Arctic air moved into the central United States on Sunday bringing freezing temperatures to the Plains and upper Mississippi Valley and snow to the Rockies and southern Plains.

A sharp frontal boundary extended across the central Florida Peninsula, bringing some snow to the mid-Atlantic coast and strong thunderstorms to Florida.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service provided the following synopsis of Idaho weather:

After being spoiled by very mild weather during most of January, winter returned to Idaho just as the month was about to end.

Idahoans were greeted by sunny skies again Sunday over much of the state as many other days during January were, but temperatures cooled off considerably.

At 3 p.m., skies were mostly sunny, but there were a few areas with partly sunny skies and some scattered layers of clouds. Temperatures were mostly in the mid- to upper 20s in the east, south-central and mountain valleys; and in the mid-30s to lower 40s in the west from Lewiston to Boise.

No precipitation was observed. Winds of 10 to 25 mph in the southeast, combined with temperatures in the upper teens to mid-20s, were causing wind chills from 3 below zero at Idaho Falls to 5 degrees at Pocatello.

Federal layoffs possible without funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government may lay off thousands of federal workers later this year unless Congress approves an employee buyout plan to prompt voluntary departures, officials say.

The Clinton administration has wanted to offer workers as much as $25,000 spurs as an incentive to take early retirement or otherwise voluntarily leave their jobs. President Clinton during his campaign promised to cut the federal work force by 100,000 by the end of fiscal 1995.

But Congress so far has refused to provide money for the buyout program. The legislation stalled last year after the Congressional Budget Office estimated it would cost as much as $19 million over the next five years, largely because of higher pension costs.

Barry Toiv, spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, said that "reductions in force," or RIFs, as the government calls layoffs, are a last resort. But he added, "they are a possibility if they're needed."

"Certainly if the buyout legislation is not adopted, the possibility of RIFs becomes far greater," he said in an interview Sunday.

Toiv declined to estimate how many federal workers might lose their jobs, or in what departments and agencies workers will face the greatest risk.

Wolf

Creek drainage near Pierce; and northern areas of the Targhee National Forest.

Whitelaw and Reese follow-up on reports made by the public. But by the time they arrive on the scene, the wolves—which can range over 300 square miles—are long gone.

"It's easy to get bummed out," Whitelaw concedes, "because everywhere else I've done wolf work, I've seen wolves. This is pretty disappointing."

She estimates there are between five and 15 wolves in Idaho, "and there's no reason why there shouldn't be any breeding pairs."

Like the wolves they are seeking, both Whitelaw and Reese are relative newcomers to Idaho.

Reese joined Idaho's federal Wolf Recovery Project in May, while Whitelaw signed on in November. Both have extensive wildlife watching experience in other states and have seen wolves in the wild; of the two, Whitelaw has more experience with wolves.

Though they haven't seen any wolves this winter, they've seen plenty of spoor and scat. Whitelaw recently found a set of paw prints in the Stanley Basin that measured five-and-one-quarter inches long by four-and-three-quarters inches wide. Reese got onto another set of tracks in the Clearwater National Forest and followed them for a mile-and-a-half to a freshly killed deer.

Although they are often called to search in remote areas, Reese and Whitelaw noted that wolves are sometimes found surprisingly near civilization. One wolf was even tracked as it trotted down the back streets of Kalispell, Montana, Reese says.

A lot of people think wolves are like grizzly bears and they have a psychological need to be away from humans," says David Langhorst, assistant director of the Wolf Education and Research Center in Ketchum.

"The truth is, they don't have a psychological need to stay away. The reason they do is because people shoot 'em."

Anyone who has seen a wolf is urged to call the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service office in Boise at 334-1311.

Shuttle

The deal expanded on a 1992 agreement that arranged for Krikalev's flight and for an American astronaut to fly on Mir for three months in 1995.

Altogether, five American astronauts are spent in a combined 24 days on Mir. And another Russian cosmonaut, Vladimir Titov, Krikalev's backup for Discovery's mission—already is training for a shuttle flight early next year.

NASA has trained Krikalev and Titov as full-fledged shuttle crewmen since their arrival in November 1992. Both are pros: Krikalev already has spent 463 days in space and Titov 368 days.

"What is most interesting part of this mission for me is flying on space shuttle itself," Krikalev said.

"I have long period of time flying on Mir station. I flew on Soyuz vehicle. But this is new vehicle, new hardware, new experiments."

Marcia Smith, a specialist in space policy for the Congressional Research Service at the Library of Congress, said the cosmonaut and astronaut exchanges make for good foreign policy.

But she said it is risky to build a space station with the Russians given the country's political and economic instability.

"Apollo-Soyuz was not supposed to be a one-time deal. It was supposed to be a new era of détente. It was supposed to lead to other things ... but it never did lead to anything at that time," Smith said. "The same thing could happen again."

Fed

When the government reported Friday that the overall economy, as measured by the gross domestic product, expanded at a six-year high of 5.9 percent from October through December, the administration was quick to point out that one-third of that growth came from special factors.

It noted that very strong auto production and a rebound from the Midwest flood had together added about 2 percentage points to GDP growth. Officials said they still believed that the economy in 1994 would grow at a steady, but much slower pace, of around 3 percent, very close to the annual growth target in for all of 1993.

And administration officials took pains to point out that the fourth quarter growth spurt was accompanied by inflation increasing at its second-slowest pace in 26 years.

With the global economy still in the doldrums of soft demand and with continued weakness in labor markets, the administration insists that consumer prices this year will be as moderate as last year, when they rose just 2.7 percent, the best performance since 1986.

And despite the absence of inflationary pressures now, many private economists believe the Fed is getting ready to make a move. But they think this year's rate increases are likely to be modest because of a belief that the economic recovery is finally on a sustainable footing.

"It's an old-fashioned principal," said David Jones, an economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York. "If you push interest rates low enough and keep them there long enough, you will ultimately see an acceleration in demand."

Analysts forecast in 1993 was supplied by interest-sensitive sectors of the economy, with spending on business capital goods, homes and big-ticket consumer products rising by 12 percent last year.

Many believe it will be growth in those sectors that will propel the economy forward in 1994 as well. That's why the administration is concerned that the Fed not raise interest rates so high that they choke off business and consumer borrowing in these areas.

On that score, private economists are offering reassuring forecasts. While many expect the Fed to begin raising interest rates as early as next month, they anticipate only a small increase.

Many are forecasting that the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other on overnight loans, will go up by only a tiny 0.25 percentage point. The funds rate has been at 3 percent since September 1992.

For the entire year, analysts believe there will be only two or three such small moves in the funds rate in 1994 as the Fed feels the need only to signal that it is vigilant.

"I think a slight amount of tightening would reassure the markets without hurting the economy," Sternberg said. "If the economy slows to a more sustainable rate in coming months, the Fed will not have to do more."

North puts blame on Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate hopeful Oliver North blamed former President Reagan on Sunday for the loss of North's bid for Congress in the Iran-Contra scandal.

North acknowledged during an appearance on CBS News' "Face the Nation" that he had lied to members of the House Intelligence Committee who were inquiring in 1986 about reports North was involved with assisting the Nicaraguan Contras.

North denied to the lawmakers that he was assisting the rebels. In fact, at the time the White House staffer was running a clandestine operation to keep the Contras supplied with weapons during a congressional ban on U.S. military assistance. "I was asked questions that I had been told from the president of the United States could never be revealed, OK?" the former National Security Council aide in the Reagan White House said in explaining why he lied.

"Who made you do it?" host Bob Schieffer asked. "Well, the president of the United States," North replied. He noted that Reagan had secretly requested money for the Contras from the government of Saudi Arabia — and that the president told his top advisers such assistance should never be revealed.

North is seeking the Republican nomination for the Senate seat from Virginia held by Democrat Charles Robb.

In the interview, North played down his misstatements to the House members — which came during a meeting in the White House Situation Room on Aug. 6, 1986.

North called it "an informal, off-the-record" discussion and said "we ought not to have those kinds of informal meetings."

"If the Congress wants to get the straight answers, what they ought to do is bring people up there, have them raise their right hands just like I did and expect that they will tell the truth," North added.

Scientist: Chernobyl worse than reported

BOSTON (AP) — A 1986 explosion at the Chernobyl nuclear reactor led to a complete core meltdown and far worse contamination than previously reported, says a Massachusetts Institute of Technology researcher who studied the reactor's ruins.

The amount of radioactivity released during the world's worst nuclear disaster was up to four to five times greater than previously published estimates, Alexander Sich, a nuclear engineer, said in a 500-page doctoral dissertation presented earlier this month.

Soviet authorities claimed that the initial explosion at the 1,000-megawatt Chernobyl 4 reactor led only to a partial meltdown. They said helicopters were able to douse the blazing core by smothering it with 5,000 tons of sand, lead, boron and clay.

But Sich, who spent 18 months studying the ruined reactor, said the helicopters completely missed their target, according to the Boston Sunday Globe.

He said the melted core burned through protective layers and into the lowest levels of the plant basement. If it had penetrated the concrete floor, it could have come into contact with groundwater and set off an enormous steam explosion.

Instead of being doused by the dumped material, the nuclear reaction simply burned itself out after 10 days, Sich concluded.

"It's a new theory that I haven't heard of, but I can't say it's crazy," said Morris Rosen, deputy director of the International Atomic Energy Agency's division on nuclear safety, and the man responsible for the agency's analysis of the Chernobyl accident.

Farm

secretary for small communities and rural development, said the official who signed it Aug. 27 was pressured. But attorney James Myatt denies pressuring Carlton Lewis, acting branch chief for the FmHA's Equal Opportunity Division.

The document in dispute, labeled a "settlement memorandum," resulted from a seven-hour meeting in San Antonio between Williams' attorneys and USDA officials from Washington.

The document instructs the FmHA to pay Williams $1.08 million for farm liabilities and damages and $270,743.50 in attorneys' fees.

"Mr. Lewis started the meeting out saying, 'We are not here to say who was wrong, who was right, because we know already that you people have been done wrong,'" Mrs. Williams said.

But a clause in the document required its submission to FmHA acting administrator Sharron Longino. One month later, Ms. Longino rejected the terms.

"There is no authority that would permit me to pay for such things as Mr. and Mrs. Williams' other business debts, lost income, emotional suffering or attorneys' fees," she wrote to Myatt.

Instead, she offered to take the farm to satisfy the operating loan debt, and to help work out agreements with other creditors.

"They've disavowed the agreement and are attempting to treat it as a proposal, which is preposterous," said Myatt, who accuses agriculture officials of using skewed legal reasoning to stall the settlement.

Nash, the undersecretary, said USDA lawyers are working with the Department of Justice and Williams' representatives to find an acceptable solution.

He defended his department's handling of discrimination complaints since Mike Espy, who is black, became agriculture secretary last year.

The USDA didn't identify any discrimination cases in 1991, and just six in 1992, Nash said. But in 1993, the USDA found 26 instances of discrimination and is remedying them as quickly as possible, he said.

"It would be naive for me to say that because Mike Espy is secretary of agriculture that no further discrimination will occur at USDA," Nash said. "But it is also very realistic for me to say that Mike Espy and his staff will root out and investigate every allegation."

Nash confirmed that an investigation revealed discrimination against Williams, 49, but declined to describe what the Office of Advocacy and Enterprise found.

The complaint that Williams filed in November 1992 was his second against the FmHA. The first was filed in August 1991 and withdrawn six months later — under coercion, Williams said, and the promise of a $24,900 operating loan, which he received.

Myatt, his attorney, titled his summation of the case, "The Williams Tragedy: Down in the Land of Cotton, Look Away! Look Away!"

The summation said the FmHA arranged for Williams to buy 349 acres of rocky and cactus-covered land in Roscoe, about 110 miles southeast of Lubbock, and that Williams trusted he could yield good crops with the right equipment, sprays and guidance.

But the FmHA contributed to his debt by preparing several yearly farm and home plans based on unrealistic income projections for that land, it said.

The summation demanded $1.23 million for farm liabilities, lost income and damages including reputation injury, humiliation and severe anxiety.

No matter what happens, Williams said, the teasing in the local coffee shop, vandalism, debts and FmHA discrimination ruined his life.

"I was a good old boy," he said, "until I got a farm of my own."

Women benefit by resisting attackers

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 60 percent of women who resisted an attacker verbally or physically think they improved their situation, but experts warn that it's hard to tell when fighting back will help.

Some 23 percent of women who resisted a rape, robbery or assault by arguing, reasoning or fighting back believed that self-protective behavior did not help their situation, and 16 percent weren't sure, according to a Justice Department study released Sunday.

The report comes as the case of Lorena Bobbitt, the Virginia woman who cut off her husband's penis, has expanded public debate over women who fight back. And Congress is working on a crime bill approved by the Senate with new rules of evidence for rape cases, funding for battered women's shelters and training for judges and police about family violence and rape.

The data on women who have resisted comes from 400,000 individual interviews during 1987-1991 with a nationally representative sample of women in the Bureau of Justice Statistics' National Crime Victimization Survey. The bureau estimated 2.5 million women a year were victims of violent crime.

But Dean Kilpatrick, director of the Crime Victims Research and Treatment Center at the Medical University of South Carolina, pointed out that a small but important minority — the 5,000 or so women murdered in each of those five years — were not available to be asked whether they resisted their attackers.

"What if you knew more than 60 percent found resisting left them better off, 20 percent or so were worse off, but some were not resisting? What would you do?" the clinical psychology professor asked.

"It would be great if there was an easy answer to the question of when to resist. But it's difficult because it depends on the situation, and each woman faces a unique situation with unique circumstances."

If someone's intent is clearly to kill, a woman might as well resist, Kilpatrick said.

"But some sadomasochists are inflamed to greater violence by resistance," he added. "Broad

Schooling for girls lags

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 85 million more boys than girls receive elementary and secondary education, according to a report that says the gender gap in education leads to more babies, more disease and greater hardship.

The study, released Sunday by Population Action International, documents for the first time the gap in 112 countries and estimates the cost of equalizing education.

"Educating girls is one of the best investments any country can make," said Joseph Spalding, president of PAI, which works for worldwide access to family planning and population stabilization.

Based on 1991 data, it says $6.5 billion annually could educate 78 million more girls to close the gap in countries where it is most serious.

The annual cost is estimated to triple over the next dozen years, but the report says it would pay back in lower fertility rates, fewer infant deaths, better hygiene, reduced poverty and higher literacy.

"The educational status of women has a great deal to do with how many children they have and therefore population stability," said Shanti Conly, a population researcher who edited the study.

Prominent economists and social scientists have come to agree in recent years that educating women helps improve conditions in developing countries, especially for rural people.

generalizations are not useful."

Kilpatrick and Diane Alexander, assistant director of the National Victims Center in Arlington, Va., agreed that the results of the Justice study support a trend in recent years away from uniformly advising women not to resist attacks.

That's why there's been a boom in self-defense courses," Ms. Alexander said.

The best of these courses do not advise fixed responses, like "five things to do to stop rape," she said. "You have to use basic instincts. It depends on the person, on the situation and on the rapist's motivation."

Sometimes that motivation is unexpected, Ms. Alexander said. She recounted the case of a rapist who had preyed on a hospital nursing staff but came to the defense of a nurse being attacked by a robber. "He saw that attack as harming the woman but didn't recognize that his own actions were harmful."

The Justice study found that four out of five women took some protective action when their attacker was an intimate or other relative; just under three out of four did so when an acquaintance or stranger attacked.

Women victimized by an intimate or other family member were about twice as likely to put up a physical defense compared to those assaulted by a stranger. They were most likely to argue or reason with attackers who were strangers.

Women attacked by an intimate — boy- or girlfriend, spouse or ex-spouse — were injured 59 percent of the time, but less than half that, 27 percent of the time, when attacked by a stranger.

The report said the incidence of injury was reversed in the case of rape: Strangers caused injury far more often, 60 percent of the time, than those known to the victim, 43 percent of the time. But Kilpatrick said the Justice survey grossly undercounted family and acquaintance rape. Justice estimated an annual total of 133,000 rapes; Kilpatrick, in a study adopted by the Senate Judiciary Committee last year, put the annual figure at 683,000.

Kilpatrick served as a consultant on a revision of Justice's rape questions that was completed after 1991, but data from the new questionnaire will not be available until fall 1994.

The Justice study analyzed data from attacks by one person, which account for more than three-quarters of all attacks on women. The bureau said there is a 95 percent probability that its results reflect significant differences and not random chance.

U.S. issues visa to IRA group's president

Doctors try new tactic to help arteries

Doctors try new tactic to help arteries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States granted a limited visa Sunday to Gerry Adams, president of Sinn Féin, the Northern Irish political party that supports the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The White House said in announcing the step, which permits Adams to attend a New York conference, that President Clinton "supports this difficult decision and believes it will help advance the cause of peace in Northern Ireland."

Clinton and Secretary of State Warren Christopher discussed the issue several times before the decision was made, State Department spokesman David Johnson said.

The White House said Attorney General Janet Reno, at the recommendation of Christopher, issued a "waiver to Gerry Adams' ineligibility" to allow Adams to attend a conference Tuesday on Northern Ireland.

Adams has been turned down in eight previous requests for visas, and the decision to allow him into the country reflects recent progress in negotiations to end decades of civil strife in Northern Ireland.

"Over the last decade the United States has refused Mr. Adams a visa because of his involvement in terrorist activity," the White House statement said.

It said the change in that policy grows out of the Dec. 15 joint declaration by British Prime Minister John Major and Irish Premier Albert Reynolds laying the groundwork for peace negotiations with Adams in Northern Ireland. "Today's decision represents the administration's effort to do our part to support this important peace process," it said.

Adams, who is to address the New York conference sponsored by the private National Committee on American Foreign Policy, will be allowed to stay in the United States only 48 hours, and must stay within 25 miles of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, where the meeting is being held, said sources involved in the visa decision.

He also is prohibited from engaging in any direct or indirect fundraising.

In its initial response to Adams' visa request, the administration said Adams must first renounce violence by the IRA and join the Northern Ireland peace initiative. Sinn Féin is the legal political ally of the outlawed paramilitary group.

The Dec. 15 joint declaration invited Sinn Féin to take part in talks to end the violence between Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland, but only if the IRA first abandons its 23-year campaign against British rule.

Adams has not responded directly to the offer, asking first for "clarification" from the British.

In a meeting with U.S. officials in Belfast last week, Adams said he hoped "to see an end to all violence and an end to this conflict." He said "the sole purpose in coming to the United States is to advance the cause of peace."

Doctors try new tactic to help arteries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Conor Lundergan peered through a microscope at the tissue that once clogged a patient's arteries, looking for the renegade cells that re-hospitalized the man just six months after heart surgery.

Doctors once thought arteries were simply inert tunnels, but they now know their walls harbor cells that actually cause heart disease — and make it come back after surgery.

Armed with this finding, a new breed of scientists called vascular biologists are searching for ways to stop the killer cells without surgery.

"Nothing else has worked," said Lundergan, a professor at George Washington University who has studied the issue out of living patients in an effort to discover how it originates. "The answer is somewhere in the blood vessel wall."

"We're seeing dramatic results," added Dr. Wayne Alexander, cardiologist director for Emory University Hospital. "The research is showing we can heal the blood vessel and reverse the disease."

Heart disease kills about 500,000 Americans a year. Surgery — moving clean arteries to bypass clogged ones or opening blocked arteries with balloons in a procedure called angioplasty — isn't the panacea doctors had hoped. Within six months, 40 percent of angioplasty recipients have clogged arteries again.

So cardiologists have turned to the lining of the blood vessel, called the endothelium — virtually ignored until the late 1980s but now believed to be the birthplace of heart disease. "We thought it was kind of carpeting in a tunnel," Alexander said. "We now know it is one of the most responsive, regulated, finely tuned tissues in the body."

When the lining functions properly, it makes the blood vessel dilate or constrict — encouraging blood flow smoothly or clot — and promotes or slows growth of muscle cells beneath its surface. But when fat, diabetes, smoking or other stresses upset the lining's delicate balance, the way it reacts can cause heart disease.

For example, a stressed artery lining stops producing nitric oxide, a cell relaxant that normally prevents arteries from having spasms. Such spasms can cause heart attacks or dangerous blood clots.

The lining also senses cholesterol as soon as it enters the bloodstream. Cholesterol slows the lining's ability to regulate cell growth, and Emory researchers discovered that cells out of control result in harmful plaque.

Lowering cholesterol perks up the blood vessel's lining so much that heart disease symptoms subside even if the plaque isn't removed, they said.

Removing the plaque is still the traditional treatment. But in some of those patients, "the blockage comes back like a cancer," Lundergan said.

He thinks he has discovered why. In research to be reported in March at the American College of Cardiology conference, Lundergan studied 100 patients' arteries and found that their white blood cells — which are supposed to destroy infections — attack the site of the removed plaque as if it were a wound.

These cells produce large amounts of inflammatory proteins that build up tissue to block the artery as surely as cholesterol does.

"Why it only occurs in half the patients is a mystery," Lundergan said. "If we find out, we may also find the cure" to recurrences of artery blockage and prevent other people from getting the disease at all.

He thinks estrogen plays a role in the process, and researchers at neighboring Georgetown University are preparing to test whether a six-month treatment with the hormone can keep blockages from returning.

For people with advanced heart disease, where plaque clogs through the delicate artery linings, doctors may soon use catheters to transplant new cells straight to the bare artery wall, said George Washington professor Dr. William Weglicki.

Leaders tackle prisons, immigration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Governors demanded Sunday that the federal government pay the medical, education and prison costs of illegal immigrants and warned President Clinton not to require jobs for welfare recipients before states can cut off benefits.

Impatient with Washington's health care calendar, leaders of the National Governors Association also sought more leeway to launch their own reforms, seeking more flexibility to experiment with Medicaid and new authority to tax and regulate health benefits offered by large employers.

And they also criticized a centerpiece Republican prison-building provision in pending crime legislation, saying it improperly modeled in state affairs.

On a busy, first full day of their annual meeting, the governors were assured by the Clinton administration that its welfare reform initiative would "pay for itself" and would complement, not interfere with, state welfare experiments.

Doctor begins drive to make suicide legal

LIVONIA, Mich. (AP) — Standing like a preacher on a candlelit, flowery pulpit, Dr. Jack Kevorkian began a petition drive to legalize assisted suicide by urging about 700 Sunday churchgoers to join his crusade.

Kevorkian needs more than 250,000 signatures to place a constitutional amendment on the November ballot. In a speech between services at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Kevorkian spoke of the "right not to suffer" and damned the "tyrants" who passed Michigan's law banning assisted suicide.

The enthusiastic audience gave several standing ovations as Kevorkian, a 65-year-old retired pathologist, spoke in front of a tall wooden crucifix and an open Bible.

Two people holding Bibles over their heads briefly interrupted the program as one yelled, "This church has been cursed today!"

But others said Kevorkian's presence showed the church's open-mindedness. Pastor Thomas Eggleboen said the belief of many Christians that suicide is a mortal sin is a fallacy borne of politics instead of theology.

Boats lie on the banks of the Rocky River near Cleveland after flooding and ice flows caused damage to homes and marinas Saturday.

Flooding swamps homes, towns on Ohio River

POINT PLEASANT, W.Va. (AP) — Ken Bailey needed a boat to get to his house. LeEita Hart needed two, walking from one to the other on a rare strip of dry land in between.

And emergency workers needed a row boat to deliver heart medicine to one person who couldn't leave home.

Those homes were among about 30 in a development inundated by more than 4 feet of water from the Kanawha River, which flows into the Ohio river near Point Pleasant. Some homes on high ground avoided water damage, and most of the residents had left before the water moved in.

No injuries were reported. Point Pleasant is about 50 miles down the Ohio River from Parkersburg, where about 200 homes were flooded on Saturday. The Ohio crested Sunday near Point Pleasant at 6 feet above flood stage.

The flooding was caused by rainfall and melting snow. Authorities said the flooding was less severe than previous days because freezing temperatures kept snow from melting.

At least one family was evacuated in Point Pleasant, but most had left the neighborhood before the flooding. Those who tried to return had to do so by boat.

Authorities fight fraud in quake area

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hundreds of investigators have been sent to Los Angeles to keep people from defrauding agencies that are helping earthquake victims, officials said Sunday.

The only serious problems so far have been in an emergency food stamp program. Five people were arrested Saturday for investigation of trying to buy food stamps from recipients at a discount.

Investigators have been posted at all 18 relief centers to watch for alleged racial discrimination in emergency housing, said Joe Shuldiner of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD investigators also will ensure that landlords do not raise rents as they did in Florida after Hurricane Andrew.

"We have not seen that done in L.A. to date, but I want to assure you that we are watching carefully," Shuldiner said.

About 800 federal and state inspectors were in the field, and a new toll-free number for reporting fraud was established.

Food stamp distribution was suspended for one day Sunday while officials worked to implement a new three-day waiting system.

The five people arrested for food stamp fraud, whose names were not released, were expected to be arraigned Monday in federal court.

Authorities had previously said 10 people were arrested. The Agriculture Department will seek a felony charge of possessing for unlawful sale more than $100 in food stamps, said Dave Dickson, a USDA inspector general. The charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and $250,000 in fines.

Meanwhile, as the rest of the nation settled in to watch the Super Bowl, earthquake victims were simply trying to settle down.

The last water-boiling orders had been lifted and city water service restored, so many restaurants served tap water for the first time since the Jan. 17 quake that killed 61 people. "We're just ecstatic to be able to operate normally today," said Julie Scholl, manager of Bakers Square Restaurant & Pie Shop in Granada Hills.

The population in 32 refugee shelters — buildings and encampments — was down to 4,800 from a peak of about 14,000.

In Northridge, the Red Cross opened a "super center" for the first full day of business, issuing vouchers for everything from food to rent.

The center, housed in a giant white tent in the parking lot of the heavily damaged Northridge Fashion Center, has 70 caseworkers and expects to have 120 volunteers by midweek.

VA seeks Gulf War veterans

BOSTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration is mustering Persian Gulf War veterans together in hopes of tracking illnesses and ailments plaguing them.

On Saturday, 88 men and women who served in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait answered the call at the local VA hospital, some to get treatment, others to register for future monitoring.

"They're trying. They don't want another Agent Orange," said Larry Hennessy, diagnosed with vocal-cord cancer two years after he returned from duty.

After radiation treatments, the cancer went into remission. Hennessy is convinced his service overseas caused it. "I think it was related to the oil fires and the smoke from all the vehicles and the space heaters we had in the tents," said Hennessy, 42, of Randolph.

He spent seven months working as a supply sergeant for an engineering unit that built roads and paved air strips. He praised the VA for seeking out veterans and looking at ailments patterns.

Most of the veterans who came Saturday were combat veterans. Few had been treated since returning home.

Effect of Clinton's economic policies can't yet be measured

Despite the ups and downs, President Clinton finished his first year in office with rising popularity ratings (even though they still hover only around the 50 percent mark). The improvement in his personal popularity, as is almost always the case with presidents, is tied to the economy.

Not surprisingly, in his long State of the Union address, Clinton boasted about the economy: "the lowest core inflation rate since 1974; and the lowest interest rates in 20 years ... Business investment in equipment is growing ... Auto sales are way up. Home sales are at a record high ... 1.6 million private sector jobs created in 1993 ..."

But it is usually the case that any economic movement — up or down — in the first year of a new administration can be traced to policies and developments in prior years. Had the economy nosedived in 1993, the president last week would no doubt have blamed it on Reaganomics.

In fact, the economy was already rebounding from recession in 1991 and 1992. And in 1992 and 1993 the Federal Reserve Board — not Bill Clinton — sharply reduced interest rates.

The real measure of Clinton's economic policies cannot be taken until well into 1994. His record $250 billion tax increase, though it included many levies applied in 1993, is just now taking full effect. And later this year the country will see how much of Clinton's health-care and welfare "reforms" will be imposed. Last Tuesday evening, he promised — or threatened — that "we must do both at the same time." On welfare, Clinton spent his first year busily increasing the waste of taxpayers' money on the same, failed, Great Society programs that even he says he wants to change. And though Clinton has praised sociologist Charles Murray's comments on the debilitating effects of welfare, Murray's solution — end welfare, period — has been categorically rejected.

Most likely, Clinton will propose more of the same, failed programs, gussied up with new acronyms and descriptions. The health-care threat looms largest. "Until we solve the health care problem we will not solve the welfare problem," the president announced.

Nonsense. Only about 5.5 million Americans are without health-care insurance at any one time, as detailed by Irwin Stotler in the current issue of Commentary magazine, not the 58 million Clinton claimed.

To solve the problem of the 5.5 million without coverage, Americans are supposed to sit by and watch Clinton treat everyone as a welfare case, socialize one-seventh of the economy, impose health-care rationing, and jack up taxes as much as $150 billion more a year to pay for it?

As the Clinton taxes dig in and the costs of his health-care scheme become better known, Tuesday's may well be remembered as the last State of the Union address Clinton delivered with a smile.

China may be ready to better human rights to preserve trade

The Clinton administration is talking tough to make China understand that it will lose its "most favored nation" trading status this year unless Beijing improves its behavior. If this talk truly stems from strong convictions and clear objectives, then China likely will heed it.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher told his Chinese counterpart in Paris this week that the administration isn't satisfied with China's overall progress on human rights. Last week Secretary of Commerce Lloyd Bentsen delivered the same message in Beijing.

Chinese authorities remain adamant — at least formally — in their posture that human rights shouldn't be linked to trade. Yet U.S. pressures have led Beijing to release prominent political prisoners from the Tiananmen Square pro-democracy movement and from Tibet, to agree to talks with the International Red Cross on visits to prisoners, and to show willingness to let U.S. inspectors into some prison labor camps.

Though inadequate, these concessions suggest that, notwithstanding their inflammatory rhetoric, the Chinese may be ready to countenance policy changes in order to preserve their U.S. trade. It plainly benefits them the most: China's annual trade surplus with the United States exceeds $20 billion.

To persuade China to make such changes, the administration needs to hold fast to its demands on Beijing. It must also remind the Chinese that U.S. concerns don't end with human rights. They also include China's proclivity to nuclear and weapons proliferation and its unfair trading practices.

It would be unrealistic to expect China to turn 180 degrees on these fundamental matters before June. That's when the administration will consider whether to renew China's Most Favored Nation status. Yet the administration will likely reap more concessions from Beijing before that deadline if it continues to press its objectives forcefully.

End gender bias in schools

Diane Ravitch seems to want it both ways in her Nov. 24, column, "Girls not victims of discrimination in schools." On the one hand, she claims there is no gender bias in our schools and that girls and boys are given the same academic opportunities. On the other hand, she appears in public forums advocating single-sex schooling for girls. Given the misleading statistics Ms. Ravitch used to frame her argument, it is understandable she would be so confused.

For years, independent researchers have documented gender inequities in our nation's schools. Last year, the release of the American Association of University Women Report, "How Schools Shortchange Girls," revealed pervasive gender bias in textbooks, testing and from teachers. According to those studies — more than 1,300 of them — girls get less teacher attention, less praise and fewer constructive comments on their work than boys.

Contrary to what Ravitch contends, girls do not get higher scores than boys in reading. Not only do boys outscore girls on the math Scholastic Achievement Test, they outscore girls on the verbal SAT as well. And although women are receiving more doctoral and professional degrees than they used to, the lion's share of those degrees are going to men.

As an assistant principal and former teacher, I can assure that we will pay dearly in lost potential if we continue to ignore girls in education reform. But there is hope. Contrary to what Ravitch argues, the Gender Equity in Education legislation pending in Congress will be a vital first step in ensuring an education free from gender bias.

The legislation encourages teacher training to address gender bias, recruitment of female math and science teachers to provide role models for girls, and training and technical assistance to combat the increasing incidences of sexual harassment in our schools.

Waiting for gender bias in schools to go away on its own will deny our daughters the chance to achieve their full potential. We must act now and pass the Gender Equity in Education legislation or more generations of school girls will continue to be denied an education that gives them the opportunities, challenges and knowledge they will need to compete and succeed in the workplace of the future.

Are seniors getting ripped off?

I'm writing as a senior citizen of Eden. I came to this little town three years ago, and there have been so many questions concerning this town that go unanswered. I'm asking for your help in clearing up what is true and what is false.

An old timer that lived here in Eden told me that they didn't vote to make Eden an incorporated city. Then I've been told that Eden was a charter city, but in your newspaper a while back, there was another town claiming to be the last charter city in Idaho. So what is Eden?

There never has been any statement concerning how much the town of Eden takes in through taxes and other income. How much are the people who are supposed to run the town of Eden getting from the town? We don't even know who is really running this town. We don't have a police department, sanitation department, building code department or even a health department. What is supposed to be city hall is closed.

Now we have a bond issue to improve the sewage treatment which is a blackmail letter. I have read nothing in your paper that the town of Eden is in violation with its sewage treatment plant with the state of Idaho. I think it is up to the state of Idaho and Jerome County to help in costs to repair the sewage treatment plant along with the federal government, not the people of Eden.

Even if we do vote this bond issue in, who is going to oversee the project and make sure the money is spent on the sewage treatment plant and not used for some other special project that the council may want to do?

My concern is that there are many people living here who are on fixed incomes. Any increases will just put hardship on them. We need someone's help to make sure that the people that run Eden, whoever they may be, do not rip the senior citizens off.

'Shadowlands' answers question

A refreshing breeze blows through Magic Valley. It stirs in the Mall Cinema from the movie "Shadowlands," the story of a man wrestling with pain and grief who asks the question, "Why?" A question all of us ask sometime in our life.

In an era when TV and movie hucksters, like sideshow pitchmen, hustle an ersatz, superficial, losing battle with the question, "Shadowlands," like a loving mother comforts a troubled child, faces the question and offers an honest, deep, winning battle with the question.

Thanks to the management of the Mall Cinema for bringing the Magic Valley a movie of excellent acting, message and dialogue in family-acceptable scenes.

It's a movie I can watch comfortably with my best girl.

What was employer thinking?

Recently, Mr. Dan Willie, owner of the Travelers Oasis Truck Stop, was fined more than $3,000 by the state of Idaho for employing area youths, ages 13 to 15. I cannot even imagine the gall of this man — taking kids and giving them jobs, teaching them responsibility, giving them a sense of self-worth, instilling in them the value of the dollar and a solid work ethic at a young age. If you ask me, our all-knowing state should have fined him a million dollars!

If these kids are allowed to work, where will they find time for their leisure activities? Why, just last summer, we had a number of youth involved in enjoyable drive-by shootings. Recently we've had a 12-year-old suspect arrested for possibly shooting his father in the head and then spending some quality time with his friends stealing cars and joy-riding to Nevada.

And let's not forget the juveniles in New Plymouth accused of shooting and killing the Drug Awareness Resistance Education officer as he approached them while they were minding their own business in a stolen car.

Just when this boring and pathetic state is starting to emulate a New York or a California, we get some clown like Mr. Willie trying to spoil everything.

If some sick-minded people start writing their congressmen trying to get the labor laws updated or possibly stricter punishment for youths convicted of violent crimes, please join with me in opposing such actions and keeping our youth corrupted.

Put public land to better use

It is no secret Mr. Jon Marvel is anti-live-stock-grazing on public lands; his past comments such as "we want to do something about a hundred years of overgrazing" and a late statement that "public land permits are a heavily subsidized welfare system" sound like a snark environmentalist rant.

It shows he knows very little about the expense and responsibilities of permits on public lands. If livestock grazing on public lands is such a good deal, why is there so much non-use (land not being stocked), and why are there so many permits for sale?

Now Mr. Marvel wants to lease a small tract of state land — not to graze but just to look at it to try and make a hardship for all the permittees on hundreds of thousands of acres of public land. I feel it is better to reasonably graze the land and add to the economy than to look at it. I don't believe the grass was put there just to look at. Mr. Marvel should leave the amount of grazing to the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service and plant and grass experts. Most grazing allotments are getting better in spite of the recent drought years since the BLM, Forest Service officials and ranchers are at a better understanding of what is best.

Mr. Marvel wants to down-play the livestock industry's importance. The truth is it is the No. 1 economy of the state. Seventy-nine percent of the state is public land and a lot of ranchers with private land have parcels of public land at it. Eighty-eight percent of the beef cattle and practically all of the sheep in Idaho are grazed entirely or partially on public lands.

I would like to thank The Times-News for pointing out a few true facts about the livestock people and their importance to the economy and to hundreds of ranchers' livelihood in the Jan. 7 editorial.

Headline misinforms readers

Your headline, "Socialism! ODDM goes say in Boise," on Jan. 22 was inflammatory and misleading. Anyone who was present at the Friday hearing would seriously question your summary of the evening. I was there. The content did not consist of rantings and ravings by uninformed fundamentalists, which your "report" implied. In fact, many committee members commented afterward on how professional and informative the presentations had been.

Your representation of O'Leary teacher Phil Gernish was blatantly slanted. Don't you think your readers can recognize the old technique of twisting an individual when you don't like his message?

The overt bias in this report made it one of the worst pieces of journalism I've seen in a long time.

(By the way, the term "socialism" was used only once by one of the six people testifying. To be exact, it was "educational socialism." Hardly grounds for a headline like yours.)

All creatures should use land

The first of the Ten Commandments states, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Well, fellow Christians, prepare to practice idolatry. The state has unofficially declared a religion — it's called environmentalism. The religion where snails, owls and other creatures are more important than God's children, and nothing is forced on the non-believer in the form of taxes.

* Please don't get me wrong; we are to be accountable to our creator for our stewardship of his earth; we are not to rape or abuse it. However, we can and should use it in support of his children for food, fiber, shelter and, maybe most importantly, gainful employment.

I get great pleasure farming the land and providing for my family by providing food for hundreds of others. I know that I plan on leaving my farm environmentally better than I found it. We can use this land and improve it. I honestly think that God would be disappointed in us if we didn't use our facilities to dam the river and turn the desert to bloom, light and heat our homes, and bath our babies in warm water, to enjoy this clean reliable, affordable, safe power.

As we make environmental policy, I suggest that we consider the needs of his children as well as his creatures!

Bomb wounds 18 in Indian cinema

NEW DELHI, India — A bomb placed beneath a seat in a movie theater in downtown New Delhi exploded on Sunday, wounding at least 18 people, police said.

The bomb went off at the Odeon theatre in the capital's main shopping center, Connaught Place, shortly before the evening screening was to begin.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but suspicion fell on militant Sikhs who have struck several times in New Delhi. In the most recent attack, eight people were killed in September in the explosion of a car bomb meant for a top politician of the ruling Congress party.

A huge crowd that was waiting to see a popular Hindi-language movie and some people who were still coming out of the previous show rushed to the exit and some were hurt in the stampede.

Doctors described the condition of two of the injured as serious.

U.N. will use cameras, sensors in Iraq

MANAMA, Bahrain — The United Nations will set up television cameras and monitoring sensors and inspect factories to ensure Baghdad doesn't acquire or build long-range missiles, a Russian official said Sunday.

The long-term monitoring, which Iraq agreed to in November after months of stalling, is designed to keep Iraq from developing missiles with a range of more than 95 miles — such as those fired at Saudi Arabia and Israel during the Persian Gulf War.

The terms of the 1991 cease-fire prohibit Iraq from developing or stockpiling Scud-type long-range missiles, as well as nuclear, chemical and biological weapons.

The United Nations installed cameras at two missile test sites in Iraq last summer.

Chemical weapons experts will head to Baghdad on Tuesday to develop a monitoring plan to guarantee Iraq does not try to revive its chemical and biological weapons programs. Nuclear inspectors have been doing the same with prohibited nuclear weapons.

Avalanche in French Alps kills 6

ALBERTVILLE, France — Six skiers, including five British doctors and their guide, were killed when their group was swept away by an avalanche in the French Alps, rescue officials said Sunday.

Only one member of the group, also a British doctor, survived the avalanche after spending Saturday night in subfreezing temperatures. Charles Ackner was in serious condition in a hospital in Bourg-Saint-Maurice, officials said.

The snowslide occurred Saturday, but was not reported to authorities until Sunday when the group was discovered missing. The bodies were recovered Sunday.

The doctors were attending a medical conference in Val d'Isere, a ski resort popular with British vacationers which was the site of most of the men's Alpine skiing events during the 1992 Winter Olympics.

Serbs welcome Russian extremist

SUBOTICA, Yugoslavia — Lauded as Serbia's best friend, Russian extreme nationalist Vladimir Zhirinovskiy was welcomed in Yugoslavia on Sunday with a traditional offering of bread and salt. Zhirinovskiy arrived from Slovenia, a former Yugoslav republic, where officials were angered by reports that his entourage had damaged property and caused disturbances during a drinking bout.

The Slovenian government requested that he leave, but he refused to go before his planned departure on Sunday. Zhirinovskiy recently was ordered out of Bulgaria because of his extremist outbursts; and Germany subsequently denied him a visa.

But the unofficial welcome at this town on the Hungarian border was warm. Serbs and Russians, both Slavs and Orthodox Christians, historically are close.

While Serb-dominated Yugoslavia is a parish state for its support of Serbs fighting in Croatia and Bosnia, there is a larger degree of sympathy for it in Russia, especially among nationalists.

Mandela campaigns to avert bloodshed

KHUMA, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress offered Sunday to let pro-apartheid whites vote for their own homeland — but said a black government would retain power to veto the results.

ANC President Nelson Mandela appealed to militant whites to accept the offer and avert bloodshed. But the right-wing Afrikaner Volksfront angrily rejected the proposal and vowed to establish its own homeland by force if necessary to avoid living under black rule.

That militant stance could be fatal, Mandela told an adoring crowd of several thousand squeezed into a stadium in the black township of Khuma on Sunday.

"We know how to fight," he said, referring to the ANC's 30-year guerrilla war, suspended in August 1990 after the white government introduced reforms to end apartheid.

Mandela

unacceptable to white extremists who have threatened war.

"I want to appeal to the right wing not to do anything that would drag our country into a conflict that would kill many innocent people, black and white," Mandela said.

Under the ANC proposal, whites could vote April 27 on whether to establish a whites-only homeland. The ballot would be separate from national elections April 27-29 for a new, multiracial government. The ANC is expected to win those elections.

Whatever the outcome of the homeland vote, the newly elected government would have final say on the issue, a condition unacceptable to white extremists who have threatened war.

The ANC, the government and their opponents, including the Afrikaner Volksfront and the black, Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party, were to meet again today in an attempt to end the differences that have raised fears of bloody conflict during the election campaign.

Inkatha and right-wing white groups fear domination by the ANC, which has overwhelming support among South Africa's black majority. They have demanded constitutional guarantees of ethnic autonomy for their followers before they agree to take part in the election. The ANC has refused, saying that would mean a return to apartheid-style homelands.

Inkatha, the ANC's main rival for black support, stopped short Sunday of calling an election boycott but said the party would not participate unless its demands for Zulu autonomy were met.

PLO, Israel close in on accord

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — Israeli and PLO negotiators said Sunday they were moving closer to an agreement clearing the way for an Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and Jericho.

But Israeli officials dampened hopes expressed earlier that an accord could be completed during the day.

"We are still working," said Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres before continuing talks Sunday afternoon with Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"Be patient, be patient," Arafat told reporters.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa, who has been trying to help move the talks forward, joined Peres and Arafat during their afternoon session, said Yossi Sarid, Israel's environment minister.

Sarid said the two sides were closer than they were on Saturday but that there had been "ups and downs" on Sunday.

"Asked whether the agreement could be completed Sunday, Sarid said, 'Some things will be finished and some things will remain to be solved.'"

A senior member of the PLO said early Sunday that negotiators had reached final terms for an Israeli withdrawal, but that the Israeli government had yet to accept the compromise.

3 break-ins reported at Centennial Square

TWIN FALLS — Burglars hit three businesses in Centennial Square this week, wrecking doors and getting away with a little loot.

Sweet Peas Children Boutique, Christian Book Store and Health Food Place each reported break-ins Tuesday night or Wednesday morning.

Sweet Peas reported a metal door with a dead-bolt lock was damaged but nothing missing, according to a Twin Falls police report.

Christian Book Store reported an AM/FM radio-cassette player was stolen, along with $150 in cash and $23 in stamps. The store owner also reported $300 in damage to a door, door frame and locks.

Health Food Place reported $300 damage to a door.

The break-ins took place between 6:30 Tuesday evening and 8:30 Wednesday morning, according to the police reports.

Jerome City Council slated to discuss several issues

JEROME — The Jerome City Council Tuesday will discuss issues ranging from liquor licensing to boom boxes.

Council members will discuss proposed ordinances dealing with vacating a portion of Cedar Street, parking trailers and motor homes on public streets, operating sound production devices producing sound audible from a distance of 50 feet, and discharging an air gun, BB gun, pellet gun or slingshot within city limits. Amending the ordinance governing retail sale of liquor, wine and beer by the drink will be discussed.

A work session will begin at 6:30 p.m. and the regular business meeting will convene at 7 p.m. in the City Hall. The public is invited to attend.

Twin Falls County may accept credit cards soon

TWIN FALLS — Paying your parking tickets or your auto registration may soon be as easy as saying, "Charge it."

The county is considering the purchase of computerized verification machines that could accept credit card payments.

Elected county officials heard a presentation Thursday from D.L. Evans Bank. The bank is offering machines and printers to the county at a combined price of $512 per set. The bank would charge a 2 percent transaction fee.

Because the other two commissioners are in Boise on county business, the county cannot decide on the D.L. Evans proposal before Monday, said County Commissioner Jim Frisley.

Student enrollments rise

Some Magic Valley classrooms are overcrowded

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Steadily rising student enrollments have forced some school districts to make do by holding class in hallways or remodeled food storage rooms.

School enrollments across the Magic Valley are rising as families move into the area for new jobs. Even towns that don't have new or expanding businesses are growing as bedroom communities.

The growth brings mixed blessings. Larger schools mean more class offerings at some schools and commercial and residential development means the tax burden for supporting schools is spread out more.

But with more students to handle, the need for new buildings grows and property taxes go up. Ratios of students to teachers increase, making it tougher for teachers to meet the individual needs of their students. Also, overcrowded schools translates into more discipline problems.

Several districts including those in Kimberly, Twin Falls and Jerome have gone to voters in the last few years for school construction projects to handle growth problems.

In Blaine County, residents have come to expect that the next building project is only a few years away.

In the past decade, enrollment in the Blaine County School District has increased 44 percent from 1,838 students to 2,632 this year, according to figures by the Idaho Department of Education.

Enrollments increase over decade

Student enrollments have increased in many Magic Valley schools over the past decade. Those increases include:

- Twin Falls School District: from 6,622 students to 7,320, a 7.5 percent increase.
- Minidoka County School District: from 4,599 to 5,440, a 19 percent increase.
- Jerome School District: from 2,815 to 2,961, a 13 percent increase.
- Cassia County School District: from 5,146 to 5,543, a 8 percent increase.
- Filer School District: from 1,109 to 1,201, an 8 percent increase.

Enrollment increased by 142 students or 5.7 percent just in the past year, according to the department.

District Superintendent Phil Homer said enrollment jumped by another 25

Ryder truck rental company ranks Twin Falls 19th most popular small city to move to

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls is the 19th most popular small city in the United States for people to move to, according to a study by Ryder Consumer Truck Rental.

Ryder truck dealer Andy Barry, owner of Barry Rental in Twin Falls, said he wasn't surprised by the ranking.

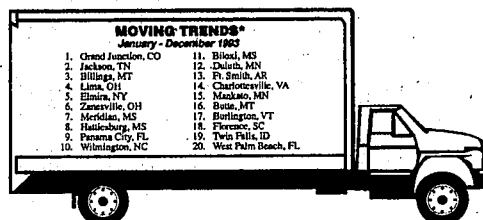

Last fall, he moved his moving company to a larger facility at 465 Addison Ave. W. Barry said if he hadn't have moved he couldn't have kept up with the growing moving business.

For every 100 people who move out of the Twin Falls area another 112 move in, according to Ryder.

Ryder compiles a list of the 20 most popular cities of more and less than 100,000 in population every six months. And this was the first time Twin Falls has made the Top 20 list, said Ryder spokeswoman Terri Kopec.

"We're noticing that people are going from the large urban areas to the smaller cities," Kopec said.

Ryder studies the records of its 4,700 moving truck rental office and U.S. Department of Commerce data to track national moving trends, Kopec said. Ryder collects this information for its marketing and pricing strategies.

*Most popular U.S. destinations with populations of less than 100,000, ranked by ratio of number of inbound to outbound households moved.

Source: Ryder Consumer Truck Rental, 1993 Household Growth Moving Study

Barry estimated that most of the people he deals with moving to Twin Falls are coming from California. Many of his other customers are coming from elsewhere in Idaho.

But the Ryder study determined that the largest percentage of people moving to Twin Falls were coming from Salt Lake City. Other popular cities people are moving to Twin Falls from are:

- Boise.
- Spokane.
- Seattle.
- Denver.

Ironically, the most popular area for people from Twin Falls to move to is also Salt Lake City, according to Ryder. The other popular destinations of people leaving Twin Falls are:

- Boise.
- Seattle.
- Los Angeles.
- Spokane.

The most popular destination city of less than 100,000 population in 1993 was Grand Junction, Colo.

The South had 10 of the Top 20 destination cities, while the Midwest had four cities and the Northwest had three cities on the list, including Twin Falls.

Counselor helps Wendell students work out their problems, anger

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — To cope with an increase in student behavioral problems, Wendell Elementary teachers have a new counselor they can call on for help.

She has a warm voice, a friendly smile, and lots of experience. She is Cherri Stefania. A lot of what she deals with is anger in children, she said.

The problems she tries to help children overcome have changed during the past 10 to 15 years. More and more children come from dysfunctional families.

"Kids are crying out for affection, love and understanding," Stefania said. "The basic family unit isn't the norm any more. There's a lot happening to kids that hasn't happened before."

What's new, she said, is the number of children living with divorced parents or with friends and grandparents, kids who don't know how to communicate with each other, and children who have been abused.

Though Stefania might help children with an unavoidable problem, such as a death in the family, the most common problem is anger. She said children are upset by unmarried parents, parental drinking and divorce.

"Little kids often are not included in decisions," Stefania said. Not being included in decisions means the children don't understand, and because they don't know how to react, they become angry, she said. This anger can result in a student performing poorly at school.

"My part is not a matter of academics," Stefania said. "I do a lot of crisis intervention. If they make a kinship in which they can express their feelings, then they don't feel so alone."

Stefania said the most important aspect of her job is being a support person, someone who is available.

Children need to know they can count on me," she said. But her job goes beyond a child's perspective. What parents think of how the school deals with the problems that prevent children from learning concerns Stefania.

"We need families supportive of what's taking place in schools," she said. "It's hard to do. People like to blame other people for the cause of their problems."

The job is only half-time. The time she spends with a child might be no more than a half-hour per week. But Stefania acknowledges it's much more in full-time positions, said her boss, principal Karen Gorman.

Stefania said her effectiveness depends in part on her knowing the students. Sometimes she'll refer a child to someone else, but often she acts as a personal helper, someone in need.

"I can help kids who are angry, but they'll have fewer problems if they're not angry and high-achieving and high-achieving," Stefania said. She earned her bachelor's degree from Utah State University and Brigham Young University, and she worked 11 years at Richa College as a teacher and did some counseling. She was district coordinator at Big Horn School District in Wyoming, where she worked

Withdrawal petition may not be legal

By Mychel Matthews Goodman
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Some folks in the east end of Jerome County, dissatisfied with the way county commissioners have operated the emergency medical services since taking control three years ago, have filed a petition with signatures.

But that may not be enough to return control to local residents.

A group from the Eden and Hazelton area has completed a petition drive to put an initiative on the ballot in May's primary election, proposing the withdrawal of eastern Jerome County from the county-wide ambulance taxing district.

The district was created by resolution of the county commissioners in 1991.

The petition, which contains 1,725 signatures — 1,700 were needed — is a first in the state, said petition organizer Teresa Rust.

But county officials are unsure of what to do with it.

County clerk Cheryl Watts said Friday that she has not officially accepted the petition, and she will not file it until she gets a ruling from the State Attorney General's office. She says she expects a ruling within the week.

Former Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones, who is representing the Valley Quick Response Ambulance in a related court case, has told the group that a petition initiative is the proper course of action, Rust said.

But last month, the group was notified by Jerome County Prosecuting Attorney John Horgan that he disagreed with Jones' interpretation of the law.

An initiative petition, he explained in a Dec. 24 memorandum is used by citizens to propose new laws. The group wishes to amend an old law, not create a new one, Horgan said.

On the other hand, a referendum is "the people's power to ... reject laws already passed by the legislative body," he said.

But it is too late to begin the referendum process, Horgan said. A referendum to amend the resolution that created the ambulance district must have been filed within 60 days of the final adoption of the resolution in 1991, to be valid, he said.

Rust, whose husband Ben is an emergency medical technician with Valley Quick Response, said problems with the ambulance district were not evident in the first few months after the county commissioners took control.

Valley Quick Response, an independent ambulance unit which had provided emergency medical service to the east end of the county since 1976, was contracted by county commissioners to continue its service when the ambulance district was formed.

But last year, the county broke its contract with the unit, and Valley Quick Response lost its state license.

The quick response unit is now suing Jerome County for breach of contract, in order to get its license back. And in order for the unit to operate again, petitioners say, the 300 or so square miles east of the Traveler's Oasis must withdraw from the ambulance district.

If the initiative is allowed in the primary election, a simple majority is needed to withdraw from the ambulance district, Watts said.

Educate youths to decrease juvenile crimes

Remember the story about the blind men and the elephant? Since you couldn't see the elephant, each man tried to figure out what it was based on touch alone.

One man, holding the trunk, thought it was a snake. Another, holding the tail, claimed it was a rope. A third, feeling a thick leg, said it was a tree. Each man insisted he was right and the others wrong, but no one thought to put all their individual ideas together and realize "Hey, this is an elephant!"

Draw DeSilver On politics

The Idaho Legislature is kind of like that. Lawmakers and committees often tackle one aspect or another of a problem, but few of them stop back to see what the separate parts add up to.

This is especially true with elephant-sized problems like juvenile crime.

Last week's hearing on juvenile justice reform focused, naturally enough, on what should be done with youths after they've gotten into trouble. The most basic list of remedies — boot camps, community detention centers, intensive counseling, referrals to public agencies, and so on — was discussed. It was basically a list of what to do with the problem after it's already occurred.

Poll: Leroy, LaRocco even in congressional race

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Congressional challenger David Leroy is in a dead heat with two-term incumbent Larry LaRocco, Leroy's pollster said.

Leroy, a Boise Republican, released the poll information on Saturday during a swing through northern Idaho.

Greg Smith of Greg Smith and Associates, Polling said his early poll shows 43 percent of Idaho's First District voters favor LaRocco while 38 percent prefer Leroy.

Smith said the poll had a sample of 451 First District voters and the margin of error is 5.5 percent. That could mean LaRocco is ahead by nearly 11 points, Smith said. It could also mean that Leroy is slightly ahead.

"At this point in time, Leroy looks very good," Smith said. "For a guy who's barely launched his campaign, what a place to start from."

A LaRocco aide in Boise, however, said it is premature to rely on such poll information, particularly since Leroy must beat five competitors for the Republican nomination in order to face LaRocco.

"David LeRoy isn't running against Larry LaRocco, he's running against Helen Chenoweth, Ron McMurray, Bob Wheeler, Gene Summa and Sonny Kinsey," Tom Knappenberger said.

He said Leroy is being selective about what poll information he is releasing.

The poll shows LaRocco has 97 percent name recognition among Idaho voters while Leroy has about 69 percent name recognition.

Leroy cited another poll which he said also shows LaRocco is vulnerable.

Twin Falls zoning commission member seeks council's support for subdivision

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A member of the city planning and zoning commission will ask the City Council Monday to support his plans for a 64-home subdivision overlooking Dierkes Lake.

Ken Stutzman, vice chairman of the planning commission, wants to build 64 homes on 120 acres he owns in the city of Kimberly's impact area.

But the city of Twin Falls has interest in the subdivision's impact on water quality at Dierkes Lake and in a proposal by Stutzman to sell 10 acres of his canyon rim property to the city as additional park land.

The council meeting begins at 4 p.m. in City Hall and is open to the public.

Stutzman has hired hydrologist Chuck Brockway to study the impact of residential wells at the site.

Stutzman also has suggested trading 10 acres of his property to the city in exchange for 100 shares of water stock with the Twin Falls Canal Company, according to a city report.

He would use that water to irrigate a greenbelt within the subdivision, the city states.

The council also will meet with the county commissioners to discuss plans to co-sponsor financing of a new airport terminal at Joslin Field.

Federal and local funds would pay for a $2.5 million terminal at the Twin Falls/Sun Valley Regional Airport if Congress passes a three-year airport improvement bill this spring.

If approved, the Federal Aviation Administration would pay for 77 percent of the project, or almost $1.94 million, in annual installments of $400,000.

Local passenger facility charges would cover a maximum of $325,000, according to a city report.

As a result, only about $1.72 million would be available during construction should it begin this summer. The city and county would have to finance the remaining $781,000.

City and county officials talked last week about the possibility of financing "terminal construction through "certificates of participation," which are issued like bonds but do not require voter approval.

Also on the council agenda is a request by Jim Goldman to market about 18 acres of city property north of Victory Avenue adjacent to the municipal golf course and Rock Creek Canyon.

Goldman intends to develop the land for a business park.

Developers seeks approval of plan

FILER — Developer Crest Hughes will ask the Filer Planning and Zoning Board to approve the plan for a 120- to 140-lot subdivision, at a special meeting of the board at 7:30 p.m. today in the Filer City Hall.

Brian Moore, the attorney representing Hughes, of Filer, and unnamed partner from the state of Washington, will ask the board to approve the plan for the Golden Spur Subdivision phase two, to be located on land owned by Hughes on West Midway in Filer.

The development would be situated directly west of the Golden Spur Subdivision phase one. If approved as proposed, Golden Spur phase two would consist of 120 to 140 modular homes.

Construction has started on 70 homes at Golden Spur phase one. Combined with the proposed development of phase two, Filer residents could have an additional 200 families as neighbors if the plan is approved.

The area under consideration for phase two is currently located outside the Filer city limits but Jack Hart of the zoning board said he expects Hughes will ask the City Council to annex the area.

Jerome may consolidate precincts

JEROME — Consolidating voting precincts in Jerome County will save taxpayers' money, officials say.

Reducing the number of precincts is possible because of vote counting machines, said Cheryl Watts, chief election officer and clerk of the District Court. By eliminating four precincts, the number of personnel normally hired to staff the polling places can also be reduced, she said.

Precincts to be consolidated are Northeast one and two, Canyonside and Rimrock, Hazelton and Greenwood, and Southwest and Barton. Location of polling places has not been finalized, Watts said.

"The precincts were split years ago because of the amount of counting and the time it took to manually count the votes," Watts said. "With our counting machines we can handle more votes and also reduce the number of memory packs in the computer system," she said.

Watts said the actual cost savings had not yet been computed.

Classes

students within two months after school started.

To handle that growth county residents recently approved a $16.5 million bond election for a new 600-student middle school, 10 new classrooms at Wood River High School and four new classrooms at Hemingway Elementary School.

In 1985, the district added wings with eight to 10 new classrooms onto each of its schools. Since then, the district collected 20 portable classrooms.

Homer said teachers who taught in the portable classrooms felt isolated from their peers and the buildings were a maintenance problem.

It was projected that the new middle school would handle district growth needs for the next decade, but Homer said it will probably be only five years before the next big building project.

At Filer Middle School, one class is held in a partitioned classroom area enclosed by lockers and a special education class meets in a portable classroom, Principal Gregory Lanting said.

Classes have grown from about 22 students to 27, making it more difficult for a teacher to give students individual attention, Lanting said. Even if school officials wished to hire more teachers they would not have any place to put them, he said.

"We are bursting at the seams, especially at the middle school level," Superintendent Bill Fenshurens said.

A community long-range planning committee recently recommended that the district hold a $6.3 million bond election in May to build a new high school to accommodate 450 students and to make improvements at other district schools.

Jerome School District was renting space in the local National Guard Armory and using local churches for classes before a new elementary school was opened in January.

The district remodelled a space once used for storing food into a classroom for a gifted and talented class, district business manager Mike Gibson said.

Youth

But earlier that same day, alternative high-school students from around the state told members of the House Education Committee about how their schools had failed them.

The following morning, the Senate Education Committee agreed to consider an ambitious — and expensive — plan to upgrade Idaho's school buildings and prepare them for high-tech education.

Those seemingly separate issues are, in fact, aspects of the same problem, as Sen. Gary Schroeder pointed out last week.

"We have to go into this system and ask why we are producing 13-, 14-, 15-year-olds who should be becoming productive citizens and instead are shooting people and dealing drugs," said Schroeder, R-Moscow.

Juvenile crime will get worse and worse, he said, until the state's school system is reformed from top to bottom. More than a fifth of Idaho students drop out, he said, and many of them will come back as guests of the Department of Correction.

"You can talk about 'three strikes and you're out' or '20 years to life' and you can have all the laws you want, but what good will that do when the schools keep producing more and more of these kids?" he asked.

"You'll never catch up."

Most lawmakers recognize that simply pouring more money into the schools won't make them better. Vocational education, alternative schools, and gifted and talented programs, to name three examples, all could play a much bigger role than they do now.

And schools aren't the only forces that shape children's lives. Before they even reach school, parents exert tremendous influence on what their children will be like.

Margaret Fudge Daniel Blum of Murphy said the state's school system is failing to raise a child properly in his or her first six years of life is the single biggest predictor of future criminal behavior.

For years, Schroeder's colleague in the House, GOP Rep. James "Doc" Lucas, has pleaded with his colleagues to increase funding for schools, anti-drug programs, parenting training, child abuse prevention, and similar programs. He makes the connection between how a child is raised, how that child is educated, and whether that child will end up in college or in prison.

Lucas made his speech again this year in the House floor, but it appeared few of his colleagues were trying to dismiss it as "Doc's annual sermon."

Schroeder urged his fellow lawmakers not to ignore the connections between poor education, unstable family life, and juvenile crime.

"We have to keep the people who commit these crimes locked up," he said. "But we also need to change the system to stop producing these wasted human beings."

Boy charged in officer's slaying not youngest such attacker

BOISE (AP) — Idahoans were shocked this month when a 14-year-old boy was charged with killing a New Plymouth policeman, shooting him in the face. But James "Bobby" Moore was not the youngest person ever accused of killing an Idaho police officer. Nor was Officer Ronald Wade Feldner the first policeman who might have dropped his guard a bit as he approached three teen-agers in the New Plymouth High School parking lot.

"We've all done those type things before," said Larry Plott, executive director of Idaho's Peace Officer Standards and Training academy. "Maybe they just weren't in the mood to kill us that day."

Feldner, killed Jan. 20, became the 19th Idaho city, county or state police officer murdered on duty in the past 100 years. All but two died by gunfire.

Moore, a Boise runaway, was charged as an adult with first-degree murder. He is accused of shooting Feldner as the officer stood next to the stolen Volkswagen where Moore and two other juveniles were sitting.

The crime immediately was linked to the public perception — backed up by statistics — that juvenile crime is on the rise and teen-agers today are more violent.

But veteran Caldwell Police Chief Keith Judd and Ada County Sheriff's Deputy Mel States were shot by a 13-year-old sniper before Feldner was born.

On Aug. 28, 1961, Judd and States responded to reports of gunshots at a Caldwell home, only to be wounded themselves. Judd was paralyzed. His health steadily deteriorated until he died on March 3, 1965. States was permanently disabled.

The young gunman, Bobby Miller, served two years in state prison. He was released on Feb. 24, 1964, barely a year before Judd died. Miller moved to Seattle with his parents.

Before Feldner, the last Idaho cop murdered on duty was Osburn Police Officer Earl Charles Ashton, 23. He had been on the force only six months on Aug. 17, 1976, when he stopped Dixon Douglas Curley on Interstate 90 for driving west in an east-bound lane.

Curley pulled a rifle and fired. The bullet glanced off Ashton's bulletproof vest and entered his chest. Plott said Ashton had not attended the POST academy and did not approach Curley's truck correctly.

Four years earlier, on Jan. 13, 1972, Lewiston Officers Ross D. Flavel and Thomas Salen pulled up to Dean's Drug Center as Fred Hokenson was trying to rob the Dean family.

While Hokenson was being handcuffed, he told Flavel, "You've got 30 seconds." Flavel bent over a paper sack as a bomb inside went off. His body absorbed the explosion, saving the lives of Salen, Kent Dean and Hokenson.

"People should know that you can't pay a person to do what Flavel did," Dean's wife, Janice, said later. Flavel had a partner with him, but many officers were killed after going into harm's way alone. Plott said multi-officer patrols are "all nice and fine in big cities, but in this state I don't think you're going to see it because of the costs."

Downey village Marshal Daniel "Dee" Woodland was alone on July 16, 1964, when he surprised six transients ransacking the Downey Grain Growers store. He was shot in the chest with a .22-caliber bullet.

But other officers have survived attempts to kill them, and training helps.

Plott said rookie Twin Falls Police Officer Ron Farnsworth acted correctly in defending himself when Bounthanh Kinnavongsa sprayed his patrol car with shots from a semiautomatic rifle during a Feb. 23, 1993, traffic stop.

Kinnavongsa was killed, while Farnsworth was hit in the leg.

"But the first thing Farnsworth thought was, 'Why is this person trying to kill me?'" Plott said. "There's very few people in this society who will risk their neck to protect you without even knowing who you are."

Lawmakers near decision on school funding formula

BOISE (AP) — After three weeks of mostly behind-the-scenes negotiations, the Idaho Legislature starts facing tough decisions this week.

The toughest is school funding. School superintendents from throughout Idaho will decide today if they want to go along with a proposal from some of their colleagues to change the formula used to distribute state support for public schools.

It's seen as a compromise to make aid distribution more equitable, and a way out of a massive lawsuit over school funding that involves more than 40 of Idaho's 113 school districts.

But it could take plugging more of a proposed $96 million hike in state public school aid into the revised funding formula, convincing the majority of superintendents to support the change. Since that represents most of the extra money available, it could force lawmakers to drop any proposals for school reform, investments in classroom technology or other changes.

"If you start adding strings, saying where the money goes, then quite frankly their proposal doesn't work," House Speaker Michael Simpson, R-Blackfoot, said Friday.

If they can't agree, Simpson said he and other legislative leaders told superintendents the new distribution scheme can fit within the school funding request submitted by a coalition of education groups. It seeks $623.5 million in general state support. Governor Gov. Cecil Andrus recommended $11.8 million more than that, and said he would have to see whether improvements he wants are included before endorsing the superintendents' plan.

House Education Committee Chairman Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, has been working on ways to meet the Idaho Constitution's requirement that the state provide a thorough system of public schools. But if virtually all the available money is added to the school budget to allow a formula change, he said, any additional reforms aimed at meeting the requirement might be out this year.

Meanwhile, a long-running political battle between Andrus and the Legislature's GOP majority moves into a new phase this week.

Lawmakers will vote today on whether to appropriate $4.5 million to pay bills that counties face for their poorest residents' catastrophic health-care needs. Also being considered is $300,000 to start the so-called medically needy program pushed by the governor.

Andrus has vetoed past allocations to the catastrophic care fund when lawmakers refused to finance his program to pay some medical bills for low-income Idahoans who do not qualify for Medicaid — primarily children and pregnant women.

Costs will increase for both programs, which is why Republicans have been reluctant to approve the medically needy plan. The catastrophic care fund intended to ease the property tax burden for counties, could cost $6.7 million next year, and the medically needy plan $1.6 million.

A new attempt to make smokers pay more for their habit comes up in the House this week. The House Revenue and Taxation Committee is scheduled to hear a request from Pocatello Democrat Elaine Hoffman to hike the 18-cents-per pack cigarette tax by 50 cents.

That proposal from a coalition of public, professional and non-profit groups involved in health care and campaigns against smoking-related diseases is designed to encourage people to stop smoking, Hoffman said.

The Legislature's natural resources committees also will conduct the last of three hearings today on the state's role in the federal Endangered Species Act and Clean Water Act.

Senate Resources and Environment Chairman Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, and House Resources and Conservation Chairman Golden Linford, R-Rexburg, say they will present recommendations on what the state should do to lessen the impact of the federal regulations.

The House Revenue and Taxation Committee also starts subcommittee work this week on a number of proposals to change tax laws, including a bill to allow school districts to levy a district-wide income tax.

And after a packed six-hour public hearing last week, House Judiciary Committee members are working on legislation to allow public disclosure when a juvenile is charged with any serious or violent crime.

Current law bars the release of the names of offenders under 18 unless they are charged as adults. The committee's vice chairman, Twin Falls Republican Mark Stubbs, said authorities should be able to release at least the names of persons charged and the nature of the offense.

Woman says stepfather has suffered enough, need not be charged for crime

WALLACE (AP) — The daughter of shooting victim Kenneth Svarrer says her father has suffered enough, and feels the pursuit of criminal charges against him is not necessary.

Barb Lyons, 28, said Svarrer, who is her stepfather, has suffered possibly irrevocable brain damage after being shot three times while in the Shoshone County Sheriff's Office.

The Idaho Bureau of Narcotics is prepared to proceed with charges against Svarrer that he intended to sell illegal drugs, after a search of his residence in August uncovered 20 grams of cocaine and a large number of weapons, the majority of which were collector-type guns.

"Ken is innocent until proven guilty. (But) he's already been prosecuted," Lyons said. "I think he's had enough."

Idaho Bureau of Investigation agents and Shoshone County law enforcement officials have admitted they had summoned Svarrer to the sheriff's office to avoid a possible confrontation while the search warrant was being served on his home.

While in the dispatch room of the Public Safety Building, Svarrer, 48, allegedly pulled a weapon from the rear waistband of his pants. Following a physical confrontation with sheriff's deputies, Svarrer was shot twice in the side by a deputy and once in the head with his own .38-caliber handgun.

Before the narcotics bureau can proceed with charges against Svarrer, however, it must first be proven that he has the mental capability of understanding the charges and is able to defend himself against them.

Lyons said her stepfather, who was recently released from a Spokane hospital where he had been recovering from the wounds for nearly five months, is in threat to society.

"I think he's a man in some ways and a child in other (ways)," she said. "He's totally dependent on other people for his daily care."

Lyons said Svarrer, who is now blind in his left eye from a bullet that passed through his chin and exited out of the top of his head, does not initiate conversations and replies using nods and gestures. He does not speak in sentences or phrases, she said.

Lyons said she has a number of questions about the sequence of events that took place prior to the shooting, but has been unable to get any answers from law enforcement authorities.

Lyons said she also has a hard time believing the information released by agencies on how Svarrer came to be in the Public Safety Building.

Lyons said she was told by a witness that Svarrer, who has a prior felony record, had entered the sheriff's office the day before the shooting after being told by a friend he could reapply for a concealed weapons permit.

"He was told to come back in the next day with the weapon he wanted the permit for," she said.

Films awarded at festival

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — "What Happened Was..." a drama about a troubled dinner date, and the civil rights documentary "Freedom on My Mind" won the top prizes at the Sundance Film Festival.

The films won the jury awards Saturday that are considered the most prestigious prizes at the showcase for American independent movies founded by Robert Redford.

The audience award for drama went to "Sparking the Monkey," a story of an exceptionally dysfunctional family. "Hoop Dreams," a profile of two Chicago high school basketball players, won the audience award for documentary.

The Waldo Salt screenwriting award went to "What Happened Was..." filmmaker Tom Noonan, who also stars in the film opposite Karen Sillas.

The dramas "Clerks" and "Fresh" split the dramatic division award. Filmmakers "Trophy" while "Theremin: An Electronic Odyssey" about the Russian inventor Leon Theremin, took the Filmmakers Trophy in the documentary division.

Invited moviemakers decide Filmmakers Trophy winners. Festival guests vote on the audience awards. Special cinematography awards were presented to the black-and-white films "Colorado Cowboy: The Bruce Ford Story" and "Suture."

A Freedom of Expression award was shared by the documentaries "Dialogues With Madwomen" and "Heart of the Matter," about women and AIDS.

Super Bowl rip-off leads to disturbance

COLLEGE PARK, Ga. — Hundreds of angry Mexican football fans were cheated of $500,000 in phony Super Bowl tickets, and police were summoned to quell the disturbance Sunday.

“Some of them lost $5,000 or $10,000,” said Capt. J.A. Cooper, adding the scheme involved a package tour including airline tickets from Mexico City, rooms in area hotels and game tickets.

The disturbance began about 6 p.m. MST Saturday at the Renaissance Hotel ballroom near Atlanta Hartsfield International Airport after the owner of the Mexico City travel agency told the crowd they had apparently been cheated, Cooper said.

College Park police dispatched about 80 officers to the scene, including reinforcements from nearby forces, after being notified by hotel security, he said.

There was no violence but a lot of shouting and angry words directed at Victor Ortiz of Viaje Flor SA in Mexico City, he said.

Police were searching for a suspect who may have skipped town with the money while the case was under investigation. The FBI was called in since the case involved interstate activity, Cooper said.

ATLANTA — The Dallas Cowboys have staked their claim as the team of the '90s. The Buffalo Bills grabbed a loser's label that could last longer than that.

The Cowboys and the Bills both made Super Bowl history Sunday, thanks to two unlikely stars, James Washington and a redeemed Leon Lett.

Washington, a backup safety, had a hand in 17 of Dallas' points as they beat the Bills 30-13 and won their second straight NFL title and sent Buffalo to a record fourth straight Super Bowl defeat. No franchise in the history of American team sports has lost a championship game four straight times.

“You have demonstrated you're the team of the '90s,” NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said as he presented the Vince Lombardi trophy to coach Jimmy Johnson and owner Jerry Jones of the Cowboys.

But defensive end Charles Haley, who played for San Francisco's “team of the '80s,” was more hesitant to make the claim.

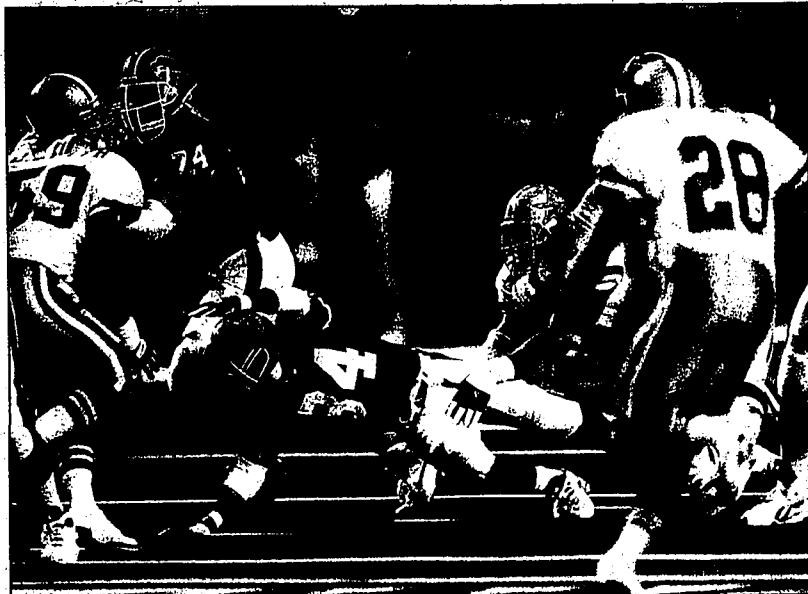

“It's too early,” he said. “Let's see what we do next year.”

Emmitt Smith, who surprisingly was named the game's MVP over Washington, ran for 132 yards and two touchdowns as Dallas became the 10th straight NFC team to win the league's title game by outscoring the Bills 24-0 in the second half after trailing 13-6 at halftime.

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — All the hard work the Buffalo Bills did in the 30 minutes of the first half took less than seven minutes to undo in the second half.

It began with a Thurman Thomas fumble — caused by Leon Lett, of all people — and ended with vintage Emmitt Smith.

“When it was over, the Bills' 13-6 halftime lead turned into a 20-13 deficit and Buffalo's place in Super Bowl infamy had been secured as a four-time loser.

Dallas won the game Sunday 30-13, for its second straight championship, but it was decided before the halfway mark of the third quarter.

The Bills did everything they were supposed to do in the first half, led by Jim Kelly's pinpoint passing that helped keep the ball away from the Cowboys' big-play offense.

Buffalo got the kickoff in the second half and had a chance to add to its lead. But the aggressive Cowboys turned up the heat, jumping around and egging on the crowd. And on just the third play of the period, it all came apart for the Bills.

Aikman betters playoff record

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Troy Aikman won't forget this game. Aikman, knocked out of the NFC championship game against San Francisco last week, came back to improve his playoff record to 6-0 and lead the Dallas Cowboys to their second consecutive Super Bowl victory.

“I couldn't remember a play from the 49ers' game, but I remember every one but one today,” Aikman joked after Sunday's 30-13 victory over Buffalo. “Somebody said I threw an interception. My memory fails me on that one.”

Aikman threw a rare interception in the first half which led to a Buffalo field goal as Dallas fell behind 13-6.

“We were ragged in the first half, we had no timing,” Aikman said. “But the defense came through and we got going offensively. I started seeing the field a lot better.”

Aikman, last year's Super Bowl MVP, hit 19-of-27 passes for 207 yards.

It was vintage Aikman in the second half as he took the Cowboys on two touchdown drives after James Washington returned a fumble 46-yard for a touchdown to tie the game at 13.

Aikman's key play came on the Cowboys' fourth touchdown drive after Washington intercepted at the Buffalo 34. On third-and-8 from the Buffalo 22, Aikman hit Alvin Harper with a 16-yard pass, and Dallas went on to build a 27-13 lead.

Aikman

“I was a little sluggish at the start but I got it going,” Aikman said. “The concussion didn't bother me. I got over that on Wednesday. I won't get any sleep tonight but I am the next five months. Boy, I'm tired.”

Aikman will visit with a private physician in Birmingham on Monday to determine whether he will play in the Pro Bowl next Sunday.

He said this was a much tougher year than last season.

“It wasn't much fun until today,” Aikman said. “Last year we weren't supposed to be where we were. It just happened. This year we were supposed to win it all. We had injuries, holdouts, freak plays. It was hard. But it's mighty sweet.”

“They said no team started 0-2 and won a Super Bowl. Well, we did,” he said.

Aikman said a third consecutive Super Bowl will be a challenge.

“No team has done it,” Aikman said. “I think we have a great chance if we can get our free agents back. I think (owner) Jerry Jones will get that job done.”

Aikman will be examined for a sore shoulder, separated ribs, a hamstring injury and a sore back when he goes to Birmingham.

“This year ground me down, but I made it,” Aikman said.

Buffalo loss discourages residents

The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — It was another Sunday, another Super Bowl and another defeat for the hometown of the Bills.

Again, Buffalo hoped for a different outcome, a victory that would bring a little respect to the winter-weary industrial city. People in Buffalo feel the rest of the country unfairly views their city as a snowbound town of unemployed factory workers, bowlers, chicken-wing addicts and Super Bowl losers.

But the Bills' 30-13 loss, Buffalo's fourth-straight Super Bowl defeat, may have cemented the city's image as a town that just can't win.

“I have to move to another town. I can't live in this city anymore. It's degrading,” said Susan Klimtzak, who watched the game at Pettibone's Restaurant at Pilot Field, Buffalo's minor league baseball park.

“It's time to move on to somewhere else ... to a winning city.”

As Dallas running back Emmitt Smith rushed for a touchdown to put the Cowboys' up 27-13, the crowd grew quiet at the Sports City Grille, a bar and restaurant opened last fall by Bills quarterback Jim Kelly.

About 1,500 people watched the game there. Many stared at the television screen in frustration and bewilderment as they realized the Bills were going to lose again.

“We'll be bummed out for a little while, but we're all young. We'll get over it,” said David Salisbury, manager of the restaurant.

Bills fans said they would take consolation in the fact that Buffalo is the only NFL team to play in four straight Super Bowls.

“People here are still going to have a lot of respect for their football team,” said Trina Burns of Kitchener, Ont.

tario, a college student in Buffalo who watched the game in Kelly's bar. “The Bills are like royalty here. They still are.”

Bills fans also consoled themselves with the fact that the Bills stayed close until late in the game after blowouts the last two years.

“When they lost those games, they weren't the second-best team. Everybody considered them the worst team,” Chuck Doleandor said. “But they kept putting out for us year after year.”

All day Sunday, Buffalo fans had predicted a victory by the Bills, hoping they'd have a chance to throw some wisecracks back at critics who didn't want Buffalo's back in the Super Bowl. Pilot Field's scoreboard was lit up with messages such as “Warning America: We're Back. Deal With It.”

Some in Buffalo had a hard time dealing with the Bills losing again.

“Four damn years in a row,” shouted Marge Bolock as she left Kelly's bar late in the fourth quarter. “Marv Levy's been outscored four straight years. I don't like him.”

Today also could be a bad day.

“There's going to be a lot of people in the psychiatric wards tomorrow,” said Frank Kelly, who watched the game at the Locker Room, a sports bar. “Four in a row, it's tough to swallow.”

People had been optimistic the Bills would pull off a victory. For the fourth straight year, the Rev. Joseph Catholic Church by predicting a Buffalo victory: 37-17.

“What's shot in the arm a win would be for this city,” Moreno said before mass. “It would be like a hundred CCs of adrenaline. This would be the rainbow that never shines on Buffalo.”

Gillooly shocked Harding didn't stick to story

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tonya Harding's ex-husband decided to divulge the champion skater's role in the attack on Nancy Kerrigan after authorities convinced him Harding had turned on him first, his brother told The Associated Press on Sunday.

Jeff Gillooly was surprised when he found Harding had not stuck with the cover story the two had made up, John Gillooly said.

John Gillooly said his brother's attorney, Ron Hoevet, tried to convince his client Harding had turned on him, but Jeff Gillooly didn't believe it until he read a 46-page deposition the skater had given the FBI.

Gillooly

Harding

"Whatever implications were made against him, he has to rebut," John Gillooly said. "If it involves implicating her, that's probably the crux of it."

He said Harding told his brother shortly after she talked to the FBI that she had said nothing to link him to the plot to attack Kerrigan.

Kerrigan was struck with a metal baton above the right knee after a workout Jan. 6 as she prepared for the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Detroit. Harding went on to win the championship.

Hoevet confirmed John Gillooly's account, telling The Oregonian, "Jeff would have fallen on his sword for Tonya if Tonya had told him the truth. But she didn't." Hoevet did not return telephone calls Sunday from the AP.

As expected, Harding was on the list of 12 athletes submitted by the U.S. Figure Skating Association to the U.S. Olympic Committee Sunday as participants in the Winter Games, which begin Feb. 12 in Lillehammer, Norway.

However, the list was submitted "with the understanding that replacements in the women's competition could be named up to Feb. 21," association spokeswoman Kristin Matta said.

The women's figure skating competition is to begin Feb. 23.

The USFSA also submitted the names of 10 replacement skaters, including 13-year-old Michelle Kwan, who would take the place of Harding if she were dropped from the team.

The USFSA has formed a special committee to decide if there is a probable cause to revoke Harding's association membership, a first step in the process that could result in her removal from the Olympic team.

The USOC is to submit the list of skaters to the Olympic Organizing Committee in Lillehammer by Monday.

Jeff Gillooly testified for two hours Saturday before the Multnomah County grand jury investigating the case. The grand jury apparently did not meet Sunday.

Norm Frink, Multnomah County deputy district attorney, said Sunday he didn't expect any indictments to be issued anytime soon.

Jeff Gillooly reportedly has cut a deal in which he will plead guilty to one count of racketeering and receive a two-year prison sentence and be fined $100,000. Hoevet has said he expects his client to make a statement and hold a news conference Monday or Tuesday, a strong indication he plans to enter his plea by then.

John Gillooly believes his brother's public statement would set off a chain of events.

"This will come to a head very quickly and will be resolved once Jeff makes his statement," John said.

Harding met with the FBI for 10 1/2 hours Jan. 18. The Oregonian has quoted a source as saying she told one version of the events to investigators in the initial stages of the interview, then changed her story after her interrogators told her they had information that proved she was lying. In the later stages of the interview, she implicated Gillooly, the newspaper's source said.

John Gillooly said his parents aren't angry with Harding.

"You have to understand what's going on in Tonya's mind," he said. "She has her own agenda."

John said his brother had lost 10 to 20 pounds since the case began.

"Jeff looks better now than one week ago," John said. "He's coming to grips with reality. He now knows what the possibilities are and is better able to deal with it."

As for the possibility of his brother reconciling with Harding, John said: "Jeff probably has a hope for reconciliation with her for a while. You live in hope, die in despair."

Although Gillooly and Harding ended their stormy marriage in August, they reconciled a short time later and were living together until her Jan. 18 session at FBI headquarters in Portland. During that meeting, she issued a statement to the press saying she still believed in Gillooly's innocence but was separating from him in order to concentrate on the Olympics.

Harding has not been charged but Gillooly and her bodyguard, Shawn Eckardt, both have implicated her in the plot. Gillooly is accused of hiring Eckardt to arrange the assault on Kerrigan to enhance Harding's chances of an Olympic berth. Shane Stant has confessed to carrying out the attack. His uncle, Derrick Smith, is accused of driving the getaway car. All are free on bail.

Harding said Thursday she learned people close to her were involved in the plot shortly after she returned from Detroit Jan. 10 but did not tell authorities what she knew.

Glasson claims Open with 7-under-par 64

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Bill Glasson knows this much about himself: When there's a tournament to be won, he'll be there.

"I pride myself in my ability to take it home," he said after shooting a 7-under-par 64 Sunday to win the Phoenix Open by three strokes. "You know, to not fold my tent coming down the stretch. Obviously, what I need to do is get there more often. That's one of the things I hope to accomplish this year."

Glasson finished with a total of 16-under 268 in capturing the sixth title of his 11 years on the PGA Tour. He has won six of the seven tournaments he's led in the final round. Bob Estes, who finished second, said he was aware of Glasson's reputation as one tough opponent to catch.

"My caddy and I were talking about that coming down No. 17, when it looked like it was pretty much over," Estes said. "I know he's had a lot of injuries, but it seems like he either doesn't play very well at all, or he wins the golf tournament."

Glasson won $216,000 with his first 1994 finish in the money. He missed the cut at the Hawaiian Open, then skipped last week's Northern Telecom Open. His winnings for the event exceeded his season earnings for all but four of his 10 years on the PGA Tour.

He has been forced to adjust his swing since curing a back problem that stemmed from multiple operations on both knees from the 1970s until 1984. An inflamed back muscle nearly ended his career in 1991.

After the tournament in Hawaii, Glasson went to see teacher Kent Cayce in Washington to work on his swing.

"If I'd played Tucson last week, I would have shot a million," Glasson said.

Bill Glasson sunk a par putt on the 18th hole of the Tournament Players golf course Sunday to win the Phoenix Open.

kept the pressure on until he bogeyed the pivotal 15th hole after Glasson birdied it. He got back on track with a birdie on the final hole and won his biggest purse ever — $129,600 — by finishing alone in second at 271.

Mike Springer, Jeff Maggert and Blaine McAllister tied for third at 272, while Rick Fehr, who started the day tied with Andrew Magee and nearly ended his career in 1991.

After the tournament in Hawaii, Glasson went to see teacher Kent Cayce in Washington to work on his swing.

"If I'd played Tucson last week, I would have shot a million," Glasson said.

Floyd grabs Skins title

MAUNA LANI, Hawaii (AP) — Raymond Floyd, who didn't earn a cent the first day of the Senior Skins Game, laid out for it Sunday, winning $240,000 and the tournament title.

Two-time defending champion Arnold Palmer finished second with $115,000 in earnings, including $70,000 on the final day.

Lee Trevino, the first-day leader with $80,000, failed to win a hole the second day. Jack Nicklaus, after winning $15,000 on the first hole of the tournament, was shut out the rest of the day in the match of golf Hall of Fame.

Floyd, at 51 the youngest of the foursome, earned the final $70,000 of the event when he birdied the fourth sudden-death hole after the 17th and 18th holes of regulation were tied. Only he and Nicklaus remained in the competition at the fourth extra hole, and Nicklaus barely missed a long birdie try, leaving Floyd a tap-in to win.

"There were an awful lot of birds out there," said Floyd, who himself birdied each of the four playoff holes. "I think this was probably one of the best Skins Games ever, by anybody."

"It was really exciting for me to be shut out yesterday then come back and play the quality of golf I played today. I shot a 31 on the front nine (Saturday), birdied four in a row in regulation today, then birdied all the extra holes."

event that rewards accuracy on the greens, Floyd won $100,000 on the third hole Sunday, No. 12, then added $70,000 with his fourth birdie in a row, on No. 14.

Palmer saw his chance to win the Senior Skins for a third consecutive year, but when his second shot on the final putt off hole, the put-3-into, rolled over a cart path and nestled against lava rock, forcing him to take a penalty stroke.

Jackson, Angels reach contract agreement

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Bo Jackson, whose football career ended in Southern California, is coming back to play baseball.

Jackson has agreed to terms with the California Angels, his agent said Sunday. He became a free agent three weeks ago when he walked away from the Chicago White Sox with an artificial hip.

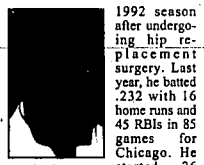

Agent Am Tellum declined to discuss contract terms. The Angels plan to announce the signing at 4 p.m. EST Monday.

"He's delighted to be coming back," Tellum said. "He loves Southern California and he's very excited about being given this opportunity with the Angels."

Jackson was drafted by the Angels in 1985 but did not sign. Still, some of his most memorable moments — good and bad — have come on fields in the area.

His NFL career ended with a hip injury he sustained in a play-off game for the Los Angeles Raiders at the Coliseum in January 1991. In July 1989 at Anaheim Stadium, home of the Angels, he led off the All-Star game with a monster home run to center field and went on to become the MVP.

Jackson, 31, missed the entire

Jackson

1992 season after undergoing hip replacement surgery. Last year, he batted .232 with 16 home runs and 45 RBIs in 85 games for Chicago. He started 26 games in left field, 17 in right field and 33 as the designated hitter.

Jackson did not start the first two games of last October's AL playoffs against Toronto and complained about it. He started the next three games as the DH, going 0-for-10 with six strikeouts.

The White Sox offered Jackson salary arbitration after the season, but he declined this time. The Los Angeles Times reported Sunday that Jackson could earn more than $1 million with bonuses in a one-year deal with the Angels.

The White Sox signed free agent Julio Franco during the off-season. They also are likely to have a player in spring camp next month who will create even more attention than Jackson did last year — Michael Jordan.

Sampras defeats Martin, snags Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Pete Sampras, the ultimate power tennis player of the 1990s, evoked images of the sport's past while winning his first Australian Open title.

Sampras, who defeated Todd Martin 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 6-4 in Sunday's all-American final, became the first man in nearly three decades to win Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and the Australian Open consecutively.

He reasserted his dominance of men's tennis, drawing comparisons with boyhood idols such as Rod Laver and Ken Rosewall, by overpowering Martin with 126 mph aces and unreturnable groundstrokes.

Martin, seeded ninth, had his best chance at 3-3 in the first set when he had four break points, but Sampras saved them all and eventually forced the tiebreaker. After that, the top-seeded Sampras was in control, finishing with 13 aces.

"When I did lose the breaker, I think it motivated Pete, it loosened him up," Martin said. "Like most of the top players, he plays a lot better when he's ahead."

Sampras was so consistent that when he had two aces in a three-point span in the final set, each of the serves went past Martin at exactly 119 mph.

Martin and Sampras put their arms around each other's shoulders at the end, and Martin needed Sampras about leading 5-1 in the third set and dropping three straight games — including a service game — before finally ending the match.

"He said, 'Way to serve it out,'" Sampras said. "He was giving me a hard time."

Sampras received $322,000, Martin $161,000.

Whittaker takes defeat credit

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Although he didn't even get the fight, Pernell Whittaker figures he played a part in the surprise defeat of Julio Cesar Chavez.

"I must watch the tape," Whittaker said in a telephone interview Sunday, several hours after Chavez lost for the first time in a 91-fight career. At least, it was his first official loss.

Frankie Randall, a 15-1 underdog, knocked down Chavez and won the WBC super lightweight championship Sunday night at the MGM Grand.

"I was surprised, yet not really surprised," Whittaker said. "I figure that tough fight he had with me took a lot out of him. He'd never been through that before."

Chavez sustained the first blemish on his record when he fought a majority draw in a bid to win Whittaker's WBC welterweight title Sept. 10. While one judge and most ringiders thought Whittaker won, Chavez protested loudly that he had won.

He wouldn't concede defeat Sunday night either, and he blamed referee Richard Steele for the decision against him.

Steele penalized Chavez two points for low blows — in the seventh round and in the 11th, the round in which Chavez was knocked down for the first time in his career.

"I'm very upset with Richard Steele," Chavez said. "I protest Richard Steele's actions."

The deductions cost Chavez a split-decision victory. Without them, the card of judge Angel Luis Guzman of Puerto Rico would have favored Chavez 115-114 instead of Randall 114-113.

Judge Chuck Gimppe of Las Vegas scored the fight 116-111 for Randall, while judge Abraham Charvarria of Mexico favored Chavez 114-113.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"It is better, of course, to know less things than to know nothing." — Seneca.

Today's South knew that an even-money finesse gave him a 50 percent chance. He also knew that his chances of winning one of two even-money finesses were a healthy 75 percent. What he overlooked was a plan that would give him a 100 percent guarantee.

South took his club ace, drew trumps and cashed the queen and king of clubs. Next came a diamond to the queen for a losing finesse, and West switched to a heart. With nowhere to park his losing diamond, South tried the heart finesse. East took his king and the slam went down one trick.

In a different setting, South's 75 percent plan might have been a reasonable one. Given today's layout, he missed a cinch endplay on West.

After winning his club ace, South should cash the heart ace and ruff a heart. He draws trumps, ending in dummy, and ruffs dummy's last heart. The queen and king of clubs are cashed, and when a low diamond is led from dummy, South covers whatever East plays. West wins but he has no safe exit. He must surrender a free finesse or offer a ruff and discard.

South might have found it easier to spot the endplay had dummy not held the heart queen. This serves as a reminder that it's better not to have high cards than to misuse them.

Humility: Something you deserve

"I like people. I'm interested in people," Calvin says to Hobbes in a cartoon. "YOU?" inquires Hobbes. "As an audience, I mean," Calvin explains.

Calvin is long on self-centeredness and short on humility. No doubt we've all encountered people in the same court as Calvin.

JoAnn Larson
Psychology

"I know a guy who's so vain," says Joey Adams, "that he joined the Navy so the world could see him." "And I know someone who is the kind of guy who would like to die in his own arms," says someone else.

Humility is juxtaposed to such self-centeredness. Humility is actually a strange thing, reflects one sage.

"The minute you think you've got it, you've lost it." And, adds another, "The really tough thing about true humility is that you can't brag about it."

True humility, says William Temple, "does not mean thinking less of yourself than of other people, nor does it mean having a low opinion of your own gifts. It means freedom from thinking about yourself at all."

Pope John XXIII illustrated this point when he once admitted: "It often happens that I wake at night and begin to think about a serious problem and decide I must tell the pope about it. Then I wake up completely and remember that I am the pope."

It is a challenge for human beings to remain humble when they have achieved acclaim, greatness, or even recognition. One definition of a celebrity (or anyone with high status) is "a person who is known for his well-knownness."

In other words, a celebrity is able to be a celebrity because other people on the sidelines make it possible.

As Will Rogers once quipped, "We can't all be heroes. Somebody has to sit on the curb and clap as they go by."

One mark of humility is that a person recognizes his or her separateness from any office or from any mark of fame. "When you get to be president, there are the honors, the 21-gun salutes, all those things," Harry Truman observed. "You have to remember it isn't for you. It's for the presidency."

A humble person recognizes that acclaim or fame can leave as fast as it comes.

Also reflecting this thought is Winston Churchill, who was once asked, "Doesn't it thrill you to know that every time you make a speech, the hall is packed to overflowing?"

"It's quite flattering," Sir Winston replied. "But whenever I feel that way, I always remember that if instead of making a political speech I was being hanged, the crowd would be twice as big."

Although there is merit in achieving status, a person with humility realizes that status does not bestow upon him or her the mark of perfection. Walt Disney illustrates, commenting on being a celebrity, "It feels good when it helps to get a good seat for a football game. But it never helped me make a good film or a good shot in a polo game, or command the obedience of my daughter."

"It doesn't even seem to keep the fleas off our dogs — and if being a celebrity won't give me an advantage over a couple of fleas, then I guess there can't be much in being a celebrity after all."

Humility is reflected in the kindness and

Buhl neckwear-maker Gary Laughlin produces ties that don't whisper

By Lisa Grace Lodnicer
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Unless you have really outrageous neckwear, it's probably not a good idea to get into a loud-tie contest with 5th District Judge William Hart of Rupert.

He won at least one such competition among attorneys at a trial last year. Hart's tie was blue and gold, covered with stars and moons. It was made by Gary Laughlin of Buhl, who has developed a reputation in the Magic Valley for producing rather unusual neckwear.

"I like the flair and color they usually have," Hart said of Laughlin's ties. "I have a big neck, and he makes ties that fit me."

Laughlin began making ties in early 1990, after realizing that he never could find a tie that matched the churchgoing suits he wore on Sundays. His girlfriend made him one, but when he asked for another, she put it aside for about a month.

So Laughlin figured he'd try on his own. It took him an entire day, but when he wore it to church, everyone complimented him.

The rest, as they say, is history.

Laughlin made two more ties, then showed them to his mother in Twin Falls. She took them to work and her colleagues immediately wanted to know how much they cost. He charged $14.

"I was kind of shocked I could make money off this," Laughlin said. He began exhibiting at craft shows, at the Black Sheep Gallery in Twin Falls, and even had one of his ties sent to Jay Leno as part of a package of Idaho products. The talk-show host never responded, though.

Laughlin said he'd like to turn his hobby into a business, but he can't afford it. He works at Amalgamated Sugar Co. in Twin Falls and sews ties on his days off. Since he makes only about $1,700 profit (after paying for fabric, labels and boxes), he won't be quitting his other job anytime soon.

He has his own sewing machine and work space in an upstairs room of his Buhl house. It's a riot of color and patterns — silk of purple, black, gold and green. Birds, dolphins, sundials, trains, Snoopy, Big Bird.

The first tie Laughlin made was teal-and-blue flowered. Back then, the hip patterns were florals and paisleys. Now it's geometrics and abstract patterns, he said. Other popular motifs: cowboys boots, golf clubs and cows. One bridegroom and father-in-law wore matching race-car ties for a wedding reception in Indianapolis.

Customers can request any color or pattern, and if Laughlin hasn't already bought something unusual enough, he'll keep searching. It seems that he'd sew anything, but says he is loath to make a pink tie. And don't even suggest clip-ons: "I took one apart once and I couldn't get it back together, so that was the end of that," he said.

'The worst thing I hate to see is a guy walking down the street and there's a breeze and his tie is over his shoulder. Why wear a tie if you can't take care of it?'

— Gary Laughlin

Gary Laughlin made his first tie to wear to church. Now his ties hang from necks across the region.

Men who wear his ties should make sure their neckwear stays tidy, Laughlin said.

"The worst thing I hate to see is a guy walking down the street and there's a breeze and his tie is over his shoulder," he said. "Why wear a tie if you can't take care of it? Keep it down where it's supposed to be."

Eighty percent of Laughlin's ties are bought by women for their husbands, fathers, sons and boyfriends. Diana Troglia, a loan officer at First Interstate Bank in Twin Falls, started buying Laughlin's ties two years ago. She has bought one nearly every holiday for her dad in Montana — a heart-covered one for Valentine's Day, a leprechaun for St. Patrick's Day, a turkey for Thanksgiving. He gets tons of compliments, she says.

Mike Howard, finance manager for Wills Toyota in Twin Falls, has 25 Laughlin-made ties, and he hasn't bought one from a department store in three years.

"They just feel better-quality than one you can get in a department store," he said. "Buying a tie from Gary — there's no other tie like it."

Then there's Richard Bevan, Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney and another fan of Laughlin's. His wife likes most of his Laughlin-made ties, except the pink-and-purple one, he said.

"The really unique ones, I don't wear them on jury trial days," Bevan said. "It's not the dress-for-success look you want for a prosecutor in Twin Falls."

Looking good

Coaches perfect art of a winning look

Orange County Register

The Cole-Haas loafers on Randy Pfund's feet are almost as well-known on the Los Angeles Lakers sidelines as the Laker Girls.

Like a number of head coaches in the National Basketball Association, Pfund has developed a serious fancy for the modern clothes, accessories and pristine grooming that define his court-side style.

Today, "showtime" in the NBA not only includes fastbreaks and slam dunks, but coaches' hot ties and cool suits.

Watching a game is like watching a fashion show, said William Gibbons, fashion marketing director at GQ magazine. The coaches are the runway models; the retailers and designers behind the scenes are the ward-robbers dressing them for commercial reasons.

In this sidewalk of style, four coaches figure prominently: Pfund; Pat Riley, New York Knicks; Mike Dunleavy, Milwaukee Bucks; and Chuck Daly, New Jersey Nets. Phil Jackson of the Chicago Bulls and Mike Fratello of the Cleveland Cavaliers also are developing a reputation for style.

What sets this group apart from other coaches isn't just their clothes, but the way the clothes hang comfortably on them and look good at the final buzzer — no matter how excited the coaches get during the game.

New York Knicks' coach Pat Riley is the ultimate court-side clothes horse.

Health notes

WITH MILK, PLEASE: Drinking milk regularly can offset bone loss linked to longtime coffee drinking in older women, researchers said. Previous research showed that caffeine increases urinary excretion of calcium. A lack of calcium can lead to osteoporosis, a progressive thinning of bones most common in post-menopausal women. That doesn't mean older women should give up coffee, the researchers from the University of California, San Diego, reported in last week's Journal of the American Medical Association.

IN THE LINE OF FIRE: Sobering thought for the day: The equivalent of a "classroomful" of children is killed every two days by firearms, the Children's Defense Fund says, the Washington Post reports, and warns that homicide is the nation's third-leading cause of death for elementary- and middle-school children. According to the group's report, based largely on federal health statistics, a child in this country is 15 times as likely to die as a result of gunfire as a child in Northern Ireland.

CARE FOR CAREGIVERS: Helping an elderly, frail or disabled relative or friend while juggling the demands of your work and other family responsibilities can be overwhelming. To help, the American Association of Retired Persons offers free, single copies of the "Care Giver Resource Kit," which includes "Staying at Home," a guide to in-home support services and housing options, and "Miles Away and Still Caring," coordinating long-distance care. Write: "Care Giver" (D15267), AARP Fulfillment (EE0574), 601 E St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20049. Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

WINTER WOE: Snow, ice, bitter cold — and here's some more good winter news. "Tonsil infections in school age children can happen at anytime during the year, but they are far more common during the winter months because that's when children are in the classroom and in close contact with other students who may have upper respiratory tract infections," says Michael Cunningham, a pediatric otolaryngologist at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary.

IT'S A SCREAM, SHE SAYS: Speaking of sore throats, in Married Woman magazine, author Erica Jong, who's up to husband No. 4, offers a relationship tip: "Laryngitis from screaming at each other — the dirty little secret of a durable marriage."

TWIN FALLS — "The Big Kids' Klub" is a program designed to help children adjust to the idea of a new baby brother or sister. Sponsored by the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, this siblings' class will be held from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday in the second floor conference room of the medical center.

The class is taught by Kristy Burkett, R.N., who recommends that the "Big Kids" should attend during the mother's eighth month of pregnancy. She asks the children to bring a favorite doll or stuffed animal to the class.

Participation costs $7.50 per child or $10 per family. Since the class size is limited to 10, early pre-registration is advised. To register, call the MVRMC Education Department at 737-2900, weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Pre-registration is required. To pre-register or for more information, call the medical center at 324-4301.

gentleness with which people deal with other human beings.

"Truly great men and women are never terrifying," Elizabeth Goudge said.

"Their humility puts you at ease. If a very important person frightens you, he is not great; he only thinks he is."

Humility also attends the person who acknowledges he or she is of no greater worth or value than any other person on this earth.

Another story regarding Charles Sumner, a one-time senator from Massachusetts, illustrates the propensity of those who have received status to become self-important.

When approached by a woman who asked him to interest himself in the case of a person who needed some help, Sumner responded, "I'm sorry. I've become so busy I can no longer concern myself with individuals."

"Charles," said the woman, "that is quite remarkable. Even God hasn't reached that stage yet."

'There's a bologna in my carburetor'

It's time once again for Ask Mister Language Person, the award-winning columnist by the world's foremost leading word expert.

Our first grammar question comes from reader Martha Booth, who writes:

"I heard on NPR that President Clinton and Pope John Paul II met and exchanged a few words. Do you happen to know which ones they exchanged? And can you please tell me what is sometimes seen hanging off the bottom of the 'c' in the word 'ascade'?"

A. Scientists believe it is a parasite. As regards the word exchange: Clinton gave the pope a handsome matched set of "parameters," and in return received the traditional papal "Quod Sic Et Cetera Pluribus Per Annum."

Q. What does that mean?

A. "There's a bologna in my carburetor."

Q. What is the correct wording to use when responding to a formal invitation to dine at the Buckingham Palace with Queen Elizabeth?

A. The correct wording is: "Your Majesty is dined tooting that yours truly shall be honoured to put on the feed bag with Your Royal Highness."

Q. Please describe the photograph on the front page of the Oct. 6, 1993, issue of The Moosema Billboard ("Official Newspaper of Clayton County & Moosema, Farmersburg & Luana, Iowa").

Dave Barry Humor

A. Certainly. It shows two senior citizens using a knife to slice a large cheese at the annual Germanfest. Just below this photograph, in large letters, it says:

Q. No, you're not going to tell me.

A. Yes, it says: "CUTTING THE CHEESE."

Q. Please explain the statement: "I can't seem to find my car keys."

A. This statement means that the person can find his car keys, but he cannot seem to find them.

Q. Please review the basic purpose of the apostrophe.

A. The apostrophe is used primarily as a punctuation mark in certain Lesley Gore songs, such as "Judy's Turn to Cry," where the apostrophe and the "s" indicate that "Judy" is possessive, which is why she tried to steal Lesley Gore's boyfriend, "Johnny," away.

Q. What is the best verse in that song?

A. The one wherein Lesley saw Judy and Johnny kissing at a party, so, to make Johnny jealous, she (Lesley) kissed another guy, and then: "Johnny jumped up and he bit him 'Cause he still loved me, that's why."

Q. What is an attractive couple.

A. Yes.

Q. Speaking of song lyrics: In "Woolly Bully," by Sam the Sham and the Pharaohs, Sam the Sham sings: "Let's not be L-7s; come on and learn this dance." My question—which has been nagging me for YEARS—is this: Is "Sam the Sham" his real name?

A. No. His real name is "Howard A. Spitelman Jr. the Sham."

Q. What is the purpose of the hyphen?

A. The hyphen is used to connect consecutive nouns to their precipitate adjuncts, as we see in this example: "That Zsa-Zsa is a winner-head!"

Q. Please quote a sentence from an Aug. 12, 1993, Dayton Daily News report, sent in by Lou Coplis, concerning the rescue of a man who nearly drowned while attempting to swim across a river.

A. "Police said (the man) told them he had been playing a game that involved banging his head against a wall when he decided to swim across the river."

Q. What game is that?

A. Probably golf.

Q. According to Dale Stephens, what does the sign on the main road into Bolivar, W. Va., say?

A. It says: "WELCOME TO BOLIVAR PLEASE COME BACK."

Q. Did Stephens also relate an anecdote concerning his friend John Pharis?

A. Yes: One time Pharis saw his 3-year-old daughter picking her nose and then sticking her finger into her mouth. He told her, "You know, I don't think I'd want to put anything in my mouth that came out of my nose." And she said: "You should try it. It's good."

TODAY'S WRITING TIP: In writing an advertising slogan, always go with your strongest "selling point."

WRONG: "Tastes like good drool."

RIGHT: "Proud to be your Bud."

Couples 'living in sin' may have morals firmly in place

DEAR ABBY: This is in reply to "Old-Fashioned," who wrote about the "in-your-face immorality" of living together prior to marriage.

When I was 24, I became engaged to a wonderful young man named Gary. We started planning our wedding when I felt a small lump in my breast. I went immediately to my doctor, who sent me to an oncologist.

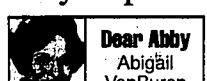

My worst fears were confirmed: It was breast cancer.

When I was sick from the chemotherapy, Gary stayed with me and slept on the floor beside my bed. He cooked what little food I could eat and held my hand when I vomited.

He cleaned my house and did my laundry. It soon became apparent that between driving back and forth to my house, caring for me and handling his job, poor Gary was exhausted, so I asked him to please move in with me. Believe me, there was no hanky-panky.

We are now happily married and my cancer is in remission. So, Abby, please tell "Old-Fashioned" that not all people who live together are immoral. And remember, "Judge not, that ye be not judged." (Matthew 7:1)

Manner of child-rearing defines a culture

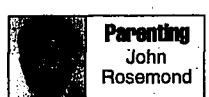

Paradigm shift: A radical, culture-wide change in the perception of and approach to a key issue, resulting in sweeping change in nearly all of that culture's institutions, including the family.

The decades immediately following World War II saw America undergo one of the most significant, far-reaching paradigm shifts in its history; what I term the psychologizing of childhood and child-rearing.

Prewar parents believed their utmost responsibility to be that of instilling children with the stuff of good citizenship, starting with respect for legitimate authority (and gradually becoming ever more encompassing).

The child who learned respect for others would eventually be able to develop self-respect, a concept that encompassed willingness to accept responsibility for one's own behavior.

Self-respect was something earned by virtue of aspiring to certain moral and ethical standards. The process, which required considerable time, effort, willingness to sacrifice and self-restraint on the part of the individual. When President Kennedy exhorted us to ask not what America could do for us, but what we could do for the common good, he was speaking from within the self-respect paradigm of child-rearing (citizen development), a paradigm that had defined our national spirit from the first signature on the Declaration of Independence onward.

Unfortunately, he was the last president to challenge us in such plain terms. By the late '60's, psychologists and people in related professions had persuaded America's parents that the brass ring of childhood was something they called "good self-esteem."

This nebulous psychic ether was bestowed on children, the "experts" told us, by parents who entered into democratic, eyeball-to-eyeball relationships with their children.

The experts went so far as to equate the idea that children should respect their parents with a suppres-sive, authoritarian style of child-rearing. All such old-fashioned notions, they said, kept children in one-down positions, positions that surely stunted their psychological growth.

The self-esteem paradigm implies that parents must pay more attention to children than children pay to parents. This all but guaranteed that children would not develop respect for parents (and, therefore, themselves). Furthermore, the acquisition of self-esteem does not require that the child accept certain moral or ethical standards. One consequence, in fact, of the self-esteem paradigm was that such standards—previously absolute—became relative (to the individual's "belief system.")

The propaganda of self-esteem turned the life of the child, as well as the life of the American family, upside down, inside out and backwards. And as the family goes, so goes the nation.

In the final analysis, a culture is defined by the manner in which its children are reared. If, as many (including myself) believe, America is in dire straits, it is largely because 30 years ago we arrived at a crossroads and took the road never traveled. This road, as it turns out, is a dead-end street.
