tab.

"If a person needs a wheelchair to get proper radius it may mean demolishing the whole room and beginning again," says Nelson, who heads Environ Inc. and is president of the Chicago chapter of American Institute of Architects. "Not everyone is in a position to do this."

However, there are some low-cost adjustments that can be made, such as removing thresholds and moldings to give that extra inch, and restyling vanity sinks for wheelchair accessibility.

The American Association of Retired Persons offers other ideas in two free booklets (self-addressed stamped envelope required) called "The Perfect Fit: Creative Ideas for a Safe and Livable Home" (DI4823) and "The Do-able Renewable Home: Making Your Home Fit Your Needs" (DI2470) — available from the association, 601 E. St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20049.

than ever, not only because of the passage of the Americans With Disabilities Act in 1990 but also because of an aging population. According to Access Living, a group that promotes independent living for people with disabilities, some 70 percent of all Americans will suffer some loss of motor or visual skills at some point in their lives.

"When Susan and I remodeled the house, we wanted it to meet all of our needs," says Bruce, who is chairman and chief executive officer of Care Source, a Northbrook-based company that manages health care compensation programs.

"The house is designed in such a way that everybody wins. It will continue to serve Susan and I as we get older," says Bruce, 50.

The design benefits others in the family, as well. The Millers have two children, Lisa, 25, and Bruce Jr. ("B.J."), 22, who recently graduated from college and moved home to job hunt. The couple had no way of knowing their redesigned home would later benefit their son, whose legs and left arm were amputated after he suffered a severe electrical shock in an accident two years ago. He walks with prosthetic legs.

"After my son's accident I thought I was going to fall apart, but it kind of propelled me," says Susan, a board member of Access Living. "I just don't want his life to be about disability. I so want it to be about living."

The Millers purchased their home 10 years ago and presented their remodeling ideas to Winnetka-based architect Francis R. Stanton, who is now retired.

The two-story house is designed so that the first floor of rooms open into one another. The doorways are a few inches wider than usual and thresholds and sills are eliminated, making it easier to enter and exit a room.

The couple decided on a low-pile, wall-to-wall carpet in the living room, study and bedrooms. The area rugs, which are in the foyer, are tacked down so as not to budge when she moves across them.

There is also a phone-booth-sized elevator in the foyer, but when it's not in use, it resembles a cozy sitting area.

The kitchen is also a model of versatility, functioning as Susan's office and the center of family activities.

The cabinetry, designed by Kitchen Classics in Wilmette, has pull-out shelves and built-in turntables to put items within easy reach. "Everything is not at wheelchair height because I'm not sure I want that," says Susan. "What happens if I lose all function and Bruce, who is quite tall, is preparing all of the meals?"

Instead, she uses an adjustable stool (on casters that lock into place) when she cooks. "It gives me the mobility I need in a space that meets everyone else's needs, too."

Still, manufacturers could make life easier with lighter refrigerator doors and oven doors that open differently. "It seems possible because microwaves are almost featherweight and their doors open to the side."

In the bathroom, remodeling was kept to a minimum. The sink and vanity were reconfigured; a shower with a comfortable seat was added and doorway molding was removed. "It's not the most glamorous job in the world, but it looks good and it works for me."

Sanding to paint not always needed

Q. My wood kitchen cabinets are coated with varnish and I want to paint them white. I'd like to avoid the mess of sanding the cabinets before painting. Is there an alternative to sanding to get good adhesion for the paint? — J. Davidson

A. One alternative to sanding is to use a glossy-surface primer on the cabinets before painting such as Zinsser's Bulls Eye 1-2-3.

Another alternative is to use a liquid deglosser, such as Parks Rough & Ready, prior to painting. Deglossers, sold at some paint stores and home centers, chemically provide a tacky surface that will give good adhesion to the new paint. A deglosser is wiped onto the surface. Most deglossers are flammable and should be used only in well-ventilated areas.

Q. I'm an older person who lives alone and I worry about getting water in my basement and not knowing about it. I've heard there is an alarm that will sound if a basement floods. Can you give any details? — J. Centrella

A. Alarm systems to detect basement water have been around for a long time. An example is a battery-operated alarm available from Improvements, a Cleveland mail-order firm.

The water alarm, which costs about $20, has a sensor that is placed on the basement floor in an area where a water leak is possible. The sensor can also be mounted on the wall of a tub or pool, using a suction cup, to detect overflowing. A loud alarm sounds, and will continue for up to three days unless turned off, if water touches the sensor.

Bring geraniums in for the winter

It's October. Do you know where your geraniums are? They should be in the house by now.

Cathy Walworth
Green Thumbprints

Winters are too dull and dreary not to enjoy the rich red geranium blossoms in every window sill until spring gets around to springing next year.

Set up a potting area with as many pots as you can gather that are at least four inches wide. Six-inch pots last until spring. Set fresh potting soil nearby, as well as coffee filters, rooting hormone such as Rootone, and pruners. Cut geranium stems several inches long. With clever pruning, you should be able to get several baby plants from each mature one in the garden now.

Wash pots that have been sitting around a while, and if you're using clay, soak those overnight in plain water before you use them. Otherwise, the clay will leach water away from plant roots.

Put a coffee filter in the bottom of each pot to keep the soil from falling out, and fill halfway with damp potting soil.

If there are blooms on the stems, snap them off. The new plant will have enough to do making new roots without supporting flowers right now. Cut the stem long enough to stand up in the pot. Leaving at least five leaves, snap off all lower leaves and dip the fresh wounds in the rooting hormone. Set the stem in the damp soil and fill the pot to within an inch of the top. This head room is necessary to make watering easy.

Set the new plant in a shaded, cool spot until you see new growth. When new top growth appears, you can be sure that healthy roots have formed. The new geranium can live on sunny windowsills for the rest of the winter.

- Cultivate the flower beds with a hoe or three-tined fork to work in some of the mulch now. Buy enough new mulch to build it back up to three inches thick.

- Cut perennials back when they're through blooming, cover with mulch when we expect a freeze.

- Add to the compost pile with all this pruning covers, shrubs, spring-flowering bulbs.
- Leave glads in until the leaves wither a little more.

Woodworking fans include many women

By Nick Harder
Orange County Register

Last week my wife asked me if I would take a beginning woodworking class with her this fall. This might not be earth-shaking news to you, but I almost fell out of my chair.

It's not the first time my wife has asked me to take a class with her. Most of the classes, though, have been variations on a dance theme.

"Why do you want to take a woodworking class?" I asked. "I just thought it would be nice to learn to make some Christmas things and stuff like that," she answered. "Besides, it would be a way to amortize the thousands of dollars you spent on all those tools."

"OK," I said meekly. And so, this fall, somewhere in a community college classroom, we will learn together how to select wood, how to plan a project, how to use saws and files and clamps and ... well, you get the picture.

What nearly knocked me off my chair was not her suggestion that I take the class with her. Goodness knows I can learn something, no matter what I do.

Rather, what was surprising was the subject she chose: woodworking. This is a gentle woman, a woman who is most at home shopping in an Americana store, one of those places with cutesy little homemade ducks and cows and little baby chicks. A place where slate- and birds-egg blue are the dominant colors.

"My wife is not a woman I can see with goggles on trying to control a router. But you never know."

A day later, American Woodworker magazine sent me the results of a national survey on woodworking.

Did you know that 17 million Americans are involved in woodworking? American Woodworker's editors have seen their publication's circulation skyrocket from 20,000 in 1987 to 300,000 current subscribers.

Two things really impressed me in the survey. First, the survey determined that all these woodworkers

What impressed me was that more than half of all beginning woodworkers last year - 52 percent - were women.

— Nick Harder, columnist across the nation spent $10 billion last year on their craft. That's billion with a capital B. This is a lot of money in a recession.

Most of these woodworkers are men. You'd expect that. The typical American woodworker is 44 and married. He also is generally highly educated with an average household income of more than $43,000.

What impressed me, though, was that more than half of all beginning woodworkers last year - 52 percent - were women.

Much as I enjoy it, I think Tim Allen had better amend his Neanderthal nightclub act about men and tools. It's out of date. Women are taking up woodworking as never before in American history.

And I'd better hurry and sign up with my wife for that class. I don't want to get left behind. The things we do for love.

Try these tips for household maintenance

The Baltimore Sun

Here are some tips to help you around the house.

- Protect plumbing fixtures when painting a kitchen or bathroom: cover faucets with plastic bags to protect them from spatters.

- Dry mop or vacuum hardwood floors frequently. Apply two thin coats of paste wax or a solvent-based liquid wax to clean floors. Allow to dry thoroughly and buff in the direction of the wood grain with an electric polishing machine.

- Use adhesive tape instead of straight pins to mark hem lengths and to hold decorative trim in place before sewing.

- Hand-washed sweaters can air-dry by spreading them out on an opened lawn chair. The webbing allows the air to circulate around the sweater, which can retain its shape.

- Toddlers who balk at wearing bibs may be less reluctant to wear a bandanna around their necks before meal time. An old T-shirt can also protect clothing.

- Recycle plastic bags - usually filled with sample products or advertisements - that have been left hanging on your door. Use as trash bags while traveling in your car.

Agassi wants Las Vegas to change street names

LAS VEGAS — Tennis star Andre Agassi wants to have two streets in his exclusive neighborhood named after him, but it may not be so easy.

The 1992 Wimbledon champion has requested that two streets bordering his property at Spanish Hills Estates in southwest Las Vegas be changed to Agassi Avenue and Agassi Lane.

However, county officials cite a street-naming ordinance that would prevent such a move.

Agassi wants to change two private streets now named Sheppard Peak Avenue and Bluff Top Lane to Agassi Avenue and Agassi Lane. The Agassi family said they paid for the streets when they bought the lots and originally requested the names honoring Andre.

Zoning staff members are prepared to recommend denial.

"We typically do not allow the same name on streets going in different directions," said county zoning specialist Irene Navis. "It's confusing for operators of the 911 emergency line."

WSU center Wolfe foregoes season after knee surgery

PULLMAN, Wash. — Center Steve Wolfe will forego the remainder of the season after surgery on his left knee, Washington State coach Mike Price said Tuesday.

Wolfe, a 6-foot-4, 300-pound, fifth-year senior from Puget Sound, has had 11 operations on his left knee, including major surgery that sidelined him all of last season.

Price said Wolfe based his decision on the chance he might suffer permanent damage to the knee if he were to continue playing.

Emtman injury allows oldest Colt to return to lineup

INDIANAPOLIS — The oldest Colt is back in the starting lineup. Again, by default.

Sam Clancy would like to think he has earned the chance on his own, but he knows he owes his promotion to a season-ending injury to Steve Emtman, just like last year.

"I'm ready. I'm always ready when I'm on the sideline," the 6-foot-7, 300-pound defensive end said. "I think I'm a pretty decent player. I look for the time when they call my name. Even though I'm 35 years old, I still know I can go 60-70 plays. I know I can play the whole game."

Molitor motors homer, 2-run triple to lead Jays

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — It didn't matter where Paul Molitor played, after all. Only that he got to bat.

Molitor defused the DH debate for at least one game, hitting a two-run triple and a solo homer in leading the Toronto Blue Jays past the Philadelphia Phillies 10-3 Tuesday night for a 2-1 lead in the World Series.

AL batting champion John Olerud was sent to the bench to make room for Molitor at first base. Olerud sat placidly, trying to keep warm on a night when rain delayed the start for more than an hour, and saw Molitor fall to make three plays he might've made.

"Somehow I survived the defensive aspect of the game," Molitor said.

Molitor, however, started a nifty double play with the bases loaded that ended the eighth inning after Philadelphia rallied for one run. Besides, offense, not defense, was why Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston wanted Molitor in the lineup.

Molitor, who didn't find out until two hours before the scheduled start of the game that he was playing, tripled and scored in the first inning, homered in the

Will the Phillies even up the Series? Or will the Blue Jays continue to stretch their lead? Catch the Blue Jays against right-hander Tommy Greene is uncertain. Gaston said he wanted to get Olerud's bat back in business, and said he was reluctant to put Molitor at third base in place of Ed Sprague.

"I don't think I will be playing, unfortunately, because I'd like to be a part of going up 3-1. Cito's comments before the game indicated Eddie will be at third and John at first tomorrow."

"It looks to me like Cito made the right choice tonight," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said.

Olerud's only appearance was in the ninth, when he was on deck to pinch hit, but the last out was made with him still in the circle. Olerud, who was benched twice last year to make room for designated hitter Dave Winfield, became just the third batting champion to sit out a Series game: Chick Hafey did it in 1931 with the St. Louis Cardinals and Willie McGee did it in 1990 for Oakland after winning the title with St. Louis.

Burley outlasts A-2 field, advances to finals; Wood River, Jerome meet

By Mike Mallor

HAILEY — Burley outlasted the rest of the Class A-2 District 4 volleyball crew to ride the winner's bracket Tuesday into Thursday's tournament finals.

The Bobcats defeated Buhl 15-10, 15-9 before evening seven match points to get by Jerome 9-15, 15-5, 16-14.

More prep volleyball — D2

After falling to Jerome 15-12, 4-15, 15-12, host Wood River eliminated Buhl 11-15, 15-3, 15-11.

Wood River takes on Jerome at 6 p.m. Thursday. The winner then meets Burley, needing two wins to eliminate the Bobcats. Only one District 4 team moves on to the state tournament.

Burley trailed 14-9 in the final game against the Tigers. Kills by senior hitter Trudy Rigby notched the final two Bobcat points.

"Persistence. I think when we started coming back, (Jerome) shut down, and they were killing us before," said Burley Coach Jack Jackman. "They're a good team. I feel lucky to beat them."

In the opener, Buhl stayed with the Bobcats, leading 9-4 in the second game before Burley tallied the final 11 points.

"I thought Buhl played well, too," Jackman said. "I think we kept the ball in play pretty well. We had a lot of bodies on the floor."

The Wolverines had the deciding game tied at 11, but fell behind 14-11. Wood River then held off eight Jerome serves for

Overhead camera demeans ump, officials claim

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — CBS Sports senior vice president Rick Gentile hasn't talked to any umpires about the overhead replay camera that got them so upset at the World Series in Toronto, and he doesn't expect to.

"I am told by baseball that everything is under control," Gentile said Tuesday on his way to Philadelphia.

And where CBS planned to continue using its overhead angle to show whether strikes are strikes and balls are balls.

"The camera at the Vet doesn't do what the Skydome camera does. You can't track the baseball, and it's not a manned camera, but it still gives a great ball-strike perspective," said Gentile, who is in charge of overall production for CBS Sports.

"It's mounted over the top deck in a light tower, and, again, for that one purpose, it does give you a great look at homeplate," he said. "It's a very unforgiving camera. If that camera shows that a ball is outside, the ball is outside."

It's for that reason that the umpires became upset. It shows when they goof on a called strike, and World Series crew chief Dave Phillips said, "It just demeans us."

Gentile said CBS had used the angle during the season in Toronto, "and that's why we were surprised when this happened. Then, it sort of became a media issue, and hopefully it's sort of died down. It really only became a distraction, though. Not a big problem."

"Certainly, we try not to think about it when we look at a replay."

CBS was given permission by baseball to use the camera this year. Gentile said that he spoke with Dick Wagner, assistant to the chairman of the executive council, on Sunday, "and he said everything was under control. 'Keep doing what you're doing, and good luck.'"

Gentile confirmed that Richie Phillips, the chief lawyer for the Major League Umpires Association but no relation to Dave Phillips, tried to call him before the series opened Saturday.

"We were in our pregame show, and we couldn't take the call. We didn't hear back from him and we haven't heard anything from him since," Gentile said. "And I really don't expect to."

Bruins capitalize on mistakes

Minico volleyball season ends

By Brad Warr
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — The Twin Falls Bruins survived in the loser bracket while Minico saw its season end as the Region III volleyball tournament got underway at Highland high school Tuesday.

The Bruins lost to Pocatello 11-15, 15-10, 15-8 in the opener to force the loser out meeting with Minico, which fell 15-7, 15-10 to Highland.

In the second match of the evening, Minico exploded to a 7-0 lead over the Bruins behind the hitting of Farnham Keamania. The Bruins took advantage of Spartan mistakes and closed the lead to 9-8 as Laura Robertson kill.

The teams exchanged side-outs before Beck's Morgan served up six straight winners to give the Bruins a 14-11 advantage.

Minico's Michelle Bair then served her team into a 14-14 tie before a Minico mishit and an Emily Maughan swipe at the net gave the Bruins a 16-14 win.

Expensive souvenir

Lillehammer T-shirt draws $2,600 bid at Olympic auction

NEW YORK (AP) — An amazing fact: A one-of-a-kind Lillehammer Olympics T-shirt sold in Manhattan for $2,600. An even more amazing fact: Street vendors were not selling knockoffs of the shirt Tuesday afternoon.

The collector's edition shirt was sold at an auction outside the Plaza Hotel, with the Norwegian-American Chamber of Commerce buying the collectible following some semi-spirited bidding.

The T-shirt was one of just 1,000 on sale from the Lillehammer Olympic Organizing Committee — one day for the 1,000 days before the Winter Games begin on Feb. 12, 1994. Each shirt carries the number of days left until the opening ceremonies; the New York shirt bore the number 116.

"This is a remarkable and historic event," promised auctioneer Peer Kaarby, who was wrong on both counts. But it did add to the total amount of cash raised by the auctions: More than $500,000.

The proud owners of the shirt plan to have it framed and displayed in their boardroom, said Inger Tallaksen, who handled the bidding for the Chamber of Commerce. A New York T-shirt auction was particularly appropriate; Mike Tyson and Malcolm X are immortalized in 100 percent cotton on every other street corner in town.

The shirt was sold amid much polka and circumstance. The Scandinavian Accordion Club of New York provided the music, which attracted somewhat of an international crowd.

There was the Spanish-speaking youth who stood, head bobbing beneath his black baseball cap, as the accordionists ... uh, jammed. And the overbearing Australian who invited — LOUDLY invited — LOOC organizers for a beer at the Summer Games in 2000.

The New York T-shirt was only the fourth sold outside of Lillehammer. LOOC, in recent days, sold T-shirts in Chicago, Seattle and Minot, N.D. Incredibly, the Minot T-shirt brought the highest price of any of them: $3,700 from Eric Hilton of the Hilton Hotel chain.

"Have you ever been to Minot, N.D.?" asked ex-Norwegian Olympian Stein Erikson, who came on the U.S. tour. "It's not the end of the world, but you can see it from there."

The T-shirt came with several bonuses: A hand-woven Olympic sweater, an official Olympic cup bell, and a training run through Central Park with Greta Waltz. Bidder Tallaksen said she wasn't sure who would get the celebrity jog.

"Is that me? I have to digest that one a little," she said.

"I'll have to get in shape!"

Sherrard waits for word on hip injury

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Mike Sherrard knows the pain of broken bones and the frustration of sitting out entire seasons with injuries.

And now, the wide receiver who was off to such a great start in his first season with the New York Giants is getting acquainted with something that might be even more severe.

"Bo's Hip."

Five games into a three-year, $4.6 million contract with the Giants, Sherrard broke his left hip Sunday at the end of a 51-yard catch-and-run against Philadelphia.

The concern now is Bo's Hip, the street term for avascular necrosis, a dying of the bone cells. Bo Jackson developed the problem after sustaining a dislocated hip in the 1990 NFL playoffs. It eventually ended his career and led to a hip replacement.

Giants doctors can't say now whether the 30-year-old Sherrard will develop A.V.N. Tests are planned every three weeks. For now, the prescription is rest.

Sherrard, who was leading the Giants with 24 catches for 433 yards, knows the routine.

"I've been through injuries before and I know what it takes to get healthy," Sherrard said. "Obviously, I've never hurt my hip before, but I'm not really worried about it. It's going to get better. It's just a matter of time. I'm not worried about going through the same thing that Bo went through."

Mike Sherrard, hurt Sunday against Philadelphia, isn't worried about his latest injury.

Sherrard balanced himself on crutches and gingerly hopped up two small steps to a podium at a Giants Stadium news conference Tuesday.

"It's disappointing," were his first two words. There was no bitterness. He wasn't feeling sorry for himself. But disappointing did sum up his first season with the Giants and eight years in the NFL. Five of which have now been ruined by injuries.

1987 — compound fracture of both bones in his right leg. No games played.

1988 — refracture of right leg jogging on the beach in pre-season. No games played.

1989 — physically unable to perform because of prior injuries.

1990 — broken right fibula playing against Cleveland, Oct. 28. Seven games missed.

Investors submit bid for Patriots

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — After months of planning, an investment group seeking to bring the New England Patriots to Connecticut submitted a formal offer Tuesday to buy the NFL team for $133 million.

The move follows legislation approved last month to build a new stadium in Hartford if the team leaves Massachusetts.

"It's part of a process that we started June 30th with our announcement to develop legislation for a stadium," businessman Francis W. Murray said at a downtown luncheon. "This is simply another step along the way."

The offer was delivered to Goldman Sachs, the investment banking firm hired by Patriots owner James Orthwein to evaluate bids for the franchise.

Orthwein is looking to sell the Patriots and own an expansion team in St. Louis.

Murray, a former Patriots minority owner, leads the group of investors from Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Florida hoping to buy the franchise and move it from Foxboro, Mass., to Hartford.

"This is as strong a market, I think, as exists in the country based on its demographics, its per capita income, its location ... there's so many things at work here," he said.

Davis Cup team draws India for 1st round play

LONDON (AP) — Tom Gorman couldn't persuade the top American players to go to Australia. Now the new United States Davis Cup coach, Tom Gullickson, will try to get them to go to India.

The Americans were paired against India in the first round when the draw for the 1994 Davis Cup was held Tuesday.

"This is as formidable a first round as possible," Gullickson said. Playing away and against a team that is full of confidence from this year's efforts will provide a very tough task for our team."

It's not a first Davis Cup trip to India for the United States, which won matches there in 1961 and 1963. But Mike Davies, general manager of the International Tennis Federation, said it would not be the draw the Americans wanted.

"As well as the problems of climate, the players would have to get used to the food and water, far different from what they are used to,"

Davies, a former British Davis Cup player, said.

"Although these players travel the world, India has peculiarities of its own. A lot of sportsmen have gone over there and had stomach trouble."

That's a factor that could lead to an early problem for Gullickson, announced this month as Gorman's successor.

When the Americans were paired against Australia for the first round of the 1993 tournament, Gorman was unable to persuade Pete Sampras, Jim Courier and Andre Agassi to go.

The players said the match conflicted with their schedule, particularly as it was such a long way to travel. Brad Gilbert and David Wheaton went in their places and the Americans lost 4-1.

The irony is that Sampras and Courier could be Gullickson's first choice players for the March 25-27 match in India, which is likely to be played on grass in New Delhi, Calcutta or Madras.

Hoops summit draws coaches' ire

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The National Association of Basketball Coaches, without its boycotting black members, held its first issues summit Tuesday and covered topics ranging from the shortened shot clock to coaches' salaries to players' welfare.

The two-day gathering came about as a means for college basketball coaches to have some dialogue among themselves and the people running the NCAA over issues they felt they haven't been given a chance to be heard on.

Missing from the discussions on matters such as scholarship reduction and restricted earnings coaches were the black members of the organization. The Black Coaches Association boycotted the summit, with a number of black coaches instead meeting in Washington on Tuesday with the Black Congressional Caucus.

"We have a lot of empathy for what they're doing," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said of the black coaches. "I know I would be frustrated in their position. They made a decision and I applaud what they're doing."

The NABC broke the agenda into three main topics Tuesday — game-related issues, legislation and player welfare — and it was during the session on legislation that things got heated.

The main subjects discussed were the reduction of scholarships from 15 to 13 and the elimination of the part-time assistant coach, replaced with the restricted earnings entry-level position.

Louisville coach Dennis Crum was incensed that the position had an earnings limit of $16,000.

"If I want to pay my assistants out of money from my summer camp or just out of my own money, who's to say I can't?" he said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF. 'Half our life is spent trying to find something to do with the time we have rushed through life trying to save.' - Will Rogers. Today's South made an error that many would rue. He took an early opportunity to ruff a loser, and with that innocent-looking move, he lost his game.
