Wetlands delay new Clear Lake Grade job

By Sean L. McCarty
Times-News writer

BUHL — Construction of a new road at Clear Lake Grade has been delayed a minimum of six months because it would destroy federally protected wetlands.

The $6 million roadway between Buhl and Wendell up the north face of the Snake River Canyon was to have been finished by September 1994.

The new road will curve east in the opposite direction from the existing Clear Lake Grade.

Loren Thomas, regional district engineer for the state Department of Transportation in Shoshone, said Thursday that state and federal resource agencies want assurances that new wetlands will be created to replace 2% of wetland.

"When the project was started six to seven years ago, the concept of that time was to mitigate at a 1:1 ratio," Thomas said. "For every acre you destroy you build a new one."

To compensate for the depletion of those wetlands, the department purchased right-of-ways and designed plans for new wetlands at the 1:1 ratio, Thomas said.

However, when the department applied for a federal permit to create a replacement wetland, the federal agencies demanded more wetlands.

"In most cases, you don't have wetlands to start with," said Greg Martinez of the United States Army Corps of Engineers in Boise. "Because of the uncertainty, the ratio is currently more than 1:1, but usually not more than 2:1."

The Transportation Department is looking at purchasing three acres nearby for

N. Korea mixes hard public line, private moves to ease tensions

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In contrast to its tough public talk, North Korea has privately told U.S. officials that the expected successor to dictator Kim Il Sung has ordered more Korean War remains of Americans returned by Christmas as a gesture of easing tensions.

The North kept up its hard public line Friday, calling U.S. officials "trigger-happy" for talking about reinforcing American forces in South Korea.

In New York, meanwhile, North Korean officials met with U.S. diplomats concerning President Clinton's appeal last week for the North to permit outside inspections of its nuclear program and to resume dialogue with the South.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee

Myers, traveling with the president in New Mexico, told reporters, "We're going to evaluate (the North Korean response) then talk to our allies. We are not characterizing it."

The State Department issued a similar statement.

Mirroring Clinton administration efforts to damp down the rhetorical fire, the head of the U.S. Air Force, Gen. Merrill McPeak, said he saw no reason to increase U.S. air power in South Korea now or to put U.S. forces there on higher alert.

"We have not sent additional forces, and we are not preparing to send additional forces," the four-star general said in an interview Friday. "What's there now on the ground in peacetime I consider adequate."

Heightened tensions in Korea stem in part from the North's resistance to Western demands to inspect its nuclear facilities. The CIA believes North Korea may already have enough nuclear material for one or two weapons, although the North Koreans deny having a nuclear weapon or aspiring to build any.

With few diplomatic cards to play, the communist North Korean regime apparently is seeking to influence the debate by resuming repatriation of U.S. remains, an issue it knows touches a politically sensitive chord in the United States.

The North on Tuesday returned what it said were 33 sets of remains of American war dead. It was the single biggest return of remains since 1954, a year after the war ended, and the North indicated it planned to return even more.

None of the remains received since 1954 had been identified.

Wells may get his wish Supreme Court clears way for Gem execution

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court cleared the way for the state's first execution in 36 years Friday.

In a brief unanimous decision, the high court upheld the death sentence imposed on convicted double-murderer Keith Eugene Wells, who has dropped all appeals in his case.

The high court's ruling was the result of the automatic review state law requires in all death penalty cases.

"It certainly looks like there are no legal alternatives," said Boise attorney Dennis Benjamin, who was refused permission to enter the review on the side of overturning the death sentence.

The American Civil Liberties Union is still searching for some way to block the sentence, director Jack Van Valkenberg said.

But, Benjamin conceded, "It seems highly likely that he will be executed."

Fourth District Judge Gerald Schroeder will now set a new execution date. The state's last execution, only the ninth it has carried out since statehood, was in November 1957. Twenty other convicted murderers are also on Death Row, some for more than a decade.

"This is an unusual situation," Van Valkenberg said. "Procedures and safeguards are being bypassed, and this by itself, we don't believe, will impact the rate of executions in Idaho."

Wells, 31, who has an extensive criminal background and a violent temper, was convicted of beating to death John Justad, 23, and Brandt Rains, 20, during a December 1990 robbery of a Boise tavern. At the time, he had been on parole for about a year from a prison sentence on a robbery conviction.

In an unprecedented statement to the state Supreme Court two weeks ago during the oral arguments in the automatic review, Public Defender Amil Myshin said Wells was resolute in his desire to die.

"He's tired, he's finished suffering and he doesn't want to spend the rest of his life in a concrete cell," Myshin said. "He's cut the ties."

Justice Linda Copple Trout, writing for the court, made no reference to Wells' wish to die in the opinion. She cited his long history of criminal activity and drug abuse and repeated instances of violence that included holding his pregnant wife and stepson hostage with an explosive.

"This evidence supports the trial court's conclusion that the defendant... exhibited a propensity to commit murder, which will probably constitute a continuing threat to society," Trout wrote.

DOE may help with nuclear fuel

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary wants to help utilities pay for storing used nuclear fuel from commercial reactors because the government will miss its deadline to provide a permanent storage facility.

O'Leary said Friday the Energy Department cannot meet the 1998 timetable for a federal site and "there definitely exists some moral obligation" to provide help for reactors that will run out of on-site storage space.

Ratepayers who receive electricity generated by the nation's 110 commercial nuclear reactors already pay into a federal fund that is collecting $600 million a year toward construction of a permanent storage site.

To expect ratepayers to shoulder additional costs that might be expected if utility companies have to expand on-site storage would be unfair, said O'Leary in an interview.

"The number of customers in the United States who will shortly be paying double... is ever increasing," she said.

Currently, most reactors store spent fuel in pools of water, but by 1998, 20 of those will exceed their capacity. DOE officials estimate.

While a permanent site is being developed, Congress had mandated a temporary federal storage site be established by 1998, but so far no one has been willing to accept such a site. Congress in 1986 picked Yucca Mountain, Nevada, as the most acceptable site for permanently disposing of the highly radioactive spent fuel rods from commercial reactors. But Nevada's heatedly opposed using the site for permanent nuclear waste storage.

Experiment against AIDS wins OK

The Associated Press

BETHESDA, Md. — An experimental vaccine that uses a mouse virus to help the human body fight the AIDS virus was approved for testing Friday by an advisory committee to the National Institutes of Health.

Developed by Dr. Richard Haubrich of the University of California, San Diego, the vaccine is designed to trigger search and destroy missions against AIDS by killer cells within the immune system of patients already infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS.

The Recombinant DNA Advisory Committee, a group of experts that evaluates experimental human therapy proposals that use manipulated genes, approved a proposal by Haubrich to test the vaccine on 20 patients. Before the experiment can begin, it must also be approved by the director of the NIH and the Food and Drug Administration.

Magic Valley jobs keep on increasing

By Mick Norrington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley continues to gain jobs, despite a normal increase in unemployment in November.

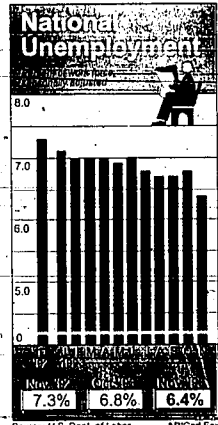

But even though unemployment increased from October to November, all eight counties in the Magic Valley saw their unemployment rates drop from last November.

The Gooding-Jerome-Twin Falls counties area posted a seasonally adjusted unemployment rate of 4.9 percent in November, according to the Idaho Department of Employment.

"Clearly this was an excellent fall from an employment view," said Lon McDonald, local labor analyst for the Job Service. "And 4.9 percent is an excellent unemployment rate. Even though it's three-tenths of a percent higher than it was the previous month, it still shows how our economy is improving."

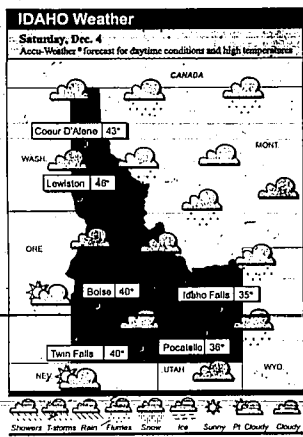

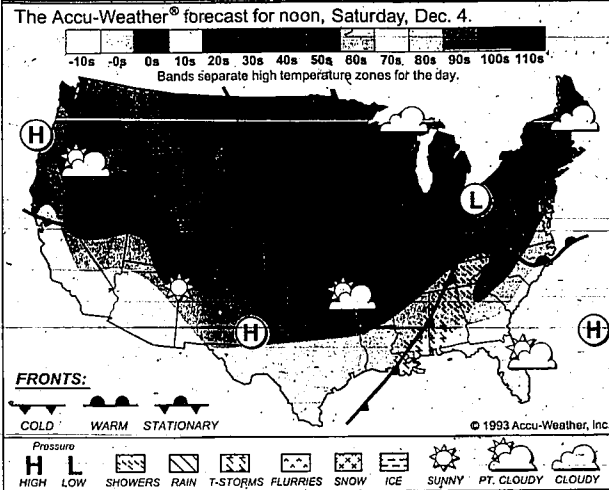

The adjusted unemployment rate for the three-county area in October

A high wind warning is posted for eastern Idaho today. A strong and vigorous storm just off the Pacific Northwest coast is expected to bring widespread precipitation very strong winds to the state with most of the precipitation falling over the north.

Mostly cloudy skies covered Idaho Friday afternoon; most of the precipitation reports came from northern sections of the state. Coeur d'Alene reported .07 inch of moisture, Grangeville a trace, Moscow .03 and Mullan .04. The only report from the southeast was .04 at Grace.

Temperatures over the southeast were mostly in the 20s and 30s but elsewhere 30s and 40s were common.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 52 degrees at Lewiston. Soda Springs reported the lowest at 3 degrees below zero, which was also the coldest reading in the nation.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 87 degrees at McAllen, Texas.

Snow, winds sweep Oregon; rain falls in Midwest, South

The Associated Press

Parts of Oregon braced for snow and high winds Friday while rain and occasional thunderstorms fell on areas of the Midwest and South.

The National Weather Service posted a winter storm watch over the northeast mountains of Oregon.

Rain extended over eastern parts of the southern Plains, the lower half of the Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley and the southwest part of the lower Ohio Valley. Rain also reached over the northern Pacific Coast.

Snow and freezing rain fell on the upper Mississippi Valley, eastern North Dakota and northern Maine.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours that ended at 11 a.m. MST included two inches at Hot Springs, Ark., and inch and a quarter at Pine Bluff, Ark. Snowfall during the same period included an inch at Bismarck N.D.

Friday morning's low temperature for the Lower 48 was 8 degrees below zero at Faron and South Pass City, both in Wyoming.

Temperatures around the nation at 1 p.m. MST ranged from 20 at Bemidji, Minn., to 86 at McAllen, Texas.

General slapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Gen. Buster Glosson, the architect of the Persian Gulf war, was reprimanded Friday for improperly interfering with the promotion of a lower-ranking general.

The action by Air Force Secretary Sheila Widnall against the three-star general is considered a career-ending step.

Glosson had been considered a sure candidate for advancement to higher rank.

Shuttle swoops close to Hubble

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — After stalking the Hubble Telescope through the sky for 820,000 miles, the shuttle Endeavour was maneuvering ever closer, narrowing the distance to an eventual 35 feet for capture early today.

Shuttle commander Richard Covey had enough fuel for only one try.

"This mission is not designed for two rendezvous," flight director Randy Stone said Friday. "The way we budget the propellant is that we will keep pressing on, seeking to complete the rendezvous until there is not enough gas to do a second one. Because that is your best chance for success."

Crew members awoke at 5 p.m. MST Friday, and pilot Ken Bowersox said they were eager to get hold of the bus-sized telescope.

"We're ready to go grab that thing," he told Mission Control. "We're ready to work on it, too."

At 10 p.m. MST, the shuttle was expected to be nine miles from the flawed telescope. The flight plan called for Covey to steer the ship until it was alongside the Hubble.

The telescope was shut down, its lens cover closed earlier on Friday, and it was turned by ground command into proper position to be grappled by the shuttle's robot and hauled aboard for repair.

Once Hubble is secured in a special turntable stand, spacewalking astronauts will attempt to install 11 new parts, including corrective optics. They expect to complete the job in five days, but can have up to seven if needed. The telescope, which has cost $3 billion to date, will be restored to its originally planned quality if all goes all right.

Hubble was launched in 1990 with its main 94-inch-wide mirror ground too flat at the edges, leaving the telescope nearsighted. It has traveled 522 million miles since launch in April 1990.

The problem made Endeavour's $629 million repair mission necessary.

Endeavour was having a flight as flawless as its launch. Only one problem popped up: One of the two communications channels in Story Musgrave's space suit had static. He chose to use it rather than switch.

was 4.6 percent. Last November the area posted an adjusted rate of 6.2 percent.

The unadjusted unemployment rate for the three-county area was 4.6 percent with an actual labor force of 40,720 workers.

"The real good news is that we had an overall improvement in the labor force of 982 workers. And the unemployed number was 420, that's 420 fewer people who were unemployed," McDonald said.

"And there were 1,402 added people who were employed. And that's quite good," McDonald said.

Idaho's statewide adjusted unemployment rate dropped to 5.5 percent in November — the lowest level since March 1990, according to the state.

And the statewide unemployment rate dropped to 5.5 percent from 5.7 percent in October. Normally the unemployment rate goes up in November.

Statewide, job levels in the food packing, trucking, fresh-pack warehouse and construction sectors were strong in November, partially due to the dry weather.

The annual adjusted unemployment rate dropped to 6.4 percent in November, down 4 percent from October. The size of the decline surprised many economists, McDonald said.

And the U.S. Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators improved by .5 percent as U.S. factory orders rose in October.

Kidnapping investigation a case study in missed opportunities

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — It was midnight on a rural road and something didn't ring true about the man whose car was stuck in the ditch.

He told the deputies he was sight-seeing; it was pitch-dark. He blurted out that he had just changed shirts; no one had asked.

If the two Sonoma County officers had been tuned to Channel 1 on their radio, they would have known a search was on for the stranger who an hour earlier had snatched a 12-year-old girl from her bedroom in Petaluma, 20 miles away.

But they were listening to Channel 3, and Richard Alister Davis, who this week became the prime suspect in the Polly Klaas kidnapping, slipped away.

It was the first missed opportunity in a case plagued by might-have-beens.

Between the abduction Oct. 1 and his arrest Tuesday for alleged parole violations, Davis, 39, would have two more brushes with the law, an arrest for drunken driving and a missed appointment with his probation officer.

Before that, Davis had been in and out of prison for most of his adult life, committing the ceaselessly violent crimes whenever he got a "down" feeling or the voices in his head urged him, he told one psychiatrist.

By Friday, he had not been charged in the kidnapping and the search continued for Polly and for evidence linking Davis to her. Police declined to comment on conflicting news reports that he had been identified by witnesses.

Residents, who have keenly identified with the pretty, fragile-looking girl whose dimpled smile shines from handbills on lightpoles and shop windows all over this quiet farming town, were angry about the mishap.

Sonoma County Assistant Sheriff Dale Moore, while fiercely defending his deputies, admits he would like to replay that eerie encounter.

"You know it would be wonderful. These two deputies ... would have loved to have had the apprehension of their career," he said Thursday. "If they'd have known ... they'd have snatched him up. This thing would have been over in a minute. But we're not going to go back in time."

Petaluma, Calif., police officer Vail Bello, left, and Sonoma County sheriff deputy Roger Rude discuss how they will search the Santa Rosa, Calif., area Friday linked to the Polly Klaas kidnapping.

According to department logs, a woman reported a trespasser on her ranch in a rural area just east of Santa Rosa at 11:42 p.m. that Friday night. Deputies found Davis, whose white Pinto was stuck in a drainage ditch. Puzzled by his manner, they checked for outstanding warrants and asked if they could search his car. Finding nothing, they helped drag the car free. That took until 12:46 a.m.

It was now two hours since Polly had been taken at knifepoint from a gray and white house where she and two friends were having a slumber party. The kidnapping was reported to Petaluma police at 11:03 p.m. At 11:27, they telephoned the sheriff's office for assistance.

At 12:14 a.m., even as the Sonoma deputies were crawling over Davis' car, Petaluma police sent a teletype with the suspect's description.

Moore said the information was transmitted on one radio channel. The department monitors two channels only on busy weekend nights.

He defended the one-channel broadcast, saying early reports were of a suspect on foot. Although later bulletins spoke of a car, it was described as a gray Toyota, he said.

Had the officers gone beyond a warrant check and requested Davis' criminal history, they would have found an extensive rap sheet. But that check takes longer and is rarely made for a routine stop, he said.

Two months went by, weeks in which 8 million fliers showing a composite sketch of Polly's abductor were faxed, mailed and trucked all over the world from Petaluma, 45 miles north of San Francisco. But the deputies never made the connection, later saying they did not think the man they saw matched the description.

St. Louis police battle linked abductions

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Shortly after 10-year-old Cassidy Senter set out on a walk to a friend's house, a neighbor found the personal alarm she often wore clipped to her belt.

The small, yellow device was emitting a high-pitched warning as it lay Wednesday in grass about a block from her destination.

Police searched for Cassidy on Thursday, combing the same wildlife area of rural St. Charles County where the body of a 9-year-old girl was found four days earlier. In another suburb of St. Louis, a third girl fought off a man who tried to abduct her on Nov. 8.

Police noted similarities in the three cases. Each child was about the same age, and each was last seen about the same time in the afternoon.

Ron Battelle, chief of St. Louis County police, said there were other similarities that he won't disclose.

Cassidy was one of several students in the Hazelwood School District to carry personal alarms, said Tom Hamlin, the district's director of safety and security.

The 9-year-old, Angie Housman, vanished Nov. 18 as she was walking the four blocks home from her school bus stop. She was buried Thursday, as police set up a hot line to take tips on the cases.

The 11-year-old who got away from her attacker also was walking home from her bus stop.

Investigators spent Friday checking hundreds of calls received on the hot line, police spokesman Jim Brady said.

Cassidy wore the alarm — about the size of a pager — clipped to her belt. The device was either pulled or knocked free, causing it to emit the shrill sound, Hamlin said.

Reno orders FBI to discard policy bias against homosexuals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is being ordered by Attorney General Janet Reno to discard a policy making it difficult for homosexuals to be hired. The bureau now will forbid discrimination based on sexual orientation.

While that order was a restatement of existing policy for most of the department, the language forbidding discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation produced a major change for the FBI, spokesman Carl Stern said.

Most agents were taking the change in stride, said one FBI agent, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "I don't believe it's perceived as being revolutionary or shocking."

Reno's came as a federal class action case brought by former FBI agent Frank Buttino, 48, began in San Francisco.

Buttino is a decorated 20-year FBI veteran who was fired in 1990. His supervisors in San Diego received an anonymous note in 1988 saying he was gay. Buttino denied it at first, explaining later that he knew he would be fired if he told the truth.

Judge dismisses 2 firms from implant lawsuits

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A federal judge dismissed Dow Chemical Co. and Coming Inc. from more than 3,000 lawsuits filed by women with silicone breast implants, but left their jointly-owned Dow Coming as a defendant.

Dow Coming was the largest maker of implants until last year, when it stopped making them amid a flood of lawsuits blaming health problems on the implants.

Clinton signs $110 million flood relief bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton Friday signed into law a bill providing $110 million to help people in the flood-ravaged Midwest move to higher ground.

The bulk of the money will be spent in Missouri, Illinois and Iowa, each hit hard by the summer's floods.

Katie Horsager recovers Friday after being impaled on a ski pole last week.

Girl displays holes from ski pole wound

LITTLE FALLS, Minn. (AP) — A 10-year-old girl impaled on a ski pole survived with little more than wounds in her belly and back after her big brother pulled out the pole and ran for help.

On Friday, a day after leaving the hospital, Katie Horsager was at her grandparents' house watching television and eager to go home to school in Fargo, N.D., and turning away anyone curious to see her puncture holes.

"She thinks it looks gross," said her mother, Mary Jo.

Katie and her 12-year-old brother, Christopher, were playing on an 8-foot snow drift the day after Thanksgiving, at their grandparents' house, pretending to be mountain climbers.

"We were just playing. ... I was holding the pole away from me, but then it fell and pointed up ... I just sat there, and I just screamed that it stabbed me," Katie said.

The pole severed part of her bowel and nicked her pancreas. But it missed her kidneys, lungs and lungs and passed within a half-inch of her aorta, the body's main artery from the heart, before emerging next to her spine without damaging that either.

Usually with such injuries, it's best to leave the object until a doctor can see the extent of injury, said Dr. George Fortier-IV, Katie's surgeon. Christopher did no harm in this case.

"She's a lucky gal," Fortier said.

AIDS activist grills everyone in Yale speech

NEW-HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — AIDS activist Larry Kramer stormed out on an audience at Yale University after accusing faculty and students of being silent about the AIDS epidemic and telling them: "You disgust me."

The playwright, a 1957 Yale graduate, banged on the lectern Thursday night and accused "AIDS is intentional genocide!" and told his audience of about 400 to "Go home" before he ducked out a back door.

Biology professor Alvin Novick, who introduced Kramer, said Kramer's speech was informative, inspiring and a work of art.

"It's a dramatic ending, with his screaming and banging and telling the group that he hated them was Larry theater," Novick said. "I don't mean that he didn't mean it, but that's his style."

Kramer said all of society was guilty of genocide for not doing more to combat AIDS, then he upbraided his audience: "I hate you for your silence," he said.

Kramer also criticized himself and the rest of the gay community. "If I hate you, you can imagine how much I hate myself because in 13 years, I have not accomplished one god-damned thing," he said.

HUD offers $25 million to help homeless

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is offering $25 million as a catalyst to get cities moving on initiatives to house the homeless this winter.

The money will go to "innovative programs which will be available on a nationwide basis to provide services ... to get us through the next few months," Assistant Housing Secretary Andrew Cuomo said at a news conference Friday.

The money, to be released in the next several weeks, is part of $100 million in special homeless assistance approved by Congress earlier this year, he said.

Cuomo, assistant secretary for community planning and development at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, said the funds will "act as the catalyst" to help cities start trying to solve the problems of homelessness.

Cuomo said he and other HUD officials would immediately begin meeting with local governments, homeless advocates and shelter operators to determine what kind of help is needed. Cities will then be eligible to apply for the federal money, although he said HUD expects the cities and private agencies to kick in funds also in an effort "to patch together a quilt that might protect and keep people warm this winter."

Cuomo also announced that HUD would advance the District of Columbia about $250,000 in the next few weeks for shelter, vans and equipment aimed at helping the homeless.

That money will come from a separate $20 million pilot program announced in September, he said. The first installment had been slated to go to the city only after the local government had created a new agency to oversee it. However, Cuomo said "creating such an agency could take months and HUD felt it was necessary to do something more quickly, before cold weather sets in."

Feds told to be vigilant with loan program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Education Department must take precautions to ensure that the new federal direct student loan program is not beset by the same "significant problems" affecting current student aid programs, Inspector General James B. Thomas Jr. says.

In his semiannual report to Congress, released Friday, Thomas said improvement was still needed in department management, monitoring and accounting for the $70 billion in loans outstanding under the Federal Family Education Loan program. About $18 billion in a year in loans is guaranteed by the government under FFEL.

He said the department had made "significant strides" in preventing problem schools from participating in student financial aid programs. But, he added, "not all corrective actions have been consistently implemented. Thus, gate-keeping is still not as effective as it could be."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., held hearings this fall highlighting problems in the Pell Grant program. His panel found that the Education Department was ill-equipped to manage the $6 billion, 3-year program, and documented dozens of cases of fraud.

Wal-Mart customer shoots store manager

POWAY, Calif. (AP) — A customer fatally shot the manager of a Wal-Mart store after arguing with a salesperson over a gun, authorities said.

The shooter was apparently disgruntled with a store policy that bars salespeople from removing the trigger-lock from firearms, said Sheriff's Department spokesman Gary Cantrell.

The manager, 46-year-old Bill Rainy, died several hours after he was shot in the chest Thursday, a spokeswoman at the Pomona Medical Center in Escondido said.

LaRocco says 'attack' by Craig jeopardizes wilderness talks

BOISE (AP) — The bipartisan effort to draft an Idaho wilderness bill is threatened by what Democratic Congressman Larry LaRocco calls an unprecedented partisan attack on him.

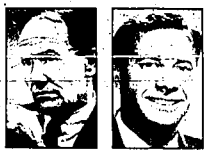

LaRocco's target was an Oct. 15 bipartisan fund-raising letter in which Republican Sen. Larry Craig attacks LaRocco as a liberal with a "tax and spend, socialized agenda."

LaRocco said he was taking it as a personal attack, using "irate" and "agitated" to describe his feelings Friday. He said it comes well outside any political campaign and at a time when members of the delegation are supposed to be working together in a nonpartisan way to get a wilderness bill done.

"To me, that's outrageous," he said, contending it runs absolutely against the public sentiment to get rid of political bickering and gridlock.

Craig said he was surprised LaRocco was reacting so strongly now when the letter went out nearly two months ago.

LaRocco said his patience just finally ran out with what he called the highly partisan "sniping," particularly by Craig chief of staff Greg

Craig LaRocco

Casey, that has taken the place of working on issues important to the state.

"We have a different view of our role as a public servant," he said.

Craig, who held the 1st District congressional seat for 10 years before moving to the Senate, said LaRocco has to accept that congressional campaigns are ongoing, and he has "to face the facts of his voting record with the Idaho electorate."

"I reviewed the contents of the letter. They are consistent with votes he has made," the Republican said.

The Craig letter, mailed to about 10,000 GOP faithful, attacks LaRocco for supporting President Clinton's budget bill, which would have failed with one less vote.

"The Clinton tax package never would have reached the Senate if Larry LaRocco would have represented Idaho and voted no," wrote Craig on behalf of the Idaho GOP.

LaRocco, who has already talked to Craig about the attack, said he wanted an apology from the senator, and without one, the wilderness negotiations could be scuttled because of the partisan approach of the delegation's senior Republican.

"That would be his choice and his choice alone," Craig countered. "I would hope that Larry LaRocco would work in a bipartisan way on the issue of wilderness."

LaRocco said the kind of attack in the letter went far beyond "business as usual" for colleagues in a state congressional delegation more than a year before the general election. It's the kind of partisanship that should be left to political operatives like state GOP Chairman Randy Smith of Pocatello, LaRocco maintained.

"It's not politics that we should condone, laugh about," LaRocco said. "Len Jordan and Frank Church never would have done this. Jim McClure never would have done this."

Boise hospital plans for future with staff cuts

BOISE (AP) — St. Luke's Regional Medical Center is offering some employees bonuses, severance pay and other incentives to quit or retire early as it tries to reduce and reorganize its 1,900-member work force.

A full-time, $14-an-hour worker with 10 years at the hospital could be offered a maximum of $17,646 to quit, according to a six-page employee handout obtained by a Boise newspaper.

St. Luke's is one of the 10 biggest private employers in Ada County, says the effort is part of a plan to prepare for national health-care reform.

"We're trying to get ourselves in a position to be able to deal with anything that comes down the road," Gordon Smith, chairman of St.

Luke's board and chief executive officer of J.R. Simplot Co., said Thursday.

The hospital is billing its plan as voluntary, with layoffs as a last-ditch possibility if nothing else works. However, some employees have been notified their jobs are being eliminated.

Gene Gunderson, the top administrator at the St. Luke's-affiliated Mountain States Tumor Institute, said his position of associate director will be eliminated.

He has held the job 10 years and is too young for the early retirement plan being offered by St. Luke's. The new position of administrator at Mountain States Tumor Institute is being created, but Gunderson said he has not decided yet whether to apply.

Rexburg man faces fraud charge

POCATELLO — A Rexburg man faces trial Jan. 11 on federal charges he defrauded the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and made false statements to the now-defunct Valley Bank at Rexburg.

Michael Von Sorensen pleaded innocent in an appearance in federal court Thursday before Magistrate Mikel Williams. Sorensen was released without bond.

He is being represented by Steven Wood of Pocatello. The lawyer said the government didn't investigate enough and if it had, the charge never would have been filed.

The indictment does not list the amount of money or gain and ASCS officials declined comment. Sources close to the investigation said the case involves more than $300,000 in loan amount, storage costs and interest.

Study predicts rapid Nampa growth

NAMPA — It's predicted that the population of Nampa will grow from the 25,112 counted in the 1990 census to 43,802 by 2010.

City officials are working on a plan to direct that growth. The first revision since 1977 of the city's comprehensive plan is in draft form and was given to City Council members this week.

"It's just in the beginning stages. The draft plan will be rewritten and rewritten," said Ken Harward, director of administration and finance.

Residents will be invited to comment on the plan early next year during a series of meetings and open houses.

Proposal seeks Idaho term limits

BOISE — Although the ballot title is a month full, Idahoans for Term Limits has launched its initiative drive to put the question on the next general election ballot.

A proposal called "An Initiative Establishing Term Limits for Elected Federal, State, County, Municipal and School District Officials" attempts to limit terms by public officials. Idahoans for Term Limits is backed by a national group pushing the concept.

Backers need 32,000 signatures of registered voters by next July to make it on the November ballot. Beau Parent, Idahoans for Term Limits executive director, predicted they'd make it by May.

Transit official pushes alternatives

MERIDIAN — The era of never-ending roadbuilding is over, a transportation official says. Alternative transportation must be considered to ease congestion in the Ada County population center of Idaho.

"The age of building roads and highways is over," said Oz Reyna, general manager of Treasure Valley Transit, Caldwell.

State and regional officials need to take more seriously the rapid growth in the area and find ways to fund a mass transit system, he told a panel on mass transit at Friday's Regional Transportation Conference at Meridian.

Panel member Bob Post, transportation expert from Portland, Ore., said Idaho officials should consider a light rail system, similar to one Portland has had since 1986. Compared to building urban highways, a light rail system is less costly and more efficient, he said.

BSU center to focus on arts, history

BOISE — The Hemingway Western Studies Center at Boise State University has been designated by the Library of Congress as the Idaho Center for the Book.

Boise State English professor Tom Trusky, who will be director for the center, said Idaho is the 27th state affiliated with the Library of Congress' National Center for the Book.

It will promote the reading, writing, creating and collecting of books, Trusky said. The Boise center will emphasize bookmaking arts and Idaho book history.

Idaho/West Suspected murderer arraigned

LOVELOCK, Nev. (AP) — A man accused of gunning down a Nevada Highway Patrol officer was formally charged Friday with murder and other counts in connection with the case.

Justice of the Peace Gordon N. Richardson scheduled a Feb. 2 preliminary hearing for 25-year-old Michael Hampton Sonner and appointed James Jackson of the state public defender's office to represent him.

Jackson accompanied Sonner on Friday as he was charged with murder with a deadly weapon, being an ex-felon in possession of a firearm, possession of a stolen vehicle and resisting a public officer.

Sonner will not enter a plea until his case goes to District Court here. His February appearance will again be before Richardson.

Sonner, a jail escapee from North Carolina, was captured following a 25-hour manhunt that included assistance from the military and nine law enforcement agencies. It ended with gunfire but no injuries late Wednesday in remote Dixie Valley east of Fallon.

Sonner is charged with the slaying of Trooper Carlos Borland, who was shot in the head Tuesday night along Interstate 80 three miles east of here.

Borland had stopped Sonner after receiving a report of a suspect who stopped for gas and left without paying for it at the Trinity Truck Stop, located 22 miles west of Lovelock at I-80 and U.S. 95.

Borland, 25, died at Washoe Medical Center in Reno about six hours later. Funeral arrangements were pending on Friday.

A massive manhunt was launched for the suspect. Authorities scoured the vicinity on foot, horseback and from the air before the suspect's stolen red 1988 Chevrolet Blazer was sighted bogged down in the desert in remote Dixie Valley.

Sonner was located Wednesday night about 17 miles from the abandoned vehicle with the use of a Nevada National Guard helicopter equipped with sophisticated night vision equipment, police said.

Four members of a Reno Police Department SWAT team on board the helicopter were dropped off near the suspect.

The Police Chief Dick Kirkland said Sonner verbally challenged the officers, then waved a handgun around, pointing it at his own head and at the officers.

Mayor's race costliest in Boise's history

BOISE (AP) — Fueled by unprecedented partisan activity, this year's Boise mayoral race was four times as expensive as any in city history.

Campaign finance reports filed Thursday with the Boise City Clerk's office showed Mayor Brent Coles and unsuccessful challenger Tracy Andrus — the daughter of Democratic Gov. Andrus — spent $313,000 and spent $305,000 in the nominally nonpartisan race.

The previous spending record was $75,000 in 1985.

Coles, appointed in January after former mayor Dirk Kempthorne was elected to the U.S. Senate, raised $170,000. Andrus spent $164,000. He contributed $12,000 to the campaign in the form of a personal loan.

Andrus, who owns a downtown women's clothing store, raised $143,000 and spent $141,000.

Wade Frogley, who was a distant third in the race, raised $2,392.

Both Coles and Andrus had contributors from both parties, but Coles' support came largely from Republicans. State GOP Chairman Randy Smith even signed a Coles fund-raising letter, applauding his support for Republican principles. Much of Andrus' support came from Democrats and traditional supporters of her father.

Banks woman killed

GARDENA (AP) — A Banks woman was killed when her car plunged off Idaho Highway 55 into the Payette River north of Gardena.

Idaho State Police said Donna M. Bangs, 70, was driving south Thursday morning when her vehicle hit an icy spot about 26 miles north of Gardena. The car slid into the guardrail and plunged off a 50-foot embankment.

Cpl. Roger Arnott said five people tried to help Bangs, whose car landed upside down in three feet of water. She died at the scene. The accident remained under investigation.

Court drops charge for lack of evidence

TWIN FALLS—A first-degree arson charge against a 35-year-old man was dismissed Friday.

Ignacio Silva had been charged in the Nov. 19 fire at 434 Fourth Ave. W. after an eyewitness told police she saw Silva lighting a pile of clothes on the kitchen floor of the home.

The Twin Falls Police Department received a call about an arson attempt just before 9:30 that night.

When police and firefighters arrived at the home, the fire had been doused with a pan of water, but a door, ceiling and walls in the house had been scorched.

At a hearing Friday, however, the charge against Silva was dismissed for "lack of evidence," according to 5th District Court documents.

Woman faces possession charge after arrest in June

TWIN FALLS—A Twin Falls woman will stand trial on a charge of possession with intent to deliver cocaine.

Ginger R. Hill, 25, 492 Wakefield St, was ordered to stand trial after a hearing Friday before 5th District Magistrate John F. Varin.

Hill was arrested in June and allegedly was carrying cocaine. The Times-News was unable to determine from court records the quantity of cocaine Hill allegedly possessed.

Hill will go to trial in 5th District Court in Twin Falls.

City sponsors forum to draw safety plans for students

JEROME—The Jerome City Council is asking for help to establish the best safety practices for children to attend the new Horizon Elementary School.

A public forum will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday in City Hall to hear comments from parents and interested Jerome residents, Larry Paine, city administrator, said.

A proposal to close East 10th Street during school hours except for buses and cars-bringing students to school, use of Forsyth Park for a playground and no sidewalk leading to the school will be discussed.

Horizon School is scheduled to open following the Christmas break.

Planning, zoning commission has 2 seats to fill for 1994

TWIN FALLS—The city planning and zoning commission needs applicants to fill two openings in 1994.

Councilman-elect Jeff Gooding's victory means he no longer will serve as the planning commission's chairman, opening one spot for a city resident.

And "area of impact" member Tom Mikesell has moved within the city limits, creating the second opening.

Planning Director Lamar Orton said that potential applicants must reside in the area they intend to serve as a member. Applicants must have lived in the county for at least the past five years, he said.

Applications can be mailed to Orton at P.O. Box 1907, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303, and will be accepted until Dec. 10.

Extended benefits available to unemployed workers

TWIN FALLS—Unemployed workers who exhausted their "regular benefits" since Oct. 3 are now entitled to some extended benefits.

The Idaho Department of Employment announced the people who are eligible for the extended Emergency Unemployment Compensation claims will be notified by mail. And all notifications were mailed Dec. 3.

This follows action taken by Congress extending the time for unemployment claims to be filed.

Twin Falls County Fair Board meets Monday

TWIN FALLS—The County Fair Board will meet Monday to discuss plans for the 1994 Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo. The noon meeting at Canyon Springs Inn is open to the public.

At its Nov. 19 meeting, the board decided to make offers to country and western singer Mark Chesnut and the singing group Sawyer Brown to perform at the 1994 fair.

Board members will report Monday on the International Association of Fairs and Expositions, which convened last week in Las Vegas.

Teacher turns self in to sheriff

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

WENDELL—A former Wendell teacher accused of having an sexual affair with a 17-year-old student has turned himself in, Gooding County Sheriff Jim Jax said.

David Dean Bowen, 37, wanted on an arrest warrant filed Tuesday charging him with sexual battery of a minor, came to the sheriff's office Thursday night, Jax said.

Bowen had his first appearance in the Gooding County Magistrate Court Friday morning, Prosecutor Philip Brown said.

Bail was set at $5,000, but Bowen told Brown he could not come up with a required security deposit of $500 for a bail bondsman and asked that the bail be reduced.

But Brown said he couldn't do that because he considered $5,000 "about rock bottom."

Bowen had asked for the relatively low bail amount because Bowen had turned himself in and didn't have a criminal record, he said.

Bowen, who remained in the Gooding County Jail on Friday night, will be represented by a public defender because he's out of a job, claims his house is being foreclosed on and recently purchased a new car, Brown said.

Thin herds force delay in setting season dates

The Times-News

JEROME—Mule deer and antelope hunters who need to reserve 1994 hunting vacation dates with their bosses before Jan. 1 will have to do so without knowing when the hunting season will open.

Because 1993's hunters have furiously protested a sparse season, the Idaho Fish and Game Commission decided Friday not to set next year's tentative opening dates or permit levels for the Magic Valley and southeastern Idaho.

"We want to alert hunters that we will not set seasons, or in some cases announce opening dates, until we have evidence that these populations can support harvest," said Commission Chairman Wes Rose, Jerome.

In addition, the commission did not set any tentative opening dates for doe-fawn antelope or antlerless mule deer seasons in the southwestern, Upper Snake or Salmon regions.

"We've never done this before," said Commission Chairman Wesley Rose of Jerome. "But we're aware of wildlife losses in the winter of 1992-93, and citizens have expressed their concerns about deer and antelope herds. We're going to wait and see the results of our biologists' evaluation before we confirm these seasons."

The tabling affects archery, centerfire rifle and muzzleloader seasons.

The commission and Fish and Game Department came under fire from hunters in the two regions because of the perception that two-year regulations had established.

Chamber: Businesses eye move to industrial park

By Mick Norrington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—With two secret land sales pending, the Twin-Falls Area Chamber of Commerce's industrial park is almost sold out.

And the chamber is considering not buying additional land for a new Chamber Industrial Park, but instead working with private land owners at selling their land, said Kent Just, executive vice president of the chamber.

"We've got a couple of deals that would take up 14 acres," Just said.

But he won't name the two companies that the chamber is negotiating to sell industrial land to.

The Chamber Industrial Park had 65 acres of land about 10 years ago when it started, Just said. The park is in southeast Twin Falls at the intersection of Eastland Drive South and Wright Avenue.

Now the park has only 20 acres undeveloped remaining. If the two secret deals happen, the park will be left with only six acres of undeveloped land.

Chamber officials are discussing how to work with private land owners so land is available, for sale when a company becomes interested in building in Twin Falls.

"We want to make sure there is opportunity for industrial expansion here. And we'll do whatever we can to ensure that," Just said.

"We might start an industrial development commission. This city has had one of those before," he said. "For that, the chamber would have to get donations from local businesses for a fund to help attract new businesses and help those businesses obtain property.

The chamber will continue discussing the future of its industrial park this month, he said.

Prosecutors drop shooting charges

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Charges of aggravated assault against two men accused in a November shooting on U.S. Highway 30 were dismissed Friday.

While Twin Falls County sheriff's investigators and prosecutors said they had circumstantial evidence, they lacked a positive identification of who fired the shot.

"We never had an ID of the shooter," Deputy Prosecuting Attorney John Lothepich said.

The charges were dismissed in a preliminary hearing before 5th District Magistrate John F. Varin.

Raymond Narcho, 26, and Roger Michael

Conley, 31, each had been charged with two counts of aggravated assault. They had been held in the Twin Falls County Jail on $25,000 bond.

Narcho still faces a felony charge of eluding a peace officer.

The charges followed a Nov. 9 altercation on Highway 30 in which a Bulh man and his passenger said they were fired on in their van. A bullet struck the van 3 feet behind the driver-side door and exited through the passenger side.

The incident happened around 12:30 a.m. about two miles east of Bulh.

After being fired on, van driver Paul Morgan stopped a Bulh police officer.

The sheriff's office was notified, and a short time later a deputy spotted the blue pickup that Narcho was driving.

Deputy Matt Clawson chased the truck several miles — at speeds up to 85 mph — before the pickup struck a parked car in Bulh.

Narcho left the scene, but was caught on court affidavits.

Conley did not run.

Investigators found two assault rifles in the pickup, along with several rounds of ammunition.

A spent shell casing was found at the scene of the shooting, and, according to sheriff's investigators, the shell matched the ammunition in the truck.

Sheriff Detective Sgt. Bill McDaniel said in his court affidavit that one of the guns smelled as though it had been recently fired.

Police want to bring Crane relative back to Idaho for violation

By H.R. Wetzel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME—Idaho law enforcement officials are trying to bring the great-uncle of a missing Challis girl to Jerome County for probation violation.

Robert Paul Crane, 43, was arrested in Jerome County on Oct. 3, 1987, for drunken driving. On Jan. 20, 1988, he was sentenced to up to five years in prison by District Judge Daniel B. Meehl.

Crane was placed on probation. He moved to California and then asked to return to Idaho. But he failed to meet a June 13, 1989, deadline to contact his probation officer, and a bench warrant was issued June 22, 1989, for his arrest. A $10,000 bond was set at that time.

Crane had several arrests in 1985 for driving without privileges, disorderly conduct and two separate charges of battery, according to George Silver III, Jerome County sheriff.

"The paperwork is being prepared to bring Crane back here," Silver said. "He has violated his probation, and we're glad they found him."

The order to return Crane to Jerome must be signed by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

"We'll probably go to Colorado to bring him back as soon as the paperwork is done," Silver said.

Through the investigation to locate Stephanie Crane of Challis, who disappeared Oct. 11, Robert Paul Crane was located in Grand Junction, Colo.

Crane told interrogators he was working as a logger in Colorado when the 9-year-old girl disappeared. Officials say his ability checks out.

"This has nothing to do with Stephanie's disappearance. Crane will go through the court system for probation violation only," Prosecuting Attorney John Morgan said.

Panel: Mediation helps kids, parents

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Divorcing parents should strongly be encouraged to use mediation rather than litigation to settle child custody and visitation disputes, a special legislative committee studying the issue concluded Friday.

"From what we've seen of the mediation programs in Ada and Twin Falls counties, it seems to work a little better than letting them fight it out in court, and it's a lot less expensive," said Rep. Robbi King, R-Glenns Ferry, co-chair of the panel.

After public hearings in Boise, Post Falls and Twin Falls, at which dozens of people detailed their problems with current custody and visitation law, the lawmakers sat down Friday to figure out what to recommend to the full Legislature.

They agreed quickly that impartial mediation early in the process could head off most custody-related battles, but weren't ready to endorse a specific mediation plan.

But they did decide to get more information about Kansas' system for enforcing child support, custody and visitation orders.

In Kansas, when a couple files for divorce a court official is assigned to help them work out a custody and visitation agreement. If one parent denies the other visitation or interferes with visitation rights, the court usually calls in a mediator to help the parents work through their dispute.

Three-quarters of the disputes are settled at the first hearing, said Rep. Max Black, R-Boise, who has studied the Kansas system.

The mediators are paid for partly through divorce-court fees and partly by the parties directly involved, he said.

Although Black recognized the limitations of mediation, he said greater emphasis on it could change what usually are win-lose situations into win-win ones.

"We could sit here and pass laws until doomsday, but we're not going to have any impact until we change people's attitudes," he said.

"There is a small number of people who'll stand up and be shot before they'll comply with anything. We can't do anything about those people, but 95 percent of the people will be reasonable. If we can pass a law that will handle those people, look what we've accomplished."

Earlier this year, judges in the 5th Judicial District began requiring all adults with children who filed for divorce to attend a free mediation orientation session, although they aren't required to participate in a full mediation. The 5th District covers the eight Magic Valley counties.

Although mediation legislation likely won't be introduced during the 1994 legislative session, the panel did discuss other changes to the law that could be done next session:

- Equalizing the penalties for violating a child support order and for violating a visitation order. Both are punished as contempt.

Jury convicts Burley man on rape charge

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — After deliberating only 20 minutes, jurors Friday found a Burley man guilty of rape.

Gilbert Chapa stood motionless; his mouth dropped slightly. He looked at the jury as the clerk read the verdict.

Chapa, 42, was charged with raping a Burley woman on Oct. 17 last year. During the trial, he had said he had only witnessed the crime. It was another man who had beaten and raped the woman, he said.

Before being escorted from the courtroom by police Friday, Chapa said: "The only thing I've got to say about it is that I hadn't intervened (in the beating) she would be raped right now."

Chapa is scheduled to be sentenced Dec. 21. He could be sent to prison for life. His accomplice, Roy Garcia, pleaded guilty Oct. 15 to a lesser charge of battery with the intent to commit a serious felony.

The victim, 37, said in court that on the evening of the incident she had left a bar with the two men, thinking they were going to take her home. Instead they drove her outside of town and beat and raped her.

She testified that Garcia had beaten her when they stopped by canal bank, and that later both men had raped and beaten her at a nearby field.

Chapa testified that Garcia had beaten and raped her by the canal bank, and that later at the field Garcia beaten her again.

He said that after the rape he had intended to drive her to a friend's home. When the woman became frantic and threatened to press charges, he became angry and drove to the nearby field.

She said that Chapa had stopped the car suddenly and said: "Let's do her."

DNA tests identified only semen from Garcia.

Deputy Prosecutor Howard Smyser said in his closing arguments that Chapa's story did not square with the evidence.

Smyser said the woman's shredded clothes were found on the wrong side of the car for Chapa to have entered the field where he said he did.

Chapa's attorney, Dave Haley, said that the number of men the woman said had raped her was inconsistent.

He said several witnesses testified that the woman was drunk and that she may not have been able to remember the details of what happened. Haley said that the woman was unable to identify Garcia and Chapa in a photo line-up.

Kevin White, one of the jury members, said it took about 20 minutes for jurors to unanimously decide the case. One of the main points the jury discussed was the physical evidence of shredded pants and torn clothing.

"There's no way we felt that just one person could have done that and raped her at the same time," White said.

White added that most of the victim's testimony was supported by the testimony of a witness, Gabriel Garza, who sat in the car during the rape and said he tried to ignore the woman's screams.

The victim entered the courtroom several minutes after the verdict was read. She was visibly shaken when she heard the news. Her husband had sat with her in the back of the courtroom during the trial proceedings.

Wood victim will journey to Pocatello

POCATELLO (AP) — The Missouri teen-ager who was left for dead by confessed murderer James Wood 13 months ago has decided to attend Wood's sentencing hearing for last summer's slaying of an 11-year-old Pocatello girl.

"I really honestly want to come and face him," said Jamie Masengill, 19. "I want him to see that he didn't accomplish what he set out to do. I want him to know that he did not take my life."

Wood, 45, has admitted to police that he abducted Masengill from a service station near her home in suburban St. Louis, took her to a wooded area and shot her in the head. He told authorities he was surprised when he learned she had survived.

Sixth District Judge Lynn Winnill has set aside three days for the sentencing hearing in the death of Jerilee Underwood, who was kidnapped while she was collecting on her newspaper route and murdered several hours later in Idaho Falls.

Wood, who has admitted the murder and subsequent mutilation of the child's body, could be sentenced to death. He served a prison term for a murder during the 1970s in Louisiana.

Masengill, who will be accompanied to Pocatello by her parents, Della and Steven Molina, said she hopes facing Wood will help her heal emotionally as well as physically.

She was in a coma for three days after being found. The damage to her brain left her paralyzed on her right side. She now walks only with the aid of braces. Because she cannot use her right hand, she had to learn to write with her left.

It also damaged her long-term memory, and at times she said she cannot translate thoughts into words.

Ogden motorist sues state department over plates

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal lawsuit has been filed against the Utah Motor Vehicle Division by a woman who claims the agency refused to give her a personalized license plate bearing a religious theme.

In her suit, Katherine C. Bebout of Ogden contends the division's denial of her requests for personalized plates bearing "THNXGOD" and "IM4GOD" violated her constitutional speech and religious freedoms.

The U.S. District Court complaint was filed on Bebout's behalf by the Rutherford Institute, a Charlottesville, Va., organization with a history of litigating on religious liberties and anti-abortion issues.

"In a nutshell, we're trying to say to the state of Utah that theistically based expression in the public arena is not offensive as a matter of constitutional law," said Matthew Hilton, a Springville attorney representing the institute and Bebout.

"Having 'IM4GOD' on my personal plate, or 'THNXGOD', surely is a right of free expression," he said.

Along with division director Rick Leimbach, the suit names Lt. Gov. Val Oveson and the Utah State Tax Commission as defendants. State offices were closed when the suit was obtained Friday night.

The action seeks a declaratory judgment and mandatory injunction ordering the state to issue Bebout a personalized plate bearing either "THNXGOD" or "IM4GOD." Hilton also asks for the award of court costs and attorney's fees.

The suit stems from Bebout's July 10, 1993 application for a personalized plate listing "THNXGOD" as her first choice and

Evangelism is heart, soul of Christian faith

I read the following statement: "We always advance in our evangelistic work only so fast and so far as we advance on our knees."

To give out the gospel and "bring" the lost to Christ is a divine program, but it is impossible to carry it out except by divine power. When we stop evangelizing, the by-products will disappear and, in spite of all we can do to continue, the church will come to a standstill and Christ the Savior will be put to shame. This is because we, as believers, will have failed to do the simple task of sharing the gospel with those around us.

How long has it been since you shared Christ with someone? How long has it been since someone was saved and his or her salvation was brought about because of your witness to him or her? How long?

We can't let Satan win any victory — because Jesus has been lifted up on the cross. He drove nails through his hands and feet. He was smitten of God and afflicted. He was bruised for our iniquities, and the chastisement of our peace was upon him. He bore our sins in his body on the tree. God made him, who knew no sin, to be sin for us. God laid upon him the iniquity of us all.

Jesus is Lord. His headship over the church has been established by his intervention in human history. He founded the church. He directs and sustains the function of the church. He controls the future of the church.

As head, Jesus is to be lifted up.

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me" (John 12:32).

How do you reach people for Christ? Lift up Jesus! It is he who draws persons to himself.

We must not let Satan win any victory.

Holidays bring mixed feelings for many of us

It's that time of year again. You know what I mean. Or do you? Maybe I'm saying it excitedly, each syllable laced with joyful anticipation. Or perhaps I'm saying it right after a heavy, mournful sigh, with my head shaking sadly and my eyes rolling heavenward.

It's hard to know. The holidays affect us all so differently, and for different reasons.

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

For some, it's the most wonderful time of the year. For others, it's a time of intensified loneliness. Still others consider it a constant source of aggravation, from the long lines at the mall to the crass commercialization of a day that should be sacred and introspective. And others find everything about it distasteful — the weather, the financial strain, the pressures, the music, the TV specials, the decorations, the (shudder) fruitcake.

Sometimes our feelings about Christmas aren't influenced as much by philosophy as they are by circumstance. If things are going well and we're looking at life through cranberry-colored glasses, there's a good chance we'll feel like celebrating come Christmas. But the loss of a loved one, unemployment, family trauma and economic challenges can turn beloved Yuletide traditions into painful memories.

Some of the above has taken the glow of the pre-holiday excitement around our season and replaced it with a sense of foreboding that help us rekindle our enthusiasm for Christmas. Maybe they'll help you, too.

Simplify. It's easy to get on that escalating spiral of bigger, more elaborate holiday celebrations, isn't it? Each year, you feel the pressure of trying to top yourself in gift-giving, entertaining and decorating. So stop playing the game. You know — just say no. Give gifts that come from the heart, not the pocketbook. Allow your holiday entertaining to be about relationships, not showmanship. And if you need an excuse for decorating the same way each year, call it "traditional" and forget about it.

Focus on feelings. As much as anything, Christmas is a time of mind. Oh, sure — the presents, parties and decorations are part of it. But when it comes down to it, the thing that makes the holiday season unique is what it makes us feel. So allow that to be the focus of your celebration. Do things that make you feel ... well, Christmasy: Singing carols, visiting friends and family, sitting down with the family to watch "It's a Wonderful Life" for the 154th time. Whatever. If that means you have less time to fuss with holiday stress ... so much the better.

Give of yourself. Give of your time, your attention, your talents, your love. A blind neighbor might appreciate having someone address her Christmas cards. A lonely man down the street might enjoy some company for an hour. The new family on the block might like to get acquainted with new friends. You'll be surprised how quickly the Christmas spirit comes when you're thinking of others more than yourself.

Start a new tradition. It doesn't have to be a big deal, just something you'd like to make a regular part of your holiday routine. In our family, it's going to be a "Twelve Days of Christmas" project, where we're going to perform an anonymous act of service for neighbors each of the 12 days leading up to Christmas Day. You might prefer making a new Christmas goodie. Just do something different to add a little spice to your holiday.

Make the world a better place in which to live. One of the themes of the first Christmas was "peace on earth, good will toward men," and it seems to me that ought to be a theme for us, too. Granted, we're probably not going to stumble upon any solutions for world peace. But maybe we can make friends with someone we've offended or find it in our hearts to forgive someone who has offended us. Perhaps we can teach our children tolerance by attending a Christmas service with another faith group. Or maybe we can do our part for the environment by simply wrapping fewer presents (which, by the way, may save you a buck or two at the cash register).

The point is, Christmas is whatever we choose to make of it. We can go with the flow and risk being swept away by flooding materialism. But, if we decide to take action to make the holidays more meaningful for ourselves and our families, we may be surprised at how delightful the season can be.

Long lines, finances and fruitcake notwithstanding.

Getting kids through grief

"Men fear death as children fear to go in the dark; and as that natural fear in children is increased with tales, so is the other."

— Francis Bacon

By Steve Crump

TWIN FALLS— He was 12, and he didn't say much.

As the mourners shuffled into a chapel, suffused with that odd mix of mothballs, new leather and musty perfume that hangs over a funeral, the boy slid into his chair, across the room from his grieving family.

Helping them cope

How to help a child deal with death, according to local counselors and clergy:

• Tell him it's coming, the experts counsel. If Grandpa has cancer and he isn't going to get better, say so, but do so in a way that the child will understand.

• Tell the kid that Grandpa has gone to heaven, but make sure he knows that means Grandpa won't be returning soon, as he would from a trip. To young children, death simply means absence; you have to make clear it's something else.

• Never, ever force a child to go to a funeral service or to the funeral home against his will. It's OK to try to persuade a child to go, but it's never OK to make him go.

• If Grandpa isn't going to get better, let the child go say goodbye in person — within reason. A young child who remembers Grandpa throwing the football to him isn't going to be prepared to see him when he's 80 pounds and hooked up to a respirator.

• Be prepared for anger. There's many a cop and emergency room doctor who've been on the receiving end of a fist when they delivered the news that somebody has died," said Morris Morphet, a Twin Falls psychologist. "Kids are no different."

• If everything's not going to be all right, say so. Reassurances are fine, but a parent who lies about a loved one's death is the source of more pain than comfort.

When it was over, they took his dad to the cemetery. He walked home alone. Joan Dalton-Boyd's son was hurting.

SALT LAKE CITY — From his eighth-floor apartment overlooking Temple Square, Ezra Taft Benson presides over one of the world's fastest-growing religions as "prophet, seer and revelator." In mid-November the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

At 94, the nation's agriculture secretary under President Dwight D. Eisenhower has been incapacitated since 1989, confined to a wheelchair and surrounded by 24-hour-a-day nurses and security guards. The severity of his condition became public only recently when one of his grandsons, tired of what he said was a charade involving posed pictures and letters signed by an automatic pen, denounced Mormon leaders for participating in a deception.

In the prophet's absence, Steve Benson conceded, had made little difference in running the church, whose bureaucracy he compared to that of the former Soviet Union.

"To me, it was just further evidence of the systematic illness that has affected the hierarchy of the church," said Benson, 39, a Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist for the Arizona Republic. In mid-November the sixth-generation Mormon left the church.

By Mormon tradition, the prophet is the most senior member of the Brethren, as church authorities are called, and so Ezra Taft Benson is not the first spiritual leader to become incapacitated in his final days. But his grandson's disclosure and the unusual glimpse it provided into the upper reaches of the hierarchy reflect a larger struggle that has placed a powerful and normally secretive church in an uncomfortable public spotlight.

In the view of many experts inside and outside the church, it is no coincidence that the struggle, pitting church elders against Steve Benson and a small group of dissidents challenging Mormon practices on everything from the role of missionaries in Latin America to the status of women, comes as the church is enjoying unprecedented success.

From the church's base here and in the West, missionaries have gone forth to every corner of the world, doubling membership in the last 15 years and bringing closer the day when a majority of Mormons will live outside the United States. But that growth has created new pressure on authorities to maintain the kind of discipline and adherence to doctrine shown in functioning without Ezra Taft Benson's leadership. The result has been the increased confrontation.

"Why should they (church authorities) be concerned about a number like this?" asked

Allen Roberts, a local architect, reflecting on the relatively small numbers of intellectuals involved in the disputes. "Because they want to control everything."

The most outspoken voice on the need to maintain orthodoxy has been that of Boyd K. Packer, acting head of the Quorum of the 12 Apostles, the church's second-highest governing authority.

Packer has led a campaign against what he sees as the three gravest threats facing the church: homosexuals, feminists and what he described as "the ever-present challenge from the so-called scholars or intellectuals."

Five scholars have been excommunicated and another "disfellowshipped" for "apostasy" this fall, while two professors at church-run Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, were told that their contracts would not be renewed.

Those actions were taken after less-publicized excommunications of dozens of ultra-conservative Mormons.

In keeping with the church's traditional secrecy, no high-ranking officials would agree to be interviewed for this article. But at the church's general conference in October, Gordon B. Hinckley, de facto leader in Benson's absence, said critics were few in number and their influence was distorted because of access to the media.

Boomers look for 'perfect' worship place

Newport News Daily Press

Janice Arena's search for a church sounds a little like Goldilocks' quest for a perfect bowl of porridge.

The longtime Catholic had hot and cold reactions to the many Protestant, Roman Catholic and non-denominational churches she had visited in the past seven or so years. In one church the pastor didn't seem to preach the word of God. In another, the congregation didn't seem together in its worship. Then she walked into New Mount Olive Baptist Church in Hampton, Va.

And everything felt just right.

"I felt like it was home," she said. "I said, 'Oh, Lord, you must have sent me.'"

Arena's search illustrates the pursuit of many of the faithful these days. Spiritually and sometimes physically removed from the congregations in which they grew up, many adults — particularly Baby Boomers and Busters — seek houses of worship that will satisfy practical needs as well as religious beliefs.

"They aren't going to go to church simply because their people had gone before," said Douglas Ottati, a theology professor at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va.

The church-shopping trend stems primarily from the mobility of today's adults, said Ottati. For many, each move to a new home comes with search for a new spiritual home, and a chance to weigh what they want and believe.

Do they need a place that offers children's services? Religious study? Do they want to join a congregation that ordains women? Welcomes homosexuals? Celebrates Halloween? Do they like what the clergy and lay leaders have to say?

"People do indeed gravitate toward churches that reflect their points of view," said Owen Norment Jr., a religion professor at Hampden-Sydney College in Virginia.

The process of selecting a church makes some believers define themselves differently than churchgoers of a generation ago, who often joined a congregation just because their forefathers had done so, said the Rev. Lynn Howard, a Peninsula Southern Baptist pastor who is co-writing a book on church shopping.

"Pre-Baby Boomers functioned a lot more out of 'ought' than 'need,'" said Howard. "Baby Boomers function a lot more out of 'need' than 'ought.'"

Bakker's touch still shows at resort

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Jim Bakker is long gone from New Heritage USA, but the new owners can't erase his memory from this rolling 2,200-acre Christian resort.

The new owners talk about their own vision in news releases that promise "a management team which is committed to doing what is biblically right and morally responsible."

The resort, 18 miles south of Charlotte, was built in the 1980s with donations from Bakker's "Praise the Lord" television ministry. The ministry disintegrated after allegations of fraud and an extramarital affair by Bakker.

Elissa Fody is co-owner of a gift shop at New Heritage USA, which is now owned by Malaysian investors after being built by imprisoned televangelist Jim Bakker.

It's a concession to the popularity of Bakker's vision, but that's as far as it goes. "The original idea was a good one. Unfortunately, greed got in the way," said Elissa N. Fody, taking a break from her Christmas shop at the mall-style Main Street to bask

Utah bishop will move to California

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II has accepted the resignation of Monsignor Francis A. Quinn as bishop of Sacramento, Calif., and has appointed a successor from Utah, the Vatican announced Tuesday.

No specific reason was given for the resignation of the 72-year-old Quinn, bishop of Sacramento since 1979.

At a news conference Tuesday in Salt Lake, Weigand said he would be assuming his new post as bishop of Sacramento at a formal Mass Jan. 27.

Weigand, who has been bishop of Utah's 75,000 Catholics for 13 years, said he has mixed feelings.

Catholic Church OKs Holy Cross sale

SALT LAKE CITY — The Roman Catholic Church last week authorized the sale of Holy-Cross Health Services of Utah to Twain-Falls, Inc. of Nashville, Tenn.

The Most Rev. William K. Weigand, bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Salt Lake, and other civic leaders had opposed the sale of the non-profit Holy Cross Health Services to the for-profit HealthTrust.

The sale was announced by the Sisters of the Holy Cross of South Bend, Ind., which owns the Holy-Cross Hospital in Salt Lake City.

The price was reported to be more than $140 million. Holy Cross Health System Corp. has nine major health services subsidiaries in six states, from Maryland to California, which include 12 hospitals and numerous ambulatory care facilities, surgery centers and clinics.

Death

Continued from B4 death wasn't even mentioned. Even the mayhem on television and violence in the streets haven't done much to change that, counselors and clergy say. TV death isn't real.

"Kids think they're immortal," says the Rev. Wayne Weldon-Martin, pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Twin Falls. "Look what happens when a teen-ager gets killed. His whole school is traumatized, even though only a handful of kids knew him."

"Death is a part of living," Weldon-Martin said. "The more a child understands that, the better off he's going to be."

The Christian explanation that death is a beginning, and not an end, is "taught to most American kids at one time or another, but it's an abstraction."

Mormon

Continued from B4 "gerontocracy" of white men whose average age by one calculation is 84, dissenters acknowledge the special role of the General Authorities, as church leaders are called, especially the prophet.

But even the strongest families are in for a bumpy ride, Weldon-Martin cautions, and they should expect it.

Controversial since Joseph Smith, the founder, first claimed to have translated the Book of Mormon from gold plates he said he found in upstate New York.

Some women. Other historians have examined the Mormon tradition of a "Mother in Heaven," a female divinity equal to the male God.

God is more than a man

Often the question is asked "Do you believe in God?" If God is a spirit of righteousness which dwells inside of man, he never claimed, then many atheists and evolutionists could believe in a God like that.

From good people, be they Christians, atheists or any other religion. True history has proven it is up to the people to make a better world including a better heaven, for according to the Bible: the old ones became too corrupt many years ago.

Champion chosen tonight; CSI, Hiwassee post wins

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It wasn't formatted this way but the second annual Arctic Circle Twin Falls Invitational will have a champion after tonight's action.

That was set up Friday when nationally seventh-ranked Hiwassee, Tenn., downed Eastern Utah, 89-67 and College of Southern Idaho beat Fashion Institute of New York 119-84.

The tourney format had the two Region 18 teams switching opponents regardless of outcome. But now, the CSI-Hiwassee winner will be the undefeated team left in the four-team race.

Eastern Utah will take on Fashion Institute at 6 p.m. today while CSI and Hiwassee collide at 8 p.m.

With starters Marcus LoVett and Rob Preston out with injuries, the CSI depth was suspect for this one. But the ones remaining came up in the crunch to provide more than enough to beat FIT.

“Our bench guys did a great job,” said Coach Steve Irons. “All of the guys coming into the game gave us some good minutes. Dwayne Chisom and Chad Harding had maybe their best nights and Trent Gardner hit his shots. It took all the pressure off.”

Chisom, the Navy veteran who is trying to get into slugging, came on to change the defensive balance underneath with four blocked shots and added 10 points. That amply rested starter Sandro Varejao, who scored 21.

“His timing is getting better as he gets in better condition,” Irons said. “That’s good because with Marcus and Rob out, we’re really going to need everyone against Hiwassee.”

The teams slammed and banged through the first five minutes with much scoring. CSI led 8-5 at the 15-minute mark and then CSI went on its first dash, scoring the next 11 points.

The lead hung at 12 to 15 over the next several minutes but FIT could find just seven points over the last seven minutes and fell behind 60-38 at intermission.

Freshman Shawn Bankhead came up with nine of his 30 points to open the second half and CSI held 25 or more point leads the rest of the way.

Hiwassee went to the three-point line to put Eastern Utah away. Although the Tigers led throughout the half, CEU kept making little runs that cut double-digit deficits to five or seven.

The Eagles closed to within four with the first three points of the second half before Hiwassee suddenly exploded its outside game. The Titans connected on five straight three-pointers—three from Damon

Tigers' press rattles youthful Senators in season opening win

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

JEROME — The Jerome Tigers made GOODING prove it could hit the outside shot and break a full-court press Friday night.

The Senators did neither in a 57-42 boys' basketball loss to Jerome.

The contest was the season-opener for both teams and head coaching debuts of Jerome's Brent Clark and Gooding's Ty Jones.

Prep roundup — B7

Starting its press midway through the first quarter, the Tigers broke a 4-4 tie with a 10-0 run.

"We wanted to try it tonight just to see how it worked," Clark said. "Gooding was a little bit rattled. I think the size of our guards and the hands in the passing lanes bothered them."

In addition to having a considerably larger student body to draw from, Jerome fields an all-senior starting lineup. The Senators start the season with only one player, center Bill Squires returning with experience.

And the inexperienced Gooding ball-handlers had problems getting the ball up court as well as getting it inside. Squires managed only four points, all in the second half.

"We've worked on (breaking the press) a lot in practice," Jones said. "It's probably

Idaho ready for battle of offenses

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The Boston University Terriers take their bid to go from worst to first in the NCAA's Yankee Division into what the division's most productive offense on Saturday, relying on the arm of junior quarterback Robert Dougherty.

The junior college transfer from Visalia, Calif., threw for 18 touchdowns and ran for 11 more in making the Terriers the division's most improved team. Boston University is the only unbeaten team at 12-0 left in the 1-AA playoffs after going 3-8 in 1992.

"Robert has an overabundance of confidence as I think every quarterback should have," Terrier head coach Dan Allen said. "He's very mobile, which puts a lot of pressure on the defense, and he has a very, very strong arm."

But in their first post-season appearance since 1984, the Yankee Conference champions ranked sixth in the final 1-AA poll of the season and carrying the division's longest winning streak at 14 games, needed a major comeback and two overtime to defeat Northern Iowa, 27-21, in last week's first round.

Idaho head coach John L. Smith has the Vandals in the playoffs for the fourth time in his five seasons, in the Big Sky Conference, and his offense has averaged over 46 points a game since led by one of the country's best quarterbacks, 6-4 senior Doug Nussmeier.

Nussmeier, the only 1-AA quarterback among the finalists for the Johnny Unitas Award, has thrown for 37 touchdowns and run for eight more in leading the Vandals to a 10-2 record that includes last week's first-round road-victory over Northeast Louisiana, 34-31.

Hawks burst Houston's bubble; Rockets settle

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Rockets were far from perfect Friday night.

"When we bust the bubble, we bust the bubble, don't we?"

Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said after Atlanta routed the Rockets 132-111.

Houston fell one victory shy of becoming the first NBA team to start a season with 16 consecutive wins.

"In 16 games, we are going to have a night like this," Tomjanovich said. "I'm not making any excuses. We played a real good team and they kicked our butts in all phases of the game."

Mookie Blaylock scored 28 points and Dominique Wilkins added 27 for the Hawks, who have won 10 straight. Atlanta steadily pulled away after jumper Augmon broke a 9-9 tie on a short lone surge just over three minutes in.

The Rockets appeared tired, playing one night.

Wisconsin may take long route to Rose Bowl—through Tokyo

The Associated Press

It's a long way to Pasadena by way of Tokyo.

Considering Wisconsin's 31-season absence from the Rose Bowl, however, the trip to Japan may seem like a short cut to California.

And then there's the SEC championship. No matter how sugar-coated, it can be argued that neither of its participants should be ranked as high as No. 2 in its own conference.

College football

To be won are berths in the Rose and Sugar bowls, with the outcomes at Tokyo and Birmingham, Ala., also to determine berths in the Gator and Holiday bowls. This is the date of big-time college football on the final weekend of the regular season.

"You're going to see young, red-blooded kids from two schools in the Big Ten play their hearts out," Michigan State coach George Perles said of his Liberty Bowl-bound Spartans' showdown with Wisconsin.

A victory by the 10th-ranked Badgers would send Wisconsin to Pasadena for the first time since its classic 42-37 loss to Southern California in 1963. A loss of ties makes No. 11 Ohio State the Big Ten's Rose Bowl ambassador. A Holiday Bowl date awaits whichever is shut out of the Rose Bowl.

His team's possession venue was far from the thoughts of Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez, who despite enjoying the company of the Spartans at a lavish reception

Friday night, was all business.

"I think you're going to see a very physical game," he said.

Wisconsin (8-1, 5-1-1 in the Big Ten) is favored to beat the Spartans (6-4, 4-3) for the first time since 1984, when it posted a 20-10 victory in the regular-season finale.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kevin Johnson scored the game-winning points on a baseline jumper with 2.2 seconds remaining.

Charles Barkley had 34 points and 16 rebounds for the Suns, who have won seven of eight. Barkley scored 20 points in the second half, and 16 of them either tied the score or put the Suns ahead.

Derrick Coleman's two free throws after he grabbed New Jersey's third offensive rebound of the possession gave the Nets a 103-102 lead with 14 seconds left. Dan Majerle's 20-footer was rebounded simultaneously by Barkley and Coleman with 7.4 seconds to go, but Barkley easily won the jump ball.

Celtics 114, Trail Blazers 108

BOSTON — Rickey Fox kept up his resurgence with 22 points, and Boston led by at least five points for the final 44 minutes. Fox, starting for injured shooting guard Dee Brown, had his second-highest point total of the season.

Robert Parish and Xavier McDaniel had 19 points each for Boston.

Cliff Robinson matched his season-high of 28 points for Portland, which lost its fourth straight against the Celtics.

Bulls 104, Heat 99

MIAMI — Horace Grant scored 21 points and Scottie Pippen made three critical free throws in the final 1:40 to lead Chicago to its third straight victory.

The Bulls, who never trailed, have won both their games since Pippen returned from the injury list Tuesday. Glen Rice scored 11 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter, when the Heat came back from a 15-point deficit and tied the game.

DALLAS — Ken Norman made a 3-pointer from the left wing with 2.7 seconds left, handing Dallas its 11th consecutive defeat.

Dallas had a chance for the victory, but Derek Harper's 20-footer glanced off the rim as the buzzer sounded.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — With all the attention on the matchup of the matinee centers, two North Carolina reserves stole the show.

Freshman forward Jerry Stackhouse scored 19 and sophomore guard Danica Calabria added 17, both career-highs, as the fourth-ranked Tar Heels beat No. 22 George Washington 87-62 Friday night in the opening round of the Tournament of Champions.

No. 20 Vanderbilt 61 Princeton 43

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Jan van Breda Kolff has strong ties to Princeton, so it was with mixed emotions that he watched No. 20 Vanderbilt rout the Tigers 61-43 on Friday night.

Ronnie McManis scored six points in a 10-2 run, tying it at 53 on Jason Tyrus' 3-pointer with 11:49 left. But Wingfield hit a free throw to put Cincinnati back ahead to stay, and had a follow-up basket and a 3-pointer that pushed the lead to 66-60 with six minutes left. Damon Flint, in a 3-for-17 shooting slump, added a 3-pointer in the decisive rally. Flint finished with 21 points, and Wingfield had 18.

No. 14 Purdue 94 James Madison 78

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Glenn Robinson scored 29 points Friday night, leading No. 14 Purdue to an 98-74 victory over James Madison in the opening round of the Bollenkamp Invitational.

Robinson, who had 21 points in the first half, finished with 15 rebounds. He began the night with averages of 32.3 points and 11.7 rebounds per game.

Purdue (4-0) advanced to Saturday night's championship game against the winner of the Indiana State-Western Michigan game.

Chionzo Martin added 22 points for Purdue and Brandon Branley and Herb Dove each had nine.

No. 23 Cincinnati 88 Washington 72

CINCINNATI — Donteonio Wingfield, playing in foul trouble, hit the first five points in a 10-2 second-half run that let No. 23 Cincinnati pull away from Washington 88-72 Friday night.

The Bearcats (4-1) blew a 14-point first-half lead before Wingfield, tied by three fouls, came off the bench to break open a close game.

Washington (0-2) caught the Bearcats with a 10-2 run, tying it at 53 on Jason Tyrus' 3-pointer with 11:49 left. But Wingfield hit a free throw to put Cincinnati back ahead to stay, and had a follow-up basket and a 3-pointer that pushed the lead to 66-60 with six minutes left. Damon Flint, in a 3-for-17 shooting slump, added a 3-pointer in the decisive rally. Flint finished with 21 points, and Wingfield had 18.

Notre Dame forward Monty Williams, center, moves in for two Friday under Boston College defenders Paul Grant, background, and Bill Curley. Boston College beat Notre Dame, 87-79.

No. 15 Minnesota 90 Middle Tennessee 76

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. — Randy Carter scored 27 points and No. 15 Minnesota dominated inside to down Middle Tennessee State 90-76 Friday night.

Middle Tennessee (1-2) twice pulled within nine in the second half, the last at 85-76 with 41 seconds left on Paul Washington's 3-pointer. But Minnesota (4-2) hit four of five free throws in the stretch to close out the victory.

The Golden Gophers kept Middle Tennessee away from the basket most of the game, outrebounding the Blue Raiders 41-26.

Brigham Young 72 South Carolina 68

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Robbie Reid sank four free throws in eight attempts in the final 40 seconds, giving Brigham Young a 72-68 victory over South Carolina Friday night in the first round of the Tournament of Champions.

Both teams hit four free throws down the stretch, but South Carolina's attempts were spread over four minutes, 10 seconds. The Gamecocks got only one basket in their decisive stretch, a 3-pointer by Durant Williams with 3:30 to play that gave them a 64-62 lead.

Montana 79, S. Utah 54

MISSOULA, Mont. — Gary Kane and Matt Kempfert led Montana to a 79-54 victory Friday night over Southern Utah in the opening round of the KYLT Classic.

Montana (4-0) will meet the winner of the Northeast Louisiana-Missouri-Kansas City game in the finals Saturday night. Southern Utah (2-1) will play in the consolation game.

The Orangemen (3-0) will play No. 20 Vanderbilt, a 61-43 winner over Princeton, in Saturday's championship game. Syracuse has won 14 of 16 Carrier Classics, including the last 11 in a row.

No. 18 Syracuse 89 Boston U. 70

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Lawrence Moten and No. 18 Syracuse showed their long-range shooting touch in the second half and beat Boston University 89-70 Friday night in the first round of the Carrier Classic.

The Orangemen (3-0) will play No. 20 Vanderbilt, a 61-43 winner over Princeton, in Saturday's championship game. Syracuse has won 14 of 16 Carrier Classics, including the last 11 in a row.

Wildcats expect tough fight from Hoosiers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Kentucky, the nation's No. 1 team, already has beaten one strong opponent, Louisville, and is favored to beat another Saturday when it meets No. 21 Indiana in the Hoosier Dome.

But Kentucky coach Rick Pitino warns that records and ratings don't matter against Bob Knight and the Hoosiers.

"We've always had close games with Indiana," Pitino said. "It doesn't matter which program is up and which is down. They've gone to the wire and this one will go down to the wire."

Each team has 12 victories in the 24-game series. Five games have been decided in overtime, and 14 have been won by six points or less. And the combined margins of the past four games was 10 points.

Despite Kentucky's marvelous talent and the Hoosiers reeling from the loss of Calbert Cheaney and Greg Graham in the first round of wis. Star's NBA draft, Pitino is not resting easy — because of Knight.

"It's not players that make Indiana win — but obviously if you have a Calbert Cheaney, you go far — it's their system," Pitino said. "And his (coach Knight's) players play his system very well."

Pitino said Knight can find a way to win despite the loss of Cheaney, the 1993 College Player of the Year, as well as Graham, starting center Matt Nover and reserve guard Chris Reynolds from last season.

"Yes, they did lose Cheaney, but they're very young, they shoot the ball well — better than in the past few years — and I would not be surprised if they win the Big Ten again this year," Pitino said.

The Hoosiers are coming off a shocking loss to Butler last Saturday in their season opener, and will be trying to atone for that setback.

ABC shifts 1994 soccer game for golf
NEW YORK — The United States' first game in the World Cup next June has been moved to 9:30 p.m. MDT to accommodate ABC and its coverage of the U.S. Open golf tournament.

Soccer and television officials, speaking on the condition they not be identified, said this week that the only way to televise the game, scheduled for June 18 at the Pontiac Silverdome, was to start it before noon. ABC's coverage of the U.S. Open at Oakmont, Pa., is slated to be on the air from 11:30 a.m.-4 p.m. MDT.

The U.S.'s second first-round game, on Wednesday, June 22, at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., will be played at 5:30 p.m. MDT and will be televised by ESPN. The third first-round game will be at the Rose Bowl on Sunday, June 26, at 5 p.m. MDT and will be televised by ABC.

The World Cup opener, at Chicago's Soldier Field on June 17, has been moved up an hour to 1 p.m. MDT.

Sieckmann, McHaffie take early lead

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. — Deborah McHaffie and Tom Sieckmann teamed up to shoot a 3-under 69 Friday and take a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the four-day J.C. Penney Mixed-Team Classic.

McHaffie, golf's fashion conscience, had been recognized more for her wildly and colorful outfits than her golf. But that has not been the case while she's teamed with Sieckmann.

She wore a collarless designer T-shirt, safari shorts over leopard-skin tights and a color-coordinated cap carrying the message "Save Our Wildlife." But most noticeable was McHaffie-Sieckmann's position on the leader board: at 10-under 132, and one stroke in front of two teams tied for second, Kenny Perry-Sheri Steinhauser and Fred Funk-Tina Barrett at 5 under.

Steve Fattal and Mallory are two-back at 8-under while Tom Purzner-Beth Daniel and Tom Wargo-Nancy Scranton are at 7-under.

Hall birdies final 2, overtakes Marsh

HAINES CITY, Fla. — St. Louis club pro Bill Hall birdied two of his last three holes to overtake Graham Marsh of Australia on Friday and earn top honors at the Senior PGA Tour National Qualifying Tournament.

Hall, leader during the first two days of the four-day tournament at the West Course of the Greenleaf Resort, shot a 69 after starting the final round one shot back of Marsh, George Shorridge and Dick Goetz.

Hall won $10,500 for his two-shot victory over Marsh but more importantly received a full exemption into all open Senior Tour events next year.

Besides Hall and Marsh, the top eight were Goetz, Shorridge, Randy Petri, Fred Ruiz, Richard Basset and Bob Panask.

Two-time U.S. Amateur champion Jay Siegel shot a two-under round of 70 Friday and finished 11th among the low-16 finishers, winning a four-hole playoff with Marion Heck.

Jazz see something new — empty seats

SALT LAKE CITY — After years of seemingly endless demand for tickets, the Utah Jazz are seeing empty seats at their games.

The number of season-ticket holders is down from 15,800 last year to 15,300. The announced attendance at the Denver game Tuesday 16,300 — was the smallest in the Delta Center's 10-year history.

Even sales at the Mallory are two-back at 8-under while Tom Purzner-Beth Daniel and Tom Wargo-Nancy Scranton are at 7-under.

No one is panicking at the Jazz offices. The crowd at the Denver game was higher than the average attendance this year for 20 other teams in the NBA. And the decline hardly seems worth mentioning compared with the sudden avalanche of apathy that has beset Los Angeles.

Attendance at both the Lakers' and the Clippers' games is down by more than 10 percent so far this year. The Jazz' average attendance almost equals both those teams combined, and the Nuggets' Jazz game was only the second announced non-sellout in the past 208 games.

Strange strains to pull out of slump

SYDNEY, Australia — Curtis Strange, showing signs of coming out of a prolonged golfing slump, shot a 6-under-par 67 Friday and took a two-shot lead after two rounds of the Greg Norman Classic.

Strange, one of the top players in the world during the late 1980s, has not won since the second of his consecutive U.S. Open titles in 1989.

He says his confidence has suffered, but he did not show it as he totaled the par-73, 6,856-yard The Lakes layout. He had an 11-under-par total of 135.

Inkatha continues to issue conflicting signals

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — In a sign of disarray and disension in his party, black leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi denied Friday that his Inkatha Freedom Party had backed down and agreed to participate in elections.

It was the second time this week conflicting signals had been sent on the party's plans for the future.

Earlier Friday, a member of parliament who also belongs to Inkatha told parliament that the party would field candidates in the nation's first multiracial election April 27. Jurie Mentz, who is white, indicated Inkatha had softened its conditions for participation.

The party's main demand has been for a constitutional guarantee of strong regional autonomy.

U.S. citizens avoided tainted German blood, military says

BONN, Germany — No U.S. citizens received tainted blood from the company at the center of Germany's AIDS scandal, the U.S. military said Friday.

German officials, meanwhile, said tests of suspected blood haven't turned up any new contamination from HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Officials reported in October that UB Plasma of Koblenz had distributed two-contaminated lots of blood that infected three hospital patients with HIV. Tests of blood donations confirmed the two-tainted lots, but there doesn't appear to be any further contamination.

Bosnian leader rejects idea of a divided Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnia's Muslim president promised Friday never to divide Sarajevo with Serb besiegers, underscoring the futility of the latest talks on ending Bosnia's war.

Just hours before President Alija Izetbegovic spoke, mortar bombs killed four Sarajevoans and wounded at least 10. The city's plight was punctuated by the sound of shellfire during Izetbegovic's news conference in the presidency building, which was darkened twice by power failures as he spoke.

Izetbegovic said his delegation at peace talks in Geneva listened to Serb proposals for the besieged capital, but flatly rejected them.

Chinese hope magazine will counter their critics

HONG KONG — Anxious to counter critics in the West, China will begin publishing a monthly magazine lauding the country's human rights achievements, a Hong Kong newspaper said Friday.

Ming Pao, a Chinese-language daily respected for its China coverage, said "Human Rights Magazine" would probably be sold in China and overseas beginning early next year.

Ming Pao said the decision to publish the magazine was taken by China's top leadership.

Russian candidate offers gift of champagne to voters

MOSCOW — An enterprising candidate for the new Russian parliament is reportedly offering voters discount bubbly in exchange for their ballot in the Dec. 12 elections.

Yuri Tyulin, a candidate for the Dignity and Charity bloc, is tempting voters in the Tver region northwest of Moscow with a 1,000-ruble (81-cent) discount on one million bottles of champagne, the ITR-Tass news agency said.

Low-income voters will receive an even greater discount on the champagne, which typically sells for about 3,000 rubles, the report said.

Thousands visit cemetery after death of drug lord

MEDELLIN, Colombia — Tens of thousands of Pablo Escobar's followers, listening to mariachi music and bearing flowers, mobbed a cemetery Friday, a day after one of the century's most notorious criminals was gunned down.

Tipped off by a traced phone call, police and soldiers raided the drug lord's two-story hideout on Thursday. They shot and killed the portly, bearded Escobar and his bodyguard as they tried to escape over the roof.

Violence erupts between Palestinians, Arabs

The Associated Press

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank — A sacred site exploded in violence Friday when Jewish settlers firing guns battled stone-throwing Palestinians in Hebron on the occupied West Bank.

Four Palestinians were wounded in the fighting, which took place 10 days before Israel is to start handing over control of the occupied Gaza Strip and Jericho on the West Bank to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Violence by Israeli and Palestinian extremists who oppose the autonomy plan is likely to delay the start of the handover, though Israeli officials insist it will go through. Thirty-four Palestinians and 11 Israelis have died since Israel and the PLO signed their Sept. 13 peace accord.

"Where is peace?" Palestinian Wafaa Jweinat asked after Jewish settlers, standing in V-formation, fired bullets past her living room window.

Palestinian youths responded with a barrage of stones and bottles, then fled. One Palestinian was wounded in the neck by a gunfire, Arab witnesses said. Three other Palestinians were wounded, though it was unclear whether by soldiers or settlers.

Soldiers did not try to stop the settlers shooting on Bab Zawayeh Street, bordering Hebron's outdoor marketplace. But they fanned out in search of Arab stone-throwers and detained 20 suspects, Arab witnesses said.

The army maintained that its forces closed off the area and dispersed the demonstrators. It confirmed that three Arabs were wounded, one seriously, and said it was checking how it happened. A military source said police were asked to look into the Jewish settlers' behavior.

In Gaza, meanwhile, gunmen from the PLO's militant Fatah group opened fire at Israeli soldiers in at least two locations, and the troops fired back, Palestinian reporters said. No one was injured and the army said it was checking the reports.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher was due in Israel on Friday for the start of a weeklong Middle East tour meant to rally the peace process. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin rejected the PLO's suggestion that the United States intervene to help solve disputes concerning the autonomy plan.

Region acts as thorn in Russia's side

The Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — Emerging from a camouflaged bunker covered with barbed wire and gun turrets, a Russian border guard hollers, "What are you, crazy? Tired of life? Don't go in there!"

"There is the self-proclaimed state of Chechnya — a tiny mountainous tract 950 miles south of Moscow nestled high in the Caucasus Mountains along Russia's southern flank.

Russia's government still lays claim to the region but for the past two years has exercised no control here. Chechnya will be the only part of Russia officially boycotting the Dec. 12 parliamentary elections.

Letting off a few rounds from his rifle into the ice-blanketed fields, the ski-masked Russian soldier warns visitors crossing the border. "There are bandits everywhere! They're slaughtering Russians!"

Not bothering to check documents, he retreats back into his bunker yelling a final caution: "You have been warned!"

Chechens are many Russians' "other nore," and their capital Grozny is often depicted in the Russian media as the heart of darkness.

Mention Chechnya to a Russian and you're likely to be regaled with horrific tales of a center of Islamic extremism and organized crime.

In Grozny, which means "terrible" or "threatening" in Russian, Chechens fume at their characterization as gangsters and criminals, but relish being a thorn in Russia's side.

"The Russians imagine themselves as great and all-powerful," said Zein Khan Yandarb, a professional poet in Soviet times, but today vice-president of this republic at Leningrad. "But in politics or military matters we are ready for them."

Russian President Boris Yeltsin has failed to bring Chechnya back into the fold since it slipped out of Moscow's grasp in the chaotic aftermath of the failed Soviet coup of August 1991. Russian troops who tried to regain control in 1991 were sent scurrying.

A 2-year-old Russian arrest warrant for Chechnya's maverick President Dzhokar Dudayev is gathering dust.

Few of the fiercely Muslim Chechens show any interest in rejoining Russia.

Russian political parties — democratic, nationalist or communist — all want to subjugate Chechnya, claims Yandarb.

Chechnya, along with the rest of the Caucasus, was conquered by Russia in the middle of the last century. Chechens claim more than 1 million Russians lost their lives in the struggle and that the last Chechen fighter did not give up until 1976.

Princess Diana says she'll diminish her role in public

The Associated Press

LONDON — Complaining of "overwhelming" media intrusion into her life, Princess Diana said Friday she will reduce her public commitments to devote more time to her children.

Diana's marriage to Prince Charles 12 years ago made her one of the world's most famous women, pursued everywhere by cameras and reporters.

Transcripts of telephone calls allegedly made by the princess have been published, and paparazzi stalk her friends' houses. Last month, Diana filed a lawsuit after the Sunday Mirror and Daily Mirror published pictures, taken by a hidden camera, of her working out at a private gym.

Diana, 32, said she knew lying in the glare of publicity would be rough.

"But I was not aware of how overwhelming that attention would become; nor the extent to which it would affect both my public duties and my personal life. In a manner that has been hard to bear," she said in an emotional speech.

Charles, who separated from Diana a year ago, voiced a very different complaint last week: "Since the day I got married, people have chosen to ignore the things I continue to do day in and day out."

Diana is patron of 118 charities, and has been particularly involved in supporting AIDS patients, battered wives and a marriage counseling group.

The princess said she wanted to spend more time with her two boys, William,

Princess Diana said Friday that intense media intrusion into her life is forcing her to curtail her public commitments.

11, and Harry, 9. Diana and Charles, 45, who were married in St. Paul's Cathedral in 1981, announced their separation a year ago.

City rages against firm on disaster anniversary

The Associated Press

BHOPAL, India — An 18-year-old girl, coughing incessantly, struggles toward a straw-and-rag effigy of a man in a black suit and hat. She stares at it, suddenly kicks it, and the 300 people standing around her begin cheering.

They pounce on the rag doll intended to be Warren Anderson, who was chairman of Union Carbide when poisonous gas spewed out of the company's pesticide plant in Bhopal on Dec. 3, 1984.

After the crowd rips the doll to tatters, someone sets a match to it. The mourners clap their hands as the dry straw crackles.

So began the protest Friday marking the ninth anniversary of the disaster, which killed more than 4,000 people and maimed 20,000 in the world's worst industrial accident.

The anger against the U.S. company hasn't died out in this central Indian city. Many of the victims are still penniless. They have received little compensation, even after 17 courts have heard thousands of claims.

Nine years after funneling more than $75 million into relief, hospitals are still overcrowded, and widows of the victims have not received the houses the government promised them.

The demonstrators on Friday gathered in front of the pesticide factory, which was abandoned after the disaster.

"Down with Carbide!" they shouted before burning the effigy of Anderson.

Bitterness mixes with optimism as nations resume GATT talks

The Associated Press

GENEVA — Trade negotiators gathered Friday in a mood of optimism tinged with bitterness over prospects that the United States and European Community may at last overcome differences blocking a global trade accord.

"The real progress which they have indicated can lead to concrete and specific results," GATT director-general Peter Sutherland said, referring to the outcome of U.S.-EC talks in Brussels on Thursday.

At a meeting of GATT's top level Trade Negotiations Committee, he stressed that the trade giants must do more to open their markets to exports of textiles, clothing, farm and fish products from developing countries.

The meeting was held to assess the impact of the Uruguay Round trade reform package on developing countries. But — as always — news of the U.S.-EC moves dominated conversation in the corridors of GATT's lakeside headquarters.

EC ambassador Tran van Thinh tried to play-down-talk-of-a-breakthrough-in-the row over issues like cuts in farm subsidies, import duties on textiles, and financial services.

"The hard part is ahead of us, not behind us," Tran said as he entered the meeting.

France's agriculture minister, Jean Puch, also sought Friday to dampen speculation a deal was near.

Speaking on the French radio station RTL, Puch said the American offers on farm trade remain "very insufficient." French opposition to cuts in subsidies to its 1 million farmers has been a key problem in the talks.

"But the French Foreign Minister was more upbeat.

"We're out of the ice age and we started to talk," said Alain Juppe. "We want a global agreement and I hope we will have it on Monday."

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and his European counterpart Sir Leon Brittan are due to meet again in Brussels on Monday to thrash out the remaining differences.

Ukrainian nuclear arms dispute will hold up U.S. aid shipments

The Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The United States and Ukraine failed Friday to resolve a dispute over Ukraine's long-range nuclear warheads, and Secretary of State Warren Christopher said most U.S. aid to the East European country would be withheld.

Christopher offered to help work out security guarantees jointly with Russia in an effort to assure Ukraine it could give up the warheads and not fear nuclear attack from its powerful neighbor.

"We are not against tripartite negotiations," Anatoly Zlenko, the Ukrainian foreign minister, said in welcoming that effort. But Zlenko also said Ukraine needed massive economic assistance to denuclearize, and he said that the nuclear ingredients of the warheads were worth billions of dollars.

A stern-faced Christopher, talking to reporters at NATO headquarters, said "perhaps some kind of a floor" of U.S. assistance could be maintained. But he said Ukraine could not get $175 million in special congressional funds until it denuclearized and "it will be difficult" for the Clinton administration to provide $155-million in regular assistance.

Christopher said Ukraine had had to fulfill a 1992 commitment to get rid of all its long-range nuclear weapons and to adopt a free-market economy.

Zlenko said the two sides would keep searching for a solution to the dispute, which some arms control analysts say imperils the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty signed in 1990 by the United States and the Soviet Union, as well as a follow-up missile-reduction accord.

After their meeting, Christopher and Zlenko directed nuclear experts to continue the negotiations over the future of the 1,650 warheads Ukraine has on long-range missiles.

Later, Christopher said the nuclear powers should provide Ukraine with guarantees, reached a nuclear attack and that he had regained agreement with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev on trying to find "a proper formula."

Kozyrev said, meanwhile, Russia was prepared to provide "necessary security guarantees" to Ukraine if it ratified the two START treaties. "There is no problem with that," he said.

Grisly deaths of young officers shake Naval Academy

The Washington Post

People expected special things from Kerry O'Neill, George P. Smith and Alton Grizzard, who knew each other as midshipmen at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis and wound up near each other again at Navy facilities in San Diego.

O'Neill, 21, had it all, friends and teachers said: brains, looks and athletic gifts that made her a track star at the academy where she graduated last May.

Smith, 24, handsome and square-jawed, had just completed an elite program in Groton, Conn., where the Navy trains its nuclear submarine engineers.

Grizzard, 24 and a former star quarterback for Navy, would end up an admiral, predicted one official in Annapolis.

"I told people ... we would hear something great from him," said another acquaintance, David Lilleflora, a longtime friend of the popular former athlete. "That he would die in some foreign land, defending his country."

Early Wednesday morning, two days after O'Neill broke off her engagement with Smith, three lives so full of promise ended in violence.

Police say Smith, evidently distraught about the breakup of his four-year relationship, walked to O'Neill's apartment at the Naval Amphibious Base in Coronado and shot Grizzard, who was visiting her. He then shot O'Neill and finally himself, later dying in an ambulance.

Smith O'Neill Grizzard

In Annapolis on Thursday, as in O'Neill's home town of Kingston, Pa., and in Virginia Beach, Va., where Grizzard went to high school, friends and former teachers grieved over the tragedy. Smith, they said, even the best and brightest fall victim to dark emotions.

"I guess love is strange," said Pat McAndrew, a Wilkes-Barre, Pa., teacher, whose daughter attended the academy with O'Neill. "Tragic," McAndrew said over and over again. "There's no other word for this."

Karen Boyle, a cross-country coach at the academy who taught Smith in a physical education class two years ago, said he never appeared unstable. "That's why it's so shocking," Boyle said. "It's a big shock. ... He was a nice guy."

Smith and O'Neill had been separated for some months; Smith was attending nuclear submarine training school in Groton and had moved back to his native California in the last 10 days. O'Neill had moved to Coronado and reported for duty Oct. 12, according to Navy officials.

One police detective said O'Neill had wanted to end the engagement because "she said she had other plans for her life," and Smith apparently accepted her decision at first. But he was also bitter, friends of the pair told detectives. Smith tried to change her mind and wrote her a 13-page letter that was found in O'Neill's apartment that night.

The letter, in so many words, said Smith wanted O'Neill back, according to Detective Dan Winner.

Winner said the two appeared to have spoken and argued about the relationship the night before the shooting. Early Wednesday, Smith carried two guns by the security guard at the amphibious base and then by the desk clerk of Bachelor's Officer Quarters and up to O'Neill's sixth-floor studio apartment.

Grizzard apparently opened the door, detectives said; neighbors told police they heard angry words and then shots. Grizzard was shot four times before he died. He suffered a gunshot in each leg and then his midriff. He apparently staggered to the bed and then fell off the bed, police said.

Smith fired one other bullet into the back of Grizzard's head before turning to his girlfriend. O'Neill's body was found in a fetal position, hidden behind a chair on the other side of the apartment. Smith shot her at close range in the back of the head, police said.

Smith shot himself in the right temple and was found near the door of the apartment by Coronado police officers who had been alerted by a 911 call.

Grizzard, who had served three months off the coast of Somalia during Operation Hope, was assigned to a Navy Seals unit near the Naval Amphibious Base.

Smith, who had just been assigned to Coronado, was due to report for duty on the USS Salt Lake City, a nuclear submarine. O'Neill worked in Coronado as a construction maintenance officer for the Naval Facilities Engineering Command-Southwest.

Those who knew O'Neill in the small Pennsylvania town where she grew up remember her as a hard-working, record-setting cross-country runner, who could often be seen running alone on area roads.

"She was a very determined athlete — there's not a lot of glory in long-distance running," said her former high school principal, James Ferris.

fastest time on the women's cross-country course and the fastest indoor and outdoor 5,000 meters.

Like O'Neill, Grizzard was an award-winning athlete in high school in Virginia Beach. Grizzard was voted Virginia's "Football Player of the Year," according to his high school coach, Tommy Rhodes.

Friends and coaches remember Grizzard's tremendous willpower. "Some people would say he wasn't a great athlete, but what he didn't have in athletic ability, he had, I guess, in fortitude," Rhodes said.

Grizzard certainly showed his determination at Annapolis. He was the school's all-time total offense leader and became the fourth player in Navy history to rush for 2,000 yards in a career. In his senior year, Grizzard set a record by passing for 12 touchdowns.

Like O'Neill, he won the top athletic honor for a graduating male midshipman — the Naval Academy Athletic Association sword.

According to Boyle, a midshipman who declined to be identified and an O'Neill family friend, Smith and O'Neill were engaged to be married during her senior year at the academy. Smith wanted to get married last spring, but O'Neill wanted to postpone the wedding; those sources said.

Neither of the handguns that Smith had was Navy equipment. Detectives said the weapons appeared to be Smith's legal property but could not say how recently they had been purchased.

Eatery donates 600 pizzas to U.S. troops

Knight-Ridder News Service

WICHITA, Kan. — U.S. troops in Somalia should get a slice of life from the States this weekend — a piece of Pizza Hut pizza.

In an act of benevolence (with an undetermined, though certain, public relations payoff), the Wichita-based pizza maker is donating 600 large pepperoni pan pizzas to U.S. troops serving in the east African country.

The pizzas were baked and boxed Wednesday at six Philadelphia-area Pizza Hut restaurants, gathered in a refrigerated van and hauled overnight to nearby Dover Air Force Base.

Thursday morning, they were packed in dry ice and stacked on a 10-foot-square metal pallet to be loaded into the belly of a C-5 Galaxy — the Air Force's largest cargo plane, capable of holding 36 such pallets, and sometimes used to transport helicopters and tanks.

Scheduled to begin the 72-hour trip to Somalia Thursday night, the pizzas were to be unloaded there and reheated in field kitchens; a military spokesman said. Pizza Hut is providing labor and materials — 1,000 pounds of pizza dough, 5,000 ounces of sauce, 500 pounds of cheese, 30,000 slices of pepperoni and 600 boxes for the pizzas; the military is providing transportation, both ground and air.

According to Rob Doughty, Pizza Hut spokesman, the idea to donate pizzas to the troops in Somalia began with a remark made by Michael Durant, a U.S. Army helicopter pilot downed and captured last month by Somali rebels.

After his release from captivity, Durant said he wanted two things: to go home and to have a pizza.

Doughty said Pizza Hut then began to get calls from relatives of others serving in Somalia who said the troops missed pizza.

Pizza Hut has restaurants far closer to Somalia — 43 in Africa and 86 in the Middle East, including one just across the water in Yemen. But transportation and other logistical obstacles prompted the company to produce the pizzas in the United States, Doughty said.

Company officials considered making the pizzas in Wichita and shipping them out of McConnell Air Force Base, but learned the Dover base is the central shipping point for military supplies going to Somalia.

So how many slices are there in 600 large pan pizzas? At 12 slices per pizza, that's 7,200 — a slice apiece for most of the 7,550 U.S. troops stationed on land in Somalia.

TWA; in effort to boost slack season travel, cuts air fares

NEW YORK — Trans World Airlines said it is cutting ticket prices by up to 35 percent in a fare sale intended to drum up business during the post-holiday season.

Administration, automakers pursue fuel-efficient car

WASHINGTON — U.S. automakers and the Energy Department's national laboratories have signed a unique research agreement to develop a fuel-efficient car that would fuel well on the market.

The master cooperative research and development agreement was signed by the Big Three auto manufacturers and the government's 11 national laboratories.

The partnership between the government and the Big Three car companies would allow public and private resources and expertise to be pooled to achieve commercially viable vehicle technology.

The agreement signed today described standard terms and conditions so the automakers and the labs don't have to renegotiate contracts before starting each new project.

Painhandle meat processor will lose inspection stamp

Ekness guilty of adulterated, mis-branded meat

The Associated Press COEUR D'ALENE — A meat-processing business in trouble last year for mislabeling sausage will lose its federal inspection certificate at the end of the year, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said.

A civil order signed in October states that Ekness Meats & Deli will lose its federal inspection stamp Dec. 31. One of the owners, Joyce Ekness, said the company will stay in business. 'We'll be like a supermarket,' she said. 'We won't process or do any custom work. We can buy inspected meat and resell it here in our retail counter.'

Manufacturing orders continue upward move

Knight-Ridder News Service

CHICAGO — A 1.2 percent jump in October factory orders demonstrates sustained economic expansion, with the manufacturing sector no longer a drag on overall U.S. growth, analysts said Friday.

Boosted by transportation equipment orders, new orders for goods from factories rose to a record seasonally adjusted $258.4 billion, the Commerce Department said Friday. The report was in line with forecasts and consistent with strength in other recent auto-and-bolds indicators, such as the Chicago and National Association of Purchasing Management's surveys.

Rude employees, dishonest cashiers beware

Snoops go undercover for businesses seeking to polish their service

Los Angeles Times

Daniel Leisy begins complaining the moment he arrives at the restaurant. He complains about the cigarette butts on the grass outside the door. He complains about the overflowing trash basket in the restroom. He complains about the service when no one greets him at the counter.

'Mystery shoppers,' such as Daniel Leisy go undercover to ferret out rude clerks and dishonest cashiers.

He impenetrably taps a finger against his thigh until a surly teen-ager asks him for his order. Leisy inquires how the lemon and herb chicken is prepared.

'With lemon and herbs,' she says in a bored monotone, refusing to elaborate even after Leisy presses her for more information.

Leisy does more than just grripe. He surreptitiously takes notes and, when he returns to his office, fills out a detailed report that will be forwarded to the regional managers of the restaurant chain.

Leisy is a 'mystery shopper,' an undercover agent who — for a fee — explores restaurant workers, lazy department store clerks, thieving convenience store cashiers and unscrupulous auto mechanics.

After the cigarette butts, the messy bathroom and the surly teen-ager behind the counter, Leisy is exasperated. 'Can't this place do anything right? Just when he is about to lose all faith, he orders the chicken and a salad and approaches the cashier at day. Businesses have to improve service to about 1,500 three years ago. The number of mystery shoppers in the country — about 200 — has tripled in the last five years, according to management experts.

The cashier, a teen-age girl, smiles broadly, hands him back his credit card slip and says cheerfully, 'Would you please sign here, sir?' Leisy begins ruminating about the cashier as soon as he is seated.

Good economic news spurs inflation fears

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lurched ahead slightly Friday reflecting investors' mixed feelings in the face of robust economic news that raised concerns about inflation and interest rates.

Most measures of stock activity stayed within narrow ranges throughout an ambivalent session. The Dow Jones industrial finished 1.96 higher at 3,704.07, which was 20.12 points above the week before's level.

Broader measures fared a little better and advancing issues solidly outnumbered declines — by about a 7-to-5 margin — on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE composite index rose 0.90 to 256.74 and ended with a gain for the week of 1.13 points. Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 1.78 to 464.89 and added 1.83 in the week.

Stocks were strongest on the Nasdaq market where the composite index climbed 5.49 to 772.22 and rose 17.35 in the week. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 2.47 to 465.32 and was up 1.85 in the week.

Trading was moderately active and volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 268.34 million shares as of 4 p.m. EST compared to 259.08 million Thursday.

Dominating investor attention was a Labor Department report that showed the nation's unemployment rate fell to 6.4 percent in November from 6.8 percent in October, the biggest month-to-month improvement in a decade. A survey of businesses done in conjunction with the job report showed non-farm payrolls expanded by 208,000 in the month, a larger gain than predicted.

A separate Commerce Department report showed that the government's chief economic forecasting gauge rose 0.5 percent in October, the third straight increase.

The increase in the Index of Leading Indicators was taken as a harbinger of continued growth in the new year.

Stock investors were relieved that the bond market managed to shrug off any disappointment over the data. Treasury notes and bonds rose moderately, keeping a lid on short- and long-term interest rates.

Investors snapped up an issue making its debut on the NYSE. A huge new offering of 60 million shares in PacTel Corp., a unit spun off from Pacific Telesis, closed at 25K, up from its initial price of 23 a share. About 25 million shares of the new issue changed hands, making it the NYSE volume leader by far.

On the Nasdaq, 3Com Corp. was active and spurred 74 to 42½ after the computer network products company made an upbeat financial forecast.

"He said 'sir,' He said 'please.' He smiled," Leisy pauses and shakes his head in wonderment at the rare display of outstanding service. "He was a shining star. Got me 20 more of him and I'll make every customer in this restaurant happy."

Leisy's ebullient mood quickly changes. The waiter should stop by his table within three minutes to see what else he needs, according to National Shopping Service's calculations for good service. It takes the waiter 11 minutes. His meal should be delivered within 16 minutes. It takes the waiter 19. The dirty table next to him should be cleared within two minutes. It takes the busboy four.

Midway through the meal, Leisy orders a carafe of wine. He wants to see if the waiter rings it up on his bill, or just pockets the money. The waiter passes the test. But a minute later, as Leisy returns to the salad bar, a busboy, assuming he has left, clears the remnants of Leisy's dinner, including the half-full carafe of wine.

The waiter, and later the manager, apologize profusely. They bring him more wine. Leisy is momentarily appeased, but before long he resumes griping. There was too much water in the salad bowl. His plate was stained. No one brought him after-dinner mints.

Although all these gaffes might be viewed as venial sins, Leisy spots something in the corner of the restaurant that he considers a mortal offense. A busboy has left a mop beside the dessert tray for four minutes. "That's awful," he says, throwing up his hands in despair. "That's not much of an incentive to order dessert."

There was a time, management experts say, when dining out was not such a misadventure. America's golden age of personal service came in the years after World War II when prices were stable and labor was relatively cheap. Businesses could afford to hire additional personnel so shoppers would feel pampered, and they often treated customers to extras such as free delivery.

During the 1970s, a period of rampant inflation, many customers were willing to sacrifice service in return for lower prices, management experts say. Discount retailers such as K mart and Wal-Mart flourished, and other businesses began cutting payrolls so they could compete.

By the 1980s, a decade of great expansion and hostile takeovers, few seemed to care about the customer. Jay-Leno used to tell audiences that when he reminded a supermarket checker that she was supposed to say thank you, she snapped: "It's printed on your receipt!"

This was the nadir of American customer service — and also the turning point, Berry said. Many service-oriented businesses suffered the same calamitous fate as the nation's manufacturers, for many of the same reasons — a myopic approach and indifference to quality.

When manufacturing companies began addressing their shortfalls, it prompted service industries to also evaluate and improve their operations, management experts say. The recession added a further incentive.

Because of this renewed emphasis on service, the 1990s have been called the Decade of the Customer by business management gurus. Dozens of books about service have been released this year — including "The Customer Is Boss" and "Sustaining and Knock Your Socks Off Service." And customer service mavens have suddenly found themselves in heavy demand to give speeches at sales seminars.

"Service has gotten better recently — through necessity," Berry said. "Customers in greater numbers are thumbing their noses at firms that provide poor service. They simply won't take it anymore."

The Chicago purchasers' November adjusted index rose to 65.3 percent and the national index increased to 55.7 percent.

Based on Friday's November employment data and the factory orders report, "we're seeing a period of self-sustaining economic expansion," said Stan Shipley, an economist with Lehman Bros. in New York.

Excluding its transportation components, factory orders rose 0.6 percent in October after a 1.0 percent increase in September. Transportation equipment orders gained 5.9 percent in October.

Also showing strength were electronic equipment orders, which rose 3.9 percent.

However, the gain in electronic orders was restrained by an 11.5 percent drop in orders for communications equipment, which had risen 20.0 percent in September.

Computer and office equipment orders were up 6.1 percent.

October durable goods orders were revised to a 2.0 percent increase, up from an initially reported 2.0 percent gain in the durable goods orders report Nov. 24.

"The pace of orders has really picked up," noted Steve Wood, a senior economist at BA Securities in San Francisco. "We're beginning to see an accelerating trend, which helps build a case for growth in 1994."

Wood said estimates for 1994 first- and second-quarter gross domestic product "continue to be ratcheted up." He now expects first-quarter GDP to be up 2.5 to 3.0 percent, compared with a forecast of up 2.0 percent to 2.5 percent a couple of weeks ago.

His estimate for 1993 fourth-quarter GDP stands at a growth rate of 4.0 to 4.5 percent.

"Circumstances alter cases."
— Sam Slick

The best way to play today's trump combination depends not only upon the cards themselves, but on the resources available in dummy. If you have two or more dummy entries, it's right to play in one way. If you have only one dummy entry, the circumstances are completely different.

South ruffs the second diamond, and his only problem involves avoiding the loss of three trump tricks.

When dummy holds two sure entries, the best play is routine: declarer crosses to dummy twice to lead a small trump twice toward his honors. This ensures success when the ace, king or 10 is singleton in either hand.

When dummy holds only one entry (the club king), the situation changes. When South crosses to dummy to lead a trump and East plays the eight, South should play his nine, not an honor. Why? If West has a singleton 10, the play of an honor wins. If he has a singleton ace or king, the finesse of the nine wins. Since a singleton ace or king is twice as likely as a singleton 10, the odds are 2-1 in favor of finessing the nine.

Note that all trump plays win when trumps are 2-2, and all lose when they are 4-0. The relevant distributions are the 3-1 splits, and the finesse to the nine is the percentage play.

ANSWER: Two clubs. Playing 16-18 HCP one no-trumps, look for a possible spade game. If your range is 15-17 HCP, a timid pass is a better bet.

Thanks to public and private recycling systems, more than one third of the newsprint used in the U.S. last year was recycled - into cardboard boxes, egg cartons, insulation or newsprint again.

Recycled newspapers save resources, tax dollars and energy. America's newspapers support recycling.

And that's good news.

Read. Then recycle.
