Meyer signs to buy mall

Blue Lakes center sale could still be 2 months away

By Mick Norrington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fred Meyer Inc. has moved closer to buying Blue Lakes Mall, and some mall merchants are beginning to contemplate the future of their stores.

"We signed a purchase and sale agreement today," said Rob Boley, vice president of investor relations, Tuesday.

Tom Mikesell, owner of 50 Minute Photo in the mall, said he and other mall tenants have meetings scheduled this morning with Fred Meyer officials, apparently to discuss their store leases.

Boley said he didn't know about the meetings with tenants. And he said that a purchase agreement still doesn't mean that Fred Meyer is buying the mall.

Fred Meyer officials signed the agreement and sent it to officials with Equitable Real Estate. If Equitable signs the agreement Fred Meyer officials will continue looking into the possibilities of using the Blue Lakes Mall site as the home of a new giant retail store, Boley said.

"There is no time frame, no schedule at this point," Boley said. "First we still need to see if the project is feasible before we could get serious."

Equitable will sign that purchase agreement, and the mall should be sold in about two months, said an officer with Equitable.

Fred Meyer officials have been looking at the Blue Lakes Mall since July. And with the purchase agreement they will begin their "due diligence" process of studying the traffic flow, tenant leases, architectural design and financial operations of the mall.

No price tag has been set on the mall. Fred Meyer is a Portland, Ore.-based retail chain with more than 130 multi-department stores across the Western states.

Fred Meyer sells a vast array of merchandise, including groceries, clothing, hardware, jewelry and eyeglasses. Offerings vary at individual stores.

Blue Lakes Mall in Twin Falls is a step nearer having a new owner.

Rangeland rules revised

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In what environmentalists fear signals a major retreat from an earlier attempt to preserve federal land, the Clinton administration is considering a plan to give local residents more say over grazing rules.

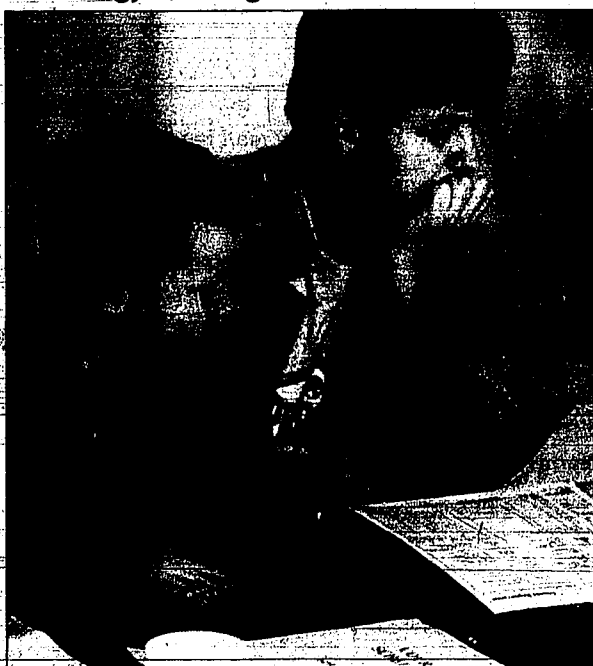

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt and other agency officials said Tuesday range preservation standards in Babbitt's original plan last August would be reduced to broad mandates for managing land.

Under Babbitt's new plan, the government would offer financial incentives for ranchers who take the proper steps to conserve 270 million acres of western rangeland used to graze livestock. Interior Department officials said Tuesday.

Ranchers who follow sound conservation practices to preserve streams, desert areas and other natural habitat for wildlife and plants could get a break on grazing fees under such a proposal, officials said.

Also being considered are proposals to give local communities more control over how federal lands are managed.

Waiting, waiting

Paula Henson waits to complete her registration for the spring semester at the College of Southern Idaho while her son, Bubba, 5, proves to be a fine waiting companion. The college began its registration Tuesday and will continue through Friday. Preregistration was up 10.6 percent this year over last year with 1,847 academic and vocational students already registered.

Leaders dream of smoke-free nation

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Health leaders and seven past surgeons general called on the government Tuesday to tax cigarettes $2 more a pack, ban smoking in public places, restrict tobacco ads and fully regulate cigarettes in an effort to make America smoke free by the year 2000.

"This nation remains a tobacco's death grip" three decades after first being told cigarettes cause cancer, Dr. Alfred Munser, president of the American Lung Association, said as the group sought President Clinton's endorsement of their plans.

Health groups marked the 30th anniversary of the original surgeon general's report on tobacco by scolding Congress and presidents alike for their past efforts to restrict a habit still blamed for 420,000 deaths a year.

Surgeon General Jocelyna Elders said 2 million lives have been saved since her predecessor, the late Dr. Luther Terry, first warned Americans on Jan. 11, 1964, that smoking caused cancer.

Havel accepts Clinton's partnership proposal

The Associated Press

PRAGUE, Czech Republic — President Clinton came to this city of medieval churches and cobblestone streets Tuesday and quickly won the support of Czech President Vaclav Havel for his plan to tighten Eastern Europe's ties with the NATO alliance.

Though the plan does not grant the immediate full membership that the former Warsaw Pact adversaries want, Havel said his republic was "ready to implement it immediately in concrete terms."

Before diving into what could be difficult diplomacy, Clinton was accorded a ceremonial welcome in the floodlit courtyard of Prague Castle alongside the ancient Charles Bridge.

Later, he toured the city's old section as thousands of people crowded close to get a glimpse, and he had dinner with the family of a man who had been a fellow student at Oxford University 24 years ago.

The night ended with the two presidents visiting a jazz club, where Clinton played a new saxophone presented to him by Havel. Just as they were leaving after nearly a two-hour stay, there was a loud report — like a firecracker — outside behind a crowd of bystanders.

Stunned by the sound, Secret Service agents had Clinton stay inside the club until his armored limousine could be backed up on the sidewalk, putting the car's door close to the building's entrance. The president got into his car with barely a glance at the waiting crowd of hundreds of people.

He rode back to his hotel without incident.

Prague, one of the grandest cities in Europe, was the scene of the Velvet Revolution that helped break down the Soviet empire and reintroduce democracy to Czechoslovakia.

Havel, the dissident who bucked Moscow and won, was at the airport to greet the president on his arrival from the two-day NATO summit meeting in Brussels, Belgium. The NATO leaders approved military training exercises with former Warsaw Pact members but not the

Panel endorses major tax shift

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — A legislative tax panel Tuesday endorsed a major overhaul of Idaho's property-tax system after hearing that the state is on the verge of a full-blown tax revolt.

Under the reform proposal, local property taxes would no longer pay for school maintenance and operation or for county court systems. Their funding would come from the state's General Fund.

The plan, the work of Rep. Wally Wright, D-Bayview, is similar to one he pushed unsuccessfully last year. It also would repeal the personal property tax.

The Legislature's special joint committee on taxation OK'd the general thrust — but not the specifics — of Wright's plan.

The estimated $290 million cost of such a shift, Wright said, could be paid for by levying a 2 percent sales tax on all goods, services and entities exempt from the current 5 percent sales tax.

Wright argued that, given the high level of public frustration with property taxes identified in a statewide survey, such a major shift is necessary.

"We cannot continue to just nip at the problem," he said, adding that taxpayers want schools and courts off the property tax. "Why are we afraid to listen to them?"

Rep. Jim Kempton, R-Albion, argued against Wright's proposal, saying it makes no sense to create a two-tiered sales tax.

"Exemptions should be made for merit, and if they're made they should be total," Kempton said.

Lawmakers retool funding for schools

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — One day after Gov. Cecil Andrus challenged them to retool Idaho's public schools for the future, state lawmakers began planning how to take the "spiritual steps" he envisioned.

The process likely will consist of three separate but related steps.

Defining in law what Idaho schools should do, now and in the future.

Using much of the anticipated new tax revenues — perhaps as much as the $95.5 million in extra funding schools have requested — to carry out that definition.

Developing a fair way to distribute state aid to local districts.

Hovering over the Legislature like a dank fog is the lawsuit being pressed by more than 40 school districts. They say they don't receive enough state aid to provide a constitutionally mandated "thorough" education.

Just what "thorough" means is a matter of some dispute. A special legislative committee developed an eight-point definition that emphasized basic academic skills, high technology and values such as honesty, respect for authority and self-discipline.

A similar group appointed by Andrus included such standards as "understand and appreciate different cultures" and "contribute to society as caring, responsible and thoughtful citizens."

The Legislature is more likely to be guided by the first definition.

South's rain moves north, turns into sleet, snow

The Associated Press
Heavy rain fell across parts of the South on Tuesday, changing to ice in the Appalachians and snow near the Great Lakes.
Temperatures fell to 30 below zero in northern Minnesota.
Areas of rain developed across the Gulf Coast states. Some of the rain was heavy, including 1.76 inches at Mobile, Ala.
Moist air flowed north from the Gulf Coast to the eastern Great Lakes and the middle Atlantic Coast states.
A few areas of snow, sleet and freezing rain developed in sections of the southern Appalachians. Roads were icy in eastern Kentucky and western North Carolina, where two traffic deaths were blamed on slippery roads.
The system over the South was expected to produce more snow and ice across the mid-Atlantic states by Wednesday. Winter storm watches were in effect through Wednesday night across eastern Pennsylvania, parts of Elko County - Today mostly sunny west. Partly cloudy east. Highs from the mid-30s and low 40s east to the 40s west. Tonight patchy valley fog mainly northeast and along the Humboldt river. Otherwise fair skies. Lows locally near 10 above to near 20. Thursday partly cloudy northeast. Mostly sunny elsewhere. Highs from the upper 30s northeast to near 50 west.

Weather summary

An upper level low pressure system moved through eastern Idaho, producing light snow Tuesday afternoon. This system moved in from the west where snow and rain were reported during the morning.
The movement of low pressure has created a new weather system that is developing in the Pacific. Satellite images show that weather system is moving toward the northwest coast.
Precipitation across the state was light Tuesday with some locations receiving only a trace or more. Pocatello reported two hundredths of an inch of precipitation.
At 3 p.m., temperatures across the state ranged from the upper 20s to the upper 40s.
The highest temperature in the state Tuesday was 49 degrees at Lewiston. Bear Lake reported the lowest at 3 degrees.
Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 79 degrees at Brownsville, Texas. Roseau, Minn., reported the lowest temperature at 30 degrees below zero.

New Jersey, southeastern New York and parts of southern New England.
Winter weather advisories were posted for northwestern Virginia, West Virginia's Eastern Panhandle and western Maryland.
Cold air extended behind a cold front sliding eastward across the Great Lakes.
Low clouds and light rain blanketed a large part of the Pacific Northwest as a storm system approached from the Pacific.
Early Tuesday, overnight lows were well below zero across parts of the northern Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley.
Afternoon temperatures ranged from below zero in eastern North Dakota and northern Minnesota to the teens and 20s across parts of Iowa, Wisconsin and northern Illinois.
Lows included 29 below zero at Bemidji, Minn.; 26 below at Floodwood, Minn.; 23 below at Bottineau, N.D.; and 21 below at Grand Forks, N.D.
Tuesday morning's low for the Lower 48 states was 30 below zero at Roseau, Minn.

Immediate membership Poland and some others sought as a security blanket amid instability in Russia.
Clinton on Wednesday will try to persuade the leaders of Poland, Hungary and Slovakia that the alliance's halfway measure is the best way to avoid dangerous rifts in Europe.
"Our attitude toward the plan is very favorable," Havel said at a joint news conference with his American guest.
The incentive for wanting full membership quickly is to acquire with it assurances that the NATO allies would come to the assistance of any member that is attacked. The East is nervous such an attack could come from Russia.
Havel described the rise of ultra-nationalists and communists there as "very dramatic, extremely complex and very painful."

And yet, he said, "we believe that step by step, even in the Russian Federation, we will see democratization and a market economy."
Clinton offered assurances, meanwhile, that the "partnership for peace" could lead to full membership for East European nations.
His mood upbeat, he suggested that reporters with him in the opulent palace take note of the "modest little surroundings" where the Czech president has a huge office.
Earlier, in Brussels, he said of the East Europeans and the partnership: "They will clearly understand that this is a very serious proposal" that will expand NATO rather than limit it.

Lithuania quickly expressed its intent to enter the partnership.
Polish officials have called it an inadequate, though positive, first step.
But in Budapest, Hungarian Foreign Minister Geza Jozsef said he hailed the initiative and said the summit "provided a satisfactory answer to our region's security concerns."

"I'm glad Mr. Wright is carrying that (proposal) - I wouldn't touch it with a 10-foot pole."
But in the end, Kempton voted to endorse the concept behind Wright's plan, though he continued to insist that any sales-tax exemptions the Legislature decided to repeal should be taxed at the full 5 percent.
The vote came after panel members reviewed a public survey on the tax system conducted by researchers from Boise State University, Idaho State University and the University of Idaho.
"There may be a tax revolt brewing," James Weatherly, director of BSU's public affairs program, told the legislators.
The survey, commissioned by the Legislature last year, showed great unhappiness with property taxes, strong opposition to local-option taxes, and taxpayer frustration with a lack of information on how taxes are spent.
The survey found that 69 percent of respondents supported a proposal to limit property taxes to 1 percent of market value. A similar proposal on the 1992 ballot was rejected by 65.5 percent of voters.

In general, Weatherly said, the survey shows that people don't want new taxes but do want changes in the property tax system.
The researchers made questions to 2,909 people last fall, and 630 reported. That was enough to make the poll accurate within 3 percentage points, ISU's Paul Zelusz said.
However, the survey sample over-represented homeowners, older people and college-educated people relative to Idaho's overall population. That led some lawmakers to question the survey's validity.
Sen. Stan Hawkins, R-Union, asked Weatherly how voters could express strong support for a tax-limitation initiative a year after they overwhelmingly rejected a similar proposal.
Weatherly replied that it depends on which Idahoan people get. "With the information people have today, they would support it," he on Tuesday, House Education Chairman Ron Black took the first steps toward fleshing it out.

Black, a Twin Falls Republican, appointed four subcommittees to come up with specific proposals to implement the eight points, along with cost estimates. His committee will use those reports to put together its own public-school funding recommendations.
Black calls the effort a way to follow the Idaho Constitution's requirements, not an attempt to make the schools' lawsuit go away.
"We're charged with creating and maintaining a thorough system of education," he said. "The select committee has defined a thorough system of education. Now let's do it."
But over in the House-Senate budget committee, lawmakers were told that developing - and adequately funding - a thorough school system will be key to resolving the suit-out of court and making sure future suits don't occur.
"I think this would be controlled if you took control of the process yourselves, by saying 'This is what's necessary and appropriate,'" said David High, chief of civil litigation for the attorney-general's office.

out of the suit.
Senate Education Chairman John Hansen said that, with tax receipts running far ahead of projections, now is a rare chance to revise the formula without causing any districts to lose money.
"We may have the planets lined up where we can do something," the Idaho Falls Republican said.
Donald Armstrong, superintendent of the Pocatello school district and leader of a group of districts involved in the suit, said reforming the funding formula is inextricably tied to boosting overall school funding.
The superintendents of the districts involved in the suit have been meeting to try to work out a compromise formula. In-fighting between districts - property-rich vs. property-poor, urban vs. rural, large vs. small - has doomed several past attempts to reform the formula.
"We sincerely believe that if and when the Legislature appropriates adequate funds, we will have no difficulty in quickly arriving at an equitable distribution formula," Armstrong wrote Black in a letter dated Monday.

Scientists defend benefits of radiation experiment

BOSTON (AP) — Forty years ago, doctors injected uranium into a dozen patients on the brink of death.

All were hopelessly sick with brain tumors. Most lay in comas. There was slim chance the shots would do them any good.

The tests were cited by a congressional report as "repugnant." Some doctors say they are examples of the way medical science has always worked, engaging the unfortunate in the search for treatments that might help others generations later.

The congressional subcommittee report, issued in 1986, listed the uranium experiment at Boston's Massachusetts General Hospital as one of 31 "worrisome" examples. It said the human subjects "were essentially used as guinea pigs and calibration devices."

At the time, the report had little impact. But because of recent revelations about ethically questionable experiments during that period, including injecting plutonium into people without their knowledge, it has received new attention.

The Massachusetts General experiment struck the subcommittee as questionable because the data were shared with federal scientists who used it to set exposure standards for uranium workers. The panel also was skeptical whether treatment was truly a goal.

However, those who were there when the testing began in 1953 remember a simple humane mission — a cancer cure. Their work was a small part of a major effort that eventually

1950s experiments laid foundation for nuclear medicine

The Associated Press

Experiments performed in the 1950s laid the foundation for using radioactive material to examine what happens deep within the body, a field called nuclear medicine.

An estimated 11 million Americans undergo nuclear medicine scans annually. They are a standard means of diagnosing such diseases as cancer and heart trouble.

The 1950s experiments also helped prepare for the routine use of radiation beams to kill cancer. However, most Americans come in contact with medical radiation in an effort to find out what is wrong with them.

Eventually led to a cancer treatment that is still being used. And it was carried out "with the permission of the patients' families."

These differing viewpoints highlight the difficulty of judging the wisdom of radiation experiments conducted two generations ago.

Ethical standards have evolved. Committee reviews and elaborate consent forms are now routine for such research. Furthermore, the intense scientific excitement about the potential of radiation as a medical tool is now a distant memory.

Doctors working in the field back then maintain that their experiments fell within the mainstream of scientific investigation. The amounts of radioactive material used were often minuscule; the studies yielded data that eventually made the medical use of radiation commonplace.

"These experiments were carried out to find the information that we are using today," said Dr. Michel Ter-Pogossian of Washington University in St. Louis. "Every medical school in the country now has a very active, vibrant department of nuclear medicine, the existence of which can be directly traced to that period."

In the early 1950s, thanks to the Manhattan Project, radioactive material became available in large enough quantities to carry out meaningful experiments. The goal was to employ these substances to learn about the human body, to find new ways to diagnose diseases and ultimately to treat them.

Those who were there remember the times as being almost as thrilling as the development of penicillin few years before. "We entered into the use of radioactive material with great enthusiasm," remembered Dr. Belton Burrows of the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Boston.

"We had seen patients snatched from the grave because of the new antibiotics. The idea of coming up with a simple, practical, workable solution based on knowledge we could gain from (radioactive) tracer studies was very appealing."

It was in that atmosphere that doctors at Massachusetts General explored a new approach called neutron capture therapy — atom smashing to kill tumors.

Brain cancers are among the most difficult to treat. Even if they can be reached surgically, the cancer may form finger-like growths deep into healthy tissue.

Doctors theorized that, if they injected radioactive isotopes into the patients, their tumors would absorb more of the material than healthy tissue would. The next step would be to bombard patients with neutrons from a nuclear accelerator. This would split the isotopes, releasing radiation that would kill the tumor.

Doctors didn't know which radioactive element would work best. So Dr. Alfred Luessenhop, a recent medical school graduate working in the lab of Dr. William Sweet, tested one likely candidate — uranium-235 — on patients dying from brain tumors. Most were in comas, and there was little hope that the treatments would do them any good.

As in all drug studies, the first step was to measure safety, to see how much of the medicine patients could reasonably withstand. In this case, animal experiments suggested that kidney damage was a possible hazard.

With the approval of patients' families, the doctors gave varying doses of the uranium and took blood for signs of kidney damage. After the patients died, the doctors conducted autopsies to measure concentrations of uranium throughout their bodies.

"We wanted to find out how much we could give without damaging the kidney yet get enough into the tumor to kill it," Luessenhop recalled.

The approach failed. The uranium was not taken up in large enough quantities by the tumor. But the work continued, and researchers eventually settled on radioactive boron for neutron capture therapy. The treatment is still widely used in Japan, though not in the United States.

Luessenhop said the uranium treatment "obviously wasn't going to make it, so we quit and gave all the data" to scientists at Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee. They were interested in uranium's effects on the body so they could set safety standards for uranium workers.

Selden Bernard, one of the Oak Ridge researchers, said cancer treatment was clearly the Massachusetts General doctors' goal.

"Dr. Sweet had a major mission," Bernard remembered. "He wanted to cure brain tumors. We were able to use the data for the practical purpose of establishing the hazards to workers who handled uranium."

Welfare chiefs endorse 2-year benefit limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — State and local welfare administrators endorsed a two-year limit on benefits Tuesday, more education and training for poor women, and better collection of child support — all favored by President Clinton.

The American Public Welfare Association says its overhaul of the welfare system would cost the federal government $15 billion over five years.

It would require all parents on welfare to do something in exchange for their benefits: from working in a public service job to finishing high school, receiving substance abuse treatment, or caring for a disabled child.

"Welfare should reflect mutual responsibility on the part of the parent and the welfare agency," said Larry Jackson, commissioner of the Virginia Department of Social Services and chairman of the association task force that drafted the report. "Everyone is expected to do something."

The bipartisan association represents state human service departments and local welfare agencies and is expected to play an influential role in this year's debate over welfare reform.

The organization has met with the president's welfare reform task force, and in its draft report, the administration recommends adopting the association's ideas for streamlining the welfare bureaucracy.

The association also recommended: That welfare applicants be required to sign "an Agreement of Mutual Responsibility" acknowledging their responsibility to take steps toward self-sufficiency, while welfare agencies acknowledge the need to provide benefits and help obtaining necessary services.

A new jobs strategy for poor families and parents on welfare and increases in the $1.1 billion now spent on a federal job training and education program for welfare recipients.

A two-year limit on education and training for welfare recipients, followed by work requirements.

Exemptions from the two-year limit for parents deemed not ready for the work force, even after two years of education or training. Their responsibilities could include caring for a disabled child, receiving treatment for substance abuse, or finishing high school.

Increased collection of child support by improving methods of establishing paternity, issuing uniform child support guidelines and experimenting with guaranteed child support benefits.

On Tuesday, the co-chairmen of the administration's welfare reform task force said it is important that "those who run America's welfare programs are willing and committed to change."

But other welfare experts note that while the association is calling for more community service jobs, its member agencies have required few welfare recipients to work in exchange for their benefits since the last welfare reform bill passed in 1988.

Robert Rector, welfare analyst at the conservative Heritage Foundation, said both the association and Clinton plans are "frauds designed to protect the current welfare system, rather than reform it."

"We're about to repeat the fraudulent reforms of 1988 in which it was claimed that most welfare recipients would be required to work but virtually none were," Rector said.

Bobbitt says he pushed, but didn't strike, his wife

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — John Bobbitt returned to the witness stand Tuesday and denied ever striking his wife, saying he cut off his sex with her, the worst he ever did was "push her, hold her down, restrain her from hitting me."

On the second day of his wife's malicious wound trial, Bobbitt disputed a court record that a defense lawyer said showed Bobbitt pleaded guilty to assaulting his wife, Lorena.

"I never pleaded guilty to nothing," Bobbitt said.

Mrs. Bobbitt, 24, is charged with malicious wounding after he came home from a night of drinking June 23.

Defense attorney Blair Howard showed Bobbitt records from a court case that the lawyer said showed he pleaded guilty in March 1991 to assaulting his wife.

Bobbitt disputed the records. Commonwealth's Attorney Paul B. Ebert said the court did not issue a final finding of guilt in the case.

"I could never hit my wife," Bobbitt said. "I never hit her at all just push her, hold her down, restrain her from hitting me."

Instead, Bobbitt said, it was his wife who sometimes assaulted him. In one instance, he said, she got angry when they were in a restaurant because he was wearing sneakers and began hitting him as they drove home.

Congressman uses thumb for attention

WASHINGTON (AP) — A freshman congressman from New York wanted to make an impression on Tuesday, and he did so with his thumb.

Rep. Rick Lazio, R-N.Y., was seeking support from his colleagues for legislation he will introduce later this month to require a government study on the possible use of fingerprinting or other identification systems to help reduce welfare fraud.

To make his position clear, Lazio signed a letter to all other House members with his thumb print, not his signature.

Aspin pushes battlefield jobs for women

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Les Aspin has approved a new version of a policy designed to help open more jobs for women in ground combat units, a Pentagon spokeswoman said on Tuesday.

"We expect to be putting out the newly revised... ground combat definition, probably later this week. Certainly before Secretary Aspin leaves office, but possibly later this week," Pentagon's Kathleen deLaski said at a Pentagon briefing.

The most lethal specialties and units in the Army and the Marine Corps that are used to search and destroy the enemy — such as infantry and armor units — will not be affected by Aspin's new announcement, Ms. deLaski said.

DeLaski declined to outline the exact changes Aspin is expected to announce. But Ms. deLaski said Aspin is supportive of the new version because it had removed certain "ambiguities" in a draft policy that he ordered reviewed last week.

Pentagon sources said agreement has been reached with the services to more narrowly define the term "direct combat" in the new version.

Government OKs new pain reliever

WASHINGTON — For the first time in a decade, the Food and Drug Administration has approved marketing of an over-the-counter pain reliever containing a new analgesic ingredient.

The FDA approved naproxen sodium for non-prescription sale as a pain reliever. The drug previously had been available only as a prescription arthritis drug and has been marketed since 1976 under the trade name Naprosyn.

Naproxen sodium in its non-prescription form will be manufactured by Syntex Laboratories of Palo Alto, Calif., and marketed by Procter & Gamble Co. of Cincinnati under the trade name Aleve.

Military court blasts Navy over Tailhook

WASHINGTON — The nation's highest military court Tuesday ruled against an aviator who hoped to avoid trial in the Tailhook scandal, but also chastised the Navy for a "careless and amateurish approach" to the case.

"At worst, it raises the possibility of a shakedown in the rights accorded to military members in a criminal investigation, the court said.

The court ruled that Navy Lt. David Samples did not receive immunity from trial in return for his promise to cooperate with authorities. That finding cleared the way for Samples' court martial on a charge of indecent assault against a drunken woman at the 1991 convention in Las Vegas. When Samples raised the immunity issue in a Navy courtroom at the Norfolk, Va., naval base on Oct. 27, it stopped his trial.

Top union leader backs Clinton plan

WASHINGTON — America's foremost labor leader promised Tuesday that unions will be "aggressive players" in the fight to get President Clinton's health plan through Congress.

Unions are "totally committed to securing its enactment in this Congress," AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said.

While unions have promised all along to push for passage of the package, Kirkland's promise was the first indication of the degree of that support since the battle over the North American Free Trade Agreement, which strained Clinton's relations with organized labor.

"There is no question but that there is lingering concern about what NAFTA will mean and lingering pain on the part of our affiliates and on our part," he told a small group of reporters. "That makes it all the more important that we detach this issue from those lingering concerns."

Man freed after woman patient recants

NORWALK, Calif. — A man who served three years in prison after a mental patient accused him of rape was freed after she recanted and previously inadmissible DNA tests proved they didn't have sex.

Mark Bravo was a nursing supervisor at Norwalk's Metropolitan State Hospital when a patient accused him of rape in February 1990. Bravo maintained his innocence and co-workers testified he was with them when the alleged rape occurred.

NOW applauds ban on adult magazines

LOS ANGELES — The National Organization for Women is defending the county Fire Department's sexual harassment policy, which includes a ban on adult magazines in stations.

A firefighter, Playboy magazine and the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California have sued the Fire Department, contending that the policy violates free-speech rights.

On Monday, NOW filed a brief in U.S. District Court in defense of the ban.

Tammy Bruce, Los Angeles NOW chapter president, said allowing firefighters to read sexually explicit magazines in fire stations creates a hostile work environment for female employees.

Capt. Steven W. Johnson said his shift includes personal time and breaks when he should be allowed to read what he wants.

'Near-vegetative' patient doing nicely

BENNINGTON, Vt. — Two months after state and hospital officials tried to disconnect a "near-vegetative" patient from life support, the 30-year-old man is eating, communicating and operating a tape player.

Ronald Comeau, a drifter who tried to hang himself in a jail cell last summer, has gained 12 pounds since the Vermont Supreme Court ordered him restrained to feeding tubes in November, his brother said.

Poking with his forefingers, the brain-damaged man plays Led Zeppelin and Dr. Hook on the tape player his brothers gave him for Christmas. He is able to eat custard and soup. And though he can't talk, relatives say he communicates agreement and disagreement, and greets his brothers by uttering the first syllables of their names.

Workers strike GM over local issues

SHREVEPORT, La. — United Auto Workers members went on strike Tuesday at a General Motors small truck assembly plant here over local issues not covered in the union's national agreement with GM.

"It is the first strike at a GM plant since September 1992, when a car assembly plant in Lansing, Mich., was struck for four days. It also is the first strike since GM and the union reached a new national agreement in October.

Democrats call for look at Whitewater

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least five Democratic senators say a special counsel should investigate President Clinton's investment in a controversial Arkansas development.

The dashed White House hopes of framing Republican demands for such a review as politically motivated.

Separately, Republicans complained anew Tuesday that the Justice Department was dragging its feet in investigating the Whitewater Development Corp. and an Arkansas savings and loan run by the Clintons' partner in Whitewater.

Eight GOP lawmakers, including the Senate and House Republican leaders, said in a letter to Attorney General Janet Reno that the statute of limitations for any civil wrongdoing that could have occurred in Whitewater and Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan would expire as early as this March.

The eight Republicans said they had no evidence of wrongdoing. But they nonetheless urged Reno to seek waivers from the statute of limitations for the president, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, her former law firm, Clinton investment partner James McDougal and several others involved with the bank.

"These agreements will allow time for a complete and independent investigation," the Republicans said in the letter. "Furthermore, it will reassure the American public that anyone implicated in any wrongdoing will answer these allegations on their merits."

Reno's office had no immediate reaction to the letter, signed by GOP Sens. Bob Dole of Kansas, Larry Pressler of South Dakota and Alfonse D'Amato of New York, as well as Reps. Bob Michel of Illinois, James Leach of Iowa, Jim Meyers of Kansas, Hamilton Fish Jr. of New York and Bill Clinger of Pennsylvania.

The White House has agreed to turn over Clinton's Whitewater records to Justice Department investigators, but only under a subpoena

Clinton's had real estate deal

Key dates in President Clinton's real estate deal with the owner of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan of Arkansas:

- 1978 ■ James McDougal and his wife, Susan, form Whitewater Development Corp. partnership with Bill and Hillary Clinton to develop retirement and vacation homes on 200 acres in the Ozark Mountains.
- Clinton wins first gubernatorial campaign and appoints McDougal a top aide.
- 1980 Clinton loses re-election bid; McDougal goes into banking.
- 1982 McDougal buys Madison Guaranty.
- 1984 Federal regulators begin criticism of Madison Guaranty banking practices.
- 1985 ■ In April, McDougal sponsors a post-election fundraiser at Madison Guaranty to help Clinton retire a $50,000 campaign debt from 1984.
- Hillary Clinton prepares plan for state regulators to keep thrift open.
- 1989 Federal government closes the failed S&L, leaving taxpayers to pay a reported $47 million to $60 million to cover deposits.
- 1992 A report commissioned by the Clinton campaign says the Clintons lost $63,000 on Whitewater; Clintons sell their interest back to McDougal.
- 1993 ■ In July, Deputy White House Counsel Vincent Foster commits suicide. He represented the Clintons when they sold their Whitewater interest and oversaw the preparation of the corporation's delinquent tax returns.
- In October, Justice Dept. attorneys go to Little Rock to investigate Madison Guaranty and Whitewater; Justice Dept. also is examining the White House's handling of events after Foster's death.

that prohibits their release to the public.

But the White House has steadfastly opposed demands, led by Leach, that Reno name a special counsel to investigate allegations that Clinton, when Arkansas governor, improperly benefited from his business partnership with McDougal.

Investigators are trying to determine whether depositors' funds were diverted from Madison to help retire Clinton's 1984 gubernatorial campaign debt, and whether thrift money was improperly deposited in the Whitewater account.

Clinton and his wife, whose firm represented Madison, have denied any wrongdoing.

A central tenet of the White House damage-control strategy has been to label the attacks as part of a calculated Republican effort to smear Clinton as his first year in office draws to a close.

That strategy, however, has vilified as Democrats, beginning last week-end with Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, have endorsed the Leach proposal for a special counsel.

Since then, two other Clinton loyalists in the Senate, Charles Robb of Virginia and Bill Bradley of New Jersey, have said they believe a special counsel should be named, as have Sens. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska and Russell Feingold of Wisconsin.

"There is no evidence I have seen or heard about which suggests any wrongdoing on the part of the president or Mrs. Clinton," Feingold said. "But I do not believe it serves their interests or the interests of the nation to have any sort of shadow or questions about whether an unbiased investigation has been conducted."

Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos has "nothing to say" when asked about the impact of the Democratic defections. But he said the White House had not changed its position that a special counsel was unnecessary.

The defections come as more and more Democrats say the Clintons should commit to public disclosure of their Whitewater records and quell the political storm before it distracts from his 1994 legislative initiatives.

"Not only is there no proof of wrongdoing there is no suspicion of wrongdoing," said Democratic consultant Ann Lewis. Still, she said the White House was "going to have to deal with the public perception and the political dynamic."

"This will inevitably follow to its logical conclusion and that conclusion includes public disclosure," she said.

Another attempted child abduction reported in Missouri county

MARYLAND HEIGHTS, Mo. (AP) — Another girl was the victim of an attempted abduction Tuesday in an area where two girls were murdered and a third was assaulted, authorities said.

A 13-year-old girl told police a white man in his 40s jumped out of a car and grabbed her by the neck as she stood at a school bus stop, a police spokesman said. She said she broke free and ran to a nearby home, where residents called police.

The girl described the man as tall and thin with grayish hair and a mustache. She said he was driving an older model yellow Ford with rust spots, police Sgt. John Wachter said.

Maryland Heights Police Chief Neil Kurlander said the girl was scratched on her arm but not seriously injured. The bus stop is about a mile from where a man sexually assaulted and tried to kidnap an 11-year-old girl Nov. 8, Wachter said. Gary Stufflebean, 37, an auditor from Spring, Texas, is awaiting trial in that case.

Stufflebean was cleared as a suspect in the abduction and slayings of two other northwest St. Louis County girls in recent months. Angie Housman, 9, was abducted after getting off a school bus near her St. Ann home on Nov. 18. Her body was found in St. Charles County on Nov. 27. Cassidy Bentler, 10, was abducted on Dec. 4 as she walked to a friend's home near Bridgeton. Her body was found on Dec. 9 in St. Louis.

Noted Iwo Jima serviceman dies

ANTIGO, Wis. (AP) — John Bradley, the last survivor among the servicemen shown raising the U.S. flag on Iwo Jima in a famous World War II photograph, died today of a stroke. He was 70.

Bradley, who served in the Navy as a pharmacist-mate second class, helped five Marines raise the flag on Mount Suribachi on Feb. 23, 1945. The death at Langlade Memorial Hospital was announced in a release from the Bradley Funeral Home, which his family owned. "I just jumped in and gave them a hand," the elder Bradley said in a 1985 Public Broadcasting Service documentary. "I just came along; I was in a certain place at a certain time."

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth; two sisters; six sons; two daughters; and 15 grandchildren.

Mexican rebels say recognition would prevent move on capital

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A presidential troubleshooter called talks Tuesday, ending an uprising in southern Mexico, and rebels said they would negotiate if the military stopped bombing, withdrew its troops and recognized their movement.

Otherwise, the rebels said they would advance toward Mexico City, where a series of bombings apparently linked to the uprising have put the government on alert and residents on edge.

In the remote southern state of Chiapas, troops moved Tuesday toward Guadalupe Tepeyac, a town of 400 just north of the Guatemalan border, where as many as 500 rebels are entrenched.

The uprising by the Zapatista National Liberation Army began New Year's Day in Chiapas, one of Mexico's poorest states. Rebels occupied towns in the state for several days, saying they were fighting for better living conditions and an end to exploitation and oppression of Mexico's native Indians.

Officials said 107 people died in fighting between rebels and government troops. "It's necessary to rebuild the political process in the region," Manuel Camacho Solis, who stepped down as foreign minister to become a special commissioner to Chiapas, said Tuesday. "We'll have to find a dignified political exit for all."

Camacho Solis, who gained a reputation as a savvy negotiator while mayor of Mexico City, said he accepted the job because he was guaranteed autonomy and access to President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, who appointed him.

Comandante Marcos

"We need to take into account the point of view of all sectors involved," Camacho Solis said. "We can't close the doors. Nobody wants more dead or terrorism."

Camacho Solis said his first move was to call a meeting Tuesday with southern Mexico's bishops.

The government has accused Roman Catholic leaders of fomenting unrest by "confusing religious work with social struggle." Church officials deny the accusation. Except for sporadic shootings, Chiapas has been quiet since the weekend. About 14,000 government troops are stationed there, far outnumbering the estimated 1,000 to 2,000 rebels.

In his first public statement since the uprising began, Comandante Marcos, a top rebel commander, said the rebels would talk to the government if a cease-fire was declared.

In the statement, delivered Monday night to El Tiempo newspaper in Chiapas, the rebels said the army must stop "indiscriminate bombing," withdraw all troops from Chiapas, and recognize them as a force.

Otherwise, they said, they will continue taking action in Mexico City, where weekend bomb explosions wounded one woman and prompted the government to increase security in buildings, banks, subways and airports.

No bombs have exploded since Sunday. But bomb threats have emptied supermarkets, shopping centers and government buildings. On Monday, the Congress building was evacuated after a false warning.

European Union President Jacques Delors, center, and Greek Premier and EC President Andreas Papandrou listen as President Clinton responds to questions at a press conference Tuesday in Brussels after the two-day NATO summit.

Clinton, NATO allies warn anew of air strikes on Serbian forces

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — After months of empty threats, President Clinton and his NATO allies warned Serbian forces Tuesday of a new determination to launch air strikes if needed to relieve embattled Muslim enclaves in Bosnia.

"My resolve is there," Clinton said.

At the end of a two-day summit, the 16 Western leaders announced their willingness to order bombing raids if Bosnian Serbs continue to prevent the opening of a major airport for aid supplies or the rotation of encircled peace keepers.

"Whether they occur or not depends upon the behavior of the Bosnian Serbs from this moment forward," Clinton told reporters at the end of the meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The first reaction from the Serb forces was negative. Their chief of staff, Manojlo Milovanovic, warned U.N. troops would also suffer in any air campaign because his forces would stay close to peacekeepers. "They cannot strike at us without also hitting U.N. forces," he said.

Clinton and other leaders insisted there was a new mood among the allies to carry out the threats first issued last June to use their formidable air power to ease the situation in Bosnia.

"There is a very real determination" to carry out the warnings, said British Prime Minister John Major. He had in the past opposed air strikes for fear of reprisals against his country's 2,200 peace keepers in Bosnia.

"I made it clear that for our part we were prepared to follow through," Clinton said.

And if the Bosnian Serbs don't get the message, he said later, after meeting with officials of the 12-nation European Union.

"We'll see if our resolve is there. My resolve is there."

But Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien appeared hesitant.

He said he only reluctantly went along with the others. "We don't believe it is necessary to have air strikes to protect" 150 Canadian peace keepers in Sarajevo, he said. Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers said there was "still a margin of uncertainty" about whether an allied air campaign would be launched.

"We still need the approval for a first strike" from U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, he said. Boutros-Ghali, who has never given the go-ahead for raids, said that if U.N. military, humanitarian and political officials on the scene ask for air strikes, he will immediately ask NATO to carry them out.

He said NATO's statement demonstrated "a political will to do something."

The NATO leaders, in a final statement, raised the prospect of bombing raids to evacuate the Canadians from Srebrenica in eastern Bosnia and force open the airport at Tuzla, a key conduit for aid to the north.

"We've asked the Serbs several times to open Tuzla. They refused," said French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe. "Now we've decided to do it anyway."

The allies also reaffirmed their readiness to conduct air strikes "to prevent the strangulation of Sarajevo, the safe areas and other threatened areas of Bosnia-Herzegovina."

In toughening their stand, the allies seemed to move closer to military intervention in the conflict raging on their doorstep. More than 200,000 people have died since fighting broke out when Bosnian Serbs rebelled against independence from Yugoslavia nearly 21 months ago.

Officials lift broadcast ban of IRA

DUBLIN, Ireland — A ban on broadcasting statements by supporters of the Irish Republican Army will be lifted, the government said Tuesday.

The decision was approved by the Cabinet as the Irish and British governments try to induce the IRA to lay down its weapons. The decision is effective Jan. 19.

The ban, dating to 1971, also applied to supporters of violent, Protestant groups in Northern Ireland. Since 1988, Britain has enforced the same policy.

Under the ban, broadcasters were prohibited from airing the voices of those who support violence. Interviews, therefore, were broadcast with actors dubbing in the voices.

Mandela discounts white homeland

PRETORIA, South Africa — ANC leader Nelson Mandela ruled out a white homeland in South Africa but said Tuesday he was confident apartheid whites would return to negotiations with his black group.

Mandela spoke after four hours of private talks with President F.W. de Klerk. The discussions focused on political violence in black townships and pro-apartheid parties opposed to the country's first multiracial election in April.

The Afrikaner Volksfront, a coalition of pro-apartheid parties, pulled out of talks Tuesday with the ANC because it rejected demands for a sovereign state for Afrikaners, descendants of white Dutch settlers. "We will never concede to the demand for a separate Afrikaner homeland," Mandela said at a brief news conference after his meeting with de Klerk.

German police search for attackers

HALE, Germany — Police raided 200 right-wing hangouts Tuesday, searching for three skinheads who sliced a swastika on the cheek of a handicapped girl.

The attackers yelled, "Gas the Cripples!" and "Heil Hitler!", then one took out a knife and made a 1½-inch wound on the girl's cheek Monday, Police Chief Guenter Hermann said.

The 17-year-old girl's name and the nature of her handicap were not released. Hermann said he did not know whether the wound would leave a scar.

He said 105 officers were hunting for the attackers, two men with shaved heads, ages 18 to 20, and a girl of about 15. All wore black leather jackets, fatigue pants and black boots, he said.

U.S.-Chinese trade talks to continue

BEIJING — In an effort to prevent a trade war, negotiations will resume Saturday on illegal Chinese textile shipments to the United States, the two countries said Tuesday.

A senior U.S. Treasury official, speaking only on condition of anonymity, said he was optimistic an agreement would be reached. The official was in Beijing to prepare for the visit next week of Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen, who will discuss trade and other economic issues and human rights with President Jiang Zemin and Premier Li Peng.

Bentsen will be the highest-ranking U.S. official to visit China in more than two years.

Sarajevo relief stops after shells fly

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Cargo planes flew into Sarajevo Tuesday after Bosnian Serbs promised to stop shelling the airport, but the operation shut down again after a new attack.

Shelling elsewhere in the city killed six people. U.N. troops closed the airport when a shell hit the runway after about half of a planned 23 planes had arrived with badly needed food and medicine. The airport reopened within an hour after repairs, but it was unclear whether aid flights — which have been suspended most of the past week — would resume today.

U.N. officials said it was unclear who fired the mortar round, which hit after Serb troops besieging Sarajevo resumed artillery attacks on the capital's downtown in the morning.

British duchess will become a Catholic

LONDON — The Duchess of Kent, one of the most popular members of the royal family, is leaving the Church of England to become a Roman Catholic.

British law forbids the monarch — the head of the Church of England — from being a Catholic or marrying a Catholic, but the decision announced by the duchess Tuesday raised no legal or constitutional issue.

The archbishops of the Church of England, Archbishop of Canterbury George Carey and Archbishop of York John Habgood, said in a joint statement that they wished the duchess well as "a devout Christian on a spiritual journey."

Her husband, the Duke of Kent, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth II, retains his position as 14th in succession to the throne because he was an Anglican when they married in 1961.

Australian firefighters applaud rain

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Aided by rain and cooler temperatures, firefighters worked furiously Tuesday to contain scores of brush fires before the expected return of hot, windy weather on Wednesday.

Some cut firebreaks in forests while others burned back vegetation to save 136 separate infernos burning in southern Australia.

Helicopter crews dropped 10,000 firestarters — small balls of chemicals that burst into flame on impact — to start controlled fires in inaccessible terrain. Other helicopters dropped hundreds of thousands of gallons of water on uncontrolled blazes.

Small airplanes with infrared sensors flew over smoke-covered areas to pinpoint hot spots.

A state of emergency was lifted in one area south of Sydney and no houses were destroyed Tuesday. Several minor outbreaks flared north of Sydney but were quickly controlled.

The fires have killed four people, destroyed more than 200 homes and burned across more than 1.5 million acres. More than 20,000 people fled their homes.

Police suspect arson in at least half the fires, which razed whole streets last weekend in Sydney's suburbs. Fifty detectives worked Tuesday to follow up on more than 1,000 tips phoned into a special hotline.

The task force also investigated the four deaths, which include a 34-year-old man who died of a smoke-induced heart attack and a 34-year-old woman engulfed in a firestorm at her home. Two volunteer firefighters were also killed.

Two adults have been charged with setting fire to forests and could be imprisoned for up to 25 years if convicted. Three children have been charged with arson.

Police have accused 10 adults and six juveniles of lighting fires in defiance of a government order banning the lighting of barbecues or cigarettes near tinder-dry bushland.

At Sydney's Royal National Park all but 2 percent of its 37,000 acres was reported charred.

President impresses public, politicians

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Jostling with fellow NATO leaders one minute, announcing major agreements the next, President Clinton is a big hit in Europe.

Several other leaders at the NATO summit that ended Tuesday were effusive in their praise. Outside, Belgians in cowboy hats waited for hours hoping for a glimpse of the president. And Europe's press, only weeks after partisan coverage of transatlantic trade battles, treated Clinton like a show-biz star.

"Clinton Steals Show in Brussels," headlined the largest Dutch newspaper. De Telegraaf — Clinton Seduces the Europeans," said Liberation, a trendy French daily. Italy's La Repubblica said, "Albeit with a few slippages, the American kid, by now with a gray tuft of hair, has passed the test."

The German media focused heavily on Clinton's jovial greeting of their portly chancellor, Helmut Kohl, whom the president likened to a sumo wrestler. But Kohl himself saluted Clinton as the embodiment of a fresh-thinking postwar generation that welcomes increased European unity.

He acts and reacts in meetings without being surrounded by a big crowd of advisers," Kohl said. And he said U.S. officials for the first time sought to understand the Russians' psyche and avoid hurting their pride.

French President Francois Mitterrand, whose country perennially spars with Washington over everything from trade to TV shows, found little ground for disagreement during a chat with Clinton, aides said. Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers described the U.S. leader as "friendly, courteous and very clear in his statements."

One of the few negative notes was sounded by Britain's Daily Mail, a conservative tabloid that said Clinton "had trampled on the ashes of the once-vaulted 'special relationship'."

between Washington and London. He pledged U.S. commitment to a united Europe that sounded suspiciously like the superstate of French dreams.

However, for others one of Clinton's most appealing aspects was his repeated conviction that a strong, unified Europe was in America's best interest.

"We have renewed the transatlantic partnership based on a new more mature relationship between North America and Europe," said NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner.

"And let me add one thing as a personal impression but more than that: I think everybody was impressed by the strong leadership, resolve and the personal conviction of the American president."

DIET BREAKTHROUGH: Overnight Amino Acid Diet Plan Sweeping The Country

Researchers have located a specific hormone that can cause fat cells to be burned. Researchers have reported that this BURNING HORMONE, the HUMAN GROWTH HORMONE, or H.G.H., is dormant in many overweight people, but can be activated by an amino acid combination of arginine and ornithine.

Consumers reported, when given the Growth Hormone alone, they were able to test their regular foods, eat still lose weight. In addition to burning fat cells, many credible researchers believe a H.G.H. released may help improve muscle tone, convert cholesterol to muscle and produce a more youthful, shapely body.

Available at pharmacies and health food stores under the brand name of OVERNIGHT DIET. It is not a drug and requires no prescription. OVERNIGHT contains only natural ingredients found to be safe and effective.

Marvel's rangeland 'stunt' simply an attack on livestock

John Marvel's entry into the glass house of public debate has been — pardon the phrase — rocky.

Marvel is a Hailey architect and a verbal stone thrower of the environmental persuasion. He heads the Idaho Watersheds Project, a new group that wants to torment the Idaho livestock industry by bidding for grazing rights on state land.

Marvel's group hopes to outbid a rancher who currently holds the lease on some state land in Custer County. If it wins, it plans to keep cattle out for 10 years to demonstrate that going cow-free is good for public land.

Those plans have Marvel crosswise with livestock interests, including state Sen. Laird Noh, a Kimberly sheep rancher. Last week Noh pointed out some alleged land-management problems with Marvel's own ranch property in Gooding County.

The story was deja vu for folk who follow such issues. It was just a few weeks ago that the Sierra Club's Northwest director was revealed to have demurred his private forest land in Eastern Washington. Before that, environmental officials were uncovering sanitation offenses at an Earth First! encampment.

Like those earlier stories, Noh's revelations pose some embarrassing questions for environmentalists. If Marvel's stewardship of his private land is as lacking as Noh alleges, does Marvel have a right to preach to others about the evils of private cows on public land?

Alternately, if Marvel's problems are minor matters that deserve the benefit of the doubt, don't other ranchers deserve the same consideration?

As enlightening as they were, Noh's revelations are far less important than the basic issue: Will the Watersheds Project be allowed to disrupt Idaho's livestock industry?

Marvel says he'll welcome competition from ranching advocates who might want to outbid his group on the Custer County lease. Such bidding, he contends, would show that ranchers can (and should) pay more than they do for grazing land. And it would generate more revenue for the state's schools.

Meanwhile, Gov. Cecil Andrus is endorsing the environmental group's plans as a "perfect opportunity for a laboratory experiment."

Both points are specious. In the first, a bidding war between two political interest groups will demonstrate exactly nothing about the true market value of grazing leases.

As for the second, if the governor wants a laboratory experiment to evaluate the effects of cattle on state land, he should get the Department of Lands to conduct one objectively.

Marvel's stunt is neither a scientific experiment nor an altruistic attempt to help Idaho school children. It is a flank attack on a significant segment of Idaho's agricultural economy.

Given the opportunity and sufficient financial backing, Marvel's group can inflict unlimited mischief on holders of state grazing leases. Idaho's schools will lose, not gain, in the long run.

Ultimately, this threat is far more serious than the public hypocrisy of one activist.

Touching shows we care

I cannot sit still any longer without expressing my thoughts in behalf of Mel Rayborn.

I can't believe that the parents of these children couldn't go to Mr. Rayborn directly and say, "I appreciate your concerns or good intentions, but my child just does not like to have people touch her, even if it is a good practice 'touch.'" A teacher can handle that.

But when we now have a teacher who is being forced to say he is guilty when all he is is a caring teacher and is being forced to walk around his classroom with his arms folded — who wants to have their child in that classroom?

I want a teacher who cares for my child — one who will put them on the back, shoulder or head or put their arm around the shoulder and say, "Good job, honey, kid, Johnny, Susie. I care about your success." Nothing gives you greater assurance of your worth and livability than being touched by those who care.

There is a deep-seated hunger within us that no amount of food can satisfy — the hunger for the touch, the feel and the concrete reality of human contact. Children need to know you care.

Have you touched someone lately? Have you hugged someone today? We need teachers who care. If I had a child in Mr. Rayborn's class, I would be tempted to, if not do it, pull him out of the class until Mel Rayborn was put back in. Did he touch anyone inappropriately? He probably touched a child who does not like to be touched — period!

What if your child gets hurt and needs a teacher's arm around them to comfort them? The teacher is going to have to say, "Don't come near me. I don't care. Go to the office or call your parents for help. They're the only ones that can care."

Mr. Rayborn, thanks for being a great teacher and one who cared about my child in your class and my children when you knew because they went to your school. God bless you for being a good, caring teacher. We have a lot of those kind of teachers, but their hands are being tied.

Touch is a natural way to soothe, comfort and show I care. Touch soothes pains, lessens hurts and softens the blows life delivers.

Touch is one warm-blooded creature's way of saying to another, "You're not alone. I'm here. I care."

Reinstate Rayborn with apology

In reference to the mess the Jerome School officials have created in their suspension of Mr. Melvin Rayborn, I would like to offer an open challenge to all pertinent school officials. This is based on my understanding that the school officials are making plans to reinstate Mr. Rayborn under "probation" meaning roughly that "we'll let you come back to your classroom only if you agree to do no further wrong."

I challenge — yes, even dare — every school authority to answer these two questions, and answer them publicly for all to see:

• How can you ask Mr. Rayborn to return under probation — which, according to Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, means a testing of a person's fitness for a position — when you and all pertinent authorities have been unable to find any basis for questioning his integrity or fitness in the first place?

• Why don't you have the guts to admit that you erred in suspending Mr. Rayborn without any effort on your part to determine the validity of the accusations?

If you, as a governing school body, really wish to come out of this mess without looking like completely inept managers, you will:

• Reinstate Mr. Rayborn to his teaching position without any strings attached.

• Offer a public acknowledgment that you acted prematurely in suspending Mr. Rayborn that you have thoroughly investigated all allegations and found them to be baseless and that Mr. Rayborn is reinstated with no strings attached.

From what all I have read so far, you school authorities are not currently viewed very favorably by the public who placed you in the positions you now hold. Do you really want to come out of this mess with your heads held high?

Just admit you made a mistake and tell the public that you are rectifying it by fully reinstating Mr. Rayborn with no strings attached. Then do it! This is a great opportunity for you to save face and win back some of the respect you have obviously lost through your mismanagement of this affair.

Trans IV serves elderly well

Since I have quit driving and am taking Trans IV more, I want to commend them on their service to people like me, the elderly.

They are polite and I have seen their respect for those in wheel chairs.

They go to their door to take them to the bus and the same when they take them home.

They see that we get to our doctors' appointments on time but they can't always get you back home right away because it takes time to pick up someone or drop off someone.

That is no problem for me. I get to visit with someone.

'Way to go, Pat!'

Having seen the article on Pat Elstinger, I felt compelled to write. I enjoyed reading about her "Motha Goose" but also felt you should know of her many accomplishments.

Pat taught in our schools for many years and had a college English preparation class that helped our students greatly. All of the students who went through her classes will tell you how they respect this lady. She sews beautifully, paints wonderfully well and is an accomplished pianist. She taught piano in her home for many years. She has held sewing classes for the women in our area.

We hold a Festival of Trees benefit for the hospital every year, and Pat donated a Father Christmas figure two years running that brought large bids in our auction as people recognized the workmanship that went into the painting and sewing of the figure.

Starting in June of last year, Pat worked on a Victorian house that she generously donated to the festival in December. It was complete with wallpaper, carpets, curtains and drapes, as well as furniture, lamps, dishes and other accessories. It was our largest auction item and admired by everyone who went to the festival.

Pat is a very modest and retiring lady, so I was not surprised when the article did not report any of her accomplishments or talents, but at a member of the community, I could not let the opportunity pass to say, "Way to go, Pat!"

Fish and Game gave us foxes

I'm writing to answer a letter written on the editorial page on Jan. 4. The gentleman asked why the Fish and Game Department doesn't list the fox as a predator. If it did, sir, it would actually have to admit its foolishness in introducing the foxes into the Magic Valley. Yes, it actually brought them here.

Three years ago, I raised 75 chicks in a small shed on our farm. When I had them up to about 1½ pounds, I put them outside in a pen. Three nights later, they were all killed by foxes. The foxes took 42 chickens the first night and came back the next night and took the rest of the dead chickens. When we call Fish and Game, we got permission to kill six foxes. As we got to looking around our farm and a neighboring farm, we found six fox dens. At two adults and four to six kits per den, we had 36 to 48 foxes to deal with. Also, when we found these dens, we saw not only chicken feathers and parts but piles of pheasant feathers and parts.

Farmers have been totally blamed for pheasant losses in Idaho, and yes, we play a part. But after what we saw around those dens, I believe the foxes are worse. I used to think, "Oh, those foxes are so cute." Well, I no longer think they're so cute. They are predators. They kill much more than they need to live.

Now my chickens are totally fenced in, top and bottom. They no longer wander around the farm because we would soon have no chickens. I guess the only way pheasants will flourish is to totally fence them in, as the fox population is growing by leaps and bounds.

Come on, Fish and Game. Admit for once that you were wrong and try to turn around what you've done. Give the pheasants a chance.

Noh off base in Marvel story

State Sen. Laird Noh is doing a lot less than his best with the recent Times-News photo and story in which he accuses Hailey architect John Marvel of abusive use of private land in Gooding County.

Marvel's livestock, Noh says, are managed in a way that demonstrates poor land stewardship. This suggests to Noh that Marvel should never be allowed to outbid established stockmen in leasing state lands.

Well, Noh is ordinarily one of the brightest and best among a group of stockmen in the Magic Valley. He is a good man, but he's off base in the assumption that only he and others with pioneer leases of public grazing lands have a right to offer high bids and thus gain use of those lands. Old-time stockmen will have to change existing law to get things all their way. That shouldn't happen.

Laird Noh, who offered photos of Marvel's cattle on what he says was abused land, ought to remember the times his sheep have been photographed in the public pay-to-stay camps in the Sawtooth National Forest. True, Noh can't herd his own sheep day in and day out, but neither can Hailey architect Marvel spend all his time with cattle in Gooding County.

Finally, there's the tired old claim that a change in grazing leases on public lands will put "family ranchers" and rural merchants out of business. This assertion comes at a time when another story in The Times-News announces the sale of the historic ZX Ranch in Oregon, a spread that holds grazing rights on enough public lands to cover two or three small eastern states.

The buyer is Idaho multimillionaire J.R. Simplot.

Check your facts, Times-News

I was really shocked by the very untrue and misleading headline you used on Jan. 7. (See Marvel has never owned any cattle. (He does own a dog.) This, to me, is an easy enough fact to check out. The headline was 2 inches tall and the correction you placed in the paper the next day was tiny!

I am disappointed to realize the Times-News falls into the category of "you can't believe everything you read." Next time, check your facts!

U.S. deserves MIA account

The American Legion has taken a leadership role in the complex struggle to liberate or account for American prisoners of war and those missing in action from Vietnam, Korea, the Cold War and World War II. Today, we have a major crisis calling for action by every veteran interested in this issue.

Press articles and other indicators point toward the likelihood that President Clinton will soon, after consulting with the Congress, end the U.S. embargo against Vietnam. President Clinton has repeatedly stated that the embargo would remain in effect until Hanoi significantly increases its cooperation and the fullest possible accounting of POWs and MIAs has been accomplished.

However, now it appears that a small group of his advisors will recommend the embargo be lifted since they believe Hanoi is truly cooperating.

If the economic embargo is lifted, the United States will have no leverage left to compel meaningful cooperation in resolving the POW/MIA issue by Vietnam. I urge you to write to President Clinton, the White House, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, DC 20500, and let him know that "Grassroots Americans" demand that the president and Congress keep faith with the POWs and MIAs, their families and members of the active military services.

The fullest accounting is defined as turning over live prisoners, repatriating remains of those who were killed in action or died in captivity or providing a valid conclusive report why neither is possible. Don't put it off. Write today.

Nevada casinos put big money on GOP candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of Las Vegas casinos has anted up large contributions to the Republican Party in hopes of electing more GOP senators in this year's elections.

At least three casinos donated a total of $540,000 last year, after a private meeting with Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour at the private country club of casino owner Steve Wynn, chairman of Mirage Resorts Inc.

The political contributions were disclosed to the Federal Election Commission in the party's latest financial report.

Wynn's Golden Nugget casino gave $230,000 to the RNC on Nov. 10, the report showed. A week later, $80,000 came from the company which owns the Rio Suite Hotel and casino. And on Nov. 24 Frank J. Ferritta Jr., chairman of the company that owns the Palace Station casino, gave $230,000.

Wynn declined to be interviewed, but his spokesman, Alan Feldman, said, "He gave the money — to help elect Republicans and get some balance in Washington, as well as getting balance in the two-party system. It was particularly generous in light of the fact that he's a Democrat."

A Democratic source in Nevada, who declined to be identified by name, said, "We had it relayed to us that he wants to change the partisan makeup of the Senate." The Senate is now divided between 56 Democrats and 44 Republicans. A third of chamber is up for election this year.

These contributions are in so-called "soft money," which are donations by individuals or corporations to national political parties. There are no limits on these donations; the parties can distribute the funds to state affiliates for get-out-the-vote efforts and other general activity in support of party candidates.

Nevada political sources say Wynn has been infuriated by President Clinton's economic policies, including last year's deficit-reduction bill that increased the tax burden on the wealthiest 2 percent of Americans. That same bill also cut the income tax deductibility of business-related entertainment expenses, an issue important to casinos. The bill passed both the Senate and House by the narrowest of margins.

During Senate consideration of the bill, Wynn called members of the state's congressional delegation to press them to vote against it. Sources in the delegation, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the telephone calls were taken as threats of political reprisal.

Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., is up for reelection this year.

"It's not taken lightly. It's a frightening threat. He has the money to carry it out," said one senior delegation aide.

At the time, Wynn, who made a reported $38 million in 1992, acknowledged lobbying the state's lawmakers but denied making any threats.

In October, Wynn convened a meeting at his Shadow Creek golf course outside Las Vegas that included Barbour and chiefs of casinos like the MGM, the Hilton, Caesars Palace, and Circus Circus, according to a gaming industry official, who declined to be identified by name.

Among Washington issues facing the industry are various proposals to increase gambling on Indian reservations and to increase reporting of large cash transactions.

Board will allow gold panning in river

BOISE — Members of the state Land Board say they wouldn't object if recreation gold panning were allowed in now-prohibited reaches of the Boise River in southwestern Idaho.

They do object to allowing dredge mining, in which miners use five-inch hoses powered by pumps up to 15 horsepower to suck material from the bed of the river.

Recreation miners urged the Land Board on Tuesday to help lift a ban on panning and gold mining on the Boise. The board eventually voted to ask the Water Resource Board to reconsider its river protection plan which bans gold mining on the river.

Ron Mackleprang, vice president of an association of recreation miners, contended dredging the riverbed actually would improve trout spawning conditions since the river is heavily silted in areas.

Idaho Power alum named to tax board

BOISE — DuWayne Hammond, a former chief financial officer for Idaho Power Co., was appointed to the four-member state Tax Commission.

Gov. Cecil Andrus named the Republican and Idaho native on Tuesday to a vacancy created by last month's retirement of Robert Hodge of Boise.

The appointment to the $48,485-a-year job is subject to state Senate confirmation. Hammond worked at Idaho Power for 20 years. Since 1992 he has been associated with TBG financial, helping companies finance retiree medical programs.

Truck with radioactive gauge stolen

SALT LAKE CITY — State officials on Tuesday sought the public's help in locating a stolen pickup truck containing a radioactive gauge.

The truck was stolen from the Construction Testing and Engineering Co. about 2:30 p.m. Monday.

Locked inside a rectangular wooden box fastened to the truck's bed is a moisture density gauge containing Radium-226. The box is labeled with a black and yellow "radioactive" sign. The radium is further encased in a double-sided metal capsule inside the gauge.

The box is not considered dangerous if left alone, said state Division of Radiation Control director Bill Sinclair.

Lewiston woman dies in auto accident

LOWELL — A 65-year-old Lewiston woman died of head injuries when the car she was riding left the roadway and crashed into a rock in the Lochsa River near Lowell.

Gwen Rodgers was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident, which happened on Monday morning, eight miles east of Lowell on U.S. Highway 12.

The driver of the vehicle, Shirley Boreson, 69, also of Lewiston, suffered neck injuries and multiple bruises and was taken by ambulance to Clearwater-Valley Hospital at Orofino, where she was treated and released.

Attorney denies client linked to bomb

COEUR D'ALENE — A defense attorney said there is no evidence to link his client to an attempted car bombing in Bayview last summer.

The trial for William "Steve" Prickett, 40, began on Monday in Judge Gary Haman's 1st District courtroom. Prickett is charged with attempted destruction of property by means of explosives, a felony.

Kootenai County public defender Jonathan Hull said testimony by the defendant and others will reveal that Prickett is innocent.

Prickett is accused of putting a can of "black powder" under a car owned by his neighbor on June 29, then extending a thick line of powder away from the car and lighting the substance.

Prosecutor drops suit against county

COEUR D'ALENE — Kootenai County Prosecutor Bill Douglas has dropped his lawsuit against county commissioners over control of civil attorneys.

Douglas was on ground in his battle to regain control of two former deputy prosecutors that July 1 were taken over by county commissioners.

Instead, the terms of an agreement signed by both sides in the legal dispute states that commissioners have full authority over their newly created legal services department. Douglas also agreed not to interfere with its operation or with the legal advice and representation the attorneys give county officials on civil issues.

In exchange, commissioners acknowledged their support of Douglas' request for additional personnel, including upgrading a part-time investigator to full time, adding a victim-assistance case worker and deputy prosecutor to handle family violence and child support cases and beefing up secretarial and support staff.

Turbine work continues despite appeal

COEUR D'ALENE — Preparation for twin turbine generators on the Rathdrum Prairie is continuing despite an appeal against the project.

Washington Water Power is moving ahead at the site 1.5 miles south of Rathdrum to build a foundation for the turbines, which will likely be shipped by early April.

Citing air quality concerns, a citizen's group filed an appeal last fall against the generator project with the Idaho Board of Health and Welfare. A hearing date on the appeal hasn't been set, but could be three or four months away, said Lore Bensel, deputy attorney general.

The appeal was filed by the Citizen's Network for Responsible Growth, which testified against the turbines when Washington Water Power filed for state permits for the $66 million project.

Nampa hospital spurns Blue Shield

NAMPA — Mersey Medical Center has joined some of the state's largest hospitals in rejecting a proposed long-term contract with Blue Shield of Idaho.

Officials of the Nampa hospital said Tuesday they haven't ended negotiations.

"The negotiations with Blue Shield (Medical Service Bureau) were positive and constructive and we are hopeful that an agreement beneficial to Blue Shield subscribers and all Mersey patients can still be reached," said hospital President and Chief Executive Officer Bob Pale.

Fire rips heart from tiny town of Lowman

LOWMAN (AP) — Fire destroyed the center of life in Lowman when the South Fork Lodge exploded and burned to the ground.

"This was what we called Lowman here," said Ilo Shue, community historian and resident since 1975. "It was one of the original places established up here."

The two-story log lodge with basement included a bar, bike shop, liquor store, post office, grocery store, restaurant and about four guest rooms. Joe Turner and his wife, Margaret, completed the building between 1937-1940.

State fire investigators were expected to be in Lowman Tuesday to sift through the rubble looking for clues for the cause of the blaze.

"A lot of people associate Lowman with the South Fork Lodge," said Pam Brown, one of the owners of Line Shack Saloon.

The unincorporated community, home to nearly 100 year-around residents, runs from milepost 72 on Idaho 21 where the South Fork Lodge stood to mile post 86 and the Sour Dough Lodge.

Lois Strong, who works at the lodge said another worker noticed smoke coming up the stairs leading to the bar in the basement shortly before 1 p.m. on Monday.

She attempted to enter the smoking structure and then the basement windows blew out.

"It blew me across the concrete right into the snow banks," Strong said. "The sky was just full of timber and glass and just all kinds of stuff."

Adela Sustita, who works in the kitchen, restaurant and store, jumped out a second story window when the flames cut her off from the building's entrance.

Sustita fractured an ankle in her fall to the icy parking lot and was taken to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. She was in fair condition Monday night, a nursing supervisor said. No one else was injured in the fire.

Beth Lund, fire management officer at the U.S. Forest Service Lowman Ranger District, said the building was engulfed in flames when the Forest Service took their 200-gallon fire truck to the scene. It was a pile rubble by 3 p.m.

"We took the pump to the river and tried to protect other buildings and the (nearby) propane tanks, which were starting to vent," Lund said.

Forest Service employees along with community residents and passersby kept water trained on the gas station, across a narrow drive from the lodge, adjacent cabins and the tanks.

Sportsmen want logging stopped

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — The Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition has fired a volley at the Nez Perce National Forest, attempting to stop logging in the Cove-Mallard area immediately and calling for the firing of Supervisor Mike King.

The group, in association with other wildlife groups, is filing a request with U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan for a temporary restraining order to halt logging in the Grouse Creek drainage of the Cove-Mallard. The groups are also asking for a preliminary injunction to stop all road building and logging in the Cove-Mallard until an earlier lawsuit can be settled.

Ron Mitchell of the Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition said Monday the groups plan to ask Jack Ward Thomas, the new head of the Forest Service, to fire Mike King and to stop all logging in the Nez Perce Forest. "We're so furious at the Nez Perce Forest for deliberately, fully and blatantly refusing to halt the logging and obey the law we're ready to put them out of business totally," Mitchell said.

Mitchell said he expects Judge Ryan to grant a hearing date within three to four days.

Grouse Creek is one of two controversial timber sales in the Cove-Mallard being scrutinized by wildlife and environmental groups, including Earth First! The other is the Noble Creek timber sale. Both are about 85 miles southeast of Grangeville near Dixie.

Charity head guilty of theft

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — The executive director of a charity for the homeless was convicted of embezzling about $400,000 from the group for home improvements, utility bills and personal savings.

Clyde E. Weinman, 44, also was found guilty Monday of forging at least 12 of the 588 checks he signed as head of the nonprofit organization Irvine Temporary Housing.

"I think this is a guy who has skated the system, who felt himself bulletproof, who has had his day in court, and it wasn't a good one," Deputy District Attorney William Overton said.

Weinman faces up to eight years in state prison and $200,000 in fines. Sentencing is scheduled for Feb. 4.

6 juveniles admit to 3 burglaries, officials say

TWIN FALLS — Sheriff's investigators say six juveniles have admitted to three burglaries in Twin Falls County around Thanksgiving.

Five of the six were involved in a Nov. 29 shooting at the Snake River Canyon rim at Washington Street North, Lt. Bill Tilson said Tuesday.

No one was injured in the shooting, but the incident helped investigators solve the burglaries.

No charges have been filed, but investigators have referred the burglary cases to the Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney's office, Tilson said.

The juveniles, 15 and 16 years old, also confessed to burglaries in the cities of Twin Falls and Burley, he said.

Three of the youths are in detention, one on a misdemeanor battery charge and the other two in connection with the Nov. 29 shooting, Tilson said.

The burglaries took more than $27,000 in goods from three homes from Nov. 23 through Nov. 28. Investigators recovered about $2,500 of the goods through an anonymous tip, Tilson said.

The goods were found in a shed at a Twin Falls home. The homeowner was not connected with the burglaries and did not know the goods were placed in the shed, Tilson said.

Detectives do not know where the remaining loot is.

Man pleads guilty to vehicular manslaughter in June death

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man pleaded guilty Tuesday to misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter in the June death of another Twin Falls man.

Paul M. Pena, 36, had been charged with felony manslaughter in the death of Wesley Stapleton, 49, in mid-June.

But Twin Falls County Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan said Tuesday that proving felony manslaughter would have been difficult, even though prosecutors said Pena had been drinking when the accident happened.

Stapleton's car had broken down and he was walking to his brother-in-law's home when Pena struck him with his 1979 Lincoln Town Car.

Stapleton was walking east along 3100 North when the accident happened. Police found his body in the borrow pit at 3068 E. 3100 N.

Stapleton was wearing dark clothing and was walking a couple of feet out in the roadway when hit by Pena at night, Bevan said.

Pena will be sentenced in February. Misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter carries a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Hansen City Council rezones property for agricultural use

HANSEN — The Lynn Tanner property east of Hansen was rezoned agricultural at a public hearing during the Monday night meeting of the Hansen City Council.

The property, which lies within the city's impact area, had been changed from agricultural to commercial to enable an individual to build an ethanol plant. This business endeavor never materialized. The council and other residents felt it was in the best interest of the city to rezone the property agricultural.

Councilman Joe Ratto was given the oath of office. Ratto replaces retiring Larry Bourn, who chose not to run in the November election. Bourn did consent to serve the city on the planning and zoning committee.

City Auditor Mark Olmstead reported the city had submitted "a real positive report and it was financially sound."

The group voted to modify the cage for the police car so it would fit the car better.

Attorney to seek to dismiss inmate's charges

By Phil Salm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney will seek to dismiss molestation charges against a jail inmate who has the virus that causes AIDS.

Timothy Heck was scheduled for trial Jan. 18 on charges of molesting a teen-age boy. But the boy has since recanted his accusation against Heck, Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan said Tuesday.

"It's probably the toughest decision I've had to make just because of the circumstances surrounding the case," Bevan said.

Heck was charged in 1992 with molesting two teen-age boys, but evaded arrest until last July.

Bevan had reached a plea bargain with Heck this summer, in which one of the molestation charges would be dropped, Heck would plead guilty to the other, and Heck would be put on probation.

Judge J. William Hart rejected the plea. Prosecutors then brought one of the molestation charges against Heck — but the teenage boy gave a sworn statement late this summer recanting his earlier remarks that Heck had molested him, Bevan said.

Bevan said he did not learn of the boy's statement until mid-November. After learning the boy had recanted his accusation, Bevan decided to seek dismissal of the charges.

He sent the dismissal request to Judge J. William Hart on Monday.

Besides the boy recanting his testimony, a piece of videotape evidence in the case was accidentally destroyed before the Twin Falls Police Department could make a backup copy, Bevan said.

Finally, Bevan said he had to consider the long-term good of the boy, who is in juvenile detention outside Twin Falls. The trauma of testifying at a trial could set him back in his other problems, Bevan said.

An expert whom Bevan consulted also expressed doubts about the truthfulness of the boy's original accusations about Heck.

The boy in the other-molestation charge originally brought against Heck also would have made a poor witness, Bevan said.

Dismissing the charge against Heck does not reflect his "goals and overall objections," Bevan said. "That's the way it is sometimes."

Heck was taken to the hospital recently after suffering a seizure. Jail officials refused to say Tuesday night if Heck was in the hospital or back in jail, even though the roster of jail prisoners is public information.

A nursing supervisor at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center would release no information Thursday night on Heck.

Heck was beaten in the jail this summer, but charges were not brought because neither Heck nor police could identify suspects.

A friend of Heck's recently charged he has been poorly treated in jail and denied proper medical care. Sheriff Wayne Tousey denied the accusation.

Heck could not be reached for comment Tuesday night.

Twin Falls city officials fish for plant insurance policy

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — City officials are shopping around for a $5 million insurance policy for the city's water source in Jerome County, City Manager Tom Courtney said Tuesday.

The insurance is one of two new hoops the city must jump through after a Monday night Jerome County planning and zoning meeting in which city officials were dressed down for the actions of Twin Falls County officials.

Twin Falls sought a special-use permit to bring its water supply near the base of the north wall of the Snake River Canyon into compliance with new federal rules. Commissioner Roy Prescott blasted Twin Falls city for allegedly not acting trustworthily or cooperatively, then he moved to grant the permit. The motion passed.

But his motion contained two conditions: Twin Falls must obtain chloramine water in Jerome County at Alpheus Spring, and the city must come up with a $5 million insurance policy in case an accident at the water plant hurts trout farmers downstream.

Courtney said Tuesday the city will be able to meet both requirements.

As Monday's meeting began, Twin Falls City Attorney Fritz Wondrich argued that the county's restrictions under a preservation zone on land at Alpheus Spring are outdated and unconstitutional.

Wondrich also argued that the state has jurisdiction over water use in Idaho. And he pointed out that the state Department of Environmental Quality, the federal Environmental Protection Agency and other federal agencies have already approved the city's plans for the water system.

He complained that the commission had taken almost two months to make its decision, delaying construction on the new system. The city is working against an April 15 federal deadline on the project.

Engineer Jim Coleman of J-U-B Engineering Inc. told the commission that accidental contamination of Jerome County trout farms from chlorine leaks in the new water system would be almost impossible.

Plans call for water to be moved from Alpheus Spring through a double-walled pipe under the Blue Lakes Country Club golf course, across the Snake River to Twin Falls. Near the golf course, a 2 percent chlorine solution would be pumped into the pipe to disinfect the water.

If a problem developed it would take 89 hours for the chlorine solution could flood the system and leak out and drain into the Snake River, Coleman said. But even if that happened, Coleman said that such small amounts of chlorine would have no noticeable environmental impact on the river or the businesses downstream. And chlorinating the water in the pipe is the cheapest, most efficient manner of disinfecting, he added.

Charles Brockway, an engineering consultant on the project, told the commission that this new water system wouldn't change the temperature of the water in the Snake River, which might hurt the fish farms.

Students could earn F's for low attendance

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Beginning Jan. 31, Twin Falls High School students who miss a class nine times in a semester will see an "F" on their report card.

The Twin Falls School Board voted unanimously Tuesday night to adopt a rule requiring at least 90 percent attendance in class for a student to pass.

"We're going to try it for a semester, and if it works we may spread it to the junior high and elementary schools," Superintendent Terrell Donich said.

Attendance is the biggest problem for high schools — some days as many as 20 percent of the students aren't in class. But unexcused absences are much less frequent at the junior high or elementary schools, Donich said.

The current policy requires students to serve detention time for accumulating more than six unexcused absences at the high school.

Assistant Principal Andy Barron said a signed note from a doctor or other medical professional is needed for the school to recognize an absence as excused. But he also said the district understands that many families can't afford to send their children to medical professionals. So parents will have to give the final clearance for all excused absences.

Donich said the nine unexcused absences for a failing grade policy was used in the past but dropped. Now the district, like other districts across the state, is returning to the old rule.

Commission tables canyon rim amendment

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For the second time in a week, a lengthy debate about canyon rim development ended without a resolution Tuesday evening.

By a 5-4 vote, the city planning and zoning commission decided to table an amendment to the city code that would prohibit development closer than 100 feet to the Snake River and Rock Creek canyon rims.

Vice Chairman Ken Stutzman, Vickie Traitor, Bob Daigle, Kevin Dane and Lex Meyer voted to table the amendment. David McCluskey, Tom Mikesell, Rick Palmer and Stephanie Crumrine dissented.

Chairman Fran Florence did not vote, citing a conflict of interest. Florence, vice president of Independent Meat Company, said that the company owns rim property. Florence and Stutzman had been elected to their positions by the planning commission at the beginning of Tuesday evening's meeting.

City law establishes a "minimum building setback" of 100 feet from the canyon rim. Developers may, with the approval of the City Council, build as close as 50 feet to the rim provided a geological study, "certified by a civil engineer, licensed in Idaho," shows the site to be safe for construction. The amendment would eliminate the geological study and establish a strict 100-foot rim setback.

In addition, the canyon rim would be redefined as the point where the land's slope reaches 30 percent. The current rim slope is 15 percent.

On Jan. 5, a four-member appeals board representing the city's "area of impact" rejected a zoning appeal on a legal technicality.

Through an agreement with the county, the city has jurisdiction over some land outside the city limits. That land is known as the city's area of impact.

Canal company braces for turning tide

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In financial terms, the Twin Falls Canal Co. enjoyed smooth sailing in the 1993 fiscal year, but the company could soon be entering some of the stormiest legal waters it has ever had to navigate, stockholders heard Tuesday.

About 200 people attended the company's annual stockholder's meeting at the College of Southern Idaho. Shareholders elected new directors, listened to finance reports and soaked in a sobering forecast from the company's lawyer.

"The news is not all good," said Twin Falls attorney John Rosholt. Among Rosholt's revelations:

• Legal settlement of water claims in the Snake River basin is moving at a snail's pace; the process could take another decade to complete.

• The Endangered Species Act "will continue to be a thorn." Snails and salmon represent the lion's share of the problems and federal officials could be asking the company to cut loose some its water to "flush" the river.

• Proposed new rules to manage Idaho's surface and groundwater as a single resource could weaken the historic "first-in-time, first-in-right" doctrine. If adopted, the rules could require some long-time surface water users to dig for their water.

"That's our lifeblood and we need to protect it," Rosholt said, noting that the company's oldest water right dates back to 1900.

"Folks, everybody wants your water," Rosholt concluded. "There's a threat out there to change your way of life."

Jerry Marcantonio, an accountant with Van Engelen CPAs in Twin Falls, said the company's net worth rose by $391,779 during the past fiscal year. Overall, assets rose from $5.6 million in 1992 to $6.21 million; during the same period, the company's liabilities climbed from $753,289 to $967,553.

The company's revenues fell from $4.36 million in 1992 to $4.03 last year, Marcantonio said. The 1992 figure was high because it included a one-time settlement from the Bonneville Pacific Corp. of $323,000.

Dave Van Engelen, who is a partner in the accounting firm, said in an interview that the canal company is very sound financially. The debt-to-equity ratio and the asset-to-liability ratio are both quite favorable, Van Engelen said. The company's budgeting was also very accurate, he said, noting that it was very close to actual expenses.

Vince Alberdi, who has been the canal company's manager for just over a year, announced that the new company offices at 357 Sixth Ave. W. are ready for occupancy. The building cost about $368,000 to build, he said.

The company's top goals are to improve the mainline canal's "point split" structure, which is about seven miles below Murtaugh Lake. The structure is designed to divert all of the canal's water back into the Snake River in the event of an emergency. Other top priorities are to develop a better water measurement program and to improve flow dynamics for the first few miles of the High Line canal.

The assessment fee for one share of company stock will rise from $18 to $19 in 1994, Alberdi said, adding: "We think that's a good value and a good bargain."

In other business, stockholders re-elected Dan Shewmaker to his District 1 directorship and elected Don Kramer to the District 5 seat long occupied by Robert Schaefer. Company officials lauded Schaefer for his nine years of service and presented him with a wall clock.

Students nominated to U.S. academies

They include Jason Allen of Burley to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo.; James Dalton to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.; and Ron Coleman of Hagerman to the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md.

Jordan Grant of Rupert was appointed to both the Air Force Academy and the Naval Academy, and Robert Plotts of Declo was named to the Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, N.Y., and to the military and naval academies. Curtis Reed of Burley received appointments to the naval and merchant marine academies, and John McCusky of Twin Falls was named to the military and naval academies.

All American citizens who attend the service academies must be first nominated by a member of Congress. It's up to the individual academies to decide whether or not to admit the nominees.

Financial experts expect nation's recovery will spur Idaho growth

BOISE (AP) — Financial experts painted a bright economic picture for Idaho Tuesday, telling lawmakers that the national economy's slow but steady recovery will only enhance the state's prospects.

Looking at 1994 as still another year of expansion that has become the envy of America, Jim Schuck of First Security Bank said "there is no reason to expect a major disruption in this very impressive five-year trend."

On the eve of Gov. Cecil Andrus' budget message, Schuck and others told the joint legislative committee on Idaho's economic outlook that personal income growth is expected to rise as fast as it did in 1993 when it paced the nation. And the increase in nonfarm employment should approach last year's rate that was one of the highest in the country.

"This region for the balance of the decade will continue to be one of the strongest in the United States," Schuck said.

The glowing projections underscored the governor's comments a day earlier when he described the state as "stronger than it has been in any of its 103 years, and this good health will extend into the second half of this decade."

Much of Idaho's growth is being fueled by in-migration, mainly from recession-plagued Southern California, Schuck said. But he said many of the newcomers are starting their own businesses.

"Small business is the engine of growth," he said, "and I think this trend is sustainable through the decade."

Andrus has kept a lid on the details of his blueprint for state spending in the budget year that begins July 1. But the centerpiece is expected to again be state aid for public schools — the most politically sensitive spending issue the state faces each year.

Two factors have fueled expectations Andrus will pump more than $95 million extra into the annual aid package. The state's cash surplus is estimated above $50 million and tax revenues for the new budget are anticipated to exceed current spending by as much as $150 million.

The administration was expected to estimate general tax revenue for the 1994-1995 fiscal year at $1.24 billion or more. Economists for the state universities and the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho submitted independent estimates in that range.

The state will probably spend just under $1.1 billion in general tax receipts this year.

A note of caution was injected into the financial euphoria by Scott Hayes, chief financial officer for West One Bank. While optimistic about the economic health of the country over the next two or three years, Hayes said lawmakers should hedge against any possible downturn in the economy and not financially overextend the state now.

"The surplus won't last forever, so you shouldn't take it for granted," Hayes said. "You should be harsh on the constitution that requires that we should have a balanced budget in Idaho."

Sharp, short quake rouses California

Knight-Ridder News Service

SAN JOSE, Calif. — South Bay area residents were awakened by a sharp, short earthquake early Tuesday, but there were no reports of damage or injury.

The 2.53 a.m. quake measured 4.2 on the Richter scale and was centered about four miles north of Watsonville, according to the United States Geological Survey. The seismology station at the University of California, Berkeley registered the tremor at 4.3.

The quake was felt from Salinas to Oakland, but other than knocking items off shelves in the area just north of Watsonville, it caused no problems.

"It felt like a short jolt, just a little rolling," said a Santa Cruz County sheriff's dispatcher. "It only seemed like it lasted a few seconds."

The quake — centered 9 miles below the Earth's surface on the San Andreas Fault — was probably an aftershock of the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake, said David Oppenheimer, a USGS seismologist.

"We're seeing these aftershocks continue on in this area," Oppenheimer said. "They're dying off with time." Oppenheimer said it was not unusual for aftershocks to continue more than four years after a magnitude 7.1 earthquake such as the Loma Prieta.

Statistical models suggest there is a 5 percent chance of an equal or larger earthquake in the same area within the next week, said Paul Reasenberger, another USGS seismologist.

Herzog won't be GM with Angels this year

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Whitey Herzog resigned as general manager of the California Angels on Tuesday and was replaced by Bill Bavasi, the son of former Angels and Los Angeles Dodgers general manager Buzzie Bavasi.

Herzog, 62, submitted his resignation effective Saturday. He will remain with the Angels organization as a consultant.

Herzog was hired by the Angels on Sept. 16, 1991, as the team's senior vice president of player personnel, leaving the St. Louis Cardinals organization, where he had served as field manager and general manager.

He managed the Cardinals from mid-way through the 1980 season until Joe Torre replaced him after 80 games of the 1990 season.

Bidwill flight fuels rumors he's still eyeing Erickson

Phoenix Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill traveled to the American Football Coaches Association convention in Anaheim, Calif., Monday, fueling speculation that he is pursuing Dennis Erickson as the team's next coach.

Erickson, in his fifth season as the Miami Hurricanes' coach, also is in Anaheim for the annual convention.

Cardinals media relations officials said Bidwill went to Anaheim to take part in the NFL's welcoming reception and nothing else should be read into his trip there. But according to published reports in Arizona, Bidwill met Erickson in West Palm Beach on Friday to discuss the possibility of Erickson taking over in Phoenix.

Bidwill is in the process of deciding whether to retain Joe Bugel as coach. Before the season, Bidwill said the Cardinals must win nine games for Bugel to keep his job. The Cardinals finished 7-9, but a three-game winning streak to end the season renewed support for Bugel.

Bradshaw part of Super Bowl programs over cable channels

NEW YORK — NFL commentators Pat O'Brien and Terry Bradshaw will be reunited with former CBS Sports executive producer, Ted Shaker when Coca-Cola sponsors seven hours of prime-time cable programming for Super Bowl week. Coca-Cola made the announcement Tuesday via conference call from its corporate headquarters in Atlanta, where the Super Bowl will be played on Jan. 30.

Black coaches threaten boycott

NCAA decision to cut scholarships hurts minorities most, association says; action could begin on King's birthday

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The head of the Black Coaches Association, upset over the NCAA's decision to cut scholarships, said Tuesday he expects his group to boycott men's college basketball games, possibly for the rest of the season.

The boycott, which would include coaches and players, could begin as early as Saturday, Martin Luther King's birthday.

"In all likelihood there will be a boycott but I am reluctant to give you a time and date," said Rudy Washington, head of the BCA and basketball coach at Drake. "Players and coaches are expected to participate. And they're talking about the rest of the season, like the baseball strike."

On Monday, the NCAA voted down a proposal to restore a 14th basketball scholarship two years after it voted to cut scholarships from 15 to 13. The BCA says minorities are particularly hurt by cutting scholarships.

— Rudy Washington, Drake coach

The Presidents Commission cited costs and the need to hold firm on reform measures. The presidents also indicated to the BCA the scholarship could be added next year if savings could be found elsewhere.

NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey declined to say whether he believes there will be a boycott.

"If there's to be a boycott, how long a boycott?" he said at a news conference following the NCAA convention. "We could play speculative games related to that. I don't see that it would be profitable."

It is not clear how many coaches would participate in a boycott. The BCA has some 3,000 members, but that number includes head coaches and assistants from all divisions in men's and women's programs, as well as high school coaches.

Dempsey and Joseph Crowley, the NCAA president, both said they had talked with BCA representatives twice in the previous 24 hours and hoped to talk with them again.

Black coaches have said dropping the scholarship will deny 330 young men, mostly African-Americans, access to education. But others said not all the 297 Division I schools use their full scholarship limit anyway.

Drake coach Rudy Washington said players and coaches would participate in the boycott of college basketball games.

Trojans 'dust' Senators, 43-23

Senior leads late-game push as Wendell nabs 11th straight victory

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

GOODING — It was like Wendell Coach Alan Kelsey took the timeout between the third and fourth quarters to say just one thing: "Sit 'em, Dusty."

Because senior Dusty Earl opened the fourth quarter with three steals that led to three layups in a burst that assured Wendell a 43-23 victory over Gooding and its 11th straight hoop win of the season Tuesday night.

In a slow-paced game, Wendell took only a 26-22 lead into the final period but it turned into a rout when Gooding went until the final 20 seconds without a point. Jason Reinke finally broke the quarter-long drought with a free throw.

As the quarter opened, Earl profited himself from the first two steals, taking the picks coast-to-coast for four points and a 30-22 lead. His next steal resulted in a pass to Randy Thomas for another crumple.

Wendell's top gun, Nate Kelsey, who wound up with 20, drilled a 3-pointer before Earl came up with a tip in. Earl then added his fourth steal of the period, relaying it on to Rob Buhler for two more.

"It was good defense," said Coach Kelsey of Earl's wrecking-crew performance, "and defense is where it starts."

While it was low tempo on both ends of the court, Kelsey said Wendell didn't intentionally answer Gooding's patience.

"We are trying to show a little more patience," he said. "We are trying to get the whole team involved in the offense."

Kelsey's Trojans haven't suffered a regular season loss in a year and a half now but the coach said a second undefeated year isn't a major goal.

"We certainly have not been dominating anyone," he said of a few close games. "We have a lot of areas we have to improve in to get ready for the district tournament."

Bobcat win knots up District 4 race

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

JEROME — Outplaying Jerome a little bit here and a little bit there, Burley set up a possible three-way tie for the Class A-2 District 4 girls' basketball title with a 60-44 win Tuesday night.

The Tigers, 11-4 overall, lost their half-game lead over Buhl with the decision, completing district play at 4-2. Burley, 11-5, is 3-2 in league play with 3-1 Buhl coming to town Thursday. The Indians will finish its district games against winless Wood River Friday, Jan. 21.

Playing more aggressively early in the game, Burley scored the last 11 points of the first quarter to gain a 17-7 advantage. Sparking the run was Tiffany Mabey's two 3-point goals. Mabey twisted her ankle in warmups and played a substitute's role in the game.

Even with one outside shooter partly sidelined, the Bobcats outscored Jerome 18-3 from long distance, led by Chelsea Wornell's three 3-pointers. Please see BOBCATS/B5

Carlton a shoo-in, Cepeda still waiting as Hall tallies votes

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When the Hall of Fame voting is announced today, Steve Carlton will be in the air. Orlando Cepeda will be waiting by the phone.

Carlton will be heading from his home in Colorado to a news conference in New York, where he is expected to be introduced Thursday as Cooperstown's newest member.

Cepeda has plane reservations, too. Only he will be at Candlestick Park in San Francisco, awaiting word of the vote.

Carlton is the overwhelming favorite and Cepeda is the sentimental choice for election when the voting is released at 4 p.m. MST today. Don Sutton and Phil Niekro, both 300-game winners, and Graig Nettles, Ron Guidry and Bruce Sutter are among the other candidates.

Carlton's credentials are impeccable. He is ninth on baseball's career victory list (329) — second among left-handers to Warren Spahn's 363 wins — and second in strikeouts (4,136). Plus, he won a record four Cy Young Awards.

Carlton, however, could lose some votes from members of the Baseball Writers Association of America because he did not speak to the media during his glory years with the Philadelphia Phillies. Such sentiment almost certainly will prevent him from receiving the required 75 percent support for election, although it could stop him from challenging Tom Seaver's record 98.84 percent.

Carlton was to fly from his home in Durango, Colo., on Wednesday for the gathering in Manhattan on Thursday. And yes, Carlton planned to speak.

Whether Cepeda catches the red-eye from San Francisco depends on how many votes he receives.

He is getting his 15th and final chance at election by the writers. If Please see BASEBALLS/B5

Rams rumble into town

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins face their biggest test to this point of the season tonight when they entertain the Highland Rams in a critical Region III Class A-1 boys' basketball game.

The teams are playing for seeding and attending home court rights in the postseason playoff. Going into the fray, the Bruins are tied with Minico and Pocatello at 2-1 while Highland is 0-3.

The Bruins posted a rare victory on the Highland court — albeit in overtime — and defending the home turf is critical in the eyes of Coach Ben Allen.

"I've said all year that by the end of the season these four teams are going to be as close to even as anytime in the region's history," Allen said. "In situations like that, it's much nicer to be home."

The region-by-laws reserve the home-court-for-the-highest-seeded team regardless of previous tournament results.

Just because Highland is 0-3 doesn't mean the Rams aren't as dangerous as anyone, Allen maintains.

"Last Friday night they knock off a ranked team (Idaho Falls) 58-50 and come back the next night and lose to Pocatello 38-30," Allen said. "That's the trademark of a young team. Last year's graduating class not only provided four of the starters but most of the first people off the bench. Highland will improve with experience."

The lone veteran returnee is 6-4 Luke Berg who provides most of Highland's offensive punch and a lot of its rebounding.

"He plays taller than 6-4," Allen said. "He has long arms and jumps well. He plays about 6-6 or 6-7."

The other player who gave the Bruins trouble was 6-4 Brian Deatherage, a junior, who showed good penetration and scoring.

"I think Coach (Chris) Frost is still doing some experimenting with the team," Allen said. "He's been changing his starting lineup almost from game to game and at times goes three big and other times three small (players)."

Back-to-earth folks show wares in book

Ever wonder what happened to the back-to-the earth movement of the late 60s? Some of its proponents no doubt ended up on Wall Street or in suburbia. And some appear to be among the 90 artists profiled in this anthology of America's best craftspeople chosen by the state committees of the congressionally sanctioned Year of American Craft, 1993.

It's "Craft in America: Celebrating the Creative Work of the Hand." It costs $39.95. As honorary chair, television personality Phyllis Gaegele and her staff made the final selection for this book, and she wrote an introduction describing her passion for crafts that began 14 years ago when she was first lady of Kentucky.

The book is heavy on potters, quilters and basket weavers. Among the unusual creations featured are ancient round Welsh boats called coracles built by Stanley Joseph of Halloweside, Maine, and the porcine quill-decorated garments and ornaments made by Alice New Holy Blue Legs in Oglala, S.D.

Most menus now offer more than just American cuisine

Our taste buds are sampling broader horizons these days. More than nine out of 10 menus analyzed by the National Restaurant Association now offer ethnic dishes, and 80 percent incorporate dishes from more than one ethnic cuisine.

The study compared 66 menus from 1988 to current menus from the same restaurants. Mexican and Italian dishes are the most popular ethnic menu items, with growth in several Asian cuisines, including Chinese, Thai and Japanese, all up about 10 percent.

Florida oranges sometimes aren't, but the fruit is OK

When is an orange not necessarily orange? When it comes from Florida, state citrus officials say. But that doesn't mean there's not a taste fruit inside. Often, the peel of a Florida orange may range in color from orange to yellow-orange to greenish yellow-orange, making them less attractive to the consumer than those picture-perfect oranges from other areas.

It all comes down to environment. The bright orange color associated with maturity actually results from cooler night temperatures — which, of course, Florida has very few of. Because it's warmer there, Florida oranges retain some green or yellow color although the fruit inside is fully ripe. In addition, oranges grown in arid climates tend to have thicker rinds and are less juicy than Florida oranges.

The largest quantity of Florida oranges are shipped November through May, with various peak shipping months for different varieties. When buying, select oranges that are firm to the touch and heavy for their size — factors that indicate juiciness. Brown spots have no bearing on quality, but avoid oranges with soft spots and wrinkles. Store in the crisper or warmest part of the refrigerator for up to two or three weeks.

Fight fat with foods that help stave off cravings

If you're beginning a post-holiday weight-loss program, consider picking up some flavored seltzers, oranges, sweet potatoes, grapes, cinnamon-raisin bagels and salsa. Because of their taste, texture or density, such foods can help you stave off cravings for higher-fat, higher-calorie no-no's, health experts tell McCall's magazine. The trick is to eat just the foods — and not the spreads, condiments or what-nots you normally have with them.

And, in the future, this may help you keep off pounds. Food scientists have engineered a way around the greasy french fries nutritionists love to hate: a higher-starch potato that absorbs less oil. The potatoes are among 30 genetically altered foods waiting to go on the market, according to researchers at a recent meeting which was sponsored by the International Food Information Council.

Bread of the Month Club offers crusty surprises

If you got a bread machine for the holidays, you might want to call the Bread of the Month Club. It offers a line of bread-machine mixes that range from banana-pecan to chili pie. All you have to add is water. You can order a three-month sampler pack for $11.95, or a three-, six- or 12-month subscription that brings three mixes to your home each month. For order forms or more information, call 708-480-1589.

Food for healthy living

Flavor, nutrition can go together

What should I eat to stay healthy? It's a question on everyone's mind. Staying fit is a year round undertaking, but especially right now, thoughts turn to fitness and healthier foods.

Eating healthy, tasty food isn't so difficult if you are armed with some basic information and do a little planning. The most important fact is to eat a variety of foods in order to get adequate amounts of vitamins, minerals, protein and fiber.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture recommends using the Food Guide Pyramid. At a glance, the Pyramid helps you understand more about the foods you need, from what food groups and in what amounts. It shows you where to put your emphasis. Clearly, you should include generous portions of grain products, such as rice, along with plenty of fruits and vegetables in your daily meal plans.

Nutritious eating, however, isn't bland and boring. Here is one example of a taste-tempting menu that fits the guidelines of the Food Guide Pyramid.

TURKEY BREAST WITH APRICOT AND PORT GLAZE

- 1 bone-in turkey breast (5 to 6 pounds)
- 1/4 cup apricot nectar
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh rosemary (or 1 teaspoon dried)
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/4 teaspoon cornstarch

Place turkey breast skin-side up on rack in a 13 by 9 by 2-inch roasting pan, lightly coated with vegetable cooking spray. Roast turkey breast, uncovered, in 325 degrees oven for 2 to 2 1/2 hours, or until meat thermometer registers 170 degrees in deepest portion of breast.

Combine nectar, port, honey and rosemary in medium saucepan. Bring to a boil. Simmer, stirring frequently, 10 to 15 minutes over medium heat, or until reduced to 1 cup. During last 15 minutes of roasting, brush turkey with 1/4 cup glaze.

Combine water and cornstarch. Stir mixture into remaining glaze. Cook over medium-high heat until mixture is clear and slightly thickened. To serve, spoon sauce over turkey breast slices.

Makes 12 servings.
Each serving provides 243 calories; 39.0 g. protein; 1.6 g. fat; 12.4 g. carbohydrate; 0.2 g. dietary fiber; 110 mg. cholesterol; and 75 mg. sodium.

CHERRY RICE PILAF

- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1/4 cup dried cherries
- 1/4 cup California walnuts, chopped

How much is enough?

The USDA Food Guide Pyramid gives a range of servings for each food group.

The number of servings that are right for you varies, but almost everyone should eat at least the lowest number of servings in each range on a daily basis. So:

- Eat 6 to 11 servings of grain products. Count as one serving: 1/2 cup cooked rice, cereal or pasta; 1 slice bread; 1 bun, bagel or English muffin; 1 ounce dry cereal; 1/2 cup dry cereal.
- For fruits, eat two or more servings daily. Count as one serving: 1 cup berries or other small or diced fruit; 1 medium apple, orange or banana; or 1/2 cup juice.
- For vegetables, you need three or more servings. Count as one serving: 1 cup raw leafy greens or 1 cup other kinds of vegetables.

- For fats, eat two or more servings daily. Count as one serving: 1/2 cup cooked dry beans; or 1 egg.
- Use fats, oils and sweets sparingly.

For recipes that contain foods from several groups, do the best you can to estimate the number of servings for the main ingredients. Some ingredients may not be a whole serving, add up partial servings from all meals each day.

- For recipes that contain foods from several groups, do the best you can to estimate the number of servings for the main ingredients. Some ingredients may not be a whole serving, add up partial servings from all meals each day.

Combine grated peel, water and 1/4 cup sugar in medium saucepan. Stir over medium heat 1 to 2 minutes, just until sugar dissolves. Remove from heat. Add oil, egg, yogurt and milk to saucepan; beat well. Set aside.

Mix flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt in large bowl. Add sugar mixture and walnuts; stir just until batter is moistened. Do not overmix. Spoon into muffin tins coated with cooking spray, filling each cup 2/3 full. Bake in preheated 375 degrees oven for 15 to 18 minutes, or until toothpick inserted in center of muffin comes out clean.

Combine remaining 1/4 cup sugar with lemon juice in small bowl. Let stand 2 to 3 minutes, stirring frequently until sugar dissolves.

Remove pans from oven and pierce tops of each muffin 3 times with a fork. Spoon 1 teaspoon of lemon mixture over each hot muffin; letting it run over the top and down the edges. Let cool in pan about 5 minutes before serving.

Makes 16 muffins.
Each serving provides 158 calories; 3.7 g. protein; 5.7 g. fat; 24.0 g. carbohydrate; 0.8 g. dietary fiber; 14 mg. cholesterol; and 157 mg. sodium.

Proof that eating healthy can be tasty: Cherry Rice Pilaf, Turkey Breast with Apricot Glaze and Lemon Walnut Muffins.

3 cups cooked rice
2 cups cooked turkey breast strips
1/4 pound fresh snow peas, trimmed and cut into julienne strips

1 medium cucumber, peeled, seeded, and cut into 1/4 by 1/4-inch strips

1 medium pepper, cut into 1/4 by 1/4-inch strips

1/4 cup sliced green onions
2 tablespoons sesame seeds, toasted (optional)

1/4 cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon peanut oil
3 tablespoons rice or white wine vinegar
3 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce
1 teaspoon sesame oil
1 head lettuce, shredded

Combine rice, turkey, peas, cucumbers, pepper, onions and sesame seeds in large bowl. Combine broth, peanut oil, vinegar, soy sauce and sesame oil in small bowl. Pour over rice-turkey mixture; toss lightly. Serve over shredded lettuce at room temperature or slightly chilled.

Makes 8 servings.
Each serving provides 201 calories; 12.4 g. protein; 5.6 g. fat; 25.0 g. carbohydrate; 2.0 g. dietary fiber; 21 mg. cholesterol; and 338 mg. sodium.

CHERRY DREAM

5 cups loosely packaged angel food cake cubes (about 10 ounces or 1/2 of large angel food cake)

1 21-ounce can cherry filling and topping

1/4 cups (4 ounces) frozen non-dairy whipped topping, thawed
Fresh mint, for garnish

Sprinkle cake cubes in bottom of 9 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan. Fold whipped topping into cherry filling in medium bowl. Spread cherry mixture evenly over cake cubes.

Let chill, covered, several hours or overnight. Garnish each serving with a sprig of mint.

Makes 8 servings.
Each serving provides 227 calories; 3.7 g. protein; 3.8 g. fat; 45.1 g. carbohydrate; 0.8 g. dietary fiber; 0 mg. cholesterol; and 125 mg. sodium.

SESAME TURKEY SALAD

3 tablespoons finely grated lemon peel
2 tablespoons water
1/4 cup sugar, divided
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 egg
1 cup nonfat yogurt
1/4 cup skim milk
2 cups all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup California walnuts, chopped

Combine remaining 1/4 cup sugar with lemon juice in small bowl. Let stand 2 to 3 minutes, stirring frequently until sugar dissolves.

Remove pans from oven and pierce tops of each muffin 3 times with a fork. Spoon 1 teaspoon of lemon mixture over each hot muffin; letting it run over the top and down the edges. Let cool in pan about 5 minutes before serving.

Makes 16 muffins.
Each serving provides 158 calories; 3.7 g. protein; 5.7 g. fat; 24.0 g. carbohydrate; 0.8 g. dietary fiber; 14 mg. cholesterol; and 157 mg. sodium.

COOK'S profile

Jerome woman cooks up plenty for leftovers

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Norma Bartholmew's four children have been on their own for 10 years now, so she has husband Bill to cook for — but she still prepares enough food for a large family.

"I just don't know how to cut down," she said. "I've tried cutting back, but it just seems like we're always eating leftovers."

This doesn't mean her meals stay the same the second or third time around. Bartholmew uses leftovers to create new dishes.

For instance, there are a number of ways she recycles mashed potatoes. She might use them to make potato patties or potato salad or she might add some sour cream, garlic powder and cheese and bake them.

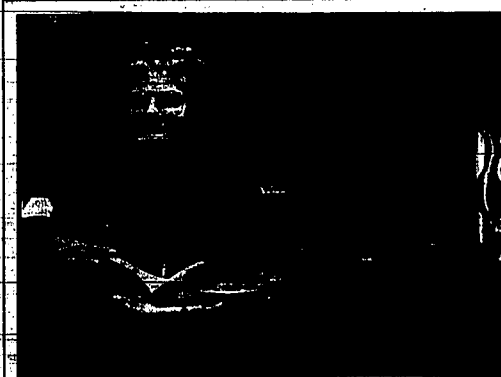

When she fixes a roast with carrots and potatoes, it becomes a stew or a meat pie on another day.

Bartholmew measures out leftover turkey and chicken into 1/4 cup containers to put in the freezer for use in stir fries.

When leftovers are destined to stay as they are, Bartholmew stores them in individual serving size bowls or on plates, ready to reheat in the microwave. That way, she has just those dishes to wash after dinner.

Bartholmew does much of the preparation for the evening meal in the morning. She makes tossed salads, covers them with plastic wrap and places them in the refrigerator. If spaghetti is on the dinner menu, she makes the sauce before leaving for work in the morning.

Money class begins Tuesday

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho and the Consumer Credit Counseling Service are offering an 18-hour money control workshop on managing money and improving lives.

Mike McClymonds, CSI marketing management instructor, says that if people find their expenses are greater than their income, then they are part of a large group of people experiencing financial problems. He says more than 90 percent of people have not been taught skills for personal money management. The workshop will provide simple, basic and workable approaches to money management.

The workshop is set for 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesdays, this Tuesday through Feb. 22, in Room A24 of the Evergreen Building on the CSI campus. Class size is limited to 18 participants. Cost is $20 for singles or $45 for couples. Registration may be done in the Taylor Building Records Office. For more information, call McClymonds at 733-9554, Ext. 406.

Cook

"It's just as easy to decide what you're going to have in the morning as it is five minutes before someone's there to eat it," she said.

This works out especially well when the dish is one that should simmer a few hours. And when Bartholemew feels her crock pot will heat and lets them bubble away all day, she tells family members to dial her up to drop by and have some.

Here is the recipe she uses to make...

NORMA'S BEAN POT

Makes about 3 quarts

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1/2 pound bacon, cut in small pieces
- 1 cup chopped onions
- 2 large (29 ounce) cans pork and beans
- 1 (15 ounce) can green or white lima beans (she prefers the green), drained
- 1 (15 ounce) can red kidney beans, drained
- 1 (15 ounce) can garbanzo beans, drained
- 1 cup ketchup
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon liquid smoke
- 2 tablespoons white vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- A dash of pepper

Brown the bacon and drain (she does this in the microwave). Brown the hamburger and drain off fat. Put all ingredients into three-quart crock pot and stir to combine. Cover and cook on low heat four to nine hours.

Bartholemew puts leftover beans into wide mouth jars, leaving 1/2-inch head space, and freezes them. She serves the beans with celery and carrot sticks.

"It has a hickory baked bean flavor because the liquid smoke is the flavoring," she said. "That's the secret. I've tried it without it and it's dull."

Bartholemew said leftovers come in handy, because after she and her husband decide what they want to eat, they can have it immediately.

"If there is a bowl of bean pot left and a bowl of Stroganoff, we each have one of them," she said. "And if it isn't us, sometimes it's a grandchild who stops in between football and whatever, and I have something on hand all the time."

Second helpings are important, too. If a recipe is too tight, there might not be any.

"I make what I call a poor man's beef Stroganoff," Bartholemew said. "We'd be very disappointed if we didn't have enough of that for a second."

POOR MAN'S BEEF STROGANOFF

Serves 4-6

- 1 pound ground beef
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 can mushroom soup
- 1 small can mushroom pieces and stems, drained
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 8-ounce package curly noodles

Put ground beef and onion in a microwave safe dish and cover with paper towel. Microwave on high for two to three minutes at a time, stirring until it browns. Drain. Add mushroom soup and mushroom pieces and stems.

In the meantime, cook curly noodles according to package directions. Just before serving, add

Bartholemew serves carrot and celery sticks with this dish.

"I always have a quart jar of carrot and celery sticks in my refrigerator regardless of what's happening because I'm not a cookie grandmother," she said. "The kids know that's always in there and think it's a real treat."

CHERRY CHOCOLATE CAKE

Combine:

- Chocolate cake mix
- Oil, if the mix calls for it
- 3 beaten eggs
- 1 can Wilderness pie filling
- 1/4 teaspoon almond flavoring

Mix with spoon. Pour into an oiled 9-by-13 inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes, or until cake springs back when pressed lightly in center. While it cools prepare...

The frostings:

- 5 tablespoons margarine
- 1/3 cup evaporated milk
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 cup chocolate chips (she prefers the milk chocolate chips)

In a saucepan put the margarine, evaporated milk and sugar over medium heat, stirring until it comes to a boil. Boil one minute (stirring constantly) until sugar is dissolved. Remove from heat and add chocolate chips. Stir until melted. Spread over cake. If some of the chips haven't melted completely, the icing will have a crunch texture.

"It's a very moist chocolate cake, with a cherry surprise," Bartholemew said.

SUNDAY ROLLS

Makes 32 crescent rolls

On Saturday night (or the day before) heat, then cool:

- 1 cup milk
- 1 cube margarine

In a separate dish, mix and moisten with 1 tablespoon warm water, 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 tablespoon yeast.

In a large bowl, beat:

- 3 eggs
- Add:
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Combine cooled milk mixture, yeast mixture and:
- 4 cups flour

Stir well. Don't knead. Cover and let rise overnight. Next morning, divide the dough in half. It will be sticky, so flour hands and board. Roll out into two circles. Cut each circle into 16 triangles. Form crescent rolls by rolling from wide end toward point. Let rise four to five hours in lightly oiled pan. Bake 15 minutes at 400 degrees. Brush with butter or margarine. Turn out of pan. Let cool or eat hot.

If Bartholemew isn't having company, she gives away surplus rolls or freezes them.

Word research cures curiosity

DEAR ABBY: Almost all pharmacies use "Rx" as an identifying symbol, so I have been asking pharmacists the origin of this symbol.

Thus far, I have asked perhaps two dozen in different parts of the country, and not one of them was quite certain.

"It's probably Latin," say some. "I think it's a Greek derivation," say others. A few have said, "Why not ask Dear Abby?" So I am. You may use my name.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

AL BENNETT, EVERETT, WASH.

DEAR AL BENNETT: To paraphrase my Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, Rx is the symbol used at the beginning of a prescription and means "take."

The Henry Holt Encyclopedia of Word and Phrase Origins offers this slightly more elaborate definition:

"Rx. The Latin 'recipe,' 'take this,' provides the R in the symbol Rx, as used by pharmacists for centuries, while the slant across the R's leg is a sign of the Roman god Jupiter, patron of medicine. The symbol looks like Rx and is pronounced that way."

DEAR ABBY: I was intrigued by the letter about Johnny Lujack because of an incident that took place in 1945 after Johnny Lujack

I was a corporal in the Army Air Corps, stationed at Boca Raton, Fla. I was on a three-day pass and had gone to Palm Beach. Late one night, I was walking down a deserted street when a motorcycle careened down the street, skidded at high speed, throwing the driver into the middle of the roadway, unconscious.

I raced to give him aid, and an ensign on the other side of the street also raced to help him. Together we hailed a car and helped the injured party into the car and saw him off to the hospital.

The ensign and I talked for a minute, then went for a cup of coffee. He asked me where I was staying. I told him I was sleeping in the lobby of a nearby hotel, but I had to get out by 6 a.m. because it was against the rules to rent a hotel room to an enlisted man.

The ensign invited me to share his room as he had twin beds. Then he said, "Maybe we should introduce ourselves."

I said, "My name is Emil Kohn." He replied, "Mine is Johnny Lujack."

EMIL KOHN, TEMPE, ARIZ.

DEAR ABBY: I just want to thank you and everyone who participated in your Operation Dear Abby and wrote to those of us in the service who are doing tours throughout the world. Each and every one of our jobs is difficult and the rewards are scarce. I used to wonder whether people thought of us back home. But now I can lay those thoughts to rest.

I hope that you print this so those who wrote will realize how important a simple 10-minute letter is to those of us thousands of miles from home.

On behalf of the U.S. Armed Forces, I thank you.

Food

Pick the right beverage for apres-ski

By Elaine Strong
Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph

Heimo Brandstatter knows what it's like to come in from the cold. The Vancouver, British Columbia, native hit the ski slopes when he was 3 years old.

"I grew up in an area surrounded by mountains and skied every winter throughout my childhood. At first, my father used to take me between his legs, and we'd shoot down the hill," he says.

Brandstatter also knows the pleasure of coming off the cold ski slopes to warm up with a comforting hot drink.

So it's no wonder that the avid skier — now food and beverage director for the Hyatt Regency Beaver Creek in Colorado Springs — was instrumental in creating a menu of warm apres-ski drinks and setting a comforting mood for the hotel's Double Diamond Deli.

Following a nationwide trend, Brandstatter began last season by installing a gourmet coffee bar in the Double Diamond. That set the mood, he says.

The ambience extends beyond the Double Diamond. "Because we grind and brew our own coffee beans, the aroma permeates throughout the deli and out into the lobby, drawing people in."

But Brandstatter wanted something more distinctive. He asked food and beverage department managers and employees to come up with new warm specialty drinks.

It didn't take long.

Youngsters and adults alike appreciate a warm drink after a day on the slopes.

15 people — came up with an amazing number of ideas. We'd get together to taste the concoctions ... add a little chocolate or hazelnut. Some we didn't like at all; others we liked a lot."

"Presentation is so important," Brandstatter said. "People eat with their eyes, and with these drinks, layering is the key."

"With mocha, you have chocolate at the bottom, layered next with espresso, steamed milk, foam on top sprinkled with a little cinnamon and garnished with biscootti (twice-baked Italian cookie). The trick is to use a clear, tall glass so that you can distinctly see the layers in your creation."

Home cooks can replicate the Double Diamond's apres-ski drinks by following Brandstatter's recipes. Layering the liquids requires a steady hand, however.

"If you want to layer Kahlua or Bailey's Irish Cream, pour it onto the espresso very slowly, taking a spoon down to the very top of the coffee and pouring the liqueur onto the head of the spoon, letting it build up very slowly," Brandstatter says.

Otherwise, the heavy liqueur will break through the resistance of the coffee. Don't despair if you don't have an espresso machine. Simply make the drinks with any strong coffee or instant espresso such as powdered Decaf D'Oro. In place of steamed milk, heat skim or 1 percent milk in a pan to just under a boil. Just don't scald the milk, Brandstatter warns. "You don't want it to have that burned flavor."

"Serve these warm drinks at home following a dinner party," Brandstatter suggests. "Invite your guests into the living room to sit in front of a fire, put their feet up, loosen up and relax."

Keep the starch in those resolutions

By Joe Crea
Orange County Register

Ah, resolutions. New resolve and the new year seem to go hand-in-hand. And it seems I know few people whose first-of-the-year resolutions don't include improvements in their health — and even fewer who fail to add "I'm going on a diet."

But there's that other old chestnut: Promises are made to be broken. For many of us the decision to diet seems as fragile as Christmas snow. Most of us are lucky if we make it to the Super Bowl with our good intentions intact.

And yes, my name is in the list of New Year's dieters, and yes, like everyone else who takes the pledge, I worry. Will I hold up under the bombardment of repeated temptation? Do I have what it takes, namely willpower? Just how long will it take?

Right off the bat, my savvy person knows that temptation just keeps on coming.

Thus, tip-wise, resolution No. 1 has to be to strip temptations from your home, banishing those most difficult-to-resist.

Since we're talking resolutions and tips, here are a few others I'm implementing that I suspect will be helpful to you:

If you closely watch and curb your intake of fat, both obvious and hidden, you are well on the road to improving your health and losing weight. Fat contains the greatest concentration of calories; keep fat intake to approximately 20 percent of total calories and you will cut the amount of fat you consume nearly in half as compared with the average American.

Aim for a great breakfast or lunch. If you build a healthful, well-rounded and filling meal early in the day, you embark on your day with blood sugar elevated to a degree that enables you to curb hunger and avoid temptation; you are most likely to get a good meal. The vital nutrients your body needs; and you are more likely to burn those calories over the course of the day.

Start walking. It's excellent for overall toning and helps raise your metabolism.

Make it a family affair. You're right to help everyone in the household improve their health.

Willpower is a word usually held in downright dread. Mostly that's because it connotes self-denial, and what fun is there in that? Yet if you're serious about changing your diet, make friends with willpower — then nature it and reward it with more constructive treats.

Study after study has demonstrated that traditional, short-term, close-ended diets simply do not work on the long term. The minute most of us quit, back creep the pounds. So you and I must get it through our heads that, from this day forward, every mouthful matters.

That doesn't mean we can't have social fun. Definitely allow yourself to splurge — then, instead of berating yourself, admit openly "I planned that," then gracefully climb back onto the wagon. The worst thing you can do is to hammer yourself and holler "What a failure I am," and then, reasoning that you're already blown it, completely abandon your goals.

Tempt a sweet tooth with these recipes

By Ellen Hawks
The Baltimore Sun

Whip up a few egg whites and some cream, add a dash of bourbon and you're on your way to an angel pie.

Decorate this cake with some chocolate shavings and bits of orange rind and you'll be finishing a brown-eyed Susan cake. Both are sweet beginnings for 1994.

ROBERT'S ANGEL PIE

4 tablespoons cornstarch
1½ cup boiling water

½ teaspoon salt
3 egg whites
3 tablespoons sugar

1½ teaspoons vanilla
½ cup whipped cream
nuts, fruit, chocolate or pepper

mint to sprinkle on top
1 baked pie shell

Mix cornstarch and sugar in saucepan and add boiling water stirring constantly. Cook until thick and clear, 10 to 12 minutes. Add salt to egg whites and beat until stiff. Add 3 tablespoons sugar and vanilla to the egg whites and beat until creamy. Pour hot cornstarch mixture slowly over the egg whites, beating constantly. Cool slightly and fill pastry shell. Cover with whipped cream and sprinkle with one of the toppings. Prepare two hours before serving.

DENNISON'S BROWN-EYED SUSAN CAKE

2/3 cup shortening (half butter for flavoring)

3 eggs
2½ cups cake flour (sifted once)

2½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk

2 ounces melted baking chocolate
¼ teaspoon baking soda
1 tablespoon milk

1 teaspoon orange extract
1½ tablespoons orange rind
¼ teaspoon yellow coloring

Cream shortening and butter with sugar until fluffy. Beat in eggs thoroughly. Sift dry ingredients together and add to creamed mixture alternately with 2 cups milk.

Divide batter into 2 pans. In one pan, bake 2 ounces melted baking chocolate, ¼ teaspoon baking soda and 1 tablespoon milk.

Into the other pan, blend 1 teaspoon orange extract, 1½ tablespoons grated orange rind and ¼ teaspoon yellow coloring.

Drop the two batters alternately by spoonfuls into two 9-inch cake pans. Bake 25 to 30 minutes at 250 degrees. Cool and frost.

For frontier women, life on the range meant drudgery, high calorie foods

By Barbara Sullivan
Chicago Tribune

"Everyday living was not easy ... It usually took all day to do eight or 10 loads of wash. Then the tubs had to be emptied and the kitchen scrubbed, supper prepared, dishes and milk buckets washed, the clothes brought in and dampened, all to be ironed the next day. The ironing was done on the dining table. There were always meals to get and milk to care for, churning, making butter, gathering vegetables and fruit, mucking jam and jelly and mince-meat, feeding and tending chickens, ducks and turkeys ..."

The writer is Hazel Webb Datzel, born in 1890 into a frontier family consisting of parents, six siblings and other relatives who were making a new life for themselves in Colorado.

Her descriptive words are found in "Home on the Range: A Culinary History of the American West," by Cathy Luchetti (Villard Books, $25), a book that combines close to 200 photographs with dozens of excerpts from diaries and letters kept by early settlers.

It's an absorbing account of how life was, and the thin-line that so often existed between survival and starvation. It's also an account that can make the reader think — we are so accustomed to our microwaves and fast foods that reading these accounts, such as that of a day spent making 600 gallons of molasses along with all the other household chores, can bring on a vicarious weariness.

This isn't a book to use for cooking. Instead, it's a vivid, evocative account of life and food in pioneer times.

'Ironically, the women who labored over the open-air fires, tending Dutch ovens to bake loaves of bread, found in the act of primitive frontier cooking an ultimate kind of emancipation.'

— author Cathy Luchetti

"To glimpse the offerings of the pioneer table is to know, with deeper understanding, the terrible privations often suffered by men and women in the West — regardless of race, class, geography, faith or education," Luchetti writes in the preface.

The photographs, collected from historical societies, museums and universities throughout the West, are wonderful. Several women standing behind a table, long white aprons covering their floor-length dresses, all rolling out dough in a communal baking session; a tent bearing the sign "BREAD, PIES, CAKE. Walk In"; a group of cowboys playing poker as the cook (a man) watches; such photographs match the words in painting a vivid picture of life on the frontier.

The two extremes of isolation and community togetherness are poignantly described in several of the stories, which were gathered from friends, relatives, curators, archivists and collectors.

For example, portions of the journal of Emily Hensley Gillespie, born in 1838, chronicles her unhappy marriage and the tedium of her life, mixed with love and hopes for her two children.

"Done my mopping, baking, etc., ah, I am sad. O, why? 'Tis this, that James came home last evening late. I had been waiting for him," she wrote on July 11, 1863. On Dec. 26, 1874, "I ... hardly know what to do. It seems the more I do to make home pleasant the more unpleasant it is ..."

And on Nov. 28, 1875: "Have been reading the Life of Cleopatra ... have almost come to the conclusion that the indolent enjoy life best."

On March 25, 1883, "The children want to go to College — and I will help them, all I can."

One of the last entries was written by her daughter, Sarah, in November 1887: "Ma is tired & I am standing over her trying to write a few lines for her. Have got the beans & pudding in the oven for supper & she is trying to write lying in bed."

And the last, just before her death at the age of 50 in February 1888: "My dear Children: I sincerely feel that my physical work is finished. My mission here is finished."

For many women, however, pioneer life was a form of liberation, according to Luchetti.

"Ironically, the women who labored over the open-air fires, tending Dutch ovens to bake loaves of bread, found in the act of primitive frontier cooking an ultimate kind of emancipation," she writes. "As the winds whipped their skirts into the coals, the dresses would burn, sometimes knee-high. Some say this led to the wearing of pants — liberation springing from the drudgery of campfire cooking."

Meals in early Western towns were a different story than on the range or farm.

"For company dinners, a popular entree was a lavish serving of a highly caloric fatty meat, such as saddle of mutton covered in an 'iced' topping of cooled meat drippings with the white top fat skimmed off, remelted and spread over the meat in a smooth white coat. Its rich, calorie sheen was crowned the height of elegance, considered with a coronet of peeled vegetables," Luchetti writes in the introduction to the chapter on town life.

Throughout the book are early recipes and food hints.

A drink "to please an invalid" was "jelly-diluted-in-water," while an appetite tempter instructed: "To 5 or 6 crackers, or a slice of toast, broken in a bowl, add 1 cup hot chicken broth, and serve to the sick or weak. Or add 1 cup hot milk, a piece of butter, a dash of nutmeg, and a sprinkle of sugar."

Save the soup — Italian style

By Russ Parsons
Los Angeles Times

There's exactly one hour before guests arrive for dinner and the soup isn't far removed from water and the pie crust falls apart when I try to roll it out. At times like these, two questions come to mind: How in the heck did I get into this mess? And how am I going to get out of it?

The first is a lot easier to answer than the second. All of this is happening because I broke one of the oldest rules in cooking: "Thou shalt not attempt for company a dish thou hast never fixed before." It's almost engraved in stone. I myself have probably written it at least a couple of hundred times. But then again, if we journalists were as good at taking advice as we are at giving it, one of us would surely have been elected president by now.

So, you can probably say it serves me right that the dried beans that were supposed to be completely cooked in 45 minutes are still slightly chalky after four hours. And when I ground the "battuto" in the food processor rather than finely mincing the pancetta and vegetables by hand, you can also say I deserve to have a flavoring base that resembles baby food more closely than something mama would make. And, of course, there are those of you who will smirk when I complain that rolling out a delicate pie dough in this super-heated kitchen (in my by-now super-heated state of mind) is like working with wet Kleenex.

But, as they say inside the Beltway, let's not play the blame game. Besides, while I may certainly deserve the embarrassment of serving to guests this kind of meal, do my guests — all of them innocent — deserve having to eat it?

So, having created this mess, how do I get out of it?

Start with the soup (after sticking the pie dough back into the freezer to chill). It's a minestrone with cabbage and white beans from one of my favorite cookbooks, "Treatise on Cooking" by Biba Caggiano (MacMillan, $25). Having finished the beans, you puree half of them back into the soup to thicken it. The remaining beans are the only texture in the soup and, in this case, it just isn't thick enough.

I had doubled the recipe, so there would be some leftovers. I served it in the week as "ribollita" — a really-pretty second-day use of minestrone (at least in Tuscany). Stale bread is added to the soup and the whole is re-boiled (hence the name) into a nice, thick tomatoey mush. One thing we always have on hand at my house is plenty of stale bread — there isn't a good bakery in the neighborhood, so when I get to one I invariably buy too much, and when I get home, I never seem to remember to freeze it.

So, I think to myself, why wait until tomorrow? Why not make a first-day "ribollita" (or would that be simply "bollita")? I scatter toasted bread slices over the bottom of a cast-iron Dutch oven, then sprinkle on some freshly grated Parmigiano-Reggiano (another basic rule of cooking: There is very little that a good Parmigiano won't fix). I ladle over soup to cover and repeat the process until I've reached the top of the pan. I cover it and stick it in the oven to keep warm and go to work on the pie.

...I broke one of the oldest rules in cooking: 'Thou shalt not attempt for company a dish thou hast never fixed before.' It's one of those things that has been repeated so often, it's almost engraved in stone.

Ribollita, a second-day soup and bread dish, has gotten more than one Italian cook out of a jam.

The pie is supposed to be double-crusted and filled with stewed fall fruits. It is supposed to be baked in a tart-tin with a removable bottom. There are a couple of problems. First, I can't find my tart tin. In fact, it occurs to me that I don't remember seeing it since I moved — a year and a half ago. Which leads me neatly into the second problem: I almost never make pies anymore. I'm not sure why, but dessert is something we don't eat very often in our house, and when we do, it's more likely to be cake. (That's the exact opposite of how it used to be, when I lived at an altitude of nearly 6,000 feet and the very idea of making something with baking powder was enough to give me the shakies.)

So the first trick is finding something to bake the pie in. It has to have removable sides, because this dough has a fairly high percentage of sugar and if left to cool in a pan, it would soon become one with it. The only thing that fits the bill is a high-sided springform, which gives me an idea: Since the dough is so soft and my technique too rusty to roll out, how about making it "deep dish," with only one crust? The filling (quinces, red flame raisins and prunes) is pretty good to be served open-faced.

I pull the dough from the freezer and begin pinching off chunks and patching them over the bottom and a couple of inches up the side of the springform. I add some quince jam to the fruit mixture to give it more volume, then spread that in the tart. After baking, it is beautiful — a nice country combination of roughly formed brown crust and deep red filling, just right with a scoop of vanilla ice cream (the sweet equivalent fix-it of Reggiano).

Some Italian cold cuts from a good deli, along with a "pinzimonio" of celery and fennel served with olive oil, and a fresh goat cheese are waiting when the guests arrive. Then comes the soup. Fresh-cut walnuts, flowery Finesse grapes and a hunk of cheese finish off the Chianti. Then comes dessert. Everyone leaves happy.

I wish I could promise it won't happen again.

FIRST-DAY RIBOLLITA

1/2 pound dried cannellini or Great Northern beans, soaked overnight
3 quarts water
1/2 pound pancetta, cubed
1 medium carrot, cut in sections
1/4 lb celery, cut in sections
1 medium onion, quartered
1/2 cup Italian parsley
2 tablespoons fresh rosemary
3 cloves garlic
2 tablespoons oil
1/2 pound Napa cabbage, thinly sliced

4 cups canned plum tomatoes, with juice
1/4 loaf round Italian bread, sliced and toasted

1 1/2 cups grated Parmigiano-Reggiano
In soup pot, cover beans with water and bring to boil. Reduce heat to bare simmer and cook until beans are tender but not broken. With slotted spoon, remove half of beans from pot and run through fine plate of food mill into soup pot to thicken soup.

White beans are cooking, combine pancetta, carrot, celery, onion, parsley, rosemary and garlic in food processor and finely mince. In skillet over medium heat, saute minced combination in olive oil until lightly browned. Add cabbage and cook, stirring until cabbage is tender, about 5 minutes. Puree tomatoes through food mill into skillet and cook until barely thickened. Add skillet mixture to soup pot and bring to boil. Cook 10 to 15 minutes.

In large casserole, place loose layer of bread slices. Dust with grated cheese. Pour 1 to 2 ladles soup over, spooning deep in soup pot to pull up beans and cabbage. Repeat until all bread is used, ending with remainder of cheese. Let stand 10 minutes, allowing bread to absorb soup and then top off. Bake at 350 degrees until heated through.

Before serving, top off with more soup, covering bread completely. Makes 8 servings.

Gift of food great for ill friends

By Joe Crea
Orange County Register

After a long, long labor and a last-minute Caesarean-section, Gretchen delivered our son, Spencer Daniel, on March 20. Gretchen's mother, Eleanor Peders, has come to help. An act of pure kindness, she flew in from Ohio to "mother the new mother."

Of course, new mothers aren't the only ones who benefit from — and cherish — such tender attention. From new neighbors to infirm individuals to the surviving family members of a deceased friend, sooner or later we all know someone who needs some special TLC.

Just how to cook for someone in a delicate condition is a dicey matter. The first line of defense is common sense, coupled with the presiding physician's guidelines. "You don't always know what they'll like," my mother-in-law says with a somewhat philosophical shrug. "All you can do is your best — after all, you're just trying to be helpful."

Here are her ground rules: Make it easy on yourself. While it might be true that the value of a kindness, spiritually speaking, depends on the effort exerted, there is another intervening truth: If you make things too complicated, you might not have time for much generosity. So, double-batch something you're normally making and send half to a sick friend. If you're buying a roast chicken for your supper, pick up a second and drop it off to the friend-in-need on your way home.

Be empathetic to personal tastes. When you know someone even vaguely — through civic organizations, church groups or neighborhood functions — you usually have a sense of what people eat. If the recipient has bland tastes or tends to be culinarily adventuresome, keep that in mind when you make up something to send their way.

Play it safe. I wouldn't send chili to someone who's been ill. But that doesn't necessarily mean flavorless fare. You could prepare spaghetti and meat sauce for the family and simply substitute plain butter (grated cheese on the side) on the portion for anyone who's ill. Familiar vegetables with simple toppings are good accompaniments.

Keep it simple. Casseroles should be fully assembled. It should be something that's going to be easy to warm over. Disposable containers are helpful; otherwise, make arrangements to pick up your covered dish.

"When I send over meals, I always make a salad to go with it," Eleanor says. (She usually skips the dressing: "You never know what will appeal to them that day, it wets the salad, and most people have a bottle.") "I always send rolls or breadsticks. Include a mild beverage, such as ginger ale. And unless I know they can't have it, I'll send along something sweet — especially if there are kids there."

Better bake 2 of these cakes — 1 to give and 1 to keep

By Joe Crea
Orange County Register

"Miss Ellie," as we teasingly call my mother-in-law, is a mean cook. Every time she has presented this cake at a party, it draws raves — and when I told one of the officers recently, it disappeared in minutes.

It's definitely best served the day it's baked. You can vary the filling with almost any kind of preserves — or experiment with chocolate chips, cream cheese filling or whatever your imagination conjures.

If you're into batch-cooking, double this recipe. That produces enough batter to make one 9x-13x sheet plus a 9- to 10-inch round cake — one for home and one to share.

APRICOT CRUMBLE CAKE

(Makes about 18 portions)
1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup margarine or butter
1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
1/2 cup milk or cream
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
8- to 10 ounces of apricot preserves (see cook's notes)
TOPPING:
2 cups flaked coconut
Two-thirds cup packed light brown sugar

1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
One-third cup margarine or butter, melted and cooled
Optional: 1 to 1 1/2 cups coarsely chopped pecans and/or sliced almonds

Grease and flour a 9x-13x ovenproof pan. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Beat the cream cheese and margarine until fluffy. Gradually beat in the sugar on medium speed until well blended. Add the milk gradually, mixing well after each addition. Blend in the eggs and vanilla, scraping the sides of the bowl. In a separate bowl sift together the dry ingredients. Gradually add the dry mixture to the cream cheese mixture, mixing well. (The resulting batter will be heavy.)

Spread half the batter into the prepared baking pan. Dot with small lumps of the preserves, leaving a bit of space between these dollops. Cover with remaining batter and gently spread to cover all the preserves.

Bake in preheated oven for 35 to 40 minutes, until a pick inserted near the center of the cake comes out clean. Remove to a rack.

TO PREPARE THE TOPPING: In a small bowl, combine coconut with crumbled sugar, cinnamon and melted margarine. Toss to coat and blend thoroughly. Spread topping over the top of cake. Broil for about 3 minutes, or until golden brown (watch carefully; avoid burning).

You can have your zucchini bread and eat it too, with a low-fat version

By Charlotte Balcomb Lane
Orlando Sentinel

Jean Swanson, a registered visiting nurse from Orlando, found it easy to cut meat and most other forms of fat out of her diet to reduce her blood cholesterol levels, but she couldn't justify a favorite homemade zucchini bread.

"It's so delicious, I refuse to give it up," Swanson said when she wrote asking for help in making the fat-filled recipe.

"I have experimented with (the recipe) over the years, trying to cut down on the sugar and, of course the oil, only to have a disaster in the end," Swanson added.

The first step in making Swanson's recipe was to replace the eggs with non-fat egg substitutes. Buyers need to beware when shopping for egg substitutes, because some brands contain fat and some don't. It's important to check the nutritional information on the package, which should read "0" grams of fat per serving.

The next step was to replace most of the oil — the major source of fat in the bread — with applesauce. In this recipe, the switch was easy, because the oil and the applesauce have approximately the same consistency. Eliminating all the oil produced a loaf with a less-than-satisfactory spongy texture. A small amount of oil helped give the bread a more cakelike texture.

Swanson also is concerned about saving less sugar, so I cut the sugar from 1 1/2 cups to 1 cup and switched half the granulated sugar for brown sugar. Brown sugar helps improve the taste, giving the bread more body.

I also made other incidental changes, such as reducing the amount of walnuts in the recipe by half, saving 36 grams of fat. Replacing pistachios would further reduce the fat, because they contain 28 grams of fat in a half-cup, compared to 36 grams of fat in a half-cup of walnuts. Omitting the nuts completely would further reduce the fat. The revamped recipe gets 26 percent of calories from fat as compared to the original, which gets 49 percent of calories from fat.

The result is a low-fat sweet bread that Swanson can enjoy without fear of raising her blood cholesterol levels.

JEAN SWANSON'S ZUCCHINI BREAD

3 eggs
1 cup vegetable oil
1 1/2 cups sugar
3 medium-size zucchini, grated and well-drained (about 2 cups)
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
3 teaspoons ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup raisins (optional)
1 cup chopped walnuts
Beat eggs lightly in a large bowl. Stir in oil, sugar, zucchini and vanilla.

Sift flour, baking powder, baking soda, cinnamon and salt onto wax paper. Stir into egg mixture until well-blended. Stir in raisins and walnuts. Spoon batter into two well-greased 8-by-5-inch loaf pans. Bake in 375-F oven for 1 hour or until centers spring back when lightly touched. Cool in pans for 10 minutes. Remove from pans and cool completely on wire rack. Makes 2 loaves (32 slices).

Nutrition information per slice (including raisins): calories, 172; fat, 9.6 grams; carbohydrate, 20 grams; cholesterol, 21 milligrams; sodium, 134 milligrams.

LOW-FAT ZUCCHINI BREAD

1/2 cup fat-free egg substitutes (equivalent to 3 eggs)
1/2 cup canola oil

1/2 cup sugar-free, thick applesauce
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla

2 medium-size zucchini, grated and well-drained (about 2 cups)
2 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 tablespoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup raisins (optional)
1/2 cup shelled walnuts or pistachios

Heat oven to 350 F. Lightly coat two 8-by-5-inch baking pans with nonstick cooking spray. Set aside.

In a large mixing bowl, use an electric beater or whisk to beat together the egg substitutes, oil and sugars. Add the applesauce and vanilla and continue beating until the sugars have dissolved. Stir in the zucchini with a flexible spatula.

In another bowl, stir together the flour, baking soda and powder, cinnamon, salt, optional raisins and walnuts or pistachios.

Gently stir the flour into the liquid mixture. Pour into prepared pans.

Bake for 45 to 50 minutes, until a pick inserted in the center comes out clean. Remove from heat and allow to cool in pans for 10 minutes. Remove from pans and cool completely.

Makes 2 loaves (32 slices). Test kitchen notes: After you have added the flour mixture, stir just enough to mix the ingredients. Do not overbeat or the loaves will be tough.

Nutrition information per slice (including raisins): calories, 98; fat, 2.9 grams; carbohydrate, 16.4 grams; cholesterol, 0 milligrams; sodium, 121 milligrams.

Keep your holiday plants from fading

By Adrienne Cook
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The poinsettias are beginning to fade and the Christmas cactus has fewer blooms. But with a little determination, the life of holiday plants can be prolonged to bring color at another time of the year, or again next Christmas.

Most holiday plants are perennials, as such, they have the potential to be long-lived, rewarding garden residents. But they are subtropical plants and must be brought in each winter if they are to survive — or bloom.

Among tropical perennials, poinsettias are perhaps the most frustrating of holiday plants. So striking at Christmastime, these Mexican natives require precise conditions to maintain their beauty for more than a few weeks.

For long-term care, poinsettias need six to eight hours of bright light, a draft-free location away from heat sources, a temperature between 55 and 70 degrees and some humidity. Dry heat is inhospitable to them. If these conditions are impossible to provide, it might be wiser to toss plants into the compost once they begin to fade or, more typically, lose foliage.

In the home, the two biggest liabilities to the continued good looks and health of poinsettias are insufficient light and poor watering practices. A room with plenty of natural light streaming in the windows is the place to locate poinsettia plants. If the room is dim, they should be given supplemental light from a fluorescent or plant light. Plant light bulbs, which come in many sizes to fit various sockets, are available at garden and home centers.

Poinsettias like the same watering practices that should be applied to all houseplants, but they are less forgiving of disregarding. Never leave them sitting in water. Water them when the soil surface feels dry but before the pot feels light when you pick it up. The stress of too little water, causing the plant to wilt even temporarily, will shorten its color stage. To water, either plunge the pot into a bucket of water until the soil surface stops bubbling or apply water gently with a watering can until moisture seeps through drainage holes.

Every two to three weeks, feed poinsettias with a water-soluble houseplant fertilizer. If it goes well, the color stage will last until the end of March. Then prune the plant severely to 4-foot-or-less height. Add the prunings to the compost pile and transplant the poinsettia to a pot one size larger than the one it was in. Rest the plant a few weeks by withholding fertilizer and letting the soil dry out more before watering.

In May, after all danger of frost is past, the plant can go outside. Resume fertilizing and pinch back new growth to encourage bushiness. In September, before the nights get cool, bring the plant indoors and cover it with a box at night so it will get 14 hours of continuous darkness. During the day, remove the box. This period takes two to 2½ months before colored bracts begin forming.

During the entire time, plants should be kept between 60 and 70 degrees. Once the bracts begin to show, the long-night stage is officially over and the plant should continue to color up once again.

Christmas cacti — their botanical name is Schlumbergera — are considerably less challenging. These flat-leaved succulents with their jeweled drooping blossoms now come in a range of colors — white, red, pink, apricot. Different varieties bloom at different times, covering most of the big holidays — Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter. Do not expect a Christmas cactus to bloom for you again at Easter, however; they are two different varieties.

You can expect Schlumbergera to bloom for at least a month. As blossoms die, they fall off until all are gone. During the blooming period, plants should be watered regularly and fertilized every two weeks. Once the last of the blossoms has dropped, stop fertilizing and water plants less, allowing the soil to dry out, but do not let the plant become water-starved. The flat, jointed foliage will begin to shrivel when the plant is stressed from lack of water.

In late spring, move the plant outside and repot into a larger container. These cacti make excellent hanging baskets indoors and out. Water as needed. Bright green new growth will begin at the tips and some of the joints will die. Bring it indoors in mid-September, before the first frost, and begin fertilizing again.

Cut kitchen remodeling cost

By Gary Krizo
Orange County Register

According to statistics given to us by the Sewing Fashion Council, we Americans do not mess around when it comes to remodeling our kitchens.

Are you ready for this? The numbers show that we fork over $20,000 per kitchen job. That's a lotta banana-nut bread, no matter how you bake it.

But, if you know how to sew or are willing to learn, there are plenty of ways to cut the cost of giving your kitchen a fresh, new, inviting look.

All the new easy-to-sew patterns, do-it-yourself window trimmings, cupboard coverings, table settings — even wall coverings — are easier than you might think and can be made by anyone with basic sewing skills.

When you're ready to tackle the kitchen but your budget won't go for an all-out job, sew a new window shade or window treatment. You'll be surprised at how much the entire room changes.

Certain styles lend themselves to kitchens, such as cafe-style, tab or tie curtains, and all are easy to sew. Use light, translucent fabrics for window trim to add a splash of color.

If you want to go contemporary, try a bold stripe or print for the window. Embellish the treatment with coordinating trim or lace for a more finished look.

Country continues to be a popular decorating style for kitchens and calls for gingham, calico and chintz fabrics.

A popular color scheme for a sophisticated country kitchen is blue, yellow and white. For a more contemporary appeal, use a variety of shades of hunter green and muted reds.

If you have worn-looking kitchenable chairs that you're getting tired of, transform them with easy-to-sew chair covers. Color-coordinate the covers with your main decorating scheme or

Similar coverings can be used to cover breakfast-bar stools. Sew cushions with ties that can be used to secure them to the legs of the stools. Carry the theme from the table chairs through to the stools for a coordinated look.

Before you buy a bunch of fabric for your kitchen, make sure you do the following:

- Test how colors look under bright light. Lighting in many stores is not bright enough to give you a true indication of how fabric will look when you get it home and into lots of natural light.

- Take home swatches of the fabric to see if the color, texture, mood and style blend with your appliances and furniture.

- Determine whether the fabric is treated for home-decoration use. It should be colorfast and stain-resistant.

- Don't select dry-clean-only fabrics for items that will get a lot of wear and tear, such as napkins and place mats.

- Colors tend to fade in kitchens that receive lots of direct sunlight.

When choosing a color scheme, go with a brighter palette than you'd normally choose for other rooms in the house.

New carpet labels will help consumers

The Washington Post

Shoppers worried about reports that carpeting can make people sick will get more information about the problem from a new label now being attached to carpet samples made after Jan. 1.

The Carpet and Rug Institute announced the new labeling program recently.

The new label is larger and contains more information than the earlier one, which was criticized by consumer advocates as misleading. Unlike the previous version, this one describes the health effects on some people when carpets "or other interior renovation materials" are installed, removed or cleaned, and recommends that anyone who experiences headaches, respiratory problems or other symptoms notify a doctor.

The label also shows that the carpet has been tested to ensure that levels of the chemicals suspected of causing symptoms are within the institute's guidelines. It also gives advice on installing carpet.

Purchasers also get an eight-page "Carpet Owner's Manual" with the text of the label and additional information about installation and maintenance.

Bernard Pollina, a staff assistant to Rep. Bernard Sanders, D-Vt., said the new label was a step in the right direction. While it does not solve the health problem, he said, it recognizes that one exists.

"It is fair to say the problem we are recognizing goes well beyond carpets," Pollina added. "Low-level chemical exposures" from other indoor products can also affect human health, he said.

Pollina said the carpet industry has promised to undertake more research on the health effects of carpets.

Take a mid-winter tomato quiz

Tomatoes: everybody loves 'em. They brighten salads, juice up a hamburger and they're essential in a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich.

Even though tomatoes can be a little finicky to grow, almost everyone has a patch of ground where a tomato plant, even if he doesn't grow anything else. Gardeners also like to share tomatoes, sometimes passed down as a family secret, sometimes picked up at a garden club.

How much do you know about growing tomatoes? Here's a fun quiz based on information published by National Gardening Magazine. Answers are at the bottom of this column. Have fun.

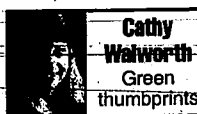

1. Seedlings need fertilizer right from the start. T or F?
2. When buying transplants, thick is better than tall. T or F?
3. Bright sun is best for newly transplanted tomatoes. T or F?
4. Trench planting helps tomatoes get off to a quick start. T or F?
5. You can root the suckers you pinch from spring-planted vines for more fall tomatoes. T or F?
6. Mulch tomato plants right from the start. T or F?
7. Keep plants warm early in the season for an earlier harvest. T or F?
8. Root pruning hastens ripening. T or F?

How did you do? What kinds of tricks do you use to get your tomatoes to produce more or bigger fruits earlier? Write to "Green Thumbprints," in care of the Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho, 83303.

When we receive some of your tomato hints, we'll share them with other Magic Valley gardeners.

The answers to the tomato quiz are:

1. False. Although many gardeners think so, some commercial seed-starting mixes already have fertilizer in them. But if yours doesn't, don't worry. Wait at least a week — or even until after the first reporting before giving tender tomato plants fertilizer. It's much more important to give seedlings plenty of water and light to get them growing straight.
2. True. The tallest transplants are not necessarily the best. Pick hardy dark green plants with thick stems and large, well-developed root systems. Pass by any plant that already has blosoms or fruit. It won't have the strength to support fruit this early.

3. False. Tomatoes love sun, but young plants need protection from direct sun and wind or they'll get sun- or wind-burned. Harden them off. Transplant tomatoes on a cloudy day, or late afternoon or evening.

4. True. Trench planting helps get the heat from the sun to the roots early in the season. And it helps the plants grow additional roots so they can take in more water and nutrients. When trench planting, pinch all the lower leaves off, then lay the whole plant in a shallow trench horizontally. Cover the stem with two to three inches of soil. Bring the top cluster of leaves above the soil. Water well.

5. True (for longer growing seasons). Then suckers are allowed to grow four to five inches and produce a bud. In mid to late summer cut the suckers from the plant, remove the lower leaves, and root them in a jar of water. Plant them in pots or directly in the garden and water well for the first few days.

6. False. A heavy layer of mulch insulates the soil. Wait four to five weeks until the ground has warmed up. Mulching too early will keep the soil too cool and delay harvest.

7. True. Use anything that will gather heat to warm up the roots and soil. Circle the plant with black felt roofing paper, an old tire or black plastic sheeting. The more heat you draw to the plant early on, the sooner your harvest.

8. True. Wait until the plant has three or four clusters of tomatoes. Then take a knife and cut through half the roots. This puts stress on the plant. It reacts by rushing to produce ripe fruit and seed. You get the satisfaction of enjoying ripe fruit earlier in the season. For more information, call National Gardening Magazine at 1-800-727-9097.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

as 'tis in a wrong belief."
— Samuel Butler.

Declarer's plan must counter the line of attack initiated by the defense. If the defenders start by leading trumps, it is foolish to be obstinate about ruffing losers in dummy. Against a heart lead, South can ruff two clubs in dummy to take 10 tricks. He wins dummy's heart ace and plays ace and another club. East wins and shifts to a trump, but South wins the race. He wins in hand, ruffs a club and returns to his heart king to ruff his last club. He now has 10 winners.

Against a trump lead, South must face reality — he won't be allowed to ruff two clubs in dummy. Therefore, he must try his luck with dummy's diamonds. He wins his trump ace and leads a low diamond to dummy's seven and East's ace. East returns a trump to dummy's nine, and dummy's diamond queen, which discards a club. Dummy's trump jack remains as an entry, and South enjoys a two-diamond winners in dummy to win 10 tricks.

What if the defense shifts to clubs after winning the second diamond? South wins, crosses to dummy's heart ace and ruffs a diamond high. When West's jack drops, dummy's diamonds make the lucky game.

Notice of Availability of the Proposed Twin Falls County Solid Waste Facility (TSWF) Draft Environmental Impact Statement and Draft Land Use Plan

Amendment

1993 Falls County, Idaho has made application to purchase 1083.77 acres of public land managed by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), on which they propose to construct and maintain a state of the art "Subsite D" solid waste facility. The proposed project is located near Hub Butte, 10 miles south of the City of Twin Falls, Idaho. The purpose of the proposed facility would be to bring Twin Falls County into compliance with the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) and its associated regulations, 40 CFR 257 and 258 "Subsite D". These regulations set forth many site requirements for solid waste facilities that are in operation after April 9, 1993 that the existing facilities in Twin Falls County do not meet. The proposed facility would be constructed and administered by Twin Falls County and is operated by a private contractor.

A formal public meeting to receive comments on the Draft Environmental Impact Statement and Draft Land Use Plan (DEIS/DLUP) will be held on February 15, 1994 in the College of Southern Idaho cafeteria in Twin Falls, ID from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.

Comments regarding the DEIS/DLUP may be made orally at the meeting or they can be submitted in writing to the Burley District Manager, Bureau of Land Management, Route 3, Box 1, Burley, Idaho 83318. All comments must be received by BLM on or before April 15, 1994.

For further information, contact Scott Barkus, Project Manager, Bureau of Land Management, Burley District Office, Route 3, Box 1, Burley, Idaho 83318. Phone (208) 678-5514.

The DEIS/DLUP identifies resource values and analyzes impacts to these resources that would be expected from the proposed project. The DEIS/DLUP also identifies the proposed alternative, which is the preferred alternative.

The Bureau of Land Management is the lead Federal Agency in the preparation of the TSWF/DEIS/DLUP.

Copies of the DEIS/DLUP are being sent to all individuals and agencies that have participated in the public scoping process, or have otherwise asked to be included on the mailing list.

Additional copies are available from the Burley District Office, Bureau of Land Management, Route 3, Box 1, Burley, Idaho 83318. The Burley District Office phone number is (208) 678-5514.
