Aluminum plants want Gem water

By N.S. Nokkentyed
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A threatened lawsuit by large electric users on the lower Snake and Columbia rivers is the "long-awaited Idaho water grab," says Gov. Cecil Andrus. The Portland-based Direct Service Industries — a group of mostly aluminum producers — says that Idaho irrigators and other users of Snake River water in southern Idaho are depriving endangered salmon of water they need to survive.

The group has given notice that it intends to sue the Idaho Department of Water Resources, the Water Resources Board and federal agencies as well, alleging violations of the Endangered Species Act.

Four species of Snake River salmon have been listed as threatened or endangered under the federal Endangered Species Act. The group says that since the salmon's survival depends on increased velocities in the Snake and Columbia rivers, anything that decreases Snake River flows would be a violation of the federal act.

The Water Resources Department had just one statement of response to the legal challenge: "The problem is with the eight mainstem dams," spokesman Dick Larsen said Friday.

Those dams supply part of the power used by the aluminum industry and other industries in Washington and Oregon that require large amounts of electricity.

The industry group's threatened suit comes as part of a reply to a suit filed by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game against the National Marine Fisheries Service — charged with protecting the endangered fish and developing a plan for their recovery.

Judge orders 2 to stand trial in Gooding murder case

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

GOODING — Both men charged in a September double murder have told interrogators that one of the victims asked a question before she died: Why?

Connie Marie Allen, 31, had been raped, her throat had been slashed and she had been beaten with a tire iron.

Each man said Allen mouthed "Why? Why?" as the other man killed her, said Gooding County Sheriff's Deputy Steve Spence at a preliminary hearing Friday.

Magistrate Judge Thomas R. Cushman ordered Tommy Petersen and Robert Johnson, both 24, to stand trial for first-degree murder and first-degree murder during commission of burglary, robbery and rape.

In more than two hours' testimony, Spence said Johnson and Petersen told similar stories about what happened the night of Sept. 14. But, Spence said, their stories split on who killed Allen and the man she lived with, Ricky Lee Mangum, 33.

Petersen and Johnson, cousins, sat stoically and without looking at each other as Spence recounted statements he said both men made in interviews within a week of the killings.

Both men admitted drinking beer at a Gooding bar with Connie Allen late the night of Sept. 13 and into the early hours of Sept. 14, Spence said. Both admitted going to Allen's house at 1299 South 1800 East, Spence said.

But Johnson, in interviews on Sept. 18 and 20, said Petersen had raped Allen, cut her throat with a serrated knife and then beat her with a tire iron, Spence testified.

Johnson said Petersen must have struck Allen "a hundred times," Spence said.

Spence said Johnson told him that after cutting Allen's throat, Petersen told Johnson to do the same to Mangum. But Johnson told him he would not do it, Spence said.

But Petersen, in an interview on Sept. 21, said Johnson had gone to the house to rape Allen, saying he "wanted to be with the girl," Spence testified. Petersen said Johnson brought the tire iron in from their car and after entering the house immediately struck Mangum, Spence said.

Then Petersen told him that Johnson took Allen into the bedroom and raped her, Spence said. Johnson cut her throat, then handed the knife, wrapped in a bloody shirt, to Petersen and told him to kill Mangum in the living room, Petersen told Spence.

But Petersen told Spence he couldn't do it and handed the knife back to Johnson, Spence testified. Petersen said Johnson cut Mangum's throat.

Petersen said Johnson had taken Allen

Female U.S. attorney takes office

The Associated Press

BOISE — Betty Hansen Richardson promised "a new beginning" in federal law enforcement in Idaho as she was installed as Idaho's first female U.S. attorney.

Richardson, 40, took the oath of office Friday from U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge to start a term as chief of federal law officers in the state. She's the 31st person to hold the job.

"I am looking forward to being part of the Bill Clinton, Al Gore and Janet Reno team," she said. "It is time to look to the future."

She declared rising violence that makes "people captives in their own homes" and promised cooperation with all federal agencies to make wise use of resources.

She succeeds Republican Maurice Ellsworth in the position. Ellsworth resigned at the request of the new Democratic administration. Richardson was nominated by Democratic Rep. Larry LaRocco for the $110,000 per year position. Both of Idaho's GOP senators voted to confirm her.

Richardson was chairman of the state Industrial Commission until noon Friday, when she resigned to take the federal position a few hours later. A federal courtroom was jammed to overflowing for the ceremony that officially put her in office.

Richardson is the daughter of Fred and Ann Hansen. Her father was an immigrant from Denmark and her mother was born of Yugoslavian parents a week after they arrived in this country.

Speakers praised the heritage left to her by the late Fred Hansen, who was a power in the Nez Perce County and the Idaho Democratic Party, high in the state labor organization and taught her about politics.

"He instilled in me the value of having a strong education," Richardson said.

Former Supreme Court justice Robert Huntley said Richardson worked as his law clerk when she was beginning her legal career. He called her a "politician par excellence," because she knows how to make government work.

Richardson was chairman of the Ada County Democratic Party in the late 1980s when the party made great political gains. Magistrate Judge Patricia Young said she hoped Richardson would work with her to promote programs for children, particularly those giving children a strong start.

Clinton plans Moscow visit

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Clinton will fly to Moscow in mid-January for a summit meeting with Boris Yeltsin to show support for the Russian leader's drive to convert this one-time Communist state into a democracy.

The visit could also boost Clinton's standing at home. Even critics of Clinton's foreign policies have supported his backing of Yeltsin, and the president considers forging close ties with Moscow one of his strong suits.

"Democracy has progressed so fast that the only thing that remains to be done is to bury Lenin," a senior U.S. official quoted the Russian leader as telling Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

Clinton will come here after meeting in Brussels, Belgium, on Jan. 10-11 with heads of the 15 U.S. allies in NATO and probable stops in Central and Eastern Europe.

Senior U.S. officials said the date for the summit depended on a decision on the other stop.

Beirut legacy: Lessons, questions

The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Saplings now push through the rubble where 241 U.S. servicemen died.

From half a mile away, an Islamic sermon waives faintly from loudspeakers at the Great Mosque.

Behind the ruins, past the sun-scorched weeds, an unintended epitaph survives on a bullet-pocked retaining wall where U.S. Marines had gathered to drink beer and soda pop in a sort of open-air clubhouse.

"Lt. Nairn ... Lance Cpl. Iocovino ... Lepl. Kreischer ... Lepl. Wentworth ... Dozens of names, names of the dead.

The clubhouse wall was never meant as a memorial. This was a place where the living painted their names to declare "I was here" or to mark days until the next troop rotation in a mission "to support democracy" in Lebanon's tangled civil war.

But at 6:22 a.m. on Sunday, Oct. 23, 1983, scores of troops died when a suicide bomber drove an explosives-packed truck through a barbed wire fence and into the lobby of a four-story makeshift barracks.

The building, between runways of Beirut International Airport, collapsed in a cascade of broken concrete. Each floor pancaked explosively onto the one below, trapping sleeping men at every level and spitting parts of bodies into the air.

Less than three weeks ago, echoes of the Beirut barracks disaster were sounded when 18 U.S. servicemen were killed in Somalia, another foreign place where American troops were sent to bring peace and stability. Hundreds of Somalis also died in the Mogadishu fight.

Big chill threatens some sections of nation

The Associated Press

Parts of the nation felt a big chill Friday while rain speckled areas of the East, South and Pacific Northwest. The temperature at San Angelo, Texas, chilled to near freezing. The 33-degree reading tied the city's record low for the date set in 1990.

A frost warning was posted today for southern Ohio, and advisories for frost went up over Indiana.

There were no serious threats of storms or particularly unpleasant weather conditions across the nation, although some of the Florida thunderstorms produced heavy rain near West Palm Beach, according to the National Weather Service.

Rain and occasional thunderstorms early Friday afternoon extended over the southern half of the Atlantic Coastal states, the eastern half of the Gulf of Mexico states, and western Washington state.

Temperatures around the Lower 48 at 1 p.m. MDT ranged from 42 degrees at the Chippewa County airport in Michigan, and Hancock, Mich., to 90 degrees at Bartow, the Sarasota-Bradenton area and Tampa, all in Florida.

Snafus create Ritalin shortage

Knight-Ridder News Service

Delays in Washington and snafus in New Jersey may leave children across the nation without a drug they need to help them manage their behavior.

After even a day or two without Ritalin, children with attention deficit disorder can start having problems again with inattentiveness, hyperactivity and impulsiveness. An estimated 3 percent to 5 percent of school-age children have attention deficit disorder, though not all take Ritalin.

Ciba-Geigy Corp., which makes Ritalin, has sent a letter warning pharmacies nationwide that they "will soon be experiencing shortages of Ritalin."

Jean Darrah, whose daughter Brittany, 6, uses Ritalin, said she had to call about a dozen pharmacies in the Wichita, Kan., area earlier this week to find one that had enough Ritalin to fill Brittany's prescription.

Ritalin is a stimulant that is on the federal Drug Enforcement Administration's list of controlled substances. The DEA allows only a certain amount of methylphenidate, the generic name for Ritalin, to be made each year because of its potential for illegal use.

At present, the two pharmaceutical companies — Ciba for Ritalin, MD-Pharmaceutical for the generic form — had a certain amount of time to argue for increased quotas.

"Historically, we have always revised the quota," DEA spokeswoman Joyce McDonald said Thursday. This year, however, Justice Department took 2 1/2 months to concur with the recommendations. A spokesman there said he didn't know the reason for the delay. They finally were approved Oct. 7. Manufacturing problems at Ciba, based in Summit, N.J., were the reason, McDonald said. A Ciba spokesman said Thursday that production has resumed but that it will be early December before new supplies reach pharmacies.

"The problem is that certain dosage forms of the drug require six to eight weeks to make, so in the meantime there may be some shortages. And we're certainly hearing from some people that there are," McDonald said.

into the bedroom of the home she shared with Mangum five miles northwest of Gooding. Petersen said Johnson raped her, then beat her with a tire iron, Spence said.

Each man said the other dragged Allen from the bedroom into the bathroom and beat her with a tire iron.

After the mayhem ended, the two admitted searching the house for money. Spence said they found a jar of quarters in a closet and Petersen admitted taking $8 from Mangum's wallet, Spence said.

Johnson told him that Petersen and Allen argued in the house that night over money she owed Petersen for drugs, Spence testified.

Both men admitted telling Mangum that all they wanted was money, Spence said.

"Just tell us where the money is, and we'll leave," Spence said they told him.

After leaving the house, the two rode back to Gooding with Petersen's sister, Amee, Spence said. On the way to Gooding they stopped at a bridge on the Big Wood River and dumped the tire iron, the shirt that was wrapped around the knife and Petersen's blood-soaked shirt into the river, Spence said.

Gooding County sheriff officials have recovered the items from the river, Spence said.

Amee Petersen has admitted driving Johnson and Tommy Petersen to the house the night of the killings, according to a sheriff's affidavit in the court file.

The affidavit also states that Amee Petersen said she knew Johnson and Tommy Petersen were going to commit a crime at the house.

Amee Petersen also told investigators that on the way to the house Johnson said someone could get hurt and that Tommy Petersen said someone might even get killed.

She admitted waiting outside during the crime and driving the two back toward Gooding, according to the affidavit.

Amee Petersen will not be charged in the crime providing she had no physical participation in the house where Allen and Mangum died, Gooding County Prosecuting Attorney Phil Brown said Friday.

"I'm convinced she did not know a murder was going to take place," Brown said.

Amee Petersen will testify for the state, he said.

Army guards few Haiti gas stations still open

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haiti's weak civilian government worked Friday to avoid another showdown with the powerful military, this time over gasoline.

In Washington, deposed Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide lashed out against opponents who claim he is mentally unfit to return to office, labeling his "garbage" charges he spent time in a mental hospital for a manic-depressive disorder.

"They said worse about Martin Luther King," Aristide said on PBS' MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour. "As a psychologist, I know about character assassination."

The White House also came to the defense of Aristide, who has been the target of an escalating campaign to discredit him as the countdown continues toward an U.N. deadline for his return to power.

"He's fully capable of serving as president of Haiti," said White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers.

The gas crisis came just eight days before the Oct. 30 deadline for the return of Aristide under a U.N.-brokered peace plan. The oil and arms blockade, being enforced by U.S., Canadian and Dutch ships, was reimposed this week by the United Nations to force the military to yield power.

But all sides doubt that the elected president, still widely backed by ordinary Haitians and hated by the soldiers who ousted him two years ago, can return by Oct. 30.

In other developments Friday:

- The Miami-based relief organization Food For The Poor said a shipment of rice, soy milk, medical supplies and baby cribs for Haiti had been blocked by warships enforcing the blockade. The items are exempt from the embargo, but the group said its ship was turned back because its cargo could not be adequately inspected.
- A U.S. military plane landed in Haiti to help with security, Prime Minister Robert Malval, U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schragar said without elaboration.
- A private funeral was held for Justice Minister Guy Malval, assassinated Oct. 14 by gunmen. Only about 30 immediate family members, business associates and Cabinet members attended the ceremony.
- The Netherlands government decided to join the U.N. embargo against Haiti with a Dutch Royal Navy ship based in the Netherlands Antilles.
- The government-military showdown started when Texaco joined Shell and Esso in closing its pumps in line with the international oil embargo.
- Malval told reporters he would ask the oil companies to request an exemption to the embargo.

vice ruling that operation of the eight federal dams, on the Lower Snake and Columbia rivers does not jeopardize the survival of the endangered fish so long as minimum flows are maintained.

But the state of Idaho says those dams also are responsible for the demise of 70 to 90 percent of the endangered salmon, which reproduce in fresh water and must migrate to the ocean as young fish to complete their life cycle.

Studies have shown that the dams slow the young salmon's migration, making them more susceptible to predators and disease before they can reach the Pacific Ocean.

The industry group says, "Idaho's sole effort to cooperate with the federal government has taken the form of a federal lawsuit designed to blame down-river interests for salmon decline."

But Andrus called the suit the "downstream establishment's long-awaited Idaho water grab."

"If they get their way, the water that helps raise Idaho crops and sustain its economy will be siphoned off to keep them from having to do anything to change the way they do business," Andrus said.

Andrus has asked a federal judge to rule in the state's favor and require the federal government to change the way it operates the Snake and Columbia rivers.

Packwood won't turn over diaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's investigation into sex harassment charges against Sen. Bob Packwood took a potentially explosive turn Friday when the lawmaker's attorney said diaries under subpoena contain entries about the sex lives of other members of Congress.

lengthy statement: "But if the constitutional right of privacy is also to be respected, the line must be drawn in these most personal private documents."

Any purely legal dispute was quickly overshadowed by the attorneys' statement that Senate investigators have indicated they now want access to entries in the diaries pertaining to, in the attorney's words:

"A conversation with a senator about that senator's extended affair with a staff member and the problems of his divorce."

"A description of an affair by a Senate staff member with a member of the Democratic congressional leadership."

Private consensual personal relationships with nonstaff persons unrelated to the allegations against Packwood, Fitzpatrick also said investigators are seeking material relating to Packwood's divorce as well as issues such as campaign fund-raising and lobbying.

"The committee is demanding possession of these diaries so they can rummage through them looking for bits and pieces of evidence so they can try to build a case against the senator on completely unrelated matters," Fitzpatrick said in an interview. "No court has ever permitted that."

The ethics panel has interviewed more than 150 people as part of the probe against Packwood, including the woman who says he harassed them. The committee asked Packwood for documents relevant to the investigation in March and July. After questioning him earlier this month, panel investigators asked Packwood also to provide his personal diaries.

"During depositions on Oct. 5 and 6 it became apparent that Senator Packwood's diaries... contained information relevant to the committee's inquiry," the panel's report said.

Packwood refused to produce additional diaries until he was allowed to black out additional private and personal information, the panel said.

On Thursday, the committee said, it served a subpoena on Packwood for the additional diaries. The senator was quoted as saying he "simply cannot agree at this point to comply forthwith."

Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee, said on the Senate floor late Thursday night he was forwarding a resolution from his panel asking the Senate to authorize a suit that would compel Packwood to comply.

The subpoena demands that he deliver "all diaries, journals, or other documents, including tape recordings and materials stored by computer or electronic means, in his possession, custody or control, which were prepared by him or at his direction, recording or describing his daily activities for Jan. 1, 1989, through the present."

Fitzpatrick, citing a 1977 Supreme Court ruling defending former President Nixon's right to private diaries, said the senator was willing to turn over diary entries relevant to the case but that the demand for all papers was "overreaching and unnecessary."

Court: Federal election panel invalid

WASHINGTON — The makeup of the Federal Election Commission was held unconstitutional by a federal court Friday because the panel includes two nonvoting members appointed by Congress.

But the three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the problem can be remedied by amending the law creating the commission to cut the two members — the secretary of the Senate and the House clerk.

Acting in a suit by the National Rifle Association, the court said the Constitution's separation-of-powers doctrine does not permit agents of Congress to serve on executive commissions — even in a nonvoting capacity.

The FEC, created as part of campaign reform legislation enacted in response to the Watergate scandal, is composed of three Republican and three Democratic members appointed by the president plus the secretary of the Senate and the House clerk.

Pair gets life for burning black tourist

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Two white men who doused a black tourist with gasoline and set him on fire as they taunted him with racial epithets got the maximum sentence Friday: life in prison.

The judge, who called the attack among the "most senseless and atrocious crimes" he had ever seen, also ordered that the sentences for attempted murder be followed by 40 years for Charles Rourke and 27 years for Mark Kohut for kidnapping and robbery.

Kohut, 27, and Rourke, 33, showed no emotion as they received the sentences. They were convicted last month in the New Year's Day attack on Christopher Wilson, a 32-year-old stock brokerage clerk from New York.

"Thank God it's over," Wilson said. "Justice was done."

Court to rule on 6-year contempt term

CHICAGO — For six years, Odell Sheppard has sat in a jail cell on contempt charges. On Friday, he will stay there until he reveals where his young daughter is. He says he doesn't know; the girl's mother says he does.

Sheppard's incarceration for contempt of court is the longest in U.S. legal history, according to research by lawyers in the case and a Harvard scholar. Whether his jailing is a legitimate use of contempt or an abuse of judicial authority is in the hands of a state appellate court, which is expected to rule on the case in the next few months.

Under the law, Sheppard may be held as long as the court believes it may induce him to tell where Deborah Sanders is.

Clinton mulls Guard troops for capital

WASHINGTON — Mayor Sharon Pratt Kelly's plea for National Guard troops to patrol the capital's violence-drenched streets drew sympathy Friday from President Clinton.

But local officials wondered aloud why the city doesn't first fill 300 vacancies on the police force.

"I think it should be reviewed," Clinton said of Kelly's request to deploy up to 3,000 Guard troops temporarily as part of anti-drug efforts.

"I've given a lot of thought to it and I've asked our legal counsel to get with the Justice Department and look into the legality of it and what the legal hurdles and also what the practical problems are," said the president. The soldiers would be available for four months to free police for anti-drug work by helping with traffic control, car patrol and crowd control.

Senate Dems examine U.S. war powers

WASHINGTON — Spurred by challenges to President Clinton's authority to send troops abroad, Senate Democrats began a comprehensive review Friday of war-making powers and the role of U.S. troops in the post-Cold War era.

Democrats and Republicans pushed during recent days to curb the president's powers as commander in chief. Immediate restrictions were staved off amid vigorous White House opposition.

Senate Democrats, led by Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Friday it was time for a wholesale study of the suitable role for American troops after the collapse of the Soviet Union.

Denny jurors didn't fear another riot

LOS ANGELES — Fear of another riot didn't influence jurors who acquitted two black men of the most serious charges in the beating of white trucker Reginald Denny, a juror said.

"We weren't thinking, 'We'll have this decision, so another riot won't break out.' That wasn't on our mind. That was the last thing on our mind," said the woman juror, speaking anonymously in an interview Thursday on KCAL-TV.

"If a riot occurred, it would occur," said the juror, the first to speak publicly since the verdicts.

Kevorkian assists 19th suicide

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — For the 19th time, Dr. Jack Kevorkian was at the scene of a suicide. This time, it took place at his apartment.

The retired pathologist helped Merian Frederick, a 72-year-old woman with Lou Gehrig's disease, kill herself Friday by inhaling carbon monoxide.

Kevorkian, 65, has advocated that the terminally ill have the right to commit suicide with a doctor's help. He already faced two charges of assisting a suicide in violation of a Michigan law passed specifically to stop him.

In a handwritten statement released by Kevorkian's attorney, Frederick said she no longer wanted to live.

"To sum up, I want out, the earliest, most humane way possible," she wrote. "The quality of my life is now such that I have no enthusiasm for solving the new level of problems that my deteriorating condition is causing."

After a four-year illness, Frederick could no longer speak and was fed through a tube in her stomach, said Geoffrey Fieger, Kevorkian's lawyer. Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, also called Lou Gehrig's disease for the baseball player who died from it, is a degenerative nerve disorder.

Frederick, who lived in Ann Arbor, had her hand on a string used to release a clamp on a tube to allow a flow of carbon monoxide gas into a mask, according to Fieger.

He said Kevorkian, Frederick's Unitarian Church minister Ken Phifer, her son, Richard Frederick, and his wife attended the death.

"There was a sense of relief among the family members. She was very peaceful," Fieger said.

Police found Frederick's body in Kevorkian's downtown apartment shortly after 7:30 a.m. after receiving an anonymous call about a suicide, Lt. Don Novak said.

The police will hand over results of the investigation to the Oakland County prosecutor's office early next week, Novak said.

A U.S. Marine is lowered from the remnants of the U.S. command post destroyed by a suicide bomber in Beirut, Lebanon Oct. 23, 1983. The attack killed 241 American servicemen.

Marines remember dead comrades

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Former Marine Cpl. Dana Spaulding's face still bears the scars. His mind carries few of the memories.

Spaulding survived the suicide bombing attack in Beirut 10 years ago, one of 175 servicemen wounded when their barracks building collapsed on them. Amnesia caused by the bombing has taken most of his recollections of the attack that killed 241 others.

When Spaulding was asked about the morning of Oct. 23, 1983, his eyes welled with tears, but he could say little. He doesn't even know what happened to some of the men in his unit.

U.S. opposes keeping Chernobyl open

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department expressed concern Friday about a vote by the Ukrainian Parliament to keep the Chernobyl nuclear reactors open, saying such facilities "should be shut down as soon as possible."

The Parliament set aside concerns about the safety of the reactors Thursday and voted to keep them open because of an energy shortage.

"They didn't know who anybody was, because they were covered with dust. We left with 21 men and came back with six," he said.

Spaulding, 29, now a city worker in Attica, N.Y., returned to Camp Lejeune for events this weekend to remember the Marines who died in the attack. This was the major staging area for the Marines sent to Lebanon.

Retired Lt. Gen. John Miller, who in 1983 was commander of Fleet Marine Force Atlantic, was awakened with the terrible news at 1 a.m. that Sunday at fleet headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

"These were my Marines. I was responsible for them," he said. "It was one of the real tragic events of our time. I suspect it was one of the tragic events in Marine Corps history."

Agonized second-guessing followed the bombing: Why were so many men housed under one roof? Why was the building protected only by a barbed wire fence and a few sandbagged sentry posts? Could the attack have been prevented?

"I ask myself that question every day," Miller said.

Miller this week visited the Beirut Memorial near here, a wall of gray Georgia marble dedicated on the bombing's third anniversary. On the wall are engraved 273 names — those of the 241 who died in Beirut, three pilots killed there two days after the bombing, and other troops killed days later in the invasion of Grenada.

The memorial is on four wooded acres near the base. Nearby Lejeune Boulevard is lined with 241 Bradford pear trees.

This morning, Marines and family members will hold a candlelight service at the memorial. The candles will be blown out at 6:22 a.m., the time the barracks were bombed.

Beirut

Robert Jordan, a 55-year-old Cincinnati publishing executive, was a Marine Corps major at the Beirut base in 1983. That October Sunday, he had lazed in bed, past the time when he would normally have been eating his weekend omelette in the barracks building 200 yards away. He'd been invited for a later brunch with French forces.

"Suddenly, I heard the biggest explosion of my life, including the rockets we were subjected to in Vietnam," Jordan, now president of the Beirut Veterans of America, recalled this week in a telephone interview. "Everything was covered in fine, gray dust. I saw what I thought was a tree with the branches blown off, but it was the upended body of a Marine whose legs had been very crudely blown away."

This month, Jordan watched television news reports of the Oct. 3 street battle in Mogadishu and said he wept at footage of U.S. soldiers' bodies being dragged through the streets.

"Those men shouldn't have had to die," Jordan said. "It appears that we are doomed to keep repeating our errors over and over again."

"You can see it time and time again when we sent men out on a mission that was ill-defined with inadequate resources and it has resulted in unneeded deaths. We've got to learn the lesson that the military is a viable tool for international diplomacy, but you only play it if you're willing to use it."

This week, President Clinton ordered home the elite U.S. Army Rangers who had been sent to Mogadishu two months earlier to hunt down a fugitive clan leader. Remaining U.S. troops serving with the U.N. force are to be pulled back by next spring.

A decade ago, the Marines pulled out of Beirut four months after the catastrophic bombing. So did the rest of the Multinational Force in Lebanon, which included troops from Italy, Britain and France. The French lost 58 paratroopers to a second suicide bomb the same day the Americans were attacked.

Lebanon's civil war, which started in 1975, would not be declared over until 1990, six years after the last Marine left Beirut. Since then, peace has come to parts of Lebanon, but the political shakeout goes on, as an array of political and sectarian groups jockey for influence.

At the airport, passenger jets take off, but not to the United States. The U.S. government banned direct travel to and from Lebanon in 1985 after Shiite militants hijacked a TWA jet and murdered a passenger, a U.S. Navy diver, on the runway at Beirut.

Across the road leading to the terminal, a power saw whines in the omnipresent anthem of Lebanon's reconstruction boom.

Standing there at the airport, on the broken ground floor of the bombed-out Marine barracks, on an October Friday, the weekly Islamic holy day, a visitor hears another sound full of potent for Lebanon.

It's the amplified sermon of Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah. Although he has always denied it, Fadlallah was considered the mentor of Hezbollah, the umbrella for the Iranian-backed Shiite bombers and hostage-takers of the 1980s. His castles are sold in Shiite neighborhoods under street murals of Iran's deceased revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The last of almost 100 foreign hostages seized in Lebanon were freed in 1992. Hezbollah, committed to disrupting the U.S.-sponsored Arab-Israeli peace process and erasing Israel from the map, now concentrates its guns on Israeli soldiers and their Lebanese militia allies in southern Lebanon.

Last year, it emerged from the shadows to enter politics, winning eight of Parliament's 128 seats. It remains stridently anti-American.

"I believe those who are controlling the decision-making in the United States are crazy," said Hussein Khalil, head of Hezbollah's political arm. They repeat their mistakes, like the mistakes they made when they came to Lebanon in 1982.

First Army Rangers return home

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — A flag-waving crowd welcomed 100 Army Rangers home Friday from Somalia, where they lost six comrades in fighting nearly three weeks ago.

The 300 to 400 well-wishers cheered wildly as the soldiers, dressed in desert-colored battle garb, marched into a hangar after landing in two C-130 transport planes.

They were the first of 600 Rangers and 150 other special operations troops withdrawn from Somalia by President Clinton in a policy turnaround.

After 18 American soldiers, including the six Rangers from Fort Benning, were killed in an Oct. 3 battle with the forces of Mohamed Farrah Aidid, their mission to capture the clan leader lost public support.

On hand to greet the Rangers were Deputy Defense Secretary William Perry and Gen. Wayne Downing, commander in chief of the U.S. Special Operations Command.

"Welcome home. You're our heroes," said banners draped inside the hangar. The Fort Benning band played marches and the theme from "Rocky."

"They certainly are entitled to a hero's welcome for a job well done," said Rep. Sanford Bishop, D-Ga., who accompanied Perry to Fort Benning.

Among those waiting was Diane Borders of Woodland, Ala., whose son, Pfc. Terry Butler, was one of the planes.

"The unknown has bothered us," she said. "There's been a lot of tension. But his company and our family support group have kept us informed. After the horrible Sunday (Oct. 3), they were on the phone saying, 'Your son is fine.'"

Meanwhile, the first 200 of 1,000 troops being sent to Somalia from the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Fort Stewart, near Savannah, left early Friday.

Security forces open fire on marchers in India; 29 die in clashes

SRINAGAR, India (AP) — Paramilitary police opened fire to block a march in support of separatists trapped in a holy Muslim shrine, and throughout Kashmir state at least 29 people were reported killed in clashes.

Negotiations continued with the separatists, who have been barricaded inside the white-domed marble building since Oct. 15. No progress was reported.

Srinagar, the center of a Muslim movement to break away from Hindu-dominated India, had the look of an armed fortress. People taunted helmeted troops from their windows and shouted independence slogans in the streets.

Police and doctors said five people were killed in several incidents in Srinagar. In Bijbehara, a town 35 miles south of Srinagar, 20 people died in fierce clashes and another 32 were injured, police said.

Press Trust of India put the death toll in clashes throughout Kashmir state at 29 and said 200 were injured. No further information on the Bijbehara incident or on other violence in Kashmir was immediately available.

Reporters were under tight restrictions and were blocked from disturbed areas. Curfew passes were not issued for the first time since the crisis erupted.

Reinforcements had been trucked in to thwart the march planned for after prayers on Friday, the Muslim Sabbath. It was one of the biggest security operations since the separatist insurgency erupted in 1989.

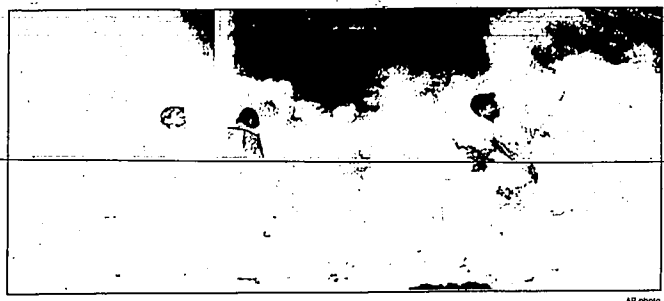

The march was called by Kashmir's religious and political leadership to end the week-long army siege of the Hazratbal shrine, the holiest Muslim site in Kashmir.

Instead, police fired rifles and tear gas to block the demonstrators and chased them through Srinagar's narrow streets.

It is unclear how many armed militants and civilians are inside the shrine, but army officers say 200 people may be involved.

Muslims have shown defiance and support of the separatists by repeatedly challenging a curfew in Srinagar and all major towns in the Kashmir Valley.

Cries for independence were broadcast over mosque speakers after dawn prayers, which went ahead in some places despite the curfew.

A protester throws a tear gas canister back toward Indian security forces in Srinagar Friday. Some 29 people were killed in clashes with police Friday in the northern India city.

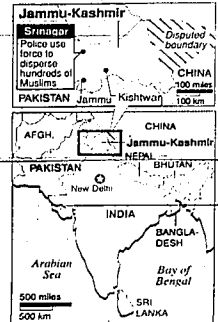

Reporters reached the site of a demonstration at the Daresh Kadal neighborhood after it was over and saw two injured people being carried away.

Ghulam Mohammed, 60, had deep gash on the right side of his face. He said the protesters were beaten by the Border Security Force, a tough paramilitary unit, used for crowd control.

The shrine contains what Muslims believe is a hair from the beard of the prophet Mohammed, the founder of Islam, brought to Kashmir in 1700. The standoff began when each side accused the other of plotting to steal the relic.

AP/Wm J. Casullo

The Srinagar High Court, ordered state authorities to let the secretary-general of the Kashmir Bar Association, Zafar Shah, enter the shrine and see if supplies were needed for the guerrillas and civilians inside.

Russian breaks spacewalk record

MOSCOW — Cosmonaut Alexander Serebrov broke the world record for spacewalks Friday, becoming the first man ever to venture outside an orbiting space station.

Serebrov and fellow cosmonaut Vasily Tishbyev left the Mir space station at 6:47 p.m. (9:47 a.m. MDT) to check on equipment for testing special materials in space. They returned 38 minutes later.

The two cosmonauts also did routine maintenance on the 7-year-old space station and replaced materials that were exposed to space radiation to study its influence, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

Rebel Bosnian leader, Serbs sign pact

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — A rebel Bosnian Muslim leader and top Serbs signed a peace pact for Bosnia's northwestern Bihac pocket Friday, posing a new challenge to the fragile central government in Sarajevo.

At a surprise meeting in Belgrade, Bihac leader Fikret Abdic, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic agreed on a "final peace" between the Bihac region and neighboring Serb-held territory.

The agreement presented President Alija Izetbegovic's government with the unsettling prospect that other regional leaders might seek separate deals with the Serbs.

Georgian troops retake key rail town

TBILISI, Georgia — Georgia's government retook a key railroad town Friday but backtracked on claims its troops had wrested a Vital Black Sea port from rebels.

Rebels seeking to oust Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze captured a smaller town, and both sides accused Russia of blocking their lines of advance.

The news that the port of Poti remained under rebel control was likely to demoralize Georgians already suffering from food shortages, lack of fuel, high inflation and rampant violence.

Rebels are trying to return the country's former president, Zviad Gamsakhurdia, to power. Gamsakhurdia led Georgia to independence two years ago but was ousted by former allies who accused him of assuming dictatorial powers.

Nuclear flap cuts U.S. aid to Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The United States remains at odds with Pakistan over its nuclear program, and even if the issue is resolved the Asian nation should not expect a large infusion of aid, the U.S. ambassador says.

"For Pakistan, the days of receiving huge amounts of aid from the United States are over," Ambassador John Monjo was quoted as saying by Pakistani newspapers Friday.

Pakistan was one of the leading recipients of U.S. aid during the 1980s, when it was used to funnel arms to anti-communist rebels in Afghanistan. The rebels toppled the Marxist government last year.

Israel eases curbs on Palestinian access

JERUSALEM — Israel announced Friday that it was easing the restrictions on Palestinian access to the country that were put in place in March after a wave of stabbing attacks.

Women, most men over 40 and minors under the age of 16 who are accompanied by adults would be eligible for the permits needed to pass army roadblocks beginning Tuesday, Police Minister Moshe Shahal said.

He added that hospital staff, employees of Muslim holy sites, the east Jerusalem electric plant and City Hall would also be allowed to enter in greater numbers, Israeli radio reported.

Liberals lead Canadian elections into stretch

TORONTO (AP) — Liberal leader Jean Chretien swung into the final three days of the campaign for Monday's general election relatively certain he will be Canada's next prime minister.

Chretien's only worry, it seemed, was whether he would head a majority government or a less stable minority government.

Two polls published Friday showed Chretien solidly in front and Prime Minister Kim Campbell's Progressive Conservatives fading to third. But the Reform Party, a western-based conservative movement, and the separatist Bloc Quebecois, maintain large regional blocks of support.

Canadians are voting to fill 295 seats in the House of Commons. The party with the most seats picks the prime minister, even if the party wins fewer than the 148 seats needed for a majority.

The Liberal leader is so confident, he has started acting like a prime minister, discussing tax questions with some of the provincial premiers.

"I guess next week I will have another job," Chretien, 59, a longtime politician from Quebec, said at a campaign stop. "It's the last time I'm applying for a new job, so you decide if I should get it or not."

Ms. Campbell, who became Canada's first female prime minister in June when Conservatives chose her to replace Brian Mulroney, put on a brave face, but all but admitted her fight is for second place. And even that may be tough with Reform and Bloc Quebecois sucking up large numbers of Conservative votes.

Yeltsin finishes elimination of political foes

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin on Friday ordered new elections to Russia's regional legislatures, completing his sweep of political opponents from the federal to the local level.

The regional councils were among the last remaining centers of opposition to the president. Many had supported the hard-line national parliament that checked Yeltsin's free-market reforms.

U.S. support for the Russian president appeared as strong as ever. Secretary of State Warren Christopher met with Yeltsin and announced a January summit in Moscow.

Yeltsin ordered parliament disbanded Sept. 21, and two weeks later sent tanks against those who resisted. He dissolved thousands of city councils across the country and stripped the regional councils of many powers.

He also announced plans to make the regional councils smaller and more efficient.

Friday's decree said the new bodies should have no more than 50 members. Some of the old ones had more than 100.

Although the decree left the legislatures of Russia's 21 republics in place, it "recommended" that they too be reduced in size.

Couple battles rules on elderly care

RIGBY — State regulations forced Jerry and Kelly Sorenson to reduce by half the number of seniors they care for at Golden Times Adult Services. Now the Sorensons are fighting to change those laws. The Sorensons scaled back their operation after Idaho Department of Health and Welfare officials earlier this month found they were operating a residential care facility without a license. The Sorensons contend they were operating a boarding house. They say they can't afford to comply with state residential care center regulations for staff, training, operating procedures and safety standards. "When you start reading through the regulations, they're pretty restrictive," Sorenson said. "They're set up for a nursing home."

Zoning official fights to stay on board

SANDPOINT — Bonner County commissioners say when Linda Tauber's appointed two-year term on the county planning commission was over, she went off the board.

But Tauber says Idaho law requires planning and zoning commissioners serve three- or six-year terms and she plans to stay in the unpaid job for another year. "I am consulting with my attorneys as to the next logical steps," said Tauber, who operates a Sandpoint travel agency and was a 11-year veteran on the planning board. The two-year term expired Oct. 1. Tauber notified commissioners she planned to stay another year. "We looked into the legality of it and her term is up," Commissioner Gene Brown said. "We figured it was time to give somebody else a chance at the post."

Boise arsonist's parole request denied

BOISE — Convicted arsonist Joyce Riblett, a one-time Boise daycare center operator, has again been denied parole and told to serve out the equivalent of her full sentence.

The state Commission on Pardons and Parole calculated Riblett's release date at Sept. 14, 1997, after rejecting another request for earlier release. The commission wrapped up its October session on Friday. Riblett, 40, had been given parole dates in the past, but each time they were contingent on release into a halfway-house setting that she was never able to arrange, a commission official said. Riblett was convicted in 1984 on seven counts of arson for fires she set between August 1982 and April 1984.

Kellogg residents' lead levels up slightly

KELLOGG — Health officials believe they know the reason blood lead levels in Kellogg have levelled off — and even increased slightly last year — after seeing years of decline.

However, officials from the Environmental Protection Agency and Idaho Department of Health and Welfare were unable to offer the two dozen people who attended a Superfund Task Force meeting at the Kellogg Middle School with much information on the status of Gulf Resources' bankruptcy dilemma.

Dr. Ian von Lindern, an official with Terra Graphics who has been monitoring blood lead levels, said he suspects the numbers have quit decreasing because of an increase in the number of children moving into homes in the 21-square-mile Superfund site that haven't been treated.

Developer loses forest permit

BOISE (AP) — The Boise National Forest Friday terminated Valbois Limited Partnership's permit to plan and develop what was expected to be a $120 million, four-season resort near Cascade.

Forest Supervisor Steve Mealey said Valbois didn't meet the terms of an amended special use permit requiring the developers to submit proof of financial backing — called an examined financial forecast — by Oct. 12.

Valbois director Dennis Taggart submitted information that day, but Mealey said Friday that it amounted to a "financial forecast proposal that contained mostly hypothetical unexamined proposals and projections conditioned in part on an extended permit period."

But Taggart said Valbois submitted what accountants for the Boise National Forest and the development partnership agreed would be required.

"We have complied with the request to provide a financial proposal that addresses the issues and terms the forest has raised in their letters and the permit amendment. It did not include an examined financial forecast," Taggart said. "We acted in good faith based on the best information we were provided by the Forest Service."

Mealey said an examined financial forecast requires a certified public accountant's agreement that the figures submitted are highly credible and can be used as a basis for conclusions about the likelihood that the development plan will succeed financially.

"I feel a lot of pain in announcing this decision. I'm disappointed the project didn't work. We all put a lot of effort and risk into this project and I admire people for taking risks," Mealey said.

"But it would have been irresponsible for me, on the basis of the continued uncertain capability of Valbois L.P. to complete planning, to allow people to continue to bang their heads on the success of this project."

Valbois has 45 days to appeal Mealey's decision to Intermountain Region Forester Gray Reynolds in Ogden, Utah.

Taggart said the partnership would explore several legal options, including an appeal to Reynolds. He would not elaborate.

Valbois admitted during an April 28 meeting and in a July 12 letter to Mealey that it did not have the money to complete the master planning process. Neither Valbois nor the Forest Service would detail the reasons for the financing problems. But the developers said in the July 12 letter that several potential transactions were being negotiated "which would result in a total restructuring of the Valbois project."

Idaho cities rank high

LEWISTON (AP) — A new book by a California publisher ranks Lewiston No. 4 as the best cities of more than 10,000 population to live in 10 western states.

The publishers looked at 220 cities in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming, but not California, said Bennett Jacobstein of Toucan Valley Publishers at Milpitas, Calif.

That's the basis of the title: "The Best of the West Top Rated Cities Outside the Golden State."

The top 50 cities that emerged also include Rexburg in southern Idaho. It made the break, right at No. 50.

Eatery poisoning claims near $50,000

NAMPA (AP) — Claims totaling nearly $50,000 have been submitted for medical expense or lost wages against a Nampa restaurant because of a summer outbreak of food poisoning.

Maria's Hacienda filed Sept. 28 for bankruptcy reorganization. The plan calls for Robert and Sarai Lopez, owners of the restaurant, to pay $600 per month to satisfy creditor claims.

Challis seeks help coping with tragedies

CHALLIS (AP) — Residents of Challis have been forced to go outside their remote Salmon River community for help in coping with a string of tragedies culminating with last week's suspected abduction of a 9-year-old girl.

"It's been too much even for the natural support systems," said Pat Weber, a counselor at the junior and senior high schools.

In September, Bertha Martinez Laney and her friend Billy Sue Conley were shot to death, authorities believe, by Laney's estranged husband Sean who then killed himself.

A few weeks later in the town of 1,000, a single mother committed suicide, leaving two children.

And then on Oct. 11, Stephanie Crane disappeared in the evening near the high school after leaving the bowling alley. Days of searching, at times involving 1,000 volunteers, produced nothing, and authorities said Friday they still have no leads or information about her disappearance.

Usually these rural people rely on friends and neighbors for help in tough times, but they have become so overwhelmed that Benton Granville and professionals from the Eastern Idaho Regional Behavioral Health Center have come in to help ease the strain.

"Even though we're isolated up here, that helping hand reaches across the miles," Weber said.

Over the past two weeks, center staff members have met with volunteer searchers, discussed safety with parents, comforted children of all ages and sat down individually with anyone who just wanted to talk.

"Someone had come in and done something so their town would never be the same," Granville said.

Weber said the help offered by the center let people know that "what they're experiencing is normal," and Ethel Peck, who spent 12 years on the local emergency unit, said at least people have had the chance to come to terms with the tragedies so they are not haunted by them later.

Hells Canyon council blames Forest Service for vandalism

LEWISTON (AP) — The Hells Canyon Preservation Council says the U.S. Forest Service need look no farther than a mirror to find the party responsible for vandalism at Pittsburg Landing.

Ric Bailey, the council's executive director, said the agency's road improvement at Pittsburg amounts to vandalism of the site.

The $2 million road and campground construction project at Pittsburg completed this year violates the spirit of the canyon, charged

Bailey, a frequent critic of the project and the agency.

The Forest Service's offer of a $5,000 reward to find those who have twice vandalized ancient rock art at the site prompted his response, Bailey said.

The agency should find itself guilty and use the reward money to remove its new road leading to the petroglyph site, Bailey said.

The Nez-Perce Tribe already has registered its worries that archaeological sites in the canyon are not receiving enough protection.

Nez Perce Tribal Executive Committee members hope to visit the Pittsburg site next week, Chairman Samuel Penney said.

Bailey said he mailed a letter with photographs of the Pittsburg project and other evidence to support his charges to Regional Forester John Lowe this week.

Lowe could not be reached for comment. Wallowa-Whitman National Forest officials were unavailable for comment as well.

Bullets fly on Quincy Street again

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

Drive-by shooter targets neighborhood for third time; residents escape injury

TWIN FALLS - For the second time this week bullets flew on Quincy Street on Thursday night, and if police are right, the shooter hit the house he was aiming for this time.

The shots were fired at 11:48 at a home at 319 Quincy, said Detective Tim Miller of the Twin Falls Police Department.

Two bullets hit the house, but police do not know what kind of gun they came from, Miller said. There were no witnesses, and police do not know what kind of car the shooter was driving.

No one was injured.

Someone took a shot at 309 Quincy on Monday night, but police theorized that the shooter was aiming for 319 Quincy. That's the same house someone shot at with a 12-gauge shotgun on Sept. 25.

On Sept. 29, someone shot at a double-wide trailer home in the Skyline Trailer Park in south Twin Falls. A 16-year-old boy who lives at the trailer home also was sleeping at 319 Quincy the night of Sept. 25.

Police are having little luck getting people to talk about the incidents.

"It was somebody would come forward with some good evidence," he said. "... Nobody wants to get involved."

Another Quincy Street resident reported finding a bullet in the hood of her pickup on Wednesday. The 9-mm slug was the same size as that embedded in a kitchen wall after Monday night's shooting at 309 Quincy Street.

Area residents had reported hearing shots fired at several locations on Quincy on Monday night. They reported seeing a small pickup or car drive away from the street after the shootings.

So far, no one has been injured in any of the shootings.

Twin Falls boy learns life of crime isn't easy

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A 16-year-old boy has confessed to a recent small crime wave in Twin Falls.

The boy, born in Jerome but now living in Twin Falls, has admitted trying to burglarize Ropers clothing store earlier this week, according to a Twin Falls Police report.

He also told police he and an accomplice tried to steal a safe from the Coca Cola Building as well.

The youth said his accomplice burglarized Sneaker World recently and broke into Doris' Bar on Main Street.

According to the report, the youth said he and an accomplice tried to burglarize Ropers just after midnight Wednesday morning.

The two broke through a door on the roof, followed an abandoned staircase down and broke through a wall into the store, the police report states. But when the store alarm went off, the would-be robbers got scared and ran, leaving a tool box behind.

With one failed felony under their belts, the two then went to the Coca Cola Building, according to the report.

Around 2 a.m., they climbed a tree to the building roof and then unlatched a door, the boy wrote in the police report. They dropped down to the roof of a delivery truck and got down to the floor of the building.

They found a safe in the building. They tried to drill a hole in it and knocked off the latch, but could not get it open, he wrote in the report.

The youths decided to take the safe to Rock Creek Canyon to open it, so the boy found a forklift to carry the safe. But while crossing the road, the forklift became stuck, the boy wrote in the report.

He then went to a home where he'd been staying, stole a truck and tried to move the forklift off the tracks. That damaged the truck's transmission and failed to free the forklift.

The boy then pulled the wiring from under the truck dashboard to make it look like it had been "hot-wired" and stolen, he wrote in the report.

But, according to the report, the boy admitted to the truck owner that he stole the truck and then turned himself in to police.

He also admitted sealing a bench press and weight set from a trailer in Graceman's Trailer Park several weeks ago, according to the report.

Phony phone book bills lead list of local scams

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Two small businesses in Twin Falls County recently received bogus bills for advertisements in yellow pages directories.

"We usually get fraud cases in the spring and fall. But this is a new one," said Staff Sgt. Robert Gauthier of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

The company that sent the yellow pages bills did not print a directory.

Gauthier said he's turned the case over to the fraud division of the Idaho attorney general's office because similar cases have been discovered in other states.

Businesses in Golden, Colo., and Seattle have also reported receiving the phony yellow pages bills.

Gauthier said he got one report of the phony bills on Thursday and another on Friday. He wouldn't identify the businesses.

Magic Valley law enforcement officials are busy with reports of other types of fraud this fall.

Among the more prominent scams are letters that state residents have won sweepstakes and prizes, but must send money to find out what they won, Gauthier said.

Another prevalent scam comes from contractors who say they will seal a home owner's roof or driveway, he said. After the home owner pays the bill he then disappears.

Cleanup complete at site of jet crash

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

BERGER - Cleanup of the site where an F-16 fighter jet crashed last December was completed Thursday after tests showed negligible amounts of contamination.

Ken Knowles from the Burley District of the Bureau of Land Management confirmed Friday that the remaining 400 to 500 cubic yards of dirt had been taken to the Twin Falls County Landfill.

The Navy jet was returning to Miramar Naval Air Station in San Diego on a routine mission when it crashed shortly after takeoff from the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport Dec. 17. The crash killed the pilot.

Federal and state officials were concerned in June about the possible existence of hydrazine - a common, high-energy rocket fuel that can cause cancer - at the site.

Because hydrazine is also odorless, officials took extra precautions before deciding how to proceed with the cleanup operation.

Preliminary tests in June showed 10 cubic yards of soil required disposal as hazardous waste. A second test this fall, however, turned up negative.

Mike McMasters, with the state Division of Environmental Quality, said that DEQ requested a third test.

"We asked them to do some additional monitoring," he said.

Knowles said that results from the third test were received Wednesday. This test also showed no traces of hydrazine, he said.

"If there was any it evaporated," he said. The test showed small amounts of acetone - approximately 84 parts per million - but Knowles said that was not enough to cause concern. Acetone is an organic solvent.

International Technology Corp. of Monroeville, Pa., handled the cleanup operations for the Navy under the supervision of the Army Corps of Engineers and the Burley area BLM. Cleanup ran most of the day Wednesday and Thursday, ending by 5 p.m. Thursday, Knowles said.

He said that the 400 to 500 cubic yards of stockpiled soil were taken to the county landfill.

There the dirt will be spread and later turned to allow the jet fuel in it to break down or evaporate. Clean dirt was taken from a community pit to backfill the 15-foot deep hole at the crash site, he said.

Knowles said that while some heavy equipment is still out at the site and a final report will not be ready for two months, work at the site is virtually done.

"Everything is clean and back to normal," he said.

Jailed Colorado con man calling for help

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A Colorado man suspected of defrauding several local business people is trying to get out of jail.

Twin Falls police are still holding James Palmer, 48, in jail on the charges of having false identification and lying to an officer. Despite those relatively minor charges his bond was raised Thursday to $280,000.

"Which isn't out of reach for a con man because he's just calling everybody and their dog to help him get out," said Det. Sgt. David H. Heidemann.

Palmer was convicted of fraud in Eagle, Colo., in 1988 and sentenced to 16 years in prison, according to FBI records, Heidemann said. But just after the trial, Palmer convinced the judge to let him see a lawyer before going to prison and escaped.

On Oct. 12, Twin Falls police received a call from a local businessman who suspected that a man was pulling a scam in town.

Undercover officers then followed the man and pulled him over on Oct. 14 when they noticed he had somebody else's license plates on his Ford Bronco, Heidemann said. The man said his name was "Johnny Palmer" and he had drivers licenses from Washington, Oregon and Colorado, along with an Idaho driver's manual and a student identification card from the College of

He was arrested, and his fingerprints were sent to the FBI crime lab in Washington, D.C.

The fingerprints matched those of the James Leonard Palmer who was convicted in Colorado and wanted in Oregon. In Oregon he is suspected of defrauding people by selling them bogus memberships to health clubs.

Because he was convicted in Colorado, that state has first dibs on Palmer and is trying to extradite him.

But Heidemann said he's building a case against Palmer and suspects he attempted to defraud at least three local business people.

Wendell bust nets pot, guns, 4 arrests

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - Narcotics officers closed in on a downtown apartment Wednesday morning and seized weapons, drug paraphernalia and marijuana.

Four adults were arrested and one juvenile was detained.

Wendell Police Chief Stuart Lumpkin said narcotics officers from North Side Drug Task Force, Gooding County Sheriff's Department and Wendell Police Department made the arrests and, with a search warrant, seized items from Apartment No. 1 at 76 N. Idaho St.

Arrested were Harvey and Jerry Ramirez, James Hall and Charles Gray. Lumpkin said they were taken to the Gooding County jail and held at $10,000 bond each. The juvenile was released to the parents. Lumpkin said all subjects were arrested without incident.

The officers seized a sawed-off .410-gauge shotgun; 12-gauge shotgun; two .22-caliber rifles; numerous items of drug paraphernalia; a small amount of marijuana; and Hall's 1969 Chevy pickup truck, Lumpkin said.

The arrests followed a 1½-month investigation by the Tri-County Drug Enforcement, the drug task force and officers from Gooding County and Wendell Police.

Tri-County Drug Enforcement is a coalition of narcotics officers in Twin Falls, Cassia and Minidoka counties. North Side Drug Task Force is a group of narcotics officers with jurisdiction in Gooding, Gooding, Lincoln and Camas counties.

Man faces rape count

RUPERT - A 19-year-old man has been charged with raping a 16-year-old girl in Paul. According to a court affidavit, Corey Hood, of Burley, entered the trailer and talked with the girl on Sept. 29. The two are friends. He picked her up from a chair in the living room and carried her to the bedroom, where he raped her, court records say. The girl told police that Hood had gone to the kitchen and washed his mouth out, then tried to kiss her. In her struggle she tried to wrap her leg around a pole in the kitchen to stop him. After the rape, she spent two hours taking a shower and crying, according to her court statement. Hood admitted to police he had sex with her, but he said she consented. "I was sitting on the couch and we were talking about old times and one thing lead to another and we went into the bedroom and had sex," Hood wrote in a court statement. Hood was arrested and booked into Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center. His arraignment is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

RUPERT - A 22-year-old Rupert man faces a rape charge in Minidoka County for having sex with a minor. Jose Luis Barajas has been charged with rape in Minidoka County District Court. Barajas faces one year to life imprisonment and has waived his preliminary hearing. His arraignment is tentatively scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Monday, county prosecutor Gara Newman said. In court statements, the girl said she and her 14-year-old sister had packed their bags and climbed out the window of their home Sept. 5 before deciding to call Barajas. Barajas drove them to Paul Labor Camp #60 in Rupert to stay at his sister's house. During their three-day stay, the 16-year-old told police, she had sex with Barajas; the 14-year-old sister had sex with a 16-year-old boy, their statements said. The parents retrieved their daughters from the house the morning of Sept. 8 and took them home to Burley, where a fight broke out between the mother and the daughters, according to a police report. Cassia County Sheriff's Department police came to the house and the girls were taken to the Child Protective Agency, court documents said. The mother later took her daughters to Minidoka Sheriff's Department to report that their girls had been sexually abused, the police report said. But both girls wrote statements for police, saying that at no time did their boyfriends force them into anything. According to the police report, the mother said she doesn't care if they were willing. The report said she was very angry and demanded charges be filed on Barajas and the 16-year-old boy for sexual abuse.

BURLEY - Federal and local police officers arrested a farm worker who was wanted in several states for delivering 3,000 pounds of marijuana - worth as much as $3 million on the street. Jose Luis Luna Jr., 30, was charged by the federal Drug Enforcement Administration with possession of controlled substance with intent to deliver. Lt. Jim Hignens of Cassia County Sheriff's Department said. Luna was driving a farm truck on a field west of Burley when police arrested him about 6 p.m. Thursday. Hignens said. No marijuana was found on Luna at the time. Hignens said county police and DEA officials have been investigating Luna, but he declined to say how long. Police estimated that each pound of marijuana is worth

$1,000. DEA officials tracked Luna as he made deliveries from southern Texas up to Idaho, Hignens said. Luna was arrested and booked into Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center. Later DEA officials took him to Boise, where he will be prosecuted in federal court, Hignens said.

Report raises community ire

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Evangelical Lutheran task force that has endorsed unambiguously, homosexual unions and condoms for teens has no power to force local congregations to follow its lead.

That's the word from the Rev. Daniel Riecke, who pastors Our Savior Lutheran Church, the only Evangelical Lutheran congregation in the Magic Valley.

"This is simply a study group with no binding power at all to make decisions," Riecke said. "Like any other study, there are things I personally agree with and things I disagree with."

Riecke said he appreciates the openness of the task force to tackle some tough issues. What he doesn't appreciate is an Associated Press story on the subject that hit the presses on Wednesday.

"I happened to be having a meeting with ELCA (Evangelical Lutheran Church in America) pastors, and we were all bemusing the fact that the article made it sound like the task force has some kind of authority," Riecke said.

The Rev. Lawrence Vedder, who pastors Twin Falls Immanuel Lutheran Church, expressed different concerns.

"My phone has been ringing off the wall all morning," he said Wednesday. "But his church is not ELCA."

People in the community have every right to be shocked; but that's not us," Vedder said. "There's not a point (in the controversial sections of the draft) that we would agree with."

The 5.2 million-member ELCA, the nation's largest Lutheran denomination, actually falls on the moderate end of mainline Protestantism; but it's more liberal than the 2.6 million-member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, Immanuel Lutheran's denomination. The ELCA was formed in 1988, by the merger of the Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

Vedder said people may be confusing the denominations because Missouri Synod Lutherans are more prevalent in the Magic Valley. Ten Missouri Synod churches here contain nearly 5,000 members, while the Magic Valley ELCA church has 430 members.

Vedder also said the results of task forces like the ELCA group are generally a mixture of how people feel about scripture and what scripture actually says.

"People are translating scripture through a veil of their feelings and political correctness," he said.

Riecke agrees that national task forces are often more liberal than the people who sit in their pews.

"Those who populate study committees are usually of the social disciplines, like scholars and people attuned to certain helping professions," he said.

Talking about life? Get real!

Carla was a superstar in junior high last year. But the first weeks of high school have been tough.

"I feel like such a peck," my young friend wailed as we chatted at the grocery store. "Nobody knows who I am. Nobody cares. And I still can't remember where all of the rooms are."

"Last week, we had an assembly and I couldn't find the gym," she continued. "I finally asked some older guy where it was and he laughed and told me to turn around. It was right behind me! I was, like, totally humiliated — especially when they introduced the football team during the assembly, and the guy who was laughing at me turned out to be the quarterback!"

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

I laughed. I know, I probably shouldn't have laughed at her circumstances. But couldn't help it. Her frustration was striking too many familiar chords that tickled fond — and not-so-fond — memories. Like the time those seniors on the basketball team convinced me that the coach really admired players who had the spunk to talk back to him during practice. Or the time those older girls breathlessly advised me to ask out the school's reigning beauty queen because she had a secret crush on me but was too embarrassed to say anything about it.

Secret crush, indeed. It was such an incredible secret that she didn't even know about it. Talk about rejection. Talk about humiliation.

Talk about life.

It's amazing, isn't it, how regularly the sun rises the morning after we are absolutely, positively sure our world is going to come crashing to an end? Hurts and frustrations come and go, but somehow we do survive. Sometimes we even learn from our lessons — learned through pain and embarrassment.

None of which makes the suffering less insufferable. But it may help Carla and other newcomers to life's ups and downs if we point out a few realities they can expect to confront on the bumpy road to maturity. For example:

1. Bad things happen. They just do. Nobody's going to make it out of here without first experiencing adversity — a little or, in some cases, a lot. Expect it. Then when it comes, deal with it — and move on. Good and bad is life's ultimate tag team. You can't really have one without the other. Eventually.

2. For every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction. That's more than just a law of physics. It's a law of life. There are consequences for every choice we make. Our ability to anticipate those consequences and our willingness to accept them will have a lot to do with our peace and happiness in this life — and forever.

3. There's more to life than having "fun." Believe it or not, life isn't really a game — no matter what Milton Bradley tells you. Some things are hard and boring and frustrating, but we go ahead and do them anyway because they are ultimately worthwhile or they simply need to be done. So it's OK if every moment of your life isn't exciting. As far as I know, no one has ever actually died of boredom.

4. Working works when wishy-washy wishing won't. I don't remember where I read that, but it's true. You can waste your life sitting around the harbor waiting for your ship to come in. The fact is, there is no shortcut to success. It's a simple, time-worn formula composed of work, talent, work, faith, work, discipline — and more work.

5. People are more important than things. While it's great to have a nice car, a powerful stereo or the very latest in personal computer equipment, none of these means much if it's been acquired at the expense of the important people in your life — family, friends, neighbors. Broken things can always be repaired or replaced; with broken relationships, the damage can last a lifetime.

But then, you already knew that, didn't you? That's because you've probably experienced a good share of life's realities first hand. But to Carla and her generation, a lot of these concepts are revelations. Which means we still have a chance to give them the benefit of our experience. Otherwise, they'll end up doing some of the same dumb things we did, and social progress will have to wait for another generation to grow up.

And that may be the harshest reality of all.

Christian soldiers in training

Camp teaches boys about God and country

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They're Royal Rangers — kids of the kingdom, Christian soldiers in training.

They have uniforms and badges, they camp, they protect the environment. Their goal is "reaching and teaching boys for Jesus Christ."

Boy Scouts are taught to "be prepared." Royal Rangers are taught to prepare for both this world and beyond.

"We are a Christian alternative to Boy Scouts," said Bob Parr, who serves as both local and district commander for the Royal Rangers. "We believe Boy Scouts is the greatest Scouting outfit in the world, but we put the emphasis on a right relationship with our creator."

Even though Boy Scouts is a "God and country" organization, Parr said it's not a religious-preference group.

Royal Rangers is organized and sponsored by Assembly of God churches. The local group meets at First Assembly of God Church in Twin Falls.

Parts of the Royal Rangers meeting could easily be mistaken for a Boy Scout confab. On a recent Wednesday, kids ranging in age from 5 to 17 were building model planes, studying about animals and taking time out for organized play on the wrestling mat. The boys earn points toward their badges by doing projects — like building a rail fence at Camp Spring on Shoshone Basin Road, and seeding a dam area nearby.

"We work with the Forest Service to teach camping etiquette, we go on nature hikes, we plan our pinewood derby, we help clean up the roads," said Parr, who has been leading the Twin Falls Royal Rangers for 20 years now.

The boys also have Bible studies and devotions. Even the little ones construct chains of Bible verses and earn awards for memorizing them.

"We are interested in the kids growing physically, mentally, socially and spiritually," Parr said. "We want to build character, because we feel there's a big lack of character-building in our society."

The Royal Rangers demonstrate the fruits of their leaders' labor.

"Every night at Pew Wow (conference), we praised the Lord, and I was able to witness to some of the boys," said Royal Ranger Craig Johnson, 11. "One night, I dropped my flashlight in the creek, and I prayed, and the Lord gave me the idea that you can lose your light and you need to go to the father to get light back."

That's a Royal Rangers kind of lesson.

The kids are divided into groups: Straight-Arrows, Buckaroos, Pioneers, Trailblazers and Air Sea Trail Rangers. About 577 boys are active in 52 groups in southern Idaho, with the Twin Falls group varying in size from 25 to 70.

Twin Falls Royal Rangers meet on the church's family night, when 150 to 200 people are involved in programs like Missionettes, youth group and small group elective. The church's pastor, Ted Britain, teaches an adult Bible study that evening.

All of the family groups are heavy on moral values and scriptural principles, Britain said. They are tools to use in building God's people.

Christopher Wright is 10 years old, but he's just beginning his journey through Royal Rangers. It's hard for

To curb violence you must cure spiritual sickness

About Bill Flanery

William S. "Bill" Flanery is the pastor of the Hagerman and Wendell United Methodist churches. He has been a pastor for 15 years and has worked as a manager, planner and Girl Scout executive. He has also worked for the Council of Governments in Pikes Peak, Colo. Originally from Sioux Falls, S.D., he was educated at the University of Colorado and at Union Theological Seminary in New York. He and his wife, Ellen, have three children, Eric, Donna and Sara.

As a relative newcomer to the Magic Valley, I am honored to be asked to contribute to this column. One of the things my family and I like about this area is the general lack of criminal violence. In the Denver area, from which we came, there has been an alarming increase in gang-type violence. This is true, of course, in many large cities and urban areas.

But violence, seems to be on the increase elsewhere, too, even in rural areas. It is disturbing to hear of murders and drive-by shootings in this area. It seems we are faced with a problem not confined to the urban areas.

In fact, we are one nation; we are even becoming a global village. The images on television and in the movies, the news of killings in Haiti and Somalia, the tensions in Bosnia and South Africa affect people everywhere. Our culture is ridden with violence, and it is troubling thoughtful persons everywhere.

The causes of violence are not hard to find. Widespread use of illegal drugs contribute to violence, both because of the drug use itself and the criminal activity in distributing the drugs. Television is being recognized by more and more people as a shaper of attitudes and beliefs, especially among the young, that encourages and glorifies violent behavior.

We also have a spiritual sickness that has violence as a symptom. The desire to put the self always first, the sense of alienation from God and other people, the attitude of distrust and of rebellion against authority, and fear and hatred of those who are different from us — all are part of this spiritual sickness.

Therefore, the cure for violence must deal with the spiritual sickness as well as with the problems in society that cause and aggravate violent behavior.

A way has been shown by Jesus Christ. He demonstrated the life-changing power of the spirit in human lives.

There are other religious leaders, too, such as the Buddha, Moses, Gandhi and others, who have shown us a better way. When more of us learn to make those insights and wisdom a part of our own lives, all people will benefit.

We must work for changes in our society, such as reducing the level of violence in the media, dealing with the drug problem, limiting the availability of weapons and reforming the criminal justice system. Both societal changes and spiritual growth are needed to fully address the problem.

The United Methodist Church is developing Communities of Shalom in Los Angeles and other urban areas to create models for a broad-based and comprehensive attack on the problems that lead to violence.

Churches, schools and families must all work together to end the rising tide of violence and show a better way.

The Times-News invites area clergy to submit columns of 400 words or less. Column topics can include a point of doctrine, religious perspective on current events or social commentary. Send columns to Denise Turner, assistant Features editor, Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Lewiston church offers resting place for ashes

LEWISTON (AP) - Lewiston's Episcopal Church of the Nativity now has a churchyard in the old site of the ward - a burial place. The church opened up a columbarium last month.

"But now it's ashes instead of bodies," said the Rev. John Dempsey. It is a final resting place for the ashes of parishioners and non-parishioners at a cost more reasonable than a conventional burial, Dempsey said.

Few urban churches now have their own cemeteries, but this technically isn't a cemetery, Dempsey said.

"In Idaho, ashes are not bodies." "What's driving it is costs," he said. "It costs you a lot of money to die. This way it doesn't."

The fees are $250 for parishioners and $350 for non-parishioners, which includes the price of the urn that locks down into the vault frame. A normal burial can cost thousands for a casket, burial plot, maintenance fees and a stone.

A columbarium is a vault with individual recesses. It comes from the word columbaria, a dove or pigeon house, which is what the little compartments resemble.

Lutherans

Sexuality: A Lutheran Perspective, is being sent this week to the courts. Already ELCA pastors and church leaders. Local churches may then respond, and a second draft will be prepared for a churchwide assembly of lay and clergy delegates in 1995. Already ELCA's 67-member Conference of Bishops has expressed reservations about the report.

Our Savior Lutheran Church may or may not hold meetings on the subject, Rieke said, depending on people's needs.

Though the draft statement affirms marriage and attacks adultery, promiscuity, sexual abuse, prostitution and pornography, it adopts an extremely controversial stance on several hot-button issues. For example, it urges children, adolescents and adults to learn the pleasures their bodies can give them. "Masturbation, a means of self-pleasuring, is generally 'Homosexuality, no; condoms, no; masturbation, no. But it looks like I will have to now.'

— Rev. Daniel Reike, asked if he ever preached on such issues appropriate and healthy," the task force said.

The group also applauded sex education and the use of condoms, and it asked Lutherans to challenge literal interpretations of biblical condemnations of homosexuality. "Responsible biblical interpretation" strongly supports the acceptance and even the blessing of committed same-sex unions, according to the report.

Mainline Protestant denominations have been convulsed in recent years over demands by gay and lesbian members that churches accord them formal acceptance and the right of ordination. So far, the United Church of Christ is the only major Protestant denomination to permit the ordination of homosexuals.

"Some of the suggestions of the task force are not at all the position of the majority of people in our church," said Rieke, who pastors a congregation with a wide range of views - from liberal to conservative. "People's feelings and experiences shape what they think and feel, and some of these things are real emotional triggers, or feeling issues."

He continued, "If I say masturbation is categorically wrong, some people would say, 'You betcha.' Others would say, 'What? You mean it's never right, even if you are having sex with your spouse and you masturbate when you must be separated for a period of time?' As soon as we take a polar position, we tend to alienate someone."

When asked if he has ever preached on such issues, Rieke said, "Homosexuality, no; condoms, no; masturbation, no." Then he added, "But it looks like I will have to now."

"Christopher is working very hard, and he almost has the Royal Rangers pledge memorized," said his mother, Renee Wright. "The other children help him, and the commanders are a wonderful influence. To be accepted as part of the group has been really exciting for him."

That's the heart of Royal Rangers. Or as Pat put it, "A man never stands so tall as when he stoops to help a boy."

Patriots down No. 1-ranked Bruins

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

BOISE — For eight minutes it seemed like the No. 1-ranked Twin Falls Bruins would have a good showing on astroturf, but from then on, all the bad habits came back as the Bruins dropped a 20-14 decision to Centennial's Patriots on Friday night.

Twin Falls gave up cheap touchdowns early and late in the first half, then saw Centennial, resuscitated by two major Bruin penalties, march for the winning touchdown in the final quarter. To say the Bruins gave this one away might be true, but it definitely shortchanges the performance of the thrice-beaten Patriots.

The defense, behind Ryan Holder, absolutely dominated Twin Falls over the last 40 minutes. After Twin Falls had scored twice in a five-minute span of the first quarter for a 14-6 lead, the defense held them to a total of five first downs, two of them in the closing couple of minutes.

"We're in a must situation for sure," said Twin Falls Coach Jon Jund, as he saw any chance of a playoff pod championship basically evaporate.

"We have to win next week (at Nampa) or we will be on the road for all our playoff games. I'll bet you dollars to doughnuts Centennial will be the first team we face in the playoffs."

Jund was disappointed but not surprised in the Twin Falls performance, noting, "We played just like we practiced the last two weeks. It was so bad, I even called practice off the other night. We didn't block anybody; whenever we got something going, we'd penalize ourselves to a stop, and then all those mental mistakes start showing up again."

The idea it will be a long night came on Twin Falls' second offensive play when quarterback Ryan Stanger fumbled and Scott Espino scooped it up and ran 41 yards for a touchdown. Rick Barnes missed the first of two point after kicks. Things brightened again just 41 seconds later when Josh Amundson hit a clog of players in the off-tackle hole, bounced to the outside and sailed 77 yards. John McClusky converted.

IOC says officials will raise security at Lillehammer

ULLENSAKER, Norway — Security at the site of the 1994 Winter Olympics is being tightened due to fears that Norway's role in the Middle East peace process could inspire terrorism, IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch said Friday.

Organizers also worry that protests against Norway's commercial whale hunts could mar the Feb. 12-27 Winter Games.

Norwegian Foreign Minister Johan Jorgen Holst revealed last month that Norway hosted months of secret talks that led to a peace agreement between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, signed in Washington on Sept. 13.

Gerhard Heiberg, Samaranch president of the Lillehammer Olympic Organizing Committee, said Norway was closely monitoring potential threats and would do whatever was necessary to "prevent another Munich 1972."

In September 1972, 11 Israeli athletes were killed at Munich's Olympic Village after eight members of an Arab terrorist group invaded their quarters.

"Because of what has happened in your country, the security measures must be strengthened. These are going to be much stronger than at first thought," Samaranch told reporters at Gardermoen Airport.

The president of the International Olympic Committee said he was confident that Norway would handle any threat, and that he was impressed by the other preparations for the Games after a two-day tour of Lillehammer.

Panthers maul Tigers

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

CAREY — Rolling up a stunning 36-0 first half lead, Carey blew away Sawtooth Conference rival Richfield 56-14 Friday afternoon.

With only a game against 2-6 North Gem left on their schedule, the Panthers essentially have a lock on the first of three eight-man state football playoff spots available to the conference.

The state's No. 1-ranked team struck early and often in the first half. Carey picked up four turnovers in the first half. The Panther offensive linemen took control well enough to let the Carey backs show off their superior quickness to the Tigers.

"We had a real emotional first half that got us off to a real good start," said Carey Coach Heber Kirkland. "Our execution on offense was really superb. Defensively, the kids did everything we asked them to."

Carey scored on all four of its first half possessions and again on one of Richfield's.

And helping the Panthers proved to be one reason for Richfield's quick downfall. In addition to the turnovers, the Tigers had two first half touchdowns called back because of clipping penalties and earned a roughing the passer flag that strengthened a Carey drive.

A handful of jersey allows Cameron Cook of Carey to stop Richfield's Matthew Kent as Lyman Kirkland moves in to finish off the Tiger quarterback Friday.

They deserved to be No. 1 because they played well," said Richfield Coach Dave Zamora. "We were not ready. That's my fault. I don't fault any individual on this team."

On its first possession, Carey scored on a 27-yard run by Lyman Kirkland. The Panthers scored on the Tigers' next drive. Please see PANTHERS/B7

No. 2 Pilots wallop Hornets, 49-0

By Ron Gates
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — Losers just four times at home in Canyon Conference play since rediscovering gridiron success in 1987, Glens Ferry High School played host to an all too familiar foe Friday.

The Declo Hornets, victors in their two most recent Elmore County games, arrived with championship aspirations. They departed, recipients of a 49-0 thrumping, contemplating a Monday playoff Jerome.

Glens Ferry, a fixture at No. 2 in the Associated Press Prep Poll of late, sputtered early, but wasted no time after intermission in wrapping up its second consecutive perfect regular season campaign.

Blake Fairris opened the scoring on a 1-yard keeper off the option. The play capped an 11-play drive which covered 71 yards on the Pilots' first possession of the game. And Joe Solosabal, on a 61-yard gullup with 3:19 remaining in the third period, lifted the 8-0 Pirates over the 400-point plateau for the season.

The Hornets opted for control after yielding that initial score, moving from their own 10-yard line to the Glens Ferry 29 before running out of downs.

"Declo did a great job of controlling the ball in the first half," said Glens Ferry Coach Bill Brock. "And they kept us out of the end zone. We'd been in situations like that in previous years with different results. Now we're turning that around."

Glens Ferry's Chris Wicher is upended after gaining second-quarter yardage against Declo Friday.

That Hornet drive, spanning the first and second quarters, lasted 16 plays and consumed nearly eight minutes. Their next two efforts, however, turned into disasters.

The first came after a controversial non-call when the ball got away from Declo punter Greg Gillette, rolled to the Hornet 21 and was picked up by Pilot linebacker Rich Wootan, who ran it in from there. Solosabal tackled on a two-point conversion for a 14-0 halftime lead.

"That easy TD, on a play where I'd thought they were offside, hurt us mentally," said Declo Coach Mike Lyngstad. "But what hurt us more was not getting in when we needed to."

Then, on the Hornets third play of the second half, Glens Ferry's Shay Smith scooped up a bad snap for a 21-0 lead that opened the floodgates.

"They really took it to us after that," Please see PILOTS/B7

NCAA narrows finalist list to 4

The Associated Press

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Judith M. Sweet, a past president of the NCAA and a strong proponent of gender equity in college athletics, was among four finalists announced Friday for the job of executive director of the NCAA.

The group includes two athletic directors, one of them Sweet, as well as a former athletic director and a university chancellor. Sweet is athletic director at Division III California-San Diego.

The other finalists are William W. Cobey Jr., a former athletic director at the University of North Carolina; Cedric W. Dempsey, athletic director at Arizona and secretary-treasurer of the NCAA; and R. Gerald Turner, chancellor at Mississippi and a past chairman of the NCAA Presidents Commission.

The four will be interviewed Nov. 1 and 2, to succeed Dick Schultz, who resigned in May under pressure after allegations were made that players at the University of Virginia were given interest-free loans while he was athletic director from 1981 to 1987.

Schultz' successor should be picked by mid-November.

"It began to become clear that at this critical juncture in the association's history, it was important to have someone who had significant experience in intercollegiate athletics," said Joseph N. Crowley, president of the University of Nevada and the NCAA and chairman of the search committee.

"We had a number of very fine candidates who did not have that experience. As we got closer to the mark, it became clear that this was a very important qualification for us."

Series, after a breather, returns tonight

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Baseball took a much-needed day off to catch its breath Friday, following one of the most topsy-turvy twists in World Series history.

One night, Phillies Hall of Famer Steve Carlton begins the evening by bouncing the ceremonial first ball. That's about the only pitch that does not get hit as the Toronto Blue Jays slug past Philadelphia 15-14 in the highest-scoring postseason game ever.

The next night, Phillies Hall of Famer Robin Roberts starts it with a strike on the first ball. Curt Schilling and Juan Guzman throw strikes all game and Philadelphia, facing elimination, squeezes past Toronto 2-0 to trim its deficit to 3-2.

Two days, two types of tension. Will anyone ever make an out? Will anyone ever get a hit? The same two teams playing two drastically different games, the kind of drama that only baseball can provide.

Watching from the dugout, the stands or at home, there was something for everyone. "Being a pitcher, prefer the 1-0 or 2-1 type of game," said Dave Stewart, who will start Game 6 tonight against Terry Mulholland of the Phillies.

"A 15-14 game is great for the fans. It's entertaining," he said Friday. "But when it's low-scoring, there are situations and things going on. The pitcher is out there thinking, and I like to watch that."

The idea of seeing runners scampering around the bases for nine innings is not offensive to all pitchers, however. Just ask Jack Morris, who pitched one of the greatest games ever, a 1-0 victory in 10 innings for Minnesota over Atlanta in Game 7 of the 1991 Series.

"I've been in the lowest-scoring and the highest-scoring games in World Series history," said Morris, injured and unable to pitch for Toronto. "I'd have loved to have won that game 15-14, go nine and get a complete game."

How high-scoring was that game Wednesday night? There were more runs that night than in the whole Series the last time the Phillies were in it (Philadelphia and Baltimore combined for 27 in five games in 1983). There was more scoring that night than there has been in 14 NFL games this season.

"The message board kept flashing, 'World Series record,'" Toronto's Paul Molitor said. "Every time you'd go out in the field, you hoped you'd find a way to get three outs before they put another number up."

Suns power past Spaniards in tournament

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — A first-half battle turned into a blowout as the Phoenix Suns reasserted the NBA's supremacy with a 145-115 victory Friday night over Real Madrid of Spain in the McDonald's Open.

The Suns trailed by as much as 12 points in the second quarter before Charles Barkley and the rest of the Suns made sure they would not become the first NBA team to lose in the history of the tournament.

The Suns broke the game open at the start of the third quarter and went on to set a record for the most points scored in the Open.

The Suns advanced to today's championship game, where they will face the winner of Friday night's late game between European and French champion Limoges and Buckler Bologna of Italy.

Barkley, the NBA's reigning MVP, led the Suns with 24 points and was able to sit out most of the second half.

Kevin Johnson had 23 points, with backup point guard Nigele Knight adding 22 and A.C. Green 18.

Top seeds fall in record round of Match Play Championships

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Seeded players and par took a beating Friday in the quarterfinals of the World Match Play Championships.

Three of the four seeded players were beaten as birdsies and eagles abounded, with Corey Pavin leading the way.

Pavin's 7-under-par 65 in the morning session was the best 18-hole round of the tournament, but he needed a few more birdies in the afternoon to hang on for a 2 and 1 victory over Nick Price of Zimbabwe.

Colin Montgomerie had two eagles on the way to a 6 and 4 upset of Bernhard Langer, and David Frost made a late charge to defeat Ian Woosnam 2 and 1.

Only Nick Faldo was able to win after being granted an opening day bye. The defending champion broke open a tie match with a birdie-eagle finish in the morning round and went on to beat Steve Elkington 4 and 3.

Faldo plays Frost in today's semifinals, while Pavin faces Montgomerie.

Price was the second hottest golfer of the day. Unfortunately, he was playing the first. An eagle at the fourth and a birdie at the sixth put the Zimbabwean 2-up, then Pavin started his run.

The American won the next five holes with birdie putts of 5, 20, 18 and 32 feet at the seventh, ninth, 10th and 11th. Both golfers went out with 3-under-par 32s, but Pavin added a 33 on the back nine to maintain a 3-hole lead.

Both players kept up the pace when play resumed on the cool, overcast afternoon. Pavin built a 5-hole lead by the 20th, but Price went on a tear with three challenging shots for consecutive birdies from the 25th.

A 30-foot putt, a 42-foot chip and a 14-foot putt cut the lead to two and made for a hectic finish.

Pavin birdied to go 3-up at the 31st, but gave the hole back when he suffered his first bogey of the day at 32. A double bogey by Price at the next hole restored the three-hole deficit, but he stayed alive with a 60-foot birdie from the bunker at 34.

Pavin sunk a 3-foot putt for par at the 35th to halve the hole and win the match. He finished 10-under for the day.

"Nick kept coming at me and kept coming at me," Pavin said. "He wouldn't give up. Thank goodness I played well, or else I'd be hitting the road myself."

"I knew we were going to have a good match today," Price said. "I just didn't figure I'd shoot 8-under and lose. He's playing the kind of golf that could win this thing."

Masters champion Langer was the only golfer without a sub-par morning round as he fell 2 down to Montgomerie after 18.

The Scot went 4 up when he chipped in from 25 feet at the 25th and coasted from there.

Clearwater rises to 1-stroke lead

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Keith Clearwater birdied two of the last three holes for a 67 Friday and took a one-shot lead after three rounds of the five-day Las Vegas Invitational.

"It's still a long way from anywhere," Clearwater cautioned after completing one round on each of three desert courses in 199, 17 under par.

His caution is well-founded. Clearwater frequently has been an early-round leader this season but hasn't won since 1987, his rookie year.

He moved into the top spot this time with a 9-iron to 6 feet for a last-hole birdie at the Desert Inn, the most difficult of the three courses used for the first three days of this 90-hole tournament.

That put him one shot ahead of Davis Love III, who had to overcome a 4-putt bogey to shoot 67 at the TPC at Summerlin in the host course and sit of the final two rounds today and Sunday.

Love was second alone at 200

despite what he called "a lack of focus, a lack of control."

Craig Stadler and Phil Mickelson were next at 202 in the $1.4 million tournament that offers $252,000 to the winner.

Stadler had an eagle-3 in his first round of 69 and Mickelson shot 68, both at the Desert Inn.

The group at 203 included David Peoples, Ken Green and Canadian Richard Zokol. Peoples had a 64 and Zokol 68, both at the TPC, while Green's 68 came at the Desert Inn.

While the fast finish put him in control, Clearwater pointed to a birdie on his seventh hole as the turning point.

"I was about 2 feet from going into the water and making a (double-bogey) 5," he said. "Instead, the ball jumped into the bunker."

And he holed a 35-foot sand shot for the birdie that lifted him within one stroke of Love's lead.

"That changed the day," Clearwater said.

Coaches say past games are irrelevant

The Associated Press

The numbers point to another Notre Dame victory over Southern Cal, but the law of averages is certainly on the side of the underdog Trojans.

The Fighting Irish are 7-0, ranked No. 2 and a 136-point favorite to win their 11th straight over their longtime intercollegiate rival.

Coach John Robinson, however, has Southern Cal (4-3) playing well. And besides, the losing streak was not of his making.

Robinson was not at Southern Cal for any of those 10 losses. He left the school in 1982 and returned this season after a stint as coach of the NFL Los Angeles Rams. So the only thing he knows about losing streaks in this rivalry is that the Irish lost to his Trojan teams five times from 1978 through 1982. Robinson's record against Notre Dame is 6-1.

Notre Dame has won 37 of the 64 games between the two schools. There have been four ties.

"We don't place great significance in the fact that we've lost 10 in a row, or that I had some success against them when I was here before," Robinson said. "This is a game for these players, this year, now. That's how it's settled."

"This is Southern Cal and Notre Dame, and nothing else really matters," Irish coach Lou Holtz said. "Nothing else is really relevant."

Robinson said he should have Saturday's game needed only to beat Navy next week to set up a likely No. 1-No. 2 showdown with Florida State on Nov. 13 at South Bend, Ind. The top-ranked Seminoles will be idle Saturday.

Other Top 10 teams with Saturday off are No. 8 Tennessee, No. 9 Florida and No. 10 Auburn.

There are two games matching Top 10 teams with other ranked teams — No. 23 Syracuse at No. 6 Miami and No. 25 Washington State at No. 7 Arizona. In other games involving ranked teams, it's No. 3 Ohio State at Purdue, No. 4 Alabama at Mississippi, Missouri at No. 5 Nebraska, No. 11 Texas-A&M at Rice, No. 12 North Carolina at No. 21 Virginia, Illinois at No. 13 Michigan, No. 15 Wisconsin at Minnesota, No. 16 Colorado at Kansas State, Kansas at No. 17 Oklahoma, Pittsburgh at No. 18 West Virginia, No. 19 UCLA at Oregon State, Navy at No. 20 Louisville, Oregon at No. 22 Washington and Iowa at No. 24 Michigan State.

Brian Boitano won the technical program at Skate America and will compete today as the free skate segment begins.

Passion for speed, spins drives skating's Boitano

DALLAS (AP) — Around and around he spun. Then he fell. Twice.

It might have been the only time in his superb skating career that Brian Boitano was out of control.

Linda Leaver, his coach for 22 years, remembers that day vividly.

"He was 8," Leaver said on Friday, Boitano's 30th birthday, just 12 hours after the 1988 Olympic champion made his official return to eligibility by winning the technical program at Skate America. The free skate will be held today.

"I was teaching a Level 5 Saturday afternoon class. Brian came into the class and progressed as rapidly as he could. He went almost immediately from crossovers to spins. He went so fast he fell down."

"So I told him to slow down and he fell down again. I was trying to convince him he had to slow down to stay up. He was the fastest spinner I ever had seen."

Leaver knew she had found something special — if she could get Boitano to control his enthusiasm. Boitano was used to being a daredevil roller skater on the streets of Sunnyvale, Calif., who "found it neat that you could skate around on ice."

But those wild tendencies had to be tempered.

"When I came home from my first lesson with him and said to my husband, 'I've got a great skater,' my husband said, 'You always think every skater is great.' But I said Brian would be a world champion."

Boitano's development was quick and, at 14, he was national junior champion. But he didn't win his first national crown until 1985, which surprised Leaver.

"It took longer than I thought it would," she said. "But he was skating against Charlie Tickner and Scott Hamilton and David Santee. There were so many great skaters at the top. I think that helped Brian progress even more."

"He had to be patient and he had to learn from the others, who had an edge in maturity on him. They were all excellent talents and much older. Brian had to technically push his way by all that."

BYU relieved to be back in WAC after routs

PROVO, Utah (AP) — It's back to the Western Athletic Conference for Brigham Young, and not a moment too soon for coach LaVell Edwards.

By a combined 113-34 score, the Cougars were routed the past two weekends by UCLA and Notre Dame. But BYU still has a shot at the record going into its homecoming game today with Fresno State.

"This is a big, key game for us," Edwards said. "As nice as it is to win one of those games, to the winning the conference championship is always No. 1 on my mind."

The Bulldogs, who beat Air Force 33-20 last week, also find themselves at a crossroads. Though sharing a 4-2 overall record with BYU, Fresno is 2-1 in conference play and must win to keep its own hopes for the title alive.

"Where they have lost one WAC game, it becomes a do-or-die situation," Edwards said.

Coach Jim Sweeney knows the road to the league crown goes through Cougar Stadium, and that to win Fresno will "have to create our own good fortune."

"Our players have been anxious to play this game for a long time," he said.

It could be a high-scoring affair, with the Bulldogs averaging 510.3 yards and 37.2 points per game. Under quarterback Trent Diller, Fresno's 10th-ranked passing attack piles up 308 yards an outing.

However, Diller was off against Air Force. Averaging 316 yards in the air prior to the game, he finished with just 166 and no touchdowns.

"I don't think our offensive players are satisfied with themselves at all," Sweeney said. "They have to play better the rest of the games in league."

BYU's passing attack, with just 3 yards less than Fresno's, ranks 11th. But that has been under John Walsh, questionable this week due to a knee strain suffered in last Saturday's 45-20 loss to the Irish.

Backups Tom Young and Steve Clements alternated taking snaps in practice, but Edwards said he may not announce his starter until game time.

"I like both of them," Edwards said. "Clements is very quick and has a very strong arm. Tommy has been in the program longer and probably has a little better handle on the offense."

With the teams near equals in passing proficiency, the success of their runners could tip the balance.

Fresno enters the game ranking up 202.3 ypg on the ground. Tailbacks Ron Rivers and Anthony Daigle have every reason to expect big holes against BYU's defense, ranked 102nd out of 116 Division 1-A schools against the run (26.5 ypg). But the same may be said for the Cougars, who will send running backs Jamal Willis and Kalin Hall against a Bulldog defense even worse, yielding 274.2 ypg for 103rd place.

In BYU's 36-24 victory over Fresno last year in Provo, Hall had 164 yards and two touchdowns and Willis added 129 yards and a score.

"We need another performance like that," Edwards said. "It helps any quarterback to call the game if the whole thing doesn't rely on them."

Brown explains reasons for leaving Clippers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Brown severed his ties with the Los Angeles Clippers and took off without a word of explanation right after the team was eliminated from the playoffs last season.

The vagabond coach eventually resurfaced with the Indiana Pacers, his sixth professional team in 18 seasons. On Thursday, he brought his new team into the Sports Arena to play his old team and found himself answering all the questions he left unanswered six months ago.

"It wasn't my intention to leave," Brown said prior to the Pacers' 106-97 preseason loss.

"Unfortunately, it came out that I quit. But I didn't quit. I didn't have a contract. And if you ask around the league, some of the people in this organization let it be known that I didn't have a contract."

The way Brown explained it, he tendered his resignation to Clippers owner Donald Sterling last February. He did so because of his frustration over the search for a replacement. It finally ended with the naming of Bob Weiss, practically the last candidate left standing.

"I don't care what they say," Brown said defiantly. "I know the truth. They've got the letter. The bottom line is that I wanted to be there and I'm not. They've landed on their feet and I'm hopeful that I can land on my feet. I've got a good opportunity and I'm hopeful that it'll work out for everybody."

Brown, who was 41-41 with the Clippers in 1992-93, failed to finish a season with a winning record for only the second time in his 21 seasons as a pro and college coach. He has never lasted four full seasons in any NBA city, and his stay with the Clippers was his shortest anywhere.

"He wrote 'us' letters and explained why he left," said center Stanley Roberts. Brown's pet project. "He just got a better deal. He wanted it and he's happy so I'm happy for him. Everybody's happy for the players who wanted him to leave are happy that he's gone, too."
