Serbs resume giving up guns

United Nations compromises; U.S. diplomats leave Belgrade

The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs besieging Sarajevo resumed turning in their big guns on Sunday after the United Nations accepted a compromise plan.

The Muslim-dominated Bosnian government expressed concern that the Serbs were just buying time to prevent NATO air strikes that could begin Feb. 21 if the guns ringing Sarajevo are not pulled back.

Bosnian leaders also called for U.N. action help against Serb attacks on another besieged Muslim enclave, Bihac in northwest Bosnia, one of six U.N.-designated "safe areas."

The United Nations reported intense fighting over the weekend between Bosnian and Bosnian army troops around Bihac.

"They (the Serbs) currently want to take it over, to run over Bihac," Bosnian Prime Minister Hris Silajdzic told CNN. "... And we hope that the United Nations will act as quickly as they did in Sarajevo after the massacre in Sarajevo," he said, referring to the Feb. 5 shelling of the city's market that killed 68 people.

In Sarajevo, the weapons compromise allows Serbs to turn in their heavy weapons at U.N.-monitored Serb bases, rather than at Sarajevo airport as originally planned, said Maj. Jose Labandian, a U.N. spokesman.

The Bosnian army objected. "Those weapons can be returned to combat positions very fast," said Bosnian army Gen. Fikret Muslimovic.

"I am afraid that such an approach and an attempt to appease the aggression further would bring a hardening of the Serbian position," Silajdzic said.

The Serbs earlier insisted they would surrender their guns only if the Bosnian infantry abandoned its front-line positions. But after heavy lobbying by U.N. officials the Serbs turned over 13 heavy weapons on Sunday, bringing the total to 36 guns: 26 Serbian and 10 Bosnian.

Late Sunday, Silajdzic told CNN the Bosnian army turned in about 20 more weapons Sunday, including mortars and anti-tank guns. He said the Bosnian army would turn in all its weapons by the NATO deadline.

The Bosnian Serbs are estimated to have at least 500 heavy weapons. The Bosnian army has perhaps a tenth of that.

Dependents of U.S. government employees prepare to leave the U.S. Ambassador's compound in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Sunday.

With the four-day Sarajevo truce still shaky, the U.S. Embassy packed the families of 35 diplomats out of Belgrade, Yugoslavia. Dutch, British and German officials also have urged their citizens to leave Yugoslavia.

The pullout of dependents was a precaution against Serb reprisals in the event of air strikes. Many in the Serb-dominated Yugoslav government and army support the Bosnian Serbs.

NATO has threatened to start air strikes against the Serb guns if they are not withdrawn. Please see SERBS/A2

Search for victims of radiation experiments proves to be costly

Newday

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration's search for unwitting participants in federally sponsored radiation experiments is turning into a costly paper chase that, in some cases, could prove futile.

That's the picture that emerges from interviews with federal officials and hospital representatives involved in the hunt.

What started in December as an effort by Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary to open her agency's files on questionable radiation experiments from the 1940s and later has become a sweeping, multi-agency review whose scope is still expanding.

At White House direction, dozens of staffers have been searching files at the Pentagon, the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Institutes of Health. The hunt has broadened to include hundreds of field offices, universities and hospitals that may have received federal money to conduct radiation experiments in the past — including some with vulnerable subjects such as prisoners, children and the mentally retarded.

At New York's Brookhaven National Laboratory alone, there are some 13,000 patient files to deal with, according to Dr. Darrel Joel, chairman of the medical department. "I understand what they are trying to do," Joel said, "but it seems to me at some point one must examine the cost-benefit ratio" of the document search.

Strengthening economy fuels population growth

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The population loss of the 1980s in most Magic Valley cities and towns has turned around with the help of stronger economic times, says a state population analyst.

During the 1980s, 68 percent — more than two out of three — cities and towns in Idaho lost population, according to U.S. Census Bureau data.

And in the Magic Valley, 58 percent of the cities and towns lost residents.

But in a population survey covering 1990 to 1992, only 16 percent of the cities in Idaho lost population. In the Magic Valley, only five cities — 15 percent — lost people.

The difference in the 1990s is the economy, said Alan Porter, manager of information services for the Idaho Department of Commerce.

"Basically, it's an indication of an improving economy after a lethargic at best economy in the 1980s," Porter said. "But around the Twin Falls area it's something more than that. I can't quite put my mind on it, but it's more than agriculture vitality."

From 1990 to 1992 in the Magic Valley, only Acquia, Albion, Castleford, Minidoka and Richfield lost residents. And each of those small cities lost only a few people.

Porter said for decades kids in small towns across Idaho have grown up in town, graduated from high school but saw no job or social opportunities, so they moved away.

But now the economies of many towns are improving, and more young people are able to find jobs and stay.

Also, with the larger cities in Idaho such as Boise, Nampa and Twin Falls rising in population by about 1,000 people a year, residents in those cities are moving to smaller nearby towns to live. That in turn is creating growth in those towns.

Examples are seen in smaller cities near Twin Falls such as Filer, which saw its population rise 13.6 percent, or Kimberly which saw its population up 12.2 percent. The same thing is going on in Hailey, which saw its population grow by 15.3

percent as people who work in nearby Ketchum moved to town in recent years.

"Whether it's lower housing prices or quality of life issues, there's a lot of reasons for living in a small town," Porter said. "There's more economic vitality there than that people give those towns credit for."

So the improving Idaho economy is providing jobs. Porter said those jobs are luring people in from out of state as well as keeping young people in the state, and they're having a few more babies than normal.

And jobs tend to spur new jobs, he said. "To some degree it grows on itself. Part of it is confidence, in terms of people feeling more confident about starting their own businesses or expanding their companies," Porter said.

The populations of Magic Valley counties from 1980 to 1990 and from 1990 to 1992 have posted the following changes:

- Blaine County gained 3,711 residents in 1980s, then gained 1,331 by 1992 to reach 14,883.
- Camas County lost 91 residents in 1980s, then gained 28 by 1992 to reach 755.
- Cassia County gained 105 residents in 1980s, then gained 627 by 1992 to reach 20,159.
- Gooding County lost 241 residents in 1980s, then gained 397 by 1992 to reach 12,030.
- Jerome County gained 298 residents in 1980s, then gained 546 by 1992 to reach 15,684.
- Lincoln County lost 128 residents in 1980s, then gained 117 by 1992 to reach 3,425.
- Minidoka County lost 357 residents in 1980s, then gained 806 by 1992 to reach 20,167.
- Twin Falls County gained 653 residents in 1980s, then gained 2,420 by 1992 to reach 56,000.

Administration may slash welfare to finance reforms

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is considering cutting or slashing welfare benefits to the poor, elderly and disabled to finance expansions in training and child care for millions of single mothers on public assistance, officials say.

The administration's welfare reform task force is also eyeing strict limits on federal cash payments to the growing number of elderly people who immigrate to the United States legally and then retire on Supplemental Security Income, a senior administration official said Sunday.

To pay for its overhaul of a welfare system that supports 5 million families with children, most of them headed by a single mother, the administration has decided it must find offsetting savings in other federal welfare programs.

But an advocate for the poor says the very cuts the administration is now considering in SSI, food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children could hurt the working poor and near-poor in order to help other poor women get jobs.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the task force is considering several options to pay for welfare reform, but that no decisions are final.

"We are committed to a deficit-neutral plan in which revenue from these options would be used to pay for the new investments in child care, education and training," the official said.

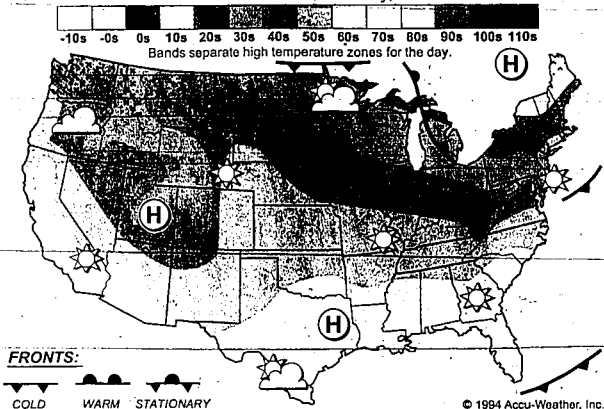

President Clinton's welfare reform legislation, to be introduced this spring, will seek to limit welfare benefits to single mothers to 24 months. Women would be given the training and day care they need to get a job and after two years, would be required to

Storms dump snow on Pacific Northwest, New England

By The Associated Press

A powerful storm system with wind gusts up to 80 mph brought heavy snow to the Pacific Northwest on Sunday, while a developing storm off the north Atlantic coast dropped lighter snow on New England.

Quiet weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, much of which was still digging itself out from last week's storms.

A vigorous cold front accompanied by strong winds battered Oregon and Washington early Sunday. Rain fell at the lower elevations, while snowfall was as heavy as 2 to 3 inches an hour in the Washington Olympics and Cascades.

A foot of new snow was reported Sunday morning at Snoqualmie Pass, and 27 inches of new snow was reported at the Mount Baker ski area. Storm totals are expected to reach 2 to 5 feet, with considerable drifts.

Snow was lighter across the mountains of Oregon and northern Idaho.

Strong winds developed out ahead of this storm system,

Weather summary

A Pacific storm was approaching northern Idaho late Sunday.

A strong band of westerly winds aloft was driving the weather system inland. Moderate snowfall was expected as the storm moved into the region.

However, most of the moisture with the system had already precipitated west of the Cascades. Still, the higher terrain of northern Idaho resulted in a few more inches of snow.

The highest temperature in the state Sunday was 52 degrees at Lewiston. Stanley reported the lowest at 23 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Sunday, the highest temperature was 87 degrees at West Palm Springs, Fla., and Gunnison, Colo., reported the lowest temperature at -21 degrees.

across portions of the northern Rockies, where winds with sustained speeds of 40 mph and gusts up to 61 mph were reported.

Meanwhile, an upper-level weather system raced into the northeastern United States, producing a light mixture of freezing drizzle, sleet and snow across portions of the mid-Atlantic and southern New England.

The heaviest snow fell on northern New England. Three inches were recorded at several sites in Maine, and up to 2 inches in New Hampshire.

In Delaware, a light freezing drizzle compounded last week's ice storm. Trees and utility poles continued to topple. Thousands of customers remained without power, and some weren't expected to have their electricity restored until Tuesday.

Numerous showers and thunderstorms pelted Hawaii, causing flash flooding in parts. More than 6 inches of rain fell Sunday morning at Princeville on the island of Kauai, and up to 5 inches fell elsewhere.

Woman wins dispute over hospital; baby dies

NEW YORK (AP) — A pregnant woman who wanted to be taken to the hospital for her choice was an argument Sunday, with an ambulance crew, but her child died shortly after being born there, officials said.

The ambulance crew had wanted to take Tracey Ortega to a hospital that is closer to her home. But Ortega wanted to go to St. John's Catholic Hospital because her obstetrician, Inok Rhee, is on staff there, said hospital spokesman, Steve Phelps.

Phelps said he could not provide any information on the cause of the child's death, but said Rhee "feels it was not possible to determine if a delay in treatment may have had an effect on the outcome for the baby."

EMS said in a statement the ambulance arrived at the woman's home at 3:23 a.m. and was en route to the hospital by 3:43 a.m.

Phelps said that when Ortega arrived at the hospital at 4:10 a.m., doctors diagnosed a "baby in distress." The infant died at 4:24 p.m., minutes after birth by Caesarean section, he said.

Serbs

drawn at least 12 miles from downtown Sarajevo by midnight Feb. 20.

But the U.N. commander for Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, seems to be pursuing whatever strategy will work to get control over the guns and enforce peace in the capital.

"The 10-day ultimatum is a NATO ultimatum, it is not our ultimatum," said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Bill Aikman.

Gen. Jean Cot, Rose's boss, met Saturday with Gen. Ratko Mladic, the Bosnian Serb commander, in northwest Bosnia near the besieged Muslim enclave of Srebrenica.

Cot said later that Mladic, the most powerful military man on the Bosnian Serb side, seemed to understand the necessity for the Serbs to get an initiative for peace in Sarajevo.

Vitaly Churkin, the Russian envoy for former Yugoslavia, said after meeting Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic in Belgrade that the powerful Serbian politician also supported peace moves.

The exact mechanism of how any air strikes might occur seems to be deliberately vague, in part because Russia — the Serbs' closest backer — wants to avoid endorsing them directly through the U.N. Security Council.

While the Bosnian Serbs have rejected NATO's ultimatum, their guns have been almost silent since Thursday. One artillery round was fired Sunday, and there were no injuries.

Rose, hustling to get his men in place while the sky is still clear of shrapnel and bullets, reinforced the French-occupied cease-fire lines with the first contingent of a 1,000-member Malaysian battalion.

Rose told reporters he plans to form a double-protection line, with French troops facing the Serbs and Malaysians facing the Muslim-dominated government side.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic called the lifting of the Sarajevo siege "a first step, but it doesn't give us freedom."

About 200,000 people have been killed or reported missing since the war began in April 1992 when Bosnia left the Serb-dominated Yugoslavia federation.

Welfare

find a job in the private sector. Those who are left behind would be required to do community service work.

Among the competing options under consideration is a plan to cap emergency AFDC assistance, a program that helps poor families avert being evicted or having their utilities shut off. In the fifth year after the administration's welfare reform takes effect, the cap would save $500 million.

Also on the table is a plan to treat AFDC, SSI and food stamps as taxable income, much like unemployment insurance, so that a person who lands a job after being on welfare part of the year would pay taxes on those benefits.

The government could save from $1.5 billion to $5 billion in the fifth year of welfare reform, but advocates of the proposal say such taxes undercut the administration's often-repeated promises to "make work pay."

Robert Greenstein, director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, said taxing welfare would primarily hurt low-income working families who collect food stamps and could push them deeper into poverty.

Another option under consideration is to limit SSI benefits to elderly immigrants.

The Clinton plan would require that the income of an immigrant's sponsor be counted in calculating welfare benefits until the immigrant becomes a citizen, not just the first five years after arriving in the United States.

That would save up to $4 billion in the fifth year.

The Treasury Department is also looking for ways to root out fraud in the Earned Income Tax Credit program, for the working poor, with potential savings of up to $1.5 billion a year.

The administration official said the task force is also studying limits on SSI disability payments to drug addicts and alcoholics, which have been growing rapidly in recent years.

Asked on NBC's "Meet the Press" about the tax boost idea, first reported Sunday by The New York Times, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole cracked that Democrats "just love to tax." But, he added: "I can't believe they are going to go out and tax poor people. ... I hope this is only a trial balloon."

Radiation

There are no guarantees the search will yield answers on the number of questionable radiation experiments or the fate of the people involved, officials say. In some cases, they said, files are missing because a hospital closed or long ago merged with another.

Even existing files may not have the data necessary to track patients or to determine whether they were adequately informed about the possible consequences of the research.

Gary Sanders, a leader of the document search at Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, estimated it may take 20 staffers six months or more — at a cost of about $1 million — to adequately search some 14,000 cubic feet of files dating to 1943. "It's a very large effort," Sanders said.

Still, Glenn Podonsky, head of the records retrieval effort for the Department of Energy, said he expects the searchers will be able to catalog the relevant DOE documents — which would include those at Los Alamos — within six months and at an estimated total cost of $15 million. That wouldn't include the searches by the other departments. "It is incumbent upon us to tell the whole story," Podonsky said. "In some cases, it's going to be difficult."

Study: States would save money under Clinton plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — States would spend $8 billion less on Medicaid aid to the poor under President Clinton's health reforms, but there would still be wide disparities in federal help for those patients, an Urban Institute study concludes.

The savings might not materialize for states already accustomed to getting extra federal Medicaid money through provider taxes and donations, the researchers said.

But overall, the states that now contribute $61 billion toward the $140 billion Medicaid program would wind up spending about $53 billion under Clinton's plan, the report states. The president's proposal would subsidize insurance for low-income families and some small businesses.

Officials in some states have expressed concern that the Clinton reforms might hurt them by eliminating most federal subsidies for the uninsured and leaving illegal immigrants uncovered.

A task force set up by New York Gov. Mario Cuomo recently claimed the state would lose $342 million in 1997, but would gain money in later years.

The Clinton administration, by contrast, claims its radical changes in Medicaid would save states $47 billion from 1996 to 2000, including $24 billion in the year 2000 alone.

Under Clinton's plan, most of the 31 million people on Medicaid would get subsidies to buy regular health insurance through the same new alliances that would be used by much of the rest of the population.

The federal and state governments would still pay for Medicaid for welfare recipients, and states would be required to pay the allowances what they now spend on non-welfare Medicaid recipients.

Also, the states and Washington would still split Medicaid costs of nursing home care for the poor and some other services. But some payments to hospitals that care for the poor and uninsured in large numbers would be largely eliminated.

They estimated total spending on health and welfare low-income residents would range from $1,436 in low-income states to $2,200 in high-income states — a 53 percent range.

The study estimated the federal government spends $327 per state resident through the Medicaid program. That figure would climb to $482 with the subsidies under the Clinton reform plan.

Mail heist probe leads to money laundering in Latin America

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Carolyn Ditzian doesn't send mail from her house anymore — she can't be sure who will cash her utility or tax payments. Her friend Ann Prochaska feels the same way.

Both were victims of a scheme in which thousands of dollars worth of personal checks were stolen from home mail boxes where they awaited pickup by mail carriers, and then laundered through Latin American banks.

Though the women — who live miles apart — were eventually reimbursed by U.S. banks that processed the checks, they say the incident has convinced them the sanctity of the U.S. mail is a fallacy.

"I had to repay everybody until I was reimbursed," said Ms. Prochaska, of suburban Davie. Checks of hers worth $4,000 were stolen last February. "I was just angry. I felt violated. I've never had anybody rob the house, but it felt the same."

Ms. Ditzian, who lost checks worth more than $5,000, including her property tax payment, said that initially no one wanted to hear her story.

"The first time I called police, they didn't even take a report on it," said Ms. Ditzian, 62, of Broward County. "The post office was called on the money."

Not so, says Postal Inspector Henry Gutierrez, who infiltrated the scam. Federal agents last month arrested five men, two from Argentina and three from Miami. All are charged with possession of stolen mail and could face 10 years in prison if convicted.

Gutierrez said he identified the main check fence and said money laundering charges are pending.

"There's still thieves down the line."

Ann Prochaska, left, and Carolyn Ditzian have had thousands of dollars in checks stolen from their mailboxes and deposited in Latin American banks for later withdrawal.

Argentina and Ecuador. Gutierrez said. "But they have no way of laundering the money."

Gutierrez said the men stole more than 1,000 checks worth about $1 million ranging from a 25-cent highway toll fee to a $42,000 check, and including everything from utility payments to catalog orders.

The checks were then sold to middlemen who deposited them in bank accounts opened under the names of fictitious businesses.

The accounts were throughout Latin America: Costa Rica, Brazil, Mexico, Guatemala, Bolivia, Peru,

In January, postal and Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents intercepted a package destined for Brazil, that contained more than 100 stolen checks worth $400,000. The arrests were made later in the month when some of the men tried to sell undercover agents $50,000 in stolen checks.

During most of the Clintons' involvement in Whitewater, revenues from the venture went to pay off principal and interest on the original $203,000 mortgage the two couples used to buy the property.

But after that loan was finally paid off in 1992, McDougal said the Clintons could have begun sharing in the small proceeds. Instead, they agreed to let McDougal — who had been felled by a stroke and depression and saw his financial empire collapse — keep the money they could have taken to cut their losses.

But Capt. Tamara Frezzell, a U.S. Military Academy graduate who commanded forces during the Gulf War, testified that she would have had no interest in attending V-WIL, even though it is in her native Virginia. The elements of VMI that are excluded "are what the military is all about," she said.

"If VMI were integrated, I would have gone to VMI," she said after testifying. "I wanted a rigorous, demanding, structured military environment because I believe that was the best preparation for a military career."

3 killed in convenience store robbery

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Three convenience store employees were shot to death during a robbery, police said Sunday.

The body of Fred Jones, 58, was found in a walk-in cooler at Casey's General Store around 1 a.m. The bodies of Mary Bratcher, 46, and a 57-year-old woman, whom police would not identify, were found in a restroom.

All three had been shot in the head. Police said they did not know how much money was taken.

Bratcher, the store's manager, had apparently gone to the store Saturday night to help close up. Neither Jones, a new employee, nor the other woman were familiar with the closing routine, police said.

The store closes at 11 p.m. There are no security cameras in the store, and the alarm system had not been activated, Deputy Police Chief Carroll Highberger said.

Wife convicted of murdering husband

MARSHALL, Ark. — A woman was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to life in prison for poisoning her husband with antifreeze. Bobbie Jean Nicholson, 49, of Jesselville showed no reaction as the verdict and sentence were read Saturday in Sevier County Circuit Court. Judge Watson Villines imposed the sentence of life without parole, the only other penalty in Arkansas for capital murder besides the death penalty.

Prosecutor H.G. Foster said Mrs. Nicholson killed her husband, Donald, to obtain an estate worth more than $600,000.

Nicholson, 57, died at the Marshall Motel and Restaurant on Sept. 11, 1992. Authorities initially believed the cause of death was a heart attack. But his two sons and a daughter insisted on an autopsy. It showed toxic levels of antifreeze.

The Nicholsons had been married about five years.

Taxi driver steers police to bank robber

LOS ANGELES — A taxi driver got a fat tip for driving a man to and from a bank, and that tip put him in a generous passenger's line of fire. Police say cabbie Ira Goldberg was the unwitting getaway driver for a man accused of robbing a Coast Federal Bank in suburban Granada Hills.

Goldberg said he picked up his passenger at a motel Thursday, took him to a liquor store, then to the bank, and finally dropped him off at another motel. The fare was $29.90 and the passenger gave him a total of $73.

In the meantime, knowing the robber rode away in a Valley Cab Co. car, police contacted Goldberg's employer and tracked him down.

Goldberg directed officers to a motel in suburban North Hills, where they arrested James Thomas Traversino.

Police chief was about to be investigated

WALPOLE, N.H. — A town selectman had confronted the town's police chief with accusations of wrongdoing days before the chief resigned, shot the selectman to death and killed himself. Selectman Roger Santaw found evidence of improprieties in the police department and passed his findings to state police, said Attorney General Jeffrey Howard.

"The (state) police were aware of the allegations and had spoken with Mr. Santaw about them," Howard said Sunday. "An official investigation was to commence next week."

Among other things, Santaw believed that Chief Carl Baird billed the town for equipment that was not bought, Howard said.

Venture profitable before Clintons left

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The money-losing Arkansas real estate venture that has entangled the first family in a federal investigation began generating a small income months before President and Mrs. Clinton sold their interest.

The Clintons decided not to take any of the money before ending their 14-year relationship with Whitewater Development Corp. in December 1992, one of their lawyers told The Associated Press.

In May 1992, Whitewater paid off its existing loans, enabling it to begin making a little money. Since then, those proceeds — which total less than $200 a month — have gone to the Clinton's former business partner, James McDougal.

"The Clintons have said they invested and lost nearly $69,000 during their years as co-owners of Whitewater," they formed the venture in 1978 with McDougal and his then-wife, Susan, to build a bustling vacation and retirement community on the banks of the White River in northern Arkansas' Ozark Mountains.

The venture is now a focus of a federal investigation into a failed Arkansas savings and loan owned by McDougal and other business dealings with ties to the Clintons.

The Clintons sold their half of Whitewater to McDougal in December 1992 for $1,000. They have said they never made any money on their investment.

During most of the Clintons' involvement in Whitewater, revenues from the venture went to pay off principal and interest on the original $203,000 mortgage the two couples used to buy the property.

But after that loan was finally paid off in 1992, McDougal said the Clintons could have begun sharing in the small proceeds. Instead, they agreed to let McDougal — who had been felled by a stroke and depression and saw his financial empire collapse — keep the money they could have taken to cut their losses.

College: Men, women learn differently

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — The issue of whether men and women learn differently is on trial as the Virginia Military Institute struggles to remain all-male. It wants a separate, but different military college for women set up at a former finishing school.

The Justice Department has sued VMI, saying the exclusion of women at the state-supported school is discriminatory. An appeals court agreed, but gave the state the option of setting up a similar program for women.

The Justice Department returned to court Wednesday to argue that the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership, proposed for the all-female Mary Baldwin College, is based on gender stereotypes. It wants U.S. District Judge Jackson Kiser to force VMI to admit women. Testimony was scheduled to resume today.

The V-WIL program would exclude the 24-hour military atmosphere at the 155-year-old men's school. There would be no Spartan barracks without privacy and no boot camp indoctrination.

Women would be required to participate in the Reserve Officer Training Corps, but after their freshman year, they would play tennis, golf and racketball, while VMI cadets participate in boxing, football and karate.

The V-WIL program would not require women to wear uniforms all the time, as required by the 1,300 cadets at VMI.

VMI's witnesses have said women would develop as better leaders in civilian and military life without the military atmosphere and "addictive model" of education. A program for women identical to VMI would fail for lack of interest, they said.

But Capt. Tamara Frezzell, a U.S. Military Academy graduate who commanded forces during the Gulf War, testified that she would have had no interest in attending V-WIL, even though it is in her native Virginia. The elements of VMI that are excluded "are what the military is all about," she said.

"If VMI were integrated, I would have gone to VMI," she said after testifying. "I wanted a rigorous, demanding, structured military environment because I believe that was the best preparation for a military career."

Scientists may have discovered malaria vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the wilds of Tanzania, 600 children are testing what could be a medical breakthrough: a malaria vaccine.

A new study shows the drug SPf66 stimulates the body's immune system. By 1998, researchers anticipate global vaccination for the disease, which strikes 300 million to 500 million people a year. Youngsters are the most vulnerable; malaria kills 1 million African children each year.

"If we have the right vaccine and the right resources, we could reach 80 percent of the people in Africa in just 24 months. It would make one whole of an impact," said Dr. D.A. Henderson, a renowned vaccine expert and an assistant U.S. health secretary.

But while Henderson says "we are hot on the right trail" with the testing in Tanzania, the fight against malaria may soon be jeopardized by budget cuts.

Malaria is spread by mosquito bites. Larvae enter the body through the bite, "swim" to the liver and incubate. Then the mature parasites re-enter the bloodstream and multiply while leaching vital hemoglobin and iron from red blood cells.

Doctors fight malaria with insecticides and a small arsenal of drugs. But strains in half of Africa have developed a resistance to the best malaria drug, chloroquine.

Twin Falls considers rim moratorium

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Today may be the last chance before summer to start development along the city's two canyon rims.

The City Council will consider a 120-day moratorium that would prohibit the issuance of permits for the zoning or subdivision of land adjacent to either the Rock Creek or Snake River canyons. The public can comment on the proposed moratorium ordinance at a 4 p.m. hearing at City Hall.

State law allows cities to adopt "emergency" ordinances and moratoriums for up to 120 days if there is "an imminent peril to the public health, safety, or welfare."

The council authorized consultant Lee Nellis to develop a master plan for the Snake River Canyon at its Jan. 24 meeting.

Timelines provided by Nellis show that a canyon rim master plan would be ready within five months.

A moratorium would allow the council to defer any zoning decisions on canyon rim developments until that plan is completed.

The council attempted to enact the moratorium Feb. 7, but City Attorney Fritz Wondrich informed the council that state law requires at least an "abbreviated notice of hearing" before starting a moratorium.

Also on the council's agenda:

- The reaffirming of the city's 1989 liability bond.
- A review of the city's 1993 crime statistics with police chief Paul Du Fresno.
- The appointment of members to the city's Industrial Development Corp.
- A review of the city's Visa credit card policy.

Around the valley

Twin Falls, Oakley students win honors

TWIN FALLS — For the second straight year, students from Twin Falls and Oakley high schools will represent the Magic Valley in a statewide scholastic tournament.

Twin Falls and Oakley won their respective classes at the Region IV tournament, held Saturday at the College of Southern Idaho.

Student teams from 21 high schools faced off in a battle of wits.

Twin Falls won Class A, which consisted of A-1 and A-2 division schools. The Bruins defeated Jerome High School in the regional finals. Minico finished third.

In Class B, consisting of A-3 and A-4 division schools, Oakley defeated Carey. Wendell finished third, while Filer took fourth place.

The state finals will be Feb. 26 in Boise. The tournament is sponsored by the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Mild winter produces faster, deadlier highways in Idaho

TWIN FALLS — Idaho motorists are dying almost three times faster in 1994 than they did last year, according to the Idaho State Police.

Twenty-one Idahoans have died on the highways as of Feb. 10, compared with eight fatalities at that same time last year.

Speeding has played a major role in many of this year's fatal car accidents, according to state troopers.

"People believe winter produces the most accidents and that's not true," said Sgt. Fred Becker, head of the ISP's Speed Task Force.

"The problem we've had this year is that January was relatively mild," Becker said. "Without the limitations of weather to slow them down, many motorists drive faster and thus the accidents, when they do occur, are more likely to involve fatalities."

In slick weather, motorists also need to remember to drive slower and to leave extra space between themselves and the car in front of them, he said.

Rep. Crapo schedules visit today - weather permitting

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Rep. Mike Crapo will tour the state's 2nd Congressional District Monday to announce he will seek a second two-year term in Washington.

Crapo is scheduled to speak at 12:10 p.m. Monday at the lobby of the Canyon Springs Inn. If the weather is inclement, Crapo will be in Twin Falls at 1 p.m. instead.

Mild winter produces faster, deadlier highways in Idaho

TWIN FALLS — Former Democratic state Sen. Ron Bettschacher of Grangeville will cross the state Tuesday to announce his gubernatorial candidacy.

Bettschacher will be appearing at the lobby of the Canyon Springs Inn at noon Tuesday.

Bettschacher and Attorney General Larry Echohawk are the only candidates seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

On the move

Scott Canning does not shy away from challenges. He recently began a term on the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission.

Jerome man not tied down

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Straps on his hands, feet and chest hold Scott Canning in his wheelchair, but he dreams of his future and maybe even getting married.

"I can't move, but I have no regrets. From the very beginning I've taken this as a challenge for my life," he said.

Canning, 29, was a Green Beret in the U.S. Army Special Forces in 1985 when he suffered a training accident that left him paralyzed from the neck down.

Now he gets around in a motorized wheelchair, operating a joy-stick control with his chin.

"It's much like playing a computer game with a joy stick," he said. "I can go ahead, back up, recline, turn — most anything I want to do."

"We sometimes forget he's in a wheelchair, he's so independent," his mother, Nancy Canning, said.

Canning was recently appointed to the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission.

"It's going to be very, very challengeing. There are a lot of important decisions on development that we're going to have to make," he said.

He attended his first commission meeting Jan. 31. His father, Bill Canning, at his side helped with documents arranged before the meeting. The new commission member had visited several locations in the county to familiarize himself with requests for special-use permits and rezoning.

"He did his homework," planning administrator Art Brown said.

Canning uses two telephones. One is a push button he operates with a mouth stick, and the other is voice activated. He also has a voice activated computer by his bed.

"I talk to it, and it turns lights on and off, calls out, and I could even see somebody at the front door and have the computer open the door if I wanted to," he said.

He recently bought a new computer system and uses a pointing device that operates much like a computer mouse. The pointer fastens to Scott's head and has a mouth piece, called a sip and puff switch, that he points with his head and puffs through to move functions on the screen.

Canning attributes his success in coping with his handicap to his family.

"They held my hand all the way and helped me make good decisions," Scott said.

"Scott is the baby of our family. His accident was devastating to all of us. He accepted it before we did. It took us a long time to adjust to him not being able to do anything for his care. But we finally realized that what he had left was a brilliant mind," Nancy Canning said.

Canning received a medical discharge from the Army and receives a retirement check each month. He has hired an assistant to help "with my body needs each morning. That takes about two hours each day," he said.

He also has worked as a volunteer scoutmaster at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

"I work a lot with cancer patients, just letting them talk and open up helps them to get on with their healing," he said.

Roller-coaster ride at Idaho's Statehouse

Draw DeSilver On politics

chief Joe Nagel went to Senate Resources to formally present the bill.

Normally, the Legislature will do Andrus the courtesy of introducing his bills, even if they're destined to go nowhere. But because of a close vote, a miscount and the absence of several Democrats, it appeared for a few minutes that the panel had rejected Andrus' proposal. Higginson and Nagel were steaming mad.

A few minutes later, the vote was corrected. The Democrats had returned, and the bill was introduced. "It was great while it lasted," quipped conservative Sen. Stan Hawkins, R-Ucon.

Sen. Dean Cameron's dressing-down on the Senate floor for using inappropriate language: House Education Chairman's Ron Black slamming down his gavel and bolting from his committee in the middle of debate; the Fish and Game Commission's breaking with Andrus over his bombing-range proposal — people in Boise seem more edgy these days, more prone to sudden, unexpected actions.

Why? Partly it's normal election-year jitters. Most everyone is running for something this year, so there's even more scheming and grandstanding than might be expected.

You saw some of that in 1992. But this year, Democrats and Republicans are scraping over Andrus' soon-to-be vacant office, and that raises the stakes even higher.

Andrus' retirement throws a note of uncertainty over just about everything, and the school-funding lawsuit is in the back of everyone's mind.

Whatever the cause, the second half of this year's legislative session promises to be even more of a roller coaster than the first.

Idaho Citizens Alliance Chairman Kelly Walton said last week that he's actively seeking someone to run against House Majority Leader Bruce Newcomb.

Walton is angry because Newcomb, a Burley Republican, has repeatedly expressed his disdain for the ICA's anti-gay rights initiative. Newcomb says the initiative is pointless, given that the chances of the Legislature enacting a gay-rights law are slim and none, and has suggested that the whole effort may be nothing more than a fund-raising ploy.

"Either Newcomb just isn't getting it, or he's naive," Walton said, pointing out that the Latah County town of Troy has added sexual orientation to its anti-discrimination law.

But Newcomb would be hard to beat. Besides being one of the best-liked people in the House, he's been unopposed at election time since 1986, and doesn't appear to have any vocal opposition in his Cassia County base.

Draw DeSilver covers politics for The Times-News.

Panel to look at water bill

Associated Press

BOISE — A House Resources and Conservation Committee hearing is scheduled Tuesday on a plan to keep eastern Idaho's largest farmer from leasing groundwater to irrigate about 7,300 acres of crops.

"It's a major, major issue, and it'll be a massive, massive hearing," committee Chairman Golden Linford, R-Reburg, said Thursday.

Legislation sponsored by Republican Reps. Bruce Newcomb of Burley and Steve Antone of Rupert would prohibit water transfers from agricultural lands that have been placed under the federal Conservation Reserve Program.

Since 1986, Blaine Larsen has brought about 4,200 acres under cultivation in the Hamer-Mud Lake area by leasing the rights to groundwater from farmers, primarily in the Magic Valley, whose land has been set aside under the federal program.

Larsen said he hopes to lease enough additional groundwater this year to bring about 3,000 acres more under cultivation. But that would be blocked by the proposal from Newcomb and Antone, which would be effective retroactive to Jan. 1.

Larsen said his water-leasing practices are "squeaky clean."

"I'm apparently the one who's causing the ruckus, but I haven't broken any laws," he said. "All I want to do is farm."

By forcing him to idle the farmland, Larsen said the legislation would cost him $6 million and force him to lay off up to 100 employees. He said it also would reduce his property tax payments in the area and hurt the economies of Clark, Fremont, Jefferson and Madison counties.

Larsen, who farms 32,000 acres, employed 1,759 workers and had an annual payroll of $9.8 million in 1992. His operations provide about one-third of Clark County's tax base.

But irrigators in the Magic Valley and Upper Snake River valleys contend water transfers like Larsen's are lowering the Snake River Plain Aquifer and threatening their historic water rights. "They've had to re-drill hundreds of commercial wells in my area," Antone said.

Newcomb himself is among the Magic Valley farmers protesting Larsen's applications for groundwater transfers. Joining them are civil companies, a Twin Falls fish farm and Idaho Power Co. — all concerned about how pumping water from underground affects downstream surface flows.

SkyWest keeps Hailey service unchanged

HAILEY — Friedman Memorial Airport won't get new scheduled flights, but SkyWest Inc. will begin flying jets into Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport, which will allow more planes to fly into both airports if the demand is there, SkyWest spokeswoman Annette Mikat said.

SkyWest officials recently said they were planning to increase the number of flights into Friedman Memorial in Hailey. Increasing flights was in reaction to Horizon Airlines' announcement that it is cancelling flights from Hailey to Salt Lake City International Airport to concentrate on serving Boise.

Instead, SkyWest will fly jets from Salt Lake City International Airport into Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport, starting next week.

SkyWest has daily flights into Twin Falls with a 30-passenger Brasilia turboprop plane. But from Tuesday to March 31, SkyWest's noon flight will have a 50-passenger Canadian Regional Jet, Mikat said.

With the addition of the larger Canadian jet, SkyWest will have extra Brasilias available to provide extra flights into Twin Falls or Hailey. If more than 30 passengers want to take a certain flight. If that happens then two Brasilias can be flown to accommodate the extra demand, she said.

Land board decision highlights battle between tradition, change

By Quane Kenyon
The Associated Press

BOISE - It wasn't ranchers against environmentalists at a highly emotional state Land Board meeting this past week.

It was tradition against change. Tradition won this time, but it will inevitably lose future battles.

The Land Board, made up of five top state officials, reflects Idaho politics and it was political reality as much as legality that caused the board to vote 4-1 to reverse previous decisions and let a well-established Custer County ranching family continue leasing a 640-acre section of state land.

"There was a lot of symbolism there," state Sen. Laird Noh, a Kimberly sheep rancher, said of the vote.

Environmentalist Jon Marvel and his Idaho Watershed Project lost the chance to take land out of stock grazing to show how water quality in streams would improve once cattle are fenced out.

The 640-acre parcel that mobilized livestock interests - rancher Will Ingram and his family lease more than 100,000 acres of public lands in the region and said they could have gotten along without that allotment.

What was important was the

Analysis

precedent - one that pitted environmental concern against Idaho's traditional land-based rural economy.

Marvel, a Hailey architect, is not backing away. He may appeal the Custer County decision and will go after other grazing tracts in Bingham, Clark, Cassia, Twin Falls and Owyhee counties.

Noh acknowledges there may be some state tracts suitable for recreation or something besides cattle grazing. But he says that's nothing new.

"Those opportunities always have been there. It always has been possible for any legitimate user to apply to use the land."

Board members maintain it wasn't a political decision, although Gov. Cecil Andrus, the only dissenter, noted wryly that he was the only one not running for election this year. Presumably that left him free to vote on the issue without worrying about the political repercussions in a state where agriculture remains a force.

The state Department of Lands has over 1,300 leases covering nearly 1.9 million acres of range and crop land. With a life of 10 years, about 130 come up for renewal annually.

The department gets about a dozen challenges to lease renewals each year, and it's always involved groups wanting to use the land for the same thing, livestock grazing or farming. An auction awards the lease to the highest responsible bidder.

The attempt by environmentalists to wrest the Ingram lease from grazing was unprecedented and will certainly be repeated.

It has left state Sen. John Peavey of Carey, the Democrats' candidate for lieutenant governor, with his foot in both camps and feeling uneasy.

Both a staunch environmentalist and a third-generation Blaine County sheepman who has family leases huge amounts of range for grazing, Peavey is disturbed by what he calls Marvel's "in your face" approach.

He sympathizes with the Ingrams, whom he calls good users of public lands over a long time.

And he realizes he may face a decision on legislation that would prohibit future efforts by environmentalists to take land out of grazing.

Cooperation, in his view, would be better all the way around.

"Why not sit down and work with people to fix the riparian areas if there is a problem?" he asked.

Filer trustees to meet with firm that may help design new high school

By Earl LeMaster
Times-News correspondent

FILER - The school district and the district's long range planning committee will meet with architect Jay Christopherson of the architectural firm C.A. Alliance of Providence, Utah at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Middle School Library.

The planning committee has recommended that the school board select C.A. Alliance as the architectural firm to design a new high school.

School Superintendent Bill Feuslars said C.A. Alliance is being considered by the board to design of a new school and remodeling of existing school buildings.

The planning committee recently told the board that a new high school is needed to solve overcrowding in the district. Teachers now conduct classes in hallways and converted storage areas, students eat lunch in classrooms and two schools share a cramped library.

At the top of the committee's list of priorities to relieve crowding and correct health and safety code problems at the district's schools is a new 450-student high school with a 1,500-seat gym. The proposed high school would have core facilities to accommodate 600 students to allow for expansion.

Members of the committee and the school board have scheduled a trip to Utah to visit buildings that C.A. Alliance have designed.

In other business:

- The board renewed the contracts of the district's four principals for one year.
- The board adopted a new policy on search, tenure and questioning of students. Under the policy, periodic inspections of lockers add desks may be made without permission of students or parents. No search warrant is required, because the school district owns the lockers and desks. Reasonable cause must be established to search the student, students' cars, and other personal property of students.

- The board hired Lori Hurley as the new middle school custodian.
- The board approved a field trip for the advanced biology and chemistry classes to the University of Utah Salt Lake City where the trip will cost each student $55.00 and will last for two days. It is scheduled for May 3rd and 4th for biology students and May 10th and 11th for the chemistry students.

- Feuslars told board members that they need a policy on bringing guns and other weapons to school district buildings or functions.
- The next regular meeting of the school board is 7 p.m. March 8th.

Husband, lawyer, friend tight-lipped on suspected assisted suicide death

VICTORIA, British Columbia (AP) - Sue Rodriguez's husband, lawyer and best friend each said Sunday they weren't with her when she died from what police called a suspected assisted suicide.

Rodriguez's death Saturday came just four months after the Supreme Court of Canada turned down her appeal for a doctor's help to commit suicide.

Meanwhile, the provincial coroner's office said investigators will perform an autopsy, including toxicology tests to determine whether she received a lethal injection.

Rodriguez, 43, had been suffering from Lou Gehrig's disease, an incurable and fatal nerve condition that slowly shuts down all the body's muscular functions. She had been confined to a wheelchair with little ability to move or speak.

After the top court ruling last September, Rodriguez said she hadn't ruled out seeking the procedure anyway from an unnamed physician who volunteered to help end her suffering.

Rodriguez died at her large, picturesque home in a peaceful neighborhood north of the city.

Police were summoned and later issued a terse news release saying Rodriguez "apparently died as the result of an assisted suicide."

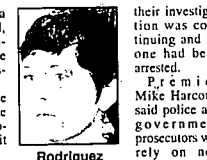

Those closest to the former runner and skier, however, were saying little.

Henry Rodriguez declined to say Sunday who was with his wife when she died, though he made it clear that whatever happened, he wasn't involved. "I wasn't here when it occurred," he said, at the front door of the home, as the couple's 8-year-old son looked on. "I really don't have anything else to say about it."

Helma Libick, a longtime friend who helped Rodriguez to eat and wash during her final days, was also tight-lipped, saying she didn't know anything about the circumstances of the death. "I'm just glad she's in peace," Libick said.

Even Rodriguez's lawyer, who issued a news release Saturday containing her parting message calling for legalization of assisted suicide, said he had no idea how his client died.

"I know what she wished to say and that is in her statement," said Chris Constantine. "It was prepared many weeks ago."

Rodriguez

their investigation was continuing and no one had been arrested.

Premier Mike Harcourt said police and government prosecutors will rely on new provincial euthanasia guidelines in deciding whether anyone should be charged.

The guidelines say helping someone to kill themselves is illegal in the province, but the Crown retains discretion over whether to file charges in individual cases.

The guidelines say it's legal for a physician to administer medication or other treatment to a terminally ill patient with the intention of relieving pain or suffering, even though this may hasten death.

But it's illegal "to advise, encourage or assist another person to perform an act that intentionally brings about his or her death."

Rodriguez's struggle for an assisted suicide became a battleground for opposing interest groups.

Gridlock over Medicaid funding hurting Idahoans

It's time for the governor and the Legislature to stop fighting over Medicaid funding. The ones most hurt by this partisan bickering are those who need help paying their medical bills, and taxpayers who need property tax relief.

In 1991, the state agreed to pay counties' share of catastrophic health care costs of $10,000 or more in an effort to provide property tax relief to counties. Previously, counties were paying the entire medical bill for indigent emergency medical care, but not qualifying for Medicaid.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said the state would pick up the cost on the condition that the Legislature fund his Medicaid Needy program. That program would help single parents and children who don't qualify for Medicaid, but would be on welfare and/or bankrupt if they didn't get help paying staggering, emergency medical bills.

The Legislature agreed. So the state picked up the counties' cost. But then the Legislature reneged on its promise and refused to fund Medicaid Needy. In response, the governor last year vetoed state funds for catastrophic care.

Now, we're doing without either and indigents and county health budgets are suffering. Both Tetton and Payette counties face lawsuits from Salt Lake hospitals for not paying indigent medical bills.

Legislators say Medicaid Needy will become too costly. But, not having it is also costly. Those who would benefit from such a program currently about 1,000 single parents and 3,000 children must get their bills paid in other ways, all costly to taxpayers. Working parents often quit jobs and qualify for Medicaid to get their bills paid. Or, the entire medical bill is left for the county to pay, penalizing taxpayers. Or, the hospital writes it off, raising costs for those who can afford to pay for insurance and medical care. One way or the other, taxpayers pay. Under Medicaid Needy, recipients would help pay the bill. Now they don't. Plus, 70 percent is paid by the federal government, not from county property taxpayers. True, that's taxpayer money, as well, but at least the federal match spreads the cost out, rather than limiting it to property taxpayers.

The stories about the sad state of welfare go on and on. Time and again, we hear of people who quit jobs to qualify for the benefits of welfare.

Here's a program that keeps working people off welfare. It requires them to pay off their medical bills until very little is left over for the necessities of life. For instance, a family of two earning $1,000 a month would be required to pay $661 a month in medical bills. After that, Medicaid Needy takes over.

It's a great idea. It gets the bills paid, and it prevents families from going bankrupt, counties from picking up medical bills and hospitals from passing them on to others. It's an example of welfare over welfare, a concept one would think would be popular among the eastern Idaho delegation but is not.

It's a concept that legislators covered by the same state, taxpayer-funded health policy ($2,300 per legislator, per year) that covers all full-time state employees find hard to grasp. They don't mind getting taxpayer-funded insurance. But they don't see why a single, working mother might need some assistance to keep her from losing her home or going on the dole, should get Medicaid. Nearly 50 years later, the words of Harry Truman still ring true. I usually find that those who are loudest in protesting against medical help by the federal government are those who do not need help.

Valentine's Day — a time for love (and hate)

This Valentine season of love is turning into a season of hate — and the "greeting cards" are coming from the likes of Byron de la Beckwith, Louis Farnham's deputy Khalid Abdul Muhammad, Russian ultra-nationalist Vladimir Zhirinovskiy and even Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

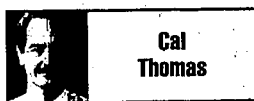

Consider some of the chilling "verses" they have penned for us.

At Beckwith's third trial — at which he was convicted of the murder of civil rights leader Medgar Evers 31 years ago — one witness testified that Beckwith told a meeting of Ku Klux Klan leaders, "Killing that n— didn't cause me any more discomfort than our wives have when they have a baby."

Muhammad told a college audience in New York that Jews were "sucking blacks' blood on a daily and consistent basis" and that the Holocaust may have been justified. Zhirinovskiy said: "The United States is being overrun by blacks and Hispanics. You and us, the Russians, share the same threat from the dark-skinned people from the Third World." He has also said: "I would bomb the Japanese. I would sail our large navy around their small island, and if they so much as cheerped, I would nuke them."

Sen. Hollings, likening black Africans attending a meeting in Geneva to cannibals, said: "You'd find these potentes down in Africa, you know, rather than eating each other, they'd just come up and get a good square meal in Geneva."

Most of us are sickened by these pronouncements and wonder where such disturbing attitudes come from. This kind of hate, bigotry and racism has roots that run deep into what is now called a "dysfunctional" early life.

Tommy Tarrants knows something about this life. He was once in charge of terrorist activity for the Ku Klux Klan in Mississippi in 1967 and '68. Tarrants says his conversion to Christ transformed his feelings about blacks and Jews. He now co-pastors an integrated church in Washington, D.C.

Tarrants says his Mobile, Ala., high school was among the first targeted for desegregation in 1963. "I got carried away by the anger and excitement, and it opened me up to reading racist and anti-Semitic literature and voluntarily associated with people who supported such views."

"A lot of hate groups are from the lower socioeconomic level," notes Tarrants. "One way to lift yourself up is to put someone else down."

Psychiatrist and author David Allen, Ph.D., agrees and thinks the roots of bigotry start in the home. "People exhibit by disavowing their inadequate part and projecting that inadequate part onto other persons or groups of people," says Allen. "Their sense of inadequacy makes them feel more inadequate, and these inadequate feelings can exist among rich whites and poor blacks or the reverse."

Allen believes that a caring parent is the key to holding children's positive and negative feelings about themselves together so that the negative doesn't overwhelm the positive.

Zhirinovskiy, Allen says, is a special case, because (like Hitler) he projects his inadequacies onto the masses. These people, already alienated and feeling disfranchised, bond quickly to a leader who fixes blame outside of themselves and promises quick and easy solutions to their predicament. A Zhirinovskiy, like a Hitler, can quickly achieve dictator status as the adoration of the masses meets his inner need and, in turn, their fears are assuaged by the strong leader who tells them not the truth but what they want to hear.

This is why rebukes, while necessary, are not enough. Rebukes alone merely affirm the wounded psyches of those who are already bruised. As long as the groups such people lead remain small, they are an irritation at worst. But when these groups become large, massive damage can be done. Even one person, such as a Byron de la Beckwith, when consumed by hate, can kill.

I wonder what effect a Valentine sent by one who loves to one who hates might have. Am I too naive? Perhaps, but it just might help in the healing process. I think I'll send one to a recent correspondent who called me a "Jew lover."

Cal Thomas writes for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Why does Andrus want range?

An Idaho Statesman story on Nov. 19, 1993, in reference to the proposed 25,000-acre addition with the Mountain Home Air Force Base Bombing Range broke very little new ground except to set forth certain objections to the proposal by the Bureau of Land Management and Idaho Fish and Game officials — objections which were promptly pooh-poohed by a Mr. David Jett, described as "Gov. Andrus' spokesman."

The main objection by Fish and Game seemed to be that the proposed area for a bombing range included 8,500 acres currently used as a birthing area by pronghorn antelope and that the destruction of this sagebrush habitat would "likely result in a drop in population" (of pronghorns).

Mr. Jett's rebuttal: "They (the antelope) might not be affected." Well, that is possible, providing the animals were all first blindfolded, equipped with earplugs and administered time-release doses of propane. I would suggest that perhaps Mr. Andrus and Mr. Jett search out a bombing range presently in use, set up their tent in the center of said range and make like Boy Scouts for a few days to determine whether or not the experience might be conducive to procreantial activity.

The second objection by Fish and Game had to do with loss of habitat due to fires started by so-called "marker" bombs, which, as Air Force officials seemed eager to explain, shoot out flames 6- to 8-foot long for about a "length of a second."

Somewhat, in spite of the claimed brevity of duration, the "6- or 8-foot flame" still seems to be a bit more dangerous than a toddler playing with a cigarette lighter.

Air Force officials have countered with a flat statement to the effect that they can "stomp out fires quickly and contain them within the 25,000-acre target area." One would certainly hope so.

It is rumored that several hours of brainstorming on methods of fire suppression have resulted in a plan to equip each aircraft with a shovel, an axe and a bucket of water. A backup plan requiring each crew member to ingest a quart or so of liquid just prior to take-off has reportedly been dropped.

The comments by the BLM dealt with the so-called "starle effect" of jets suddenly thundering overhead.

Mr. Jett, of course, disagreed but will probably have a change of heart — along with several changes of underwear — if he and Mr. Andrus take the little camping trip suggested earlier.

The Statesman story failed once again to shed any light on a continuing mystery: Why does the state's chief executive, who has built a solid reputation as an ardent environmentalist, suddenly so strongly advocate the trashing of this huge parcel of virgin desert?

Could there be a joker in this deck?

Judge misinformed about E911

First off, I would like to make something clear. Judge Wood's ruling that the Joint Powers Agreement was not done in a timely manner is not correct. The Joint Powers Agreement was done within 180 days. He was given misinformation; he was given a copy of an Amended Joint Powers Agreement. The original agreement was signed in a timely manner.

As for Judge Wood's opinion in Lincoln County's case, do the commissioners have the authority to establish an emergency communication system outside of county boundaries? His opinion was — no, they don't. I would like to remind everyone that this is just an opinion, the matter does not go to court until April. In Chapter 48 of the Emergency Communications Act, Section 31-4802, Definition (4) states: "911 Service Area" means an area other than a whole county in which residents have voted to establish a consolidated emergency communications system. In my opinion, the court misinterpreted the law. I feel the legislative intent was always to promote regionalization, not to limit it.

The E911 system has taken a long time. I feel the board is as frustrated as the citizens it serves. There has been one road block after another. At present, the ground has been purchased, power and phone trunk lines are ready to be installed. The second set of bids for the building are in and ready to be accepted by the board. The project is ready to go!

A letter from the Magic Valley Chiefs of Police Association stated that they are directly affected by the proposed E911 system and would pursue a county-by-county system. The city of Twin Falls backed out of the Regional E911 over this letter. I would like to say that the police chiefs acted without gathering first-hand information on what the Joint E911 can offer us, county-by-county. Their acting representative on the Joint Board has never attended a meeting. He has been the police chiefs' representative for one year. Now tell me where they get their information — definitely not first-hand.

Unfortunately this has turned into a political turf battle. Some of the users of this system have forgotten what the E911 system is trying to do. Let's not forget that we elected officials as well as city and county employees to work for the citizens of our communities — not to build their own little castles. The losers will end up being the people of our communities.

Burley House of Fabrics thriving

This is in response to an article that appeared in The Times-News on Dec. 16, 1993, and was written by Mick Normington. It referred to the future of the Blue Lakes Mall, Fred Meyer and, more specifically, the House of Fabrics of Twin Falls, a tenant.

The article stated that House of Fabrics would be closing "its" 105 stores, including the Twin Falls store. Although there was a correction printed the next day stating the corporation was closing 105 smaller mall stores and leaving its larger stand-alone stores open, we at the House of Fabrics located in the Snake River Plaza in Burley have heard of few who saw the correction. So, therefore, I would like to clarify a few things.

First of all, these 105 smaller, mostly mall stores would possibly be closed as their leases expire. Some would be converted to the new, more profitable "super store" concept, some would be moved to a better location and some would be closed. Since the inquiries at my store have been often and many, I felt that I needed to set the record straight.

The Burley House of Fabrics store, one of more than 650 House of Fabrics stores, is located in the east end of the Snake River Plaza and, last year, was enlarged into a super store. It includes a large home decorating department and an expanded craft department — each with its own manager, a bridal department and sewing machine department. We also have a classroom, complete with sewing machines and sergeants for our students' use.

While we are very sorry about the closing of our sister store in Twin Falls, we would like to report that we are alive and well in Burley and are very willing to serve the Twin Falls House of Fabrics customers.

CARLEEN B. CLAYVILLE

Manager, House of Fabrics

Idaho already has been bought

The Land Board's hands were tied by political handcuffs. Thanks to Randy Smith of the GOP for furthering the political polarization of our state. By stating in a press release before the Land Board hearing on the Idaho Watersheds Project bid to fence and heal 40 of a 640-acre parcel of overgrazed and abused public land that the three Democrats on the board had "the choice of voting for their chairman or for Idaho's ranchers," you have opened a huge can of rotting lamb. I hope Mr. Marvel resigns his position with the Democratic Party, as it will only hinder future Idaho Watersheds Project bids. To reduce an important issue as this to such a trivial partisan level serves only yourself. It baffles me.

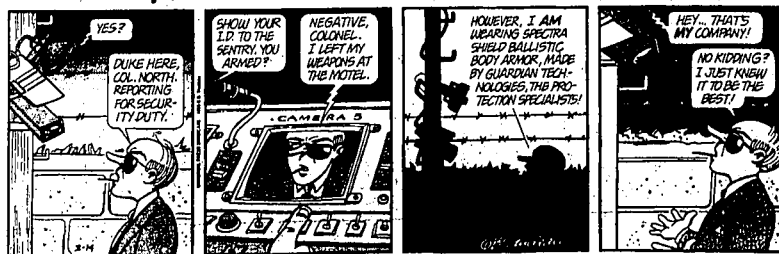

I'm sure questions about the constitutional-ity of the board's decision will be raised.

Mr. Echohawk would surely lose votes next year, as would Mr. Williams. The outgoing governor was the only one who could vote with his conscience, not his politics. The whole thing was a sham. Mr. Cennarra is a rancher and leaseholder, he should have disqualified himself and Mr. Evans is just another GOP errand boy doing what he is told to do. The democratic way. What a joke. No wonder nothing is ever accomplished in this state. The good old boys with the fattest wallets always win. It doesn't matter what is best for the future, the health of the land, the quality of the water. When Idaho's ranchers, loggers, miners and farmers have been poisoned, destroyed, looted and raped our public land to death, we, the public, will have sat on our lazy butts and let them do it.

There are honest and able ranchers using public lands, but the vile stench of the bad ones, their animals, and their representatives have ruined it for you. I'm truly sorry for the good stewards, but the smell of Idaho lamb and cattle makes me sick. Until the state can learn to play fair and the abusers of our public land are held accountable for their abuse, you will not find Idaho lamb on my table, and you can bet I am not the only one who feels this way. You want me to buy Idaho. I think it already has been bought, and the price was pitifully low.

Diplomats say Haiti fuel center blast won't hurt shortages much

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — A spectacular explosion that destroyed the capital's main center for contraband gasoline will probably not seriously worsen Haiti's fuel shortage from a U.N. embargo, diplomats said Sunday.

They said smuggling of fuel from the neighboring Dominican Republic has increased recently in defiance of the embargo imposed in effort to force the army to let President Jean-Bertrand Aristide return to power.

There was no indication of sabotage in the explosion late Saturday, which set off a fire that destroyed a half-block of buildings on Rue de Cesar in downtown Port-au-Prince.

No casualties were reported, but authorities said Sunday they could not be sure until the wreckage was searched. About a dozen soldiers guarded the site while firefighters sprayed water over the smoldering ruins.

A stretch of warehouses, stores and at least one hotel was destroyed by the blaze, which lit up a blacked-out stretch of the city. Tons of thousands of gallons of contraband gasoline and diesel fuel were stored in the warehouses in 55-gallon drums, eight-gallon plastic containers or one-gallon jugs.

Haiti's already impoverished economy has suffered from the fuel embargo imposed in October after military leaders reneged on an agreement to allow the return of Aristide. He was overthrown by a bloody coup in September 1991 after less than a year in power as the country's first freely elected president.

The army has stockpiled gasoline

Haitians carry their belongings away from an area destroyed by fire in Port-au-Prince Sunday. A Saturday night explosion blackened the capital's main center for contraband gasoline.

in underground deposits around the capital, but the fuel at the burned warehouses was the main source of sales to ordinary and well-to-do Haitians. With the normal importers observing the embargo, Haitians have been storing fuel in makeshift stockpiles throughout the capital.

"The embargo is the root cause of this catastrophe," said Carl Denis, head of the far-right National Coalition, which wants to suspend the constitution and hold new presidential elections to replace Aristide.

Diplomats predicted Haitians would easily replace the fuel.

Speaking on condition of anonymity, a Western diplomat said gasoline and diesel fuel are being brought in through several routes from the Dominican Republic, which shares the Caribbean island of Hispaniola with Haiti.

Despite an increased Dominican military presence on the border, fuel is getting to Haiti on skiffs along the north coast, rowboats across central Saumatre Lake and in some vehicles crossing the border, he said.

He and another diplomat said the Dominicans have periodically tightened patrols along the border.

Somalis kidnap Italian aid workers

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Somali gunmen kidnapped two Italian aid workers Sunday, and an Egyptian peacekeeper was killed and another wounded in an ambush of their military convoy.

Maj. Chris Budge, a United Nations spokesman, said aid workers Sergio Passatore and Gianfranco Stefan were kidnapped at Jowhar, about 50 miles north of Mogadishu. They were believed to be working for the Italian charity CEFA.

Budge said he had no further details on the abductions.

The Egyptians were attacked on the bypass road linking U.N. headquarters in Mogadishu with the airport and port, both U.N. military and supply bases. The road was built by U.S. Army engineers so U.N. vehicles could avoid routes through Mogadishu that are more vulnerable to attack.

No details of the ambush were available from Budge. Egyptian troops or the Pakistani U.N. contingent, which provides security along the bypass road, was not known if troops in the convoy exchanged fire with the attackers.

The attack raised the casualty toll for U.N. peacekeepers to 81 dead and 329 wounded since the United Nations took over the humanitarian mission from an American-led military coalition last May.

The U.S.-led force arrived in December 1992 to save the Horn of Africa nation from famine and clan warfare. More than 350,000 Somalis died of hunger, disease and fighting that year.

Sunday's incidents were part of a pattern of escalating violence that has accompanied the gradual withdrawal of American and other Western troops from the U.N. peace-keeping force in Somalia.

This has included attacks on offices and warehouses of several private aid organizations in various parts of southern Somalia and a surge of clan fighting north and south of Mogadishu.

In the past week, factional fighting in Kismayu, a port about 300 miles south of Mogadishu, killed seven people and wounded 42 by U.N. count and further skirmishes were expected.

Palestinian ambush kills 1 Israeli

BEITUNIYA, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Palestinian gunmen sprayed automatic gun fire at a car carrying Israeli security agents in the occupied West Bank on Sunday, killing one and injuring two, officials said.

The ambush occurred as agents of the Shin Bet, Israel's internal security service, drove by the village of Beituniya, six miles north of Jerusalem, said Maj. Gen. Shaul Mufaz, commander of the occupied West Bank forces.

Three agents were wounded but returned fire, Mufaz said, adding he did not know how many gunmen were involved.

One Israeli died en route to Hadassah hospital in Ein Kerem, spokeswoman Jennifer Bassu told The Associated Press. She said all three were in civilian clothing.

The army clamped a curfew on Beituniya and nearby Ramallah, and cut off electricity in El Amari refugee camp. Soldiers reportedly detained two suspects during searches for the gunmen.

The agents' white Mercedes car was wrapped in canvas and then towed away to conceal it from photographers. Security sources said more than 40 bullets were fired.

Army radio reported that the attack was claimed by Izzedine el Qassam, the military arm of Hamas, a radical Muslim group opposed to the Israel-PLO peace accord. Hamas has been blamed for most of the attacks on Israelis since the accord was signed Sept. 13.

Violence against the peace agreement has escalated since Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization agreed Wednesday on security arrangements for the proposed Palestinian autonomy.

Video reveals few clues to Munch painting theft

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Despite a video of two men stealing the country's most famous painting — "The Scream" by Edvard Munch — police said Sunday they had no clue as to who the thieves were.

"We have received certain tips but nothing firm," said police duty officer Ingebrigt Eldegard. He said a reward may be posted.

Police were searching for a Mercedes station wagon the two men were believed to have used when they drove away from the National Art Museum on Saturday morning.

A video taken by a security camera, broadcast on television, showed a man climbing a ladder on the exterior of the museum and entering the building through a window. Fifty seconds later he handed the painting to his waiting accomplice beneath the window. The camera filmed the men from a distance and the picture quality was poor.

Police and art experts said it was highly improbable that the painting could be sold since it is so well known.

Munch painted several versions of "The Scream," but the stolen one is regarded as the most important. Executed in garish colors and sinuous, powerful brush strokes, it shows a figure on a bridge, screaming for a discernible reason, with two shadowy figures stand in the background.

Inkatha leader warns party

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi told followers Sunday to prepare themselves for "casualties and even death" after his party's decision to boycott the nation's first all-race election.

The Inkatha Freedom Party's decision to sit out the April voting will lead to heightened violence, Buthelezi said. He accused the rival African National Congress of having already started "ethnic cleansing" against his people.

An ANC leader told 5,000 chanting supporters Sunday that it was Inkatha and the white right-wing that was leading the country toward civil war.

"We warn them that we have put our lives down for freedom before," Tokyo Swale, the ANC's leader in the Johannesburg-Pretoria region, said at a rally in the violence-scarred black community of Tokozo outside Johannesburg. "We have to do it again, we will not hesitate."

The Zulu nationalist Inkatha party called for the boycott Saturday, hours before the deadline for registering for the first election to include South Africa's black-majority. Nineteen other parties, including the ANC and the governing National Party, met the deadline.

The ANC, which led the fight against white minority rule since its founding 82 years ago, is expected to lead the voting in the April 26-28 election.

Months of talks involving Inkatha, right-wing whites, the government and the ANC deadlocked last week over how much power regional governments would have under a new constitution.

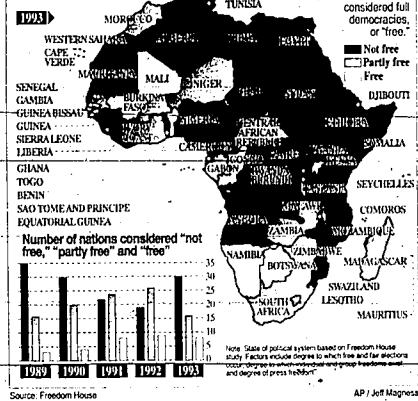

Negotiating as the Freedom Alliance, Inkatha and the ANC reject setting up territories on the basis of race or tribe.

"There are people in this country who are claiming that they must give their own land. That will not happen," ANC lead Nelson Mandela told a cheering crowd of 5,000 during a campaign speech Sunday in Retreat, in the southwest.

President F.W. de Klerk scheduled a meeting today with Zulu King Goodwill Zwelithini. Buthelezi's nephew, seeking to break the impasse, ANC set talks next week with the Bophuthatswana black homeland, another Freedom Alliance member.

"We'll continue to try to negotiate, even after the elections," Mandela told reporters.

Sun Valley skating rink open again

The Times-News

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley Ice Skating Center's indoor arena is open again; nearly three weeks after gas from an ice resurfacing machine made more than two dozen people ill.

Representatives of Sun Valley Co., an environmental health specialist for the South Central District Health Department and an independent ice rink engineer investigated the arena and its equipment during the closure.

They concluded that a propane-burning ice resurfacing machine emitted abnormal concentrations of nitrogen dioxide.

Sun Valley officials said the arena's ventilation system and the rink's air quality monitoring system were expanded, and the ice resurfacing machine was repaired before the arena was reopened Friday.

Four Minnesota hockey players were hospitalized for nitrogen dioxide poisoning after Jan. 21 game at the rink. Ten other Minnesota Stallions and at least 12 Sun Valley Suns players were treated for respiratory difficulties, flu-like symptoms and headaches.

Three fans at the game and the ice machine's driver also became ill.

Hepatitis takes bite out of Valentine fun

BOISE (AP) — A big increase in hepatitis A cases statewide has prompted Boise-area health officials to advise against parents bringing home-baked Valentine treats to their children's schools.

"It is a recommendation," said Kathy Holley, nursing director for the Central District Health Department.

The same recommendation goes for day-care centers. Public health officials want the practice of passing out homemade goodies stopped for a month.

EPA gives state, Triumph chance to avoid cleanup list

The Associated Press

HAILEY — The Environmental Protection Agency may withdraw a proposal to add the central Idaho town of Triumph to the Superfund cleanup list if the state proves all environmental and health risks are addressed.

"The EPA has begun taking the view that there's more than one good way of cleaning up a site," Randy Smith, director of the agency's regional Hazardous Waste Division, said last week at a meeting with Triumph residents, state officials and the Blaine County Commission.

Almost 1 million cubic yards of mine tailings contaminated with lead and arsenic are on the ground in Triumph, a former mining community of about 4,500 people northeast of Hailey. The EPA proposed it for Superfund cleanup last May after a two-year investigation.

Last week, the state Division of Environmental Quality formally asked the EPA to defer adding Triumph to the federal Superfund List and allow the state to oversee the site's cleanup.

The Idaho Department of Lands asked legislative budget writers recently to appropriate $1 million for the state's role in the process.

Henry Longest, director of the EPA's national office of Emergency and Remedial Response, said the state's request for deferral was a start toward making the case for keeping Triumph off the Superfund list.

"This would definitely be a precedent-setting decision, whatever you look at it," Longest said. "For that reason, a very good case would have to be made."

Smith said a decision on deferring the final Superfund listing could take six to eight weeks.

Now that the Division of Environmental Quality has submitted its request, the state will begin working on agreements with "potentially responsible parties" and the EPA on details of remediation and its financing.

The Department of Lands, which owns land on which some of the tailings are located, and ASARCO have expressed a willingness and financial ability to work with the Division of Environmental Quality to clean up the site, an official from the state attorney general's office said.

Kevin Beaton said a third potentially responsible party, Triumph Minerals Inc., "does not have the financial capability to see through the next step of the process."

we can negotiate from," Adair said. The amendment would allow each city to pay according to ability.

Miller has been appointed by the EPA to a 15-member task force, eight of which are from the West. He will go to Washington, D.C. in March to work further on the mandate problems.

"We didn't think this was going to take off the way it did," Adair said.

Lewis Pence of Gooding, who helped organize the coalition, said the people in federal agencies don't understand the communities.

"We're going to try to make government work right from this level up," Pence said.

MAC meetings are public and have been as monthly luncheon meetings in Gooding. The next meeting is at noon Feb. 22 at Zep's Pizzas & Subs, 215 Main St. in Gooding.

'We're going to try to make government work right from this level up.'

The city's sewer plant cost $1.5 million and is not paid for, yet new regulations require modifications to the plant, he said. But the city still has to do regular operation and maintenance and charge reasonable fees to the town's residents, he said.

Miller said the cumulative mandate project identifies the frustrations that he and Adair felt.

"It's magic how when you've got 13 communities and 4 counties together and you introduce yourself from this perspective then these doors started opening up from state and regional offices," Miller said.

Now government officials are calling up the coalition, Adair said.

"(Sen.) Larry Craig wants to get an amendment to the environmental act that will allow us to come up with a memorandum of understanding that

Northside city officials fight feds

By Steve Koehler

Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Unfunded federal mandates and bureaucratic ignorance are creating financial problems for small Idaho towns, two area mayors said last week.

In an attempt to deal more effectively with federal officials, local government representatives from Blaine, Lincoln, Camas and Gooding counties have formed a coalition called MAC — short for Mayors, Administrators and Councilpersons.

Mayor David Adair said the Environmental Protection Agency told Fairfield and Gooding that their water treatment plants did not comply with federal regulations.

Fairfield Mayor Rueben Miller has a $10,000-a-day fine hanging over his head, and I've got a $35,000-a-day fine for my sewer plant," Adair said.

Adair and Miller talked with the state's Division of Environmental Quality, Adair said, and formed the "cumulative mandate project," in which plans for complying with federal mandates are negotiated.

"What we're concerned with is that we've got to have the ability to pay," Adair said.

Movie deal for Nancy, Playboy for Tonya?

NEW YORK — Newsweek magazine this week quotes sources as saying Nancy Kerrigan has cut a $1 million deal with Disney and Hollywood producer Steve Tisch and that Tonya Harding has been contacted by Playboy magazine.

According to Newsweek, Kerrigan's deal with Disney, ABC-TV and Tisch includes a made-for-TV movie to air in May, a televised skating special, Disney theme-park appearances and — maybe — a Nancy doll.

Meanwhile, Playboy is offering Harding a $250,000 deal for what they delicately call a “pictorial,” Newsweek says. Attempts to sell her film rights have turned up zero, the magazine says.

Graham leaves retirement behind, captures Skins game

TURTLE POINT, Australia — David Graham, in semi-retirement for five years, had a birdie and an eagle on consecutive holes Sunday, and finished the two-day Australian Skins game with $69,840.

The 47-year-old former U.S. Open and PGA champion entered the four-man field with only 12 hours of notice after Nick Price withdrew Friday night with a wrist injury.

Graham, who has not won a tournament in seven years, picked up jackpots on the par-3 13th hole and the par-5 14th at the Laguna Quays resort course.

He hit an 80-foot shot from a bunker for his birdie at the 13th, which earned him $54,000. His eagle at the next hole saw him win another $8,640 to add to the $7,200 he won Saturday.

The Arizona-based Graham threw his arms in the air and doffed his cap to the wildly cheering gallery as he watched his ball disappear into the cup at the 13th.

Moe upsets local hero for U.S. gold

United States goalkeeper Michael Dunham makes one of three saves during a France power play advantage in the final two minutes of the third period Sunday in Lillehammer, Norway.

The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Tommy Moe succeeded Sunday where Olympic officials had failed: He brought everyone's attention back to the Games. The U.S. hockey team — somewhat shakily — kept it focused there.

Moe, an underdog American skater just hours after resolution of the Tonya Harding debacle, left thousands of Norwegians in stunned silence when he won the men's downhill gold over local hero Kjetil Andre Aamodt.

The American hockey team, looking for its first gold medal in 14 years, made up a two-goal third period deficit to salvage a 4-4 tie with France. A pair of fluke scores saved the Americans from defeat as first lady Hillary Clinton, waving an American flag, looked on with daughter Chelsea.

Moe's victory, by .04 seconds, was the closest Alpine race in Olympic history. He collected the first U.S. men's Alpine gold in a decade and only the second ever.

"I didn't even have any thoughts in my mind that I was going to win," said Moe, a free spirit from Palmer, Alaska, who's competing in his second Olympics. "I just figured, 'Hey, I'll ski the best I can.'"

He did, grabbing the gold just four days short of his 24th birthday. Canadian Ed Podivinsky took the bronze.

While Moe's upset win canceled the party on the slopes, Norwegians at the Viking Hall celebrated a world record-setting gold medal performance by one of their own, speedskater Johann Olav Koss. The Slovakian hockey team made its Olympic debut with a 4-4 tie against medal favorite Sweden. And at the luge, Duncan Kennedy kept hope alive for the first U.S. medal ever in the event.

Koss, one of many 1992 Olympians expected to excel in these Games with the one-time-only two-year turnaround, smashed his own world record in the 5,000 meters. The silver went to teammate Kjetil Storelid, whose Olympic-record run was buried by Koss's time of 6 minutes, 34.96 seconds. Koss broke his own record, set two months ago, by more than half a second.

"Johann! Johann!" screamed the crowd of 12,000 as Koss nabbed the first Norwegian gold of the 17th Winter Games.

By day's end, Norway had three medals more than any other nation — and Koss was a national hero.

Moe's fine performance was the first American men's downhill gold since 1984. Billy Johnson — who, like Moe, had never won even a World Cup race — captured the first gold in Sarajevo.

For Aamodt, he now has a silver to go with the gold and bronze he won two years ago at Albertville, France.

If Aamodt couldn't win, there was a certain justice in Moe's victory. The skier has a dozen relatives in the Oslo area and plans to visit an 82-year-old uncle, Olav Anderson, before heading home.

That mattered little to the 40,000 folks at the downhill, where Moe turned a mountain full of clanging cowbells and howling fans into an Alpine wake.

They weren't the only ones left disappointed. Mrs. Clinton was late getting to the slopes and missed Moe's medal-winning run. Her husband tried to make up for it by calling Moe to congratulate the skier on his medal.

There were no compliments for the American hockey team, which parlayed a pair of miscues by French goalie Petr Vronen into a 4-4 tie. Vronen, who turned long shots by Peter Laviolette and Brian Rolston into goals, slammed his stick to the ice in anger when the game ended.

The United States grabbed an early 2-1 lead, but three American miscues near the net allowed France to move ahead in the final period.

Skier 1st to dip into winnings as U.S. begins awarding money with medals

The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Tommy Moe won more than America's first Olympic Alpine gold medal in 10 years. He won $15,000 and was the first to collect from a program designed to boost U.S. performances.

"No, there won't be one of those blown-up checks like they give out at golf tournaments, with all the zeroes trailing the dollar sign and the sponsor's name prominently displayed.

But Moe will have a check waiting for him when he gets back to Palmer, Alaska. By winning the men's downhill on Sunday, Moe got the first cut of top money from Operation Gold, the U.S. Olympic Committee's latest effort to boost performance.

"Isn't that great! The first event!" said Jim Page, the USOC's deputy executive director. "It's the first day and I suspect the athletes aren't thinking about dollar signs, with all the excitement. But it's a nice thing to consider later."

For the first time these Olympics, the USOC is awarding money to its athletes in direct relation to how they perform: Come in first, and $15,000 is yours.

A silver medal is worth $10,000 and a bronze $7,500. Lesser payments will be made for fourth-place finishes and performances that improve on previous Olympic bests by U.S. athletes. Almost $300,000 is budgeted for the program at Lillehammer.

The money will be paid to Moe through U.S. Skiing when he gets home, the USOC said.

Moe's surprising victory leaves $75,000 in the gold-medal account of the Op Gold

Tommy Moe from Palmer, Alaska, won't be sticking his tongue out at the $15,000 he'll receive from the U.S. Olympic Committee for his first-place finish in the downhill competition. With Moe are Kjetil Andre Aamodt, left, who won the silver, and Canadian Ed Podivinsky, bronze winner.

budget — enough for five more American winners. "Nothing would be greater than to overspend that account," Page said. "That would be one of the greatest investments the USOC could make."

But even a gold-medal finish produces enough money to cover only a fraction of the expenses an Olympic athlete runs up for training and related expenses — not to mention the employment income they might by pass to stay competitive.

USOC studies have placed the annual training expenses for an athlete at the top level around $50,000.

But the cash-incentives program — a refinement of a plan that started after a disappointing U.S. showing at the 1988 Winter Games — is one way to reduce the financial burden that often falls on world-class athletes.

Pippen leads East All-Stars past West, grabs MVP honors

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Scottie Pippen, in the shadow of Michael Jordan's spotlight for the first six years of his career, knew it was time to grab it himself in the NBA All-Star Game.

"Having Michael on our club really overshadowed guys like Horace Grant, B.J. Armstrong and myself," Pippen said Sunday after leading the East to a 127-118 victory. "It was time for us to step up as All-Stars a little more. I had my mind set to play much better than I played in past All-Star games."

Pippen, making his fourth All-Star appearance but his first since his superstar teammate on the Chicago Bulls retired last October, scored 29 points on 9-for-15 shooting and grabbed 11 rebounds to win MVP honors.

"I tried to assert myself a little more," Pippen said. "My skills are able to put me up among the elite players. I don't think I needed to go out today and prove anything to anybody."

Pippen, wearing fire-engine red shoes, had averaged 9.3 points in his first three All-Star games. Despite his 29 points, he only scored two in the fourth quarter, but they were big — a baseline jumper with 2:10 left after the West pulled within two points.

"It was the shoes," Pippen joked about his performance. "Everybody was looking at my feet too much. I was shooting well and I just continued to let my shot flow."

The East took its largest lead, 103-90, in the first minutes of the fourth quarter, but the West rallied with a 17-5 run, closing to 108-107 with 7:17 left. Gary Payton's six points and David Robinson's five keyed the comeback.

But the East regained control as New York teammates Patrick Ewing and John Starks combined to score the next nine East points for a 117-110 lead. The run of points by regular-season teammates continued a pattern that the East followed the entire game.

A basket by Clifford Robinson and a 3-pointer by John Stockton made it 117-115 before Pippen, after missing two free throws, connected on his baseline shot.

Panthers discount talk of easy time as Northside tourney begins

GOODING — If you're thinking of putting Carey in the championship game of the District 4, Class A-4 Northside sub-district basketball tournament, please use a pencil.

Actually Carey looks to have the best shot when the tournament concludes Saturday.

"It's not that easy," said Carey Coach Lee Cook. "If anybody misses a shot, they're going to be in trouble." The tourney opens today at Gooding High School with a trio of games. The top-seeded Carey Panthers will get a bye and won't see action until 8 p.m. on Tuesday.

Fourth-seeded Shoshone takes on fifth-seeded Richfield to kick off the tournament at 5 p.m. today. That game will be followed by third-seed ed Camas County and sixth-seeded Bliss at 6:30 p.m. and at 8 p.m., second-seeded Dietrich and ISDB.

On Tuesday, there will be a loser-of game at 5 p.m., followed by the two winners' bracket games.

After losing three of their first four games, the Panthers haven't lost since they dropped a game to the Centennial JV's right after Christmas.

Shoshone, the only team to beat Carey this year in conference action is in the same bracket as the Panthers and the two could meet on Tuesday.

With a hot Camas County team and the unpredictable Indian squad in the tournament, both of the top two-seeded teams' coaches are a little timid to admit that they're the favorite.

"This is about as even as I've ever seen it," said Dietrich Coach Randy McGowan. "Carey is playing real well and seem to be hitting on all cylinders. Camas County has got some big kids. They worry me and Shoshone, Larry (Messick) has those guys ready to play."

A loss is particularly bad in the tournament. A opening round loss by the Mushers, Bliss, ISDB or Dietrich, means that they'll have to win four straight games on four straight nights just to make it back to the championship game. Then they have to win twice to go on and play the top team from the Southside sub-district next week. "You've got to come to play every night," said McGowan. "And if you look past anyone, you're done."

Shoshone and Richfield look to be the two evenly matched teams in the first round. Both team won a game on its home floor. Camas County won both games against Bliss by 20 or more points and ISDB was winless in conference play.

No clear favorite in Southside

By Brad Breland

JEROME — It's called the District 4, Class A-4 Southside sub-district boys' basketball tournament. Some will call it even and most will call it a toss-up.

When the six Southside squads gather at Jerome high school starting today, no team in the group is a clear favorite.

Murtaugh and Castleford get the first round byes as they represent the top two seeds. Both teams, however, have had troubles in the past few weeks making the tournament wide open.

"I think this is as close of a tournament as I've ever experienced," said Hansen Coach Stacey Behrens. The Huskies were one of those teams who got a first round bye last year and failed to advance to the district playoffs.

This year, fourth-seeded Hansen will play a first round game against fifth-seeded Oakley. That game will start at 7:30 p.m. and will be preceded by third-seeded Raft River and Hagerman, who play at 6 p.m.

Murtaugh and Castleford will play on Tuesday. The 6 p.m. contest will pit the Red Devils against the Hansen-Oakley winner and the Wolves will face the Raft River-Hagerman winner at 7:30 p.m.

The tournament continues with the championship game slated for Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The top two teams will gather with the top two from the Northside for the right to advance to the state tournament.

"It's anybody's game to take," said Castleford Coach Andy Wiseman. The Wolves are the only team to have some experience on the Jerome floor after they played the Jerome juniors this year.

The Red Devils have beaten everybody in conference losing only to Castleford late in the season. Murtaugh has had some tough games lately slipping by Raft River and beating Hansen and Oakley in overtime.

Hansen and Oakley have split in the two games this year, so Monday will be a big test for both teams. Raft River swept Hagerman in the two games this year with The Trojans winning both games.

The Trojans may be a team on a roll winning three out of their last four games; losing only to the Red Devils on the final game of the season. Raft River did win the coin flip with Hansen that put the Trojans on the other side of the bracket opposite of Murtaugh.

Tigers-Indians open A-2 tourney

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

Local Class A-2 coaches expect a typically close District 4 tournament at College of Southern Idaho beginning tonight.

The playoffs begin at 6 p.m. today with No. 1 seed Jerome playing the No. 2 seed, second-ranked Burley follows against Wood River at 7:30 p.m. On Tuesday it's loser vs. loser and winner vs. winner. A second elimination game will be played Thursday.

"I don't know if the No. 1 seed means a lot this year," said Jerome Coach Brent Clark. "We're all pretty equal. If you put together three good games, you're going to win it."

The Tigers, 10-9 overall, won all six district games this season. Burley finished 4-2.

Senior point Chris Williams leads Jerome in scoring at 14 points per game. Aaron Bay averages 11. Point guard John Perry led the Tigers in assists at five per game and is right behind Jacob Tolman on the team rebounding list.

Getting Bay and wing Scott Holtzen shooting well to take the pressure off Williams against Buhr's sagging man-to-man defense will be a key for Jerome.

For Burley, Bob Plotts averages 13 points. Ben Woodhouse 12 and Tom Ruffell 10. Ruffell and Plotts took the Bobcats in rebounding. Kody Beck leads in assists.

The Bobcats won a blowout against Wood River at home, but pulled out a close game in Hailey.

"I think we probably need to do a better job getting out to their perimeter players," said Burley Coach Bill Cowell. "We didn't handle their half-court trap very well last time either."

The expected clash in the finals would be between Jerome and Burley. Both regular-season matches were close.

"I think Jerome made some plays at crucial points," Cowell said. "I think that's what's going to happen again, whoever steps up and makes the plays is going to win. I have a lot of confidence in my kids."

Jordan expected to dominate Chisox camp

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox begin spring training Tuesday, and the questions manager Gene Lamont hoped to resolve — who's his fifth starter, can Craig Grebeck get more playing time and where does Julio Franco fit in — won't seem so important.

Forget that the White Sox return MVP Frank Thomas and Cy Young Award winner Jack McDowell from a team that lost the AL playoffs to Toronto last October.

Most of the early focus will be on a tall outfielder wearing No. 45. Michael Jordan will be playing baseball and the White Sox are his team of choice.

On Tuesday, a day before pitchers and catchers report, the White Sox camp opened at Sarasota, Fla. Jordan will be there.

Can Jordan, four months retired from the NBA and playing baseball for the first time since he was in high school, hit major league pitching? Will he go to the minors for grooming? Will his teammates, like the outspoken McDowell who has an arbitration hearing next week, accept him? How will the White Sox handle the media storm?

The White Sox had a warning for the circus atmosphere a year ago when Bo Jackson was trying to make a comeback from hip replacement surgery.

"There will be some distractions involved. I'd like to turn my back to it and say it will be normal, but it won't be," said Lamont.

"We can handle it. We have good players. The thing we have to make sure is that we get the word that needs to be done every day like we did last year. If we do that, we will be all right. We have to plan things and make sure things don't get out of hand."

But Jordan will command even a bigger crowd of media, fans and curiosity seekers than Jackson.

More months ago Jordan was presumably going to do what hit retirees everywhere do — play golf and enjoy a life free of the spotlight.

But Jordan's desire for a challenge began to blossom as he worked out at Corniskey Park this winter. And he told the White Sox he was serious about playing baseball; it was not just a way of keeping in shape.

Jerry Reinsdorf, the chairman of both the White Sox and the Bulls, whom Jordan led to three straight NBA titles before retiring, was supportive. No surprise there.

"Michael likes challenges. Michael likes to do what people say he can't," Reinsdorf said in an interview in Kansas City last week.

"Winning three championships in a row was something that hadn't been done for 25 years. The fourth championship really wasn't another plateau, so the challenge wasn't there."

Wallace captures ARCA 500; Thompson serious but stable

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mike Wallace fought off a late challenge by Tim Steele to win the crash-marred ARCA Daytona 500 stock car race Sunday at Daytona International Speedway.

Wallace, one of Winston Cup star Rusty Wallace's younger brothers, came up with his first superspeedway victory, driving his Chevrolet Lumina across the finish line two car-lengths ahead of Steele's Ford Thunderbird.

Among the accidents in the 80-lap race on the 2.5-mile oval was a spectacular, flipping wreck that sent Mark Thompson to nearby Halifax Medical Center with a concussion, three fractured ribs and bruises from his safety harness. Thompson was reported to be awake and alert, and was listed in serious but stable condition.

The accident began with Michael Dokken hitting the wall coming off turn two and sliding into Thompson's path. Thompson spun into the infield grass, then flipped and barrel-rolled to a stop. He was unconscious when safety workers arrived at the car, but quickly regained consciousness. Dokken was not injured.

The race was red-flagged for briefly while the debris from Thompson's crash was cleared and he was transported to the hospital by helicopter from the infield.

Top prospects perform for NFL

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — David Palmer, Alabama's all-purpose threat, wants to narrow his range of responsibilities in the NFL.

In other words, don't expect him to line up behind center. "No, I'll leave that up to the quarterbacks," said the 5-foot-9 receiver, one of 29 juniors eligible for the April 24-25 draft. "I just want to catch it and run some reverses. Going into the draft, returning punts and kicks will be my biggest assets, and I think it will help me make it in the league—I can run reverses and catch passes too," said Palmer, among more than 300 of the nation's top players attending the annual NFL scouting combine.

The combine ends Monday.

Palmer, who finished third in the Heisman Trophy voting, was a dazzling receiver for the Crimson Tide, totaling about 1,900 yards on 61 catches last season. Of course, he also ran the ball, returned punts and kicks and even played some quarterback. "It was just something I did to help my team," he said.

"We didn't pass the ball a lot, but I always wanted the ball in my hands, and playing all the positions got the ball in my hands."

Palmer, who has three young children, indicated throughout the season he would return to Alabama but changed his mind, in part, because of his family obligations.

The scouting combine includes psychological and physical examinations, interviews with coaches and scouts from the 28 NFL teams and, for those players choosing to do so, workouts to test speed, agility and jumping ability.

Some players, including quarterbacks Heath Shuler of Tennessee and Trent Dilfer of Fresno State, running back Marshall Faulk of San Diego State and defensive tackle Dan Wilkinson of Ohio State, all of whom are projected to go early in the first round of the draft, came in for the early testing but will have private workouts for the scouts later.

Pavin grabs L.A. Open

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Corey Pavin spotted Fred Couples up to 60 yards off the tee, but beat him on the greens and scoreboard Sunday, in their match play-like showdown in the Los Angeles Open.

Pavin scored his first U.S. PGA Tour victory in almost two years with a 3-under-par 68 over the final 18 holes at Riviera and a 271 total.

Couples, one shot ahead when the final round started, could do no better than a closing 71 — much to the dismay of a large, vocal Couples gallery — and finished at 273.

Pavin immediately dedicated the victory to Paul Azinger, the current PGA champion and a Ryder Cup teammate who is undergoing treatment for cancer. "This is for you, Paul. Hurry up and get well and come back. We miss you," he said.

No one else really got into the title chase. It was a two-man race of classic proportions; the powerful, long-hitting Couples against wiry, resourceful, tenacious Pavin.

Playing together in the final threesome in what amounted to match play, they once again confirmed the accuracy of one of golf's more ancient adages: drive for show and putt for dough.

Thompson blisters Suncoast

LUTZ, Fla. (AP) — Rocky Thompson had 10 birdies in a record-setting 61 Sunday to post the biggest comeback in Senior PGA Tour history, a one-stroke victory over Raymond Floyd in the GTE Suncoast Classic.

Thompson started the final round seven strokes behind second-round leader Mark Hill at the Tournament Players Club of Tampa Bay. He had five birdies on even shot to equal the lowest round ever shot on the Senior PGA Tour.

"It's kind of funny what you can do if you just think about it," Thompson said. "If I was going to win the tournament, Saturday night I calculated that I needed to shoot 10 under par. I sat in the room for over an hour trying to figure out how to do it and get in the mental frame of mind that I could do it."

Thompson's third career Senior Tour victory did not come until Ray Floyd finished his round with three straight pars. Floyd led a 12-foot birdie attempt on No. 16 hanging over the hole and missed two of 30 feet on the final two holes.

"I think of him like Lawrence Taylor, the way he came into the NFL," Stockton said of Pippen. "He's a new wave. The things he can do, he just changes the game by himself."

David Robinson and Hakeem Olajuwon shared scoring honors with 19 points each for the West, which trails the All-Star series 26-16.

Ewing scored 12 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter and Mark Price also had 20 for the East, which had 10 3-pointers to one for the West. Pippen was 5-for-9 from that range.

"He was in a zone," West coach George Karl said. "It's difficult when you're substituting a great deal to keep the same guy on him."

12 shots and seven of 11 free throws to finish with eight points. But he managed 10 rebounds.

"They were quadruple-teaming me, triple-teaming me," O'Neal said.

The West, down by 12 in the first half and by eight at halftime, rallied in the third quarter, cutting within four twice before Price hit a jumper and a 3-pointer in a span of 37 seconds, helping the East rebuild the margin to 101-90 going into the final 12 minutes.

In the first half, East coach Lenny Wilkens made good use of players who are used to being on the court together.

The West led 25-23 late in the first period before Price, three Knicks and two Atlanta Hawks scored all but two of the East's points in a 36-22 burst that ended at 59-47 with 4:59 left in the second quarter.

TV ratings' dream matchup: Harding-Kerrigan

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Tonya Harding's bid for Olympic gold could mean the best ratings ever for the figure-skating competition.

Harding and Nancy Kerrigan are to skate their technical programs Feb. 23.

"We're now excited about the head-to-head matchup. How could you not be excited about that?" said CBS coordinating producer Rick Gentile.

As for the USOC decision to allow Harding to compete:

Lillehammer'94

"There is a feeling of relief that it is resolved and we no longer have to babysit that aspect of the story," Gentile said.

"It also takes a tremendous load off the sports news desk which had to cover three sides — Portland, Oslo and Lillehammer. If we know nothing else, we now know what-ever happens will happen in Lillehammer."

40,000 PEOPLE, NO MOOSE: So far, so good.

No major traffic problems have been reported so far on the narrow roads to Lillehammer and other Olympic sites, though congestion was a factor in first lady Hillary Clinton's late arrival Sunday at the downhill course. The U.S. delegation arrived after Tommy Moe's solid-gold run.

But generally, traffic was flowing smoothly. "The roads were clear, there were no accidents, the trains were on time," said spokesman Tor Aune of the Lillehammer Olympic Organizing Committee.

Helicopters were enlisted in the past days to drive off 140 moose spotted near the railway tracks.

"The only problem is transporting volunteers. The buses are not leaving on-time, sometimes because the drivers overslept," Aune said.

There were a few problems Saturday, when the Games opened with a two-hour ceremony.

"We had too many people coming at the last minute. Some didn't get in until near the end," he said. Several people slipped and fell on the ice, and one spectator broke a leg.

"Considering we had 40,000 people up there, that's not too bad. But we can further improve it."

TOMMY SEES ALL, KNOWS ALL: Before his gold-medal downhill run, American Tommy Moe was asked to close his eyes and envision the Alpine run.

Moe described the 3,035-meter Kvitfjell course and when he was done, raised his poles overhead.

"Top three would be nice," he exclaimed in the interview conducted after a training session by TNT Sports, which begins daylong cable coverage of the Games on Monday.

Moe's gold-medal run Sunday and the interview are part of TNT's first-day schedule. Before his triumph Sunday, Moe's top finishes this year were two thirds: one in the Bormio, Italy, downhill and another at the Val d'Isere, France, super-G.

The Olympic super-G is scheduled for Feb.

17, Moe's 24th birthday.

His mother Tyra isn't predicting another win, but notes her son is "equally good in the super-G and in the downhill."

EAGLE LANDS, IS SHOOSH AWAY: Eddie the Eagle landed in Lillehammer but couldn't get in.

Eddie Edwards, whose version of ski jumping at the '92 Games was more like ski dropping, was stopped Sunday at a check point outside Lysgårdsbakken because he did not have proper accreditation.

Edwards told authorities he was competing in the 120-meter ski jumping, but he was carrying slalom skis. He also said he'd be in the area about 24 hours, but the ski-jump competition starts Feb. 20.

Tighter rules are restricting this year's Olympics to competitors who've proven themselves as world-class athletes.

Lillehammer love and other dangerous games

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — If Cupid showed up at the Winter Games for Valentine's Day, he'd probably freeze to death. Even bundled up, he would not find the Olympics his happiest hunting ground.

For athletes, love often means dangerous liaisons.

Just ask Katarina Witt. Ask Jiao Zhimin. Ask Alberto Tomba. Alberto? La Bomba not getting his way?

After winning his second gold in the 1988 Calgary Games, the Italian skier went to see Witt, who was still skating for East Germany, and asked her for a date.

But even roses and a signed poster of himself could not sway her. The ice princess turned the great Alberto down, stone cold.

On Monday, phone services and the international flower trade stand to make a killing, with scores of athletes in Lillehammer calling or sending bouquets to loved ones.

Love at a distance, may make life simpler.

With your wife around, it is difficult. You have to think about game tickets and other family worries. Now, I just worry about the Games," said Italian hockey player Bruno Zarrillo. He ordered flowers for his wife Sharlene.

Some want to foment love here.

To Bonnie Blair's fond dismay, her mother keeps on hinting about wedding bells for Bonnie and David Cruikshank, another U.S. speedskater.

"I'm like, 'Mom, there is nothing that is happening that you don't know about.' But she keeps starting these rumors," Bonnie said.

Love at the Olympics does not always work out, Witt knows.

Under pressure to win her first title at the 1984 Sarajevo Games, her boyfriend was on her mind — but the problem was not him. It was fear.

If the Stasi secret police knew of the relationship, winning was the only way to save their careers. Otherwise, "They will throw him out and I also will be finished," Witt wrote in her autobiography.

She went out to win the first of two Olympic titles.

Finland's Toni Nieminen was 16 at the Games in Albertville, France — the youngest-ever double Olympic ski jumping champion. He's not here, partly because love took precedence over daily training sessions.

Trainers and coaches can object to love because it undermines the single-mindedness athletes need to win Olympic gold.

It may also sap their strength. Having sex with a regular partner "is like running an 800 meter, finished off with a sprint," contends the French team's Dr. Maurice Villac, citing an Italian physiologist.

But a passionate fling can do something quite different to the body.

"Mon Dieu," said Villac, reminiscing about a body analysis of a national bobsled champion following a heavy one-night stand.

In keeping with medical practice, the doctor refused to disclose names or dates. But the bobsled driver was one of his best athletes, easily passing the toughest tests, until he left Paris' Gare du Nord after a weekend of races and bumped into a "charismatic camp-rade," a charming friend.

It took four days to get his body back to normal, Villac said with a smile. "This was a French champion bent on showing what he was capable of."

Like so many other laws of nature, the rule does not seem to apply to La Bomba. He recalled making this change for the Albertville Olympics: "I used to have wild time with three women until five o'clock. In the Olympic Village I will live it up with five women until three o'clock."

China's Ma Junren, leading the world's best long-distance runners into the 1996 Atlanta Games, simply bans love.

He recently kicked 1,500-meter world champion Liu Dong off his boyfriend because she dared to have a boyfriend. He wanted total control: "Nobody else gives directions."

In other hockey action, Slovakia scored an impressive 4-4 tie with second-seeded Sweden in its first Olympic hockey game. The Slovaks, who received a goal from ex-NHL great Peter Stastny, hugged on the bench and celebrated on the ice after the win.

The country gained its independence just 13 months ago. Four of its players are from the 1992 bronze-medal Czechoslovakian team. The Canadian team, silver medal winners in 1992, whipped Italy 7-2 in its first game here.

The Moe medal and the Sunday debut of the U.S. hockey team provided a welcome break from the Harding-Nancy Kerrigan flap, which ended with American officials agreeing to let Harding skate.

"The matter has been resolved," Kerrigan said in a Sunday statement.

Money

"We are convinced that focusing on athletes who perform at the highest levels is the best way to improve performance overall," Page said.

Since late 1988, Operation Gold has paid $2,000 to any U.S. athletes who finished in the top eight at an Olympics, world championships or other major event.

The USOC has budgeted $7.6 million for the four-year run to the Atlanta Games in 1996, redirecting the money to reward the best of the best.

By focusing at the top, the committee hopes to help athletes pay bills and provide an incentive for more medals. Medals attract sponsors, who provide more and more of the USOC's budget, and that means more that pointedly omitted Harding's name. "Regardless of my opinion on the ruling, the Olympics have begun and it's time to skate."

Or ski. The first medal of the Games went to Manuela Di Centa of Italy in the women's 15-kilometer freestyle cross-country ski race. Like Moe, Di Centa was an underdog. She held off silver medalist Lyubov Egorova of Russia, who won three gold and two silver medals in Albertville.

The best American showing came from Laura McCabe of Park City, Utah, who finished 34th out of 53 entrants.

The Americans enjoyed a better day at the luge, where Duncan Kennedy was within striking distance of a medal after the first half of the competition, which was to wrap up Monday. The United States has never captured any luge medal.

money in the long run for grassroots and other developmental programs, officials said.

The athletes love the concept. "They don't care for programs that funnel money to administrators to set up training projects. They want the money in their hands," said Norm Bellingham, a former Olympic kayaker who has studied athlete-funding programs.

While a student at Harvard, Bellingham wrote his master's thesis on "The Effectiveness of Financial Incentives on Athletic Performance." "I found that athletes are like anyone else — they are very rational people," he said. "All things being equal, the more money that's out there for them, the better their performance will be."

Jansen's 4th try for gold may be his last

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Dan Jansen looks at the times and knows he is the best speedskater in the world at 500 meters.

Now he must prove it in the Olympics.

Jansen blazed to a world record 35.92 seconds for the distance — the equivalent of a 4-minute mile on ice — on the indoor oval at Hamar in January. Then, just to show it was no fluke, he chopped the record to 35.76 seconds two weeks ago at Calgary, where he reached speeds of 33 miles per hour.

Now, at age 28, he is back for his fourth and final run at Olympic hardware — the missing link in an otherwise brilliant speedskating career. His first shot at these Games comes Monday in the 500 meters, one of three gold medal events on the schedule.

Also set for Monday are the finals of the men's single luge and the men's 30-kilometer freestyle cross-country skiing. Other action includes the downhill half of the men's combined skiing and three hockey games — Germany vs. Norway, Russia vs. Finland and Czechoslovakia vs. Austria.

CBS will show skiing and speedskating as well as a figure skating preview in the morning and then Jansen's race, the luge and Alpine and cross-country skiing at night.

TNT's daytime cable coverage gets started with a live look at the Russian-Finland hockey game as well as Alpine and cross-country skiing, speed skating and the luge.

No Olympic athlete has experienced more disappointment at the Winter Games than Jansen. Twice he has finished fourth, tantalizingly close to a medal. Twice he has fallen, once when he was leading the race and closing in on the victory.

He was the subject of sorrow at Calgary when his sister died on the eve of his first race. He was sabotaged by soft ice at Albertville, France, where he seemed to be skating in mud.

Something always seems to happen to him.

Jansen ran into trouble again before these Olympics when he finished third in a World Cup race and complained about the ice at Hamar, where the indoor rink is usually considered perfect.

He insisted the episode did not shake his confidence. "I feel good going in," he said. "An Olympic medal

Norway's benchers did their job in opening

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — In a moment I will get to the various Winter Olympic sporting events and how we in the news media are not allowing them to be overshadowed by Tonya Harding. But first I want to tell you about the official opening ceremony, which was a spectacular and dramatic event that I will remember at least until my butt thaws out, which won't happen for a long, long time. Twenty years from now, when I go in for a physical examination, the doctor will say, "Mr. Barry, you seem to be perfectly normal, except for the fact that your butt is minus 12 degrees Fahrenheit at the core."

The problem was that the ceremony was held in a stadium where the spectators sat for three hours on concrete benches covered with a thick layer of ice. My guess is that the Norwegians put the ice there on purpose. The probably had professional benchers working all night, because these people LOVE the cold. Even when it's really, REALLY cold, so cold that we visiting journalists are afraid to blink for fear that our eyes will freeze shut and we will be unable to fill out our expense reports, the Norwegians are wearing around outdoors practically naked, happy as clams.

Maybe it's their diet. It consists almost entirely of cold food, mainly salmon, which seems to show up at every meal in virtually every form, including ice cream, coffee, cigarettes, etc. You know how we humans, the chombers, love to leave you a piece of chocolate? Well, the other day, the maids in the media village here left — I am not making this up — little packets of SALMON JERKY. This was in case you woke up at 2 a.m. thinking, as so many people do, "Whoa, I have not consumed any salmon for SIX MONTHS!" So as you can imagine, after being here for a while, a person can develop a fearsome case of salmon fever, which is difficult to get rid of inasmuch as the Norwegians probably use salmon-flavored toothpaste. Thus, no matter how cold it is, everybody is happier outdoors.

Everybody was certainly very happy at the opening ceremony. One highlight, of course, was the arrival, via ski-jumping, of the Olympic torch, which had spent the past few months traveling around visiting various historic sites, holding press conferences, signing endorsement deals, appearing on Letterman, etc. The torch was impressive, but — as is so often the case when you finally see a famous torch in person — it was not as tall as expected. For me, the most dramatic moment in the ceremonies was when a whole bunch of Norwegians came skiing like lunatics down a steep hill, in mid-slope, turned somersaults WHILE CARRYING FIDDLER. It was amazing. I'd like to see Somersault Fiddle Skiing become a regular Olympic event. In fact, I think an effort should be made to involve other instruments: I would pay a lot of money to see the Piano Ski Jump.

But moving on to the Olympic games themselves: We here in the U.S. news media are all SICK AND TIRED of the whole Tonya Harding thing, and we are doing our level best not to let it overshadow the athletic events. Some of us have even taken the extreme step of actually talking to athletes other than Nancy Kerrigan (Yes! There are some!).

"So," we ask these athletes, "What do YOU think of this Tonya Harding thing?"

Also there has been a major new development on the wolf-urine front. You may recall that in an earlier column I stated that, according to reports published in a publication that shall remain nameless (Sports Illustrated), the Norwegians were putting wolf urine on the rail and tracks here to repel moose. Well, I have here a Dallas Morning News report stating that (1) ... avoid doing my job.

They are NOT moose, they are elk; and (2) The Norwegians are NOT using wolf urine to repel them. They are using salmon urine.

No, seriously, they claim they are not using any kind of urine at all. I will continue to monitor this with interest and provide you with updates as warranted. I also plan to look into published reports here that the cheese clock was invented by a Norwegian. Don't thank me: I'm just trying to

IF FEBRUARY 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY - You are dynamic, inquisitive, have powerful "nose for news." Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play roles in your life. Major domestic adjustment takes place in March, could include change of residence, marital status.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What begins as routine undergoes metamorphosis and becomes ringer with excitement. Aries Moon highlights initiative, timing, sex appeal. Cash flow resumes following ineluctable delay.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obstacles removed, skeletons in closet no longer "rattle." You'll dispense with fear, apprehension. Focus on muses, theaters, institutions, hospitals. Virgo plays outstanding role.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Wish comes true, you'll experience "good fortune" in matters of finance, romance. Libra figures prominently, these letters, initials in name: F, O, X. Elements of timing prove essential.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You might not direct, leadership role is thrust upon you. You're asked to define terms, outline boundaries, separate factual data from wishful thinking. Pisces figures prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Scenario features wide spectrum, from sewing on buttons to planning travel project. Focus on time limitation, ability to handle details that slipped through fingers of others. Capricorn involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Long-standing project, negotiations reach point of no return. Allies, previously hidden, come forward - in your behalf. Let go of losing proposition, set your own pace, terms. Aries involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Light shed on areas previously dark. Focus on image, reputation, credibility, membership, marital status. Let others follow you, stress originality, inventiveness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Serious consideration given "name change." Emphasis on direction, leadership role. Proposition requiring capital, know-how. Location of utmost importance - get a "slogan." Imagination!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Opportunity exists for getting advertising-publicity campaign started. Focus on entertainment, showmanship, unique social gathering. Aries Moon highlights creativity, sexuality, sex appeal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on durable goods, household products, ability to overcome distance, language barriers. Scorpio individual figures prominently, have these letters: initials in name: D, M, V, B, U, I.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Highlight versatility, diversity, willingness to experiment and to make personal appearance. You'll truly be "gracious Aquarius." Sagittarius figures prominently, these letters in name: C, L, U.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You're back on familiar ground, wondering if this might not be "deja vu." Emphasis on domestic adjustment, flowers, music, reunion with loved one.

Home nation watches gold hopes fade

The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — The Norwegians were confident of a winning start to the Olympics when Kjetil Andre Aamodt raced into a commanding lead Sunday in the most prestigious ski race, the downhill.

They cheered and waved their flags as Aamodt came into view and they roared as he crossed the line to take first place by 0.3 seconds.

The gold medal appeared headed for the home nation. What a perfect start for Norway!

Then Tommy Moe spoiled it. The next skier on the course, Moe was two tenths of a second down on Aamodt at the first timed stage and the Norwegians in the crowd of 40,000 roared again. But, when the next split time went up, there were groans from the home fans because the American had wiped out Aamodt's lead and was 26 hundredths of a second ahead.

By the time Moe came into view there were anxious looks on the Norwegians' faces at the end of the Kvitfjell course. When he crossed the finish line, there were more groans as the American wound up four hundredths of a second ahead of Aamodt.

As Moe kissed his left ski and waved to the Americans in the crowd, the Norwegians applauded politely, but were clearly devastated.

It wasn't over yet. They still had Atle Skardal, a downhill specialist who missed the last Olympics in Albertville because of an injury.

Skardal had the Norwegians cheering again with a first split time three hundredths of a second inside Moe's mark. Again they looked anxiously at the scoreboard. But, when the next time went up, Skardal was half a second slower than Moe.

They knew then Norway would not win the gold medal. Instead, the Norwegians had to be content with Aamodt's silver, and ninth and 10th places for Skardal and Jan Einar Thorsen.

"It was great being in the lead," Aamodt said. "When I came through the finish I was fully enjoying the high for a moment there."

Girardelli finishes 5th

The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — He's one of the greatest Alpine skiers ever, with an unprecedented five World Cup titles in eight years.

Yet Marc Girardelli will also be remembered for his Olympic flops.

The 30-year-old skier finished fifth Sunday in the downhill won by American Tommy Moe, and again missed a chance to win his first Olympic gold.

Though he has won 12 World and Olympic medals in nine years, Girardelli's best in the Winter Games were silvers in super-G and giant slalom at Albertville two years ago.

An all-around skier, winner of 42 World Cup races in four different disciplines, Girardelli was known to have put most of his hopes this year in the fastest, most spectacular Olympic race — the downhill.

Although competing for Luxembourg, Girardelli is Austrian-born. A three-time runner-up in World Cup downhill races earlier this season, Girardelli made a few mistakes over the Olympic course, which he considered less demanding than traditional World Cup sites such as Wengen and Kitzbuehl.

However, he could not fight off younger, rising downhill stars such as Moe, Kjetil Andre Aamodt and Ed Podivinsky.

Girardelli, who trailed Moe by thirty-four hundredths of a second, said some problems with the icy curves at the top cost him precious time.

"I still had my best result of the entire week here, so it's OK. I'm looking forward to the combined. Aamodt is faster in the downhill but I can do better in slalom," Girardelli said.

The downhill portion of the men's combined is scheduled Monday, with the combined slalom on Feb. 25, two days before the Games close.

Girardelli remains among the favorites for the combined title and is a potential medalist in the super-G and giant slalom. He has been unimpressive in slaloms so far this season.

Despite his downhill defeat, Girardelli said he was already looking past the Olympics.

"I said several times that the World Cup is as important as the Olympics and the World Cup super-G title is my season target."

Skier wins 1st U.S. gold medal

Moe beats Norway's Aamodt by .04 seconds in men's downhill

The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Every 10 years, like clockwork, America wins the Olympic men's downhill.

In Sarajevo in 1984, it was Bill Johnson. Here, it was Tommy Moe. "I didn't even have any thoughts in my mind that I was going to win," Moe said. "I just figured, hey, I'll ski the best I can."

He did just that. Moe, who turns 24 in four days, raced down the 3,033-meter Kvitfjell course in 1 minute, 45.75 seconds Sunday, beating World Cup leader Kjetil Andre Aamodt of Norway by a mere .04 and dealing home-country fans a huge heartbreak.

It was the closest victory margin ever in Olympic Alpine skiing. The women's downhill in 1984 and men's downhill in 1992 each were decided by .05.

"Today was the big day. I knew I could get in the top six, and anything better would be wonderful. I'm really excited now," said Moe, who hadn't won a downhill in major international meet since the 1989 World Junior Championships.

Aamodt, the 22-year-old who won the super-giant slalom at the 1992 Winter Games, was the seventh man down the course. This, he admitted, was the gold medal he really wanted — one of the most coveted medals of the Games.

More than 40,000 fans turned the finish area into a real Nordic blast when Aamodt crossed the line in 1:45.79, knocking archrival Marc Girardelli of Luxembourg out of first place. The cowbells began to ring, voices began to sing and the band struck up a triumphant ditty.

Moe was next. At the first intermediate timing station, he was 20 behind Aamodt, and the music got louder. That should have been the end of it.

But somehow, where the course flattened out and everyone else's skis got slower, Moe found speed. Maybe it was lightning in a bottle of wax. Maybe it was pure ability, or a touch of fate. But at the next intermediate mark, Moe was 26 ahead, and the bells went silent, the voices dropped. Amazingly, Moe had made up almost a half second.

"It just wasn't Aamodt's day. It was the American's," said a crestfallen Greta Ovesel of Oslo, who sat in the front row of the finish-line stadium, waving a Norwegian flag.

Moe crossed the line and looked at the scoreboard. He stood still for a moment. Was that time right? Was he actually ahead?

Then it hit him. He did a little dance, turned toward some coaches and teammates in the stands and held both fists in the air.

A cluster of American flags waved in a sea of Norwegian red-white-and-blues.

American Tommy Moe of Palmer, Alaska, goes airborne as he runs the men's downhill in Kvitfjell, Norway, Sunday.

Moe took off his skis and kissed them.

"He's one great kid," said his father, Tom, a steelworker, who spotted a tear in his son's eye. Undoubtedly, there was a tear in dad's eye, too.

In 1986, as a brash, hard-to-handle kid, Moe was nearly kicked off the junior team for smoking marijuana. Dad gave him a choice: Smoke dope or go ski racing. Not both.

The decision is now a matter of history, and so's the pot smoking.

The bronze medal went to Ed Podivinsky of Canada in 1:45.87. Defending Olympic champion Patrick Ortlieb of Austria was fourth in 1:46.01, and fifth went to the five-time World Cup overall champion, Girardelli, who had the No. 1 start position. Perhaps the greatest all-around skier ever, the 30-year-old Girardelli has yet to win a gold medal in three Olympics.

The second best American was Kyle Rasmussen of Angels Camp, Calif., at 11th in 1:46.35. AJ Kitt of Rochester, N.Y., was 17th in 1:46.82.

"I'm not really disappointed with today's second place," said Aamodt, who will ski also in the super-G, giant slalom and slalom. "But my main goal here was to win a gold medal, so I must concentrate even harder."

Aamodt might have been faster, too, but fate dealt him a cold, dry hand. The skier before him, Cary Mullen of Canada, fell about halfway down, and Aamodt had to wait about five minutes before he could take his turn.

He waited patiently in the starter's shed, a parka draped across his shoulders, his trainer massaging his legs before he could buckle up his boots and go.

But don't be too disappointed, Norway. Moe is a common Norwegian name, and he has relatives in Oslo. "There's lots of Moes over here," he said.

Temperatures hovered around 5 degrees under sunny skies. The snow was cold and hard. It was like home for Moe, a Montana native who skis out of Mt. Alyeska near Anchorage.

"I grew up skiing in Alaska. I know what it's like to ski in the cold," Moe said. "It's very important to keep your feet warm and be warm when you go down."

Four of the last five Olympic downhills have been won by outsiders. Like Moe, Ortlieb had never won on the World Cup circuit when he won the Olympic downhill in 1992. Johnson was a one-time World Cup winner when he upset Swiss champion Peter Mueller in the Sarajevo downhill, and Austria's Leonhard Stock had rarely even raced in downhills when he won at Lake Placid in 1980.

Moe struggled on the World Cup until he finally began to emerge last season. He was second in a downhill at Whistler Mountain, British Columbia, late in the season and twice this year he's finished third in World Cups.

More is a free spirit with a love of the outdoors, and some ski experts had feared his attitude would be his downfall. Could he stay calm? Could he handle the pressure as Johnson had done 10 years ago, when he became America's first Olympic downhill champion?

"I don't know about the Americans," said French downhillier Luc Alphand, who was eighth. "Maybe they are all stronger in the head, and they can stand the pressure of the Olympics."

Alaskan turns mountain into Moe hill

By Bernie Linccone
Chicago Tribune

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — There is no great surprise in discovering that the best American Alpine skier is a guy named Moe, any more than it would be to learn it was Curly or Larry.

In fact, there is a familiar sound to all downhill skiing. Witnesses ring huge cow bells and go "Nyuk, Nyuk, Nyuk" while Spandexed blurs zip past.

Things are generally so rotten for the U.S. men that when a Franz Heinzer left the starting gate, on just one ski, you just naturally assumed he was from Sacramento instead of Switzerland.

American male skiers have lately been so unpromising, the future seemed as far away as any children the Maharajas might have.

Just the day before, the U.S. female skiers were unloading on the guys, pretty much attributing their lack of results to chronic self-absorption and underconfidence.

"Sometimes they have to be tricked into believing they can actually hack it," said Picabo Street. "They're in the lodge watching the first run and they're going, 'Whoa, these guys are good. Wow. They ought to be watching their own videos and going, 'Wow, we can do this, too.'"

This is not some gender duel. The women Alpine skiers have, out-moded the men 17-6 in the Olympics and the men had not won one since Sarajevo.

Sports Illustrated had sent the lads off to the piste of Norway with the endorsement that the U.S. men were, uh, guys are cockier. They want to do it their own way. But our guys are good. Just give 'em time."

Overnight was long enough.

Tommy Moe was eighth out of the gate, there between the Norwegian who takes the local breath away, Kjetil Aamodt, and the defending Olympic champion, Austria's Patrick Ortlieb.

"The toughest part and the most wonderful part," said Moe, "is standing at the bottom of the hill and seeing the best skiers in the world come down and not beat your time."

It was Moe's day, a Carrier and Lars, postcard kind of day, white with snow and red with the laundry and passion of Norway, or Norge as it is known here. (If Norge has a team, why doesn't Maytag and Whirlpool?) It would be the day that young Moe's life would change forever.

"I guess now I'm a legend," he said, "like Bill Johnson and Franz Klammer."

Let's see the TV movie first. Moe has a story to tell, kicked off his ski team for smoking pot, hauled off to Alaska from Montana by his father so he could be made tougher, early promise, disappointment, and redemption. Woody Harelson is a natural for the role.

"Winning an Olympic gold is more important for an American," said Moe, "because that's the only time anyone watches skiing."

The downhill doesn't take long. One minute, forty-five and seventy-five hundredths of a second to be exact, just four hundredths ahead of Aamodt.

Over Russia's jump, a bump that can launch skiers 200 feet through the air, through traps called Snatch and Clamp, down the Olympic hill came Moe, holding himself in a condensed ball, rattling to the bottom like a marble in a bathtub.

And suddenly he was a new American hero and there was someone from home to congratulate him.

"Hillary came over and said hello," Moe said, assuming the familiarity that comes with a gold medal. Maybe next he'll say hello to Bill. "President Clinton did call," Moe said.

On this day an Alaskan made a mountain into a Moe hill, you might say. But I won't.

Invest in your marriage, create enduring love

"When I was a child, my grandmother died and was buried in the churchyard in Castlecomer, Ireland," relates Herbert O'Driscoll.

"The following year, I went there on a holiday. One day we drove to visit relatives. I in the back seat with my grandfather. As we passed the graveled driveway leading up to the churchyard, my grandfather, thinking he was unobserved, pressed his face against the window of the car and with a small, hidden motion of his hand, waved. It was then I came to my first understanding of the majesty and vulnerability of love."

JoAnn Larsen
Psychology

O'Driscoll is speaking of a love seasoned and refined throughout many years — a love worth working toward, and a love more precious than life itself.

How do couples develop a love like this? There is no single magic formula, but couples who have such lifetime love do often share common characteristics that nurture that love.

These characteristics, identified below, translate to a code of daily behaviors that keep a marriage strong and that can be modeled by any couple interested in investing in an enduring relationship.

In short:

- Long term couples practice 'selective insensitivity.' "Often the difference between a successful marriage and a mediocre one consists of leaving about three or four things a day unsaid," observes an author.

Any of us can take a lesson from long-term couples who have toughed out the bad times and, gradually over the years, have learned to employ selective insensitivity — the art of developing tolerance for things they can't change.

Helga, Carl Sandburg's daughter, for example, writes of her parents: "There never were loud arguments back and forth at our house. My father raged and roared, and often. But it was one-way. Mother coaxed him out of it."

"Once, when he was very old, I saw him pull at a door that was stuck. He rattled the handle and shouted, 'My mother, a small woman, looked up at him and patted his chest. 'What a fine strong voice!' she said. Disarmed, he stood there in love. It was a thread established early and woven through their life."

- They play for keeps. Playing for keeps, in the words of one long-term spouse, means there is no escape clause.

"Divorce? Never! Murder? Often."

"When you marry, you lock the door behind you. If you have problems, you fight it out, wait it out or work it out."

Playing for keeps also means viewing marriage as a task that sometimes demands that you get your teeth and plunge ahead in spite of the difficulties.

- They favor their shared history. People in long marriages value what they've gone through together.

- They keep their fences mended. Long-term couples know that it simply doesn't help — or work — to fight and they avoid becoming mired in conflict in the first place. Though they may hash things out, they often manage the tense times by just

Supervised exercise can give heart-attack victims their tomorrows back

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Having a heart attack is a little like riding a tiger:

If you fall off, you really don't have much choice but to try to get back on.

"People don't want to feel that excruciating pain in their chest again," said Jerry Jensen, director of physical therapy at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. "So some of them are very wary about exercise, or doing anything to bring that pain back."

Trouble is, doing nothing is almost certain to bring it back. "Thirty years ago, if you had a heart attack, the doctor told you to go sit in a rocking chair for the rest of your life," Jensen said. "It's no wonder people died."

With few exceptions these days, cardiologists soon have their patients sweating to the oldies as a hedge against what put them in the hospital in the first place.

"The majority of my heart attack patients eventually go on an exercise program," said Dr. Wayne Wright, a Twin Falls cardiologist. "And probably 90 percent or more of people who've suffered heart attacks could safely be on one."

That includes folks who've had angioplasties — a procedure that clears coronary arteries with a balloon attached to a catheter — as well as coronary bypasses or other open-heart surgeries.

"Absolutely," Wright said. "No matter what's happened to your heart, the goal is cardiovascular fitness."

That's because there's a growing consensus among doctors and researchers that, except for smoking, a sedentary lifestyle is the greatest risk factor for heart attacks — including second heart attacks.

"We try to get people at least up and walking as soon as

Happy Valentine's Day: Good news for chocoholics

The Washington Post

Chocolates: The Aztecs considered it an aphrodisiac. Christopher Columbus carried it home from the New World. Thomas Jefferson extolled "its superiority for both health and nourishment," and American soldiers have been issued rations of it since the Civil War.

Today, chocolate is an irresistible combination of pleasure and comfort. Small wonder that heart-shaped boxes of chocolate, truffles and other goody candies are a favorite way to show love and affection on Valentine's Day.

Americans will spend $655 million this Valentine's Day buying an estimated 30 million boxes of chocolate candy and other chocolate treats, according to the Chocolate Manufacturers Association.

Despite these numbers, Americans are "moderate to low-end" chocolate consumers, according to Frances H. Seligson, manager of nutrition and food safety for Hershey Chocolate.

Per-capita consumption in the United States runs about 10 pounds per person per year, Seligson said. The Swiss rank No. 1,

'Though not a 'health food,' chocolate is clearly not the villain it was once thought to be.'

— Berkeley Wellness Letter, University of California consuming nearly 22 pounds per person per year, Seligson said.

Among the other nuggets of chocolate data:

- Consumption ebbs and flows with the seasons, peaking in cold weather and dropping to lower levels during the summer.

- Contrary to popular belief, chocolate does not cause acne, according to two decades of research.

- And chocolate does not make you more alert. A 1-oz. serving of milk chocolate contains 6 mg. of caffeine, about the amount found in a cup of decaffeinated coffee.

- Milk chocolate contains more calories than dark chocolate because it has more butter and milk, according to researchers.

- People don't usually "pig out" on chocolate, according to a Department of Agriculture national food survey. Only 11 percent of those surveyed reported consuming chocolate during a three-day period. Two-thirds of those who ate it, ate chocolate only once during the three days, the survey found, and in snacking on chocolate, they consumed 2 ounces or less — about the amount found in one candy bar.

Teens eat the most chocolate, with 16 percent reporting they ate chocolate at least once during the three-day period, the USDA survey found. Adolescent boys were the highest consumers, eating slightly more than 3 ounces during the three days.

But from age 19 on, chocolate consumption generally declines — with a few notable exceptions. Among them: women 40 to 49 years old. Fifteen percent said they ate chocolate at least once in the three-day period.

And when women ages 30 to 39 eat chocolate, they consume as much as teenage boys, the USDA survey found.

Many worry that chocolate is not consistent with a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet. But as the University of California, Berkeley Wellness Letter notes:

"Though not a 'health food,' chocolate is clearly not the villain it was once thought to be."

Chocolate can have three kinds of fat. It may contain small amounts of monounsaturated fats, which slightly lower blood cholesterol levels.

It can also contain small amounts of polyunsaturated oils or fats, which are better at lowering cholesterol.

But it is rich in cocoa butter, a highly saturated fat with an "unusual chemical composition," said Margo Denke, assistant professor of internal medicine at the University of Texas Center for Human Nutrition in Dallas.

Unlike other saturated fats, which are known for raising blood cholesterol levels, cocoa butter contains high amounts of stearic acid. Decades of scientific research have shown stearic acid has no effect on blood cholesterol levels.

Some tips from the experts on finding your style

Orlando Sentinel

Style. Some women have it. Some women don't.

It's as simple as that. (Some men have it too — and some don't. But that's another story.)

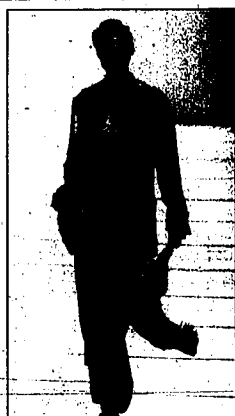

Stylish women know who they are. Self-knowledge is one of the hallmarks of style. So are self-confidence and self-expression. They are the qualities that give some women that je ne sais quoi, the certain elusive something, that draws eyes and turns heads wherever they are — at the office, a ball or a ball game.

Unstylish women know who they are, too. They're the ones who feel dowdy, overshadowed, insecure and out of sync — no matter how expensive or fashionable their clothing.

Style is defined as "the current, fashionable way of dressing," in Webster's New World Dictionary. Also as "distinction and elegance of manner and bearing" and a "characteristic manner of expression."

That's style in a nutshell: a combination of fashion, bearing and individuality.

Health notes

STROKE-PROOFING? Eating small amounts of fish may lower the risk of certain strokes, a study by the National Institute of Public Health in Bilthoven, The Netherlands, said. In the study of 552 men over nearly three decades, those who ate more than two-thirds of an ounce of fish each day had a lower risk of stroke than men who ate less fish. A usual adult serving of fish is about three ounces.

SECOND-HAND SMOKING GUN: How's this for a family legacy? Expectant mothers who do not smoke, but whose mothers smoked during pregnancy, have a greater risk of miscarriage than those whose mothers did not smoke, a British researcher reports. Jean Golding of the Institute of Child Health at Bristol University found that a non-smoking mother-to-be whose own mother smoked while pregnant was 29 percent more likely to lose her baby than one whose mother had not smoked. If both the pregnant woman and her mother smoked during pregnancy, the comparative risk rose by about 60 percent.

FAT PHOBIA: Don't get fanatic about fat. A certain amount of dietary fat is crucial to good health. Federal guidelines suggest a daily intake of slightly more than 2 ounces, but "I can't tell you the number of young women who are trying to eat less than 20 grams of fat a day," Susan Luke, a registered dietitian in Charlotte, N.C., tells the Washington Post. "It becomes a real competition to see who can eat the fewest grams of fat. One says, 'I eat 20,' and so then the next says, 'I eat 15.' It's really sick."

DRIVING MISS DAISY: Good news. New research shows vision and perception problems that occur with Alzheimer's disease may not limit drivers as much, particularly early on, as once believed. In fact, a new University of Michigan study has found, many people with the disease pose no more hazard on the road than other older drivers.

BAD BLOOD: "Philadelphia, Part II:" The death rate for people with the most common kind of hemophilia has tripled since 1979 and their longevity has dropped by 30 percent, due chiefly to AIDS virus infection, a federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Study says.

ALL PUMPED UP: Can specific exercise activities affect the way you feel about your body? Apparently so, according to a recent study at Brigham Young University that monitored two groups of women who followed either a walking or resistance-training program. While both groups experienced physical improvements that corresponded with their assigned activities, the individuals who performed resistance training had significantly greater gains in the perception of body image.

Compiled from wire reports

Weight training 101

Get started on a weight-training program with basic exercises such as these. Some can be done at home with the proper equipment. Exercise instructors and experts recommend working up to two or three sets of 8 to 10 repetitions.

For thighs:

Leg lunges

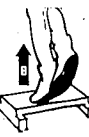

- A Hold dumbbell in each hand.
- B Step forward with left leg until upper left thigh is almost parallel to floor. Keep right leg as straight as possible.

- Step back to starting position. Inhale while stepping forward; exhale while stepping back.
- Alternate with other leg. You can substitute a barbell, placed across the upper back, for the dumbbells.

For calves: Toe raises

- A Stand with balls of feet on a two-by-four or raised object about 24" from wall.
- B Put right toes against left heel and rise as high as possible on left toes.
- Keep back straight, legs locked, head up; place hands on the wall to steady yourself.
- Hold briefly; return to start. Inhale up, exhale down.
- Reverse position; repeat with right leg.

For abdominals:

Crunches

- A Lie on floor. Bend knees, keeping feet flat on floor. Hands can be at sides, crossed over chest or placed behind head.
- B Lift torso off the ground and then back down. You don't need to come all the way up to benefit. Inhale down, exhale up.

For upper body: Bench press

Be sure not to lift more weight than you can handle.

- Lie on a bench, feet flat on floor.
- Grip bar with hands about 6" wider than shoulder width.
- Lower bar to rib cage, just below breast.
- Raise bar to arms' length. Bring back down. Inhale down, exhale up. (Simple push-ups are also a good exercise for the chest and triceps).

Chocolate

One of the most recent studies compared the blood cholesterol effects of following a diet high in cocoa butter for one month against a similar month-long regimen of diets high in other well-known fats, including olive oil, butter and soybean oil.

The study of about two dozen healthy college-age men at Pennsylvania State University found that soybean and olive oil diets both significantly decreased blood cholesterol levels.

The butter diet increased total cholesterol and low-density lipoproteins, the so-called "bad" cholesterol, said Penny Kris-Etherton, who conducted the study, which was sponsored by the Chocolate Manufacturers Association.

But the diet high in cocoa butter "had a completely neutral effect on cholesterol," Kris-Etherton said, neither raising nor lowering it.

As the Mayo Clinic Nutrition Letter advises: "It's okay to treat yourself to chocolate, on occasion, as part of your overall healthful diet and lifestyle. Although the virtues of chocolate have been overrated at times, so have the health concerns. If chocolate is your sweet obsession, enjoy it. Just don't overdo it."

New products help teeth threatened by gum disease

Smile. There is help for teeth threatened by gum disease.

Periodontal disease — a breakdown in gum tissue and the bone around teeth, affects nearly 90 percent of people over 35 and can destroy a tooth's support structure. It is the leading cause of tooth loss in adults.

Exercise

we can," Wright said. "After they're released from the hospital, we have them come in for a low-level treadmill test, and if they do OK, we'll determine a target heart rate."

A target heart rate — patients learn to monitor it themselves — is simply a guideline for exertion. Within those limits, Wright says virtually any kind of aerobic exercise — walking, running, biking, swimming, for example — is safe.

"Heart attack patients have a lot of anxiety — some so much so that it virtually paralyzes them," Jensen said. "But they don't need to be afraid. As long as they stay within a supervised program, they'll do fine. In fact, there are many heart attack patients who are more cardiovascularly fit than at any time in their lives."

Heart attacks damage the heart muscle, but to at least some extent that damage is reversible, Jensen said.

It's even possible for a cardiac patient to eventually get rid of the angina and shortness of breath that often accompany physical activity, he said.

Buell Crane of Twin Falls is probably as good an example of that as you'll find.

Now 94, Crane, who holds several world records in track and field events for folks over 90, was hospitalized last year with a viral infection that damaged part of his heart muscle, he said.

Within a few days of his release from a nursing home, he was walking, and soon he was back on an exercise program. He's already competed in field events at a couple of track meets, and by next summer, he hopes to be running the 100-meter dash again.

"Because so much of my heart is gone, I don't have the endurance I did before," he said. "But my strength is good."

If Crane can bounce back, Jensen says, a 50-year-old couch potato can too.

"You know, most people who have a heart attack are absolutely determined to do whatever it takes, whether it's to stop smoking or getting in shape, to keep it from happening again," he said. "Not all of them stay that way, but there's nothing like a heart attack to motivate you."

New products and techniques allow periodontists — dentists who specialize in treating gum disease — to reverse gum and bone loss in the mouth by regenerating tissue and bone supporting the teeth.

"Regeneration has always been a goal of medicine, but there are very few areas where we're actually doing it today," says Dr. Jeffrey Ganeles, who practices in Boca Raton and Coral Springs, Fla.

Ganeles applies a thin, artificial membrane under the gums and over the affected area. The membrane excludes unwanted cells and encourages the right cells to cover the root surface creating support for the tooth.

"We give teeth a second chance by regenerating the attachment fibers and bone, making it possible for the body to heal itself with its own biological process," Ganeles says.

Study reveals good news for exercisers

The Baltimore Sun

BOSTON — Will vigorous exercise trigger a heart attack? If you're a couch potato, just maybe.

"According to two reports in the December issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, one from this country and one from Germany, the risk of a heart attack during or in the hour after strenuous exertion, such as jogging or shoveling snow, was two to six times greater than during periods of rest or less strenuous activity."

The good news for joggers is that the heart attacks occurring during exercise were almost entirely limited to those individuals who did not exercise regularly.

They also found that most heart attacks took place when people were sedentary or only moderately active — about 1 in 20 appeared to be triggered by exertion.

The increases in heart rate and blood pressure that accompany exercise may provoke a heart attack by disrupting an atherosclerotic plaque and thus promote a blood clot that blocks a coronary artery.

Looking

Being stylish doesn't mean falling for every new fashion fad. But when the trend fits, the stylish woman is the first to adopt it.

She wears what she likes, knowing intuitively what clothes and accessories will work magic on her appearance and enhance her personality.

Some people are born with this sense of style. Most aren't. But if you didn't inherit the style gene, no need to don sackcloth and ashes and hide your head in a paper bag.

Style can be learned, agreed several stylish women, all of whom are involved in the fashion world as buyers, retailers or consultants.

Any woman can acquire the knowledge and confidence needed to develop a unique and attractive personal style, these fashion professionals said.

All it takes is guidance from an expert and a little effort, courage and sense of fun.

Fashion experts explain: Style is not an age or a size. Nor is it determined by looks or bank balance (though those certainly don't hurt).

"Clothes certainly set the stage," said Georgiana Ungaro, 43, who operated her own boutique in Winter Park, Fla., in the 1980s and is a former assistant buyer for Bonwit Teller in New York. "But style is more than clothes," Ungaro said. "It's the total package. It's how a woman presents herself, how she looks and acts. It's energy and enthusiasm. It's making people feel welcome and at home."

Style comes in many forms — classic, romantic, modern, sporty. "But I think there must always be a sense of drama," she said.

Money is not an overriding factor. "Though you do have to work harder to find the right clothes if you don't have a lot of money," she admitted.

In this case, she offers tried-and-true advice: "Buy fewer but better things."

"A stylish woman is secure in the way she looks," said Shirley Johnson, 59, fashion director for Jacobson's in Longwood and Winter Park. "She has found her style and sticks with it. She may add a few new things each season — but she isn't a fashion victim, following every new trend whether it suits her or not."

She has helped dozens of women build wardrobes for work, for travel, for social activities — and at the same time, develop and enhance their sense of style.

"I always tell them, 'You wear the clothes, don't let the clothes wear you. Don't overdo it. Let your personality shine through.'" simply "getting through them" without making them worse.

"It came to be one day that our fights were totally self-contained when one of us walked out of the room and we were back in five minutes, happy just to be together again," reflects a wife. "So, at that point, we began to walk out on arguments on purpose."

"They recognize their spouse's ultimate value. Long-term couples know each other's ultimate value and they also know how to express it, as reflected in the remarks of a husband in a 55-year marriage."

"They mirror each other's 'best self.' Long-term couples often 'see' in their spouses the man or woman whom they first married."

"They consider their marriage precious. When asked to name the personal possession that had given her the most value for the money, Erma Bombeck offered this reply:

"I would have to say my wedding ring. For years, it has done its job. It has led me not into temptation. It has reminded my husband numerous times at parties that it's time to go home. It has been a source of relief to a dinner companion. It has been a status symbol in the maternity ward. It has reminded me every day of the last 30 years that I have someone who loves me."

Bring kids, relatives in on estate plans

DEAR ABBY: This former Iowan takes strong exception to your response to "Another Iowan," who thought his son was out of line for wanting to know what was in his parents' will. You replied, "The contents of one's will are usually not disclosed until it's time to deliver the inheritance." That can have disastrous consequences.

Abby, those of us who are involved in estate planning believe it is necessary for clients to discuss their estate planning with family members. This is especially true when the family assets include farming property and family businesses.

With a federal estate tax that can exceed 50 percent of the value of the estate assets, plus state death taxes, plus legal costs, it is essential to instruct your children of your intentions.

You usually consult your experts, which is what you should have done in this case. That son needs a road map.

— JERRY A. KASNER, PROFESSOR OF LAW, SANTA CLARA UNIVERSITY, SANTA CLARA, CALIF.

DEAR PROFESSOR KASNER: Thank you — and the many others who wrote to point out my error. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I strongly disagree that parents should keep the contents of their wills a secret from their children. My opinion is based on numerous cases, several of which are summarized as follows:

- (1) Fifty-year-old son spends $7,500 on father's funeral without realizing the net worth of his parents was $8,000, thereby leaving his mother destitute.
- (2) Daughter takes senile mother into her home and lovingly cares for her for the last three years of mother's life. Mother's will, written 10 years earlier, gives entire $40,000 estate to an old boyfriend who had not been seen for the past five years.

Dear Abby

(3) Father's will leaves everything to son, but father had all intangible property in Joint and Survivorship accounts with daughter. Assets consisted of $600,000 farm and $350,000 in the J. and S. accounts. Daughter died before father, who was then senile. At father's funeral, son informs daughter's six children that he will keep all $950,000. (And he did.)

(4) Elderly couple places all assets ($2 million) in trust with an unscrupulous individual, resulting in poverty for couple.

(5) Spinster leaves farm worth $200,000 to farmhand who had looked after her for free for last 20 years of her life, thereby permitting her to stay on family farm for her entire life. Nephews who had not seen aunt in 20 years contested the will. Result: $100,000 settlement with nephews.

All of the above could have been avoided by keeping relatives informed as to respective wills, trusts and assets of the parties.

— OHIO ATTORNEY AT LAW

DEAR ABBY: You obviously believe that the contents of one's will should not be disclosed to the heirs until after death. That's what my parents believe: They have their life savings hidden in shoe boxes and coffee cans around the house. I have no idea how much is hidden, except for the $15,000 I stumbled across in a shoe box behind the cat litter bag.

— STEAMED IN PITTSBURGH

Worst fears realized: Rampaging beavers

Today's topic — and we wish to stress that this has nothing whatsoever to do with the Clinton administration — is Beavers In The News.

Here at the Center For Being Alarmed, we have been monitoring the beaver situation for more than two years now, and we feel that the time has come to alert you, the public, to what is going on, so that you can take appropriate action in the form of whimpering in terror.

Let's review the sequence of events, bearing in mind that we are not making any of these events up; they were reported in actual newspaper items sent in by many alert readers.

We will start with 1992, when wildlife authorities in Chelmsford, Mass., in an effort to control the burgeoning local beaver population, decided to have a team of veterinarians give them (the beavers) vasectomies. The New Haven Register stated: "The beavers will be enticed with tasty bark to swim into traps. Female beavers will be released, but males will be held and vasectomized."

At this point, the question you are asking yourself is: "How does The New Haven Register know the bark is tasty?" Trust me, it knows. It is staffed by journalism professionals.

Anyway, while authorities in Chelmsford were vasectomizing male beavers, authorities in Colorado were attempting to implant Norplant contraceptive devices in female beavers. This effort was covered extensively in The Denver Post and The Rocky Mountain News (which at one point ran this headline: BEAVERS GET NORPLANT WHILE WOMEN WAIT IN LINE).

The highlight of this effort

Dave Barry
Humor

occurred when wildlife authorities invited the press to a Denver veterinary hospital to witness the first beaver implant, which was to be performed by Dr. David Robinson. Everything was ready: The cameras were rolling, and the sedated beaver was on the operating table, breathing anesthetic gas through a little cone over its snout. Robinson, wearing a rubber glove (you don't want to take any chances, not with your modern, sexually active beaver) made one final examination, and then announced: "It's a male."

The News published a wonderful photograph of this event, showing Robinson with his arms around the beaver, groping his (the beaver's) private region, looking concerned.

"The problem with beavers is, their sexual organs are drawn way up inside their body cavities," explained Robinson, in a statement that will elicit strong beaver envy from any male human who was ever pedaling a bicycle hard when the chain broke.

Now we move to 1993, during which the following news items were published (we are still not making any of this up):

• The Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review reported that a beaver chewed through a 100-foot tree, which fell on a "passing woodchip truck," causing about $2,000 damage. The Review reported that "The driver and police were laughing over the incident, with jokes flying about the beaver ambushing the truck in order to get at the tantalizing wood chips."

• The Associated Press reported on a lawsuit in Chippewa Falls, Wis., resulting from an incident wherein "a beaver chewed through a tree, causing it to fall on a fence, allowing Holstein heifers to escape from a pasture and wander onto some railroad tracks." Eight heifers were killed by a train.

• The Winnipeg (Canada) Free Press reported that a 71-year-old outdoorsman was sitting on the tailgate of his pickup truck when he felt a sharp pain. "He looked down," reported The Free Press, "and realized a large beaver had sunk its teeth into his left leg." Fortunately — and let this be a lesson to those who would limit the rights of citizens to keep and bear hockey sticks — the man had a hockey stick. "He beat the beaver several times until it clamped on to his hockey stick with its teeth," stated The Free Press.

(We received one other extremely alarming beaver report in 1993, but we are too tasteful to mention it here, because it involved an incident on the Brule River in Wisconsin wherein a beaver gnawed through a tree in such a way that it landed in a fatal manner on a canoeist.)

So the picture is clear: The beavers are striking back. Perhaps you are not concerned about this. Perhaps you live in an urban area, and think you're safe from attack. Perhaps you are a fool. Consider the following item from the Dec. 15, 1990, installment of the syndicated feature Ripley's Believe It Or Not:

"In the 1950s, beavers WERE DROPPED BY PARACHUTE IN CALIFORNIA to build dams in areas threatened by erosion!"

That's right: Beavers can be dropped from airplanes. They could land ANYWHERE. And please do not be so naive as to try to tell us that the government would not do such a thing. The government, and we say this as a loyal taxpayer citizen, is completely out of its mind. The government is perfectly capable of suddenly deciding to drop mass quantities of beavers on urban areas, especially if an economist suggests that this might create jobs.

So that is the situation! Nobody is safe. What can you do? You can be on constant alert. You can refuse to sleep and constantly drag your eyes around in a nervous manner. You can carry a hockey stick at all times, even to work. Perhaps your co-workers will laugh. Perhaps your boss will want to have a word with you.

Perhaps he will beg like a yellow dog for your help when he feels the Chomp of Doom on his ankle.

Musings on parenting: Keep the marriage happy and don't forget the Three C's

A collection of musings on parenting: If you think childrearing is difficult, it will be.

Authority provides direction and self-discipline to a child. Love provides meaning and a sense of belonging. Together, they provide the child with a stable, secure sense of who he is and is capable of becoming.

In a family in which there are two adults — one male, one female — the three C's are required: the greatest amount of "quality time" is the marriage.

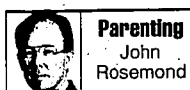

The more parents try to make their children happy, the more they prevent their children from learning how to make, and keep, themselves happy.

The second 18 months of life is the most precedent-setting of times in the parent-child relationship. What parents accomplish here will never have to be accomplished again. What they don't accomplish will come back to haunt them.

The Three C's of good communication:

1. Be commanding as opposed to demanding.
2. Be concise as opposed to long-winded.
3. Be concrete as opposed to obscure.

Good communication will prevent many a discipline problem. Parents need to first draw a line between what children need and what they want; then they need to give them everything they truly need and a smattering of what they simply want. More than a smattering is overindulgence.

Consistency may be the oil, but variety is the spice of living. Don't limit your options by subscribing too literally to the idea that you must be consistent. The rules should be steady; the consequences of violating them can vary.

A child watching television is not learning to be a winner. He's learning how to be a spectator instead of a doer, a follower rather than a leader. Family meals are an opportunity to reaffirm the values of sharing and unity. It matters little what people eat or how much; good conversation and love are what we are one for all, and all for one are what count.

When a child misbehaves, keep your reprimand to 25 words or less. A few words have a much better chance of sinking in than a lot of words.

Where toilet training is concerned, it's unwise to try to "push the river" as it is to "jump the gun." Come to think of it, this same advice applies to a lot of things parents need to help children accomplish.

As a parent, you'll never be perfect, but you'll always be the only mother or father your child will ever want. Take that as a vote of confidence and do your best, because your best is always and forever going to be good enough.

Nearly a 3rd of quake victims may have had heart attacks

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — When the Northridge quake struck, the woman was terrified. In less than a minute, the shaking stopped and her Granada Hills house remained intact. But the danger, for the 73-year-old, had not passed. Her chest began to ache. She gasped for air. She knew she was in trouble and dialed 911.

But 911 wasn't there. The telephone lines were down.

Within minutes, the woman died in a manner similar to about 20 other Southern Californians following last week's 6.6 earthquake.

Of the more than 50 earthquake-related fatalities, early reports indicate that one-third may be due to heart attacks, or what doctors call sudden cardiac deaths. The Los Angeles County Coroner's official report is not expected for several weeks.

But the high percentage of cardiac deaths apparently related to the quake does not surprise medical experts who, in recent years, say they have developed an awesome respect for the power of emotions. In several of the cases, the victims were clearly reacting to immediate danger.

Fear, panic and terror are among the most gripping of sensations, feelings strong enough that even young and healthy people often experience their hearts racing and breaths shortening in the midst of a traumatic event.

"I know I felt that way," says Dr. Linda Demer, chief of cardiology at the University of California, Los Angeles, Medical Center.

This response, she says, is the well-known evolutionary trait called "fight or flight."

It helps us react with some success when face-to-face with the saber-toothed tiger.

"This response involves massive releases of hormones (called catecholamines) which stimulate receptors in many places of the body, including the heart," Demer says. "That is responsible for the increased heart rate that most people feel. The heart beats faster and pumps harder. That increases the work load on the heart. The blood pressure goes up as well."

The response is designed to trigger an increase in strength in healthy individuals, Demer says. But, "if someone has compromised blood flow to the heart, they may not be able to meet the demands of the heart muscle."
