NATO considers East Bloc alliance

TRAVEMUENDE, Germany (AP) — NATO defense ministers agreed Wednesday to consider making "partners" of their former East Bloc foes and revamping alliance strategy to deal with nuclear threats from terrorists or renegade states.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin recommended the sweeping changes at the beginning of a two-day session of North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense ministers. The plans will undergo final scrutiny at a NATO summit in January.

"It's a brand new world out there," Aspin said prior to the meeting, a comment that fit his plans for changing NATO's mission as well as its extended membership.

"The old threat was thousands of warheads in the hands of the Soviet Union and we had equal numbers of those warheads," Aspin said. "What we face now is a handful of nuclear weapons in the hands of terrorists, terrorist groups, terrorist states."

A senior defense official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the defense ministers were receptive to Aspin's suggestion that the alliance update its approach to the nuclear threat.

Likewise, German Defense Minister Volker Ruehe said "I have the impression that there is a consensus" on the new partnership plan.

Aspin, in an interview with reporters, said a "Partnership for Peace" would be offered to the 22 former members of the Warsaw Pact and four European neutral nations — Sweden, Austria, Finland and Switzerland.

All former members of the former Soviet Union — including Russia and Ukraine — would be eligible, Aspin said.

While the partners would not be considered fully in NATO — because the alliance guarantees the security of its members' borders and the new plan would not — Aspin did not rule out the possibility of full membership later.

Top students admit cheating in school

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cheating is pervasive among the nation's top high school students, according to a survey of juniors and seniors with at least a B average.

Nearly 80 percent admitted some dishonesty, such as copying someone else's homework or cheating on an exam.

The survey by Who's Who Among American High School Students covered a wide range of topics and found that principals have a lot more to worry about than providing students a good education.

"High school is a very dangerous place today," Paul Krouse, the Who's Who publisher, said Tuesday.

The 24th Annual Survey of High Achievers, completed during the 1992-93 academic year that among the 1,975 students questioned:

- One in five of the females had been a victim of a sexual assault, in most instances by someone she knew. In one-third of the cases, the assailant was another student.
- One in three knows someone who has brought a weapon to school.
- Forty-two percent of the males have access to one or more firearms.
- More than half reported frequent fights between students. Five percent said there had been a shooting on school grounds, and 7.5 percent reported a knife fight.
- One-third considered suicide.

The survey also found the teen-agers had a "startling lack of responsibility about their physical welfare. AIDS doesn't scare them. Pregnancy does, but not enough to make them take precautions consistently. And drinking is a way of life, even behind the wheel."

Krouse said there is a sense of invulnerability during the teen years, the belief that "it can't happen to me."

That might partially explain the high rate of cheating, Krouse said students might think, "I'm not going to get caught, so what's the harm, what's the danger, what's the risk?"

— Lew Armistead, spokesman for the National Association of Secondary School Principals, said parents had to start taking more responsibility for their children. Only then, he said, can schools improve.

"Kids are seeing all around them that elected officials, business leaders, all of us are taking short cuts in life, and we need to understand that they're going to follow our examples," Armistead said.

Eighty percent of the students said cheating was common at their schools, and 78 percent admitted to doing some themselves. One-third said peer pressure prompted them to cheat.

The offenses:

- 67 percent said they had copied someone else's homework.
- 40 percent admitted they had cheated on a test or quiz.
- 25 percent said they had used summarized versions of books to avoid reading the full book.
- 19 percent said they had plagiarized part of an essay.

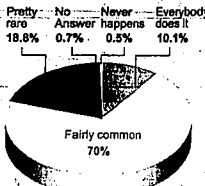

Yet at the same time the teens admitted cheating, "students are telling us that school could be much more challenging," Krouse said. "More than half are telling us they're studying eight hours a week or less. You would think that would tell us it's not too difficult for them to do well."

Despite the bleak picture of today's high school students, Krouse said there was one bright note.

Cheating

The overwhelming majority of high achievers surveyed admit to cheating. Most of them say they have copied some else's homework, but a disturbing 40.3% confess to having cheated on a test or quiz.

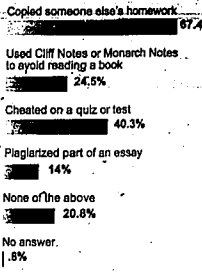

Question: How common is cheating?

U.S. bombers suffer more heavy losses

U.S. at War

On Oct. 14, 1943, the pilots of the 381st Bomb Group gathered at their base at Ridgewell in Essex for a briefing on the new mission.

When it was announced that the target was the ball-bearing complex at Schweinfurt, Germany, a shock wave ripped through the assemblage. This would be the second stop at Schweinfurt. The first had been Aug. 17.

The 381st had sent up 26 B-17s that day; 11 were shot down, and 12 others were damaged. One hundred-one men did not come home. Now they would have to do it again on Oct. 18.

In August, Schweinfurt had been half of a double strike, the other target being Regensburg. This time everyone would fly against Schweinfurt: 29 B-17 and 29 B-24 heavy bombers from 18 bomb groups would be launched. It would make or break the strategy of deep daylight strikes into Germany without fighter escort.

Yet the proponents of strategic bombing already faced one inescapable fact — that with the limited capabilities then available, targets had to be hit repeatedly to be destroyed and to be kept from being rebuilt. The bombers could get through, but at high loss rates, which accumulated mission after mission. In 1943, the 8th Air Force lost on average one-third of its bombers every month.

In the air battles over Western Europe, the United States was losing three bombers for every two German fighters shot down. As a member of the staff of the 8th Air Force's commander, Lt. Gen. Ira Eaker, wrote, "It had been a most gallant effort, but many, too many, had paid with their lives in disproving the Air Corps pre-war theory that the Flying Fortress could defend itself, unaided, against enemy fighters." But it would take Second Lieutenant Schweinfurt to convince Eaker himself.

Signs of life found on Earth

NEW YORK (AP) — In case you had any doubts: A new analysis of spacecraft data shows strong evidence of intelligent life on Earth.

The key tip-off is stray radio signals like those from radar and television stations, astronomer Carl Sagan and colleagues say.

Writing in today's issue of the journal Nature, they said the analysis provided a test of how well spacecraft can detect life on other worlds.

So far, they said, no strongly suggestive evidence of extraterrestrial life has appeared in spacecraft encounters with more than 60 planets, moons, comets and asteroids.

But a different story emerged when Sagan and colleagues examined data gathered by the Jupiter-bound Galileo spacecraft in December 1990, when it passed within 600 miles of Earth.

"Of all the data, the radio signals 'provide the only indication of intelligent, technological life on Earth,'" the researchers wrote. They noted that such signals would not have been available before this century.

Other signs of life included abundant amounts of oxygen, methane and nitrous oxide in the atmosphere, and the plant substance chlorophyll all over the planet as detected by near-infrared photography.

Democrats try to regain momentum on Clinton's health plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's congressional allies on health care tried to regain momentum for the White House on Wednesday, belittling a fellow Democrat's more conservative approach as "rock-bottom, Wal-Mart coverage." Senators supporting the president's bill launched a full-court press on behalf of Clinton. After several delays, the White House now hopes to deliver the bill to Congress next Wednesday.

Sens. Harris Wofford, D-Pa., and Tom Daschle, D-S.D., called in reporters to pick apart rival health care plans and push Clinton's proposal as the only politically realistic version that meets Americans' concerns about guaranteed coverage and cost control.

"A tourniquet, a Band-aid and snake oil," Wofford said, describing in turn plans by Sen. John Chafee, sponsor of the leading GOP alternative in the Senate; Rep. Jim Cooper, the conservative Democrats' voice; and Sen. Phil Gramm, author of a conservative Republican alternative.

Other Democrats planned to speak on the Senate floor over the next few days.

Wofford and Daschle said it was time to apply the same scrutiny to rival plans that Clinton's has received and to point out their shortcomings.

"It's panic," countered Gramm, the Texas Republican, of the Democrats' offensive. "The Democrats share my view they are losing the health care debate."

Cooper, the Tennessee Democrat, was flattered by the attack. "Being called Wal-Mart is not necessarily an insult.... Some in the administration should hope their plan should be so popular."

The offensive by Clinton's supporters was welcome news at the White House, which has lost momentum on health care since the president outlined his plan in broad strokes to Congress last month.

Some Democrats, while not faulting Clinton, say international crises in Somalia and Haiti have diverted attention from health care.

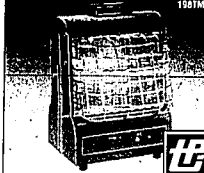

"We do need some sharpening of the differences between Clinton's health plan and the alternatives," said a White House aide who requested anonymity.

Republicans, trying to capitalize on a lull in the White House sales campaign for health care, launched TV ads this week deriding Clinton's approach.

Daschle and Wofford leveled their harshest criticism at a plan by Cooper, who claims to occupy the middle-ground in health care. Cooper has a "managed competition" plan he says would be less painful for businesses and require less government regulation. A coalition of 50 conservative Democrats and moderate Republicans back his version.

Cooper's plan does not cover everyone, Daschle said, and may prompt some businesses to drop current coverage to qualify for government vouchers. As many as 6 million Americans lose insurance under Cooper's plan, Daschle said.

It's time to revive universal norms

The first sign of what could be a cultural revival for our society has been sighted. Like the swallows coming back to Capistrano in the spring, it is a welcome harbinger of a season that is long overdue.

In the middle of a New York Times review of Madonna's performance at Madison Square Garden, there was this from writer Jon Pareles: "The Girlie Show" recognizes the diminishing returns of explicitness."

"What an elegant, even profound phrase: "the diminishing returns of explicitness." Does this mean we have touched bottom at last and are ready to climb out of the pit?

OK, so Howard Stern's book, which ought to have been printed on toilet paper, debuts on Sunday at No. 1 on the New York Times best-seller list. Storms often get in some last gusts before dissipating.

There are other indications that things may be changing as the fed-upness level increases, and people are less timid about calling evil and immorality by their right names.

MTV has removed scenes of pyromania from its vulgar "Beavis and Butt-head" cartoon series after a child started a copy-cut fire and burned down his family's trailer, killing his sister. A better step would be to cancel the entire network as a threat to the moral environment.

Still, the clouds occasionally part and some light shines through. In a Pentagon report on the 1991 Tailhook convention in Las Vegas during which a number of women say they were subjected to sexual harassment, senior officers were faulted for failing to curb the "atmosphere of debauchery" that permeated the gathering.

Debauchery is not a word we have heard lately, especially in a government report. An acknowledgment that debauchery exists, that it is recognizable and that it should not be tolerated offers some hope that perhaps the practices which define the word are no longer acceptable.

Jesse Jackson, having exhausted the political arena, is talking about a subject where his views could carry some weight. He is speaking in inner-city schools on a campaign "push for moral excellence."

A man telling young people to study three hours a night, respect the authority of parents and teachers and report to authorities the names of people who use or sell drugs and illegally possess guns.

A new group called Character Counts Coalition, co-chaired by political conservative actor Tom Selleck and the liberal former Congresswoman Barbara Jordan, wants to "improve the character of America's young people, based on six core ethical values: trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, justice and fairness, caring, civic virtue and citizenship."

We used to teach these values and much more before some liberals successfully expunged such values because they were said to keep company with religion.

And, speaking of religion, the liberal columnist Anna Quindlen laments the loss of the notion of God: "We liberals must acknowledge this: that while the rights of the individual are precious, at some deep level individualism alone does not suffice. And the ability of the radical right to seize and exploit the terrain of the soul has been helped in innumerable ways by the failure of so many of the rest of us to even acknowledge the soul's existence." Can I get an "Amen" for sister Anna?

This is precisely what the Pope is getting at in his latest encyclical, which, like his messages in Denver earlier this year, is directed not just to Catholics but to all people.

"The Splendor of Truth," the encyclical is called. It seeks to re-establish universal moral norms that are preferred to Galtup and that the message in the Sermon on the Mount is superior to "the politics of meaning."

It asserts that Moses is to be preferred to Galtup and that the message in the Sermon on the Mount is superior to "the politics of meaning."

It has been a long time since liberals and conservatives spoke in one voice about the need for national renewal. Perhaps this is the sign many of us have been waiting for. Perhaps we are finally waking up to the "diminishing returns of explicitness."

Administration declares war on Western water law

It is imperative to advise you of information I recently obtained at a meeting of the Water Policy Committee of the Western Legislative Conference in Las Vegas.

As a member of the committee, I had the opportunity to listen to and question Dan Beard, the newly appointed commissioner of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. He stated that one of the goals of the Clinton administration is to sharply increase charges to irrigators from federally constructed projects by eliminating what they consider to be "subsidies" to agriculture.

I asked Mr. Beard if he agreed that the U.S. Supreme Court has granted the states the sole authority to appropriate the waters within their own borders. He responded that such was true under the federal Reclamation Act but not under the Endangered Species Act and under the Clean Water Act. Mr. Beard also said the federal government must assert reserved water rights in courts to increase in-stream flows.

One can only conclude from this dialogue that this administration intends to find more water for its specific priorities which, in most cases, are in conflict with Western agricultural needs. By removing "subsidies," they intend to make some water too costly for agriculture to buy. If they cannot acquire enough water in this manner, they will employ the Clean Water and Endangered Species acts to gain more.

The new administration has declared war on Western water law (the Prior Appropriation Doctrine) as we have known it for decades. We must band together to prepare to fight the legal battles that are clearly before us.

Economically and aesthetically, Idaho is nothing without water. The people of Idaho, along with those of other states, must get our message to Congress and the Clinton administration before they make unilateral decisions which will destroy our economy and our way of life.

Somalis fire on U.S. pilots; civil war possible

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — U.S. helicopters drew grenade fire Wednesday, and a clan leader warned that Somalia may plunge back into civil war if the United Nations does not crack down on Mohamed Farrah Aidid's militia.

Mogadishu has been largely quiet since Aidid announced a unilateral cease-fire on Oct. 9. But occasional shooting incidents have occurred and there are signs of increased tension between Aidid and Ali Mahdi Mohamed, his clan rival who controls northern Mogadishu.

Mohamed Kaniare, chairman of Ali Mahdi's faction, which has not challenged the U.N. operation, told reporters Wednesday that Aidid's militiamen were continuing to fight.

"If U.S. troops and other U.N. peacekeepers 'cannot do anything, then we have to defend ourselves,' he said. 'The resumption of civil war is imminent, that is how it looks.'

A rocket-propelled grenade exploded in mid-air about 40 yards from a U.S. Army Blackhawk helicopter flying over an Aidid stronghold in southern Mogadishu before dawn Wednesday. No one was injured.

A few hours earlier, another Blackhawk pilot on patrol over Bakara market, an area teeming with Aidid supporters, reported that what he appeared to be a grenade passed within 20 to 40 feet without exploding.

U.N. officials said they believed the incidents were isolated and not a sign that the cease-fire was about to break down in southern Mogadishu, where Aidid's faction is concentrated.

President Clinton has sent heavy reinforcements to Somalia to strengthen the U.N. peacemaking force before he recalls American troops by March 31. At the same time, the United States has backed away from confrontation with Aidid and taken a more conciliatory approach in seeking a political settlement.

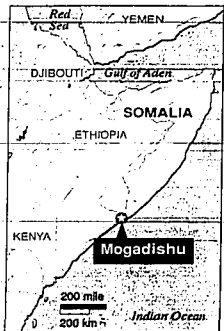

Maj. Gen. Thomas Montgomery, head of U.S. forces in Somalia, said Tuesday that American troops would stay off the streets of southern Mogadishu except for emergencies such as going to the aid of U.N. peacekeepers. In Washington, Madeleine Albright, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, testified Wednesday that "the U.N. is not actively pursuing the search mission for Aidid" in an attempt to hold him accountable for attacks on U.N. troops. But she said U.N. forces would continue to pressure those who put obstacles in the way of aid work. "Force and diplomacy go together," she said. By painting himself as the aggrieved party in a war with U.N. colonialists, Aidid has increased his stature in his own clan since he began attacks in June that killed dozens of peacekeepers, including 18 Americans on Oct. 3.

Nearly all the violence has occurred in southern Mogadishu; the rest of the country has been largely quiet except for bandit activity and localized inter-clan violence. Optimists say Somalia is getting better; pessimists say Aidid and rival warlords are biding their time until U.S. forces leave.

Ali Mahdi's backers are not pleased that Aidid remains at large and is forcing himself back into the political picture. They criticized the United States on Wednesday for dropping the effort to capture Aidid and refocusing on a political solution.

"We are sorry about what President Clinton is saying, of giving everything to Aidid. That is how it looks," said Kaniare, the ally of Ali Mahdi.

U.N. sets sights on leftover land mines

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Long after the last shot is fired, the world's wars are creating more casualties with the vast minefields they leave behind.

The United Nations estimates there are 100 million land mines scattered in 62 countries. First developed as defensive armaments, land mines are now often used to terrorize civilians in small-scale conflicts.

Once the fighting stops, though, the killing and maiming by mines continue.

"These land mines are blind weapons that cannot distinguish between a soldier and a civilian," Prince Sisowath Sirirath of Cambodia told the General Assembly Tuesday. "They recognize no peace treaty or cease-fire."

The United States and some other countries want a worldwide ban on the export of anti-personnel land mines.

The General Assembly wouldn't go that far Tuesday but agreed to request a report on the problem and to consider setting up a voluntary trust fund for training personnel and for clearing mines. U.S. delegate Rick Underfurnh said Washington still planned to push for a ban, in a resolution to be introduced to a U.N. committee. The United States already has its own ban on the export of mines.

The United Nations estimates there are at least one million mines in Western Sahara, nine million in Afghanistan and four million in Cambodia. Even after the end of its 12-year civil war, 200-300 Cambodians a month are dying or suffering the loss of arms and legs by land mines.

In their speeches, delegates offered several proposals for ending the terror:

- Sierra Leone suggested outlawing the production, sale and use of mines.

- Pakistan proposed requiring armies to map the location of mines so they can be removed after hostilities. "Carpet mining," indiscriminate dropping of mines from planes, should be banned.

Boise golf pro earns Snake River title

TWIN FALLS — Jeff Thomsen, the Boise professional who learned his golf on Twin Falls Municipal when his father was club pro here, topped Boise Professional Jerry Breaux 5 and 4 to claim top money of $2,000 in the Snake River Chapter, PGA, match play tournament Wednesday.

Thomsen trailed throughout the morning round but started coming back on the third-nine of the 36-hole match and then blew away on the final nine.
 Breaux was 2 up on the first nine and 1 up after 18. Thomsen turned that around to go 1 up after the third nine and then closed the match out on the 32nd green.

The other highlight of the tournament was turned in by Canyon Springs Professional Steve Meyerhoeffer who used a driver to score a hole-in-one on the par four, 13th hole.

Twin Falls Adult Basketball League schedules meeting

TWIN FALLS — The organizational meeting for the Twin Falls Adult Basketball League will be at 7 p.m. Wednesday at City Hall, upstairs in the conference room.

The fee is $150 per team plus a $30 player fee.
 A topic of discussion for the meeting will be whether to make separate three-month seasons with C League first followed by A and B together or to keep all three running at the same time for a six-month campaign.

For more information, contact the Twin Falls Office of Parks and Recreation at 736-2265.

Whitaker withdraws scoring protest over Chavez bout

AUSTIN, Texas — Pernell Whitaker's protest of a judge's scoring in his draw with Julio Cesar Chavez in San Antonio last month has been withdrawn, officials said.
 Jack Garrison, of the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation, which oversees boxing in the state, said Wednesday that Whitaker's promoters "didn't have a legitimate complaint."
 "The protest has been withdrawn," Garrison said. "It's kind of disappeared, and all the department is doing is a little review of boxing policies and rules to see if we can't do it better next time."

A spokesman for Whitaker's promoter, Dan Duva, confirmed that the objection had been dropped.

Duva filed a complaint with the Texas Department of Licensing and Regulation based on remarks by British judge Mickery Vann following the Sept. 10 WBC welterweight title bout in San Antonio's Alamodome.

Vann was quoted by London newspapers as saying he took it upon himself to deduct a point from Whitaker for a low blow.

Referee Joe Cortez of Las Vegas, the only official permitted under the rules to take a point away, declined to penalize Whitaker.

The single-point difference on Vann's scorecard would have given Whitaker a majority decision.

Philadelphia Phillies' Lenny Dykstra slams a two-run homer in the third inning Wednesday evening during Game 4 of the World Series in Philadelphia.

Jays slug Phillies

Philadelphia falls apart following White's 2-run triple in the 8th

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The game was already wacky and weird, and then came Wild Thing.

And then it all came apart for the Philadelphia Phillies.
 The Toronto Blue Jays somehow hung on long enough for Mitch Williams to appear in the midnight mist at Veterans Stadium, and they whacked him. Devon White's two-run triple capped a six-run rally in the eighth inning for a 15-14 victory Wednesday and a 3-1 lead in the World Series.

The Blue Jays won the high-scoring, 79 postseason games and moved within one victory of becoming the first World Series champions to repeat since the 1977-78 New York Yankees.

Toronto will try to win it tonight when Juan Guzman pitches against Curt Schilling.
 White was asked if he thought the game was over when the Blue Jays trailed by five with just two innings to play.

Dykstra's finest hour — B2

"In a way, yes," he said. "They were swinging the bat well, our pitching couldn't hold them down and Dykstra was hot."
 How Toronto won the longest nine-inning game in series history — 4 hours, 14 minutes — may have been hard for the Blue Jays to believe, but it was probably even harder for the 62,731 fans to stomach.

The crowd sat through a rain that did not stop, and saw their team start fast. Lenny Dykstra homered twice, doubled and tied a series record by scoring four runs and Mitch Thompson drove in five as the Phillies built a 12-7 lead after five innings.

But on a night when everyone looked like a designated hitter — Blue Jays DH Paul Molitor was back in the lineup, at third base — the big edge was not Please see SERIES/B2

Hitting duo pushes Filer to state tourney

By Mike Maller
 Times-News sports editor

A-3 volleyball

WENDELL — Gooding's string of 16-14 victories ran out one short of a trip to the state volleyball tournament Wednesday.
 After eliminating Valley 16-14, 16-14, the Senators took Game 1 from Canyon Conference champion Filer 16-14. But the Wildcats, behind big hitters Kelli McCabe and Angie Blastock, closed out the match and the Class A-3 District 4 tourney with 15-6, 15-8 wins.

Now 24-3, Filer advances to state at Skyline. Gooding meets a District 3 representative in Mountain Home Saturday for a state playoff.
 "When they got their backs to the wall, they really came out and play," said Filer Coach Ed Richards of his team. "We really picked up our defense in the last two games."

Filer showed the stronger attack throughout the match. Gooding countered with a scrambling defense that, especially in the first game, dug up everything the Wildcats hit and kept returning the ball until Filer made a mistake.
 "Gooding is a great team, a good defensive team," Richards said. "You got to step up and play to beat them."

 When the Senators' defense was less than excellent, Filer piled up points in a hurry. The Wildcats went from a 12-7 deficit to a 14-12 lead in the first game. In the second, Filer outscored the Senators 10-2 to close out the contest. In the third, Filer ran to an 8-2 lead and finished off the Senators with a 6-0 burst after Gooding battled back to 9-8.

"We ran out of steam," said Gooding Coach Joleen Toone. "We played good, though. When you play three games at that effort."
 Gooding broke a 14-14 tie in the first Valley contest thanks to a couple of kills by Erica Gerberding. The Vikings led the second game 9-2 and held off a Senator comeback long enough to try three game points at 14-12. But Gooding finished its rally to take the decision.

The Senators will play at 3 p.m. Saturday at Mountain Home. Their opponent will be determined at the District 3 tourney tonight in Fruitland. make us No. 1 (the Bruins beat Capital head-to-head) and that would let us host the first two playoff games," said Coach Jon Jund.
 "Centennial has to win this one to get into the playoffs," Jund pointed out. "Their added incentives are getting a chance to knock out No. 1 and remembering last year's 22-19 overtime loss to us."
 Much of that memory is found on the offensive side of the football as Centennial has 10 senior starters while the defensive unit is pretty well split between seniors and underclassmen.
 "Defensively we must contain their tailback, Mike Forsy," Jund said. "They like to throw to him and move him into wide receiver positions with motion. He's also their backup quarterback so you have to be prepared

Pocatello shuts down Twin Falls

By Brad Warr

POCATELLO — The Twin Falls Bruins were stopped short of reaching the state tournament automatically Wednesday night when they ran into a hot Pocatello team on the final day of the regional tournament.

A-1 volleyball

The Bruins dropped the match 15-3, 4-15, 6-15 as the Indians earned the right to represent the region next week in Post Falls.

However, the Bruins fought their way into the championship match by topping Highland 10-15, 15-10, 15-12 earlier in the night. That assures them of a second chance of making state in a playoff somewhere in eastern Idaho Saturday.

In the opener, Twin Falls rebounded from a shaky start to take the second game behind the serving of Mandy Owens and net play of Rachel Lyman. The third game was close as Tami Dixon served the Rams to within two before Lyman and Emily Maught took control of the net to give the Bruins the critical 15-12 win.

No. 1 Bruins travel to Boise in search of berth

By Larry Hovey
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins find themselves in the rafted air of being No. 1 in the Idaho Class A-1 football polls as they travel to Boise Friday night still in pursuit of a post-season playoff berth.

The Bruins will meet the Centennial Patriots at 6 p.m. Friday in the Boise State Bronco Stadium. The Capital-Boise matchup with complete the double-header.
 Twin Falls, 6-1 overall and 3-1 in the playoff pod, is tied with Capital with a loss. Centennial, Borah, Boise and Nampa all have three defeats. So a Twin Falls win Friday would guarantee the Bruins no worse than second in the final standings and a host designation for the first playoff game.

Lewiston earns unanimous nod

The Associated Press

Lewiston was the only unanimous No. 1 choice of Idaho sportswriters and broadcasters in this week's Associated Press high school football poll.
 The Bengals returned to the top of the A-1 Division II rankings after three teams in last week's top five lost. Lewiston — 6-1 with two games left in the regular season — moved past Idaho Falls after beating Post Falls 45-7 last week. Blackfoot moved from fourth to second and Idaho Falls dropped to third. The Tigers were followed by Caldwell and Madison of Rexburg, which moved into the rankings after a 16-10 victory over Idaho Falls.
 A shakeup also occurred in A-1 Division I where: Twin Falls became the third different top-ranked team in as many weeks. Second-ranked Highland of Pocatello defeated last week's top team, Pocatello, 42-16, dropping the Indians to fourth. Capital of Boise moved from fourth to third, and Borah of Boise reentered the rankings at No. 5 after beating previously fifth-ranked Coeur d'Alene 21-19.

 Undeclared Lakeland of Rathdrum and Weiser remained first and second among A-2 teams. Bonners Ferry moved from fifth to third. Burley and Marsh Valley moved into the rankings at fourth and fifth after beating Jerome and Snake River, which were ranked third and fourth last week.
 The state's ranked A-3 teams have the best combined record of the six classes with only one loss in 35 games among them. Idle Teton of Driggs retained its No. 1 ranking by a two-point margin over Glens Ferry. Lapwai, Fruitland and West Side of Dayton remained third, fourth and fifth.
 The top four places in A-4 remained the same: Rimrock of Bruneau, Oakley, Mackay and Murtaugh. Nampa Christian took Wilder's place at No. 5.
 The top eight-man teams all held their positions from last week. Back are Carey, Notus, Kendrick, Clark Fork and Deary.

Will Notre Dame slow USC's road to recovery?

The Associated Press

Unlike his Southern Cal players, John Robinson knows what it's like to beat Notre Dame.

During Robinson's first-term-as-USC coach from 1976-82, the Trojans went 6-1 against the Fighting Irish. Since then, Southern Cal has lost 10 straight to Notre Dame.

Robinson, who returned to Southern Cal this season after nine years in the NFL and one as a broadcaster, will try to snap the streak Saturday when the Trojans meet the second-ranked Irish in South Bend.

"The game ... almost always has had national significance," Robinson said. "There were times when we were up and they were down, and times when they were up and we were down, but it always seemed to be a memorable game."

Notre Dame (7-0) is favored by 1 1/2 points, a reflection of how far the Trojans (4-3) have fallen since Robinson's first stint at USC.

"We want these games to be even," he said. "That's one of the responsibilities that I have, to bring our program back."

The Trojans are heading in the right direction, winning three of their last four. And they're doing it in surprising style, preferring the pass-to-the-ground game that produced four Heisman Trophy-winning tailbacks from 1965-81.

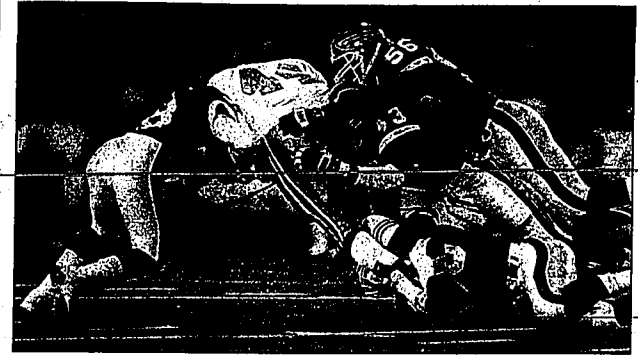

Southern Cal is the second-worst rushing team in the Pac-10, but has one of the nation's top aerial attacks. Quarterback Rob Johnson is the NCAA's 12th-rated passer and receiver Johnnie Morton is averaging 7.7 catches and 125.6 yards per game.

Tough tackling

Buffalo Bills' Darryl Talley (56) leads the Bills in tackles this season.

New York fans live for Talley whacks

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — In Darryl Talley's football world, there are the "Talley Whackers," who are his fans, and the "Talley Whacked," who are his opponents.

"My college coach, Gary Traquill, looked at us playing spring ball and he said, 'Damn, he really whacks people,'" Talley said Wednesday. "I whacked a guy in the Pitt game and he started calling me that every since."

Now his fan club posts their sign at every Buffalo Bills home game: "Those who live for a good Talley whack have never had it better."

Talley has 52 tackles this season — tops on the Bills and an impressive average of 10.2 a game.

"It's guy's amazing," coach Marv Levy said.

On a defense that leads the NFL, along with Pittsburgh, with 20 takeaways, Talley has made more than his share of big plays. Going into Sunday's game against the New York Jets, the linebacker has forced a fumble in three straight games.

"He answers the bell all the time," Levy said. "He's a great leader on the field and that's where your leaders are — on the field, not in the locker room."

Talley, who his teammates voted one of their captains, is modest when someone asks about his leadership qualities.

"I like everybody else around me to play at the level I play and the way I think that they should be playing," he said. "So I tell everybody, 'Hey, come on, get your butt in gear, you gotta go.'"

Nobody has to say that to Talley. They know Talley is already going.

"Sometimes guys tell me, 'Darryl, calm down,' Bruce (Smith) tells me that all the time," Talley said. "Because once I get in the game, I lose everything, I'm just get into the football."

Talley summarizes his energetic playing style simply. "I run pretty rich during the game," he said. "I'm not a real lean fuel-burner at that time."

His enthusiasm for the game has only wavered once during his 11-year pro career. That was when Hank Bullough joined the Bills as their defensive coordinator in 1985, two years after Talley came to Buffalo as a second-round draft choice out of West Virginia.

"Everybody played bad in a game and we got beat and he just stood up and pointed me out during a defensive meeting and told me flat out, 'If I was head coach, you'd be sitting,'" Talley remembered.

Sure enough, when Bullough became head coach halfway through the season, he benched Talley, who returned to the lineup shortly before the Bills fired Bullough in 1986.

Talley said he began to thrive after the Bills scrapped Bullough's read-and-react style of defense.

"Under (defensive coordinator) Walt Corey's system, you're allowed to attack the line of scrimmage," he said. "As long as you attack the line of scrimmage, you can make plays."

Talley has made enough plays over the Bills' championship run to lose the "underrated" tag he had five seasons ago. He's been to the Pro Bowl twice, but he still doesn't accept the fact he's no longer unheralded.

"It's hard for me to accept after being snubbed at it for so many years," he said. "But it's like a guy told me once. Don't take anything about this game personal — until the guy tells you he wants to see you upstairs in the front office with your playbook."

Talley's play so far this season indicates that day won't be coming, soon.

O'Brien helps drive for center funds

CHULA VISTA, Calif. (AP) — When the weather turns bitter in Moscow, Idaho, world decathlon champion Dan O'Brien can hop a plane and join buddy Dave Johnson for workouts at the first warm-weather training center for Olympic athletes.

O'Brien joined current and former Olympic athletes at a preview Wednesday as the San Diego National Sports Training Foundation began a drive to raise the final $3.5 million needed to complete the $62.5 million ARCO Training Center by summer.

With the temperature heading toward the mid-80s, O'Brien led a group of school children on a lap on the uncompleted 400-meter track.

"This facility will enable me to get out of some very cold weather during the winter months," said O'Brien, who missed the 1992 Olympics because of a Trijals gaffe but came back and set the world record with 8,891 points. "To have an opportunity to come down here in the middle of the winter, in the bad season for me, it would really mean a lot."

Construction of the 150-acre training center is about 65 percent completed.

When it's done, it will be given to the U.S. Olympic Committee. It will provide venues for athletes in 10 sports, with plans to expand to 13.

The USOC also operates training centers in Lake Placid, N.Y., and Colorado Springs.

"Both of them are below freezing several months of the year," said Patrick Barry, vice president of the San Diego National Sports Training Foundation. "As you can see, on a day like today, a lot of those athletes would prefer to be here than in those facilities."

Lohr pulls out birdie, pulls into tie

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Bob Lohr capped an 8-under-par 64 with a last-hole birdie and moved into a tie for the first-round lead Wednesday in the five-day Las Vegas Invitational.

Lohr, who lost at San Antonio in a playoff only four days ago, also birdied six holes in a row at the TPC at Summerlin, one of three desert courses used for the 90-hole event.

But they're free effort-padded in comparison to the 64 compiled by Australian Jeff Woodland at the Desert Inn, Lohr said.

"I don't know who shot what anywhere else, but Woodland is the one I'm worried about," he said. "A 64 at the D1? Wow!"

Gil Morgan, 47, matched Lohr's effort at the TPC and was the third man in a tie for the top spot which, according to lefty Phil Mickelson, meant very little in this tournament.

"You don't even think about the first round, particularly in this tournament. You just think about how low you have to go tomorrow," Mickelson said after a 65 at the TPC left him one shot off the pace.

Oilers' Williams won't file grievance over docked pay

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers tackle David Williams decided Wednesday against filing a grievance over being docked pay for missing a game to be with his wife and newborn son.

Bolstered by public support from vice President Al Gore and besieged with invitations to appear on network news shows, Williams said he remained convinced he did the right thing in skipping last Sunday's game to be with his family and hoped the $11,111 paycheck could go to charity.

But, he added, it was time to get back to football.

"David feels strongly he did what was right for him," Leigh Steinberg, Williams' attorney, said. "He wishes the Oilers taken a different position but under the circumstances, he's happy that, at a critical time, he made a value decision which hopefully means he is a good role model."

Steinberg said Williams wanted to donate the game check to a local charity called Kid Care, which provides meals and performs other services for underprivileged children in the city.

"The last few days have been a swirl," Steinberg said. "At some level, David just wanted to get back to normal and play football. David stuck by their man."

Steinberg said the Williams' had received overwhelming support. He said fans were sending donations to help Williams recoup his losses, with $1,100 received at last count.

In New York, Gore said the Clinton administration supported Williams' stand.

"Being with your family and building a strong family is important," the vice president said.

Steinberg said numerous network programs wanted Williams to tell his story but those plans, now, are on hold for now.

"His central thrust right now is to get focused on football," Steinberg said.

Although they are backing off filing an appeal, Steinberg said the subject should be addressed.

Williams' wife, Jennifer, said she was in the hospital when Williams was born. She said she was in the hospital when Williams was born. She said she was in the hospital when Williams was born.

"There's still an important principle here," Steinberg said. "The reason the conflict developed the way it did was there is a general gap here, pro football ultimately will have to come to terms with this topic. This is not the last case of this."

"The Oilers gave Williams permission to miss all of Saturday's team activities and the team charter to Boston for Sunday's game with New England.

Their complaint was that Williams didn't make an effort to get to the game after the birth of Scott Cooper Williams at 7:25 p.m. EDT Saturday.

"We've confirmed flights that left after 9 p.m. to connect and get him to Boston fairly early on Sunday morning," Oilers attorney Steve Underwood said.

Williams was strongly criticized by assistant coaches following Sunday's game. But he drew immediate sympathy when he showed up at the club's practice facility on Monday with a box of cigars and a Polaroid picture of him holding his 9-pound, 15-ounce son.

Accident victim remains in serious condition

TWIN FALLS - An 18-year-old woman remained in serious condition Wednesday at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, a day after a car crash that killed the woman whose car she was riding in.

Jennifer Jackson was the only passenger in a car driven by Penny Louise Wamego, 19, of Twin Falls.

According to the Idaho State Police, Wamego ran a stop sign at the intersection of 2500 North and 2700 East, south of Twin Falls, about 4:50 p.m. Tuesday. Her 1988 Hyundai was hit broadside by a pickup driven by Brian E. Erke, 26, of Twin Falls.

Wamego was killed in the accident. Erke and his passenger, 25-year-old Thomas Charters, were treated at Magic Valley and released.

Water judge decides state's role essential to basin adjudication

TWIN FALLS - What role does the Idaho Department of Water Resources play in the pending adjudication of water rights in the Snake River Basin?

Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt, who is presiding over the adjudication, has agreed with a group of Hagerman-area water-right holders that the question is so important it should be decided as soon as possible.

The Hagerman group had asked that 14 issues to be declared "basin-wide" in importance. Earlier this month, Hurlbutt declared the question of IDWR's role a "basin-wide issue," and said it included five other issues raised by the Hagerman group.

The eight remaining issues were too dependent on specific circumstances to be of general basin-wide importance, the judge ruled.

Hurlbutt awarded the Hagerman group past and future legal costs for the action, saying they had "provided a substantial service to this court and to all water users in the state" and noting that the state had "vicariously argued" against the IDWR's role being declared a basin-wide issue.

Highway district commissioners up for election Dec. 6

TWIN FALLS - Would-be commissioners of the Twin Falls Highway District have just over a week to file declarations of candidacy.

Two seats will be filled at the Dec. 6 election. The deadline for declaring one's candidacy is 5 p.m. Oct. 29 at the district office, 1234 Highland Ave. E.

People missing that deadline will have until Nov. 26 to file as write-in candidates. The district office will begin accepting absentee ballots on Nov. 15. Only votes for declared candidates will be counted.

State seat belt use up, but area use declines slightly to 61%

TWIN FALLS - Seat belt use is up across Idaho but down in the Magic Valley, according to a survey by state officials with the State Transportation Department.

Before the mandatory seat belt law went into effect in June 1986, 16 percent of all Idaho residents were buckling up. In the Magic Valley, that figure was 12 percent.

Since the law was passed, the use of seat belts statewide has gradually increased to its current level of 58 percent. That's up from the 56 percent use as of June 1993.

Seat belt use in the Magic Valley is now 61 percent. But that's down from the 66 percent mark in June. Twin Falls remains the most seat belt conscious community in the state, according to the transportation department's surveys. Some 74 percent of Twin Falls residents are buckling up, but that's down from 82 percent in June.

Drivers in the Burley/Heyburn area have a buckle-up of 41 percent, up from 39 percent in June. And the buckle-up rate for Rupert drivers is 40 percent, up from 39 percent in June.

Leaf disposal program offers 3 options for yard waste

TWIN FALLS - City Sanitation Inspector Sherry Jeff says that the city and PSI Waste Systems are continuing the leaf disposal program this fall.

City residents have three options for disposal of their fallen leaves.

- Home Composting. For more information, call Inspector Jeff at 736-2264.
- Drop your leaves at Harmon Park on Harmon Park Avenue or at Sixth Avenue West just east of the animal shelter. Leaves may be put in containers at these locations.
- Bag your leaves and set them aside at your garage site for PSI to pick up and take to the landfill.

Judge rejects sheriffs' attorney requests

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - An Idaho Falls judge has denied requests by Twin Falls and Lincoln County sheriffs for approval to hire private attorneys in budget battles with their county commissioners.

In separate opinions on the two cases, however, Judge Ted V. Wood stated that Lincoln County Sheriff Steve Southwick and Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tousley might have two ways to challenge their commissioners in court for attorneys fees.

Wood said that Southwick and Tousley can appeal the decision by their commissioners in court. He also stated that the sheriffs can argue that the Idaho Constitution might entitle them to attorneys fees.

The sheriffs might have a third possible option - seeking a special prosecutor to help sort out their legal squabbles, Wood wrote.

Tousley and Southwick each say that the budgets their commissioners passed this year left them with inadequate money to run their departments as they are charged to do under the law.

The sheriffs said they needed legal advice regarding their budgets, but they said that the county prosecuting attorneys would have a conflict of interest because they also represent the commissioners.

The sheriffs asked their board of commissioners for public money to hire private attorneys. Both boards denied the requests.

Southwick

The sheriffs wanted the court to order their commissioners to let the sheriffs hire private attorneys. To avoid possible conflicts of interest, the sheriffs asked for a judge out of the 5th District to hear their cases.

Wood, who presides in the 7th District, took the cases and heard arguments on Oct. 7.

The sheriffs contended that Idaho law allows them to hire private attorneys, but the commissioners argued that it does not.

This week Wood ruled that Idaho law does not compel county commissioners to allow other elected officials to hire private attorneys with public money.

Wood River home prices still climbing

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - While the Wood River Valley isn't yet an exclusive haven for movie stars and the super rich, homes there continue to get more expensive.

How expensive?

Steve Kessler of Kessler Homes in Sun Valley told the Twin Falls Rotary Club Wednesday that the least expensive home last year cost $50,000 and the most expensive was $2.2 million.

So the median home price in the Hailey-Ketchum-Sun Valley area has reached $1,125 million. And that doesn't include the cost of the land.

MIKE BALSBURY/The Times-News

'There are a lot of starter homes, especially around Hailey. But it is going to get pricier and pricier.'

— Steve Kessler, Sun Valley builder

"I don't think the area is just an enclave of the Arnold Schwarzeneggers and the Bruce Willis of the world. There are a lot of starter homes, especially around Hailey. But it is going to get pricier and pricier," Kessler said.

While the median home price has now cleared the $1 million mark, the average home price in the Wood River Valley is about $240,000, he said.

The $2.2 million house was custom built and had 12,000 square feet of space. By comparison, the $50,000 house had 1,900 square feet.

Building permits so far this year have reached the $47 million mark for new homes in Blaine County and $19 million in commercial construction projects, he said.

While the dollar figures continue to reach record levels, the number of construction projects has slowed a little in recent years, Kessler said. As a result, he and other Blaine County builders aren't "importing" as many workers from Twin Falls, Jerome and Shoshone as they did last year and the year before.

Still, home demand remains strong in the Wood River Valley despite the high price of lumber, he said. The demand is fueled by the falling mortgage interest rates and declining living conditions elsewhere.

"Everybody wants to get out of California now. So they're going to Idaho or to Washington, which is pushing people out of Washington and into Idaho," Kessler said.

Officials are planning to tear down and expand the southwest side of Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital, says Administrator Marlis Jackman.

Growing Twin Falls clinic sues Utah financial firm

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A dispute about secret loan negotiations for construction has led to the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital's recent suit against a Utah financial firm.

Clinic officials haven't decided when construction will begin but intend to tear down and expand the southwest side of the building, said Administrator Marlis Jackman said.

The clinic filed a suit against PFC Inc. of Salt Lake City for telling First Security Bank of Idaho about the clinic's search for a loan to finance expansion. The suit was filed Friday afternoon in the Fifth Judicial Court.

Officials with PFC didn't return calls to comment.

Early this year, the clinic's directors began plans to build "Phase II" of the clinic, according to the suit. Clinic officials began negotiations with First Security Bank officers early this year about arranging a loan package to pay for the expansion.

But in the summer, clinic officials decided to shop around with other lenders for other loan terms.

And clinic officials contacted PFC, which conceals financing searches for companies. But clinic officials say they stipulated that PFC couldn't tell First Security that the clinic was shopping around with other lenders, according to the suit.

In August, PFC notified First Security that it was loan shopping for the clinic, according to the suit.

Now the clinic doesn't want to pay PFC's fee if First Security is eventually chosen as the lender for the expansion. And the clinic is asking for a judge to decide if a loan from First Security would force the clinic to pay PFC's fee.

"We decided to try to clear up this issue before a loan is taken out," said Patrick Brown, attorney for the clinic.

The contract between the clinic and PFC is included in the suit documents.

The agreement not to tell First Security isn't in the three-page contract. But the contract does include a clause that if there is a dispute between the two sides then the matter must be settled in a Utah court.

The contract also includes PFC's fee structure:

- 1.5 percent of the gross amount of the construction financing.
- 1 percent of the gross amount of any "permanent" or "mini-permanent" financing.
- 2 percent fee charged on any accounts receivable financing for a line of credit.

The clinic intends to tear down the old or part of its building, near Sixth Avenue East and Shoshone Street, and rebuild that wing, Jackman said.

But the clinic doesn't know when construction will begin or what its expansion project will entail, he said.

"We don't have the specifics back from the architect or the bidders," Jackman said.

And the clinic is still shopping around for a lender, he said.

Mock meeting uncovers rift in Hagerman city government

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN - A mock meeting Tuesday uncovered a problem festering between the Planning and Zoning Committee and the city government.

The mock meeting, run by the College of Southern Idaho personnel showing how to have better meetings, was part of the Hagerman Gem Community meeting Tuesday evening. CSI personnel hope a conflict resolution meeting next month will resolve the problem.

The mock meeting, led by Hagerman resident Neil King, resulted in a number of suggestions, reflecting people's concern about growth - control rate of expansion, limit growth to facilities, establish zoning, and review and enforce building codes.

Following the brainstorming session, planning committee members Maxine Paynter and Vern McClellan complained about a problem they had with the city council.

"The P&Z-going-plan-was-submitted-in-February-to-the-mayor," said Paynter. "We haven't seen or heard anything of it since."

"We really need to have P&Z meetings circulated in the council," said city councilwoman Mary Tempel.

Paynter said that the planning committee minutes are not approved.

In a group discussion it came out that minutes of a meeting are not approved until the following meeting and that waiting for approved minutes means five weeks delay. The council meets the first and third Tuesdays of the month, and the planning committee meets once a month on the second Tuesday.

Shannon suggested the committee submit unapproved minutes to the council so that the council knows what is going on, and submit the approved minutes as they become available.

Shannon suggested the next Gem meeting be a conflict resolution meeting that deals with the lack of communications between planning committee and the city council.

He said Mike Glenn, executive vice-president of CSI, and himself would act as facilitators. Shannon suggested inviting the mayor, city council, other city representatives, Gooding County planning and zoning committee representatives and the Hagerman planning committee.

"There are some people not here who are part of the process. That's not fair," said Tempel.

Shannon agreed. He also said the meeting would have no authority to make decisions, but it would provide an opportunity for people to air their feelings.

The conflict resolution meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 15 at the Senior Center.

Term-limit supporters decry attorney general's opinion

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The state attorney general's office says a term-limits initiative unveiled last month has major constitutional problems, but backers of the measure Wednesday called the advisory opinion "irrelevant nonsense."

Steve Tobison, chief of legislative and public affairs for Attorney General Larry EchoHawk, said the sections of the initiative limiting U.S. senators and representatives probably would be found unconstitutional if challenged in court.

The measure would deny ballot access to anyone who had served in the U.S. House of Representatives for six of the 11 years previous to the election, and to anyone who had served in the U.S. Senate for 12 of the previous 23 years.

It would place similar restrictions on statewide elected officials, state legislators, county commissioners and other county officials, mayors and city council members, and school board members.

Tobison's opinion, required by the state law governing initiatives, said the limits for state and local officials probably are permissible under the Idaho Constitution.

But, he wrote, "It is the opinion of this office that the proposed initiative, if passed and challenged in court, would be declared unconstitutional as an improper attempt by the state to impose qualifications upon candidates for Congress in addition to those expressed in the United States Constitution."

The Constitution sets age, citizenship, and residency requirements for members of Congress, and Tobison said "it is a well-established rule of law" that those requirements are exclusive.

He cited two instances in which state supreme courts have struck down attempts to add more qualifications, such as not being convicted of a felony or residing within the House district sought.

But Tobison's opinion is not binding, and Beau Parent, executive director of Idahoans for Term Limits, said his group would not remove the congressional limits from its measure.

In a written statement, Parent said he was surprised that the attorney general's office would "join House Speaker Tom Foley in

6 vie for top Gem corrections position

BOISE — The state Board of Correction has scheduled personal interviews with six of the 19 applicants to replace retiring Corrections Director Richard Vernon.

Chairman Nick Miller of Boise said the interviews Friday and Saturday will play a major role in the board's decision on a successor to Vernon, 62, who is quitting Jan. 1 for health reasons after nearly five years in the job.

Gaining interviews are: Arvon Arava, warden at the maximum security prison south of Boise and a 19-year veteran of the Idaho department; Brent Miller, warden at the new state women's prison in Pocatello and a 20-year department veteran; Daniel Leatham, who heads institutional support services for the Utah Corrections Department; James Spalding, director of prisons in Washington; Frederick Van Der Veur, warden at the Central Utah Correctional Facility; Thomas White, deputy commissioner for operations in the Connecticut prison system.

Idaho not immune to porn, group says

IDAHO FALLS — A problem with dealing with pornography is that some people don't think it's a problem.

That's the observation from organizers of a weeklong schedule of anti-porn observations.

Former state legislator Dane Watkins of Idaho Falls, president of Idaho Citizens for Decency, said his organization and the Family Life Enrichment Center organized the third annual event, "White Ribbon Week," to make people aware of the potential problems of pornography.

St. Luke's hospital to trim staff soon

BOISE — One of the largest hospitals in the state plans to reduce its staff of 1,900 to improve efficiency, officials say.

St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise within two weeks will announce its reduction plans, possibly by offering workers incentives to quit or retire early.

If they do not work, layoffs are a possibility, a letter to employees says. Patients are spending less time in the hospital, in Idaho and across the nation, and that means fewer workers are needed.

Man changes mind, denies killing wife

COEUR D'ALENE — To the surprise of the prosecutor, Danny Ray Aeschliman pleaded innocent in court Tuesday to a charge that he beat his wife to death.

Prosecutor Lansing Haynes said he had a plea agreement with Aeschliman in which the charge for the alleged crime was reduced from first-degree murder to second-degree and the defendant waived a preliminary hearing.

But after Aeschliman pleaded innocent before 1st District Judge James Judd, the prosecutor said he may request the charge be changed back to first-degree murder. Haynes said he learned of Aeschliman's change of heart only shortly before the hearing.

Aeschliman is scheduled to stand trial Nov. 22 on a charge that he fatally kicked and beat Mary Gretn Aeschliman, 25, in their Coeur d'Alene home Aug. 10. He remains in jail under $100,000 bond.

House may probe Bunker Hill cleanup

COEUR D'ALENE — A House committee may probe the government's seeming failure to seize $117 million in funds from Gulf USA to pay for the cleanup of Idaho's Bunker Hill smelter complex, a committee staffer says.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Interior Department Bunker Hill pensioners and Gulf bondholders went to court this week for a Gulf into involuntary bankruptcy.

Gulf owned the Bunker Hill smelter between 1968 and 1982. Kelllogg-area children were discovered to have high blood-lead counts from the smelter emissions.

Drop wife from fire suit, couple urges

BOISE — A Pennsylvania couple contends the 70-year-old wife should be dropped from a lawsuit stemming from a fire their motor home caused along the Payette River.

The lawsuit, filed by the state Department of Lands, seeks more than $1 million from Jeannie Howard and her husband, Fred, 68, of Lake Ariel, Pa. The state estimates that was the cost of fighting the 6,000-acre Cottonwood Creek fire in July 1992.

The car the Howards were towing behind their motor home blew a tire, causing sparks which ignited grass along the highway. The couple claims they had no idea of the problem until they stopped seven minutes later.

Sheriff doubts sketch is key to kidnap case

CHALLIS (AP) — A composite sketch of a man labeled as "suspect in the abduction of Stephanie Crane" is being circulated in the Challis area, but Sheriff Al Finley is playing down its importance.

Stephanie, 9, was last seen Oct. 11. Despite a massive search that's reached nationwide, and a $50,000 reward fund, no leads have been found.

Finley said his department did not release the sketch, although it might if the investigation "points in that direction." He said the sketch was drafted from a description given by children who saw a man watching Stephanie in the bowling alley where she was last seen.

"The composite is nothing more than a 'vague investigative lead,'" Finley said. He doesn't know how the sketch got out to the public.

"It was something for our purposes," he said. "It could be something, but on the other hand it might not be."

Law enforcement officials and residents of the small mountain community are desperate for clues after widespread searches last week failed to provide any help. Small groups still are looking in some remote areas, Finley said.

Finley said he and other investigators didn't want to release the sketch, concerned that innocent people resembling the drawing might be harmed.

Investigators have interviewed "a few look-alikes" resembling the man in the composite, Finley said. "So far, everyone we've interviewed has been eliminated."

The Fox television network program "America's Most Wanted" aired a short segment Tuesday night about Stephanie's disappearance. But as of Wednesday, Finley said he had no leads from the program.

Officials were looking for a small yellow pickup truck with red pin-stripes seen near Challis. High School, but numerous telephone tips have produced nothing, Finley said. Fourteen FBI investigators helped the case last week. Finley said. Three state investigators remain on the scene this week.

Boise council

hopeful decries lobbyist choice

BOISE (AP) — Former and current U.S. senators have been dragged into the re-election bid of Boise City Council President Sara Baker.

Challenger David Callister has accused Baker of spearheading the move to hire a legislative lobbyist without competitive bidding last year. And he said the choice of lobbyist Ken McClure gave the appearance of a conflict of interest.

Callister based his charge on the fact that McClure was a law partner of then-council member Jay Webb and that McClure's father, former U.S. Sen. James McClure, was the chairman of then Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne's successful campaign for the U.S. Senate.

Both Webb, now a member of the Northwest Power Planning Council, and a spokesman for Kempthorne disputed claims of a conflict, and Baker maintained there was no impropriety.

"We should be running from conflict of interest," Callister told The Idaho Statesman. "We picked the one lobbyist in the whole state that had that kind of conflict of interest. If this happened in Congress, we'd be shooting these people."

While acknowledging the decision was not unethical, Callister called it unbusinesslike because other lobbyists might have submitted lower bids for the work. McClure was paid nearly $14,000 by the city in 1992 and almost $39,000 this year. He has also been retained to represent the city before the Legislature next year.

Dunlap lawyer asks court for execution delay

BOISE (AP) — An attorney asked the Idaho Supreme Court to block the execution scheduled in nine days for convicted killer Timothy Alan Dunlap so an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court can be prepared.

Joan Fisher, Genesee, on Wednesday asked the Idaho court to allow time for preparation of an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, since Dunlap is scheduled to be executed Oct. 29.

In late afternoon, the Idaho court denied the request. That clears the way for a similar appeal directly to the nation's highest court.

Sixth District Judge William Woodard on Tuesday ordered Dunlap, 25, Sellersburg, Ind., to be executed for killing a bank teller in a Soda Springs bank robbery two years ago.

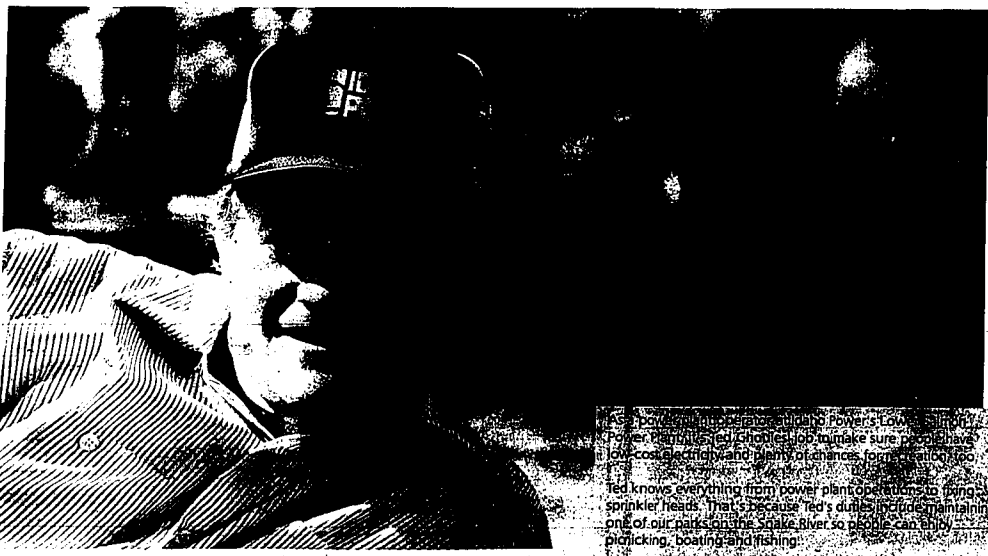

The Idaho Supreme Court this summer upheld the conviction and death penalty ordered for Dunlap, who becomes the 22nd man on Idaho's Death Row awaiting execution. But the state hasn't executed anyone in nearly 27 years, and all of the Death Row inmates are in various stages of appeal or awaiting resentencing.

Dunlap also admitted killing an ex-girlfriend, Belinda Bolanos, Hamilton, Ohio, by shooting her with a crossbow in Cincinnati and dumping her body along the Ohio River.

He also has been sentenced to death in that case.

Following his arrest in 1991, Dunlap said in an interview that he was not afraid to die because "it's time for the evil in my body to be put to rest. I'd just prefer that I would die."

Officials fear new outbreak of virus

FLAGSTAFF (AP) — Almost one-third of deer mice in Coconino County carry the deadly hantavirus, according to tests by officials concerned about a possible outbreak of the disease this fall when the rodents seek shelter indoors.

Recent tests show 31 percent of deer mice in northern Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado carry the respiratory disease that's killed 26 people, including four in Arizona, since it was discovered this summer, said George Graham, director of the Coconino County Department of Public Health.

Hantavirus is believed to be spread by airborne particles in mice urine and feces. And 12 states, most of them in the West, have reported the disease so far, health officials said.

Epidemics sometimes come in cycles, and state and local officials want to prevent new cases from occurring this fall, when rodents seek warmer climates, Graham said.

He wants the county Board of Supervisors to provide $8,440 for a brochure warning residents about the rodents and urging them to seek medical attention if they experience flu-like symptoms, common also for the hantavirus.

"At this time of year we have a real problem," Graham said. "This disease mimics the flu, and we don't want people to go through a self-diagnosis: If you have flu-like symptoms, go to a doctor. We also want to get the message out that people should consider all rodents to be potentially infectious."

New York native offers class teaching how to move to the Pacific Northwest

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Norm Rockmael teaches a class to help Southern Californians find the good life. It's called "How to Move to the Pacific Northwest."

"LA. has had its day, but now it has gone the way of Detroit and New York and Chicago and the other big cities," says Rockmael, an Irvine, Calif., real estate broker.

Rockmael, who eviks Switzerland, New Zealand and the Pacific Northwest the most beautiful places on earth, says some 1,000 people have taken his three-hour class.

"The idea started with friends from Eugene, Ore., who conducted how-to-move seminars in California."

"I told them, 'Why don't you stay in Eugene and sell real estate, and I'll do the seminars,'" Rockmael said in an interview with The Columbian newspaper in Vancouver.

He taught his first class two years ago and draws at least 25 people each time.

He gets $29 to $49 per student. Rockmael, a 63-year-old Brooklyn, N.Y., native, said his class' popularity is rooted in crime, crowding and pollution that are prompting people to leave Los Angeles for other parts of Southern California, and for other states.

"The people who are coming to Los Angeles today are nice people, but they're coming with empty suitcases — no equity or assets," said Rockmael. The people who are leaving, and those most likely to be his students, generally are older and typically well-to-do.

Those Californians, he said, "are taxed out. Someone has to pay for all these people coming in with empty suitcases." They (students) don't mind paying taxes, but they want better value for their money."

He estimates one-third to half of his students eventually leave.

Rockmael plays a videotape of a news report on moving to the Northwest, compares tax situations in Washington, Oregon and Idaho, and talks about the weather, a crucial element for people accustomed to Southern California sun.

He breaks the Pacific Northwest's weather into three zones — eastern, inland western and coastal. About the latter, he says, "If you're going to rust out, don't go there."

Rockmael acknowledges there may be anti-California sentiment from Northwest residents.

Rockmael said he advises his students, "That the one thing they have to do is not live like a Californian. Don't build fences. Assimilate into the community."

All of his Pacific Northwest boosting leads to one more question: If the likes so much, why hasn't he pulled up stakes and headed north?

"I will," he said. "I have some business interests here that I need to take care of." As for where, "Portland would be just about perfect."

Race car returns to rotunda after 3 years

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's most famous race car, the Mormon Meteor III, is back in the Capitol rotunda after a bumpy ride with the state and three years in the shop.

The 53-year-old car boasts a specially built Duesenberg chassis and a V-12 Curtis Conqueror aircraft engine, and was the last of the record-breakers noted speedster Ab Jenkins drove between 1931 and 1950.

Jenkins, a former mayor of Salt Lake City, drove his Meteors to records in distances ranging from 10 miles to 10,000 miles, though his cars never quite measured up to the brute power of British competitors in unlimited straightaway races.

The state bought the car in 1943 for $1 and parked it in the Rotunda. But Jenkins family members found the state a negligent owner in violation of a proper-care purchase agreement, and in 1990 demanded that the Meteor be returned to the family estate.

Government officials responded by challenging the family's claim to the car. A 10-month ownership dispute ensued.

The Gov. Norm Bangerter stepped in, and the family and the state reached an amicable agreement in January 1991. The title was passed to the Jenkins family in the name of an unspecified trustee, and the state appropriated $40,000 to cover the cost of restoring the vehicle and to establish a scholarship fund at Dixie College in Ab Jenkins' name.

In exchange, the Jenkins family guaranteed to publicly display the Meteor indefinitely in Utah and provide the labor and expertise needed for the car's restoration, which took three years.

"We're excited to get Dad's car back on display," said Jenkins' son Marvin. "After all, Dad always called the Rotunda his 'personal garage'."

Rock containing skeleton of new dinosaur species airlifted to lab

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A three-ton block of rock containing the skeleton of what scientists believe is a new dinosaur species was to be airlifted "half-mile" today to a laboratory at Dinosaur National Monument.

Paleontologist George Engelmann of the University of Nebraska discovered the skeleton in 1990 while surveying the extensive Morrison Formation at the monument, 190 miles east of Salt Lake City.

He found some bones protruding from the ground in the red rock desert drainage, and recommended the site be excavated to protect the find from erosion, said Dinosaur National Monument spokesman David Whitman.

However, scientists had no clues the skeleton belonged to an unknown species of dinosaur until they extracted the first bones.

The foot bones, found first, were puzzling, Whitman said. "The more they dug, the more they realized they had something different."

Paleontologist Dan Chure, who has led the excavation and study, said several paleontologists have seen the excavation and agree the skeleton appears to belong to a unknown species of a meat-eating dinosaur similar to Allosaurus.

Chure delivered a paper on the find at a meeting of the Society of Vertebrate Paleontologists last week.

The find has not been publicized because the skeleton's details have not been exposed, Chure said. So far, more than 85 percent of the skeleton has been uncovered.

The skeleton will be airlifted by helicopter from the excavation site to the Dinosaur Quarry laboratory to allow more detailed study.

Differences in the pelvic structure and foot bones alerted paleontologists that the skeleton belongs to an unknown species.

The dinosaur was 15 to 20 feet long and 7 to 8 feet tall, slightly smaller than the Allosaurus, Chure said.

Like the Allosaurus, it stood on two legs and both lived during the Upper-

Jurassic period, of 150 million years ago.

Whitman said the find is rare because the bones were clustered together and the skeleton is nearly complete. Some bones still rested in their joints.

Only the skull is missing, and the paleontologists hope to find that as they excavate further, Whitman said.

Another rarity was the fact scientists found articulated abdominal ribs called gastralia, which may have served as protection.

Chure said it probably will take a year or two to prepare the skeleton and analyze it.

It's not appropriate to name the dinosaur until it's described in a scientific journal," he said.

Whitman said the skeleton is from a portion of the Morrison Formation where very little excavation has been done.

Surveys have shown more than 300 sites with dinosaur or prehistoric plant remains in the Morrison Formation.

Sydney Omarr Horoscope

IF OCTOBER 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are super-sensitive concerning appearance, body image. Most people find you pleasing, fun to be with. You are versatile, capable of blending humor with profundity. You are a natural entertainer, have knack of showmanship, promotion. Current cycle highlights going into business, investment, organization, marital status, possible addition to family. November marks first start in different direction.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You'll bypass red tape, objective obtained in dramatic fashion. Overseas correspondence crucial to journey. Papers processed in record time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get proverbial "second chance." Display originality, inventiveness, courage of convictions. Emphasis on travel, communication, search for soul mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some will claim you are too unorthodox -- respond by saying, "Thank you -- that's just what I intend to be!" You'll be consulted on astrological knowledge.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sword of Damocles removed -- you'll have reason to celebrate. Focus on legal rights, public relations, decision relating to marriage. Diversify, ask questions, express gratitude for gift.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Revise, review, re-eval color coordination, entertainment. Get rid of outworn machinery, bring product up to state of the art. Financial status of associate subject to questions. Ask away.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This is your kind of day! Focus on inquisitiveness, teaching, writing, providing occupational guidance. Lunar position highlights challenges, sexuality, sex appeal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't move too far away! Sick with familiar ground, focus on befriending surroundings, getting most for efforts, money. Domestic adjustment features residence, marital status. Diplomacy!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Maintain aura of mystery, glamour. Emphasis on diversity, curiosity, experimentation, joy of learning. Member of opposite sex declares, "Life without you would be no fun!" Places involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money situation shows marked improvement. You'll handle deadline with aplomb -- you'll win favor of superiors. Love relationship intense.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Effortless appeared to be "dead and buried" is revived through your efforts. Stand tall for principles, don't be intimidated by "loudmouths." Circumstances, optimism your ally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Dark corners receive benefit of greater light. Fears, inhibitions evaporate -- take initiative, emphasize originality, independence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Reunion, once postponed, takes place. Focus on intuitive intellect, methodical procedures. Luck rides with you in matters of finance-romance.

Working girls pay their fines

Historically, local courts in the United States have fined prostitutes, but not jailed them overlong. A financial matter. If not turned loose, they couldn't earn enough to pay their fines.

A diplomat named Hugh Gibson, chose to socialize in the Metropolitan Club of Washington, D.C. But without hard liquor. He asked the bartender to serve him plain water in a martini glass. With an onion therein to identify it.

Metropolitan Club's officers later liquidated the water of caution back to the witch of courage.

The word "inure" comes from the Greek for "habitual," which suggests there was a time when they were biting.

Mrs. Pablo Picasso once presses herself off as an art critic, but she certainly contributed to the critic's craft. I think she said, "If my husband would ever meet a woman on the street who looked like the women in his paintings, he would fall over in a dead faint."

How will you deal with tomorrow?

L.M. Boyd What's what?

It's said of people in their approach to the future: Some would prevent it, some predict it and some invent it.

The hibernating ground squirrel wakes up every two weeks to go to the bathroom, get a bite to eat, check the mail, whatever, then goes back to sleep for another two weeks.

Valley life

Old doubts spoil couple's new life

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 42 years. I love him with all my heart. We have six children whom he loved and for whom he provided until they all got married. He retired almost two years ago.

Our life after he retired started off just wonderful. We were together doing everything. Then he had an employee retiring at work; they were having a lunch for him, and my husband wanted to go.

It just didn't "feel" right for him to go, Abby. I have had the feeling before that he might be with other women — and I have seen the signs. I put it all behind me to start a new life. Well, that day he was gone more than two hours. I knew something was wrong because those employees have to go back to work at 12:20, and when he returned to the house he just didn't seem the same. I never said a word.

That night we went to bed and he had his undershirt on inside out. I asked why. He said, "I must have put it on that way this morning." I never ever knew him to put his undershirt on wrong side out. (And inside his pants was evidence of something else.) I just don't know what happened to me. I don't want him to touch me or make love to me at all. But I love at him and say I love him.

He said he never went with anybody, but I know for sure he has. What do you think about this? And what should I do? Please don't mention my name or town.

—BLEEDING HEART

DEAR BLEEDING HEART: You need to talk to a minister or a marriage counselor, and so does your husband. If he refuses to go, please go without him. Keeping all this disappointment inside will only make you sick.

DEAR ABBY: This old world is far too serious, so I try to lighten up my life with something to smile about. For example, not long ago, you printed some letters in your column about people with unusual names. One of the names was "Virgin." It reminded me of a story you (and your readers) might get a kick out of:

A kid went to Sunday school and the teacher asked the class, "Who was Christ's mother?" All replied in unison, "Mary!" Then the teacher asked, "And who was Christ's father?"

Nobody answered for a few moments; then one kid spoke up: "His name was 'Virg.'" Then he went on, "All I hear about is Virg and Mary."

Another little boy at Sunday school was told by his teacher that God lives in all our hearts.

The little boy replied, "No, he doesn't. Every morning, Dad knocks on the bathroom door and says, 'My God, are you still in there?'"

I am 84, and it interests me to read about the lives of so many different kinds of people as reflected in your letters. All the best to you!

—DAVE JENKS,
SUN CITY, ARIZ.

DEAR DAVE: All the best to you, too. Thanks for the chuckle.

Rebels lose ground in Georgia

KUTAIISI, Georgia (AP) — Rebels trying to overthrow Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze were pushed back Wednesday as they tried to advance on a strategic city, and also lost ground near a key Black Sea port. Russia, meanwhile, said it was deploying troops at Shevardnadze's request to guard highways and railroads that lead from Georgia's coast to Russia, Armenia and Azerbaijan. Moscow said it would not get involved in fighting.

Armenia and Azerbaijan reportedly need to help keep the transportation links open. The rebel offensive, led by ousted nationalist President Zviad Gamsakhurdia, had advanced in recent days to within seven miles of Kutaisi, threatening to cut Georgia in half.

The loss of Kutaisi, Georgia's second-largest city, would be a major blow to Shevardnadze, the former Soviet foreign minister who is fighting to hold his Caucasus Mountain nation together. Last month, government troops lost the northwest province of Abkhazia to a separate insurgency.

The government rushed hundreds of reinforcements Wednesday to Kutaisi, a city of about 250,000 people located 125 miles west of Tbilisi.

The Interfax news agency reported that government troops retook Poti, Georgia's main Black Sea port. Interior Ministry spokesman Valerian Gogolashvili could not confirm that the city had been retaken, but did report government advances in the area.

The rebels' seizure of Poti cut off vital food links to the capital, Tbilisi, where city officials on Wednesday said strict food rationing would begin within three weeks.

Gogolashvili did say troops had reclaimed the railroad town of Lanchkuti, west of Kutaisi, and Khvini, to the northwest.

Georgian security official Vladimir Chikovani said 50 rebels and 10 government troops were killed in fighting Wednesday.

Georgia's army is in disarray, and many of the soldiers fighting in Kutaisi were from regular units. They were volunteers, police and members of paramilitary groups.

U.S. blockbuster opens in France amid film war

PARIS (AP) — The mechanical dinosaurs of "Jurassic Park" couldn't have timed their entrance more dramatically.

They thundered onto 450 French movie screens Wednesday at the peak of a culture and trade war between the corporate giants of Hollywood and France's feisty film industry.

"Le Dino Boom," yelled the front-page headline in the trendy Paris daily Liberation, over a technicolor image of a roaring tyrannosaurus.

Steven Spielberg's blockbuster opened in June in the United States and has played for weeks in many other countries.

But its release in France was delayed to coincide with a late-October school vacation, and thus collided head-on with an upsurge of French furor over Hollywood's increasing global dominance.

"Moreover, 'Jurassic Park' will compete head-to-head with France's most expensive film ever, a $29 million historical drama called 'Germinal' about oppressed coal miners.

Culture Minister Jacques Toubon, one of the most ardent cultural warriors, announced Wednesday that his ministry would pay to make 90 extra copies of "Germinal," which had been playing on about 350 screens nationwide.

Empress collapses on 59th birthday

TOKYO (AP) — Empress Michiko collapsed on the morning of her 59th birthday Wednesday and lost her ability to speak, but still had a birthday dinner with her family, the palace said.

A neurologist from Tokyo University examined the empress after her collapse, fueling speculation she had a minor stroke.

"The empress cannot speak, but she can make sounds and write," Tatsuo Ikenaga, a palace doctor, said Wednesday evening. "I believe she may recover, though the progress may be slow."

He said the empress was able to eat. The empress collapsed while talking with her husband, Emperor Akihito, and their only daughter, Princess Sayako, a brief statement from the palace said.

It said there were no signs of paralysis in her hands and legs.

Panel chooses new flag for S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A green and gold banner decorated with triangles should replace the South African flag associated with apartheid, a panel of experts said Wednesday.

The panel appointed by black and white politicians negotiating the transition to democracy reviewed 6,000 possibilities.

South Africans submitted proposals that ranged from the morbidly pessimistic of a skull-and-crossbones and coffin on a black background to the hopeful of black and white hands clasping and doves in flight.

The commission said its favored choice had a green background representing the environment and gold representing the sun and wealth. Triangles of green, blue and red represent rap, water, sky, courage, progress and the blood of the people, it said.

Canadians cool to free trade agreement

TORONTO (AP) — "You want to know about free trade?" asks Steve Brett, a contractor putting the final touches on a new bagel shop here.

"Come and look at my equipment. It says 'Assembled in Mexico.'"

Brett is one of the 46 percent to 58 percent of Canadians who tell pollsters they oppose the North American Free Trade Agreement.

"It's all assembled in Mexico and it's going to get worse," says Brett, 32, installing ovens in the shop. "I'm not happy about it. They talk about the benefits of free trade? I haven't seen any."

NAFTA is aimed at bringing down virtually all trade barriers among the United States, Canada and Mexico, creating a trading bloc of 360 million consumers and about $6 trillion in production. Ottawa ratified the deal in May.

As President Clinton gears up for the struggle to push NAFTA through a reluctant Congress, most American eyes are on Mexico, fearing a massive loss of jobs to cheaper Mexican labor.

But in Canada, many believe the existing U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement already has cost hundreds of thousands of Canadian jobs.

"This NAFTA is really going to kill us," says Brett, who like many Canadians, bases his opinion on gut feelings rather than hard evidence. "The cheaper labor is such an incentive. We have enough unemployed people here."

The jobless rate is 11.3 percent. Though it was only 7.5 percent when free trade went into effect in January 1989, it was 11.1 percent in January 1993 before the negotiations even began. The all-time high was 12.8 percent in December 1982.

Groups such as the Canadian Labor Congress, Canada's main union federation, and the New Democratic Party claim 400,000 jobs have been lost since the first free trade agreement.

"We have to scrap the Tory (Conservative) trade deal," says NDP leader Audrey McLaughlin. "It's cost the country 250 jobs a day since 1988."

The Conservative government and many business leaders say that's nonsense. They point out that 55 percent of all Canadian trade is with the United States and that U.S.-Canada trade is one of the few bright spots in the economy this year.

"I think free trade has become a lightning rod for people's discontent and their fear for all the changes that are happening," said Bradley Condon, director of the Centre for North American Business Studies at British Columbia's Simon Fraser University.

"People don't really understand what free trade is about."

Everyone acknowledges that many jobs have been lost in the past five years, but part of that is due to a global recession and general restructuring in Western economies.

"California has lost 500,000 jobs since free trade, but you don't hear them putting it that way," said Condon.

Yet there is plenty of evidence to illustrate the job-loss phenomenon is at least in part related to free trade, such as companies pulling up stakes in Ontario and moving to Buffalo, N.Y., and American companies shutting down their Canadian subsidiaries.

"When you have free trade, you have winners and losers," Condon said. "Some companies are not going to be able to compete in a free-trade market. It causes what they call an adjustment."

Free trade was the overriding issue in the 1988 general election. But it's not getting a lot of attention in the campaign for the elections on Monday.

In general, the ruling Conservatives are for it. Liberal leader Jean Chretien says he wants to renegotiate part of it and Ms. McLaughlin, whose party is far back in the polls, wants to kill it.

"A lot of people are afraid of import competition," said Gordon Ritchie, senior negotiator of the original Canada-U.S. free-trade agreement.

"They are afraid of the big, bad Americans. They are also easy to make fearful of the little cheap Mexicans. This is exactly the same fears that Ross Perot is playing to in the United States."

Town gives Wal-Mart black eye

The Associated Press GREENFIELD, Mass. — The downtown Wilson's department store bustled Wednesday with the usual old-timers and homemakers hunting for bargains in a town now jokingly dubbed a "Wal-Mart-free zone." In a public referendum the day before, this western Massachusetts community of 18,000 narrowly rejected a proposed Wal-Mart as too big, powerful and threatening to their small-town way of life. "It's a very unique town, and I don't think we need big businesses like that to come in and take away from the beauty of the town," said Tamli Silk, a customer at Wilson's. It was the latest setback to the nation's largest retailer in its push to transplant its style of gargantuan storefronts and Lilliputian pricing to New England. Company spokesman Jane Arnold said she was unaware of any other community in the country that has voted down a Wal-Mart. Downtown merchants, young professionals who fled big cities, ex-businessmen and old-timers and Yankees joined hands in an unlikely alliance that led the campaign against rezoning land two miles outside downtown for the Wal-Mart. The local daily newspaper and some development forces rallied for the store. The rezoning measure lost by only nine votes, 2,854 to 2,845, but town officials said they did not expect a recount. Just six months earlier, the town had voted by a 2-1 margin in an advisory referendum to zone for the Wal-Mart, but opponents persisted, forcing Tuesday's binding vote with a petition drive. At a company headquarters in Bentonville, Ark., Auld said Wal-Mart would drop its Greenfield proposal but might try to place a store nearby. Local opposition has stalled proposed Wal-Mart stores in several communities around the region. In September, Wal-Mart canceled a project in Westford in the face of complaints from residents. Vermont residents worried about their downtowns have so far delayed plans for the first Wal-Marts in that state. Auld said Wal-Mart, which already has opened 31 stores in New England, won't back away from the region. She said Sam Walton founded the discount stores to give small-town folk the low prices and personal service available in bigger communities.

Corporate earnings push stocks lower Workers comp rates rise slightly

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Concern about corporate profits pushed stocks mostly lower in cautious trading Wednesday, although blue-chip issues rallied late in the session. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 9.78 points to 3,645.10. But declining issues outnumbered advances by about 11 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to a heavy 305.67 million shares as of 4 p.m., up from 295.27 million in the previous session. Although the Dow rallied in the last hour of trading, stocks were mostly caught in the negative psychology that began Monday amid fears the market could not sustain its highs of last week, analysts said. Unlike Tuesday when the Nasdaq index dropped about 1.8 percent, there was not much conviction to the stock market, analysts said. Instead, investors looked to corporate profit reports for guidance, analysts said. Worries have been prompted by data showing the economy is growing only sluggishly, by uncertainty about the government's health-care reform, as well as by uncertainty about the impact of higher taxes. In earnings news, WMX Technology rose 4% to 44 1/2 after the company posted lower-than-expected third-quarter earnings. The stocks of other waste management firms also fell. Browning-Ferris lost 2 to 21. Circus Circus fell 5/8 to 39 1/2 after the company forecast lower-than-expected third-quarter earnings. Other casino stocks followed. Circus Circus lower, with Caesar's World dropping 1/2 to 47. Compaq rose 2 1/2 to 64 1/2 after announcing stronger-than-expected third-quarter earnings. That news gave technology stocks a boost. Early in the day, most major indexes in stocks, encouraged by strength in stocks overseas. In Tokyo, the 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average gained 0.5 percent, while in London, the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index rose 0.9 percent. Stoxx rose 0.8 percent in Frankfurt and 0.3 percent in Paris. Stocks were also supported by a modest bond rally, which pushed down interest rates. Stocks have often taken their cue from treasuries because the lower yields that come with higher bond prices make stocks more appealing to investors. Among other major market indicators, the Standard & Poors index of 500 stocks fell 0.13 to 466.00, while the NYSE's composite index fell 0.28 to 258.28. The Nasdaq index fell 0.46 to 768.25, and on the American Stock Exchange the market value index rose 0.49 to 475.59.

Workers comp rates rise slightly BOISE — An aggressive effort to hold down costs, plus the state's solid economy, have helped hold the increase in workers compensation insurance rates to 0.2 percent, Gov. Cecil Andrus says. "Idaho's aggressive cost-containment efforts have succeeded in holding down our rate, increase, and an even better business climate is the immediate result," the governor said in a prepared statement Wednesday announcing next year's rate. The 0.2 percent increase in workers comp rates was requested by a national council which oversees Idaho's programs. It was approved by State Insurance Director Harry Walrath. The state Insurance Fund covers about three-quarters of the employers in Idaho. Officials said most states in the National Council on Compensation Insurance are asking for double-digit increases in next year's rates. Andrus said aggressive cost-containment and risk management improved the business climate in Idaho. "With such a small change in premium rates, major employers won't have to pass increased costs on to consumers. And our state continues to attract new business with its favorable workers compensation rate, while other states continue to climb," the governor said.

Worries have been prompted by data showing the economy is growing only sluggishly, by uncertainty about the government's health-care reform, as well as by uncertainty about the impact of higher taxes. In earnings news, WMX Technology rose 4% to 44 1/2 after the company posted lower-than-expected third-quarter earnings. The stocks of other waste management firms also fell. Browning-Ferris lost 2 to 21. Circus Circus fell 5/8 to 39 1/2 after the company forecast lower-than-expected third-quarter earnings. Other casino stocks followed. Circus Circus lower, with Caesar's World dropping 1/2 to 47. Compaq rose 2 1/2 to 64 1/2 after announcing stronger-than-expected third-quarter earnings. That news gave technology stocks a boost. Early in the day, most major indexes in stocks, encouraged by strength in stocks overseas. In Tokyo, the 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average gained 0.5 percent, while in London, the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index rose 0.9 percent. Stoxx rose 0.8 percent in Frankfurt and 0.3 percent in Paris. Stocks were also supported by a modest bond rally, which pushed down interest rates. Stocks have often taken their cue from treasuries because the lower yields that come with higher bond prices make stocks more appealing to investors. Among other major market indicators, the Standard & Poors index of 500 stocks fell 0.13 to 466.00, while the NYSE's composite index fell 0.28 to 258.28. The Nasdaq index fell 0.46 to 768.25, and on the American Stock Exchange the market value index rose 0.49 to 475.59.

Stiffer state laws aim at disarming young thugs

The Associated Press

DENVER — Shayne Gilmore has a question for the 16-year-old who shot him last week. "I'd just ask him, if he was shooting at me, why? And I'd ask him, why does a guy need a gun? He ruined a lot of things for me."

Gilmore, 18, was a starting linebacker for Englewood High School. That was before he was hit in the foot Friday by a stray bullet during a fight that had nothing to do with him or the school.

Police arrested a gang member and charged him with assault and possession of a handgun. Under a new Colorado law, the arrested boy could be sent to a juvenile detention center for two years on the gun charge.

Gilmore didn't play football Friday. The Pirates, with a 6-0 record, lost 22-7.

Following a summer of violence that left four children wounded by stray bullets, Colorado joined a growing number of states responding to juvenile crime with new gun laws aimed at disarming young thugs.

Nineteen states and the District of Columbia have stiff anti-gun laws and a half-dozen more are considering action. President Clinton said this week he backs a federal proposal making it illegal for minors to possess handguns under most circumstances.

Colorado law passed by young people "is definitely the hottest issue in gun policy," said Denise Griffin, a researcher for the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Though gun laws aimed at juveniles may not be the solution to broader problems facing young people, the approach is "one area where we have an emerging consensus we haven't seen before," Griffin said.

Even the National Rifle Association, which opposes gun control, joined the fight. It helped draft legislation passed in Colorado during a special legislative session on juvenile violence.

Among a package of bills signed by Gov. Roy Romer last month is a law barring people under age 18 from possessing handguns, except for hunting, instruction and target shooting. Convicted offenders must spend five days in jail upon arrest and up to two years in juvenile detention.

"The problem that the gun policy opponents cite is the difficulty to enforce them," Griffin said. "There are 200 million guns in this country, a third of them handguns. The question becomes how you really control that many guns."

Florida has a special legislative session on crime beginning Nov. 1 in the wake of last month's arrests of young people in the fatal shootings of foreign tourists. Proposals include banning those under 18 from possessing a gun, except for hunting or marksmanship supervised by an adult. Violators would face five days in jail.

"Right now the laws we have in existence have no meat in them," said Lee Condon, spokeswoman for the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

"The law for juveniles has no real consequences, and the kids know this. We're looking for something to make it a felony, and provide a penalty for parents who allow their children to have guns."

In Utah, the Legislature was called into special session to deal with gang violence. Last week, lawmakers approved a package that Gov. Michael Leavitt plans to sign. Among the provisions are outlawing possession of handguns by people under 18 and possession of any firearm by those under 14, unless accompanied by an adult.

Some cities and counties are following suit.

Juvenile gun laws at a glance

- Juvenile gun laws adopted by 19 states and the District of Columbia:
- Arizona — Prohibits possession of firearms by anyone under 18, except in certain supervised situations.
 - Arkansas — Prohibits possession of handguns by anyone under 18. Police may disarm, without arresting, a minor in possession of a handgun.
 - California — Prohibits possession of concealable firearms by anyone under 18.
 - Colorado — Prohibits possession of firearms by anyone under 18, except for target practice, firearms training or hunting with an adult.
 - District of Columbia — Prohibits possession of handguns by anyone under 18 without a registration certificate.
 - Illinois — Prohibits possession of concealable firearms by anyone under 18.
 - Massachusetts — Prohibits possession of handguns without a firearms identification card.
 - Minnesota — Prohibits possession of pistols by anyone under 18, unless supervised by a parent or guardian.
 - Nebraska — Prohibits possession of handguns by anyone under 18.
 - New Jersey — Prohibits possession of firearms by anyone under 18, unless supervised by a parent, or for military, hunting or target shooting.
 - New York — Prohibits possession of firearms by anyone under 16.
 - North Carolina — Makes it a felony to possess or carry firearms on school property, and a misdemeanor for anyone under 18 to possess or carry handguns.
 - North Dakota — Prohibits possession by anyone under 18, unless supervised by an adult.
 - Oregon — Prohibits possession by anyone under 18, except with parental consent.
 - Rhode Island — Prohibits possession of firearms by anyone under 15, except for firearms training.
 - South Carolina — Forbids possession of pistols by anyone under 21, except when supervised by a parent or adult instructor.
 - Utah — Prohibits anyone under 18 to possess dangerous weapons, including a firearm without parental permission.
 - Virginia — Prohibits anyone under 18 from possessing handguns, except for supervised target shooting.
 - West Virginia — Prohibits possession by anyone under 18, except on private property and with permission of the owner or leaseholder.
 - Wisconsin — Prohibits possession by anyone under 18, except during supervised target practice or for firearms instruction from an adult.

Adventurer, 88, prepares for final Antarctic trek

The Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Norman Vaughan has little time to reminisce about the glory days, 65 years ago, when he dropped out of Harvard, learned to mush dog teams and traveled Antarctica's blank interior with Adm. Richard Byrd.

"Instead he is busy at his one-room log cabin in Talkeetna, training dogs and working out in preparation for what will probably be the last sled dog expedition in Antarctica.

He also hopes to be the first to scale a 10,302-foot Antarctic mountain, and in time for his 88th birthday on Dec. 19.

"This isn't just any mountain. It's Mount Vaughan, a peak 250 miles from the South Pole that bears his name," says Byrd.

"We will go," said Vaughan, whose plane departs Monday for his frozen-tropics team. "You have to have something to shoot for."

That's not an empty sentiment. This white-haired, broad-smiling octogenarian has completed the 1,100-mile Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race across Alaska six times — most recently in 1990.

And in shooting for Antarctica, Vaughan says he has been exercising daily, sometimes with his dogs. Sometimes he goes to Anchorage where he can climb into a swimming pool, wearing a life preserver and carrying heavy ski poles for an aerobic workout that mimics cross-country skiing.

"It sounds ridiculous, but really, I haven't done anything that anyone else couldn't do," Vaughan said. "I've been persistent. And I don't promote this necessarily, but I don't drink and smoke."

"We've been trying to set an example. By doing that, all the rest falls into line."

It's not really that easy. It has taken two years to amass nearly $1.5 million to cover everything from 9,000 pounds of dog food to airfares of supplies.

And Vaughan's goal was threatened by an international treaty set to go into effect April 1 that seeks to protect indigenous wildlife by banning dogs on Antarctica.

Scientists think canine distemper

could spread to the continent's seals.

But Vaughan, whose varied career has ranged from Air Force service to advertising to university janitor, was determined to close the era he helped begin by being the last musher to travel the continent.

With help from Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, and others, Vaughan finally won a permit Sept. 19 from the National Science Foundation.

"I think this will be more complicated than when Byrd did it. He had no restrictions on what he did," said Vaughan, whose first trek relied on a hand-cranked radio, bulky caribou furs and a sextant.

Carolyn Vaughan, his fourth wife, has been in charge of staging the expedition. She says that once all the fuel, food, gear and radio equipment arrives at the starting point at Antarctica's Camp DeGanahl, it will take a DC-6 airplane at least 10 more days to move supplies into position along their route.

Mrs. Vaughan, 50, also is part of her husband's expedition, along with a physician and two climbers.

"Once I get on the plane, I'll know it's really happening," she said. "It'll be a sign of relief and thank. This is a great vacation."

Mrs. Vaughan, herself an Itardarod musher who has been working full time on the expedition for two years, says her husband has been her inspiration.

"His message is never give up, and keep trying if it means something to you."
