U.S. aims for N. Korean sanctions

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Even while praising Chinese cooperation, the Clinton administration vowed Monday to seek international economic penalties against North Korea if it fails to open suspect nuclear facilities to inspection.

In the meantime, though, U.S. officials are hopeful that negotiations with North Korea will pay off with a pledge to declare the Korean peninsula a nuclear-free zone. Last week, however, the Central Intelligence Agency was reported to have concluded North Korea already may have one or two nuclear bombs.

The Clinton administration has engaged China's help in trying to persuade North Korea to permit International Atomic Energy Agency inspectors to visit the suspect sites. At the same time, the Chinese government again has registered its opposition to economic sanctions against North Korea through the U.N. Security Council.

A State Department spokesman, David Johnson, said "basically there is nothing new or different" about China's attitude. And, he said, "China has played a constructive role in the efforts to persuade North Korea to clear up doubts about its nuclear intentions."

He said that there is no disagreement with Beijing that negotiations are the best way to seek a solution, and that the Clinton administration would keep working with China to persuade North Korea to give way.

However, Johnson said, reading from a prepared statement, "as we have said before, if the U.S.-North Korea dialogue fails we have no choice but to return the issue to the Security Council, if that becomes necessary."

China could block sanctions in the council by exercising its veto. Beijing has traditionally been reluctant to impose sanctions, but it has abstained in other situations in the past, permitting the council to proceed.

Nuclear talks making progress

The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Significant progress has been made in talks between the United States and North Korea on easing tensions on the Korean peninsula, South Korea's foreign minister said Monday.

But Han Sang-joo said it was unclear whether the progress would be enough to resolve the dispute over the Communist North's refusal to accept international inspections of its nuclear facilities.

"I would say the chances of resolving the nuclear problem are 51 to 49," Han told reporters.

North Korea's refusal to allow inspections increased fears in the region that the hard-line Marxist state was trying to build nuclear weapons. North Korea denied having an atomic weapons program.

The United States and North Korea held talks in New York last week on resolving the nuclear tensions.

"The differences in the U.S. and North Korea positions are not enough to cause a deadlock in the negotiations," Han said. "The situation is a lot brighter now than it was one or two months ago."

But he said tough negotiations remained over terms for North Korea to accept full inspections.

North Korea is thought to want improved relations with the United States and help for its struggling economy.

A team of Belgian draft horses draws a sled over the snow-covered farm of Jeff Dufort near Grand Rapids, Mich., where the weekend outings went ahead despite temperatures in the single digits and wind chills of well below zero. Dufort said the conditions kept his passengers 'pretty cold' despite warm clothing.

Even hardy Minnesotans freeze out

The Associated Press

The season's strongest blast of frigid air dropped temperatures to nearly 40 below zero Monday, thickening diesel oil to jelly in truck fuel tanks and even forcing hardy Minnesotans to concede it was too cold for a parade.

"People can freeze to death in this kind of weather," said Kelley Cronin, director of Boston's Emergency Shelter Commission, which opened city-run shelters Monday that normally are closed during the day. The wind chill made it feel like 15 below zero.

The cold forced cancellation of Monday night's Holidazzle parade in downtown Minneapolis; part of a series of celebrations held since Thanksgiving to attract holiday shoppers to downtown.

"It's an eight-block parade and along the route the families and children were bundled up in blankets and were out there being spirited Minnesotans but we didn't want to put them through that again tonight," parade director Todd Klingel said.

The wind chill during Sunday night's parade was in the 30s. Please see COLD/A2

Twin births to woman, 59, spark ethics questions

The Associated Press

LONDON — A 59-year-old British woman, who was artificially impregnated with eggs from a younger woman, gave birth to twins on Christmas Day, becoming the oldest woman on record to have a child.

The birth, however, did not result in public tidings of joy, but criticism from some members of the medical community who question the ethics of test-tube pregnancies among older women.

The case "bordered on the Frankenstein syndrome," said Dr. John Marks, the former chairman of the British Medical Association's ethics committee. He added that the woman would be 69 when her children were 10 years old.

The woman's birth was reported Monday by British newspapers. She was turned down for fertility treatment by the ethics committee, which ruled she was too old for the emotional strain of pregnancy, The Sun newspaper said.

But she refused to give up and consulted an Italian doctor who specializes in helping women who have gone through menopause have children.

The Sun said the case is similar to that of Mary Shearing, who was 53 years old when she gave birth to twins in Anaheim, Calif., on Nov. 10, 1992.

Dr. Severino Antinori runs a private clinic in Rome and had helped 35 women aged 48 to 55 to become mothers. He told her there was a 25 percent chance of success, The Sun said.

The woman became pregnant at the age of 58 when eggs donated by an Italian woman in her 20s were fertilized by her husband's sperm and implanted in her.

The Sun said the case is similar to that of Mary Shearing, who was 53 years old when she gave birth to twins in Anaheim, Calif., on Nov. 10, 1992.

Test-tube pregnancies for older women have raised several social and medical questions, including if such procedures are fair to the children; if they are the best use of limited medical resources; and if they pose too high a risk to older women.

Health Secretary Virginia Bottomley said the treatment would not be allowed in Britain for a post-menopausal woman.

EPA official questions area's 'sustainability'

By Analise Taylor Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A federal official warns that the Magic Valley's use of natural resources may endanger the viability of the area over the next 50 to 75 years.

"There are increasing concerns and signs of problems relative to water quality and quantity issues, groundwater contamination, loss of topsoil, urban growth (and) economic viability of smaller communities," says Gary O'Neal, director of environmental sustainability in the Seattle office of the Environmental Protection Agency.

In a proposal sent to the area's government, agricultural and industrial leaders, O'Neal has recommended that people and businesses work to build "sustainability" in the environment and the economy.

"There currently does not exist in the Magic Valley area any sort of integrated focus and perspective with respect to long-term environmental, economic, and community sustainability," O'Neal said.

The first step may be a "major conference," planned for Feb. 9 in Twin Falls to promote "sustainability."

"This conference will have as its objective initiating a dialogue on creating a vi-

'There are so many agendas coming out of Washington that I think state governments are being cautious about these ... initiatives.'

— State Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly

sion of long-term sustainable development for Idaho," O'Neal said.

The workshop will include speakers from around the United States discussing ways that industries and agriculture can reduce pollution.

"The 'sustainability effort' could build on existing initiatives such as the attempt to create a Snake River pollution-control program known as the 'nutrient management plan,' according to O'Neal's proposal.

"The public discussion of the proposed Nutrient Management Plan will further heighten awareness of some of the needs and options in this area," O'Neal's proposal says.

Owner's will leaves her cat living the feline good life

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — When Ann Morgan died and left her $500,000 estate to a male, much younger companion, there were no complaints.

The beneficiary was her cat, Tinker. Morgan's will stipulates that her apartment be maintained and a caretaker be hired for Tinker, a fluffy white Turkish Angora type she described as "my best friend and companion."

"She felt that once you took an animal, it was a lifelong commitment," said Ruth Ward, a friend of Morgan's.

Morgan, 74, died in May — a month after putting Tinker in her will. After Tinker's death, the balance of Morgan's $500,000 estate will go to charity.

Morgan never married and lived alone. She got Tinker about 10 years ago after a long succession of dogs.

"This cat was Ann's life," Ward said. "At the time she got Tinker, Ann was not feeling well and was depressed. The kitten gave her a reason to keep living. You could see the smile return to her face after she brought it home," Ward said.

Morgan's estate will pay for the $385 monthly rent on the apartment, a caretaker's salary, Tinker's vet bills, and his eventual burial at a pet cemetery.

Dorothy Mulken is the caretaker for Tinker, the 11-year-old cat whose late owner provided for his care in her will.

Clinton: Gun policies don't affect hunting

TAYLOR'S ISLAND, Md. (AP) — President Clinton set out on hunting expedition Monday with eight men, a yellow Labrador retriever, a pickup truck, lots of camouflage and a borrowed gun.

But he returned after two hours in sub-freezing weather with only one duck.

"We only shot at one — and we got one," he said.

Clinton credited one of his companions, Rep. Bill Brewster, D-Oklahoma, with the kill.

"It's a community duck," Brewster said diplomatically. "It's the president's duck," he added.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., an avid hunter like Brewster, also was in the shooting party, along with aides and John Tieder Jr., owner of the Fruit Hill Farm hunting lodge on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

The two-hour automobile trip from the White House to the lodge began before dawn, with a platoon of reporters in tow.

The president stopped at a store on the way to buy a $41 three-day duck hunting permit, some car plugs and a duck call.

Clinton said he thought the hunt would shore up support for his gun-control policies among hunters.

"It makes the point I've been making all along — that it doesn't have anything to do with hunting," Clinton said. "My policies don't have anything to do with hunting." The president supports a ban on

President Clinton prepares to leave Taylor's Island, Md., Monday after a two-hour duck hunt. some semi-automatic weapons and multi-clip rounds of ammunition. The administration also is considering higher fees for gun dealers and requiring gun buyers to pass proficiency tests.

Brewster, a National Rifle Association board member, said the trip came about because Clinton had told him he was looking for a place to hunt quail, ducks and turkey, like he did in Arkansas. Clinton does not have a reputation for being an avid hunter.

The men, wearing thigh-high waders and camouflage clothes, were jammed into one truck. Clinton had borrowed a 12-gauge Winchester shotgun from Brewster.

Reporters were kept in the lodge about 500 yards from the duck blind, and could not hear any shots. A few locals warming themselves in front of the fire predicted ducks would be scarce on the cold, windless morning.

And sure enough, the president and his party returned from the blind with little to show. After a hearty round of back-slapping, the men went into the lodge and ate a huge lunch breakfast of venison sausage, creamed chipped beef, eggs, ham and biscuits.

In the bed of the pickup was one dead mallard, which was left at the lodge to be dressed. The president and his party were sent home with some ducks that had already been dressed.

On the road in front of the lodge, Heidi Prescott from The Fund for Animals, Inc., picketed to protest the hunt.

Former Teamsters boss Dave Beck dies at 99

SEATTLE (AP) — Dave Beck, the scrappy labor chief who helped make the Teamsters a force to be reckoned with and was the first of the union's leaders to run afoul of federal corruption laws, has died at age 99.

Beck died Sunday at Northwest Hospital of old age," said family friend Martha Mues, who was reached by telephone Monday at the Beck home in Seattle.

Beck led the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America from 1952 through 1957.

"Labor is a business," he said. "You've only got one thing. You sell your labor for the best price in the marketplace based on the ability of industry to pay and your organized strength to command it."

He was convicted of a state embezzlement charge and federal tax charges and served 2 1/2 years in prison. But he remained unrepentant, saying in a 1983 interview: "Beck gave his best to the American labor movement. If I had it to do all over again, I'd do it exactly the same way."

Beck appeared before the Senate Rackets Committee in 1957, accused by its chief counsel, Robert F. Kennedy, of illegally commanding $300,000 in union funds. He denied the charges, invoking the Fifth Amendment against self incrimination 142 times.

Medicare looks for way to lower HMO costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a test case for health care reform, the Clinton administration is racing to find a way to stop losing money on Medicare patients who enroll in health maintenance organizations.

"Our system for paying HMOs is just wildly inadequate," Bruce Vladeck, head of the Health Care Financing Administration that runs Medicare and who helped create President Clinton's reform package, said Monday.

"We think it's technically harder for Medicare, but it's an issue everywhere and we're very conscious of it," Vladeck added.

HMOs are supposed to save money by charging a flat fee for a year's worth of health care. But Medicare pays 5.7 percent more for HMOs than it would cost to pay the patients' doctors directly, according to a four-year, HCFA-funded study. The reason: The flat fee is close to the amount Medicare pays for average recipients, even though those who enroll in HMOs tend to be healthier and thus use fewer services.

Any health care reform plan, including Clinton's proposed HMO-style, large health alliances, must carefully adjust payment rates to reflect the actual services used if it is to save money, said the study's author, Randall Brown.

"Some people think HMOs are the panacea, and our results say no, it costs money to save money," Brown said. "You have to set the payment rate right. ... Otherwise you have chaos."

The study prompted Vladeck to announce that Medicare won't promote HMOs for its patients until he finds a better way of paying for it, probably not before 1995. "We're pulling out all the stops" to find that method, Vladeck said.

On Saturday, 10 HMOs that serve Medicare patients in five cities will begin offering alternate payment plans. One follows Brown's suggestion that HCFA adjust its payments to reflect the lower incidence of such costly diseases as cancer, heart disease and stroke among its HMO patients.

The cities are Rochester, N.Y.; Minneapolis; St. Paul, Minn.; Seattle; and Portland, Ore.

Clinton's legislation calls for policymakers to find new, cost-saving payment methods for managed care. Whatever method works for Medicare, whose elderly patients need more care than the general population, would work for the nation, Vladeck said.

"There's no question we will do better," he said. "The only question is how long it takes us."

Medicare began allowing its beneficiaries to enroll in HMOs a decade ago, saying the plans should cost 5 percent less than the traditional fee-for-service method and improve quality of care.

Brown's study agreed the HMOs provided good care; the savings just weren't there.

Currently, Medicare determines its HMO payments by calculating the past year's expenditures, adjusting for each county's rank in those payments and then adjusting for the age and sex of enrollees.

That method underpays HMOs in some parts of the country and overpays others, said Charles Stellar, president of the 500-member trade group American Managed Care and Review Association.

It used to be that a store would hold a big once-a-year sale, offering its goods at lower than regular prices to clear out old inventory.

There was real value in these sales, so they were hugely popular, filling the store with customers.

Then, one day, during a slow period, some clever businessman must have had an idea: he would inflate his regular prices and then hold sales more often, claiming to offer big discounts while still making a hefty profit.

He figured the customers would never catch on.

Perhaps he was right, since today this has become a standard business practice for many of the eyewear retailers.

Every week, it seems, they have a different discount coupon or half-price special.

That's not the way we do business. We work hard to run our business as efficiently as we can, so we can offer rock bottom prices and real eyewear value.

Party treats can be toxic for kids with fatal allergies

DEAR ABBY: As a practicing allergist, I would like to make parents, hosts and hostesses for party and birthday parties aware that they should be extremely careful with children who are allergic to various foods.

I once had a young boy as a patient who was severely allergic to peanuts. He and his mother regarded this with extreme caution, but once, while attending a birthday party, his allergy proved fatal.

His mother had informed the hostess about "Billy's" allergy and strictly ordered that he not eat anything containing peanuts. The hostess agreed not to feed Billy any such food. Unfortunately, other ladies were helping with the party. One handed out homemade peanut-butter cookies and insisted Billy try one. He tried to refuse, but she insisted. Less than 30 minutes later, Billy was dead.

I want to use this horribly sad incident to warn anyone who is helping with children's activities to please be cautious with your own children as well as others'. Anyone who hands out treats to children, please be aware of the dangers involved. Make certain that the children you serve are not allergic to any foods so they don't end up like Billy.

— CLAUDE A. FRAZIER, M.D., ASHEVILLE, N.C.
DEAR DR. FRAZIER: Thank you for a warning that applies all year around. I'm printing your letter in the hope that once alerted, other parents can prevent a similar tragedy.

DEAR ABBY: I am in a bit of a dilemma and need your advice.

Dear Abby
 Abigail VanBuren

My husband and I have been happily married for 10 years. I am 30 and my husband is 38, and we have three beautiful, healthy children.

I have agreed to become a surrogate mother for a married woman who has unsuccessfully tried to have a baby for 10 years. I have discussed this with my husband, and he is agreeable. (The egg and sperm will be the other couple's — they are just using my body as an incubator.) I will be paid $5,000 when my pregnancy is confirmed, and $5,000 after the baby is born. All my pregnancies and deliveries have been relatively easy.

When I told my mother about this, she said, "Have you lost your mind? If you go through with this, I don't want to see you in that condition."

I told her she could live her own life, and let me live mine. Abby, your column isn't long enough to describe the emotional abuse my mother has put me through since all this started. What is your advice?

— NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE
DEAR NO NAME: I think the advice you gave your mother — to live her own life and let you live yours — was sensible and to the point. Surrogate motherhood is not about renting one's womb; it's about helping a woman fulfill her dream of motherhood.

Finding love in a stress-filled world

Romance still exerts strong pull on heartstrings of single adult population

Seattle Times

Jettisoned into the living rooms of millions of television viewers last month, five Seattle widowers, marked as potential "Sleepless in Seattle" romances, talked about grief and their late wives.

They were a kayaking aerospace engineer; a computer systems analyst and father of two; an attorney with a love for opera; and an accountant and father of one; and a soft-spoken young doctor who enjoys running. All, despite the probing eye of a camera beaming their images to the Oprah Winfrey show's estimated 14 million viewers, rated high on the vulnerability scale. It was a potent mix.

Oprah, matchmaker of the moment, encouraged women and interested in meeting the five to write. And, despite the probing eye of a camera beaming their images to the Oprah Winfrey show's estimated 14 million viewers, rated high on the vulnerability scale. It was a potent mix.

And, to the satisfaction of an audience sifting over the notion of real-life romance unfolding before their eyes, each man's choice was revealed. Jeff, the young doctor who alone received 40,000 letters, was a new national heart-throb, Oprah said.

It was talk TV at its giddy best. According to show spokeswoman Colleen Raleigh, Oprah's "Sleepless in Seattle" program was one of the most popular of the new season, with ratings several notches higher than the norm.

Not surprising, given the nation's preoccupation with romance. In the '90s, the Noah's Ark syndrome — the desire to go through life two-by-two — prevails.

Today, with 39 percent of the nation's adult population single — 33 million men and about 40 million women — the Big R has hit the media mainstream.

Both men and women are reading books like the best-selling romance "Bridges of Madison County," watching movies like "Sleepless in Seattle" and dozens of love-themed TV shows, and placing and answering classified ads at a steady clip.

In fact, the SM/NSTD (single male, no sexually-transmitted diseases) looking for the SF/NSTD of his dreams, once the turf of the alternative press, can be found in newspapers as mainstream as the Seattle Times and the Washington Post.

The theme is also evident in the popularity of romance-hero pinup calendars, dating services, matchmakers and vacations earmarked for singles.

There are a number of theories why. "I think the romances we see now are a break from the serious issues we have to deal with today. A kinder, gentler emotional world is something we long for from time to time," said Pepper Schwartz, a professor of sociology at the University of Washington.

In a tough economy, two paychecks are better than one; monogamy cuts down the risk of sexually transmitted diseases like AIDS; and when relationships are all they should be, they're emotional havens in a stress-filled world.

According to Schwartz, the romantic tales of the '90s are like the sweet romantic tales of the World War II years, which by the time the politically charged '60s and '70s came around, seemed without substance and beside the point.

Laura Kastner, clinical associate professor in the University of Washington's psychology department, agrees.

"We need more 'up' movies right now," she said.

Romantic fiction has been at the forefront of the trend. Today 46 percent of all mass-market paperback are romances. While romantic tales date to the days of Shakespeare, today's romances are considerably different from Kathleen Woodiwiss' "The Flame and the Flower," which launched the paperback romance genre in the '70s.

Rape is no longer acceptable. Women are stronger, and instead of always being of wealth and privilege, may be ordinary people in extraordinary circumstances. They may have stepchildren, a sexual history, a past.

Some, like Sandra Brown's "French Silk" about a lingerie company owner who is suspected of murdering a tele-vangelist (the love interest is the prosecutor), are being made into TV movies.

Many are national best sellers, like Woodiwiss' "So Worthy My Love" and "Fever in Your Embrace" and Julie Garwood's "Saving Grace," about a victim of domestic violence.

While the average romance reader is 39, has a 50 percent chance of being college educated and has an annual household income of $40,000, according to the American Booksellers Association, men are reading them, too.

"I think what's interesting about 'Bridges of Madison County' is that men have read it and liked it," said Ellen Berscheid, a professor at the University of Minnesota. "This goes along with a lot of things. The whole women's liberation movement has liberated men, too, to show the softer side."

Champion of the literary soft side is a 6-foot, 3-inch Italian hunk of hubby-hubba named Fabio. He's the creation of Avon Books, which a few years ago put him on the covers of their romance novels. An estimated 55 million paperback later, Fabio has his own 900 number on which fans can call to hear him whisper sweet nothings at $1.99 a minute. He's collaborated on a book, "Prize," complete with a centerfold and billed as his own romantic fantasy. He also has his own brand of cologne, "Mediterranean." He has been promoting it in department stores across the country.

"A TV show is in the works and more books like 'Prize'." "The idea is that he's written a book he can star in," said Ellen Edwards, senior editor at Avon Books. "He becomes the embodiment of women's fantasies... a great marketing tool."

And it works. "We've become much more adept at marketing fantasy," said Schwartz. "A lot of women out there are having trouble dealing with the world as it is. Many don't feel they're going to get what they want in real life. They may live in a world where men don't conform to their needs for tenderness and the only place they can get it is on 'Oprah' or in books or movies."

The fantasy man "is only looking for one woman. There is no competition. No doubts. He will find you and will change your life forever."

The media-spun illusions make love seem brighter during exotic vacations than back home over the breakfast table; book-cover heroes more exciting than the humble soul in the fishing hat; and matchmakers magicians capable of bringing fantasies to life.

Seattle's Ken Palmer, 72, delivers fantasy.

As a gentleman host for the Royal Cruise Line, Palmer, a retired accountant, is dancing his way around the world in a setting as perfect as the sheen of his dress shoes, the paper crispness of his white dinner jacket and the sensuousness of his samba.

His job and that of the other six or so hosts is to dance with the older, single women passengers, many of whom haven't danced in years. While as a host he cannot show any one guest too much attention or become romantically involved, he can — and has — made contacts who became friends offshore.

He, like other hosts, has had offers of marriage.

Kastner believes fantasy's success is linked to our view of relationships.

"If you look at the institution of marriage, we're asking more and more of our relationships today. Fifty years ago a woman married to have someone to provide for her and a man married to have a family. Now we want equality, good sex, good communication and common interests."

In 1950, the wife had her bridge club and the husband was a workaholic who played golf on Wednesdays.

"Today, women divorce their husbands, for being workaholics," Kastner said. "Unstated love, like the affair between the Midwestern housewife and the National Geographic photographer in 'Bridges of Madison County,' appears better."

It's the love-is-blind phase when "you are absolutely perfect." And the reason is, "because I don't know you very well," she said.

Study: Suicide rate for blacks, women higher than thought

The Washington Post

Blacks and women may be committing suicide more than official records show, but concealing the fact by using methods that appear to be accidental causes of death, according to a sociologist at the University of California at San Diego.

Historically, those two groups have posted relatively low official suicide rates, a finding that has puzzled psychologists who would have guessed that racism and sexism impose significant stresses that white males never feel.

The UCSD study suggests that the true suicide rate of African Americans could be as much as 15 percent higher than reported and that of women 6 percent higher.

The findings were based on a method that UCSD's David P. Phillips has used before to uncover concealed suicides. It is based on the theory that people who are already depressed are more likely to kill themselves as they reach the symbolically important ages of 30, 40, 50, 60 and so on.

"Many persons reaching symbolic ages reflect on whether they have achieved the goals they set for themselves earlier in their life," Phillips said. "Taking stock on these occasions is likely to make certain people feel that they have failed...."

Phillips' earlier research using California death certificates showed that obvious suicides peak during those ages. More suicides are recorded among people at symbolic ages than would be expected if people were equally likely to kill themselves at any age.

When Phillips looked at other causes of death, he found the same pattern of peaks in certain cases: accidental poisoning or drug overdose, single-car crashes and pedestrian deaths. Deaths from natural causes and multiple-car crashes showed no such peaks.

When he examined the figures by race and sex, the peaks were especially high among blacks and women.

Phillips published his findings in winter issue of Suicide and Life-Threatening Behavior, the journal of the American Association of Suicidology.

Lottery hasn't become magic bullet for schools

What if you had gone to the county assessor's office earlier this month to pay your taxes, only to find that just one-fourth of the money was actually being used to teach your kids, keep the courthouse lights on and pay the bureaucrats?

The rest would go to a promotional campaign to get other taxpayers to pony up, and to a series of incentives to entice them to do so.

Is this any way to run government? It is at the Idaho Lottery Commission.

The Times-News reported earlier this week that just 26.1 percent of the money that Magic Valley residents spent on Lottery tickets in 1992 came back in the form of direct assistance to Magic Valley schools and colleges.

And in some smaller counties, the percentage was far worse.

Blaine County residents, for example, bought $3.1 million worth of Lottery tickets last year. Blaine County schools got $255,900 back.

That's a minus-92 percent return on investment. Consequently the Lottery money makes up an insignificant fraction of the Blaine County School District budget.

While it's true that the Lottery is a model of administrative efficiency and a cash cow to boot, it hasn't lived up to the lavish expectations of those who supported establishing it in 1988.

Back then, the supposed goal was to provide lots more money for Idaho's schools. Now, though, too little Lottery money is being pumped into the schools to significantly raise educational quality. The Lottery provides just enough to make schools dependent upon it.

Worse, the widespread perception that the Lottery enriches Idaho education has made it harder for school districts to raise money through bond issues and overrides.

The simple fact is that the Lottery has been, primarily, good for the Lottery.

In four years, it has collected $227 million in ticket sales. From that, $117.5 million, or 51.8 percent, went to prize money. Some $60.5 million, or 26.6 percent, went to the schools.

Sixty million is a considerable amount, but at that rate it'll take more than 450 years to come up with the $7 billion that Idaho is estimated to need for school construction.

Five years into the Lottery, the hard truth is that there are still no shortcuts to education funding. How much Idahoans spend on their schools still depends almost completely on how much Idahoans wish to be taxed.

And if the Lottery is here to stay, so is the myth that we Idahoans have succeeded in wishing our way out of tough decisions.

There are no magic bullets, and both the governor and the Lottery Commission should stop selling the Lottery as such. It's a disservice both to the ticket buyers and to Idaho's kids.

The (un)making of President Clinton

Bob Levey, a local Washington, D.C., radio talk show host, tried his best to defend President Clinton against charges by two Arkansas state troopers that they helped him arrange clandestine sexual encounters and then assisted in concealing them until the day he left Little Rock for his inauguration.

On his program early in the week, Levey denounced the troopers and their motives for coming forward to talk to The American Spectator and the networks. "They're writing a book," he said (though no contracts have been signed). "Why didn't they say something earlier if their motivation was anything other than financial?"

After a lengthy monologue in which he stated flatly that the story is a lie and that nothing happened, Levey invited calls to the station's computerized survey lines. Listeners called the "yes" number if they believed the stories about Clinton and the "no" number if they did not.

In one hour, the station recorded 818 calls from listeners affirming their belief in the troopers and 368 who did not believe them. A station employee told me so many calls were coming into the "yes" line that they rolled over to other numbers and were not counted as yes votes. So, she said, the number of "yeses" was probably much higher than 818.

Levey said too many of us are "voyeurs," and that's why we like these stories. But the American people are not stupid about these things. They don't need iron-clad evidence to sense that something is amiss. Voters were worried about character questions during the campaign, manifested in the debate over Clinton's draft record, his sex life and frequent shading of the truth on many subjects. Enough voters took a chance with Clinton to elect him, but many now appear to be rethinking their position.

Clinton defenders, like Levey, ask for corroborating evidence, such as public statements by the women allegedly involved. Their silence is taken as proof there is nothing to the troopers' stories. But it isn't easy to challenge the power of a President or presidential candidate. Jobs can be lost; careers damaged or ruined.

It isn't just the sex, as bad as that is for Clinton and his family if it is true. Adultery is not an impeachable offense. But personal immorality is bound to spill over into other areas of public behavior. That is why we are hearing serious questions raised about possible cover-ups and stonewalling in the Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan mess in Little Rock, Ark., an institution allegedly used as a "private piggybank" by Gov. Clinton and his friends to underwrite campaign costs and for personal loans, some of them allegedly not repaid.

A New York Times editorial gets to the heart of the matter: "This is a man who rode into Washington on a pledge to end politics as usual, and every time the White House dodges inquiries about the old days in Arkansas, reasonable people begin to wonder about a cover-up and Mr. Clinton's sincerity." Reasonable people wonder about these things, not just right-wing wackos.

President Clinton likes to compare himself to John F. Kennedy. Leaving the similarities in their sexual behavior aside, he may soon be compared to Richard Nixon, whose main problem became not so much the acts he committed, but the attempts to cover them up. In the end, the cover-up did him in.

This is the potential danger for Bill Clinton. As charges mount, the tendency is to circle the wagons and rely on those closest to the President to protect him. Nixon's closest aides believed they were safe as long as the Justice Department was staffed with their allies.

One of those aides, Special Counsel Charles Colson, told me: "We thought ourselves invulnerable as long as we had John Mitchell or Richard Kleindienst in our Justice Department. It was only when Elliott Richardson appointed Kennedy-activist Archibald Cox (special prosecutor) that the roof caved in. Before that we knew that no one in-house would blow the whistle."

All the more reason why principal Republicans and Democrats in Congress should call for an independent prosecutor and/or congressional hearings (so far denied by House Banking Chairman Henry Gonzalez) to pursue the growing pile of allegations about President Clinton's dealings with Madison Guaranty S&L. That is the least required to clear the air.

Cal Thomas is a Los Angeles Times columnist.

'93 proves eloquence, wit remain in political dialogue

Closing out another talky year in Clintontville with a few one-liners worth recalling, and a couple that shouldn't be forgotten:

"The plan is really a Doctor Kevorkian prescription for the jobs of American working men and women." - Rep. Richard Arney, R-Texas, on the Clinton health care proposal.

"I'm sure you will do that, you and Doctor Kevorkian." - Hillary Rodham Clinton to Arney when he pledged at a congressional hearing to make the health care debate "exciting."

"If you think health care is expensive now, wait until it's free." - humorist P.J. O'Rourke.

"Use your whole brain." - Ross Perot to Vice President Al Gore in the NAFTA debate.

Speak out against Fish, Game

A small group of sportsmen, after listening to numerous complaints about Idaho's Fish and Game Department, decided all the talk in the world wouldn't accomplish a single change. After conducting a "poll," it was decided to start a petition to bring about some of the changes so many had talked about.

Earl Etter and Dennis Frisby drafted a petition to ask for the removal of Fish and Game Director Jerry Conley and Region IV Commissioner Wesley Rose. Little did they realize at the time how strongly sportsmen and women across the state felt the same - not only about the removal of Jerry Conley but also the removal of their own regional commissioners.

Word has spread throughout the state like a range fire! Calls come in on nearly a daily basis at Mountianman Pawn in Twin Falls requesting petitions and wanting to know how to be actively involved.

As a result, Sportsmen for a Better Idaho, a non-profit organization, is forming in Twin Falls and will soon have representative committees in every region and hunting unit in the state. It's first official act is an "emergency" sportsmen's meeting to be held Jan. 8 at O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls. This meeting follows closely on the heels of a similar meeting held in Marsh Valley to voice nearly identical concerns.

These sportsmen's meetings are necessary in every region in the state to voice the concerns pertaining to each region. True, they can be held independently, but with the knowledge that each of these meetings has the unified support, through Sportsmen for a Better Idaho, of all other citizens, legislators, Fish and Game, Bureau of Land Management, Forest Service and any other entity that affects Idaho sportsmen and women will have no choice but to listen and act on the recommendations voiced at these meetings.

The choice is yours. Gather in small groups and voice your complaints to each other to no avail, or support Sportsmen for a Better Idaho by attending these meetings, joining the SFABI and volunteering to serve in whatever capacity you have time and aptitude for.

For more information on the SFABI or to make a donation, write to Dennis Frisby, SFABI, 103 W. Addison, Twin Falls, ID 8301.

Remember, the louder your voice, the sooner the change!

Social Security editorial biased

I am submitting this letter in response to the editorial of Dec. 22. I found the editorial erroneous, biased and interesting.

The error: "The administration won't even try to tax the benefits of the wealthiest Social Security recipients." As I interpret the recently enacted deficit reduction act, the amount of the "poor old rich people's" Social Security income now subject to taxation has been raised to 85 percent.

The bias: You present the Social Security system as a bureaucratic mechanism for taxing the poor young working people to provide for the "well-heeled seniors." May I point out that President Franklin D. Roosevelt sold the Social Security Act to the citizens as an investment plan whereby they could pay throughout their working lives in order to provide a livelihood for themselves after retirement. Is it unrealistic that they want a return on their long-term investment?

The interest: I agree wholeheartedly with those who believe that Social Security is in a shambles. This chaos is not unique for a federally administered program.

I, for one, would be happy to give up my entire Social Security and Medicare "entitlements," provided that the federal government would concomitantly disband all of the social programs it has become involved in, which should rightly be taken care of by the individual responsibility of its citizens.

Unfortunately, under President Bill and Hillary Clinton, the country is hurtling down the antithetical road, i.e., placing our entire health care system into their hands.

Women's athletics makes strides

Congratulations, College of Southern Idaho, on the improvements you've made in women's athletics.

We attended the CSI vs. Ricks game and were pleasantly surprised at the many changes we noticed.

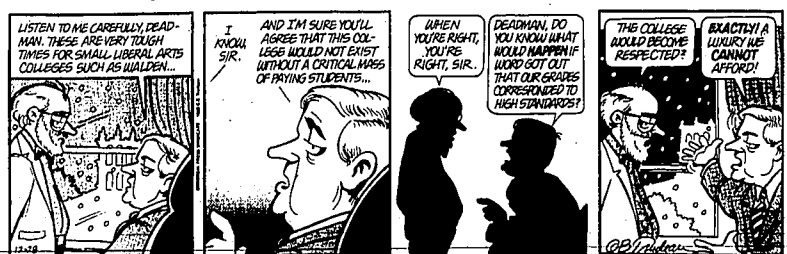

The atmosphere as we entered the gym was one of excitement - attendance was up and the girls looked great in their new uniforms and warm-ups. This year's program is outstanding - a total athletic program allows for recognition of all CSI athletes.

Thank you, President Meyerhoeffer and the board of trustees, for keeping your word and for caring. You've come along way!

One final note: Congratulations to the CSI volleyball team on its national championship!

Shells rain down on Bosnian capital

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Ignoring a U.N. appeal for a holiday truce, Serb gunners poured artillery shells into the Bosnian capital, killing at least seven people and wounding 58 Monday. Lt. Gen. Francis Briquemont, commander of U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia, urged warring parties to "cease combat activities, especially bombardments, which are useless for political as well as military means, but tragic" in human terms. But Serb forces surrounding Sarajevo intensified fire on the front lines held by troops of Bosnia's Muslim-dominated government and on civilian targets in Vogošća, a northern suburb. Other parts of the capital, including the city center, also were hit by artillery and sniper fire, Bosnian radio said.

Hijackers distribute food to poor

MANILA, Philippines — Communist rebels hijacked a truck full of rice at gunpoint Monday and distributed the contents to poor families in Manila, police said. Maj. Rodolfo Rival said seven armed men, who said they were from the Alex Bonayaca Brigade, flagged down the driver of the truck and forced him to drive to the city's garbage dump, where thousands of squatters live. The rebels distributed the 500 sacks of rice to hundreds of squatters, who swarmed around the vehicle. The rebels then left, and when police came to investigate, the squatters refused to cooperate.

Egyptian militants bomb tour bus

CAIRO, Egypt — Suspected Muslim militants, renewing their campaign against Western tourists in Egypt, threw bombs at a tour bus on Monday and wounded 16 people. Eight of those injured were visitors from Austria. The eight others were Egyptian bystanders, who increasingly have been caught up in the violence. Witnesses said two teen-agers threw two bombs at the bus at about 8:30 a.m. as it headed for the Coptic Hanging Church, a popular tourist site. The men opened fire with 9 mm pistols, shouting to people to "keep away."

Vandals hit Dietrich's Berlin grave

BERLIN — Vandals desecrated the grave of movie star Marlene Dietrich with feces and painted "Slut in Fur" in German on the headstone, police said. Dietrich died May 6, 1992, in Paris at age 90 and was buried at Berlin's Friedland Cemetery at her wish. Monday was her birthday. The movie star turned her back on Nazi Germany in the 1930s and became a U.S. citizen in 1959. She sang for American troops as they fought her countrymen. Many Germans branded her a traitor. The grave was found desecrated on Sunday. Police said they did not know when the damage was done and had no suspects.

Germans clean up flood's aftermath

FRANKFURT, Germany — Germans cleared homes and shops of water, mud and muck on Monday as officials estimated flood damage in four west German states at more than $580 million. Of all the cities stricken by last week's inundation in the states of Rhineland Palatinate, Saarland, Baden-Wuerttemberg and Bavaria, none suffered as badly as Koblenz. Streets in the city at the confluence of the Mosel and Rhine rivers were covered with up to 15 inches of mud, said city fire department spokesman Wolfgang Schroeder.

Marcos asks to leave for treatment

MANILA, Philippines — Imelda Marcos asked an anti-graft court Monday for permission to travel to China for treatment of high blood pressure caused by the stress of her manifold legal problems. The widow of former strongman Ferdinand Marcos said in a petition that she wanted to travel next week to China and remain there until February. Mrs. Marcos was convicted of corruption last September and sentenced to 18 to 24 years imprisonment. She is free while the case is appealed.

Officials find kids home alone

LONDON (AP) — A dozen children have been found neglected and home alone over the Christmas holiday, touching off calls for tougher laws and more responsible parents. Several youngsters didn't even know it was Christmas. The 12 children, from five families across Britain, were placed in foster homes, where police and social workers ensured that they celebrated Christmas with new toys and clothes. One father was charged with willful neglect. "What is tragic and appalling is for children to be left alone — and to be left alone locked up in a room is quite unforgivable," said Health Secretary Virginia Bottomley. She called for a change in attitudes and greater sharing of the responsibilities of parenthood within the family and the community.

Commandos capture gunmen in mountains

MOSCOW (AP) — Four kidnappers apparently tossed handfuls of $100 bills from a commandeered helicopter before making a futile attempt to flee on foot through snowy mountains with millions of dollars stuffed in duffel bags. "I guess it was too much for them to carry and still run through the mountains," police Col. Yuri Reshetnik said after police and elite commandos caught up with the gunmen early Monday. Their capture ended a four-day drama that began with the seizure of a dozen teen-agers at a school Thursday and saw the kidnappers hopscotch across southern Russia with hostages in a helicopter rigged with explosives. The events gripped the attention of Russians, many of whom are angry over an alarming rise in organized crime and lawlessness that has accompanied the transition to capitalism from communism. If convicted, the kidnappers could face the death penalty. Their last five hostages were released in good condition Sunday night, and freed teen-agers were reunited with their parents in the southern city of Rostov-on-Don. away the time inside the helicopter playing tick-tack-toe. Although the kidnappers initially demanded safe passage to Iran, police said they now believed the only goal was to extort the $10 million.

The kidnappers' ringleader reportedly told investigators they threw the rest of the cash out of the helicopter while in flight Sunday night. "They thought the money was marked and wanted to mislead the police, so that people would pick up the money and be mistaken for kidnappers," said Andrei Kokoshin, a first deputy defense minister. Authorities could not immediately confirm the kidnappers' story, and police continued to search the woods in the Caucasus Mountains for the missing money. President Boris Yeltsin's government, which suffered an election setback to extreme nationalists and Communists who used the rise in crime as a rallying cry, responded to the hostage-taking with unusual speed and vigor. It appointed a deputy prime minister to oversee the crisis, sent a Foreign Ministry negotiator and dispatched commandos of the former KGB. Warplanes were put on standby, ready to destroy the helicopter if the hostages were harmed.

Allies regroup, launch raid on Garigliano

Knight-Ridder News Service

The 36th "Texas" Infantry Division had suffered 1,200 casualties in the December 1943 fight to take San Pietro, of which 150 were dead and another 250 were missing. The depleted infantry regiments tried to push beyond San Pietro to take the next village, San Vittore, two miles up the road. The 141st Infantry Regiment cleared the high ground of Monte Sammucro overlooking San Vittore, but the Germans drove back the reinforced rifle company sent to take the village itself on Dec. 29. The attack was halted. The division was close to exhaustion, though its morale was still good. As its commander, Maj. Gen. Fred Walker, wrote in his diary "I regret the hardships they must suffer... wet, cold, muddy, hungry, going into camp in the mud and rain, no sleep, no rest... How they endure their hardships I do not understand... They are still cheerful. All honor to them for they deserve the best the nation can offer."

The 34th Infantry Division was brought up to replace the 36th, the one regiment of the 36th stayed to garrison hard-won Monte Sammucro. The 34th, like the 36th, was a National Guard unit. But whereas the 36th hailed from Texas, the 34th was comprised of units from Iowa, Minnesota and North and South Dakota. Both were now veteran divisions, having fought in North Africa before Italy. Elsewhere on the Fifth Army front, the VI Corps slowly ground forward. It had two divisions in line, the 45th U.S. Infantry and the 2nd Moroccan. Progress was slow until the II Corps had taken San Pietro, which caused the Germans to pull back about 7 miles across the VI Corps' front. The 45th Division was then pulled out of the line for rest, replaced by another French unit, the 3rd Algerian Division. This allowed the entire VI

Corps headquarters to pull out as well, turning the two French units over to the newly activated French Expeditionary Corps. The VI Corps staff under Maj. Gen. John P. Lucas had a new task to plan: the amphibious landing at Anzio in late January, which, it was hoped, would turn the German flank and open a path to Rome. Meanwhile, the British were carrying out their own small amphibious raid around the mouth of the Garigliano River. This operation was partly to cover the relief of the 36th Division by the 34th and partly to take prisoners and reconnoiter the German positions opposite the British X Corps, which was assigned to the U.S. Fifth Army. In the early hours of Dec. 30, the British 9th Commando, a battalion-size unit, landed by sea north of the Garigliano. It was expected to be a difficult operation, as a naval mine field had to be swept and two sandbars had to be navigated around. The beaches were also expected to be heavily mined, and this proved correct, several casualties being suffered as a result. The operation also missed the assigned beach and ran over an hour behind schedule. However, the raiders knocked out several German positions, destroyed a tank, blew up a bridge and took 16 prisoners — though at the loss of nine of their own killed. The commandos then "crossed back" over the Garigliano, covered by a sortie across the river by units of the Scots and Coldstream Guards. It was a successful operation.

Why A Business As Big As Ours Runs A Yellow Page Ad As Small As This.

When people start reading yellow page ads over breakfast, we'll start placing ads in it.

Until then, the yellow pages are no more than a directory of names, phone numbers and addresses that the average person uses infrequently, at best. That is the reason why our ad is in the newspaper. We suggest you do the same.

Your yellow page salesperson cannot offer you a paid subscriber base but we can tell you that more than 21,000 subscribers can see your ad every day in The Times News. This kind of coverage allows you to tell people about your competitive pricing, announce a new location or service, or illustrate your clear advantage over the competition. All the things you can't do in the yellow pages.

Of course, there's one more thing you can't do in the yellow pages. You can't be flexible. You're stuck with the same ad for a year. So what do you do when you need to respond to the market? Or promote a special sale? Or build your image? You advertise in the newspaper.

Think about it.

So call one of our account representatives for more information at 733-0931. Or stop by our office at 132 3rd St. west. You can look us up in the yellow pages for our telephone number or address but remember, what just sold you on us, was the newspaper.

Extension cord causes Christmas house fire

TWIN FALLS — An old and worn extension cord apparently caused a Christmas morning house fire on Maple Avenue.

The cord was hooked up to outside Christmas lights.

The fire was reported at 7:51 a.m. at Hal Quinn's house at 1972 Maple Ave. Three Twin Falls Fire Department trucks and 10 firefighters responded.

The fire was mostly contained to the garage of the house and caused an estimated $10,000 in damage. Nobody was injured.

Utility's customer service, billing clerks change address

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Power Co. officials are trying to get their customers to cross the street.

The Idaho Power southern division office in downtown Twin Falls at Third Street West and Second Avenue North is closed this winter for renovations.

But the utility's customer service representatives and billing clerks have simply moved into the two-story Obenchain Insurance Building across the street where they are taking customers.

Twin Falls commissioners award bleacher contract

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners awarded a contract Monday to Colorado-based Bleachers International for the construction of aluminum bleachers at the county fairgrounds in Filer.

Bleachers International will replace the existing wooden bleachers in the rodeo arena at a cost of $72,609.

Last week, the commissioners signed a $210,000 contract to purchase the Job Service building at 260 Fourth Ave. N.

Located two blocks from the courthouse, the 7,030 square-foot building will provide space for county offices. The Idaho Department of Employment intends to build a new Job Service facility west of the Sandpiper restaurant.

The county will make an immediate down payment of 10 percent of the total cost. The remaining 90 percent of the $210,000 will be paid over a two-year budget cycle.

Man spends holidays in jail on drunken-driving charges

JEROME — A Jerome man got out of a Boise hospital Thursday just in time to spend the holidays in jail on aggravated drunken-driving charges in a November auto accident.

Odilon Trejo-Olguin, 31, was driving a pickup that struck a car driven by the Rev. Baldwin Camin in residential Jerome Nov. 8, police say.

Two others in Trejo-Olguin's vehicle, Anna Martinez, 27, and Terri Martinez, 24, were thrown from the pickup and into the porch of a house at intersection 10th Avenue East and Buchanan Street. Trejo-Olguin was critically injured and trapped inside his overturned pickup. Officers and firefighters pulled him from the vehicle.

Camin, a reserve deputy sheriff and pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Jerome, was seriously injured; a fire department rescue crew extricated him from his vehicle. He has since recovered and returned to duty with the Sheriff's Department.

Ranch accepts used Christmas trees to be used as bird houses

TWIN FALLS — Discarded Christmas trees can be used as bird habitats after ornaments are removed.

They will be accepted and strategically placed as shelter for pheasants and quail at Buckeye Ranch, two miles south of Hagerman on Highway 30. For more information, contact Marilyn Yore at 837-6595.

How will Legislature spend surplus?

By Dren DeSilver
Times-News writer

There's an old saying that money doesn't solve your problems, it just gives you new ones. The 1994 Idaho Legislature will test the truth of that statement.

For the first time in several years, lawmakers will not find a budget shortfall when they hit Boise, but instead a hefty surplus — $75 million by some estimates — waiting to be spent.

There'll be no shortage of suggestions on how to spend the surplus. As Senate Majority Leader Joyce McRoberts of Twin Falls remarked last week, "I'm sure all the money has already been spent 105 different ways."

Tax receipts are running far ahead of expectations. The 1993 Legislature set a $1.085 billion General Fund budget for the 1994 fiscal year, which ends June 30, 1994. However, Gov. Cecil Andrus' economists are projecting total revenues of at least $1.133 billion for fiscal 1994, and tax receipts for the first four months of the fiscal year were $14.6 million ahead of those projections.

Those figures don't include the $11 million surplus banked at the end of the 1993 budget year.

Administration economists are projecting that fiscal 1995 revenues will be in the neighborhood of $1.25 billion. That would be an increase of more than $168 million over the fiscal 1994 revenue estimate.

So, what will legislators do with all that cash? Probably what they usually do: Spend some of it on one-time construction projects, but earmark most of it for public schools, colleges and universities, health care and the prison system.

First things first

The first priority will be spending down the surplus, said state Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, who sits on the joint House-Senate budget committee.

The Medicaid program, which perennially outstrips its appropriation, will need an extra $12 million or so. The county catastrophic fund, which ran out of money two months ago after the Legislature and Andrus failed to agree on a way to fund it, will need about $4.5 million to pay its fiscal 1994 bills. And the Correction Department has asked for an extra $2.2 million to pay for housing Idaho's bulging prison population.

Add a few smaller requests, and you have about $20 million in supplemental appropriations.

That leaves $55 million or so to spend.

Bell says there's "a broad consensus" among budget writers and legislative leaders to fund four long-delayed building projects at Idaho colleges and universities, including the College of Southern Idaho's $5.3 million library and academic development center. The total cost for those projects would be $19 million.

The fate of the remaining $36 million, Bell said, "is anybody's guess."

State Sen. Dean Cameron, who also sits on the budget committee, said he'd just as soon put the money into the state's $30 million "rainy day fund." But the Rupert Republican acknowledged that while some of the surplus probably will be socked away in the rainy day fund, the urge to spend most of it probably will win in the end.

With a lawsuit accusing them of systematically shortchanging public schools hanging over their heads, budget-writers likely will direct some of the surplus money to schools.

State Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, has suggested giving teachers a one-time bonus. State Rep. Mark Snubbs, also a Twin Falls, raised the idea of a high-technology grant program.

The only near-certainty is that the surplus money won't be spent on ongoing projects, such as boosting teacher salaries.

"We'd be foolish to assume that the double-digit growth we're seeing now will be continued in the future," Cameron said. "My feeling is, we kind of have to hedge our bets on the future, and prepare for when we don't have that kind of revenue coming in."

The 1994-95 fiscal year

The biggest question facing budget writers when they sit down to plan next fiscal year's spending, as it is almost every year, is "How much shall we give the schools?"

Historically, public-school support consumed just over half the state's General Fund. But the schools' share has slipped below 50 percent in recent years, and teachers, administrators and school-board members alike have cried foul.

Those groups, gathered in what has come to be known as the "Education Coalition," have asked for a $95.5 million boost in school spending, to $623.5 million. Ordinarily, legislators would dismiss such a large increase out of hand. But not this year.

"I think it's very possible, with a healthy Please see SURPLUS/B2

Twin Falls city, county debate E911 particulars

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Monday's City Council work session evolved into a debate over the logistics and legality of a three-year project to provide computer-aided emergency-dispatch service to four Magic Valley counties.

City officials say they are reluctant to press forward with construction of a regional emergency-dispatch center in Jerome.

"I'm sure all of us thought three years ago that this was going to be a simple issue," said Mayor Howard Allen. However, the city has an obligation to its taxpayers to ensure that a contract is valid and proper, Allen said.

Councilman Art Frantz reiterated his concerns about the legality of the bidding process.

Last week, Frantz was the sole member of the four-county board to oppose the signing of a $942,000 contract with Boise-based Sundance Construction Management to build an emergency-dispatch center in Jerome.

Frantz also is the only city representative on the "enhanced-911" board of commissioners from Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls counties.

Frantz's concerns may be justified, said City Attorney Fritz Wondelrich.

Wondelrich cited state codes that require counties to approve the "lowest responsible bidder" on contracts for the construction of public buildings.

In August, the E911 board received two bids for the Jerome facility — each over $1.2 million. Project costs, however, had been estimated by engineers at about $780,000.

Twin Falls County commissioner and E911 Chairman Marvin Hempleman said the board tried to haggle with the two original bidders.

"That was totally not successful at all," Hempleman said.

The board agreed to negotiate with Sundance after obtaining legal opinions from at least two county prosecuting attorneys, he said.

Commissioners Jim Fraley and Norma Blass agreed with Hempleman that Twin Falls still needs to support the regional concept.

"I wish their questions had come earlier," Blass said. "It's easy to second-guess now."

Outgoing Councilman Jim Vickers said the City Council needs to understand how the E911 board got to where it is now. Vickers served as the city's representative on the E911 board from December 1992 until November 1993.

"The electorate out there voted for the system," he said.

City residents committed Twin Falls to the regional concept in November 1990, and since have paid a $1 monthly fee to fund the project. According to the joint powers agreement, city residents still would pay the surcharge for two more years if Twin Falls were to pull out of the project now, Vickers said.

"I don't agree with everything that's taken place — but it is what it is," he said.

But Vickers, too, expressed concerns about the E911 project.

He wanted to know whether Lincoln County will remain a member of the regional concept.

Judge Ted Wood of Idaho Falls is expected to rule this week on a lawsuit between Lincoln County Sheriff Steve Southwick and the county commissioners. Southwick contends, in part, that the county has no legal right to transfer county dispatching to Jerome.

If Judge Wood rules in Southwick's favor, then the other three counties may face similar fates, Vickers said.

"This could be a multi-million dollar blunder," he said.

Noh seeks delay of conflict auction for grazing rights

The Associated Press

BOISE — A sheep producer-legislator has asked the state Department of Lands to delay an auction at which an environmental group is to bid against a central Idaho cattle rancher for the right to use state land in Custer County.

Sen. Laird Noh, chairman of the Senate's Resources and Environment Committee, asked Lands Director Stan Hamilton to delay the auction until legislative committees can "fully examine" the development.

Last week, the Idaho Land Board, made up of five elected state officials, voted 4-1 to proceed with a conflict auction over the 640 acres of state land.

Hamilton said Monday he planned to hold the auction late next month but after receiving Noh's letter, he will have to give the matter more consideration. He said he "didn't know whether he would discuss it with the Land Board again."

Jon Marvel, Hailey architect, filed for the right to lease land used for years by rancher Will Ingram and his Warm Springs Ranch to graze cattle.

Marvel said the new Idaho Watersheds Project wants to lease the land to put up a fence to protect a stream from pollution by cattle. The group may bid on other state parcels to demonstrate how water quality can be improved if cattle grazing is reduced.

Secretary of State Pete Côté's office, like Noh a sheep producer, called it a major precedent.

Noh called it a "major change in the policy of endowment land administration" and said the Land Board reached it without consulting with legislative committees.

"I have serious reservations that the decision made is in the best long-term interests of the (public school) endowment or that it

Truck stop operator: Child labor problems have been corrected

The Associated Press

MOUNTAIN HOME — The operator of a Mountain Home truck stop cited for violating federal child labor laws acknowledged the problems, but said they were accidental and have been corrected.

Randy Gridley, president of Gear Janner Inc., was assessed $3,650 in civil penalties by the U.S. Department of Labor for child labor violations at the Gear Janner Truck Stop on Interstate 84, the federal agency said Monday.

The violations included employing minors past 7 p.m. during school months, more than three hours on a school day, and in some cases more than eight hours in a day and past 9 p.m. in summer months.

Gridley, who has more than 100 employees under several supervisors at the truck stop, said he was unaware of the violations until they were found by Labor Department officials who inspected two years of business records last summer.

"We were just one of those unlucky people who happened to have some people under 18 that we just didn't catch," he said.

Gridley said the Gear Janner no longer employs anyone under 16, and may soon stop hiring anyone under 18.

In the meantime, he said he would try to convince the Labor Department to reduce the size of the civil penalty.

Child labor regulations control the hours during which children under 16 can work and restrict the employment in specific hazardous occupations for youngsters under 18.

Andrus to give last State-of-State message

POCATELLO (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus will be making a familiar trek Jan. 10 when he goes before a joint session of the Idaho Legislature for his State of the State message.

It will be his 15th — and last — since his first, early in 1971.

The four-term governor is leaving office when his term expires in the first weeks of 1995. He will have served as governor longer than any one else, just over 14 years.

It's his last chance to do battle with the Legislature, which has been controlled by Republicans every year Andrus has been governor. But Andrus says he doesn't view it differently than any other session.

He does not look at it as the completion of an agenda, Andrus said, "because agendas change. I've completed a dozen different agendas in my political life, and every time you solve one problem there are two more out there starting you in the face." Asked to list his accomplishments, Andrus, 62, cites improved education funding, tougher environmental laws and more attention paid to children's issues.

A frustration is the fact he's never had the luxury of serving with a Democratic majority. "But not really. For the most part the issues are not partisan issues, they are people issues. And that, most of the time, does not fall into the category of Republican versus Democrat."

Andrus won't say what he will ask of state lawmakers next year. In general, he'll continue to push for improvements for education, children, senior citizens and in the handling of natural resources.

"In that light, I'm not going to change very much," Andrus said. "I will try to improve the quality of life for the people in the state of Idaho."

He predicts public school funding will be the biggest issue before the Legislature. His recommendations will target ways to provide a thorough education as required by the Idaho Constitution. And he wants to hold schools accountable for the education they provide.

"I will not make a recommendation to just throw more money into the sock and let the same old formula and the same old school boards... divvy it up," Andrus said.

He won't tackle property tax reform.

Last session, his sweeping proposals to provide $65 million in property tax relief were opposed by Republicans and Democrats alike.

Tribe contends certification test discriminates against minorities

LEWISTON (AP) — If it were up to the state of Idaho, David Penney wouldn't be teaching.

His bachelor's degree, his master's degree in education, 10 years teaching experience, and a deep desire to teach didn't matter. In Idaho what matters is passing the standardized National Teachers Examination.

But Neze Percé tribal members contend Neze's method of certifying teachers discriminates against minorities.

The teachers examination is a test used in many states to help assess the qualifications needed to be a teacher. But Idaho uses the exam as the sole criterion for certification, despite the warnings from the National Teachers Examination Policy Council that it should not be the only determining factor.

Penney, a native of Kamiah, has been teaching in North Dakota for nearly 20 years, and finally decided to come back to his family, and his Nez Percé cultural heritage, to teach his own people.

Penney first took the $85 test last March. He failed to garner enough points to pass. On June 12, he took the test once more and again didn't make the cut off. Penney then paid $670 to take the test privately at Lewis-Clark State College. There he was tested in private, void of distractions, and once again, the exam got the best of him.

"I couldn't get past the NTE. I didn't know why and I began to doubt myself and my abilities," Penney said. "I started talking to people about my situation and that's when I learned I wasn't the only one."

He began talking to educators and other minority leaders about his problems with the test. After talking with a leader of the Hispanic community in southern Idaho, and other Indian tribal leaders, Penney found he was not alone in his troubles. Many minorities were struggling with the exam, especially the communication section.

Penney eventually appealed to the Idaho Department of Education, and nearly 5900 and four months later, his appeal was granted, along with a guidance counselor at Lapwai High School.

Frequently cited problems of standardized tests included a neglect of cultural values, inappropriate content, poor examples and language bias.

However, James Smith, supervisor for teacher education and certification at the Department of Education, said he contacted National Teachers Examination officials who said they took minority perspectives into account when developing the test.

The exam is also being phased out nationally and a new testing series is being considered, Smith said, although it may be 1997 before the current exam is replaced.

"Personally, I believe that the test could potentially discriminate against minority individuals, but I also believe that many minority individuals can pass the test," Smith said.

Smith said performance of the teacher is being seriously considered as a possible criterion for future training and testing.

The most difficult part of the test, Penney said, is the communication section.

Those being tested must listen to a tape, during which questions are only asked once. The reasons many minorities seem to do poorly on this section of the test are varied and subtle to some, but not to many of the Nez Percé.

There are minor adjustments that can be made to help lessen the problem. Changes such as more "wait time" between questions and a student's response, or closer adherence to cultural differences within the context of the test.

Obituaries

Lyle Deltrick
FILER — Lyle (Buck) Deltrick, 73, of Filer, died Monday, Dec. 27, 1993, at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls after a short illness.

He was born Sept. 7, 1920, in Des Moines, Iowa, the son of William Harrison and Ruth Mayor Deltrick. He served in the United States Army from 1942 to 1945 during World War II. He married Linda Lou Howell of Filer on Dec. 12, 1945, in Eiko, Nev. They lived in Iowa for three years and then returned to the Magic Valley where they resided for 45 years. He worked for Arrowhead Freightlines from 1952 until 1956, when he went to work for IML Freight Company. He retired from there in 1981.

He was a member of the Filer American Legion and the Western Teamsters Local 483.

Survivors include his wife, Linda Deltrick of Filer; three sons and a daughter and their spouses, Gary and Bonnie Jean Deltrick and Larry and Kathy Deltrick all of Filer; James and Bonnie Kay Deltrick of Kimberly; and Shana and Mike Reichlein of Las Vegas, Nev.; his mother, Ruth Deltrick of Newton, Iowa; a twin sister, Lylia Nichols of Knoxville, Iowa; and two other sisters, Ruth Rose and Marlene Rose of Newton, Iowa; two brothers, Dwight Deltrick of Geneseo, Ill., and James Deltrick of Newton, Iowa; eight grandchildren; and one great-grandchild. A memorial graveside service will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls, with the Rev. Douglas Nichols officiating. Cremation took place at White Crematory and arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary in Twin Falls.

The family suggests memorial contributions may be made to the Salvation Army, 348 Fourth Ave. N., Twin Falls ID 83301; or to a charity of the donor's choice.

Rhoda Black Erickson
BOISE — Rhoda Black Erickson, 83, a Boise homemaker, died Sunday, Dec. 26, 1993, in a Boise hospital of natural causes.

She was born in Hooper, Idaho, the 10th of 16 children born to Charles Henry and Mable Annette Warner Black. She attended schools in Moore, Roseworth, Hollister, Twin Falls and Oakley, where she enjoyed participating in music, plays and sports.

She married her husband of 64 years, George Leon Erickson on Oct. 14, 1929 in Burley. Her marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake City LDS Temple on Dec. 11, 1929. The family moved to Ogdon, Utah, in 1941, at the outbreak of World War II where George worked for five years in government defense construction which included factories, airfields and housing. Rhoda worked on occasion at different jobs in the war effort. After moving back to Oakley for two years, the family moved to Boise in 1948.

Rhoda enjoyed a lifelong activity of faithful service in the LDS Church and many community organizations. She particularly enjoyed music, family history, plays and sporting events, especially when it involved her sons or grandchildren. She taught in and was chorister of the music in the Primary, Mutual and Relief Society organizations. She participated in and directed many ward choirs. She will long be remembered for her great faith in things eternal and her deep love and devotion to each member of her family.

Survivors include her husband, George Erickson of Boise; two sons, Donis L. Erickson of Ogdon, Utah, and K. Gaylord Erickson of Boise; two sisters, Thelma Kirby of Boise and Zelen Black of Hober, Utah; one brother, Gaines Black of Eldorado Hills, Calif.; 12 grandchildren; and 27 great-grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions may be made to the Salvation Army, 348 Fourth Ave. N., Twin Falls ID 83301; or to a charity of the donor's choice.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 30, 1993, at the Boise LDS 10th Ward Chapel, 3200 Cassia St., with Bishop Conway Grant conducting. Friends may call at 10 a.m. at the chapel prior to the funeral service. Arrangements are under the direction of the Roy-Joy Funeral Chapel in Boise.

Alpha M. Warren
TWIN FALLS — Alpha M. Warren, 87, of Twin Falls, died Saturday, Dec. 25, 1993, at BridgeView Estates in Twin Falls.

He was born April 29, 1906, in Douglas County, Mo., the daughter of Will and Jane Walker Whitaker. In September, 1923, she married Raymond B. Warren in Tarkio, Mo., and they moved to Twin Falls in 1926. She worked for Ora-Ida for many years.

Mr. Warren was a member of the Bethel Temple Church in Twin Falls. She enjoyed camping, fishing and crocheting.

Survivors include four daughters, Mable, Shirley, and Rhea and Raymond Graybill, both of Twin Falls; Helen Nickels of Moses Lake, Wash., and Donna Warburton of Cheyenne, Wyo.; one son, Ralph E. Warren of Nampa; 14 grandchildren; 22 great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandchild. She was preceded in death by her parents, husband, two brothers, one sister, one grandson and two great-granddaughters.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at White Mortuary in Twin Falls, with the Rev. Allen Pickett officiating. Interment will follow at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. Wednesday at White Mortuary.

County sets bond issue election for jail

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Bonneville County voters will be asked on Feb. 1 to approve a $12.5 million bond issue to finance a new jail.

If the measure wins by the required two-thirds majority, the 240-bed facility will be built on a 12-acre site in north Idaho Falls.

The bond issue would increase the property tax on a $60,000 home by about $17 a year. A business or farm valued at $240,000 would see an increase of about $125 a year. Law enforcement officials say a new jail is badly needed to ease overcrowding in the current facility, and the threat of a lawsuit makes it important for the county to address the problem.

"You can do it right now, or do it later and pay more," sheriff's Lt. Bill English, jail administrator, said Monday.

The proposed 97,500-square-foot complex would open in July or August 1996. Besides a jail, it would include new offices for the Bonneville County Sheriff's Department and likely the Idaho Falls Police Department. The current law enforcement offices would be converted to court and clerical space.

The bond package includes about $500,000 for remodeling of the courthouse, and part of that funding might be used to help convert the existing jail to a short-term juvenile detention center.

Officials have said the county lacks adequate space to house juveniles, and beds at the state Youth Services Center in St. Anthony are almost always full.

Surplus

Continued from B1 economy, that they'll get a good portion of what they're asking for," Ball said.

Other major programs aren't likely to see their slices of the budget pie change much:

- Colleges and universities, which account for 13.5 percent of the current budget, probably will receive about that much of the fiscal 1994 budget.
- The Department of Health and Welfare, which consumes 17.8 percent of the budget, is driven largely by rapidly rising Medicaid costs and federal environmental mandates. Despite efforts to rein in those costs, they are likely to remain some of the fastest-growing areas of the budget.

The Correction Department, which took 4.1 percent of the fiscal 1994 budget, is the other fast-growing sector of state government. Even though its facilities are nearly always filled to capacity, no new money is likely to be appropriated to build new prisons — if for no other reason than Andrus' promise to veto any new prison-construction bills.

However, Correction is studying the possibility of a multimillion-dollar bond issue to fund new prison construction. If such a measure passed the Legislature — and area lawmakers say it probably would — it would be submitted to the voters in next November's election.

Auction

Continued from B1 even meets the requirements of law and rule and regulation," said Noh's letter to Hamilton.

Noh said Monday there appears to be a legitimate question whether the bid from Marvel and his environmentalists is in the best long-term interest of the endowment fund. "They certainly won't be generating any sales tax or income for the endowment as a result of holding the lease," he said.

He said it appeared to be mainly a publicity stunt to gain attention for an environmental group.

Those who voted against allowing the auction, also tried to get a delay to give the Legislature a chance to change the law allowing the auction. He was voted down.

Land Board members said the Idaho Constitution and state law requires an auction on state lands if more than one qualified bidder applies for a 10-year lease. Gov. Cecil Andrus and other board members said it's up to the Legislature whether it wants to change the law.

"Every citizen is entitled to the benefit of the law as it exists today," schools superintendent Jerry Evans said. "It seems to me we ought to proceed under the law as it exists today."

If it's brought before the Legislature, it won't be the only natural resource discussion.

Noh said he and his House counterpart, Rep. Golden Linford, R-Rexburg, plan three afternoons of hearings next month on the growing impacts upon the state of the Endangered Species Act and the federal Clean Water Act. The sessions are scheduled for four hours each on Jan.

19-20 and 31.

Noh said listing or considering endangered or protected species protection for several species "are creating management, legal and budgetary chaos for many state and federal agencies and affected citizens and communities."

Rupert council wants to raise sales permit fee
Council members, business owners hope to rid town of itinerant merchants

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

RUPERT — City Council members hope to banish merchants who breeze into town to sell cheap wares by tightening city rules and increasing the sales permit fee over 1,000 percent.

But a local merchant says it may unfairly drive him out of business. The council asked City Attorney Rick Bollar to look into amending a city ordinance for itinerant merchants after business owners complained that the merchants who set up near their storefronts are unfair competition and sell inferior products.

Business owners complained that out-of-town merchants are able to drive down their prices because they don't have the overhead costs of paying for city services.

They said customers often come to their stores saying they had been stuck with damaged goods they had bought off the sidewalk or street. By then, the street merchants had already left town, Bollar said.

City Council may boost the annual fee to no less than $100 from the current $16, Bollar said. The council could also eliminate rules exempting certain people from having to buy a permit, such as those who sell products costing less than $25 or those who have lived in Rupert for more than a year.

But Sam Aguilar says a fee increase to $100 would drive his family out of business.

Aguilar's father, Alejandro, supplements the family's income by selling clothes and blankets out of their Rupert home. Aguilar buys bulk clothing from Los Angeles. The business attracts customers through word-of-mouth mostly in the Hispanic community, Sam said.

"(Alejandro) says business is very slow. He thinks that if it goes up to $100 or even more, he would have to raise prices and people may not buy," Sam Aguilar said. "Lately it's been kind of hard. Some of the bills aren't getting paid."

Targeting itinerant merchants may be unconstitutional — a similar ordinance in another city that targeted door-to-door salesmen was thrown out for threatening free enterprise, Bollar said.

However, a district court recently upheld an ordinance in Ketchum that tightened the rules for merchants within the city limits, Bollar said.

ISU energy saving efforts pay off

POCATELLO (AP) — An Idaho State University decision to invest in energy efficiency improvements has earned the school a $155,821 check from Idaho Power.

The school will also save an estimated $53,000 a year on its future electric bills.

Idaho State recently completed installation of numerous energy efficiency improvements at seven campus buildings. The U.S. Department of Energy paid approximately 40 percent of the project's $551,284 cost. Idaho State and Idaho Power equally shared equally in payment of the $311,642 balance.

The improvements at four life sciences buildings, the school's College of Education, the Consumer Economics Building and the Fine Arts Building are expected to reduce the university's electricity consumption by 2 million kilowatt-hours annually.

That's enough power to serve the yearly needs of approximately 135 Idaho Power residential customers.

Idaho State President Richard Bowen will accept the utility's incentive payment from Idaho Power Vice President of Distribution Doug Jackson and Eastern Division Manager Pete Olsen.

Under the utility's Partners in Industrial Efficiency program, the company helps share the cost of energy efficiency improvements for large commercial customers in situations where significant energy conservation is possible.

The energy efficiency improvements at Idaho State include setback thermostats, a centralized computer-controlled energy management system, high-efficiency window upgrades and energy-smart lighting improvements.

Cities seek investors to run dinner, tour train along Pend Oreille River

SANDPOINT (AP) — Four cities are seeking private investors to run a dinner train along a scenic stretch of the Pend Oreille River.

The plan has support from the northern Idaho cities of Sandpoint, Priest River and Oldtown and the Washington border town of Newport.

"We see ourselves now as playing matchmaker between someone with a train and someone with money who is interested in operating a tour business," said Jonathan Coe, executive director for the Sandpoint Chamber of Commerce.

"We have studied this and we know it can work. We just need some investors." Also needed to put the plan into practice is about $200,000, which would enable the cities to buy a train or lease one for operation between Sandpoint and Newport.

The cities have hired a consultant who believes enough tourists travel the area to support a dinner train. The consultant, Dave Duncan of Portland, Ore., has negotiated a tentative agreement with Burlington Northern for use of its track on the 30-mile route, which includes views of the Selkirk and Purcell mountains.

Duncan believes one of two trains could be used on the route, including "The Spirit of Oregon," which is making its last run this month in Hillsboro, Ore. Four or five rail cars would hold about 180 passengers.

Duncan said an agreement on obtaining and operating a train needs to be completed by February if supporters are to begin running the train next year.

Several tours would be offered daily, with a dinner ride in the evening, Coe said. The tours could be offered year-round, giving skiers and other tourists another reason to stay in the area.

The four cities have worked on the idea for two years.

"It's not an issue that if we can't do it in 1994 we are not going to do it at all," Duncan said. "It's workable and the area has all the right ingredients."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

*"Quite literally, a man's memory is what he forgets with."
— Odell Shepard.*

Some bridge players who can remember every card played have poor memories of dates, appointments and other important matters. To meet the special needs of bridge players, a daily calendar that includes major bridge dates, and an interesting hand for each day of the year, is now available. The deals are selected writings of seven leading bridge writers and should satisfy every class of bridge player. Today's hand is an example.

South ruffs East's club ace and cashes two high trumps, obviously unhappy when East discards. South then leads the diamond king to East's ace, and success or failure rests with East's return.

If East leads a routine club for South to ruff, South steals the game. He leads his low diamond to dummy, and West must win his queen now while he still can. He wins and shifts to hearts, but it's too late. Dummy's ace wins. South discards two hearts on dummy's diamonds, and the defenders get only three tricks.

To beat the game, East must return the heart king after winning his diamond ace. This brave play (Merriam Coup) knocks out dummy's entry before the diamonds are established and the defenders win four tricks.

To order the specialized daily bridge calendar, send $9.95, plus $3 shipping and handling, to Copp Clark Pitman, Ashlar House, YYZ YYZ-700192-M01, Box 706, Farmingdale NY 11735-0706.

Magazine calls Turner top sports world figure

ST. LOUIS — Ted Turner, head of Turner Broadcasting and owner of the Atlanta Braves and Atlanta Hawks, replaced Nike chairman Phil Knight as the most powerful person in sports in this year's list issued by The Sporting News.

NBA commissioner David Stern, who was No. 1 in 1991, was second, followed by baseball union head Donald Fehr, NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol and TCI chief executive officer John Malone.

NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue was sixth, followed by International Management Group chairman Mark McCormick, Chicago White Sox and Chicago Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf, and Knight and Tribune Co. chairman Charles Brumback.

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman was 22nd, trailing NFL union head Gene Upshaw (14th), NBC president Robert Wright (16th), baseball management negotiator Richard Ravitch (17th), U.S. Olympic Committee executive director Harvey Schiller (18th), football agent Leigh Steinberg (19th) and NBA union head Charles Grantham (21st).

The only athletes listed were Michael Jordan (73rd), Reggie White (82nd) and Shaquille O'Neal (90th).

Getzky collects the most votes in NHL All-Star ballots

TORONTO — For the first time since the fans started voting eight years ago, center Wayne Getzky of the Los Angeles Kings led all players in NHL All-Star balloting, according to figures released by the league on Monday.

Getzky, who will be playing in his 14th All-Star game, received 236,578 votes, just ahead of Toronto goalie Felix Potvin, who had 231,993.

Joining Getzky and Potvin as Western Conference starters are wingers Brett Hull of St. Louis (195,256), and Pavel Bure of Vancouver (175,030) and defenseman Chris Chelios of the Chicago Blackhawks (208,691) and Paul Coffey of Detroit (189,839).

The players will face off Jan. 22 at New York's Madison Square Garden.

Fire kills top harness racing horse, injures 3 others in Italy

BARBERINO DEL MUGELLO, Italy — One of the world's top harness racing horses, Park Avenue Kathy, was killed and three others were injured in a fire that broke out in their horse van.

Park Avenue Kathy died on the highway about 18 miles north of Bologna, where the fire started Sunday night. The 7-year-old U.S.-born trotter was trained in Sweden and has won many of Europe's most important races.

Three other horses, also racing out of a Milan-based stable, were injured and taken to a veterinary hospital in Bologna. The horses — Meadow Prophet, First Sid and Columbian — suffered serious burns and other injuries.

Miami's Scott Miller goes head-over-heels Monday night after being hit by San Diego's Sean Vanhorse during the opening kickoff.

Chargers jolt the Dolphins

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Stan Humphries threw to the right guys and Scott Mitchell didn't, meaning San Diego got its revenge and Miami didn't get its playoff spot.

Humphries threw three touchdown passes in a span of 8:40; two to Anthony Miller, and rookie Natrone Means scored on runs of 1, 65 and 2 yards Monday night, leading the Chargers past Miami 45-20 for the Dolphins' fourth straight loss.

Mitchell was intercepted three times as the Dolphins (9-6) failed to clinch a wild-card spot. They can still do so with a victory at New England on Sunday. Even if they lose that game they'll still have a sliver of a chance, but would need help from several teams.

The Chargers (7-8) looked like a playoff team, even though they are out of the postseason running for the 10th time in 11 years. The 45 points were the most they've scored since beating Miami 50-28 in San Diego on Sept. 7, 1986. San Diego's season-high six TDs matched the total from its previous seven home games.

And the Chargers avenged a 31-0 loss at Miami last Jan. 10 in the divisional playoffs. Humphries threw four interceptions in that game, including three in the pivotal second quarter when Miami went ahead 21-0 on three Dan Marino touchdown passes.

But Marino and cornerback Troy Vincent, who had two of those second-

Arkansas still No. 1 in AP poll

The Associated Press

Arkansas, taken to overtime by Tulsa in its only game last week, lost a little bit of its lead over North Carolina on Monday in The Associated Press college basketball poll.

With the top seven teams holding their places in the rankings, the Razorbacks (7-0) were named No. 1 on 46 ballots, six less than last week, and received 1,573 points from the national media panel.

The Tar Heels (9-1), who beat Pittsburgh on their road in their only game, had 11 first-place votes and 1,511 points, 43 more than Duke.

The Blue Devils (6-0), who were taken to the final minutes at Iowa, received three first-place votes as did No. 4 Temple (4-0), which was idle. Kentucky (7-1), which won the Maui

Spread bothers favorite, underdog

Huskers, Seminoles both take issue with 17-point margin for Florida State

The Associated Press

MIAMI — Nebraska has won everything this season except the respect of the oddsmakers.

Although the Cornhuskers are 11-0 and ranked second in The Associated Press poll, they are 17-point underdogs against No. 1 Florida State in the Orange Bowl.

It's the biggest point spread in a 1-2 matchup in at least 20 years and one of the largest ever in a major bowl game. And neither team is happy about it.

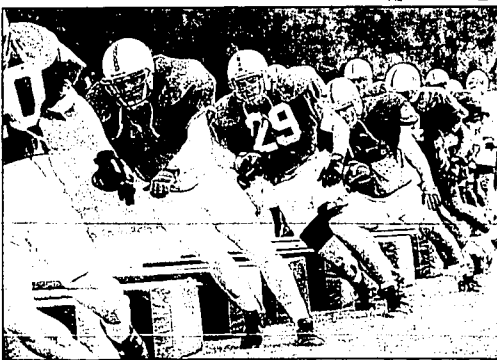

"It bothers me," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said Monday. "When you're a big favorite, it inspires the other team, it infuriates the other team. I wish they had made us 17-point underdogs. I sure hope they know what they're talking about."

Nebraska's Trev Alberts, who won the Butkus Award as the nation's top linebacker, thinks the betting line is way off.

"I'd be a fool to sit here and say we're proud and pleased to be a 17-point underdog," said Alberts, who dislocated his elbow a month ago against Oklahoma but is expected to play on New Year's night.

"It could be the best thing that's ever happened to us, though. We've used that as a motivation to work hard and get ready."

Nebraska beat five bowl teams this year, captured its third straight Big Eight championship and won at least nine games for the 25th consecutive season. But some people don't think the Cornhuskers belong in the same class as Florida State (11-1), which played a monster schedule that included seven bowl teams and three schools currently ranked in the Top 10.

The Seminoles did lose at Notre Dame 31-24, but they crushed almost everyone else on their schedule and pulled off a rare feat by leading the nation in scoring offense and defense.

Bowl records are another factor in the huge point spread. Florida State has won

Teams look for 1st-round playoff bye

The Associated Press

While nine of 12 NFL playoff berths are set with a week to go in the season, several teams still don't know if they'll have first-round byes or if they'll play in wild-card games.

And despite its top-to-bottom mediocrity, there's a good chance the NFC Central could be the only division this season with three playoff teams.

Green Bay and Detroit, both 9-6, clinched berths on Sunday and will play for the NFC Central title Sunday at Pontiac, Mich., a game overshadowed by the Dallas-New York Giants game for the East title at East Rutherford, N.J. In each case, the loser gets a wild-card spot.

San Francisco (10-5) has clinched the West. That leaves one spot open in the NFC, and Minnesota (8-7) has the inside track; it has to beat Washington (4-11) on Friday.

That would leave the Cowboys-Giants winner and the 49ers with byes the first week. In the first round, the Vikings probably would play at the Cowboys-Giants loser and Detroit and Green Bay would meet again, this time at the home field of Sunday's winner.

If Minnesota loses, Philadelphia and New Orleans could qualify. And it also could create mass confusion with the fifth tie-breaker, net conference points, deciding it if all three teams finish 8-8.

That would happen if the Vikings lose, the Eagles win in San Francisco Monday night, and the Saints win at home against Cincinnati.

Minnesota has the edge at minus-11 to minus-32 for Philadelphia and minus-12 for New Orleans.

In the AFC, all three division winners have been decided: Buffalo (11-4) in the East, Houston (11-4) in the Central and Kansas City (10-5) in the West. Houston, the NFL's hottest team with 10 consecutive victories, clinched a first-round bye.

Buffalo needs a win at Indianapolis on Sunday or losses by Kansas City and Houston to join the Oilers with a first-round bye and clinch home field through the playoffs.

Denver (9-6) is one wild card, and Miami (9-6) is in position to clinch a second with a victory at New England

Looking for a little humility? Just hit the slopes

I found a great way to downsize an ego — a first-time ski trip.

At least it worked for me. I left every strip of pride I had on the slopes of Pomeroy Sunday.

I may not show my face in the pub for a month or two. If I do, I'm certain I'll run into someone who was at the resort that day and is still laughing at me.

Not that I actually saw anyone bent over howling at me — except, of course, for the friends who set me up to be a public laughingstock. But I know the others were at least snickering.

There is a problem with skiing I never thought about until faced with acres of mountain stretching between me and the comfort of the lodge. In other sports, the footgear gives traction. But with skiing, someone locks you into boots more secure than the county jail and clips them onto sticks that are waxed on the bottom to make them slippery.

How then do you stand up?

I found out you don't.

On the bunny hill the instructor was helpful and full of encouragement. I only fell once on three trips with the tow rope. Then he said it was time to take the chair lift.

What?

"You're ready," he said.

What?

The chair lift meant the real mountain, even if it was the Milk Run, the path that didn't have enough slope to give a real skier a good warmup.

Successfully sliding off the lift, I thought I just might be ready.

None.

Sometime during my half-dozen falls while moving to the top of the run, my brain lost connection with my ankles.

I fell trying to go straight. I fell trying to turn. I fell trying to stand up.

Less than a hundred yards into the run, I was ready to quit. But I couldn't. I was locked into ski boots, standing on a pile of snow, wearing slippery boards, with more distance than I cared to imagine between

Little-known Gartner collects his 600th career NHL goal

NEW YORK (AP) — The first five players to reach 600 goals in the NHL were stars. The sixth, Mike Gartner, isn't as well known, making it all the more special.

Number 600 is a memorable plateau in any career. Gartner said after reaching the level Sunday night in the New York Rangers' 8-3 victory over the New Jersey Devils. "But, knock wood, hopefully I'll be saying the same thing about other goals, too."

Only Gordie Howe (801), Wayne Gretzky (780), Marcel Dionne (731), Phil Esposito (717) and Bobby Hull (610) have scored more goals than Gartner, a 15-year veteran who is now 34.

He is the only player in NHL history to score 30-or-more goals in 14 consecutive seasons. Though he reached the 50-goal and 100-point barriers only once, when he had 50 goals and 52 assists for the Washington Capitals in 1984-85, he has never scored below 33 goals in a season.

"There's been a lot said about athletes slowing down at age 34, 35, and so on," Rangers coach Mike Keenan said. "Mike Gartner has the skating skills to play as long as he wants. He's an example to guys 10 years younger than he is."

After the milestone goal, Gartner put his arms up in celebration before being engulfed by teammates. The entire Rangers team skated from the bench, and Glenn Healy, the Rangers goaltender, skated icelength into the Devils' zone to mob Gartner.

"It was a great feeling of relief," Gartner said. "It's been kind of hovering for a few games and to get it done at MSG (Madison Square Garden) in front of the fans here was pretty exciting."

Gartner, president of the NHL Players Association, retains considerable respect from his peers for his dedication to the game on and off the ice.

"Mike is a professional in every respect, in terms of his approach and demeanor," Keenan said. "Regarding his preparation, he is ready to play every night."

Gartner's stamina and fitness ethic are as well-known as his goal total. He has attributed the emphasis on stamina to his father, Al, who chose to enroll him in power skating classes rather than hockey schools.

Gartner won the NHL's fastest skater competition at the last two All-Star games, despite being the competition's oldest entrant both times. Last year, Gartner scored four goals in the All-Star game and was selected Most Valuable Player.

Johnson leads Hornets past Pistons

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Larry Johnson had 29 points, 20 rebounds and 11 assists and Alonzo Mourning scored 30 points Monday night to lead the Charlotte Hornets to a 109-94 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

It was Johnson's first triple-double of the season and the third in his NBA career. Johnson was 13-for-18 from the field as the Hornets shot 56 percent to hand the Pistons their fourth straight loss.

The Hornets, winners of three straight overall, have won their last six at Charlotte Coliseum and are 11-2 on their homecourt.

Terry Mills led the Pistons with 26 points, while Joe Dumars and Olden Polynice each scored 22. Polynice also grabbed 14 rebounds, but Detroit was outbounded 48-31.

Magie 122, Kings 110

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal had 17 rebounds and 11 assists and reserve Dennis Scott scored 16 of his 20 points in the final nine minutes, sparking Orlando over Sacramento.

Temple falls in 1st loss of the season

NEW YORK (AP) — Travis Best scored 19 points Monday night, including seven of Georgia Tech's last nine, and the 15th-ranked Yellow Jackets handed Temple its first loss of the season, 57-51 in the opening round of the ECAC Holiday Festival.

Georgia Tech (8-1), which will play the winner of the St. John's-Fairleigh Dickinson game for the title on Wednesday night, had the better shooting night despite making just 43 percent (22-of-51) from the field. Temple (4-1) made only 27 percent (18-of-67).

No. 13 Indiana 65

stretch, breaking open a close game against the Kings, who got 40 points from Mitch Richmond but still lost for the 11th time in 12 road games.

Anfernee Hardaway had 23 points and nine assists for the Magic, now 9-3 at home this season. Wayman Tisdale scored 22 points and Lionel Simmons and Spud Webb 16 each for Sacramento.

O'Neal had 22 points and 10 rebounds in the first half, helping the Magic to a 64-59 halftime lead.

Bullets 96, Bucks 87

MILWAUKEE — Rex Chapman scored seven of his 23 points in the final 3:48 after Washington withstood a fierce third-quarter rally by Milwaukee.

The Bullets won for just the second time in 14 games in a meeting of the teams with the worst records in the Eastern Conference. Don MacLean led Washington (8-18) with 28 points, and Tom Gugliotta finished with 21.

Suns 118, Celtics 102

PHOENIX — Oliver Miller scored eight of his 17 points in a 1:36 span late in the game as Phoenix stifled a Boston rally.

Jazz 97, Timberwolves 93

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 34 points and Utah used a 17-4 fourth-quarter run to hand Minnesota its sixth straight loss.

The game was tied 74-74 with 8:34 to play, but the Jazz held the Timberwolves to just one field goal in the next 6:27, taking a 91-76 lead with 2:07 left. David Griffin, who had scored just 13 points in the four previous games he played this season, led the 17-6 run with five points.

Chuck Person, who scored 23 points for the Wolves, hit a 3-pointer with 2.1 seconds left to close the final margin to four.

No. 25 W. Kentucky 59

INDIANAPOLIS — Western Kentucky scored 23 points off turnovers and 14 on offensive rebounds in a 59-45 win over Princeton in the opening round of the Hoosier Classic.

No. 17 Wisconsin 80

MADISON, Wis. — Tracy Webster broke a tie on a 3-pointer with 1:13 remaining and added two key free throws down the stretch as Wisconsin held off Stanford.

After 3 wins, Patriots coach sees work ahead

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — All of a sudden, New England coach Bill Parcells finds himself having to temper the enthusiasm of fans who have known losing for so long that a three-game winning streak is cause for euphoria.

While Parcells is pleased with the development of his team, whose 38-0 defeat of inept Indianapolis on Sunday was its biggest margin of victory in 14 seasons, he sees plenty of room for improvement.

Fans calling in to Boston radio talk shows Monday gushed about the Patriots — who had a seven-game losing streak before consecutive wins over Cincinnati, Cleveland and the Colts — making the playoffs next season.

"I think the demise of a team or the ascension of a team are both accelerated percentage-wise before they should be," Parcells said. "I'm just happy we played solid."

Parcells basked in the afterglow of his team's domination of the Colts, but did not get carried away with praise for the players:

On rookie quarterback Drew Bledsoe: "I think he's coming along, but he's got a long way to go, a LONG way to go, probably a lot farther than he thinks. He's certainly managing the team a lot better, but by osmosis you should be able to do that."

On his offensive line, which he allowed just 23 sacks this year: "They're a little less than perfect now. This line is turning into a pretty decent line, but there's a lot of room for improvement."

On the late-season winning streak giving the team confidence for next year: "It only carries over if we upgrade in the offseason, if we draft well, if we make a commitment to the off-season program. We still need to do a lot of things correctly within the organization.

The thing that made Parcells happy about Sunday's win was the performance of several younger players — such as Corey Crook, a rookie running back who had 93 yards on 21 carries.

He also singled out wide receiver Vincent Brisby, who called a time out with seconds remaining in the first half instead of celebrating what appeared to be a touchdown by tight end Ben Coates. The officials eventually ruled it was not a touchdown, but the Patriots had enough time to score on the next play.

"I want a team that's smart," Parcells said. "If you're a smart team, you win a lot more games than if you're a dumb team."

The coach said the most important aspect of winning is that it's a payoff for players who have worked hard and had nothing more than a few close losses to show for it until the last three weeks. "Whenever you have a new group, somehow you have to convince them that you have a plan and that eventually something's going to work out for them," said Parcells, who is completing his first year as the Patriots' coach.

Eventually, it's nice to see some things go well. I think it's done us a lot of good."

And with only Sunday's home game against Miami left, the winning has made the 1993 season seem too short for Parcells.

"I kind of wish we had a little further to go," he said.

Saints can't put brakes on skid

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — How far will the New Orleans Saints have fallen if they fail to make the playoffs? So far they would be only the third team since the 1970 AFC-NFC realignment to start 5-0 or better and fail to play in the postseason.

"It's been pretty hard to do since they added the wild cards," John Chymczuk, a researcher at Elias Sports Bureau in New York, said Monday. "Back when just a division champion went, you might see a team with a winning record finish second in their division and not make the playoffs. In the last 23 years, only New England and Washington have done it, though."

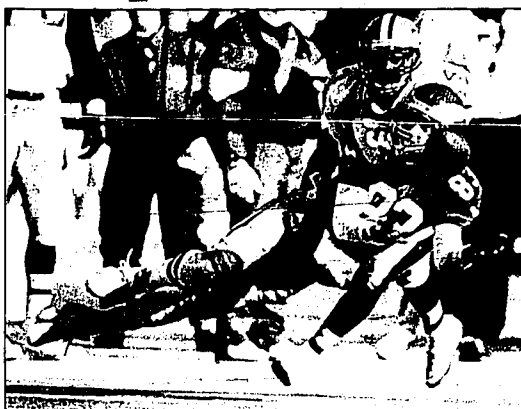

In 1974, the Patriots opened 5-0, notching victories over Miami, the Giants, the Rams, Baltimore and the Jets, then lost seven of the next nine to finish 7-7 and tied for third in the AFC East.

In 1978 the Redskins beat Patriots, Eagles, Cardinals, Jets, Cowboys and the Lions only to finish 8-8 and in third place in the conference.

The Saints' 37-26 loss to Philadelphia on Sunday dropped them to 7-8. A victory could have almost wrapped up the franchise's fourth straight playoff appearance.

"We're not playing very well," coach Jim Mora said Monday. "We're just not and I could get into a lot of reasons, but I'm not going to now. We're not as good a football team as we were a year ago or two years ago. That's obvious by the scores and the results."

The Saints, who led the NFL in fewest points allowed for two straight years and surrendered only 202 last year, already have given up 330 points this season.

"You just can't say we're doing one thing wrong," free safety Gene Atkins said. "It's the whole nine yards. There's a whole lot of everything."

The offensive line, which allowed an NFL-low 15 sacks last season, has allowed 40 this season. New Orleans has 10 interceptions for 133 yards and no touchdowns.

The Saints' opponents have 20 for 421 yards and five touchdowns.

The struggling offense has completed just 57 percent of its passes averaging 6.59 yards and scoring 16 touchdowns. The rushing game has all but disappeared with quarterback Wade Wilson the second leading runner, with 230 yards on 31 carries.

The defense has allowed opponents to gain 2,006 yards — an average of 4.2 yards a carry.

"I'm disappointed in our record over the past 10 weeks," Mora said. "I didn't expect it. I didn't expect we would have this record. Ten weeks ago, if you had asked me if this was going to happen, I'd have said, 'I don't think so.'"

Mora refused to speculate about anticipated changes, saying evaluations and decisions would be made after the season.

"The way things are going, you're going to see some changes during the offseason," linebacker Rickey Jackson said. "We need more changes in personnel. I mean, we've got some good young players, but we need some changes."

Rypien looks to future with a different team

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — Mark Rypien has been lamenting for weeks about his future with the Washington Redskins. After their worst beating ever by arch rival Dallas, the quarterback who took the Redskins to the Super Bowl two years ago has concluded it's over.

"There's a time to move on, not that you want to," Rypien said in the locker room Sunday night after the 38-3 loss to the Cowboys. "But they're looking for another route to go to, and as a player, you've got to face reality sometimes and swallow it."

Ever since he was benched by Redskins quarterback Mark Rypien does not expect to be with Washington next season.

Redskins coach Richie Petitbon in early November, Rypien, 31, a former Washington State University and Spokane high school star, has been throwing out hints that after taking the Redskins to the playoffs the past three years, this 4-11 season may be his last with them.

Even when Petitbon, turned to him again two weeks ago, Rypien said he felt his fate "may have been etched in stone already ... but you still want to give it your all ... (and) go out with a bang."

The most obvious sign from the Redskins came last week when general manager Charley Casserly let a Dec. 23 deadline for reworking contracts expire, without trying to cut a new deal with him, Rypien said.

Casserly said no decision on Rypien's status would be made until after the season. But he also made it clear two weeks ago that Rypien's performance in the final three games of the season would have to improve.

"We need our quarterbacks to play better; whether they can or not, that's a decision we'll have to make," he said.

Rypien had both his best and worst games of the season against the Cowboys. But the best was back in September and the worst was Sunday when he completed only 12 passes for 81 yards and was intercepted twice.

High school coaches resign after drinking incident

BRISTOL, Conn. (AP) — Most of a high school's football coaching staff have resigned in the wake of a team trip in which students drank alcohol and one got so drunk he had to be hospitalized.

Head football coach Al Mancini, three of his assistants, an assistant track coach and a volunteer coach at Central High School resigned just before the Christmas break, superintendent Edward Maher said Monday.

"They decided to submit letters as a result of our discussions," Maher said, declining to elaborate.

The drinking occurred during a Booster Club trip to the Yale-Harvard football game in New Haven, Conn., on Nov. 20.

Eight members of the football team were suspended for five days after admitting drinking on the trip. One student became so sick he was taken to Yale-New Haven Hospital.

Maher said the 60 to 70 students who went on the trip with the six coaches were seated within sight of the coaches at the game, although they were "not in the same close area."

dent's got the alcohol and said there are indications they got it in Bristol.

"With everything going on and everything that's happened it was the best thing for me to do," Mancini said. "It's been a rough year."

Mancini, a teacher in Bristol since 1976 and head coach since 1987, will continue as a physical education teacher.

Mancini said he did not become aware of the drinking until a student became sick. Assistant Coach Doug Jackson said he believed he and the other coaches were forced to resign.

"I'm not happy about it and I don't like it. Those people messed with our livelihoods over something they called poor supervision," Jackson said. "The kids get drunk and we get blamed."
