Vietnam turns over more remains

The Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam — Four days after the United States lifted the 19-year trade embargo against Vietnam, Hanoi is turning over today more remains of what are thought to be missing American servicemen.

U.S. officials will announce the number of remains returned after a ceremony at Noi-Bai International Airport.

President Clinton had made lifting the embargo contingent on Hanoi's cooperation in the fullest possible accounting of Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War.

U.S. veterans groups and families of MIAs had strongly opposed the end of the embargo, saying the United States would lose its leverage in forcing Vietnam to cooperate in accounting for the 2,238 American MIAs.

But the United States withheld some carrots, the biggest of which is the restoration of diplomatic ties, broken when Communist North Vietnam defeated U.S.-backed South Vietnam in April 1975.

The United States also did not immediately grant Vietnam "most favored nation" trade status, which would lower tariffs on Vietnamese imports to the United States and make them more competitive in the American market.

Vietnam is now pushing for diplomatic recognition. Just after Clinton announced the end of the economic sanctions, Deputy Foreign Minister Le Mai pledged Vietnam would continue cooperating in trying to resolve MIA cases.

Lt. Col John C. Cray, the U.S. Army officer who heads the MIA office in Hanoi, said the lifting of the embargo would help his mission.

"I believe that the Vietnamese cooperation is at a peak right now," he said. Vietnam and the United States will begin another major search operation Feb. 26 involving more than 100 American specialists.

The Vietnamese turned over 35 sets of remains to the United States in 1992 and 67 sets last year. Since the end of the war, Vietnam has returned 584 sets of remains, but thus far only 281 have been identified as Americans.

The remains being handed over today were either excavated by American specialists or turned over to Vietnamese authorities by villagers in December and January during the biggest joint search effort since the end of the war.

The operation was observed by top U.S. officials in what Western diplomats said was a move by the Clinton administration to set the stage for ending the embargo based on testimony from credible witnesses that Vietnam was cooperating.

They included Assistant Secretary of State Winston Lord, Sen. John Kerry and Adm. Charles R. Larson, commander of U.S. military forces in the Pacific and the highest-ranking officer to visit Vietnam since the end of the war. All reported that Vietnam was cooperating fully and not holding anything back.

Conservancy rehabilitates Silver Creek

By R.D. McAlpin

Times-News Correspondent

HAILEY — It is winter now at the Silver Creek Preserve.

Few visitors arrive at this place — a place the Nature Conservancy of Idaho considers its crowning achievement.

Inside the preserve's visitors' center, a small 1,500-sq-ft space heater adds little warmth as manager Paul Todd waits for wood in the small stove to catch and answers a string of telephone calls.

Home will be on tour - A2

In the winter, Todd will not be working outside along the creek among the 8,000 visitors who arrive at the preserve — about 10 miles south of Hailey — each summer.

Nor does his work include the conservancy's visitor outreach presentations and habitat restoration, or the trail and fence building that let visitors enjoy the creek but keep cattle out of the delicate riparian areas.

But with his back to the visitors' center's north-facing windows, ignoring momentarily their uncluttered view of a bald eagle gliding over the Wood River Valley, Todd tells "the secret" of the conservancy's success.

"We don't preach," says the thin-bearded biologist, dressed in a white T-shirt with "In Fish We Trust" emblazoned on its front.

"One of the things that really attracted me to this place and job was that I really believe that environmentalists can work in rural areas and with land owners. I see myself as their neighbor," he says. "There does not have to be conflict."

Extraordinary feats

The manager of the preserve doesn't look like a superman. But by most accounts, Todd and others with the conservancy have accomplished feats that are nothing less than extraordinary.

During the fiscal year from July 1992 to June 1993, the conservancy's Idaho office protected or helped to protect more than

R.D. McAlpin/The Times-News

Paul Todd manages the Silver Creek Preserve, a place the Nature Conservancy of Idaho considers its crowning achievement.

120,774 acres valued at more than $13.1 million. But it cost the conservancy only $363,400 to protect that land.

The conservancy began its work in 1951 with its stated mission "to preserve plants, animals and natural communities that represent the diversity of life on Earth by protecting the lands and water they need to survive."

It has protected thousands of acres of sensitive lands either by buying them or having others who support its cause buy them. Land negotiations often take years and include attorneys and land owners, as well as the occasional government agency or the neighboring landowners.

By 1992, the conservancy — with 655,000 members — managed a system of more than 1,300 nature sanctuaries in the United States.

Though altruism may be a good quality in business, a healthy reduction in income tax, as high as 30 percent to the seller of land as a charitable gift, has been key in helping the conservancy obtain conservation easements.

"Sometimes it just comes down to that," Todd says. "That's why people sell off their land for subdivision, because it's too expensive to keep. The tax reduction incentive can be crucial to the conservancy's plans."

The money incentive has been the backbone of the conservancy's success.

Liberals, lobbyists blast Clinton for budget cuts

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Liberal Democrats and lobbyists aimed fire at President Clinton on Sunday for cuts he will seek in his 1995 budget, as administration officials defended the $1.5 trillion blueprint on the eve of its release.

"I'm not satisfied with the budget," Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Mfume took special issue with Clinton's plans to whittle down spending for public housing and heating assistance, saying, "Those things are getting close to becoming what we call non-negotiable items."

Clinton's package, for the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1, will lack the dramatic tax increases and spending reductions the president sought a year ago in his first budget. That proposal paved the way for last summer's enactment of his near-$500 billion deficit-reduction plan.

But to meet the tight strictures imposed by last August's package — and pay for increases Clinton wants for scores of other programs — the budget will propose eliminating 115 small programs, and closing nearly 600 others at or below the amounts they were allowed for this year.

The proposed cuts would total $25 billion, said one administration official who spoke Sunday on condition of anonymity. Of that, $8 billion will be used to beef up favored programs such as job training and technology research, and the rest to contain a 1995 deficit the administration will project at $176.1 billion — the lowest level since 1989.

Word of the spending cuts has already angered many members of Congress, all of whom have favorite programs they furiously defend. Lawmakers will spend most of the year deciding which of the president's proposals to embrace and which to ignore.

Special interest groups are also wasting little time gearing up.

The American Public Transit Association warned Sunday that nearly seven in 10 mass transit systems would have to raise fares if Congress approves Clinton's proposal to cut operating assistance to commuter train and bus systems.

"This is the potential aftermath of an unfortunate budget decision," said association Executive Vice President Jack Gilstrap, whose group surveyed commuter systems across the country.

Clinton wants to cut the program by $200 million from its current $800-million level, government and industry officials have said. A program for helping local governments buy buses and other equipment would be increased instead.

Administration officials said cuts in those and other programs were needed to help reduce the deficit and to pay for increases in education, crime fighting, and other favored initiatives.

"The fact that we are now in an area where we've got to control government spending, it's a great opportunity to redirect the role of government," White House budget Director Leon Panetta said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

On NBC-TV with Mfume, Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen commented that getting the president's proposed cuts through Congress would not be easy.

"They couldn't do it before, and now we're talking about doing it now," Bentsen said. "Each of these has an interest group of course, and that's what you have to overcome."

The budget will claim that tens of billions of dollars can be saved over the next five years.

U.N. secretary-general urges NATO to approve air strikes

Los Angeles Times

Bosnians react - A7

WASHINGTON — U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali urged NATO on Sunday to approve air strikes on Serbian positions in Bosnia, hours after President Clinton sidestepped pressure to undertake military retaliation for the shelling that killed 68 people in a Sarajevo marketplace.

A senior U.N. official said Boutros-Ghali had sent a letter to Manfred Woerner, the secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, asking the NATO Council to approve "the launching of air strikes against artillery positions in and around Sarajevo, which are responsible for attacks on civilian targets."

There was no word on when the NATO Council, made up of the foreign ministers of the 16 member nations, would meet to consider the request.

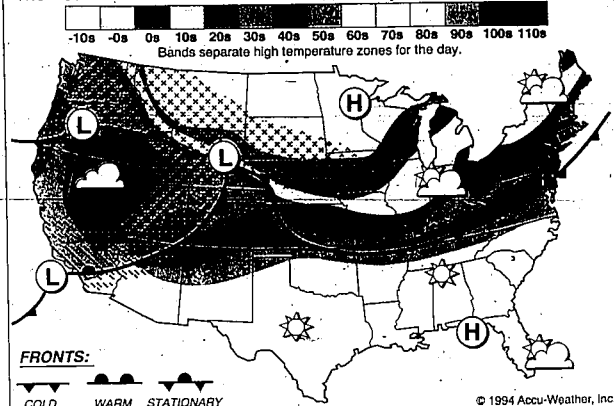

Clinton, who said the shelling on Saturday should spur the warring Muslims, Serbs and Croats to the peace table, cautioned that

Winter weather socks the West; cold blankets the North

The Associated Press

Wintry weather spread across the West on Sunday, bringing freezing temperatures to the north-central states and rain to the Pacific Coast.

Winter storm watches were posted for today from Washington state to Montana, and from California to Wyoming.

Blizzard conditions hit parts of western Montana on Sunday, with heavy snow and winds gusting up to 42 mph. Wind chill readings in North Dakota plunged as low as 60 degrees below zero early Sunday.

Temperatures dropped below zero from Montana through Minnesota and into Michigan's Upper Peninsula. Morning temperatures were generally below freezing from the Pacific Northwest across the Rocky Mountains and

Northern Utah and Nevada:

Utah - Cloudy and windy today with rain likely. South winds 20-30 mph with stronger gusts possible. Highs 45-50. Tonight windy and mild with rain likely, possibly mixed with snow late. Lows mid- to upper 30s. Tuesday breezy with periods of snow and turning much colder. Highs near 40.

Elko County - Cloudy and windy today with rain likely. South winds 20-30 mph with stronger gusts possible. Highs 45-50. Tonight windy and mild with rain likely, possibly mixed with snow late. Lows mid- to upper 30s. Tuesday breezy with periods of snow and turning much colder. Highs near 40.

Forecasts

The pleasant weather of the past few days is giving way to the arctic cold and snow. A cold front pushed south through the Panhandle Sunday and Sunday night as a storm front from the southwest moved in from the south. The two were expected to collide over Idaho Sunday night with the result being a return to winter weather.

A winter storm watch is in effect for central Idaho today, expanding into the higher elevations of eastern Idaho. The Panhandle is under a winter weather advisory for today. This storm will result in snow, with heavy accumulations possible, especially over south- and west-facing mountain slopes. Strong winds will create very low wind-chill factors.

The highest temperature in the state Sunday was 49 degrees at Burley, Hagerman, Malad and Twin Falls. Stanley reported the lowest at -24 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Sunday, the highest temperature was 86 degrees at Melbourne, Fla., and Ely, Minn., reported the lowest temperature at -31 degrees.

into the Northeast.

Rain fell along the central Pacific Coast. In California, rain triggered a rock and mud slide that blocked Highway 1 for about an hour in Suisun Bay, 15 miles north of San Francisco. Wet roads were blamed for a fatal crash on the San Francisco Bay Bridge.

A band of showers and scattered thunderstorms extended from southeastern Louisiana across northern Florida and southern Georgia in the afternoon.

Sunny skies prevailed from the middle Mississippi Valley to the mid-Atlantic Coast. Afternoon temperatures there were in the 40s and 50s.

In Florida and Texas, temperatures climbed into the 70s and 80s. The low temperature Sunday morning for the Lower 48 states was 23 below at Hibbing, Minn.

Conservancy to open home to tours

By R. D. McAlpin
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - The home of Ernest and Mary Hemingway may open for tours within one year.

The home was willed to The Nature Conservancy upon Mary Hemingway's death in 1986. It will be open for tours within one to two years, said Guy Bonniwell, state director of the conservancy.

The tours would be on a "limited basis" and would be conducted by the conservancy, Bonniwell said.

"We would retain ownership of the Hemingway house and put in a caretaker," he said. The conservancy would also maintain a small office in the home.

The conservancy moves into its new office within the next month - a building that formerly housed the Sun Valley Animal Center, which the conservancy bought for $275,000.

Bonniwell said the pressure to open the home to the public has been great over the years the conservancy used it as its state office.

"We had people from all over trying to get in here; writers, tourists," he said.

Several years ago, the Sun Valley

Ketchum Chamber of Commerce asked the conservancy about the possibility of opening the home for tours, a request to which the conservancy was not receptive.

More recently, Wendy Jacquet with the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce said there would be complaints from the neighbors about opening the Hemingway house for tours.

"People complain about that in a residential neighborhood. In Sun Valley we really respect the desire of the neighborhood in that regard. I certainly wouldn't want it on my cul-de-sac," she said.

Bonniwell said he has become concerned about the wear and tear that the conservancy activities and its growing staff may put on the home. But traffic or noise associated with the conservancy's office has not been a problem, he said.

"No one complained. They like us, and one of the reasons they like us is because we're conscientious. And that's one of the reasons we're leaving before it becomes a problem," he said.

Mary Hemingway gave the conservancy the home because she was so impressed with the work the organization had done in preserving Silver Creek.

This week Bonniwell spoke with Jack Hemingway about the house during a trip to New Mexico.

"He appreciated my concerns. He pretty much leaves it up to me," Bonniwell said.

In addition to the house, the conservancy received 14 acres along the Big Wood River within Ketchum's city limits.

The Hemingway house itself was built for Bob Topping, who after having his credit cut off by the post-World War II railroad management of Sun Valley, reportedly retaliated by building his own scaled-down version of the Sun Valley Lodge.

Ernest and Mary Hemingway bought the home and moved into it in 1959. Hemingway did not actually live in the home a full year before his suicide in 1961.

After his death, the house remained basically the same for years until it became the conservancy's state office.

Hemingway reportedly told a friend that the clear dry air of Ketchum made him feel "like the best of the old days," according to Jack Hemingway.

In the 1930s, he had worked on "For Whom the Bell Tolls" in Ketchum, as well as "A Moveable Feast" and "The Garden of Eden."

bone of the conservancy's strategy, even when it came to hiring staff. During the 1970s, conservancy president Pat Noonan hired more MBAs than biologists bringing a business ethic to the organization, the conservancy's state director Guy Bonniwell said.

Conservation training

Todd's first step toward preserve manager began before his master's degree in wildlife biology from the University of Montana or his stint teaching field ecology and wilderness studies at the University of California at Santa Cruz.

His real education in conservation began on the farm.

"It showed me a love of the land from the beginning," he says of those days back on the Michigan farm where he was raised. Managing Silver Creek was just the natural progression of that upbringing.

"A lot of what we do depends on how the other land owners treat the stream," he said. "It doesn't make a difference what we do if they are not helping."

A call to action

It was Jack Hemingway's call to action in 1975 that spurred the formation of the conservancy's Idaho office with protection of Silver Creek its first charge.

When the conservancy stepped in, Silver Creek's fish spawning areas were severely threatened. Cattle freely grazed too close to the water, plowed the land up to the water's edge. Marshes that had filtered sediment had been drained and replaced with irrigation canals and ditches.

By buying land outright and through purchasing conservation easements, the conservancy sought to protect the creek.

In the fall of 1988, Lee Norman, Idaho State University researcher, reported the creek that year added $2 million to the economies of the Wood River and Magic valleys. It is another argument the conservancy has successfully used to broaden the support for protecting Silver Creek.

Hemingway, son of the famed writer, had chaired the Idaho Fish and Game Commission for many years and had fished the area where the preserve's visitor center now sits. The conservancy raised the $500,000 needed to buy the 480 acres from the Sun Valley Co.

Over the years the conservancy has bought at least 16 conservation easements, which restrict development and activities on those stretches. It has spent $1.3 million on land purchases surrounding the creek.

The conservancy's primary strategy to rehabilitate Silver Creek was to stop sediment from entering the feeder streams through grazing agreements and conservation easements.

Now it has expanded its community outreach program with an EPA grant to create an educational program on aquatic ecology, water quality and conservation.

But the group's primary emphasis is still restoring the creek's tributaries and plant life and ensuring that it remains one of the best spots to land rainbow trout.

Though some have feared Silver Creek's brown trout were displacing rainbow, researchers Jack Griffith and Rick Wilkison of Idaho State University suggest that is not the case. The brown now outnumber the rainbow, but the latter's population has not declined.

Bosnia

NATO must grant its approval before any such air operations could begin.

Clinion held a rare Sunday meeting with senior members of his national security team. He said afterward that the failure of peace talks would reinforce a U.S. proposal to lift the embargo on the shipment of arms to the Bosnian Muslims.

Clinion's remarks made clear his aversion to using air power to silence the Serbian artillery, despite an assurance from Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., that there is "strong bipartisan support" in the Senate for such a course.

Calling on the president to take the lead in shaping an allied response to the attack, Dole said in an interview "what it cries out for is leadership - American leadership."

Responding with irritation to the pressure for air strikes, Clinion said: "It's very well for these members of Congress to say that - they don't have constituents on the ground."

Madeline Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said on CNN after the emergency meeting at the White House that "we are working at the highest level" with NATO allies on the question of conducting air strikes.

Under a U.N. Security Council resolution, Boutros-Ghali has the right to order strikes to protect Sarajevo's civilian population. But he said at a news conference last week that it was pointless for him to order air strikes unless the NATO Council agreed to carry them out.

In his letter to Woomer, dispatched Sunday night, he asked for that approval "as soon as possible," the U.N. source said.

NATO voted in August to provide air strikes on Serbian troops ringing Sarajevo if the United Nations requested them. NATO leaders toughened their stance at a summit last month, but had been waiting for Boutros-Ghali's request.

In recent weeks, Boutros-Ghali's aides have resented insinuations that he is the main stumbling block to the use of air power in Bosnia. With the letter, he was evidently trying to make clear his readiness to order strikes if the United States and other NATO members would carry them out.

In the aftermath of Saturday's attack and others that preceded it, U.S. officials have emphasized that one of the obstacles to carrying out air raids is determining who is responsible for the shelling.

The president asked Albright to accelerate the U.N. effort to determine responsibility for the shelling Saturday.

"Obviously, it seems highly likely that the Serbs are responsible," he said.

But U.S. officials have said that because the allied intelligence-gathering apparatus in Bosnia is so limited, it is difficult to tell which forces actually did the shelling on Saturday - Serb-backed artillery or Muslim or Croatian forces.

Budget deficit will widen without health reform

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen and White House budget Director Leon Panetta warned Sunday that without health-care reform the budget deficit will widen.

Bentsen, on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said that reduction of the U.S. deficit is much ahead of projections, but added that health-care reform is necessary to continue to cut the gap.

Panetta, on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," said plans to shrink the deficit "will mean nothing if we don't control costs in health care."

If President Clinton's health-care reform plan is passed as it is written, Bentsen said he is "confident" it will bring down the deficit.

Some "modest progress" already has been made in lowering health-care costs, he said, but "substantially more" progress is needed.

Without reform, "we will see that deficit continue to go up, and that is unsustainable. We can't accept that," Bentsen said.

Panetta said the U.S. budget deficit is projected at about $176 billion for fiscal year 1995, $126 billion below previous projections of $302 billion.

Most of that extra cut is due to Clinton's deficit-reduction package passed by Congress last year, he said. About $83 billion come from cuts in spending and increases in revenues, and about $22 billion are the result of economic recovery, primarily lower interest rates.

Clinton's fiscal 1995 budget — scheduled for release today — will eliminate about 115 programs and cut spending about $3.2 billion. Panetta said he believes Congress will agree to cut many of those targeted programs.

Panetta said boosting funding for education, crime and technology are "priorities." He added that Congress cannot continue to "rubber stamp" existing programs and must target spending more narrowly.

Bentsen and Panetta both said that with bipartisan support, health-care reform will be approved by Congress. But Bentsen admitted that some changes will have to be made in Clinton's plan.

In addition, Bentsen implied that members of three major business groups that oppose Clinton's health-reform plan are thinking of themselves, not what is best for the country.

The National Association of Manufacturers Saturday became the third big group within a week to come out against the Clinton plan. The Business Roundtable and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce voted to oppose the plan earlier last week.

Companies' chief executives must look at what is the cheapest deal for them, what takes care of their companies best, Bentsen said.

"They don't have the responsibility that I have or that public officials have to look to the entire population of the country to see what is best for them," he said.

3% of released defendants arrested while awaiting trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three percent of federal defendants released while awaiting felony trials are arrested again for a new crime, the Justice Department said Sunday.

Half of those new crimes are felonies, and half are lesser offenses, according to a study by the Bureau of Justice Statistics. The bureau looked at 44,113 defendants interviewed by federal pretrial service agencies during 1990 and data from state felony courts.

Before trial, federal courts release 43 percent of defendants charged with a violent offense. State courts let 63 percent of those charged with violence go free until trial.

The federal courts release a higher percentage of property-crime defendants, 82 percent, than do state courts, 67 percent. Federal defendants were much less likely to be arrested again during pretrial release than state defendants, 3 percent compared to 18 percent.

'Citizen Kane' star Cotten dies at 88

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joseph Cotten, the polished Virginian actor who became a star with "Citizen Kane" and went on to play opposite Marilyn Monroe, Bette Davis, Ingrid Bergman and others, died Sunday of pneumonia. He was 88.

Cotten died at his suburban Westwood home at 6:30 a.m., with his wife, actress Patricia Medina, at his bedside, said Cotten's business manager and attorney, Hugh Robertson. He had been ill for several months, Robertson said.

He had a massive stroke in 1981 and lost his voice entirely. Speech therapy allowed him to talk again, but his acting career was over.

Cotten's smooth, low-key personality made him an ideal leading man for Hollywood's most famous actresses, and his versatility allowed him to play both villains ("Shadow of a Doubt") and heroes ("The Third Man"). He came to films via Orson Welles' Mercury Theater and appeared in Welles' first three movies: "Citizen Kane," "The Magnificent Ambersons" and "Journey into Fear."

Cotten

Cotten played the cynical reporter in "Citizen Kane" and "The Third Man." He also played the role of the "Man in the White Suit" in the 1936 film "The Great Dictator" with Charlie Chaplin. Cotten signed a contract with David O. Selznick, then riding the success of "Gone With the Wind."

Selznick cast Cotten in his own films: "Since You Went Away" (Claudette Colbert, Jennifer Jones), "I'll Be Seeing You" (Ginger Rogers), "Duel in the Sun" (Gregory Peck, Jennifer Jones) and "The Third Man" (Welles). The producer also profited by lending Cotten to other studios. Those films included "Gaslight" (Ingrid Bergman), "Love Letters" (Joan Fontaine), "The Farmer's Daughter" (Loretta Young), "Beyond the Forest" (Bette Davis) and "Niagara" (Marilyn Monroe).

Revised SAT to measure critical thinking abilities

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The venerable SAT is getting its first major overhaul in two decades. It will allow use of calculators and better test critical thinking skills.

But critics say the revisions to the assessment test are only cosmetic and don't address what they see as an underlying bias against women and minorities.

"It's an attempt to make the SAT look like it will measure higher-order thinking skills," said Cynthia Schuman, head of the National Center for Fair and Open Testing. "You really can't measure higher-order thinking skills in questions answered in one minute or less, or when students can't show their work or do anything except choose from preselected possibilities."

The Scholastic Aptitude Test first appeared in 1926. It is used by most U.S. colleges to evaluate potential students. It consists of two sections, one measuring verbal abilities and one measuring mathematical skills. Each section is worth 200 to 800 points.

High school students will first see the new version March 19. More than 1 million high school students a year take the SAT.

Officials from the Princeton-based Educational Testing Service, which administers the test, say its first major overhaul to the SAT since 1974. "It's really a test requiring students to think," said Anne Buckley of the College Board.

The College Board, a group of colleges, helped develop the test.

Satellite release fails again

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — For the second day in a row, NASA failed to release a science satellite from space shuttle Discovery on Sunday and tried to salvage what little it could from the experiment.

Ground controllers raced against the clock to try to resolve the latest satellite problem: a malfunctioning guidance system. NASA said today would be its last opportunity to deploy the Wake Shield Facility, one of the primary purposes of the shuttle mission.

The Wake Shield was supposed to fly free of the shuttle for two days so scientists could try to grow semiconductor films in the ultra-clean wake created by the saucer-shaped craft. There would be time for only one day of free flight if deployed today.

As Discovery whizzed around Earth with the Wake Shield propped on the end of the shuttle crane, Mission Control struggled to pinpoint the problem with the satellite's horizon sensor. The infrared sensor is supposed to help guide the satellite when it flies.

Alex Ignatiev, the project's chief researcher, said managers had gone out of their way to install a guidance system with a strong track record. Similar systems have flown on 50 other spacecraft without error, he said.

"There are many snakes out there. This is one we didn't expect," he said.

Budget

years if Congress enacts Clinton's plan to revamp health care. Part of the savings will come from a previously announced plan to increase the cigarette tax.

Other details of Clinton's budget emerged Sunday. According to an administration official, the president will propose:

- $69 million for research on alternative fuel vehicles, $25 million more than this year.

- A reduction in the program that helps the poor pay heating bills from $1.4 billion this year to $730 million in 1995.

- $100 million over the next two years to build a new railroad terminal to replace Pennsylvania Station in Manhattan, in the home state of Senate Finance Committee Chairman Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

- A $196 million cut in Agriculture Department flood-prevention and watershed programs.

Lincoln County official to retire as assessor

SHOSHONE – Imogene Helsley, Lincoln County's assessor for the past 15 years, says her 16th year as assessor will be her last.

Helsley has announced that she will not be seeking re-election this November.

Helsley said Friday she wanted to announce early to let anyone interested in running know that the position will be open.

"I think it's about time to retire," she said.

Helsley served as chief deputy clerk for 15 years before becoming the county assessor in 1979.

Citizen's advisory group on INEL seeks board members

IDAHO FALLS – Anyone interested in operations at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls is encouraged to join a citizen's advisory board now being formed.

"The time is right to begin a new era of public involvement," said a press release on the subject.

A 15-member board is being formed and qualified people are being sought. The board will provide recommendations to the site manager of the INEL and will strive to give people affected by INEL decisions a greater voice in how such decisions are made.

For more information, call the INEL Oversight Program at 1-800-232-4635. The advisory board's selection panel can be reached at Advanced Sciences, Inc., 477 N. Shoup, Suite 107, Idaho Falls, Idaho, 83402.

Shoshone BLM manager takes over Burley office for a while SHOSHONE – Mary Gaylord, district manager of the Bureau of Land Management's Shoshone office since 1991, will also assume the same duties in the Burley District on an interim basis. No time limit has been specified for the interim appointment.

She will be filling-in for former Burley District Manager Gerald Quinn, who recently retired from the BLM after 35 years of service.

Gaylord was appointed to the new position by BLM State Director Delmar Vail, who said a single manager for both offices could help development of a management plan for the Upper Snake River ecosystem.

Vail stressed that the BLM's Burley and Shoshone districts are not being consolidated.

A Michigan native, Gaylord began her federal career 30-years ago as a seasonal employee at Crater Lake National Park. In addition to the BLM, she has worked for the National Park Service, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the U.S. Forest Service.

She earned a natural resources degree from the University of Michigan in 1965.

As industrial park fills, business leaders look for place to grow

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – With a Southern California manufacturing company coming to town, local leaders are asking: What's next?

Construction should begin in March on a 80,000-square-foot factory for Seastrom Manufacturing Co. Inc. The plant will use 10 acres of land in the Twin Falls Industrial Park, and that's some of the last remaining land in the industrial park.

One reason Twin Falls was able to get Seastrom was because industrial land with utilities was available and waiting. Seastrom will buy it and create about 50 local jobs with it.

The industrial park began 10 years ago with 22 vacant acres; later it had 39 acres free. Now, only eight acres open remain in the industrial park, which is owned by the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Magic Valley Growth

Chamber Executive Vice President Kent Just said he's working on another sale now, and by next week only five acres may be left.

Meanwhile, Just and Twin Falls Economic Development Director Dave McAlindin say they still get inquiries from companies that are considering moving here. But Twin Falls is running out of suitable vacant land and buildings to accommodate new companies.

"Twin Falls has always been plagued by not having enough buildings for companies to move into," said Steve Kohnstopp, president of Magic Valley Realty.

The chamber board is negotiating to hire the planning firm of Tom Hudson and Ron Jellico to take an inventory of available commercial land and buildings in the Twin Falls area. Hudson and Jellico could finish that report in about four months. Then the chamber board of directors would decide whether to develop a new industrial park.

The planners are also working with the city on redeveloping the Old Town area.

"Right now, Twin Falls needs to look strategically at what kinds of industry it wants and where it wants that industry placed," Hudson said.

Even with the Seastrom sale, the chamber expects to lose some money on its investment in the industrial park, Just said. But the chamber's not upset.

"We're not here to sell land. We're here to create jobs," Just said.

The chamber made a profit on its first investment.

PSI, Dispose-All compete for Twin Falls trash deal

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – A private garbage hauler from Burley is competing with the Magic Valley's largest trash hauler for the city's commercial garbage contract.

The City Council will decide between Dispose-All, Magic Valley Trust and PSI Waste Systems Inc., the two applicants for independent garbage collection contractors' licenses.

The council meeting begins at 6 p.m. at City Hall and is open to the public. All city residential garbage service is handled under a separate contract with PSI, according to a city report.

The PSI application offers a monthly rate of $53 for three yards of service. Dispose-All would charge $32 per week for the three-yard service.

The public will have another opportunity Monday to comment on the Stoneybrook development along the south side of Pole Line Road East.

Zoning changes on about 40 acres of Stoneybrook already have been approved that will allow homes to be built north and east of where Locust Street North dead-ends.

But another 80 acres that Stoneybrook wants for mixed commercial and residential use has been stalled by concerns from neighboring residents and questions about the nature and scope of commercial development across from the Magic Valley Mall.

When completed, development would require the extension of Locust Street North to Pole Line Road East. The intersection of Madonna Street North and Pole Line would be replaced by a four-way intersection at Pole Line and Bridgeview Boulevard.

Also on the council agenda is an agreement with consultant Lee Nellis to develop a master plan for the Snake River Canyon.

The council approved Nellis's proposed outline for such a plan at its Jan. 24 meeting. Nellis would be paid $18,640 over a five-month period while he determines land ownership along the rim, studies the feasibility for rim area parks, and develops a canyon rim zoning district, according to a copy of the agreement.

The plan also would include citizen participation through the creation of a canyon rim advisory group that could propose land acquisition policies and regulatory revisions.

Ambulance district won't go to voters

By Mychel Matthews Goodman
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON – A petition drive that gathered more than 1,700 signatures may have been for naught.

Petitioners were hoping to get an initiative placed on the ballot in May's primary election, proposing the withdrawal of eastern Jerome County from the county-wide ambulance taxing district.

But Jerome County clerk Cheryl Watts notified petition organizer Teresa Rust last week that the petition will not be accepted by the county, and that the initiative will not be on the ballot.

Dissatisfied with the way county commissioners have operated the emergency medical services since taking control three years ago, a group from the Eden and Hazelton area is trying to regain control from the commissioners.

The group was advised by former Attorney General Jim Jones, who is representing Valley Quick Response Ambulance in a related matter, that an initiative petition is the proper course of action.

But Jerome County Prosecuting Attorney John Horgan advised Watts not to accept the petition as the "initiative" proposes to circumvent the process set out in the Idaho Code, according to a Feb. 3 letter from Horgan to Watts.

According to Horgan, the initiative process is used by citizens to propose new laws. The group wishes to amend an existing law, not create a new one, Horgan has said.

State law puts the responsibility of providing emergency services in the hands of the county commissioners, said Dr. Gainer, chief of the State Emergency Medical Services. A public election is not needed to form an ambulance district – unlike highway, fire or school districts, she said.

The ambulance district was created by resolution of the county commissioners in 1991.

When the ambulance district was created, it was to be a temporary measure.

In politics, little things can mean a lot

Ever since Watergate, journalists raised on the maxim "Follow the money trail" have scoured campaign-finance reports for clues as to how much support a candidate has and, just as important, where that support is coming from.

But journalists tend to concentrate on the big contributions, especially if they come from PACs, corporations or unions. While the big donations may suggest who supports a candidate, the small donations – more specifically, the number of small donations – is a better guide to how viable the campaign is.

On that basis, the Idaho Citizens Alliance and the main group opposing its anti-gay rights initiative appear to be fairly evenly matched.

Drew DeSilver On politics

Last week, the ICA reported raising close to $83,500 in 1993, with more than $60,000 coming from founder Kelly Walton's contracting business. The Don't Sign On campaign reported raising $11,225 last year, with only one donor over $1,000.

That's a pretty big disparity. But if you subtract Walton's own contributions and a Boise polling firm's $4,000-in-kind donation, you find that individuals gave the ICA $18,748 – not much more than Don't Sign On's total contributions.

In Idaho, contributions of $50 must be itemized, while those under $50 can be reported in one lump sum. According to the campaign-finance reports, 257 people gave the ICA $4,572 in unitemized donations, while 538 people gave Don't Sign On $4,403 in small donations.

ICA has 81 itemized donors, compared with 47 for Don't Sign On.

Obviously, neither group is raising buckets of cash, but the may be because the real campaign has yet to begin. Walton said he didn't put much effort into fundraising last year, and Don't Sign On is concentrating on keeping the ICA's petition off November's ballot.

Should the initiative get on the ballot, however, look for an explosion in money raised and money spent.

If they do start fund-raising in earnest, both groups will have large contributor pools to tap from. And at the beginning of a campaign, it's far better to have 100 people each giving you $25 than one person giving you $2,500.

Big donors are less likely to cough up more dough later in the campaign, when you really need it. They're also more likely to be politically jaded, and avoid putting too much capital (emotional or financial) into your campaign.

But small donors can be approached in a more personal way.

Mountain Home man killed

The Times-News

MOUNTAIN HOME — One Mountain Home resident was killed and another seriously injured Saturday night when their car ran off the road and rolled into the desert about 10 miles east of Glenn's Ferry, the Elmore County Sheriff's Department reported.

The accident was reported at 9:30 p.m. near milepost 131 on Interstate-84. Alcohol was involved, the sheriff's department said.

According to the department, Karen Renee Thomas was driving west on I-84 when she ran off the right side of the road, veered back onto the roadway, overcorrected and rolled her vehicle off the road. Thomas, who was wearing a safety belt, was trapped inside the vehicle and had to be cut free from the wreckage. She was taken to the Elmore Medical Center in Mountain Home, then flown to a hospital in Boise. The sheriff's department described her condition as serious, but stable.

Passenger Ron Kearby, who was not wearing a safety belt, was thrown clear of the vehicle. He was taken to Gooding, where he was pronounced dead.

al interests as more county residents move outside the city limits?

Planning commission member Jim Barker of Buhl said he favors "clustering of houses" as a way to retain open spaces of county farmland.

"Do you want to drive from Castleford to Murtaugh and see a house every quarter-mile?" Barker asked Thursday.

Clustering that same number of homes, though, would focus more traffic on main collector streets, he said. Grouping homes together also would increase the amount of open space between subdivisions, he said.

Whatever the answer, the planners and the county commissioners agree that the county's comprehensive plan — amended most recently in July 1978 — needs to be updated.

"The reason it hasn't been done is that we don't have the money," County Commissioner Jim Fraley said Friday.

Phipps estimated the cost of a new comprehensive plan at anywhere between $20,000 and $80,000. Planners tried unsuccessfully to convince the commissioners to invest in a new plan last year, Phipps said.

Next year, the county will try to budget for an updated plan, Fraley said. "That's our goal."

The 1978 comprehensive plan, referring to rapid growth during the mid-1970s, warns against "leapfrog" and sprawling types of development. The county should encourage growth in areas contiguous to existing urban communities, according to the 1978 plan.

"Development in the county today may be part of a city tomorrow," the plan reads.

Those concerns have returned to county planning 16 years later. "We try to direct the growth. It's kind of hard to do," Fraley said. "You're not going to stop it."

Meanwhile, the planning commission has added two new members: R. Erick Mikesell of Twin Falls and Don Maier of Kimberly.

Phipps said Friday that the county still hopes to appoint one or two additional members to the commission.

Wendell Action Team leaders advocate growth

By Steve Kochler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The key to solving growth issues in Wendell is improving the city's infrastructure, officials say.

"If you put water and sewer in all parts of town and both freeway exits, you won't have to worry about another thing on that list. I guarantee it," said Wendell Action Team Chairman Tom Ambrose. "There'll be a motel. There'll be RV parks. There will be all kinds of things if you've got water and sewer. You'll have a hundred new houses," he said during a discussion with state Department of Commerce officials last week.

That list includes bringing the city hall and library into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, expansion of established businesses, and start-up of new ones.

"We need a new city hall and library," Ambrose said.

The Wendell Action Team is a local group working on Gen. Community status for Wendell.

"If the town has infrastructure, business will fill it up," team Secretary Warren Scholtz said.

Harold Simerly of Simerly's General Store said tourism "could be the biggest strength we've got out there. There's millions of tourists flying right by our doorstep."

Tourists wouldn't stop without a reason, Simerly said, hence the importance of the motel, a business that would need water and sewer service.

"There's no point in promoting tourism if you don't want economic expansion," said Bob Fort of the Department of Commerce. "I think you guys are in an excellent position. You don't have to do a darn thing if you don't want to."

The next Wendell Action Team meeting will be from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Feb. 23 at a location to be announced. The public is encouraged to attend and express their views on Wendell's growth.

again and again. Most regular folks are pretty reluctant to give their hard-earned dollars to politicians, so when they do it means they really believe in you. Not only are they more likely to contribute again when you ask, they're more likely to tell their friends and neighbors about you and try to get them involved.

That kind of support is critical, especially for grass-roots campaigns.

Both campaigns also have some problems they'll need to overcome:

- The ICA obviously can't continue to rely on Walton for its major source of income. It will need to show it can raise enough money from individuals to sustain a grueling 10-month-long campaign.
- Don't Sign On needs to develop more support outside Boise. Nearly all its itemized contributors are from the capital city, while the ICA's donors are spread out over the county.

Also, the Don't Sign On contributors generally gave less than the ICA's donors. This isn't that big a deal now, but it could hinder the group's efforts when — and if — the campaign heats up.

operated in the area since 1976.

In August 1993, the county broke its contract with Valley Quick Response, and the unit lost its state license.

Commissioner Don Petersen of Eden said in August that the county could be best served by a unified system. Since the quick response unit is a separate entity from the county emergency medical service, problems with accountability had occurred, he said.

The quick response unit is now suing Jerome County for breach of contract in order to get its license back. And in order for the unit to op-

According to Horgan, the 1991 resolution that created the district, by law, cannot be amended or rejected by a petition initiative. But Horgan did not offer the petitioners an alternative plan.

The group still insists there must be some way for the voters to have their say.

"This is not over," Rust said Saturday. The next step is to have Watts' denial of the petition challenged in district court, Rust said.

McAlindin also said Jerome's industrial parks aren't competing with Twin Falls for companies but may discourage further industrial development on the south side of the Snake River.

McAlindin said he likes the idea of Ketchum developer Jim Goldmann, who is asking for an exclu-

End juvenile crime; rebuild families, communities, schools

Kids who are killers got our attention this month in Idaho.

An 18-year-old has been charged in connection with the stabbing death of a 24-year-old Ammon man after a fight that is believed to have involved a number of juveniles.

A New Plymouth police officer was shot to death. The suspect is 14. The boy was in a car believed to be stolen with two other youths, 14 and 15. The same day, police in Nevada arrested a 12-year-old, Rogerson boy accused of killing his father. He, also, is believed to have accomplices; an 11-year-old boy and a 15-year-old girl were arrested in the victim's car.

What's going on here? Is this going to get worse, or can we do something about it? There is a feeling of helplessness; a despair about things getting worse everywhere and that Idaho is destined for the same fate.

But there is a lot citizens can do. However, a legislative hearing in Boise recently revealed we're doing very little about juvenile justice.

Idaho handles juvenile offenders in an unruly mix of state, county, local and school jurisdictions, several speakers told a House committee. "Idaho doesn't have a juvenile justice system, just a county-by-county hodgepodge of possibilities with the state out there somewhere," Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Killean said. In his county, juveniles wait about 200 days before their cases are handled.

Obviously, there needs to be better coordination among agencies and a battle plan that is consistent statewide. There are not enough places to put violent and repeat offenders. Many are looking at "boot camps," that will offer a disciplined environment short of formal detention like St. Anthony's Youth Services Center.

A boot camp could work well as long as it includes — along with hard work — individual and family counseling, drug and alcohol treatment and educational opportunities.

Programs that discourage and heavily penalize use of drugs and guns ought to be expanded. Perhaps the best anti-drug program today, Drug Awareness Resistance Education, is threatened with a lack of funding, and Attorney General Larry Echols is trying to get the state larry on track. Two years ago, $500,000 was earmarked for DARE; last year, it was half that; and this year, not a cent is allocated. Federal funding for the program is declining as well.

In Idaho Falls, a juvenile justice committee has been formed and is exploring not just detention but sentencing alternatives and crime prevention. Local programs like School District 91's Challenger Junior High, the Salvation Army's weekend Community Center program and Bush Elementary's after-school basketball games need to be expanded and copied. The approach to all of these programs, as well as DARE, is crime prevention. That's far more effective and cheaper than responding to crime after the fact.

Indeed, perhaps the greatest hope for crime-free youths and neighborhoods is within the community. We need a "Neighborhood Watch" not just to watch for criminals but to watch over and protect the neighborhood's young people.

Neighborhoods aren't what they used to be. Evenings used to be spent outside visiting on the porch or over the fence. Now, automobiles take us away and TV sets keep us inside. Is it too idealistic to hope for the return of a neighborhood where people get to really know each other and take personal responsibility for the well-being of one another, particularly the young people? Maybe 14-year-old Billy won't feel quite so alone or desperate when things aren't going well at home because he knows there are plenty of listening ears down the block.

In his State of the Union address, President Clinton made an emotional appeal for a renewal of community, neighborhood, and most important, family.

... We have seen a stunning and simultaneous breakdown of community, family and work, the heart and soul of civilized society. We can't renew our country when children are having children and the fathers walk away as if the kids don't amount to anything. I am telling you, we have got to stop pointing our fingers at these kids who have no future and reach our hands out to them."

We can build all the juvenile detention facilities we want, but we'll just keep filling them up if we don't patch up institutions the president says are cracking: family, community, school. That's the only long-term solution to juvenile crime.

Gestapo techniques not used against Arthurs

We are responding to letters in December by David and Ruth Arthurs. They complained about how he was being treated by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Normally, we consider court judgments as the ending point for violations of Fish and Game law. Two things prevent us from doing that in this situation. First, Dr. Arthurs has, in essence, "appealed" his convictions in the newspaper. Second, he has made a public complaint against two Fish and Game officers.

Fish and Game policy requires us to investigate all complaints against employees. It further states we will respond to that complaint in the format in which it was lodged. The complaint was made in the newspaper; thus, we are responding in the newspaper.

We have reviewed all germane records and find no support for Dr. Arthurs' contention that Gestapo techniques or attitudes were used by Officers Rich Holman and Don Stucker.

Dr. Arthurs was contacted in the field the first time when we responded to a call to our office regarding someone shooting geese in a closed area. The second contact was made when the officers were on "routine patrol." He was not even the subject of a special, focused investigation when the field contacts were made. In fact, he was in different vehicles when the field contacts were made, so the second time, they didn't even know who was involved until they got close enough to recognize him.

The other reason we are responding is that there are some significant errors and omissions in how the Arthurs portray, present and understand the court judgments. Therefore, we have reviewed those court records and present the following summary of them to clarify the issue.

On Dec. 23, 1991, a report was received at the Jerome Fish and Game Office that two individuals were shooting geese in the goose closed near Box Canyon. Officer Holman arrived first at the scene and observed two men later identified as Dr. David Arthurs and another man from Filer in a red kayak with an electric motor.

The witness reported seeing the two men shoot geese from the canyon rim and then walk down to the river (picking up the geese on the way) to get in a red kayak. Officer Holman observed the men in the kayak "power" toward a widgown duck and kill it near Blue Heart Springs. Officer Stucker then contacted the two men on the river and the following facts were ascertained:

- The two men had four Canada geese and three ducks in possession.
- Both men admitted killing the geese from the canyon rim (within the closed area).
- Officer Holman observed one duck killed unlawfully (under motor power).
- Officer Holman found and collected a recently fired shotgun casing at the spot where the witness had seen them shooting at the geese.

- The witness agreed to testify in court.
- Officer Holman had contacted Dr. Arthurs about three weeks earlier and asked him if he needed help understanding the goose closure boundaries. Dr. Arthurs refused assistance. Dr. Arthurs admitted remembering this contact.
- Dr. Arthurs admitted "forgetting" to shut his motor off when the second man killed the widgown.

Both men were cited for violations in Gooding County and released. Dr. Arthurs was also written a warning for having an unsigned waterfowl stamp.

The second man appeared in court on Jan. 28, 1992, and was fined $90 total and one-year license revocation for two charges. Dr. Arthurs agreed to plead guilty to the goose charge in Jerome County if the power boat charge was dropped. The power boat charge was dismissed and then Dr. Arthurs reneged and pleaded not guilty in Gooding County to the goose charge.

Before his trial, Dr. Arthurs then decided to plead guilty if his license revocation was delayed until after October 1992 so that he could participate in a big horn sheep hunt (he had drawn a permit). The state agreed on the condition the revocation would be for 13 months, not 12.

Dr. Arthurs was sentenced on Oct. 13, 1992, to a withheld judgment and 15 months' probation, to pay a $50 penalty and his hunting privileges were revoked for 13 months. Court tapes confirm that Judge Cushman specifically told Dr. Arthurs his hunting privileges were suspended for 13 months effective "today."

On Dec. 20, 1992, while on routine patrol, Officer Holman and Officer Greg Wooten contacted Dr. Arthurs near Upper Salmon Dam. Dr. Arthurs had been hunting ducks and admitted having "too many" ducks in possession (seven, including four mallards; limit is four ducks with three mallards but only one mallard then allowed).

Dr. Arthurs was cited for possession of unlawfully taken ducks and for hunting while his license was revoked.

On July 19, 1993, Dr. Arthurs pleaded guilty to both charges and received a $75 fine and one-year license suspension for the possession charge and $100 and 13 months' suspension for the hunting-while-revoked charge, which meant he would be unable to hunt or purchase a license from Oct. 13, 1992, until Dec. 13, 1995. He also received five days in jail suspended and 40 hours community service to be completed by Jan. 1, 1994.

On Jan. 4, 1993, Dr. Arthurs purchased a combination license in violation of his revocation sentence.

On Sept. 9, 1993, Dr. Arthurs pleaded guilty to purchasing a license while revoked and was sentenced to 24 months' probation, six months in jail suspended, $1,000 fine and another 12 months' revocation to run consecutive to the July 19 revocation.

By our figuring, Dr. Arthurs is not able to legally hunt or purchase a hunting license until at least Aug. 19, 1996.

Make government responsive

To the governor, congressmen and women, U.S. senators and representatives and state senators and representatives:

The other day, I was examining the tax-withholding figures on my paycheck stub and observed a curious thing. It appears that the federal withholding is nearly twice as large as the state withholding.

Now, I might say you folks a tentative deal. I might be willing to pay twice the state income tax in exchange for repealing the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution as per Article 5 of the Constitution.

You could then afford to pay the congressmen and women, the U.S. senators and representatives and the state militia from state funds rather than from federal funds. This would then remove the current conflict of interest of the above parties which is biased toward the federal government due to the fact that the above parties are paid from federal funds.

This course of action would then make the government more responsive to the citizens because it is easier to protest policy to a Legislature 150 miles away than one 1,500 miles away. Let us return the federal government to what it was originally intended for — a coordinating body among the several states. This is why we have a president instead of a king. The founding fathers fully understood when they drafted the U.S. Constitution and rejected a federal income tax.

Act responsibly to keep hunting

In response to Mr. Huntington's letter to The Times-News on Jan. 27, you left out the fact that you soon learned a very costly but valuable lesson. If you hunt close to a hunt boundary, you better know where you are. Maps in Idaho's regulations are vague at best, but the hunt descriptions are better. Many sporting goods stores have very good maps of most, if not all, hunting areas. With a little effort and about $5, he could have had a good map and a better hunting experience.

We can no longer hunt on the sidelines and think our hunting rights are safe. We must be willing to spend time to support hunting, not just in September and October, but 12 months out of the year. Get involved in organizations that are involved in wildlife management as well as hunting issues. When we are asked to voice our opinion, we should do so but only in a positive way. Too many times while attending public meetings, one or two people voice their opinion then spend the rest of the time interrupting others who have a different opinion or just bad-mouthing others.

I am not talking about much time each month — maybe an hour or two — a few dollars in membership dues and maybe a weekend or two each year helping the Fish and Game, Forest Service or the Bureau of Land Management on any projects they may have.

As hunters, we owe it to our children to act responsibly at all times, but especially when in the field. They may or may not hunt because of our actions. If we and our children are to keep our privilege to hunt, we had better start acting more responsibly.

Is your name on petition?

Hunters and non-hunters, beware! Your name may be on the petition to oust Wildlife Commissioner Wes Rose and Director of Fish and Game Jerry Conley without your knowledge. My wife and I recently found our names were put on the petition without our knowledge or consent.

How valid can the petition that speaks for sportsmen be when only about 25 percent of those signing purchased hunting licenses and at least eight from the Jerome area list had no knowledge of their names being submitted? The whole "Sportsmen for a Better Idaho" agenda may be in question if this practice is its mode of operation.

True sportsmen must be cautious of underlying unknown factors before diving into such a cause that may end up losing privileges and/or opportunities that exist today. If you have any reason to suspect your name is on the petition without your knowledge, take the time to find out through the local or state offices of Fish and Game.

Gripping won't do any good

For several months now I have read with increasing disgust most of the articles condemning the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. It has become even more popular than Health and Welfare bashing. My main problem is the negative approach to solving whatever they feel the issue is. They want someone fired (who they don't know) or a policy changed (about which they are not technically qualified to comment) and they tend to portray all Fish and Game employees as bad guys. In short, they are just griping.

I am very pleased to experience the hunting and fishing privileges I have in Idaho and am willing to do whatever is necessary to preserve them. I am old enough to know that griping will do nothing but destroy and can only lead to worse hunting and fishing opportunities. Only a fool would not admit that we have some wildlife problems, but to sit around the coffee shops griping is certainly not helpful.

As an alternative, I suggest the following:

- Join a group of outdoorsmen dedicated to whatever aspect of hunting you are interested in. A group voice is more effective than yours alone.

- Focus on the positive in your hunting experiences. In any group of people, there are always a few jerks. The Fish and Game group is no different and has its share. However, concentrating on that aspect will only tend to create jerky qualities in yourself. In 42 years of hunting in five states, I have met one jerk and perhaps a hundred helpful, sensitive Fish and Game employees. Should I focus on that one jerk?

- Call your local Fish and Game office and ask how you can help. Can I be a volunteer?

Can I become a reservist? Can I help political-ly?

- Attend all public meetings held by the Fish and Game and present your thoughts to it. It will be a lot more effective than griping in a coffee klatch.

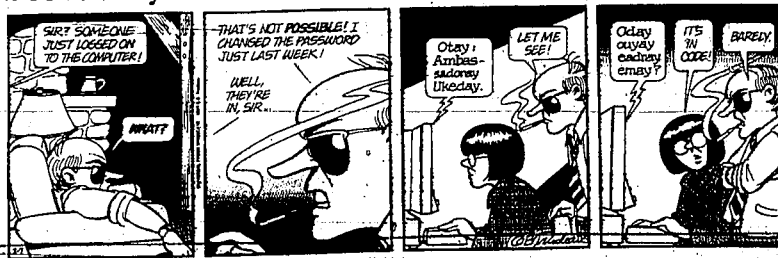

- Call your local legislator and ask for a congressional investigation of the problems you consider important.

- Educate yourself on how the Department of Fish and Game operates from top to bottom. Fish and Game commissions are often accused of serving special interest groups. Perhaps we need to change the system.

Whatever you decide to do, please do something of a positive nature. Sitting on your family and griping is not going to help anything.

U.S. ferries wounded to West Tensions rise in S. Africa campaign as Sarajevo mourns casualties

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Three U.S. cargo planes evacuated victims of the massacre at the city's central market Sunday, while residents grieved and railed at a world they say should be stopping the fighting rather than mopping up after it.

The death toll from Saturday's shelling of the market rose to 68, the deadliest attack in the 22-month siege of the capital by Bosnian Serbs.

U.N. experts were still analyzing the shell's trajectory in an effort to pin down blame for the attack. But there was no doubt among Sarajevians that the Serbs were responsible and what should be done about it.

"Where were you yesterday?" a young soldier of Bosnia's Muslim-led government shouted to a NATO jet howling overhead. "And what are you going to do today?"

Standing at the morgue, he supported his girlfriend, who softly cried "Papa, Papa," for her dead father.

The explosion of a single mortar shell at the market, which also wounded more than 200 people, spurred more of the debate that has paralyzed the international community for months.

The United Nations' top civilian official for the former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi, said an emergency meeting of the Security Council was possible in the next two days. He said he had been unable to reach agreement in talks Sunday with Bosnia's government and Bosnian Serbs on a cease-fire and monitoring of weapons around Sarajevo.

U.S. Army soldiers Sunday put a wounded Sarajevo resident into a U.S. aircraft for evacuation to a hospital in Germany.

Belgium's foreign minister urged air strikes on Serb troops ringing Sarajevo, and France demanded that NATO set a deadline for the Serbs to lift their siege or face military action from the 16-member alliance.

But the European Union's mediator, Lord Owen, said intervention would do nothing to end a war that has killed more than 200,000 Muslims, Serbs and Croats. U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry backed away from the threat of U.S. air strikes, calling instead for a negotiated settlement.

Speaking to European defense officials in Munich, Germany, Perry asked: "If air strikes are Act One of a new melodrama, what is Act Two, Act Three and the conclusion?"

—Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic, visibly angry, predicted nothing would be done to the Serbs.

Chicago Tribune

PRETORIA, South Africa — President F. W. de Klerk received some disturbing news last month. The government, his generals told him, cannot count on the army's support if trouble breaks out in the weeks before South Africa's first democratic election.

News of the meeting, which was leaked to local newspapers and has been independently confirmed, couldn't have come at a more worrying time for De Klerk and for the country.

There are already signs that the white right wing is gearing up for rebellion.

Isolated explosions against railway lines and power installations have intensified into regular bombing attacks on offices of the African National Congress and its trade union allies in rural, conservative areas.

There were seven such attacks last week, all of them at night; none was fatal. But military analysts believe the attacks represent the beginning of a deliberate sabotage campaign that is likely to escalate if the right-wing's demands for a white homeland aren't met.

Until now, military sources say, De Klerk has viewed the right wing as a political threat only. But, the sources say, De Klerk's top generals are trying to convince him that it is time to start regarding the Right as a military threat. And it is a threat, they say, that the armed forces might not be able to handle.

The generals told De Klerk the right wing is preparing for armed rebellion, and they warned that up to 60 percent of the South African Defense Force (SADF) would refuse to fight if called upon to suppress resistance.

Most experts dismiss the risk of a military coup, despite the prevalence of right-wing sympathies among many white officers. But the army risks paralysis, or even racial polarization, in the event of serious trouble.

The full-time professional army, estimated at 60,000 to 70,000 personnel, is relatively small. Although most of the officers are white, the ranks are 80 percent black. Renegade white officers who tried to launch a coup would be unable to count on the support of the black foot soldiers. About 300,000 to 400,000 whites in reserve units make up the bulk of the army's strength. But there are questions about the loyalties of these soldiers, who belong to either the Citizen Force, a reserve of former conscripts, or the Commando Units, lightly armed volunteers mainly in rural areas.

Frustration mounts as talks wane

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians were jubilant at the prospect of better lives when moves toward self-rule were announced. Not quite five months later, they're again eager to attack Israeli targets and challenge PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

The bitter mood in the Israeli-occupied territories turned blacker Sunday when bickering between Israeli politicians and top generals threatened further delays in achieving Palestinian autonomy.

"Peace is not a theory, it's something that ordinary people need to touch," said Raji Sourani, a lawyer who heads the Gaza Center for Rights and Law.

There have been some changes since the second between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization was signed in Washington on Sept. 13, 1993.

Palestinians could openly raise their flag, an act that used to draw Israeli gunfire. Over 700 Palestinians have been released from Israeli jails and a few streets sealed with barrels to prevent stone-throwing have been opened.

But under the original plan, the Israeli army was to start withdrawing from the Gaza Strip and the West Bank area around Jericho on Dec. 13 and finish withdrawing by April 13. Palestinians were to police the streets, and civilian authorities were to assume responsibility for taxation, housing and utilities.

There are no deadlines now.

Instead, the process is in Israeli hands. In Cairo, PLO spokesman Saeed Kamal said Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres would meet with a PLO delegation today. He said Arafat would arrive Tuesday for talks with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, but would not say if Arafat and Peres would meet.

Already, Israeli officials have noticed a sharp shift in Palestinian attitudes.

"The Palestinian population woke up," an officer responsible for undercover operations told the weekly Al Hamishar. He could not be identified due to army regulations.

"They thought they would experience a new reality. They know this is not true. So they are resuming the intifadeh," he added, using the Arabic word for the uprising against the Israeli occupation that started in 1987.

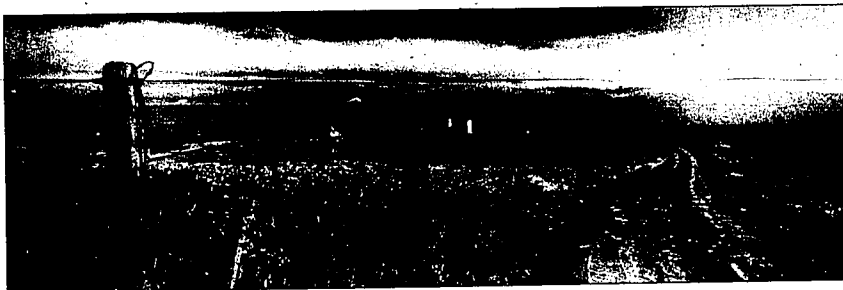

The numbers tell why. Since the agreement was signed, 62 Palestinians have died in clashes with Israelis, including six children under the age of 16. In the same period 20 Israeli soldiers and civilians have been killed.

Thousands of Palestinians remain behind bars, some for acts like raising the flag that are no longer illegal. Arrests continue. Over 50,000 Arabs lost jobs in Israel as a security measure to try to minimize attacks, and more work permits are being confiscated at random.

Israel subjects entire neighborhoods to power cuts if some residents don't pay bills. Land confiscations have risen sharply, and house demolitions or disruptive searches continue.

Israeli officials have said that the number of Israeli troops in the occupied lands is at one of its highest levels ever.

School money, taxes
top session's agenda

BOISE (AP) — After four weeks of preliminaries, the Idaho Legislature gets into the two major issues of the 1994 session this week — public school financing and property taxes.

The 50-member House Republican caucus today will get its first look at a proposal to change the formula used to distribute state funds for public schools. It's being pushed by school districts as a way to settle a lawsuit brought by more than 40 school districts over school financing.

But it will take virtually all of the extra $95 million available for schools in the new budget, and that will leave lawmakers nothing for school reform, classroom technology and other changes.

House Speaker Michael Simpson said it will take a statewide minimum teacher salary schedule to make the formula change work.

At the end of last week, legislative leaders remained cautiously optimistic that the package still could be approved. But as Simpson said, "It's a real tough sell for the school districts."

When the proposal is explained to lawmakers this week, the Blackfoot Republican said he would urge them to "do what's best for the school system rather than look at it as a way to settle the school funding lawsuit.

"If we don't think it's right for education, we shouldn't do it," he said.

Talk about the need for property tax changes has dominated the early weeks of the session, particularly because Coeur d'Alene anti-property tax activist Ron Rankin says he will push his own tax-limiting ballot initiative after the session if legislators do nothing.

A number of property, sales and income tax changes have been introduced, but few lawmakers are optimistic about their prospects.

This week, Rep. Golden Linford, R-Exburg, said a House Revenue and Taxation subcommittee will come up with a plan to ease the property tax burden.

"It's the outgrowth of several years of work," he said. "It's the culmination of a lot of work and a lot of time."

Governor: I didn't seek BLM chief's firing

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming Gov. Mike Sullivan says he never asked that the U.S. Bureau of Land Management director be fired and had only questioned the effectiveness of Jim Baca.

Baca was appointed last June to head the BLM. He resigned Thursday, one week after he was offered a "promotion" as a deputy assistant to his boss, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt. Baca refused the offer, which Babbitt apparently made to get Baca out of the BLM hot seat.

Baca

vocated the firing after being angered by Baca's position on the governor's proposal for an Air Force training range, Sullivan said he never sought Baca's resignation.

But Sullivan said he told officials that Baca "stuffed his toe" during the two times he visited Wyoming.

In Baca's first visit, he announced in Cheyenne that rangeland reform would be pushed through no matter what ranchers thought of the plan.

Sullivan said the second visit was in Rock Springs when the state was trying to comment on a proposal that would raise federal royalty payments on Wyoming's huge trona industry.

"We had not had the opportunity to plead our case or the industry's case," Sullivan said. "We had an agreement we could do that, but (Baca) came into town and said he favored the increase and it should go into effect."

Sullivan added that Baca's actions leading to his resignation showed his ineffectiveness. Baca helped start a phone campaign among environmentalists to keep him at BLM after being offered the promotion, Sullivan said.

Galarraga says knee nearly back to normal

PUERTO LA CRUZ, Venezuela — National League Andres Galarraga said Sunday he's recovered fully from a knee injury and will report in two weeks to the Colorado Rockies' training camp. Galarraga said he's been practicing two or three times a week to test his condition. He sprained his right knee July 24 in a collision while trying to catch a foul ball at Mile High Stadium. “I'm preparing myself psychologically. I only wanted to know if I can hit,” he said. “I haven't felt any discomfort.” Galarraga is at this eastern Venezuelan resort city to watch the Caribbean World Series. The first baseman overcame last year's injury to hit .370.

ASU athlete beats TC counterpart for tennis title

DALLAS — Sargis Sargisian of Arizona State used a powerful serve to overpower Paul Robinson of Texas Christian, 6-3, 6-3 Sunday for the men's singles championship at the National Intercollegiate. Sargisian, the No. 4 seed, didn't drop a set in five matches during the match at Brookhaven Country Club. It was the first collegiate title for the native Armenian and the third leg of the ITA Collegiate Grand Slam.

Ludvigova of Texas won the women's title. Ludvigova, who reached an unprecedented third collegiate grand slam final, gained her third win of the season by beating Angela Lettiere of Georgia, 6-1, 6-3.

The top-ranked player in the country with a 14-1 record, Ludvigova's only loss this year came in the finals of the SkyTel Championships.

U.S. senior national gymnast injures spine during routine

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Kerry Huston, a top gymnast from the University of Minnesota, suffered a serious spinal injury when he landed headfirst on the mat during a dismount at a weekend meet. A Memorial Hospital spokesman said Sunday the 20-year-old from Houston was in fair condition with a neck injury. He is being treated in the trauma intensive care unit. On Saturday night, he was able to move only his fingers. Huston has been a member of the U.S. senior national team for one year. He was competing Saturday night at the USA Gymnastics Winter Cup Challenge. Compiled from wire reports

Son was on leave from hospital

The Associated Press

SHEFFIELD LAKE, Ohio — The younger brother of Olympic ice dancer Elizabeth Punsalan had been home on a weekend pass from a hospital psychiatric unit only a few hours when he told police he stabbed his father to death.

Ricardo Punsalan, 20, told police Friday night he attacked Dr. Ernesto R. Punsalan, 57, as his father slept in their home, about 20 miles west of Cleveland.

The elder Punsalan, a general surgeon, was aware of his son's ongoing battle with mental illness but didn't want to commit him to a long-term center, a family friend said. “He was worried about him,” said Dr.

E. Punsalan

R. Punsalan

Parash Patel, a colleague of Punsalan's at EMH Regional Medical Center in Elyria. “He said, ‘He is my son, he should be at home.’ He seemed to be a nice kid.”

Ricardo Punsalan was released on a weekend pass from the psychiatric unit at St. Joseph Hospital and Health Center in Lorain on Friday afternoon. Rev. John J. McCaffrey of St. Thomas Catholic Church said.

The son was being held without bond at the Lorain County Jail in Elyria and was expected to be arraigned Monday morning in Lorain Municipal Court on a charge of aggravated murder.

Jailers were checking his cell every 15 minutes as a standard precaution for inmates with histories of mental illness. Lorain County Sheriff Sgt. William Davis said.

NFC masters AFC

Miscues lead to 2nd-half scores; Falcon's Rison shines with 6 catches

The Associated Press

HONOLULU — Bobby Hebert, a late replacement for the injured Troy Aikman in the Pro Bowl, engineered a pair of second-half scoring drives Sunday to lift the NFC to a 17-3 victory over the AFC.

The Atlanta Falcons quarterback completed four of six throws for 68 yards, including a 15-yard touchdown pass to Cris Carter of the Minnesota Vikings 1:19 into the final quarter.

That score followed a fumble recovery by Chicago's Richard Dent, who fell on the ball at the AFC 19 after Minnesota's John Randle stripped the ball from Boomer Esiason of the New York Jets.

The NFC defense came up with four interceptions and two fumble recoveries as the AFC offense struggled.

Rookie Jerome Bettis of the Los Angeles Rams scored on a 4-yard run late in the third quarter, capping a 48-yard drive that included a 32-yard pass from Hebert to Falcons teammate Andre Rison.

Rison, who had six catches for 86 yards, was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

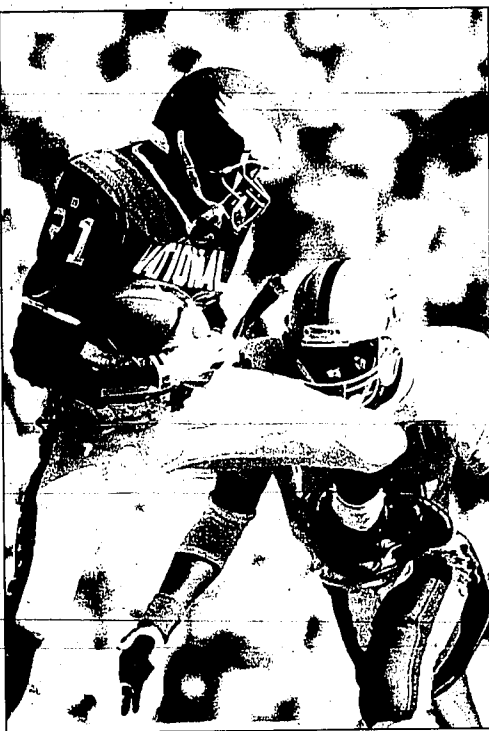

The NFC defense came up with four interceptions and two fumble recoveries as the AFC offense struggled. An interception by Pittsburgh's Donnell Woolford of a pass by Esiason in the NFC end zone with 4:30 remaining helped wrap up the victory for the NFC.

The all-star teams traded field goals for all the scoring in the first half, with Atlanta's Norm Johnson kicking a 35-yarder for the NFC in the opening quarter and Pittsburgh's Gary Anderson drawing the AFC even with a 25-yarder 1:09 before halftime.

Sieve Young of San Francisco led the march to Johnson's field goal, a 46-yard drive that included a 12-yard run on an end-around by the 49ers' Jerry Rice, and a 19-yard pass from Young to Rice on third-and-13 from the AFC 39.

Esiason, operating in a no-huddle offense, guided the AFC to Anderson's field goal. Esiason completed passes of 13 and 19 yards to Keith Byars of Miami and another pass of 26 yards to Eric Green of Pittsburgh.

goal attempts during the season, missed two Sunday — from 39 yards and 24 yards.

Seattle strong safety Eugene Robinson snuffed another scoring threat by the NFC just before halftime.

With the ball at the AFC 48-yard line, Green Bay's Brett Favre threw into the end zone, but Robinson intercepted the pass, ran it out then lateraled to AFC teammate Rod Woodson of Pittsburgh, who finally was tackled at the NFC 21 as the half ended.

Some of the NFL's big names missed the game because of injuries, including quarterbacks Aikman of Dallas, Joe Montana of Kansas City and Phil Simms of the New York Giants; running backs Emmitt Smith of Dallas and Barry Sanders of Detroit; wide receivers Andre Reed of Buffalo and Sterling Sharpe of Green Bay, and defensive end Bruce Smith of Buffalo.

Harding story heats up Norway

The Washington Post

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — They sit in a little booth at the end of the world, checking the credentials of journalists who come and go from the Main Press Center in the days before the opening of the Winter Olympics.

They are security officers, young Norwegians who watch the sun drop behind the snow-capped mountains every afternoon around 4 p.m., turning the pristine white landscape first to purple, then to black.

Tonight, as they sat in the darkness in their quiet perch, a visitor knocked on the window. When they slid the glass open, the cold rushed in.

“I have a strange question for you,” the journalist said. “Have you ever heard of Tonya Harding?”

They replied immediately. “Yes,” two of them said, practically in unison. “Of course.”

One kept on talking. “Even if she is not guilty, I think she should not come. Wouldn't that be the right thing to do?”

And so it is that in the farthest reaches on earth, in a tiny town of 23,000 preparing to host the 17th Winter Olympic Games, the Nancy Kerrigan-Tonya Harding saga has not gone unnoticed.

“It's been in absolutely every newspaper, on the sports pages, on television,” said Oslo journalist Paul Heisloht. “What was the latest the other day, the accusations by her husband? The poor girl, whether she's guilty or not, how will she ever be able to put it all together to compete here?”

It is one of the ironies of these Games, which begin Saturday and run through Feb. 27, that a small, unsuspecting place like Lillehammer would find itself hosting one of the great controversies in sports history.

Yet, for all its charm and apparent naivete, Lillehammer and its people are quite wise to the ways of the world.

For Aune, the director of information and media operations for the Lillehammer Olympic Organizing Committee, was planning on using a 100-seat room for figure skating news conferences in Hamar. Now, he has changed his mind and has taken over the volunteers' cafeteria, which will seat 400.

“Figure skating was not going to be a big event for us,” Aune said Saturday. “It used to be, years ago, with Sonja Henie. But it's mostly a continental European and U.S. sport. All that has changed now. This has created all kinds of extra interest. A month ago, Norwegians knew the name of only one skater, Katarina Witt. Now, they know three: Witt, Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding.”

And it's not just Norwegians who are yearning for news about the U.S. skaters. U.S. Olympic Committee media officer Bob Condon says it has reached the point where reporters from around the world stop in and ask about “Tonya” and “Nancy.”

“They don't even have to say what sport they're in or what their last names are,” Condon said.

All international journalists are not smitten by the story. After a media briefing Friday, International Olympic Committee Director General Francois Carrard was surrounded by a knot of 20 reporters. When Harding's name came up and Carrard started talking, the handful of U.S. journalists furiously scribbled into their notebooks, while the others stood with their arms by their sides, blankly staring at their American counterparts.

German woman triumphs in World Cup Super-G

The Associated Press

SIERRA NEVADA, Spain — Hilde Gerg showed why she's a rising star on the German ski team Sunday with a surprising World Cup victory in the Super-G.

The 18-year-old Gerg, youngest member of the German team, recorded her first World Cup win with a half-second decision over Italy's Isolde Kostner.

The event also saw Switzerland's Vreni Schneider finish 13th and move a point ahead of Sweden's Pernilla Wiberg in the overall World Cup standings.

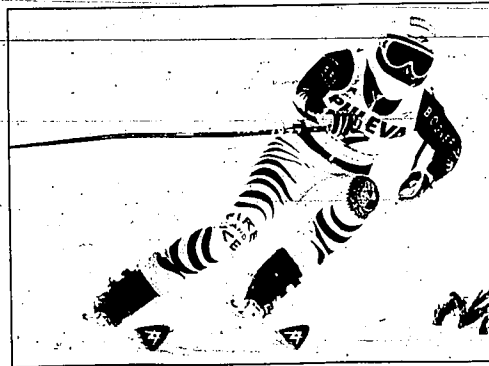

Schneider picked up 20 points for an overall total of 1,210 points, while Wiberg has 1,209. Wiberg skied but did not earn points in the Super-G.

Gerg won with a time of 1:47.80 to edge the 18-year-old Kostner (1:48.30). Gerg's teammate Katharina Gutensohn was third in 1:48.91. Gerg was the fourth different winner in four Super-G's this season.

“I can't believe it,” said Gerg, whose previous best in any World Cup race was sixth in the Super-G at Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy, last month. “I guess I wasn't too bad. I had a good feeling because it was a nice day but I never dreamed I'd win.”

An all-event skier, Gerg isn't sure which is her best event. She termed Sunday's Super-G course “fairly flat and easy” and said her biggest problem was chipping the right skis.

“We're leaving right after the race, so there'll be no party. But the two of us (with

Germany's Hilde Gerg skis to a first-place finish in the World Cup Super-G race in Sierra Nevada, Spain, Sunday, her first World Cup win.

Gutensohn) will have champagne on the plane,” Gerg said. Russian Warwara Zelenskaja was fourth in 1:48.92 and Swiss Heidi Zurbriegen fifth in 1:49.03.

Saturday's top three finishers said they would donate their prize money — a total of $13,900 — to a foundation being set up in Austrian Ulrike Maier's name. Maier was killed in a downhill race on Jan. 29 in Germany.

Tomba better than even in warmup to Lillehammer

The Associated Press

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany — Alberto Tomba is getting better as the Winter Olympics draw closer.

A three-time Olympic gold medal winner, Tomba warmed up for the Lillehammer Games with a World Cup victory in the slalom on Sunday.

In the final slalom before the Games, the Italian won by more than a second over Tomas Fogdö, covering the two runs in 1 minute, 32.47 seconds. It was Tomba's fourth slalom win this season and his second in a row.

“There are still 20 days to go before the Olympic slalom and I hope I can stay in form,” Tomba said. “I will keep on training hard and hope for the best.”

Sunday's slalom was the first race in this Bavarian resort since Austrian star Ulrike Maier was killed during a women's downhill eight days ago. A men's downhill planned for Saturday was canceled. Tomba donated his prize money — $17,000 — to a foundation set up in Maier's name.

Ewing outduels O'Neal as Knicks breeze

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 32 points against fellow All-Star Shaquille O'Neal and Charles Oakley grabbed 21 rebounds Sunday, lifting the New York Knicks to a 95-77 victory over the Orlando Magic.

Pro basketball

The Knicks trailed 47-42 with 10:35 to go in the third quarter before Oakley had nine of his 13 points and seven rebounds in a 20-15 run that gave New York a 71-62 advantage with 11 minutes left in the game.

The Magic stayed close, pulling to 71-68 and 77-73, but two free throws by Charles Smith and a 3-point play by John Starks rebuilt the margin to nine. Four baskets by Ewing and another 3-point play by Starks turned the game into a rout.

O'Neal, the NBA's leading scorer and the Eastern Conference All-Star starter ahead of Ewing, had 22 points and 13 rebounds for the Magic. But Nick Anderson, their second-leading scorer with 16.3 points per game, finished with two points on 1-for-11 shooting.

Starks scored 18 points and Smith 17 for the Knicks, who have won seven of eight games.

Orlando led 43-42 at halftime although O'Neal scored just six points in the first half, making three dunks and missing all seven of his shots.

Suns 89, Bulls 88

PHOENIX — Scottie Pippen missed from the corner as time expired, and Phoenix held on to defeat Chicago in the Bulls' first trip to America West Arena since the last game of the NBA Finals on June 20.

John Paxson won the championship with a last-pass 3-point shot, but this time the potential game-winner didn't fall, ending the Bulls' four-game winning streak.

New Jersey's Derrick Coleman gets an elbow in the head from teammate Jayson Williams as they battle for a rebound with Antonio's Dennis Rodman Sunday in New Jersey.

Kevin Johnson, who missed 15 of his 16 shots because of a lower-leg injury, led the Suns with 22 points and made six Chicago's Steve Kerr didn't sink a 3-point shot to tie it.

With three seconds left and the Suns leading 89-86, Johnson knocked Kerr to the floor. After a timeout, Kerr made both free throws, and the Bulls got the ball back because of Johnson's flagrant foul, leading to Pippen's desperation shot.

Pippen had 26 points and 11 rebounds, and Horace Grant added 16 points and 13 rebounds for Chicago. Cedric Ceballos scored 12 points and Dan Majerle 17 for the Suns.

Warriors 106, Bulls 84

LANDOVER, Md. — Golden State held Washington to seven points in the fourth quarter and got 26 points and 12 rebounds from Chris Webber.

The Bulls made only two of 16 shots from the field in the final period and scored only one point in the final 7:18. The seven points is a franchise low since the team moved from Baltimore prior to the 1973-74 season.

Down 73-61, the Warriors closed the third quarter with a 17-4 run, then scored the opening eight points of the final period to go up 86-77.

Washington closed to 90-83, but rookie Latrell Sprewell scored four points in an 8-0 spurt.

Webber made 12 of 15 shots, while Sprewell scored 23 points, Billy Owens 20 and Mullin 19. Calbert Cheaney led Washington with 19 points.

Spurs 104, Nets 102, OT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — David Robinson hit two free throws and knocked away an inbound pass in the closing seconds of overtime Sunday night as the San Antonio Spurs won their seventh straight game, 104-102 over New Jersey.

Robinson finished with 36 points and 12 rebounds as the Spurs halted a three-game winning streak by the Nets and prevented them from reaching the .500 mark for the first time since they won 3-1.

Robinson provided the winning margin by hitting two free throws after being fouled by Derrick Coleman on a drive to the basket with 4.1 seconds left.

After a New Jersey timeout, Robinson jumped in front of an inbound pass and knocked the ball toward midcourt. Kenny Anderson retrieved it and had to force a 45-footer that bounced off the backboard, never coming close to the rim.

Jayhawks earn 20th downing Cornhuskers

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) —

Steve Woodberry made a 3-point shot and then slammed home the first dunk of his career in the final two minutes as No. 3 Kansas turned back Nebraska 94-87 Sunday to give the Cornhuskers their fourth straight loss.

The victory made the Jayhawks the first Division I team to win 20 games this season.

The senior Woodberry scored 25 points as Kansas survived a second-half rally from Nebraska. Woodberry, the Jayhawks' leading 3-point shooter at 46 percent, made 3-of-6.

Freshman point guard Jacques Vaughn held Kansas (20-3, 5-2 Big Eight) together as the Huskers made repeated runs at the Jayhawks in the second half, but got beat in rebounding 42-28.

Nebraska (12-6, 2-4) had rallied to take the lead in the second half, but Kansas went up 80-72 with 5:50 remaining on Greg Ostertag's fourth dunk of the game and a 3-point play by Sean Pearson.

Kentucky 67, Massachusetts 64

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kentucky scored the final seven points of the game and the seventh-ranked Wildcats beat No. 11 Massachusetts.

Corey Pritchett had 17 points and 15 rebounds for Kentucky (18-3), which won its fifth straight.

College basketball

Low Roe finished with 28 points and 13 rebounds for the Minutemen (17-4), but he didn't get a shot in the final three minutes as Kentucky took control and went on to its seventh victory in eight games.

Purdue 87, Iowa 78

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Glenn Robinson scored all of Purdue's points in a key 13-second-half run and finished with 34, leading the No. 8 Bollemaers over Iowa.

Cuonzo Martin added 20 points as Purdue (18-3, 6-3 Big Ten) bounced back from a home loss to Michigan. Jess Settles and James Wainwright scored 21 points for Iowa (9-9, 3-6), while Russ Millard had 12 and Jim Bartels 10.

Louisville 78, Vanderbilt 62

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Freshman guard DeJuan Wheat scored 21 points and led an early second-half run that carried No. 9 Louisville over Vanderbilt for its eighth straight victory.

Billy McCaffrey opened the second half with a 3-point shot from the left wing as Vanderbilt (10-8), which trailed by 11 points in the first half, closed to 34-29.

Wheat countered with a 3 from the corner at 17:40 and closed the 20-10 run with a spinning drive up the middle and 3 from the key to give Louisville (18-2) a 54-39 advantage.

U.S. distance ace errs in Mobile Invite upset bid

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Counting, not running, seems to be Suzy Hamilton's biggest problem.

The American distance runner, poised for what she hopes will be her best year ever, had an embarrassing setback Sunday when she miscounted how many laps remained in a race that upset Olympic gold medalist and defending world champion Hassiba Boulmerka of Algeria in the women's mile.

Hamilton's gaffe overshadowed a day in which Michael Johnson turned back a strong challenge by Steve Lewis in the men's 400 meters. David Swings of Scotland triumphed in a race that saw seven men finish under 4 minutes in the mile, and Gail Devers continued her supremacy in the women's 60-meter hurdles.

But easily the most memorable race of the day was the one that ended a lap early for Hamilton, a former University of Wisconsin star.

After trailing by as much as 30 yards in the first half-mile, Hamilton moved steadily through the pack in the third quarter-mile until she was positioned on Boulmerka's shoulder with two laps to go.

And that's when Hamilton made a bold move, sprinting to grab a 10-yard lead almost immediately. She led the 1993 world champion and 1992 Barcelona gold medalist by 15 meters with 300 meters left, but Boulmerka ran easily behind her, looking unconcerned.

Here's why: Hamilton suddenly stopped on the bell lap — and here's the scream of "Oh, no!" let everyone know she had miscounted how many laps she had remaining. She stood in anguish as she watched Boulmerka, who had counted correctly and stayed within striking distance, go on to win in 4:28.64.

"I'm a college graduate," Hamilton said afterwards with a rueful smile. "These things happen to me."

Indeed they do — at the 1990 Goodwill Games, she misjudged the 1,500-meter finish line, starting her kick too late and missing a chance to medal.

On Sunday, Hamilton explained that somehow, when the lap counter showed "2," she saw a "1." She didn't hear the bell for the final lap, but attributed that to her concentration. And she said that, too, caused her to miss a clock positioned right next to the finish that would have told her she wasn't running fast enough to have just one circuit remaining.

"I screwed up on the laps. Lots of times, I don't hear anything," she said, running through — and dismissing — a list of excuses and excuses. "It's just one of those weird things. I don't have anyone to blame but myself."

Things were more orderly elsewhere, particularly in the men's 400, where Johnson, ranked No. 1 in the world at 400 meters last year and the gold medal winner at the Stuttgart world championship, found himself trailing 1988 Olympic gold medalist Steve Lewis by six yards with 200 remaining.

No problem. Johnson blasted off the final turn, earning a two-yard victory in a meet record 45.81. Lewis, the silver medalist in the Barcelona 400, was timed in 46.12.

"I never felt like I was in trouble," Johnson said. "I felt comfortable the whole race."

So did Strang, who surged to the lead with 150 yards remaining to beat steepchase world record holder Moses Kiptanui of Kenya and Ameri Paus Vandegriff in the mile. Strang, who was timed in 3:57.38, relished a rare victory.

"I never felt like I was in trouble," Johnson said. "I felt comfortable the whole race."

So did Strang, who surged to the lead with 150 yards remaining to beat steepchase world record holder Moses Kiptanui of Kenya and Ameri Paus Vandegriff in the mile. Strang, who was timed in 3:57.38, relished a rare victory.

Things were more orderly elsewhere, particularly in the men's 400, where Johnson, ranked No. 1 in the world at 400 meters last year and the gold medal winner at the Stuttgart world championship, found himself trailing 1988 Olympic gold medalist Steve Lewis by six yards with 200 remaining.

No problem. Johnson blasted off the final turn, earning a two-yard victory in a meet record 45.81. Lewis, the silver medalist in the Barcelona 400, was timed in 46.12.

Washington Capitals teammates congratulate Peter Bondra, center, after his first-period hat trick Saturday. He later scored two more goals.

Caps' right winger sets NHL mark with 5-goal show against Tampa LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — For one night, Peter Bondra was so good that it was actually funny.

The right winger scored four goals in a little over four minutes against Tampa Bay on Saturday and later added a fifth goal. The effort tied a club record and gave the Washington Capitals something to smile about in an otherwise dreary season.

While Bondra scored at a dizzying pace, the Capitals' bench looked on in amazement.

"It's hard not to just sit and laugh and shake your head," Washington coach Jim Schoenfeld said. "You could see all the players on the bench looking at each other and saying, 'Wow. This guy is incredible.'"

"You hate as a coach to see all that chuckling because you don't want the opponent to think you're laughing at them. But the guy was absolutely on fire."

Bondra scored on four straight shots in the opening period against goaltender

Daren Puppa, who came in with an impressive 2.48 goals-against average. Bondra's last goal, against Pat Jablonski with 30 seconds left in the second period, sealed the Capitals' 6-3 win.

Bondra's scoring barrage enabled him to:

- Become the 10th player in NHL history to score four goals in one period;
- Tie the franchise record for goals in a game, matching Bengt Gustafsson's five-goal effort in January 1984;
- Set a club mark for fastest three goals (2:06);
- Set a club mark for fastest four goals (4:12).

Bondra's big night was particularly surprising because he had been in a season-long scoring slump. After leading Washington with 37 goals and 85 points last season, he managed only 14 goals in 40 games before Saturday.

"If you look at my game you'll see I always have a lot of chances that I couldn't put in," he said. "I just kept doing the same thing, because some nights it's going to change. I just believed and thought positive."

It was the second career hat trick for Bondra, now in his fourth NHL season. He had been hoping for a night like this for a long time. "I was thinking, dreaming about scoring a lot of goals when I was growing up," he said. "It's unbelievable, scoring five goals in the NHL. I hope I do the same Monday."

The Capitals, locked in a struggle to make the final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference, face the New York Rangers on Monday. Bondra, who will celebrate his 26th birthday on that day, surely won't duplicate his scotchy spree.

But he can console himself with the knowledge that for one night he performed like some of the finest skaters ever to play the game.

Rock solid at Pebble Beach

Broadcaster Johnny Miller lets his game do the talking for 1st win in 5 years.

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller won one for the old folks.

The 46-year-old golfer-turned-broadcaster-turned-golfer captured his third — and most unexpected — title in the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, a one-stroke victory over Tom Watson that was a throwback to another decade.

"Down the stretch, we both putted like old folks," Miller said. "It was a round that gave hope to everybody who's older."

In the end, Watson, 44, lost his putting touch. On the last three holes he missed putts of 4, 3 and 6 feet. Had he made any one of them a playoff would have been in order.

"In my younger career, I lived by the putter," Watson said. "Today, I'm a television commentator."

Miller, who was playing in only his sixth tour event since 1989, and Watson, captain of the last American Ryder Cup team and a Hall of Famer, struggled to rounds of 2-over-par 74 in cold, wind and occasional rain.

But Watson's late lapses made Miller a winner at 7-under 281. From the $1.25 million purse he collected $225,000 — a figure he has exceeded in only one season since 1976.

It was his first victory since 1987 — which also came in this unique event sponsored by AT&T — and only his second since 1983.

And it may signal a change in lifestyle for the man who all but abandoned tournament golf five years ago to become an NBC golf commentator for NBC. He still has a full schedule with the network, but he'll now try to squeeze in a few more playing appearances.

"This kind of changes my plans," said Miller, who hadn't expected to play competitively again this year. "I've guess I'll play in the Masters and the Tournament of Champions."

He became eligible for both with the 24th victory of a career that began in 1969. This one came as a complete surprise. "I didn't come here to win," Miller said. "I just came here to have a good time."

But he did both.

The former U.S. and British Open winner let Watson make the mistakes and brought it home on a decisive string of five consecutive pars — just enough to do the job in the wind and cold and occasional rain.

"It was like it wasn't really happening to me, like it was a dream," Miller said.

More like a nightmare for Watson, who has not won since 1987.

He had a two-shot lead and five holes to go, but failed to get up and down from a bunker on the 14th, missing an 8-foot putt. That cut the lead to one and the winner of the 1982 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach three-putted for bogey from nearly 15 feet on the 16th, missing a 4-foot second putt.

"That pulled them even. He three-putted again on the 17th, grazing the cup from 35 feet then failing on a 3-footer."

"I pulled it," he said of the short putt that got away and gave Miller a one-shot lead.

On the 18th, Watson had a 6-footer for birdie and a tie. And that one came up a half inch short, dead in the heart of the hole.

"It looked like it had molasses on it," he said. "It's not the end of the world. But it's disappointing, extremely disappointing."

Miller, meanwhile, remained rock-steady, remarkably steady, considering his lack of competition the last five years.

He let Watson make the mistakes while delivering a decisive string of five consecutive pars — just enough to do the job.

The faltering finish dropped Watson into a tie for second at 282 with Corey Pavin, Jeff Maggert and Kirk Triplett.

Maggert shot a 70, matching the best round of the blustery day. Pavin had a 71 and Triplett a 72.

Dudley Hart, not yet a winner in his fourth season on the tour, led the first-three rounds, but blew to a 78 over the last 18 holes and finished three back at 284.

Hart, however, combined with 18-year-old Robert Floyd, son of Ray Floyd, to win the pro-am section of this tournament at 31-under.

Brit follows birdie string to LPGA title

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — Dawn Coe-Jones ran off five birdies on the front nine, then sank an 18-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole Sunday to hold off Lauri Merten and win the LPGA Palm Beach Classic by a stroke.

Merten shot a course-record 8-under-par 64, but it was not enough to overtake Coe-Jones, who finished with a 65 for a three-day total of 15-under 201; one stroke off the tournament record set by Pat Bradley in 1983.

Coe-Jones, who won $60,000, earned her second victory in 11 years on the LPGA Tour.

The 33-year-old Canadian shot a 31 on the first nine. She credited her fast start to a move from Houston to Tampa three years ago.

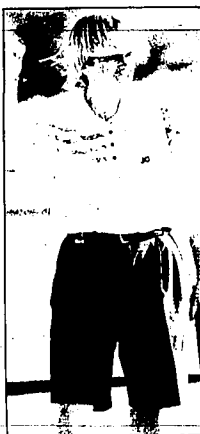

"I play a lot more in the offseason since moving to Tampa," she said. "Now when I come out to play the first tournament I'm ready to go. I'm not using it as a warmup, but I'm trying to win."

Coe-Jones began the day 8-under, two strokes behind co-leaders Laura Davies and Lisa Walters. She rocketed to the top of the leaderboard with birdies on Nos. 1, 2, 5, 6 and 8. Merten, the defending U.S. Open champion, finished at 202. She made her move with four consecutive birdies on Nos. 9-12, finally catching Coe-Jones with a 48-foot birdie putt on No. 17.

Coe-Jones, who was one hole behind Merten, put her 7-iron tee shot in the bunker for a bogey-4, and it appeared a fourth playoff in five years was inevitable.

But Coe-Jones, who thought she was battling Davies (69-203) instead of Merten, answered with an 18-foot birdie of her own on No. 17, while Merten was lipping-out a 4-foot birdie attempt on No. 18.

"That's the same 4-footer she sank (to win) at the U.S. Open," said Coe-Jones, who lost in a playoff in this tournament in 1992. "I've never seen her miss a 4-footer."

Dawn Coe-Jones held off Lauri Merten for Sunday's victory.

Coe-Jones crushed her drive on the 370-yard par-4 18th and safely placed her 9-iron second shot 18 feet from the cup. She then two-putted for the victory.

"My goal was to win another tournament but seeing as this happened so quickly I want to win another one," Coe-Jones said. "I also want to have good showings at the majors."

Merten attributed her inability to force a playoff to a lapse of concentration.

"It's a down note to end on missing that little putt," said Merten, 33, of Greenville, Del. "I let my guard down just a little bit and you can't do that when you're trying to win a tournament."

Trevino grabs Seniors title, keeps monkey on Zarley

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Lee Trevino won even though he missed plenty of putts. Kermit Zarley lost because of one bad drive.

Zarley hooked his tee shot into a lake on the fourth hole of a seven-hole playoff Sunday, handing Trevino a victory in the Royal Caribbean Classic.

"I'm just glad it's over," said Trevino, who earned $120,000 for his 19th Senior PGA Tour title. "I don't think I could have outlasted him much longer. I was having a very difficult time putting the ball."

Zarley, who settled for $70,400, failed in a bid for his first victory since joining the Senior Tour in 1991. His last PGA tournament title came in 1970.

"I've been here before, trying to win a tournament, and the monkey's on my back," said Zarley, 52. "I wanted to win one pretty badly. I guess I've just got to keep knocking on the door."

Both golfers finished 54 holes at 205, 8 under par on The Links at Key Biscayne. Trevino shot a final round of 5-under 66, and Zarley had a 68.

Bob Charles and J.C. Snead tied for third at 70-207.

Playing the 18th hole for the third time in an hour, Zarley badly pulled his drive and had to take a drop alongside a cart path.

"I probably was my worst drive of the week," he said. "I don't know what I did."

Zarley's next shot landed near a VIP tent. After he finally reached the green and missed a long putt for bogey, Trevino tapped in for par.

In the first full-field Senior event of 1994, Trevino picked up where he left off last fall. He won twice and finished second twice in his final six tournaments of 1993.

"(Winning) feels wonderful," he said. "Nothing feels better. My whole joy in this is standing on that green with the crystal in your hands — not the check, the crystal. That's what gets my juices flowing."

"In other words: That's mine. It might not ever happen again, but I got 'em this week. That's why I play."

The crystal-nearly went to Zarley on the third playoff hole. Trevino missed the green but chipped it within four feet and made the putt for par, while Zarley missed a 15-foot birdie try.

Nissan finds way through traffic at Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — If it hadn't been for some heavy traffic, the winning Nissan would have had no trouble at all in the Rolex 24-Hours sports car endurance race that ended Sunday.

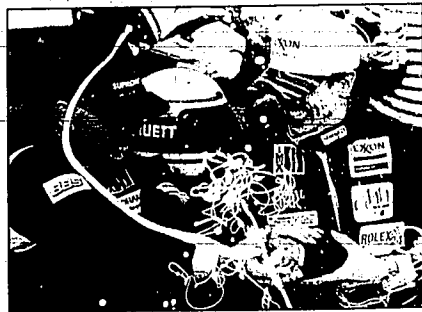

"The only real problem we had in 24 hours of racing was when Scott Pruett got into a situation with somebody getting in his way and forced him into the grass," said Paul Gentilozzi, who combined with Pruett, Butch Leitzinger and Steve Millen of New Zealand for the victory at Daytona International Speedway.

"That caused a bent right rear wheel and a bent (brake) caliper," Gentilozzi added. "After that, the crew had to change the caliper every three or four hours. But it didn't really effect the way the car drove, and the guys got it down to where they were able to change the caliper and bleed the brakes in less than a minute. It was really no problem at all."

Which is exactly what the entire race seemed to be for the production-based GTs-division car which led the final 14 hours, 25 minutes of a race that was supposed to be a showcase for the International Motor Sports Association's new built-for-racing World Sports Cars.

IMSA had hoped the race would give its new open-cockpit WSCs a solid sendoff as its new glamour division, replacing the now-retired GT Prototypes.

But, with attrition taking an awful toll on the eight WSCs that started in the 63-car field, the best finish by the new economical racers was ninth, with only three of them running at the end.

Jeremy Dale, who co-drove the ninth-place Oldsmobile Spice with Price Cobb, Bob Schindler and Ruggero Merletti, said, "Starting with a 24-hour race like this really isn't a fair test. Actually, I think we surprised a lot of people by coming here and finishing this race."

"We could run with the GTs cars, but fuel was a problem. We had to stop so often," added Dale, noting that the GTs cars carry 30 more litres of fuel than the WSCs. "As the season goes along, I think you'll see these cars moving ahead of the GTs cars."

The winning car fought off early challenges from another Nissan ZX300 and a Porsche 911 Turbo — a LeMans division entry — to finish 24 laps plus 2 minutes, 23.957 seconds ahead of another Porsche 911 Turbo, with Bob Wollek, a four-time Daytona winner, and Dominique Dupuy combining with German driver Jürgen Barth co-driving.

"The car performed flawlessly," said Gentilozzi, who turned 44 on Sunday. "I don't know if anybody's gone as many laps as we did, but I know they didn't do it easy."

Pruett said, "The car was rock solid. We had to keep slowing it down. It had more in it than we needed."

The winning car covered 707 laps — 2,516.92 miles — on the 3.56-mile road course that included two-thirds of the 2½-mile, high-banked oval and a narrow, twisting infield section. The Nissan averaged 104.8 mph. None of those figures was a race record.

The fastest of the Porsches, a turbocharged GT1 entry, was gone following an interesting chase through the darkness.

The car, shared by five-time Daytona winner Hurley Haywood, former Indianapolis 500 winner Danny Sullivan and German drivers Hans Stuck and Walter Rohrl led several times before succumbing during the 17th hour after a fan belt broke under full power as Stuck crossed the finish line.

He had to drive the entire length of the track without a cooling fan before pitting, fatally damaging the engine.

The other fast Nissan, co-driven by Millen, Johnny O'Connell and John Morton, was dueling for the lead before a broken crankshaft knocked it out just before 1 a.m. Sunday.

Dale left the eventual winner, driven by Clayton Cunningham and in its sixth year of development, totally in charge.

It's time to travel to Japan

The Japanese are clock crazy, contends a Tokyo correspondent. A typical house there, he says, has seven times as many timepieces in it as the usual American home.

Don't suppose you've ever timed a yawn. Neither have I. But those who do say the average yawn lasts six seconds. You'll yawn in a moment. Time it.

Q. Didn't your Love and Way man say a tenso man makes a bad husband?

A. Not exactly. Closest thing to it is item No. 5336A in his file. It reads: "The man who unconsciously leaves his hands relaxed in his lap, on a chair arm or atop a table, is usually a good husband."

An octopus can change its color and texture to perfectly fit its background. The fellow who told me about it also said he put a photograph of a movie star in his tank, and before long his octopus looked just like Michelle Pfeiffer, but I don't believe that part.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

Dear Mr. Wolff:

After two passes, partner opened a pre-emptive three spades. My RHO bid three no-trump and LHO bid four hearts. Can you think of any justifiable reason for partner to continue to four spades? The game was duplicate and we got what he deserved.

Sole Flight, Little Rock, Ark.

ANSWER: I can't think of a hand that might justify his bidding. Maybe he found a few more spades that had been hidden with his clubs and thought that he might make four spades. A pre-emptor usually gives his all with his first effort and should leave future bidding decisions to partner.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

What are asking bids? Are they in common use today?

Loving: The toughest job you'll ever love

Tom Anderson tells of how, in a moment of contemplation on a vacation, he decided to try becoming a loving husband and father.

Totally loving. No ifs, ands or buts:

In hearing a commentator on the radio say that "love is an act of will. A person can choose to love," Anderson had to admit he had been a selfish husband — that his love of his wife had been dulled by his own insensitivity.

JoAnn Larsen
Psychology

In petty ways, really, he concluded, such things as chiding his wife for her tardiness; insisting on the TV channel he wanted to watch; throwing out the day-old newspapers he knew that his wife wanted to read.

For two weeks, Anderson worked at changing. Two weeks of compliments; of responding willingly to his wife's requests and needs; of not calling the Wall Street investment firm where he was a director; of visiting a shell museum (though he usually hated museums).

Relaxed and happy, and pleased-with the positive results of his efforts, Anderson made another vow — to keep on remembering to choose love.

There was only one thing that marred Anderson's efforts, an event that happened on the last night of his vacation. Preparing for bed, his wife stared at him with the saddest expression.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Tom," she said, in a voice filled with distress, "do you know something I don't?"

"What do you mean?"

"Well... that checkup I had several weeks ago... our doctor... did he tell you something about me? Tom, you've been so good to me... am I dying?"

It took a moment for it all to sink in.

Then Anderson burst out laughing. "No, honey," he said, wrapping her in his arms, "you're not dying; I'm just starving to live!"

The moral of the story? That love does not exist in a vacuum. Love is active. And love is choice.

Too often, we love; but we don't say so. And sometimes time runs out before the deep meaning of a relationship comes to the forefront of our minds.

"If we discovered that we had only five minutes left to say all we wanted to say, every telephone booth would be occupied by people calling other people to stammer that they loved them," observes Christopher Morley.

It doesn't take long to say, "I love you." "I appreciate you," "I'm glad you're home" — to acknowledge love, to keep it alive. "Love doesn't sit there, like a stone," Ursula K. LeGuin stresses. "It has to be made, like bread, remade all the time, made new."

Loving — instead of waiting to be loved — is challenging at times.

"We all have a great capacity for love," reflects Ardis Whitman. "We have tenderness to give and sensitivity and passion and imagination. But we also make many mistakes in loving because we are human — because we care first about ourselves;

Western clothing follows country music into America's mainstream

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — I can see by your hat that you're an accountant.

"If you walk into Honker's on a Friday night, you'll see the same people in western clothes that you see in street clothes downtown during the week," said Travis Arbaugh, a salesman at Vickers Western Store in Twin Falls.

"Country is hot right now, and more and more people want the look."

In other words, the drugstore cowboy is back and this time he means business.

"It's not like it was in the early '80s after 'Urban Cowboy' came out," said Emery Petersen, owner of Petersen's Western Wear in Twin Falls. "Back then you couldn't get a Stetson or a Resili hat because they were all being sold in great western cities like Philadelphia. But there's a steady increase in the number of people who are buying western clothing, and many of them are doing it for the first time."

Blame Garth. Blame Tanya. Blame "Lonesome Dove." But whomever's to blame, the "crossover" market has touched off a stampede toward western style, even by folks who think a drover is a 4-wheel drive vehicle.

"Western wear has been trending very steadily upward for about three years," Juliet Wright, vice president of merchandising for Denver-based Miller Stockton, told the Associated Press. "Country dancing and country music has never been more popular than it is now, and they are driving the market."

"We have young ladies come into our store and tell us they're 'western wannabes,'" Petersen said. "I love that word."

Western wannabes tend to dress like CD covers.

"We have people come in and say, 'I want the shirt on the Brooks & Dunn album,' or 'give me the duster that Dwight Yoakam's wearing,'" said Dennis Wilson, co-owner of Silverado Western Wear in Ketchum.

snakeskin-booted crowd that followed John Travolta on to a mechanical bull at Gilley's a decade ago, the new West lives on a budget.

"That's the first thing we hear from people who come in here to buy boots for the first time," Arbaugh said. "I don't want to spend too much money."

"I think a lot of people who are getting into western clothing for the first time are doing it for casual wear, to wear on weekends," Petersen said. "They want clothes that are comfortable."

Crossover customers, Wright told the AP, include those who "don't necessarily have a farming or ranching background, but enjoy wearing Western clothing because of its quality, fit and the way it looks."

Country singer Clint Black and his wife, Lisa Hartman, typify the look that's attracting growing numbers of Americans who have never worn western clothing before.

Meet Manuel Cuevas, the Armani of western wear

The Associated Press

Chances are you've never heard of Manuel Cuevas, but to Hollywood heavies and Nashville crooners he is the rhinestone cowboy couturier extraordinaire. Manuel, who likes to be known by his first name, has a client list that reads like a Who's Who of country-western music.

He's dressed the best of the West. Dwight Yoakam still wears the same hat that the 56-year-old Mexican designer blocked for him 15 years ago. Country singers Dolly Parton, Wynonna Judd, Hank Williams, Jr., Randy Travis and George Jones have all sworn by him.

Manuel's roster also includes rockers such as The Rolling Stones, Neil Young, and ZZ Top, and movie stars such as Sharon Stone, k.d. lang, Robert Duvall, Marlon Brando, Burt Reynolds — and Ronald Reagan.

Manuel's love for native costumes inspires him to travel to American Indian reservations in South Dakota and New Mexico for hand-woven Chimayo blankets — a dying art form — that he transforms into blanket jackets and coats in bright yellows, reds and blues. Sylvester Stallone and Bob Dylan have sprung for his jackets at $7,500 a pop.

"I visualize America as a continent, not a country, from Alaska to the southern tip of South America," says Manuel, a burly Mexico, Cuevas had fashion in his blood from the very start. As a seven-year-old he learned to cut and sew from his oldest brother Adolfo, a tailor, who also taught him leather tooling and bootmaking.

After graduating from the University of Guadalajara, Cuevas, then 21, emigrated to the U.S. One of his earliest jobs was with Hollywood tailor Sy Devore.

But making regular clothes wasn't Manuel's calling, and after a few months he moved on to Nudie Cohen, the glitter-and-glitz Hollywood rodeo tailor.

As head designer for Nudie, Manuel learned his way around fancy embroidery and rhinestones and got his start making movie and stage costumes for James Dean, Frankie Valli and Clayton Moore, who played the Lone Ranger.

"That was one of the biggest marks of my career, since Clayton was one of the greatest heroes of my time. It was such a thrill for me to start doing clothes for the person I had admired so much as a child," says Cuevas, who remembers when he was seven years old walking five miles to the nearest theater to follow the adventures of the Lone Ranger.

Working at Nudie's opened more than a job. Cohen became his father-in-law when he married the boss' daughter, Barbara.

But neither the job nor the marriage was destined to endure, and after 14 years

Snowboarders take fashion cue from board sports, not skis

Orange County Register

You don't need to see their sports equipment to tell what they are on the snow. The dark colors, decidedly big and loose pants, oversized T-shirts, plaid flannel shirts and beanies have one word written all over it: snowboarders.

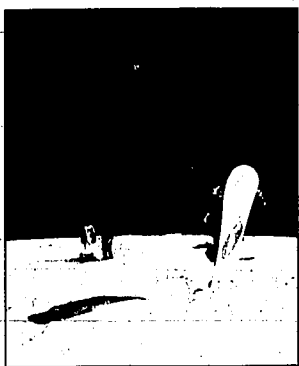

Whether they're doing aerial maneuvers on a half-pipe or carving up the slopes, snowboarders have only one rule about style: look like anything but a skier.

That means nothing sausage-tight or too close to the body, said Eric Blehm, associate editor at Transworld SNOWboarding, a specialty magazine in Oceanside, Calif.

As snowboarders have increased in number, their distinct clothes culture has emerged, rooted in kin sports of skateboarding, bodyboarding and surfing. Often, the young skater takes his board moves and dress style from pavement to powder.

More than a statement of disdain for and rebellion against skiers' attire, the looser fit is about comfort and mobility, said Bill Sand, president of Burning Snow, a snowboarding clothes maker in Newport Beach, Calif.

"You want a big baggy top because you end up sitting

Snowboarders usually prefer loose-fitting clothes for ease of mobility.

Health notes

THE SKINNY ON BARBIE: At a time of year when many of us are struggling to keep New Year's resolutions to shed extra pounds, one world-famous figure is being urged to put it back on. Researchers from University Central Hospital in Helsinki, Finland, say the Barbie doll is so thin that she probably wouldn't be able to menstruate. They say a woman needs 17 to 22 percent body fat to have regular periods, and neither Barbie nor store mannequins of women in the United States have nearly enough.

FIT FOR (MID)LIFE: Women, exercise can make menopause go easier. "Exercise decreases risk factors for coronary artery disease, decreases the risk of osteoporosis, strengthens pelvic structure and improves mood," says a report in The Physician and Sportsmedicine, a medical journal. In terms of bone loss, however, one osteoporosis researcher said that the article may overstate exercise's benefits.

OLDER BUT NOT WISER: Middle-aged and older Americans are a bigger part of the AIDS epidemic than you may think. And people in those age groups aren't doing their share to protect themselves and prevent the spread of the disease, according to a new national sex survey published in the Archives of Internal Medicine. Indeed, the percentage of new AIDS cases attributable to heterosexual sex is greater among Americans 50 and older than in any other age group, the Washington Post reports.

ONE DIET TOO MANY: For women who have had it with dieting and gaining weight and dieting again, there is good advice available on moderating one's lifetime behavior with food: Try the "Weight Maintenance Survival Guide" by psychologists Kelly Brownell, Yale University professor and co-director of the Yale Center for Eating and Weight Disorders, and Judith Rodin, president-designate of the University of Pennsylvania. The book is available for $19.90 including shipping and handling by calling the Learn Education Center of the American Health Publishing Co. at (800) 736-7322. Green Roth offers a program called "Breaking Free" based on her book "Breaking Free from Compulsive Eating." For more information, write P.O. Box 2852, Santa Cruz, Calif. 95063.

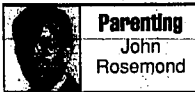

CUTTING THE RISK: Eating raw fruits and vegetables helps reduce the risk of lung cancer in non-smokers, according to a report published last week by Yale University researchers. Lung cancer in non-smokers accounts for an estimated 15 percent of all deaths from the disease, according to the National Cancer Institute. An estimated 22,000 non-smokers die annually, more than the number of people who succumb to cancer of the oral cavity, pharynx, larynx, esophagus, stomach, bone, testes and bladder. Published last week in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, the study included 800 people in New York state who were enrolled in the research project from 1982 to 1985.

Parents tend to view children's behavior through psychological filter

Q. My 11-year-old daughter has recently started expressing a lot of anger and hostility toward me. Just this morning, for example, I remarked on how pretty a certain painting was and she replied, in a snide tone of voice, "It looks stupid to me!" If I ask for her cooperation around the house, she's likely to tell me my request is "dumb." I've tried to find out what's bothering her but every time I try to talk, she claims up. All of this is recent and I'm concerned. How should I resolve this problem?

A. Your question reflects the tendency among today's parents to view their children's behavior through psychological filters. A generation or so ago, a child who had contradicted

Parenting
John Rosemond

a parent in a snide manner would have been regarded as disrespectful. The child would have been sternly reprimanded, perhaps even punished. Today's parent looks at the same situation and concludes that the child is "angry."

The psychological interpretation says that the child is not misbehaving, but only releasing "bottled-up resentments." This theoretical construction rules out a disciplinary response. Discipline, the parent fears, will not only intensify the child's "anger" but also shut down any chance of talking things out, thus, "solving the problem."

It's important to note that the psychological viewpoint shifts responsibility for the child's behavior from child to parent. A disrespectful child has clearly done something wrong. She requires, therefore, correction.

If, on the other hand, we think of the child as being "angry," the implication is that the child's parents may have done something wrong. They become responsible for identifying and correcting their own bad parenting.

Thus, the child becomes a sympathetic figure whose parents are misbehaving (unwittingly?) and causing the child psychological disturbance (i.e. "poor self-esteem"). Since psychological maladies require understanding, it is necessary that the sensitive parent attempt to engage the child in what I call "therapeutic conversation."

"I'd like to talk about what's bothering you and try to resolve whatever problem we have between us," is the way such conversations are likely to end. Regardless of what the child expresses, no matter how inappropriate and/or off-the-wall, the parent is required to be "open," "non-judgmental," and "accepting."

Something interesting has happened here; namely, the child and parent are now on level ground. In effect, they have become equals, de-facto peers. They have a "wonderful relationship," but one conducted such that the child is unable to develop good old-fashioned respect for the parent. Sad, since the Judeo-Christian ethic informs us that it is impossible for anyone to develop true self-respect without first having developed respect for others, beginning with one's parents. No wonder, veteran teachers consistently tell me that today's child is "self-absorbed."

To answer your question, I recommend you take a psychologically incorrect approach to this problem.

Make clear to your daughter that if something's bothering her, you'll be glad to listen, but that demonstrations of disrespect will not be tolerated under any circumstances. When she "slips," I'd suggest that perhaps she needs some time alone in her room to contemplate her future.

Accusation of racism still lingers for DAR

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you listed famous people who had died in 1993. Among them was Marian Anderson, who you said was the first black to sing at Constitution Hall after having been spurned by the D.A.R.

Abby, for more than 50 years the D.A.R. has been trying to correct this allegation of racism, which has even made its way into some history books and, to this day, is repeated by some Washington, D.C., tour guides.

The truth is that Miss Anderson was not denied the use of Constitution Hall because she was black. Her agent, Sol Hurok, requested the hall for Easter Sunday, April 9, 1939, and was informed that it had been booked for months by the Washington Symphony. Mr. Hurok did not request an alternate date.

In 1939, Washington, D.C., was a highly segregated city, and Constitution Hall was the only private auditorium that did not practice segregation. That's why Marian Anderson's agent wanted Constitution Hall in the first place.

No one ever mentions that Marian Anderson sang at Constitution Hall on six different occasions after that, or that a few years after its dedication in 1929, Roland Hayes, a great black tenor, sang there.

Please, Abby, help to set the record straight. I am not an official spokesperson for the D.A.R., but I am a member. Kindly withhold my name.

— RALEIGH, N.C.
DEAR RALEIGH: Yours was not the only letter I received taking exception to my comment. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: You owe it to your readers to let them know that Marian Anderson sang at Constitution Hall on at least eight occasions. Upon her retirement, her final concert was given in the D.A.R. Hall. Over the years, many eminent black singers and actors have appeared there.

In 1945, Eleanor Roosevelt wrote in her newspaper column, "My Day": "I do not think anyone can hold the D.A.R. alone responsible for refusing the talented black singer, Marian Anderson, the use of Constitution Hall. Segregation was an ugly part of America's history, and most of our public institutions in the Southern states had the same separate-but-equal policy in 1939."

The District of Columbia changed its segregation policy in the early 1950s, and since then, there have been very little discrimination against blacks.

Sign me... SENSITIVE IN ARLINGTON, VA.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR SENSITIVE: "Very little discrimination" is not enough; there should be absolutely no discrimination in the District of Columbia or anywhere else in these United States!

Your state distinguished itself by being the first to elect a black to the governor's mansion. Congratulations, former Gov. Douglas Wilder!

DEAR ABBY: The poem titled "Why Worry?" which you published in your column on Thursday, Jan. 20, was from a book I wrote in 1945, titled "Laughingly Yours."

— MILTON BERLE
DEAR MILTON: Thanks for letting me know. As I noted in my column, the poem was sent to me by a reader who found it among her grandmother's memorabilia. No mention was made of the author.

P.S. I recently saw a rerun of an old movie with it and Carl Reiner. (Or was it Sid Caesar?) Anyway, you were in dog, and I must say, I haven't laughed so heartily in many a year.

Adventures on the Internet: 'Geek pride'

People often say to me: "Dave, as a professional columnist, you have a job that requires you to process large quantities of information on a timely basis. Why don't you get a real haircut?"

What these people are really asking, of course, is: How am I able to produce columns with such a high degree of accuracy, day in and day out, 54 weeks per year?

The answer is: I use a computer. This enables me to be highly efficient. Suppose, for example, that I need to fill up column space by writing booger booger booger booger booger.

To accomplish this in the old pre-computer days, I would have had to type "booger" five times manually. But now all I have to do is type it once, then simply hold the left-hand "mouse" button down while "dragging" the "mouse" so that the "cursor" moves over the text that I wish to "select"; then release the left-hand "mouse" button and position the "cursor" over the "Edit" heading on the "menu bar"; then click the left-hand "mouse" button to reveal the "edit menu"; then position the "cursor" over the "Copy" command; then click the left-hand "mouse" button; then move the "cursor" to the point where I wish to insert the "selected" text; then click the left-hand "mouse" button; then position the "cursor" over the "Edit" heading on the "menu bar" again; then click the left-hand "mouse" button to reveal the "edit menu"; then position the "cursor" over the "Paste" command; then click the left-hand "mouse" button four times; and then, as the French say, "voilà!" (Literally, "My hand hurts!")

Dave Barry
Humor

If you need this kind of efficiency in your life, you should get a computer. I recommend the kind I have, which is a "DOS" computer ("DOS" is an acronym, meaning "ROM"). The other major kind of computer is the "Apple," which I do not recommend, because it is a wuss-o-rama New-Age computer that you basically just plug in and use. This means you don't get to participate in the most entertaining aspect of computer-owning, which is trying to get the computer to work.

This is where, "DOS" really shines. It is way beyond normal human comprehension.

It was invented by Bill Gates. He is now one of the wealthiest individuals on Earth — wealthier than Queen Elizabeth; wealthier even than some people who fix car transmissions — and do you want to know why? Because he's the only person in the world who understands "DOS." Every day he gets frantic phone calls like this:

BUSINESS EXECUTIVE: Our entire worldwide corporate accounting system is paralyzed, and no matter what we type into the computer, it replies, "Who wants to know?" (signed) "DOS."

BILL GATES: Ha-ha! I mean, sounds pretty serious. BUSINESS EXECUTIVE: We'll give you $17 million to tell us how to fix it.

BILL GATES: OK. Press the "NUM LOCK" key.

BUSINESS EXECUTIVE: So that's what that thing does! Thanks! The check is on the way!

My current computer, in addition to "DOS," has "Windows," which is another invention of Bill Gates, designed as a security measure to thwart those users who are somehow able to get past "DOS."

You have to be a real stud hombre cybermuffin to handle "Windows." I have spent countless hours trying to get my computer to perform even the most basic data-processing functions, such as letting me play "F-117A Stealth Fighter" on it. I have personally, with my bare hands, changed my "WIN.INI" and "CONFIG.SYS" settings. This may not mean much to you, but trust me, it is a major data-processing accomplishment. Albert Einstein died without ever doing it. ("Wait a minute!" were his last words. "It crased my equation! It was 'E' equals something!")

I am not the only person who uses his computer mainly for the purpose of dithering with his computer. There are millions of others. I know this because I encounter them on the Internet, which is a giant international network of intelligent, informed computer enthusiasts, by which I mean, "people without lives."

We don't care. We have each other, on the Internet. "Geek pride," that is our motto.

While you are destroying your mind watching the worthless brainrotting drivel on TV ("Dave's World," Monday Nights, CBS, check your local listings), we on the Internet are exchanging, freely and openly, the most uninhibited, intimate and — yes — shocking details about our "CONFIG.SYS" settings.

You would not believe how wrought up we get about this type of thing, on the Internet. I regularly connect with a computer group that has a heated debate going on about — I am not making this issue up — the timing of Hewlett-Packard's decision to upgrade from a 386 to a 486 microprocessor in its Omnibook computer. This has aroused enormous passion. People — some of them from other continents — are sending snide, angry, sometimes furious messages to each other.

I'm sure that some participants, even as we speak, are trying to figure out if there is a way to alter their CONFIG.SYS settings so that they can electronically punch their opponents in the mouth. This debate has been raging, soap-opera-like, for months now, and I have become addicted to it.

I tune in every day to see what the leading characters are saying.

You probably think this is weird, but I don't care. I am a happy nerd in cyberspace, where nobody can see my haircut.

WOODWORKING

The Spine... An Engineering Marvel

The spinal column is truly a work of art. It showcases nature's own engineering skills. The basic structure of the spine is a series of 24 movable bones (vertebrae). These bones are stacked up like building blocks, each separated by a thick elastic pad referred to as a disc. These discs act as spacers and help to cushion shock, reduce friction, and allow flexibility and movement.

Dr. Marsha Gehl

The spinal column is a complex structure of muscle, ligament and bone which also houses and protects the spinal cord through which nerve impulses flow and control all body functions.

The most common obstruction to free flow of energy throughout the nervous system is a subluxation, or misalignment of one or more segments of the spine. The more obvious and immediate result can be a decrease in mobility and range of motion. This can lead to pain. Of more serious concern, however is the impingement of one or more nerves which interferes with the proper functioning and healing of vital parts of the body.

Chiropractic is the specialized science and art of locating, correcting and preventing spinal subluxation (misalignment). An adjustment is the precise application of gentle force to realign spinal vertebra, restore spinal joint mobility and relieve nerve stress, thus allowing the body to function without interference.

Most patients consult my office with a specific pain and experience relief from care. Many patients experience benefits beyond their expectations and feel an improvement in their general health and well-being. This results from the body's natural ability to function with greater ease as interference and stress on the musculoskeletal and nervous system is reduced.
