Triumph skier posts fastest downhill qualifying time

The Associated Press

RINGEBU, Norway — Stand back! Here comes another downhill race and the U.S. Alpine team is looking good.

Picabo Street posted the fastest qualifying time Friday for the women's downhill race at the Kvitfjell course. Hilary Lindh, silver medalist at Albertville and winner of the last World Cup race, will be competing Saturday as well.

America's first two golds in these Olympics came from the surprisingly strong U.S. Alpine team, with Tommy Moe's downhill triumph and Diann Roffe-Steinrotter's win in the women's super-giant slalom.

Street, going eighth among 70 skiers in qualifying, posted a time of 1 minute, 36.50

IRS comes under fire for financial laxity

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The agency responsible for keeping track of Americans' money is having trouble managing its own, congressional auditors say.

The General Accounting Office said its first audit of the Internal Revenue Service disclosed "fundamental deficiencies that significantly impaired its ability to properly monitor, account for, and report on use of its operating funds."

"The irony of it is if it were taxpayers with similar records, they would probably be given a hard time," said Gregory M. Holloway, the GAO's director of civil audits, required under a 1990 law designed to improve the federal government's money management, covers the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1992. It was performed while the IRS was in the midst of replacing its accounting system with a new one.

"In some ways this is old news," said IRS Chief Financial Officer Morgan Kinghorn. "We now have (the new system) in place. It's nearly 90 percent complete and it will, over time, eliminate every problem" mentioned by the GAO.

"The old system was designed years ago.... It just was simply not auditable and it was not designed to be auditable," he said. "My guess is we'll have a clean opinion next year."

However, the GAO's Holloway said, "Clearly, improvements are being made, but I don't think they've fully arrived yet. There are still some problems there."

The IRS, an arm of the Treasury Department, is the nation's largest revenue collector. This year it expects to process tax re-

Court OKs Hansen's convictions

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Former Idaho Congressman George V. Hansen's conviction of defrauding five banks was upheld Friday by a federal appeals court.

Hansen, 63, a seven-term Republican defeated for re-election in 1984, is serving a four-year federal prison sentence on charges dating from 1990. He earlier served a one-year sentence on a separate conviction of failing to report loans and securities profits on his financial disclosure statement while still in Congress.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the convictions of Hansen and John Scoresby on 43 felony charges.

Scoresby, 46, sentenced to 21 months in prison, had been Hansen's field representative in Congress and also was regional chairman of the Idaho Republican Party until he resigned in 1992.

The court said Hansen and Scoresby ran an elaborate check-kiting operation in which they wrote checks without sufficient funds against accounts at several Idaho banks and deposited other checks to cover them. They obtained the money from private lenders, purportedly to pay for political projects, the court said.

When Hansen filed for protection under bankruptcy laws in October 1990 and advised two of his lenders to stop payment on their checks, the Bank of Commerce in Idaho Falls was left with more than $2.1 million in bad checks, the court said.

The bankruptcy filing by Hansen and Scoresby listed debts of over $18 million to 200 people. Those were not a part of the criminal convictions.

In his appeal, Hansen said the bank was aware of his activities, condoned them and therefore were not defrauded.

"Lacking deception, there could be no fraud," said Hansen's lawyer, John Runft. He contended the bank officers' testimony showed they knew what Hansen and Scoresby were doing, despite the jury's conclusion to the contrary.

But the court said the size and duration of the "loan program" entitled the jury to conclude the two men were involved in a complicated scheme to defraud the banks.

The unanimous decision was issued by Judges Alfred Goodwin, Mary Schroeder and William Norris.

Hansen is now in the Federal Correctional Institution in Petersburg, Va., with a scheduled release date of Oct. 6, 1996. Runft said he did not know whether Hansen would appeal the ruling.

"I'm glad to see it over," Assistant U.S. Attorney George Breitsamer said.

Runft said he wasn't optimistic about winning reversal of the conviction after the panel of appeals judges gave him only 10 minutes to present his case.

Rick Camarillo, Potocello attorney who handled Scoresby's case, couldn't be reached for comment.

U.S. pushes for plan to split Bosnia 3 ways

Newsday

WASHINGTON — In exchange for the support of Western allies in threatening NATO air strikes to end Serb shelling of Sarajevo, the Clinton administration is pushing hard for the Bosnian government's approval soon of a peace plan for a three-way ethnic partition of the country, senior State Department officials said.

Indeed, one U.S. diplomat said, the United States had hoped to have the Bosnian signature before Sunday's deadline for the Serbs to withdraw or give up their siege guns. But confusion over the NATO ultimatum and a possible weakening of the warning may have undercut the U.S.

efforts to win Bosnia's agreement on the peace plan.

Although the administration has said it is pursuing a "two-track policy" — NATO threats to end the suffering in Sarajevo, along with intensive diplomacy to seek a settlement — the senior American diplomat told Newsday, "The real track is getting Bosnia to sign onto a variation of the partition plan and to do it quickly."

Until now, the United States has opposed the plan, mediated by Lord David Owen for the European Union and Thorvald von Stoltenberg for the United Nations, on the grounds that it imposes an unfair settlement on Bosnia as the victim of Serb aggression.

N. Idaho firm heads south

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Barwalt Inc. announced Friday it will move its manufacturing operations from Post Falls to Twin Falls.

Company founder and President Walter Pytewski said he wants to begin construction soon on a new plant in southwest Twin Falls and put 10 employees to work in the finished plant within a year.

"But I expect to double that soon," he said.

Barwalt Inc. operates under the name Precision Tile Co. and manufactures small plastic spacers that are used when construction workers place ceramic tiles. But the company has diversified into making other products for tile workers such as knee pads and trowels.

Architect Russell Lively is designing Barwalt's 25,000-square-foot plant on 5.6 acres owned by the city that will be sold to the company through the Twin Falls Industrial Development Commission. The plant will be at Victory Avenue and Rose Street, immediately south of the Henningsen Cold Storage plant.

Friday's announcement was the second announcement in six weeks of a light manufacturing company moving to Twin Falls. Two weeks

Rain, snow cover West as high winds roar across Plains

The Associated Press

A combination of snow and rain fell from the Pacific Coast to the Rockies on Friday while strong winds swept through the Plains.

Seventeen inches of snow fell in the Wasatch Mountains in Utah, with 5 to 7 inches in and around the Salt Lake City metropolitan area.

In the Sierra Nevada, 2 to 4 feet of snow was reported in the Lake Tahoe-Truckee, Calif., area and nearby ski resorts.

One to 2 feet of snow fell in the higher Sierra foothills of the northern Sacramento Valley.

Nine inches of snow was reported in Summitville, Colo., and 8 inches fell in the northern mountains of New Mexico.

In the nation's midsection, strong winds blew through

Weather summary

The cold front which moved across Idaho late Thursday, was located over Wyoming and Colorado Friday, trailing from a low pressure center in Montana.

A high pressure ridge extended over the Pacific Coast. This weather pattern returned a weak northwest flow along with cooler temperatures and snow showers to Idaho Friday morning.

Light snow showers moved across Owyhee County and the Boise area along with showers in the mountain areas around Mullan in the north and at Spencer in the northeast. Intermittent snow showers fell across the Magic Valley throughout Friday. Winds were westerly and temperatures generally in the 30s.

Moisture accumulation from rain and snow ranged from around .25 inch in the south to traces in the central sections with around .10 inch reported from extreme northern Idaho.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 51 degrees at Caldwell. Spencer reported the lowest at 12 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 91 degrees at Lajitas, Texas. Houlton, Maine, reported the lowest temperature at 1 degree.

Oklahoma, Kansas, northwest Arkansas, parts of Texas, and eastern Nebraska. Winds gusts to 52 mph at Salina, Kan., 51 mph at Enid, Okla., and 49 mph at Grand Island, Neb.

The strong southerly flow raised temperatures into the 60s and lower 70s as far north as the central Plains, the middle Mississippi Valley and the Ohio Valley.

High-temperature records were set at a few cities across the Great Lakes region, including Flint, Mich., where the high of 56 topped the 1949 record for the date by 1 degree. Other cities with records for the date were Houghton, Lake, Mich., where the high of 51 broke the 1949 record by 3 degrees; Muskegon, Mich., at 52, breaking the 1961 mark of 50; and Youngstown, Ohio, at 59, breaking the 1949 record of 58.

It was wet and windy across Florida. More than an inch of rain fell during a six-hour period in Miami.

ago, owners of Seastrom Manufacturing Co. Inc. of Glendale, Calif., said they'll move their company here within a year.

"Walter is a true entrepreneur and an inventor," said Kent just, executive vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce as he introduced Pytlewski to members of the City Council, Industrial Development Commission and chamber at the announcement Friday.

"There'll be a better work force here," Pytlewski said.

"We obviously have a better relationship with the city," he said nodding to the city and business leaders surrounding him.

He said he'll announce the move to his employees soon and will bring Shelley Tschida, vice president for operations, down to run the plant.

Pytlewski started the company almost 16 years ago in Anaheim, Calif. Nine years ago he moved the company to Post Falls.

But the northern Idaho city has become almost unmanageable with the explosive economic growth between Spokane, Wash., and Coeur d'Alene.

"Coeur d'Alene doesn't show much long-term planning. I see urban sprawl there. I don't see that here," Pytlewski said. "Coeur d'Alene is becoming a suburb of Spokane."

The heavy growth around Coeur d'Alene has led to more congestion, pollution, crime and taxes. He said in the last year his taxes have more than doubled.

But he also said his sales of knee pads have doubled in the past two years, and he needs a larger plant.

Barwalt sells products worldwide and has seen its sales rise as construction has grown in this country. The move to Twin Falls will make distribution easier and slightly less expensive, he said.

"I don't see any limits," he said.

Pytlewski contacted the city about possibly moving to Twin Falls in 1990. And since then he said he "casually" looked at other cities across the country. But it wasn't until he got into just his car three weeks ago for a drive around town that he made up his mind.

seconds to edge Germany's Katja Seizer, the World Cup points leader, who clocked 1:36.71.

Seizer noted the times and remarked that if she doesn't win the gold, maybe Street would.

"Obviously that's my goal," said Street, 22, from Triumph and Sun Valley. "But I'm going to take what I get."

But not going to put that much pressure on myself. I am going to enjoy being here. Whatever happens I'm skiing well. I'm happy."

Street was the race leader at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, on Jan. 29, the day of Austrian skier Ulrike Maier's fatal crash, but was overtaken after the accident.

Today's races will be in early morning Idaho time. Coverage of competition in the women's downhill is scheduled during both daytime and evening segments of CBS network programming. Those segments are scheduled from noon until 5 p.m. and from 6 until 10 p.m. and may be seen on Channel 11 in Twin Falls and the Magic Valley.

Lindh, 24, from Juneau, Alaska, placed second to Canadian Kerrin

Lee-Gartner at the Albertville Games. She clocked 1:37.91 Friday to place ninth in qualifying, but she anticipated a better performance Saturday.

"It's difficult for me a little bit at the bottom of the course," said Lindh, who won a World Cup race Feb. 16 in Spain.

"The turns are really close and quick but I hope to do better tomorrow. Tomorrow it should come together but I have some parts of the course to think about."

"It does not have the speed that most downhill have, the sort that I like," Lindh said. "But I guess this is it."

She said the American team was euphoric after the gold-medal triumphs of Moe and Roff-Steinrodt, plus Moe's silver in the men's super-G.

"Winning three medals has relieved the team of the pressure to do well," Lindh said. "From the team's point of view it really doesn't matter who does well, but of course it does matter to individuals."

"As far as the public is concerned, we have done well already."

turns from 117 million Americans. Yet, according to the GAO, the IRS system for administering its own money was so bad that auditors were unable even to review 64 percent of the IRS' $6.7 billion budget in 1992.

In the 36 percent of the budget the GAO did examine, "tests identified significant control weaknesses that affected the IRS' ability to comply with laws governing the use of its budget authority."

According to the report, issued last week, Treasury Department regulations require the IRS to reconcile its cash accounts with Treasury records each month, much as bank customers reconcile their check books with their monthly bank statements.

Yet, rather than tracking down the causes of discrepancies, the IRS sometimes simply changes its financial statements to reflect the same account balances as Treasury's records. At the end of fiscal 1992, there were unresolved differences of $63 million.

The GAO also found that IRS managers did not have up-to-date and reliable information on how much of their appropriation funds were available to spend at any given point. Account balances were updated only monthly, rather than as transactions occurred.

Fifty-nine percent of all payments for goods and services checked in the audit were made either too late, forcing the IRS to pay penalty interest, or too early, resulting in lost interest income, the GAO said. The IRS spent $673,000 for interest on late payments in 1992.

Forty percent of the payments tested weren't supported by proper documentation and 1.5 percent were duplicate payments, the GAO said.

IRS "officials were not aware of the duplicate payments until either we or the vendors notified them," it said.

In once case, 23 overpayments totaling $175,000 have been made to a single vendor since 1988 because IRS personnel mistakenly approved amounts for payment that were actually amounts the vendor owed the IRS.

"Overpayments continued even after IRS procurement personnel and the vendor brought them to the attention of supervisors responsible for approving the payments," the GAO said.

In another case, a $24,949 payment to a vendor was approved without evidence the services had been performed and four months after the vendor wrote the IRS to ignore its invoices because most of the services listed hadn't been rendered.

Selective history? Both sides cite founding fathers in debt debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was almost as if the Founding Fathers walked the halls of Congress again.

Sen. Paul Simon, the principal sponsor of a proposed amendment to the Constitution requiring a balanced budget, reached back to the words of Thomas Jefferson, the nation's third president, to make his case.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, the amendment's chief opponent, countered with James Madison, the fourth president.

Simon, D-Ill., and Byrd, D-W.Va., squared off at a hearing Friday of Byrd's Appropriations Committee, previewing the debate to come next week on the Senate floor.

"If I could add one amendment to the Constitution," Simon said, quoting a letter written by Jefferson to Madison, "it would be to prohibit the federal government from borrowing money."

Simon said his amendment, which is opposed by President Clinton, would not go that far. It would require a balanced budget by 2001 unless three-fifths of the House and Senate vote otherwise.

Without it, the political drift that has allowed a $4.4 trillion national debt to accumulate will continue, robbing the grandchildren of those now living of their prosperity, Simon argued.

The nation's first Treasury secretary, Alexander Hamilton, eventually came to agree with his rival, Jefferson, on the issue, Simon said.

Not to be outdone, Byrd, known for his deep love of history, pointed out that Jefferson financed the $15 million Louisiana Purchase in 1803 by borrowing the equivalent of nearly twice the federal budget at the time.

"Did Jefferson pay for that territory with money on the barrelhead? No, he went into debt for it," Byrd said.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., left, chief sponsor of the balanced-budget amendment, speaks with Sen. Robert Byrd, D. W. Va., before a hearing on the proposal.

Often, deficit spending such as the Louisiana purchase benefits future generations more than those living when debt is incurred, Byrd said.

Quoting Madison, known as the father of the Constitution, he said, "Debts may be incurred for ... infants yet unborn, as well as the living."

Byrd argued that the amendment would "drastically alter the balance of power" among all three branches of government — executive, legislative and judicial.

The president's power would be restricted by the requirement that a balanced budget be submitted to lawmakers. Congress' power potentially would be infringed upon by court enforcement of the amendment. And, by requiring that a three-fifths majority approve an increase in the national debt, it essentially provides for minority rule, he said.

"I, too, am concerned about the debt ... but I'm also concerned about the Constitution that we're going to pass on to our grandchildren. I would like to leave them the constitutional system of checks and balances and separation of powers that was handed down to us by our forefathers," he said.

The dialogue between the two senators closed a week of hearings on the proposed amendment held by Byrd's panel and by the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on the Constitution, chaired by Simon.

The vote is considered too close to call.

Turn over diaries, judge tells Packwood

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court refused Friday to keep Sen. Bob Packwood's diaries from the Senate Ethics Committee while he appeals the panel's subpoena.

The order means Packwood's diaries could be turned over to the committee as early as Tuesday.

In a brief order, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit said Packwood "has not satisfied the stringent standards required for a stay pending appeal."

On Feb. 7, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson set a 15-day timetable for transfer of the diaries to the committee for its investigation of allegations of sexual misconduct, witness intimidation and obstruction of the inquiry.

Ex-attorney general begins prison term

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — William L. Webster, the former Missouri attorney general whose once-golden political career was destroyed by scandal, began a two-year sentence in federal prison on Friday.

Webster reported to a prison camp in Florence, Colo., and became inmate 07556-045. He was issued the standard blue prison pants and shirt.

Webster was convicted of conspiring to use state resources for his political campaigns.

A one-time hero to conservatives, he was the 1992 Republican nominee for Missouri governor, but lost the race amid scandals that sent him to prison.

Another probe of failed S&L set to go

WASHINGTON — The government's savings and loan cleanup agency is scrambling to conduct yet another review of the failed Arkansas S&L that has dragged President Clinton into controversy. The Resolution Trust Corp.'s goal this time, regulators say, is to determine whether the S&L, which had numerous signs of problems, should have been closed earlier than 1989 and whether anyone else can be sued now for its failure.

The review is driven by the transformation of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan from a relatively small failure in the multi-billion dollar S&L debacle to the subject of a politically charged investigation of the Clintons' financial dealings.

U.S. military ready for 1 war, but not 2

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military is plagued by "pockets of unreadiness" caused by budget cuts, base closures and severe troop reductions that could make it difficult to fight two major wars, a top retired Army general said Friday.

Even though the military has been in a state of turbulence for several years, said Gen. E.C. "Shy" Meyer, today's forces appear adequately prepared to go to war.

He spoke at the Pentagon after releasing a report on the military's readiness to enter combat and conduct other missions.

Defense Secretary William Perry, who spoke before Meyer, was more upbeat. "Our readiness today is as high as it has ever been," Perry said, praising Meyer's panel for helping identify potential problem areas.

Meyer said it is far more difficult to assess how ready those forces will be several years down the road, or how capable they will be when the four service branches need to fight as a team.

"There are lots of pockets of unreadiness out there," Meyer said.

For example, he cited spare-part problems in the Air Force; Army personnel mismatches caused by the rapid drawdown of forces, and a high rate of operations that detracts from the Marine Corps' training abilities.

Meyer's panel was appointed by former Defense Secretary Les Aspin and given the task of helping the Pentagon judge readiness.

Meyer would not speculate whether readiness problems will be solved over the long term, given continued budget pressures. The answer depends upon the military's size, budget and strategy it must follow, he said.

Will the military be able to fight two major wars at nearly the same time, as the present strategy requires? Meyer said his panel found several readiness areas "that would make it difficult for the United States to do that."

Some members of Congress and senior members of the military had expressed concerns that the Clinton administration's budget cuts would erode readiness and the military's ability to train and equip troops.

Meyer's report recommended war games to test the joint readiness of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, and nuclear exercises to "ensure the ability of military and civilian leadership to carry out their roles."

"The general readiness posture of our military units today appears to be acceptable," the report stated, but added that budget and troop cuts inevitably will result in some readiness problems in the future.

PCP clone might halt effects of strokes

SAN DIEGO — An experimental medicine that mimics the illicit drug PCP appears to reduce the irreversible brain damage resulting from strokes, raising the possibility of an effective treatment, researchers report.

The medicine, called selfotel, shows promise of halting a disastrous chemical chain reaction in the brain that kills cells after a stroke chokes off the blood supply.

"I think this drug, or one like it, will ultimately be proven to be effective," said Dr. James C. Grotta of the University of Texas Medical School in Houston.

However, the medicine carries one major side effect: Patients temporarily suffer hallucinations like those triggered by PCP, or angel dust, which affects the brain in a similar way.

Pot still not allowed for medicinal use

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court refused Friday to force the government to allow medical use of marijuana by people suffering from cancer, AIDS and other illnesses.

The Bush administration's 1992 decision not to let doctors prescribe marijuana to ease patients' pain or nausea was supported by "substantial evidence," said the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. Numerous medical experts testified "that marijuana's medicinal value has never been proven in sound scientific studies," the court said.

The Clinton administration has said it was reconsidering the ban.

Clinton promises aid for hard-hit states

WASHINGTON — The 23 states that have taken the brunt of this winter's icy blast will receive $100 million in federal emergency home-heating aid, President Clinton announced Friday.

"The unusually cold weather in the northern half of the country has caused very real hardships for millions of Americans, particularly those who simply cannot afford to pay for the additional energy costs they have faced," Clinton said in a statement.

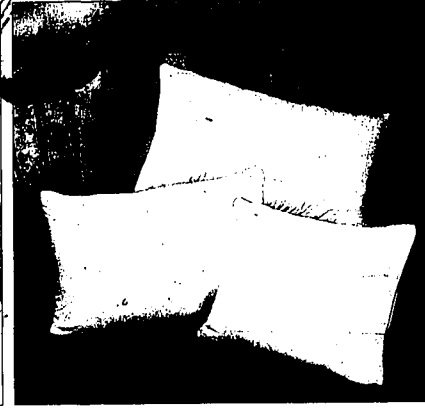

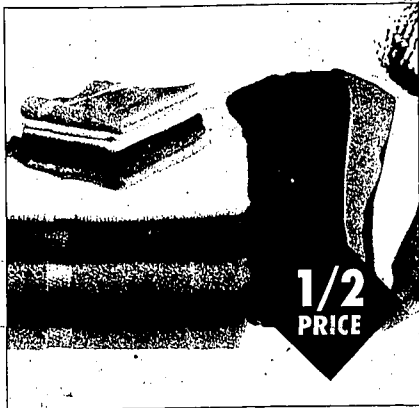

The Department of Health and Human Services will distribute the money to those states that have experienced the worst weather conditions and also have large numbers of low-income households.

State worker accused of running prostitution ring from office dies

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The veteran state employee fired this week after he was accused of running a prostitution ring from his office was found shot to death Friday, apparently a suicide, police said.

Police confirmed the victim was James A. Bunch, who was charged earlier this week with using his state computer and phone to run a prostitution ring. The arrest touched off reports that local VIPs in this capital city could be among his clients.

"He drove up in the parking lot of the human resources building where he was fired from and shot himself," said police officer Gayle Joslin. The shooting occurred about 7:15 a.m., she said.

Bunch, 45, worked for the Department of Human Services, evaluating the agency's Medicaid program. He also ran an escort service, Aimes Escort.

He was fired from his $32,000-a-year job after an agency probe triggered by employees who said they overheard Bunch holding odd telephone conversations. He'd Services department.

Police said Bunch killed himself with a .38-caliber pistol but gave few other details.

On Thursday, Bunch told The Associated Press that the case was overblown and referred questions to lawyer Steve Brittain. Brittain did not return messages left at his office requesting comment.

Agency investigators discovered escort service papers and computer disks in Bunch's work space, Jones said earlier this week. No other employees have been implicated.

At Bunch's home, police seized files that include 400 index cards describing clients' sexual preferences, what they paid and if they were likely to hurt the prostitutes, Sgt. Jack Kelley said.

Phones were ringing "off the wall" at the Austin Police Department with calls from people wanting to find out if they are among those listed as clients, Deputy Chief Ken Williams said.

"Attorneys will call saying, 'I have a client whose name I won't reveal, but they would like to come in and talk to you,'" he said.

Lt. Keith Leach, who heads the vice squad, told at least two newspapers that investigators had uncovered the name of a state legislator.

But Williams said Leach's comments were taken out of context and declined to confirm any names.

"If a politician is involved, that could affect whether or not they get re-elected, but that's not important to us. We are not going to defame or ruin anyone's reputation," Williams said.

While ruling out a mass release of names from the client list, Williams did not rule out prosecuting individuals on patronization charges, especially those who appeared to be repeat clients.

British clinic to provide abortion pill

LONDON — A British clinic said Friday it will begin providing the abortion pill RU-486 to American and other nonresident women. Frances Perrow, spokeswoman of the Marie Stopes International, said the Health Department agreed not to prosecute doctors or the nonresident patients to whom they dispense RU-486 if strict conditions, including a two-week stay, are met.

RU-486 is not licensed for use in the United States to induce abortions, but President Clinton has called for more research into the drug. Perrow said under guidelines set by the department, women must pay $500, prove they are less than nine weeks pregnant, obtain the approval of two doctors at the London clinic, and stay long enough in Britain for a follow-up exam a week after the embryo is aborted.

The woman's regular doctor must also be informed.

Kevorkian will stand trial in suicide

DETROIT — A judge Friday ordered Dr. Jack Kevorkian to stand trial, turning down a request to dismiss the remaining assisted suicide charge facing him.

Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Thomas Jackson set a trial date of April 19 for Kevorkian in the death of Thomas Hyde, a 30-year-old Lou Gehrig's disease sufferer who died last summer.

Kevorkian, an outspoken advocate of medically assisted suicide for the terminally ill, said a trial would be a "farce."

"Nobody's going to trample my rights," he said after the hearing. Kevorkian's lawyers had asked Jackson to dismiss the charge, citing previous rulings that the state's ban on assisted suicide is unconstitutional. Three other assisted suicide charges have been dismissed by circuit court judges on various grounds.

Woman wins $335,000 for harassment

MINNEAPOLIS — A woman who said male co-workers at a Pepsi Cola loading dock taunted her and reached inside her uniform was awarded $335,000 in damages for sexual harassment.

Sandra Huffman, 26, who was the only woman working the third shift on the dock, said she was the victim of repeated jeers and whistles. Co-workers vandalized her car and displayed lewd photos of women they said were her, she said.

Huffman worked at the plant in Burnsville, a Minneapolis suburb, in 1991 and 1992. She quit a day after she said two men reached inside her coveralls.

The jury, which returned its verdict Thursday, ruled that Huffman was the victim of sexual harassment but not gender discrimination.

Sydney Omarr Horoscope

IF FEBRUARY 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Current cycle highlights business venture, rise in credit deadline, promotion, marital status, possible addition to family. September will be most memorable month of 1994.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What you've been waiting for will arrive. Sword of Damocles removed — you'll feel safe, free, loved. Journey is imminent, will prove beneficial.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on independence, inventiveness, creativity, style, sex appeal. Focus on fresh start, willingness to take risks, applause from both peers, superiors. Leo plays significant role.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Discussion with family member involves possible "change of name." Trust your own judgment, get to heart of matter, refuse to be "taken lightly." Cancer, Aquarius natives represented.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent versatility, diversity, humor. Those who thought you were not adaptable will be eating crow! You bring order out of chaos, you enjoy accolades and "more money." Gemini involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Lively dialogue with Scorpio results in ultimate benefit — that native has these letters, initials in name: D, M, V. Check references, refuse to be intimidated by telegram. Stand your ground!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on communication, sharing analysis, ability to make right move at crucial moment. Gemini Moon relates to power, authority, backing from one who previously was "out of sight."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Scenario features music, ability to beautify surroundings, gifts representing tokens of esteem, affection. Marital status figures prominently, income, potential increases. Taurus represented.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Check Leo message. Define terms, make intellectual concessions, see people, situations in realistic light. You'll learn more about tax, license requirements, possible inheritance. Mystery solved!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Binding agreement ultimately proves beneficial — feeling of restriction is temporary. Spotlight on reputation, credibility, public relations, marriage. Cancer natives figures prominently.

Pilots mark 50 years since daring mission

AMIENS, France (AP) — During Allied bomber pilots who blasted open the gates of a Nazi prison returned Friday to join former Resistance fighters observing 50-year ceremonies honoring the World War II jailbreak.

Traveling from as far as Australia and New Zealand, the 13 elderly R.A.F. veterans, some accompanied by their wives, bent against a cold wind during a minute of silence as a wreath was laid against the walls their bombs hit.

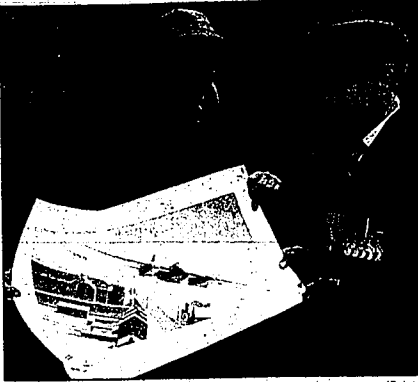

"It was just a normal job," said Ian McRitchie, an Australian, who was shot down and captured after dropping his bombs in Operation Jericho. "But we were very tense, because we didn't want to kill any Frenchmen."

In a carefully planned raid on Feb. 18, 1944, 18 small Mosquito bombers of Britain's Royal Air Force carried out a request by the Resistance to fly in low and bomb the gates and walls of the prison at noon.

The time was picked so the escapees could blend into crowded streets of Amiens, 70 miles north of Paris.

Code-named for the Biblical city whose walls fell to Joshua's trumpets, the raid allowed 437 prisoners to flee.

Historians say more than 70 prisoners, along with 20 Germans, died when one plane's bombs exploded in the courtyard. At least one imprisoned British agent was also killed.

Former British pilot Max Sparks, right, holds a copy of the plans for 'Operation Jericho' with his navigator, A.C. Dunlop.

"We came in low and slow," said Max Sparks, 73, an Englishman.

"We flew right over a machine-gun nest at the top of the prison. They didn't even shoot, they were too startled."

Many of the prisoners had little to lose: they were to be sent to concentration camps after being rounded up by the Gestapo and the collaborationist Vichy regime's police, who had dismantled a major Resistance network.

Escapees went on to destroy launch ramps for the deadly V-1 buzz bombs aimed at Britain and to carry out other sabotage operations ahead of the Allied D-Day landings in Normandy June 6.

Andre Pache, 85, a retired road worker, was the only former prisoner among the 20 ex-Resistance fighters at Friday's low-key ceremony. He did not escape in the raid, but was freed by the Germans 10 days later because he helped care for the wounded.

"We heard a great noise, and I looked out from my cell window," recalled Pache, who had been arrested when the Gestapo found an anti-tank mine at his home.

"They were coming in so low, I wondered if they were going to crash into the wall. I hid under a staircase, and there was a blast," Pache said. "Everything was black and full of smoke."

The prison today is still in use. Patches of lighter-colored brick mark the places in the 22-foot walls where the bombs punched holes.

Gilbert Renault, the Resistance leader known as Col. Remy, wrote a book chronicling the escape that quoted one pilot as saying the planes flew in just 10 feet above ground.

Of all the bombs, only one missed, hurtling through a hole in a wall already blasted open by another bomb and exploding inside.

Capt. P.C. Pickard, who plotted the raid after carrying out clandestine landings in occupied France, and his navigator were killed when flying back over the prison to check the success of the operation.

Basinger sheds clothes for animal rights

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Kim Basinger is baring her own skin to save the hides of animals.

A poster of Basinger — supine and stitchless — was unveiled Monday at a private vegetarian dinner. Basinger, 40, and her husband, actor Alec Baldwin, helped raise $50,000 for anti-fur activists, according to the Washington-based People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

The poster, which PETA plans to display in Europe, reads: "Beauty Is Not About Wearing Someone Else's Coat."

Conviction of Wayne's ex-son-in-law overturned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A state appeals court has overturned the conviction of a prominent orthopedic surgeon accused of orchestrating a 1988 assault on his ex-wife, the daughter of John Wayne.

Dr. Thomas Gionis had been convicted of hiring two henchmen to attack Aissa Wayne and her boyfriend, Roger Luby, during a bitter custody dispute over the couple's daughter, Anastasia. Ms. Wayne was bound and thrown face-down onto a garage floor while attackers pistol-whipped Luby and cut his Achilles tendon.

But justices from the 4th District Court of Appeal agreed unanimously Thursday to throw out Gionis' four felony convictions of assault and trespass.

They said the convictions were tainted by a prosecutor's misconduct and a witness' improper testimony.

Ms. Wayne called the ruling "appalling, incredibly appalling."

Orange County District Attorney Michael Capizzi defended the trial tactics. He said he hadn't decided whether to retry Gionis.

The appeals court said the judge at Gionis' trial should not have allowed testimony from one of Gionis' divorce lawyers. The court also condemned the prosecutor's "vitriolic rebuttal and personal attacks" on Gionis' attorney.

The prosecutor, former Orange County deputy district attorney Jeffrey L. Robinson, defended his conduct.

"I think the man got a fair trial. ... I think these jurors made their decision on the evidence."

ABC opts not to kiss off episode of 'Roseanne'

NEW YORK (AP) — There may not be a kiss-off for "Roseanne" after all.

ABC said Thursday it will air an episode of the popular comedy March 1 that features Roseanne Arnold-exchanging a kiss with Maril Hemingway in a gay bar.

Exactly how that encounter will play remains to be seen, according to ABC spokesman Steve Battaglio, who said the segment had been shot but postproduction was not complete.

"There have been discussions concerning how the kiss will be depicted," Battaglio said. "Those talks are continuing."

He said the episode will also carry a parental discretion advisory. In the episode, titled "Don't Ask, Don't Tell," Arnold's character, Roseanne Conner, goes to a bar with bisexual friend Nancy, played by Sandra Bernhard. After dancing with Hemingway, Roseanne makes a wisecrack that is misinterpreted. The kiss results.

Earlier this month, Tom Arnold, husband of the star and the series' co-executive producer, charged that ABC was refusing to air the episode because of the kiss.

World

Residents of Pale, Bosnia, watch Serbians soldiers beat a snowy retreat Friday. The soldiers towed away 76 mm cannon used to rain terror on the people of Sarajevo 10 miles away.

Bosnian Serbs vow guns to go

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The Bosnian Serbs pledged Friday to try to beat a NATO deadline for pulling heavy guns from around Sarajevo, although the st-high snow was making withdrawal difficult.

With only two days left before NATO bombs could strike Serb positions, evidence of a Serb withdrawal was mostly indirect. It was unclear how much was being withdrawn, how fast, and to where.

"We will try to withdraw all of our weapons by 2400 tomorrow," Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said after meeting with the United Nations' top official for former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi. That would beat the NATO deadline of midnight GMT Sunday (7 p.m. EST) — 1 a.m. Monday in Sarajevo — for the heavy guns to be withdrawn or put under U.N. supervision.

The Clinton administration has warned the Serbs there will be no extension of the deadline. "Karadzic said Serb convoys with heavy guns had started their withdrawal but were slowed by the snow, some of it freshly fallen."

Akashi said that he had agreement from Karadzic for armed U.N. soldiers to begin controlling weapons sites at noon Saturday. He stressed that time was running short, but added, "I think we are on the right track."

Little activity was visible Friday on the snow-clogged roads winding through the Serb-controlled hills around Sarajevo.

One convoy of four Bosnian Serb trucks, three of them towing cannons, was spotted about a mile west of Pale, the Bosnian Serb headquarters east of Sarajevo. They were moving relatively fast away from Sarajevo, but it wasn't clear where they were headed.

Joe Sills, spokesman for U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, said in New York that the removal of Serbian heavy weapons was "moving ahead at a very good pace." He said the U.N. was not disclosing numbers.

He said the Muslim-led army was also complying with U.N. demands to hand over weapons to U.N. monitors. "It is important that the military situation be frozen and that no party take advantage of the situation," he said.

NATO wants the guns at least 12 miles away from Sarajevo, which has been quiet under a cease-fire.

But the Serbs would still be free to move their weapons to other spots in Bosnia where there is still fighting, and their long-range artillery can hit targets up to 25 miles away.

Lt. Col. Bill Aikman, a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo, said that if weapons are left behind, "we will have physically checked them."

He did not specify if that meant rendering the guns harmless by removing certain parts.

Another U.N. spokesman, Lt. Col. Richard Pernod, said he could not confirm that the pullout was actually taking place, but that U.N. troops had collected 90 weapons from both sides.

Determining the Serbs' movements was difficult because of the snow, the small number of U.N. monitors, uncertainty over the number of guns the Serbs had on the hills, and terrain.

The Serbs are believed to have about 500 heavy artillery pieces. The Muslim-led government has far fewer guns but more infantry.

The Serbs have been worried that withdrawing their heavy guns would make them vulnerable to the Bosnian government's manpower advantage.

Karadzic in the past has been unable to overcome resistance to compromise from hardliners.

But the Serbs appeared to be serious this time, likely in response to the intervention of Russia, a traditional Orthodox Christian ally, which urged the Serbs to comply with the NATO demand and avoid airstrikes.

Yugoslavia's Tanjug news agency quoted a Bosnian Serb colonel, Tadija Manojovic, as saying troops were complying with orders to withdraw, "in the interests of peace and not because of NATO's ultimatum."

Sources close to Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, who has ambitions for a Greater Serbia, that would include parts of Bosnia and Croatia, said he convinced the Bosnian Serbs to withdraw.

The sources in Belgrade said Milosevic had won a promise from Russian President Boris Yeltsin not to abandon the Serbs. Moscow also pledged to redeploy 400 Russian peacekeepers in Croatia to the Sarajevo area.

Weak heart wins freedom for alleged Nazi criminal

BERLIN (AP) — One of Germany's last Nazi war crimes trials ended Friday with freedom for a 90-year-old Latvian who as a police commander in occupied Latvia allegedly ordered the massacre of more than 170 civilians.

After four years on trial for murder, Boleslav Maikovsky's heart was deemed too weak for another court appearance and the case was closed.

The former Mineola, N.Y., resident had last been in court in December.

"It is a development we don't welcome at all, but with such an old man one must reckon with it," said Klaus Schacht, chief prosecutor in a Dortmund office specializing in war crimes cases from World War II.

Maikovsky was not in court when an expert medical witness testified that "his heart was in such bad shape even the slightest excitement could cause it to stop," said Muenster state court spokesman Klemens Thiemann.

Hijacker takes Chinese jet to Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A Chinese businessman wearing a military uniform and wielding a knife and fake explosives hijacked a Chinese domestic jetliner with 130 people aboard to Taiwan Friday.

Lin Wenqiang, 35, from China's southern Fujian province, was accompanied by his wife, two sons, aged 9 and 11, and mother, the police said.

The plane returned to China four hours after it landed at Taipei's international airport. Lin's wife, sons and mother were returned home aboard the aircraft.

Vice Justice Minister Lin Shyi-hwu said Lin's family was returned to China because they were not involved in the hijacking and were given the same treatment as other passengers. He said the decision would help curb hijackings.

The state radio quoted Lin as saying he plotted the hijacking a year ago and had "no regrets even if my family members were sent back."

He said he donned the military police uniform borrowed from a friend to get past airport security. Lin carried a glass bottle stuffed with tissues he claimed were explosives.

Report pegs grazing fee hike to $3.96

States News Service

WASHINGTON — As Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, blazed across the West discussing his proposed public land management reforms, a newspaper may have blown his cover.

The Washington Post reported Friday that Babbitt will raise the grazing fee for public lands to $3.96 from $1.86 per animal-unit month. It will be phased in over three years, starting at $2.77, with breaks for good land stewards.

Congress and Babbitt battled over the issue last year, and the secretary finally won the right to raise the rates.

However, Babbitt has not formally announced what it will be.

"It's premature," said Stephanie Hanna, a spokeswoman for the Interior Department. The specific figure has not been determined.

She said Babbitt has determined that the fee will be somewhere between what Congress wanted, $3.45, and what he originally proposed, $4.28. But details are forthcoming.

Members of Congress reacted to the story anyway.

"I find today's announcement extremely troubling and unacceptable," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., who led the crusade against raising the fee last fall.

"The Secretary is due in Socorro on Friday next week to meet with and listen to New Mexicans, but it appears his plan is already done," Domenici said.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, echoed his sentiment. "What's all the talking about if it's been decided?" asked his press secretary David Fish.

Babbitt's proposed incentive-based fee ranked Al Schneberger, executive director of the New Mexico Cattlegrowers Association.

"For a few cents on the dollar they're not going to get any better management," he said.

"There is no more powerful incentive than passing on land to your children."

The Interior Department confirmed the fee incentive program will be offered. Babbitt had originally backed off the plan because he thought it was unworkable, department spokeswoman Hanna said.

"Now with much more localized control, he feels that this can be done," Hanna said. "There should be an incentive for ranchers who improve riparian habitat and meet the goals."

Environmentalists say they are still troubled by the land management plan because he has waffled on a number of issues.

"I'm pretty disappointed that he seems to be backing away from his original proposal, which in our view wasn't strong enough anyway," said Jim Norton, southwest director of the Wilderness Society.

CSI student arrested for carrying handgun

TWIN FALLS — Carrying a loaded and concealed weapon on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho landed a 19-year-old student in jail Friday, police said.

Matthew Peter Hansen was arrested at 7:30 a.m. after a "protective frisk" revealed a 9 mm semi-automatic pistol in his waistband, Capt. G.H. Wells said Friday.

CSI security officials had called the Twin Falls Police Department Friday morning after receiving reports that Hansen had been seen in classes with his pistol, Wells said.

Hansen was released on $300 bond later Friday afternoon.

A court date has not been set.

Police arrest 2 juveniles for possessing marijuana

TWIN FALLS — Two juveniles were arrested Tuesday evening and charged with possessing about 64 grams of marijuana after being pulled over on a routine traffic stop.

Officer Robert Berrier cited the two boys, aged 14 and 17, after the 17-year-old made a wide turn at 9:15 p.m. Tuesday.

After consenting to a search, Berrier found two pipes, each containing a "green leafy substance," according to his report.

The pipes contained 34.2 and 30.02 grams of marijuana.

Both boys were charged with possession of paraphernalia and possession of a controlled substance.

The two boys, one a student at Magic Valley Alternative High School, the other an eighth-grader at Robert Stuart Junior High School, have a history of arrests and citations, according to records at the Twin Falls Police Department.

Slick interstate plays havoc with travelers near Hazelton

HAZELTON — A two-mile stretch of Interstate 84 east of Hazelton slipped off travelers Friday morning, rolling over at least two cars and sending one man to the hospital.

Socorro Tovar, of Carson, Calif., was driving a 1984 Chevrolet van when he lost control of the vehicle and it rolled over near milepost 198 at 8:07 a.m.

Neither he nor Salvador Tovar, who was thrown from the vehicle, were wearing seat belts, according to an Idaho State Police dispatcher.

Salvador was treated at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and released later Friday afternoon.

Four minutes after that accident, Thomas Bond of Heyburn lost control of his 1987 Chevrolet pickup and rolled the truck near milepost 199 along the interstate. No serious injuries were reported in that accident, the ISP dispatcher said.

Manslaughter hearing reset from Friday to Feb. 25

TWIN FALLS — The preliminary hearing for the man arrested in connection with a fatal car accident last month has been rescheduled for Feb. 25.

Mark Szabo, 21, was supposed to face charges of involuntary manslaughter in a hearing Friday.

In January, Robert Maxwell of Buhl was driving in a car with his wife northeast of Buhl when a pickup struck the Maxwells' car as it passed through an intersection. Officials found that a stop sign had been removed from the intersection that would have informed the driver of the pickup to stop.

Two witnesses have signed an affidavit stating that they saw Szabo throw the stop sign on the ground. A third witness alleges he saw Szabo hitting the sign.

Filer graduate among new officers in CSI government

TWIN FALLS — Following the special election for student government officers last week, the Associated Students of the College of Southern Idaho has a new line up.

Kristy Skinner of Filer was named secretary and Tammy Gray of Twin Falls was named treasurer.

The Associated Students' senators include Travis Robbins of Buhl, David Edmunds and Haze Laughlin of Twin Falls, Danny Sarcoda of Wilder, Sophie Whitlock of Idaho Falls, Brooks Crowe of Nampa, Jenny Yeggy of Kimberly, Jennifer Simpson of Vale, Ore., and Michal Korzeniewski of Poland.

Playing a game that takes hours of mental stamina, 80-year-old Barney Graff of Murtaugh enjoys the challenges of competitive chess.

Persistence, contemplation keep chess player's end game sharp

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — Barney Graff's eight kids don't play much chess anymore. Too busy. Too many distractions.

When a young fella sits down at the end of these days, he turns on the television or slips into Garth Brooks' boots and listens to the evening float away on a Dominator chord from a steel guitar — unresolved, untroubled, unchallenged.

That's the way of the postmodern world, electrons dancing on the head of pin and white noise drowning out of the soft click of a king two moves from disaster.

"I took up chess years ago, in the '40s or '50s, because I enjoyed the game and it was something to do in the evenings," said Graff, 80, perhaps the oldest competitive chess player in Idaho. "I guess that's why I still play."

Graff will be among several dozen players from throughout the state to participate in Idaho State Chess Championships here this weekend.

Seventy years — and 225 points on the rating scale chess players use to designate ability — separate him from one

Players gather in Twin Falls for state tourney

The Idaho State Chess Championships will be held today, Sunday and Monday at the Obchain Insurance Building, 264 Main Ave. S.

Registration will start at 8 this morning and the first of six rounds will begin at 9 a.m. The registration fee is $22, and membership in the U.S. Chess Federation and the Idaho Chess Association are required.

of the youngest, Garrett Reynolds of Twin Falls, an up-and-coming scholastic player.

"It's a game you have to think about," Graff said.

"It took me 10 or 15 years before I got good enough to play the better players, and I'm still learning."

Ted Hartwell of Twin Falls, a tournament chess player for a half century, has squared off against Graff more times than he can count.

"Barney's very good, especially in the middle and end game," he said. "If you're going to beat him, you'd better beat him before the end of the game, because with that experience, he's tough."

That end-game experience has taught Graff the value of a contemplative life. A farmer and cattleman, he spent years replaying gambits and regrouping defenses while riding the tractor and feeding the livestock.

"I've lost some sleep over games I've lost and moves I wish I hadn't made," he said. "That's the way it is with chess — once you play the game, you play it again in your mind."

Graff says memory isn't what it once was, but he was never one to memorize every move anyway.

"I still don't go by the book," he said. "I go by what I learned."

What he's learned is that in chess, the tiny margin between winning and losing is measured by the calipers of persistence.

"I slack off a little in the summertime, but not for long," he said. "Chess is a game you have to stick with."

JACKPOT — Pete Piersanti, the founder and namesake of Cactus Petes Resort Casino, died Monday of a heart attack in Carson City, Nev. He was 77.

"He was definitely one of the founding fathers of Jackpot," said Jerry Tucker, Jackpot's historian who is writing a book on the city.

Piersanti was running the Island Park Lodge in northeast Idaho when the Idaho Legislature outlawed slot machines in 1953. So Piersanti opened a small resort at Mineral Springs, a village with hot springs about 15 miles south of what would eventually become Jackpot. His resort became known by locals as "Cactus Pete's," and the name stuck.

At the same time, Don French moved his slot operation from Garden City to a spot just across the Idaho border on U.S. 93 and started the Horseshoe Casino.

Two years later, former Twin Falls slot operator A.L. "Bud" Gurley convinced Piersanti to move Cactus Pete's near the Horseshoe. They brought in Dale Wildman from Elko, Nev., to run table games, and began competing with the existing gaming establishments — the Horseshoe, the Stardust — according to history records at the current Cactus Petes.

With Piersanti, Gurley and Wildman each owning equal shares, they constructed a small casino and gas station. Piersanti helped entertain customers by lending bar.

The casinos grew in popularity among Idaho farmers and among the cowboys and miners in Nevada, and soon Jackpot was born. But by the mid 1960s the nearby mines dried up, and so did some of the smaller casinos.

In 1964, Piersanti and his partners took over the management of the Horseshoe. And in 1967, Gurley died and new partners were brought in, including George Detweiler of the Horseshoe, Cactus Pete's bookkeeper Al Hube and Twin Falls contractor Ray Neilsen.

Under the new ownership, the casino added 50 hotel rooms to become the biggest operation in the town.

Gradually, the partners sold out their interest and Neilsen's son, Craig Neilsen, gained full control of the casino. In 1969, Piersanti sold his interest in his casino and moved to Carson City to start Cactus Jack's Casino and invest in Reno casinos.

No insurance this year for farm workers

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho farmworkers will have to wait at least another year to be included in the state's workers' compensation law.

After more than five grueling hours of hearings spread over three days, the House State Affairs Committee on Friday killed a bill that would have repealed agriculture's exemption from the requirement that all employers carry workers' compensation insurance.

Instead, the panel plans to push for creation of a "working group," representing legislators, farmworkers, farmers and insurers, that would meet this summer to draft consensus legislation.

The only legislators to vote against killing the repeal bill were Reps. Jesse Berain, R-Boise, and John Alexander, D-Pocatello. Berain, a former migrant worker who is the first and only Hispanic elected to the Legislature, sponsored the bill.

Most committee members said they were convinced that farmworkers need workers' compensation coverage. But they said Berain's bill didn't take into account agriculture's "unique" conditions, including its heavy reliance on custom contractors and migrant workers, and the claimed inability of farmers to pass on higher insurance costs.

House Majority Leader Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, endorsed the idea of an interim working group.

Panel likes plan for Mid-Snake

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — With virtually no debate, the Senate Resources and Environment Committee on Friday approved a state protection plan for the Middle Snake River that would ban most new hydropower development.

All of Friday's testimony was in favor of the plan, which is supported by virtually all Magic Valley communities, water-using industries, conservation groups and recreation groups.

That's a change from some previous river-protection plans, such as the one for the Henry's Fork of the Snake, that generated substantial opposition.

Committee Chairman Laird-Noh, noting the lack of controversy surrounding the mid-Snake plan, quipped that "there are no logging trucks parked around the Capitol today, no near-noirs."

The plan's main effect would be to prohibit proposed hydropower projects at Star Falls-Caldron Linn downstream of Milner Dam, and at Empire Rapids and Kanaka Rapids near Buhl.

The Auger Falls project near Twin Falls and the Boulder Rapids project upstream of Buhl are exempt from the plan's restrictions.

The mid-Snake plan is the final one envisioned by the 1988 Comprehensive State Water Plan law. It covers 71.5 of the 91 river miles between Milner Dam and King Hill.

Most of the stretch would be designated "recreational," meaning:

- No new dams or hydropower projects.
- No expansion of existing dams and hydropower projects.

- No mineral, sand or gravel extraction within the stream bed.
- Severe restrictions on stream bed alterations.

- No new agricultural diversions, and re-

Financing incentives will ease 2 firms' moves to Twin Falls

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After Friday's announcement that Walter Pylewski will bring his Precision Tile Spacer Co. to town, he went to lunch with Robert Seastrom.

Seastrom is bringing his Seastrom Manufacturing Co. Inc. to town.

Besides a meal and similar manufacturing methods, both men also spent Friday signing identical financing documents to pay for their companies to move to Twin Falls.

Processing identical financing arrangements will save the companies money on costs of their moves, said Dave McAlindin, Twin Falls economic development director.

One savings is the securities lawyers will have their fee meters running less if they're reviewing identical deals, said Brent Jussell, vice president at First Security Bank of Idaho.

Precision Tile and Seastrom Manufacturing aren't getting tax breaks. Instead, the Twin Falls Industrial Development Commission voted unanimously to back the financing for both companies by adopting an "inducement resolution," which allows the companies to begin construction planning and financing arrangements.

Each company can now raise money through a maximum of $4 million in industrial development bonds issued through the commission and First Security Bank of Idaho.

Seastrom Manufacturing will probably borrow $2.5 million through industrial revenue bonds. And Pylewski said he expects to use the bonds to borrow $1 million to $1.2 million.

First Security will put a letter of credit on both bond issues to help them sell in the open market to raise the money for both companies, said First Security banker Jim Wrigley.

Precision Tile is also using about $100,000 in "tax-increment" financing through the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency. This arrangement allows the company to finance the purchase of its land for a new plant from the city at $15,000 an acre.

Precision Tile is buying a 5.6 acre site next to the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course at Victory Avenue and Rose Street.

Seastrom Manufacturing will use about $300,000 in tax-increment financing through the urban renewal agency to finance its purchase of 10 acres of land in the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Industrial Park in southeast Twin Falls on Elbridge Avenue.

Storm buries Utah in snow, mud, rain

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utahans can expect wild weather over the weekend as they brace for more muddy floods and dig out from under a blanket of snow that covered the state Friday.

The small northern Utah town of Mendon was worst hit as a storm dumped more than two feet of water Thursday night, filling a canal to overflowing. Hundreds of Cache Valley residents spent most of the night fighting sandbags to prevent mudslides from seeping into basements.

About 10 to 15 inches of snow fell in the Wasatch and south-central mountains, while the Cache Valley and Wasatch Front had four to seven inches of snow. The storm was the same one that hit northern California earlier this week.

The flooding started about 1 p.m. as rain and melted snow filled the Mendon Canal, which runs west above the town.

High water forced the Utah Highway Patrol to close State Road 23 for about four hours Thursday night, a dispatcher said.

Water and debris also gushed across State Road 30.

About 16 homeowners ended up shoveling mud from their dwellings Friday, said Mendon Mayor Clifford Doolittle.

"We're hoping the water will carry straight through if it rains again this weekend," Doolittle said.

But just in case, sandbags are "still on call, and we've got a large pile of sand and plenty of sandbags," he said.

For most residents, the biggest problem was the Friday morning commute.

"It was a little hard getting here," said Rosemary Wilber, whose husband owns the Mendon Station restaurant.

"I had to go around the sign that said 'Road Closed,'" she said.

She and her husband warmed up weary sandbaggers with homemade soup they took to them from their restaurant.

Road crews will continue to clear away mud through the weekend and residents were advised to drive with caution.

"The roads have been a little treacherous and muddy, so everyone's taking it easy and driving slowly," Wilber said.

Logan residents braved up to seven inches of snow Friday.

"This morning it was really bad," said Jennifer Lott, a hostess for the Bluebird Restaurant.

"Everyone I wiped the snow off my car it piled right back on again, plus I was sliding all over. It was sort of blizzardy."

St. George, in the southwestern corner of the state, received one to two inches of snow overnight. The storm caused minor street flooding, a dispatcher from the city's streets department said.

Most of the snow had melted by morning.

A heavy snow warning was issued for all the Utah mountains and Wasatch Front through Friday night and snow was expected through Wednesday.

"It should be mostly snow, so there shouldn't be any more problems with flooding," meteorologist Bill Alder said.

Gritz setting up center in Idaho, group claims

PORTLAND (AP) — Former presidential candidate James "Bo" Gritz is establishing a center for white supremacists in central Idaho, a human rights group said Friday.

Gritz, a retired Army Green Beret officer, and some ultraconservative Christian leaders have purchased about 280 acres of land near Kamaia, Idaho, according to a report issued by the Coalition for Human Dignity.

The land is held in trust by the Oregon-based Almost Heaven Properties and the Western Development Trust, headed by Jack McLamb, a former Arizona police officer and associate of Gritz, according to the report.

Jonathan Mozzochi, the coalition's research director, said the move is "perhaps the most significant development in the white supremacist movement in recent years."

Efforts to reach Gritz, who reportedly has a home in Nevada, were unsuccessful.

Gritz ran an unsuccessful campaign for president in 1992. He also served as an intermediary in the surrender of white separatist Randy Weaver after a deadly firefight with U.S. marshals in northern Idaho in August 1992, and later talked about moving to Idaho and running for governor.

Gritz conducts paramilitary training in Oregon called SPIKE sessions, or Specially Prepared Individuals for Key Events, the coalition said.

Ex-teacher pleads guilty to sexually abusing girl

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Sentencing is scheduled April 14 for a former Nampa teacher who pleaded guilty to sexual abuse of a minor for fondling a ninth-grade girl.

Craig E. Clapier, 34, of Marsing, originally faced a charge of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under 16. But Idaho County Prosecutor Jeff Payne asked 2nd District Judge Ronald Schilling on Friday to accept a plea agreement.

Animal-rights activist ordered to jail

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Rejecting appeals to the Oliver North case, a judge on Friday ordered two animal-rights activists jailed for civil contempt for refusing to testify before a federal grand jury.

U.S. District Judge Fremming Nielsen said Kimberly Trimiew, 22, of Medford, Ore., and Deborah Stout, 25, of Bozeman, Mont., would be released whenever they decide to tell the grand jury what they know about a 1991 break-in and vandalism at a Washington State University research office.

Nielsen rejected arguments by Trimiew's attorneys that the women's immunized testimony before the Spokane grand jury might be used against them elsewhere in a nationwide investigation into the animal-rights movement.

Nielsen said a 1972 U.S. Supreme Court ruling protects an immunized witness who has not been criminally charged.

The women were handcuffed and led away by U.S. Marshals. They will be held in the Spokane County Jail, where Trimiew spent two weeks before being released last fall pending an appeal.

Both women were released after judges determined additional time would not coerce them into testifying. Federal law allows contempt sentences as long as 18 months.

The women twice refused to answer questions asked by a grand jury in January, assistant U.S. Attorney Frank Wilson said.

The grand jury is investigating the August 1991 Animal Liberation Front break-in that caused $100,000 in damage to computers and files at a U.S. Department of Agriculture research office.

Wilson said in court in September the FBI believes the two women and fugitive activist Rodney Coronado were responsible for the WSU raid.

Coronado had been indicted by a Michigan grand jury for destruction of government property stemming from a similar animal-rights break-in there.

"There's no question in my mind that we can come to a solution," said Newcomb, a farmer and rancher. "I think this can be done if all the proponents and opponents come together and work on it."

"Workers' compensation is something we must provide for farmworkers real soon," said Rep. Bill Deal, R-Nampa, an insurance agent. "There are a lot of things right, but (House Bill) 610 doesn't fix this right."

However, Idaho Legal Aid Services plans to challenge in court agriculture's exemption as a violation of farmworkers' right to equal protection of the laws.

The suit will be filed "as soon as possible," said Rick Johnson, director of Legal Aid's Migrant Farmworkers Law Unit.

Before the committee voted, supporters and opponents of Berain's bill made last-ditch efforts to sway undecided legislators.

John Greenfield, a Boise labor lawyer who also is Democratic national committee member for Idaho, called the exemption "racist, plain and simple," because the vast majority of Idaho farmworkers are Hispanic.

"I know in my heart that if 80 percent of the farmworkers were named ho for this legislation," he added.

The plan now goes to the full Senate, which probably will vote on it sometime next week.

Both the Senate and the House must formally approve the plan before it can take effect.

The Department of Water Resources then would review it every five years and recommend any changes to the Legislature.

"because it has just never occurred to any of us that this is discrimination," Alexander, who said he's also been a seasonal farmworker, apologized over how to vote. He said he recognized flaws in Berain's bill, but wasn't sure he trusted an interim panel to come up with a workable compromise.

After the hearing, Alexander leaned across the table and told McCandless, "Cherie, I hope you guys are straight."

"We'll be there," McCandless replied.

Alexander responded, "Don't just be there — do it."

Students: Protest heightens awareness of drug abuse

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Some Burley High School students Friday said a protest the day before over the school's attempt to get tough on drug and alcohol users has left them more aware of the problem.

During a Friday afternoon government class, students discussed the school's decision to contact the parents of students suspected of drug or alcohol use.

Most students agreed that there is a drug problem in school. But some said it is too late to stop it. "The people who are doing drugs can't stop, even with a telephone call," Cory Taylor, 18, said. "What you can do is try to prevent the sixth graders and seventh graders from doing it."

Shalee Sanders, 17, sided with Principal Bob Platt's decision. "I'm kind of glad he did something," Sanders said. "At least we know he cares what we're doing."

About 250 students had walked out

'I hope ... something positive comes out of it.'

— Craig Mills, teacher of classes Thursday after school officials had invited selected students' parents to the school to discuss how to get tough on drug and alcohol users.

The school had telephoned about 80 parents earlier in the week telling them the invitations were based on rumors that their children have used drugs or alcohol or have friends that do.

Platts and school officials tried the controversial new tack as part of an effort to get tough on drug and alcohol use in the school.

A five-day suspension for those caught under the influence of drugs or alcohol hasn't been tough enough, Platts said.

But some students have approached him with ideas about forming student counseling and rehabilitation groups, he said.

The students' suggested alternatives to dealing with the problem include forming support groups and contacting parents individually to meet with school counselors.

Students also suggested that on the first offense, include community service during school suspension, and on second offense don't allow the student to return to school unless they seek rehabilitation. "I hope this all blows over and something positive comes out of it," government teacher Craig Mills said. "And I think it will."

School counselor Dan Bolingbroke said he thinks the controversy itself has brought good things to bear.

"Even though it's going to be a mess in the process, I'm sure it's going to be a positive outcome," Bolingbroke said. He said there is "a greater awareness among students and it will get (the message) out to the community."

Seniors seek help for center

The Times-News

RUBERT - The Minidoka County Senior Citizen Center is asking the city for help pay for the center's program to teach, hold activities and provide meals on wheels for its members.

In addition, Harold Catmull, chairman of the center's board of directors, told City Council members Tuesday that the center plans to expand.

Plans are for a 2,088 square foot addition to the main room. The addition would be partly funded through a federal grant of $100,000. The center would have to raise $60,000, Catmull said.

Al Ucci, site manager for the center, said the expansion would ease overcrowding during holiday events and give seniors more room to hold activities.

City Councilman Steve Porch said the city can't afford to subsidize the center and will consider something for the next budget year.

"There isn't any money at this time," Porch said. "We're trying to do the best thing for the most people."

Last November, City Council members withdrew their discount of the center's utility bills.

Withdrawing the discount was a way to cut the costs of the 16.7 rate increase by Bonneville Power Administration, Porch said.

Porch said the city went from charging the center nothing to charging a minimum rate that's level with all of the city's departments.

Panel kills funding plan backed by school officials

BOISE (AP) — A dramatic change in the formula used to dole out hundreds of millions of dollars a year in state aid to public schools was rejected Friday in its first legislative test.

In a series of votes — the closest a 5-5 tie — the Senate Education Committee refused to submit the bill to the full Senate.

Supporters said the committee had thrown away the best chance for an out-of-court settlement of school district claims that they are not getting enough cash from the state to provide the thorough education guaranteed by the state Constitution.

But Chairman John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls, said there is only one way that settlement will occur: with another formula revision that is acceptable enough to clear the Legislature while still maintaining the support of superintendents throughout the state.

"It's time for us to recognize the reality," Hansen said. "I don't find any possibility that this measure, if it got out of this committee and the Senate, would get to first base in the House."

Hansen is the most notable of the bill's opponents, along with the committee's senior member, Republican Laird Noh of Kimberly. Hansen offered to continue working with the superintendents to develop a revised formula that could win legislative approval.

Superintendents Steve Norton of Blackfoot and David Peck of Pocatello were involved in developing the plan they claim was supported by 90 of the 113 superintendents. They believe the opposition was based on a lack of understanding of the plan's intricacies and subtleties.

Only minor changes could resolve those problems, Norton said, if lawmakers are willing to spend the substantial amount of time necessary to fully understand the issues. But neither he nor Peck would predict that kind of time commitment would be made.

"We were asked to bring the superintendents together," Norton said. "I think some work needs to be done to bring the Legislature together."

Superintendents had agreed to drop the lawsuit if the formula was adopted.

Among the major objections were the plan's focus on teacher salaries and the statewide pay target of 82 percent of average pay nationally.

Critics worried that a statewide salary scale driven by the state aid allocation would leave the Legislature as the contract negotiator instead of local school boards. And they complained that no money would be spent on the school improvement and reform programs lawmakers have been pushing in recent years.

The superintendents admitted there was no guarantee excess money would be used for school reform, although they contended that is exactly what schools would do. And they acknowledged that their plan made no attempt to resolve problems with financing for school busing or school building construction.

"I'm not comfortable with the concept that is being expressed in some particulars," Hansen said. "I don't think it reflects sound public policy." The push to revamp the formula surfaced in the midst of the effort to head off a courtroom confrontation between school districts and the state over the amount of aid.

While the Supreme Court last March upheld the distribution method and questioned only the amount of the yearly allocation, both sides in the lawsuit maintained that a more equitable distribution formula would go far toward easing financial disputes between rich and poor districts.

Delegation splits on aid to quake victims

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Here are the votes of Idaho's senators and representatives on key legislation in Congress this week.

There were no Senate votes during the week.

House votes:

1) Bill: H.R. 3759 — The House approved by a 245-165 margin the aid to victims of the Southern California earthquake. The bill will spend $7.8 billion on earthquake relief and another $3.2 billion for U.N. peacekeeping missions and other disaster relief. More than one-fourth of representatives were not present at the Feb. 11 vote on final passage of the measure because they had already left for the week-long Presidents' Day recess.

Rep. Mike Crapo, Republican, voted no; Rep. Larry LaRocco, Democrat, voted yes.

The attendance record tracks the cumulative attendance of members to date when they are physically present for roll call votes.

Senate attendance, present and voting:

Sen. Larry Craig, Republican, 99.54 percent; Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, Republican, 99.77 percent.

House attendance, present and voting:

Crapo, 98.72 percent; LaRocco, 97.93 percent.

Lawmaker to battle against salmon plan

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., says he's ready to join the battle against a plan to help Idaho salmon recover at the expense of two reservoirs in northwestern Montana.

Earlier this week, Gov. Marc Racicot said the state was ready to go to court against the plan by the National Marine Fisheries Service and Bonneville Power Administration.

It would draw down Hungry Horse Reservoir to 205 feet below full pool by spring, assuming normal rain, while increased releases also would be required from Lake Koocanusa near Libby. Hungry Horse was drawn down to 188 feet last spring, a record low.

BPA estimates Koocanusa would be drawn down to 96 feet below full in April.

Biologists say such drastic drawdowns would affect up to 60 percent of the biological productivity of Hungry Horse at a time it is just beginning to recover from the effects of drought.

Racicot told the chairman of the Northwest Power Planning Council that he was willing to take the issue to court if necessary "to find a willing ear." The council on Wednesday asked only that the fisheries service provide more data to support its position.

Baucus asked BPA chief Randy Hardy to come to Montana with dam operators and federal fisheries officials to explain the salmon plan and listen to Montana's concerns.

"Montanans are understandably nervous, even afraid, as to just what might be the consequence of the proposed operating plan," Baucus said in a letter to Hardy.

"Given the profound impacts this plan could have on our economy and our way of life, Montanans deserve a good, solid explanation."

Hungry Horse Reservoir is home to one of two healthy bull trout populations in Montana. Bull trout are candidates for the endangered species list.

Under the plan, Montana water would be used to help speed young salmon's journey to the ocean. Several salmon runs already are on the endangered species list.

Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks fisheries biologist Brian Marotz said the potential benefits for downstream salmon are barely measurable, while the impact on Hungry Horse fish would be devastating. "It seems as though the balance has not been struck," he said.

If dam operators and fisheries officials were more flexible, water releases could be timed to help both salmon and resident fish, Marotz said.

Rescuers scour Utah counties for snowmobilers

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Search and rescue teams spent Friday looking for two snowmobilers missing since Thursday in the Monte Cristo area of Cache County.

Cache County sheriff's Lt. George Becker said 40 people were searching for Joseph Bowden, 50, and Boyd Sullivan, 58. Searchers were using five snowcats, three helicopters and numerous snowmobiles to find the missing pair. The two are considered experienced snowmobilers and know the area. Weber County teams began their search Thursday night after Bowden and Sullivan failed to return by 10 p.m.

Judge halts logging in Cove-Mallard

BOISE — U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan has issued a preliminary injunction against logging in the Cove-Mallard area of the Nez Perce National Forest.

The Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition sought the action to stop logging in the Grouse and Noble Creek drainages of the Cove-Mallard until Ryan rules on its lawsuit accusing the Forest Service of violating the Endangered Species Act and Clean Water Act.

But Ryan's order, issued late Thursday after a hearing earlier in the day, has no impact on the Grouse Creek drainage since logging there already is complete. The judge also directed attorneys for both sides to submit written arguments on the issues in the case. No hearing date was set.

Officer fired after charge from wife

COEUR D'ALENE — A Rathdrum reserve police officer was fired after he was accused of handcuffing and beating his wife and pointing a gun at her.

Calvin Nolan, 24, of Post Falls, was arrested for investigation of aggravated assault stemming from the beating of his now estranged wife on Dec. 28. He also is charged with battery for allegedly sexually attacking his wife last week.

Nolan was fired by Rathdrum Police Chief Bob Moore after the woman reported the alleged domestic dispute this week. He remained in the Kootenai County Jail in lieu of $55,000 bail.

Burn victim dies at Salt Lake hospital

BOISE — A man who suffered burns in a Tuesday explosion at a Boise construction site has died at a Salt Lake City hospital.

James Walsh, 33, of Boise, died at 7:49 a.m. Thursday, said a nursing supervisor at the Intermountain Burn Center at the University of Utah Hospital.

Walsh was in an underground room that apparently had a build-up of propane gas from a heater left there overnight. The gas exploded, throwing Walsh about 30 feet into the air.

Pilot who died on approach was courier

EMMETT — The Spokane, Wash., man who died after his airplane crashed north of Emmett has been identified as Stephan Paul Robison. Robison, 28, died of head injuries Wednesday morning after the single-engine Cessna crashed, Gem County Sheriff Mark John said.

Robison was traveling from Spokane to Boise on a courier job. He called the Boise airport shortly before the accident, saying his engine was losing power. Authorities told him to go to the Emmett airport. He was about 2½ miles north of the airport when he crashed.

Bill would alter health companies

BOISE (AP) — Legislation drastically changing the way Idaho's two largest providers of health insurance operate has won unanimous approval from the state Senate.

The Senate vote on Friday marked the second hurdle the bill has cleared without opposition. It would require Blue Cross and Blue Shield to give up their preferred legal status and become mutual insurance companies by next January.

"It's almost incredible, but it's true," Republican Sen. David Kerrick of Caldwell said.

With the change, Blue Cross and Blue Shield, which currently ensure half the people in Idaho, will begin paying the same taxes as other insurance companies in exchange for elimination of restrictions on the way they invest their money. Estimates on the additional tax revenue for the state run as high as $7 million a year.

Control of the two organizations will also shift from the doctors and hospitals that set them up to the thousands of policy holders who depend on them for medical coverage.

To their benefit, Blue Cross and Blue Shield will no longer be under strict regulatory control of the Department of Insurance and the Andrus administration attempt to require them to provide open enrollment and community rating.

Those requirements can only be imposed by law on mutual and other traditional insurance companies.

INEL joins effort aimed at environment

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory and Du Pont Co. are launching a research partnership aimed at solving a number of environmental problems.

An agreement scheduled to be signed Wednesday in Idaho Falls creates a framework that will allow Du Pont, of Wilmington, Del., and EG&G Idaho Inc., the primary U.S. Department of Energy contractor at the INEL, to coordinate research efforts on various environmental technologies.

The agreement calls for an exchange of research information but no joint funding of projects. The Energy Department's Office of Technology Development is investing about $40 million in environmental research and development through the department's Idaho Operations Office.

"We believe this to be a significant achievement in our biotechnology research and development efforts," EG&G Idaho General Manager Earl Fray said Friday. "Not only will the INEL and Du Pont have much to gain from this relationship, but the taxpayer will, too."

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Baseball should move the commissioner's office out of New York, according to the chief executive officer of the Kansas City Royals.

David Glass said he would make those proposals at the owners meeting from Feb. 28-March 2 at Scottsdale, Ariz. Glass, also chief executive officer of Wal-Mart Stores Inc., heads the transition group running the Royals following the death last year of club founder Ewing Kauffman.

“It won't be very popular, but I'm very serious about it,” Glass said. “I think we should not only get us a commissioner very quickly, but I think the commissioner's office ought to be moved out of New York. It's geographically incorrect and I can't think of a single thing that you can't do somewhere else. I'm going to propose that we consider Chicago or Kansas City or Dallas. I think getting out in the middle of the country makes more sense.”

Owners decided last month against filling the vacant post while contract talks were going on with the players union.

Weiss, of Scottsdale, Ariz., pinned Sweden's Jennie Lindholm at 3:31 of their bout in the 97-pound division. Roshanzim, of Davis, Calif., pinned Helen Larsson at 3:19 in the 103-pound class.

Saunders, a 1992 world champion from Phoenix, defeated Ida Hellstrom at 1:10 pounds, and Williams, of Ontario, Calif., a 1991 and 1993 world silver medalist, defeated Carin Persson 11-2 at 117 pounds.

Murtaugh bedevils Hansen

Rovig 3-pointer sends game to OT where Huskies fall, 61-54

By Ron Gates

Times-News writer

JEROME — Jared Rovig's 3-pointer with 10 seconds to play in regulation carried Murtaugh into an extra session Friday and the top seeded Red Devils went on to beat No. 5 Hansen 61-54 in overtime.

“We were just scrambling to get the best shot we could,” said Murtaugh Coach Craig Stanger. “Jared stepped up and hit a big one.”

Bryan Wright's free throws snapped a tie at 42 with 5:18 remaining in the fourth quarter and the Huskies nursed one to four point leads despite missing the front end of two bonus situations and the last free throw of a third.

“Those would have helped,” said Hansen's Stacy Behrens. “We had a big rebound that put us up, but those were big free throws.”

Hansen center Ryan Gunnell grabbed that crucial rebound of Chad Lee's last errant charity. His putback off the glass brought the Huskies to 51-47 until D.J. Stanger repeated Lee's performance at the line for Murtaugh to set up Rovig's heroics.

“We were there on defense,” Behrens said. “He just hit it.”

Just over two minutes into the second period it appeared that Hansen, playing without injured staffer Terry Johnson, would suffer a fate similar to the 20-point tourney drubbing it suffered at Red Devil hands three days earlier.

A-4 Boys basketball

Senior Tim Graham, playing his final game for the Huskies, was the only Hansen player to score before Gunnell changed that with a turnaround at 5:45 of the second period. Murtaugh, however, had built a 22-10 advantage by that point.

Undaunted by the deficit, the Huskies redoubled off the next eight points, the comeback ending at 20-22 on Gunnell's charity.

Kirby Nebeker finally got Murtaugh off of 22, only to see Graham record his seventh basket and Brad Myers bring Hansen, which shot a sizzling 64-percent in the period, into a tie at 24 with 1:48 showing.

Wright's 3-pointer provided Hansen's only lead of the first half, but his Murtaugh namesake negated that at the buzzer.

“Turnovers hurt us and we started falling asleep in our full court man-to-man defense,” Stanger said of that near fatal lapse. “They certainly beat us while we were.”

Rovig, a thorn in Hansen's side in another overtime on the Huskies' court on Feb. 8, finished with a game high 19 points. Wright added 16 for the Red Devils.

Gunnell, a junior, paced Hansen with 15 points, one better than Graham.

Friday's victory sends Murtaugh, not 16-5, against the tournament's only unbeaten team, second-seeded Castleford, 14-6, at 7:30 tonight. A Red Devils victory would force a second championship contest on Monday.

“We definitely want another shot at Castleford,” Stanger said. “We felt we played poorly both times they beat us. It's exactly the same place we were last year except that Castleford beat us and we had to come back and win two from Raft River.”

Murtaugh jayvees found overtime less friendly, losing the junior varsity championship to Oakley 55-53.

GOODING — With both sides showing tournament fatigue, Dietrich pulled out a 53-39 win over Camas County in the Class A-4 Northside Sub-district boys basketball tournament at the Gooding High School gymnasium.

Dietrich's win averaged a 58-57 loss to Camas County in the second round of the tournament on Tuesday, forcing the Blue Devils to fight their way back through the loser's bracket of the double-elimination tournament. It also guaranteed them a berth in next week's District 4 playoffs.

Playing their sixth game in six nights, the Blue Devils will challenge the Carey Panthers for the Northside championship tonight at 8 p.m. A win by Dietrich will force a second and final game on Monday.

Camas County, which lost to Carey 67-60 on Thursday, led for much of the first half in Friday's game as 6-3 senior Eddie Niechay scored eight of his 11 points before getting into foul trouble in WENDELL — The reason for holding a district tournament is to decide entrants for the state playoffs and the Fourth District Class A-3 playoff is getting close to that point.

The top-seeded Wendell Trojans take on the No. 7 upstart Valley Vikings at 8 p.m. today at Wendell High School with the winner clinching no worse than three chances of gaining a spot at state.

Wendell has beaten Valley by 22 and 21 points this year but the Vikings have dashed pre-tourney comon scores by knocking off No. 2 Filer and No. 3 Declo already.

The Wendell-Valley winner moves to the championship game at 7 p.m. Wednesday. If the undefeated team loses that one, the extra session will be played Thursday night. The runner-up faces a playoff against the third-district runner-up at Mountain Home

Slip can't keep Jansen from gold

The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — The record fell. Dan Jansen didn't.

The world's fastest speedskater finally lived up to his billing in an Olympic race, surviving a near-spill to erase a decade of heartache in 1 minute, 12.43 seconds — a world record in the 1,000 meters and his first gold medal after seven bitter misses.

“It's unbelievable,” said Jansen, who cried tears of joy Friday after years of disappointment. “I'm so happy. I've waited so long. Finally, it's here.”

His long wait over, Jansen was cheered rapturously by his family, his competitors and his new-found Norwegian fans. His wife, Robin, sobbed after Jansen's world record flashed on the board.

Jansen, as he did Monday after skidding out of contention in the 500 meters, pulled back his hood and clutched his head — this time in exultation, not disbelief.

After his victory, Jansen took a victory lap carrying an American flag and his 9-month-old daughter Jane, named after his sister who died during the 1988 Games, when all of America began following the speedskater's career.

Six years later, in his final Olympic race, they saw Jansen take home the gold.

While Jansen picked up his medal, the U.S. picked up some respect in two other events. The luge team, bouncing back from its disappointing start, posted its best finishes ever in the two-man, and the Americans capped their best-ever finish in the women's bobsled — a 14th.

There's a chance at a surprise U.S. medal in the Nordic combined, where 17-year-old Todd Lodwick was in fifth place after the ski jump. Depending on Saturday's cross-country race, he could surpass the U.S.' best previous Nordic combined finish: ninth place by Rolf Monsen in 1932.

The Russian hockey team continued its sudden fall from power by dropping its second game in Lillehammer — the first time they'd lost twice in the same Olympics since 1960, when the Americans took the gold.

And in a delicious twist of Olympic irony, last week's defendant — the United States Olympic Committee — played host to the plaintiff, Tonya Harding, at a news conference for 1,500 journalists.

The Hamar rink was kinder to big-name skaters Friday than it was a night earlier, as 1984 gold medalist Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean of England placed third in the first portion of the ice dancing. A near-stumble in the waltz cost the couple, and Dean was not pleased.

“No,” he snapped at reporters when asked for a comment on T&D's performance.

Their comeback after 10 years away from the Games came 24 hours after Brian Boitano, Viktor Petrenko and Kurt Browning bumbled their routines and fell out of medal contention.

World champions Maia Usova and Alexander Zhulin of Russia and countrymen Oksana Grischuk and Evgeny Plame were tied for first after the compulsory dance, which account for 20 percent of the total score. The original dance on Sunday is 30 percent, while Monday's free dance accounts for the other 50 percent.

Not even the Harding-Kerrigan soap opera could draw attention away from Jansen, who walks away a winner. The 28-year-old from Greenfield, Wis., was at a loss for words; in the past, he had only talked about what went wrong.

“I don't know what to say,” said Jansen, who came oh-so-close to another heartbreaking tumble while taking an early turn. “I don't know what to say. It felt so good.”

On the medal stand, he closed his eyes as the announcer intoned, “Olympic gold medalist and world record holder, Daniel Jansen.” Once the medal was around his neck, Jansen lifted it reverently for a closer inspection.

Jansen's performance raised the U.S. medal total to five — three gold, two silver — and was the first American medal won away from the skiing world. The Russian hockey team may be stumbling, but the rest of their squad is thriving. They still lead in overall medals with 13 — five gold, five silver, three bronze.

Italy is next with 10 (3-3-4), while host Norway has nine medals (5-3-1), tying the Russians for most gold. But one of Russia's traditional gold-medal locks — its hockey team — was floundering in Lillehammer, depleted by a massive player exodus to the NHL.

Skater shakes Olympic monkey off his back

The Associated Press

HAMAR, Norway — It was Dan Jansen's burden, and at long last, redemption, that made his one of the Great Stories.

After disappointment in Sarajevo, tragedy in Calgary and frustration in Albertville, the 28-year-old speed skater had his tears of joy on Friday, breaking a 10-year jinx and a world record to win a gold medal in the 1,000 meters.

“I'm just so relieved that it's over and it has a happy ending,” he said. He had the weary air of a man who just finished a marathon, not the two-thirds mile it took a single, fat minute to skate in the glaring lights of the Viking Ship Olympic Hall.

Happy, yes. And not just for Jansen and his family.

Twelve thousand fans of all nationalities gasped when he wobbled going into a late turn, then roared as he crossed the line in 1 minute, 12.43 seconds, 11 seconds under the old mark.

It was the same across the Olympic zone. At the Gjovik Olympic Cavern Hall, Fins and Austrians forgot hockey for a moment to greet Jansen's feat with cheers and the clatter of cowbells.

Cheers and applause broke out, too, at the figure skating practice rink in Hamar.

U.S. skater Brian Boitano raised hands over his head in a salute.

President Clinton, then Hillary, phoned their congratulations. Clinton told Jansen he could associate with the up-and-down aspects of the skater's story.

As we all can.

“Everybody can relate to what he was going through, and everybody wanted a happy ending to the story,” said Jansen's wife, Robin, who was taken to a first-aid station when she became faint with emotion after the race.

Jansen's story is one of family sorrow and personal triumph. Wit late by newspaper headline and television image, it touches all who suffered loss, all who aspire to make a mark in their lives.

That was the burden Jansen carried all these years.

“This was for so many people, more than me,” Jansen said. “I didn't want to let them down.”

With 30 World Cup victories and two world records, Jansen may be the best speedskater of all time. But his Olympic failures overshadowed all else.

He was an up-and-coming competitor when he finished fourth in the 500 meter at the 1984 Sarajevo Olympics. He had a

No lye, people do eat lutefisk

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Today, in our continuing cultural coverage of Those Waacky Norwegians, we present: Lutefisk.

Dave Barry Humor

Lutefisk (pronounced "loo-fee-sk") is the semiofficial national dish of Norway. This is somewhat ironic, because most people hate it. Even travel guidebooks, which always put the best possible spin on everything ("Between mortar rounds, Sarajevo offers the enterprising visitor much to...") tend to describe lutefisk with words such as "repugnant."

I asked a number of Norwegians what it was like, and the most complimentary response I got was: "It is very strong."

The recipe for lutefisk basically consists of taking a codfish and soaking it in — I am not making this up — lye. I have no idea how this got started. Yikes! I think of lutefisk as a common cooking ingredient ("Honey, could you run down to the 7-Eleven and pick up a quart of lye?").

Nevertheless, I am a journalist, and I feel that I have a constitutional responsibility — and here I will quote directly from the First Amendment — "to report on scary fish cuisine." So I asked Sissel Karlsen, a Norwegian who works in the Olympic press center, to set up a Lutefisk Expedition for a group of dedicated journalists at a local restaurant. This was not easy, because Lillehammer is apparently in a Lutefisk-Free Zone: ours had to be flown in from north Norway, apparently in its own private jet, because the per-journalist cost was over 400 kroner centigrade, which works out to something like $60, or possibly $3,450, depending on how skillfully we fill out our expense reports.

The restaurant employees brought us our lutefisk almost as soon as we sat down, as though they wanted to get it out of the kitchen. It has a jelly-like texture and is served in quivering white slabs, which contain many bones. It has a distinct aroma. Not quite as distinct as wolf urine, but definitely headed in that direction. It is served with a little gravy boat filled with little pieces of crisp bacon floating in bacon grease. The idea is, you ladle a nice big glob of grease onto your lutefisk, and then, when nobody is looking, you sprint out of the restaurant and find a place that sells pizza.

No, that's what we (Italics) felt (end italics) like doing, but instead we tasted the lutefisk, and we were pleasantly surprised. Some of the comments I wrote down were:

- "This is not totally terrible."
- "I don't hate this."
- "It sort of slimes down your throat."
- "I have eaten worse things."

As we were eating, a tiny, pretty woman walked by, and we realized that she was Isabella Brasseur, a Canadian athlete who had just won a bronze medal in the pairs figure skating. Bill Alkofer, a photographer sitting at our table, leaped to his feet to get her autograph.

"Congratulations!" he said. "Thank you," she said. "Do you want some lutefisk?" he said. Mr. Suave.

"I already ate," she said, moving swiftly away.

We were astounded. Usually when you offer a woman some lutefisk, you can have your way with her.

Next to arrive at our table was the chef, whose name was Alf Johnny Eriksen (Sissel explained that in Norway, "Alf Johnny" is the equivalent of "Billy Bob").

"How do you like the lutefisk?" asked Alf Johnny.

"Best we've ever had!" we said. "Do many people order this?"

"No," he said. "You are the first." Maybe it was all a prank. Maybe the Norwegians are just pretending that there's such a dish as "lutefisk," to see if any American journalists are stupid enough to believe them. Maybe they were watching us on hidden cameras and howling with Norwegian laughter ("They're EATING it With BACON GREASE!!!" "Unbelievable! Let's see if they'll eat these moose doots!").

Blair goes for all-time record; Idaho's Street skis for gold

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — One favors no-room-for-error sprits on ice. The other relishes marathons through the snow. On Saturday, both Bonnie Blair and Bjorn Dablie race for all-time gold-medal records.

If Blair retains her 500-meter speedskating title, her four career gold medals will match the most won by any U.S. woman in the Olympics, winter or summer.

She could move into a class by herself with a victory next week in her 1,000 or 1,500.

"I don't think about that stuff," she said of the records. "Too many things can happen."

Norway's Dablie seeks his fifth gold medal in the 15-kilometer cross-country pursuit race. That would make him the all-time gold medal leader among skiers, and tie speedskaters Eric Heiden of the United States and Clas Thunberg of Finland for the biggest gold haul among male Winter Olympians.

"Bjorn Dablie is one of the greatest skiers in the history of our sport," said Vladimir Smirnov of Kazakhstan, archival of the 26-year-old Norwegian.

Saturday's schedule, the busiest of the Games so far, features three other medal events: men's figure skating, women's downhill skiing and the concluding cross-country portion of the Nordic combined.

Other events include the first two runs of the two-man bobsled and three hockey games: Italy vs. France, Canada vs. Slovakia, and a battle between the United States (0-0-3) and Sweden (2-0-1), both unbeaten.

CBS television will cover all the events, including live afternoon coverage of the U.S.-Sweden hockey game.

The women's downhill provides another medal opportunity for the U.S. ski team, unexpectedly the dominant Alpine power at the Games so far with two golds and a silver in three races.

Picabo Street of Sun Valley, Idaho, posted the fastest practice time Friday on the Kvitfjell course, edging Germany's Katja Seizinger, the World Cup downhill leader.

"I'm not going to put that much pressure on myself," Street said. "Whatever happens I'm skiing well and I'm happy."

The 1992 downhill champion, Kerri Lee-Gartner of Canada, only decided Friday that she would defend her title. She had left the World Cup tour after her friend and fellow racer, Ulrike Maier of Austria, died following a downhill crash Jan. 29 in Germany.

"I spent a lot of time with my family, coping with what happened," Lee-Gartner said. "People who say they can for it, I think they're fooling themselves. It's always there. You just have to learn to deal with it."

Forsberg the Olympics' forgotten man

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Wayne Gretzky says Peter Forsberg is the best young hockey player in the world. It's still up to the Swede to prove it in the Olympics.

Being singled out by the NHL's all-time leading scorer for high praise for a 20-year-old, and Forsberg isn't sure he deserves it.

"He hasn't seen me so many times, so I don't know if it's true," Forsberg laughed. "Wayne Gretzky is the best ever, so you've got to take it as a big honor."

After failing to get any points in Sweden's first two games, Forsberg broke through with his first goal and first assist in a 7-1 rout of France on Thursday.

Forsberg arrived at the Olympics already exhausted. He plays nearly every shift for his team in the Swedish Elite League, "so he was very, very tired in his legs when we met up," Swedish coach Curt Lundmark said.

Forsberg struggled on the national team in pre-Olympic exhibitions. After six straight games without a point, he had two assists in an 8-3 victory over the United States in the Izvestia Cup last December.

Now comes a slow start in the Olympics.

"Most of the pressure he puts on himself," teammate Mats Naslund said. "I think he feels he has to show the crowd and the media people and the Quebec Nordiques that he made the right choice when they signed him."

The Swedes have scored 15 goals in their first three games, making Forsberg's troubles less noticeable. They've already clinched a berth in the quarterfinals.

Harding makes nice for reporters, but won't discuss attack

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Tonya Harding scored a perfect 6.0 for presentation.

She wore a red, white and blue USA jacket and the right touch of makeup. A silver cross lay over her white turtleneck. She spoke of faith in God, pride in representing the United States, allegiance to her teammates, saying all the correct things Friday in her first Olympic news conference.

Harding confessed embarrassment over published photos of her dancing topless at a Halloween party. She did her best to get past the scandal of the attack on Nancy Kerrigan, to talk about skating and medals instead of investigations and arrests.

Yet unanswered questions lingered.

Is Tonya Harding honest or phony? An innocent victim or a sinister schemer? A demure young woman or a bawdy sexpot who likes to pose nude?

It was impossible to know, and nothing she said revealed any more of the truth except perhaps about the pressure she's feeling.

"When everything's done," she said, "then I think I can sit down and cry."

Harding, still under investigation by a grand jury, asked to have her attorney by her side at the conference. U.S. Olympic Committee officials told her that would not be acceptable. Instead, she came with her attorney's wife, coach Diane Rawlinson, and deferred to her often. Sometimes they conferred on answers.

Harding responded with silence and a stunned look to the first question by a reporter. Why, he asked, should anyone believe she's innocent in the Kerrigan attack after she lied to the FBI about the coverup of the plot and reportedly failed lie-detector tests.

She deflected all questions about the attack and her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, who confessed to a racketeering charge in the plot and alleged Harding also was involved.

Other questions touched on sensitive subjects, especially the photos of her with breasts exposed, published in the London Sun, that have been circulating around the Olympics. The photos appeared to have been made from a videotape shown on television in the United States.

The Sun also quoted Mike Pliska, to whom Harding was engaged in 1991, as saying, "Tonya loves dancing around naked. She has a great body and loves to flaunt it."

"I am very upset and I am ashamed," Harding said. "The one thing I have to say is, if everyone could put themselves in my position, 'How would you feel?'"

Harding said she felt "really lucky" to be at the Olympics after the problems she's faced, adding that she sees herself as an equal to all the other athletes.

She acknowledged "a brief encounter" with Kerrigan in the athletes' village, saying it was "very positive, and it's a private thing." Though they have not talked on the ice, or even watched each other perform, Harding said there is no awkwardness about their workouts together.

chance to fix that at Calgary in 1988.

But nine hours before he was to skate, he was told his sister, Jane, was dying of leukemia. He spoke to her on the phone and was urged to compete. A few hours later she was dead, and he was at the starting line.

He slipped and fell going into the first turn. It happened again four days later in the 1,000. The sad picture of him sprawled on the ice, holding his head, became a lasting image of personal loss and Olympic defeat.

Albertville offered another chance four years later. But a rainy track and public pressure proved too much. Jansen was fourth in the 500; he faltered in the 1,000 and finished 26th.

On Monday, Jansen was back again for the 500. He slipped and finished eighth. Friday was the last chance of his life.

In the four days between, Jansen turned to his family, especially his 9-month-old daughter, Jane.

"I'd go to sleep and wake up and see my daughter and every day she made the pain go away a little bit," he said. "Today I just said, 'I don't care what happens. I have to skate this race and then it's finished.'"

Warming up on the track, Jansen didn't feel right. He tried sprints on a stationary bicycle.

"I needed to feel that my legs were a little tired," he said. "But I still wasn't gripping the ice. I said, 'Don't push too hard because you'll slip.' So I just stayed down as well as I could."

He came out fast, earning cheers when he finished his first 600 meters six-tenths of a second ahead of the record pace. He swayed going into the second-to-last turn, then struggled through the last turn. But his steady stride took him through to a time .58 seconds better than his previous best.

The crowd erupted, waving the flags of the United States, the Netherlands, Japan and Norway. In the stands with Jane, Robin burst into tears and raised her arms to heaven. "Oh my God," she cried. "Is this what it was really all about?"

The couple reunited at the ice's edge. Jansen kissed Robin's nose.

At the medal ceremony, Jansen kept looking at the granite and gold medal around his neck, as if to make sure it was his. His gray-blue eyes brimmed with tears as he mouthed the national anthem. Then he gave a small salute.

"It was for my sister," he explained. The arena's lights dimmed for the traditional winner's victory lap. Jansen started down the track. Then, in a heart stopping moment, Jansen reached out for his daughter.

The two, father and daughter, took the lap together. Jane, a lifelong veteran of skating rinks, seemed more interested in her father's fluttering U.S. flag than the crowd serenading them with "The Skater's Waltz."

"This all started in Calgary when Dan lost his sister," Robin later told a news conference as Jane chewed absently at Jansen's medal. "The saga ended today. We wanted it to end with the new Jane in our lives, our daughter, Jane."

Credit card wars heat up in Lillehammer

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Forget Harding vs. Kerrigan. That's tame stuff compared to the Olympic battle between Visa and American Express.

The credit-card war escalated Friday when American Express rejected an IOC ultimatum to change its advertising campaign so as not to challenge Visa's status as exclusive Olympic sponsor.

The International Olympic Committee responded by giving Visa the go-ahead to resume comparative advertising against American Express.

Visa is one of 12 international corporations belonging to the IOC's official sponsorship program, known as "TOP." The companies pay up to $40 million each for exclusive worldwide marketing rights connected with the Games, including use of the Olympic rings and symbols.

The IOC accuses American Express of using "ambush" or "parasite" marketing techniques to try to associate itself with the Games and disrupt Visa's position as official sponsor.

American Express says Visa uses the Olympics to "bash" its rival.

The Visa-American Express feud has flared up at the past several Olympic Games. This time, the controversy was triggered by an American Express television commercial that shows images of Norway and Lillehammer. The voice-over says:

"So if you're traveling to Norway, you'll need a passport, but you don't need a visa."

Dick Pound, the IOC's marketing chief, wrote American Express officials this week demanding they drop that line from the ad. He gave them 48 hours to comply, with a deadline of Thursday morning.

American Express refused. "American Express has no plans to scale back our customer service in Norway or our related advertising," the company said in a statement.

Clements hunts first PGA victory at Bob Hope Classic

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Lennie Clements, not yet a winner in a 14-season career, birdied his last six holes for an 11-under-par 61 and the third-round lead Friday in the Bob Hope Classic.

"At the end, I was basically unconscious," Clements said. "At first, I didn't even know I'd birdied six in a row. I just kept hitting fairways and greens and making putts."

Clements scored 12 birdies and a bogey in his course-record round at La Quinta, one of four desert resort courses used for the first four rounds of the 90-hole tournament sponsored by Chrysler.

He made most of his move with a 29 over par, including that finishing string of six consecutive birdies. The score has been bettered only 11 times in PGA Tour history but was not entirely unexpected.

"You know that the potential for a low score is out there," Clements said, pointing to a record 35-under-par total by Tom Kite in this tournament a year ago, a 62 by Scott Hoch on Thursday and a 64 with a double bogey by Ronnie Black on Wednesday.

"The golf course is in absolutely perfect condition," he said. "You can't shoot 61 on a course that isn't. If you can keep it in the fairway, you have a chance to get it close, and if you're on the greens, you're not going to see any spike marks."

Clements took full advantage of the situation, hitting 16 greens in regulation and missing only two fairways.

He completed 54 holes in 197, a distant 19-under par, and held a one-shot lead over Hoch, who shot a 70, also at La Quinta.

It was another two strokes back to Jay Deling and John Huston, tied at 200. Each had a third round 66, Deling at Indian Wells, and Huston at the Arnold Palmer course at PGA West.

Keith Clearwater and Guy Boros, son of former U.S. Open and PGA champion Julius Boros, were next at 201. Clearwater shot 70 and Boros 68, both at PGA West.

While the overall scores were exceptionally low, as they usually are at this event, some of golf's bigger names had their difficulties.

Playing in extremely strong winds at PGA West, Ben Crenshaw pumped three shots into the water on his ninth hole, eventually 3-putted and scrawled a score of "13" on his card for that hole. He went on to a 86, the high round of his career.

Corey Pavin, a winner last week in Los Angeles, shot a 76 at Bermuda Dunes and, with a 216 total, faces the need for major improvement Saturday if he is to qualify for last round play Sunday. A score of about 7-to-8-under par is projected as the probable qualifying cut.

Kite, who set a 90-hole scoring record in this event a year ago, also is in danger. He shot 73 at Bermuda Dunes and is at 215.

Sigel leads IntelliNet by 2 strokes

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Jay Sigel, who has two U.S. Amateur championships and a record nine Walker Cup appearances, found the leader board Friday in his third tournament of the season.

Sigel posted a first-round 7-under-par 65 to claim a two-stroke advantage over George Archer's 67 in the IntelliNet Challenge. Sigel's round equaled the lowest single-round par 72 score of the Senior PGA Tour's season.

"I didn't throw anything away today," said Sigel, who bypassed a PGA tour career to build a successful

Philadelphia insurance business and a celebrated amateur career. "I've done that in some of my rounds. My scoring hasn't been that good, but today it was better. I was more comfortable. I hit a lot of good shots and hit it close to the hole an awful lot."

Eight players are tied at 4-under after rounds of 68: Gary Player, Jim Colbert, J.C. Snead, Dick Goetz, Al Kelley, Dick Rhyan, Walt Zembriski and Tommy Aaron.

The eight-birdie, one-bogey round was Sigel's best golf of his three-week professional career. His previous low this year was a pair of 70s.

Sigel began Friday with a string of four straight birdies on the second hole with a short chip to one foot on the par 5. He added birdie putts of 8, 13 and 14 feet to make the turn at 32.

On the back nine, Sigel had 15- and 4-foot birdie putts and another from inside one foot before suffering his only bogey. On the 14th hole, his tee shot found a flower bed and he had to chip out. He then came back with a birdie on No. 16 with a 7-iron to eight inches.

The 54-hole event carries a $500,000 purse with $75,000 going to the winner.

King closes in on LPGA Hall of Fame

The Associated Press

EWA BEACH, Hawaii (AP) — Betsy King is on a good round of golf away from her sport's highest honor.

King needs one more victory for her 30th career win, the magic number to gain entry into the LPGA Hall of Fame. With a 3-under 68 in Friday's second round of the Hawaiian Ladies Open, King moved within one shot of first-round leader Val Skinner and Marta Figueras-Dotti, both at 6-under 138.

With the afternoon group of golfers still on the course, King joined Jane Geddes and Nina Foust at 5-under 139. Three shots back were Muffin Spencer-Devlin, Dana Dornmann, Tracy Kerdyk and Japanese pros Akiko Fukushima and Yuko Moriguchi.

Thirty golfers completed their first round on Friday, after rain and darkness forced suspension of play on Thursday. While the sun appeared Friday, the course remained wet and muddy.

King started the day at 1-under, and made three birdies on the front nine, including a 25-footer on the par-4 No. 6. She had two birdies on the back nine, including a 10-footer on the tough par-4 No. 18 to negate a bogey on No. 15.

"I only missed three greens in two days, and overall I've hit the ball solid," King said. "I made a couple of putts, but I felt I missed some opportunities. I could have played better."

Skinner started the day at 5-under, and moved to 7-under with a 3-foot birdie on No. 2 and a 15-foot putt on the par-5 No. 5. Skinner's best shot of the day came on No. 3, where her tee shot went wide right and her second shot landed at the trunk of a tree, 30 yards from the pin. She then hit a sand wedge one foot shy of the pin and made par.

"That's the greatest par of my life," Skinner said. "That was a big momentum hole, because it could have been really ugly."

Figueras-Dotti said she was tired and not in good rhythm, but managed four birdies and a bogey on her final nine holes, including birdies on her final two holes to tie Skinner.

"I hit some good shots, but even on some of the birdies I didn't feel right," Figueras-Dotti said. "With how I felt this morning and where I am now, I'm very pleased."

The winner of the $500,000, 54-hole tournament sponsored by Cup Noodles will take home $75,000.

Steve Stricker, last year's Canadian PGA champion, bogeyed the par-3 17th hole at PGA West Thursday in the second round of the Bob Hope Classic at La Quinta, Calif., Friday. Stricker, 26, hit his tee shot into the rocks about 10 feet above the green. He considered playing a ricochet off the rocks, but instead asked for a ruling and took an unplayable lie. Three times he dropped the ball and three times it dropped into unplayable positions. He finally placed the ball on a small ledge, putted it onto the green and rolled in a 25-foot putt for his 4.

Pirate skipper expects more from pitchers

The Associated Press

Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland says the Pirates' pitching has to improve this year.

"Everybody says pitching is 75 percent of baseball, or 90 percent, or whatever. Well, they're right," he said. "Pitching is the key to a good team, and ours wasn't good enough last year."

The Pirates posted a 4.77 ERA last year and finished with a 75-87 record for fifth place in the National League East.

Red Sox

Boston has named B.J. Baker at its first strength and conditioning coordinator.

Baker, who has spent the past seven years as an athletic trainer at Harvard, will supervise weight training programs for the Red Sox, devise a warmup and stretching program and oversee off-season conditioning.

He will work with Red Sox players when the team is in Boston, and will help minor leaguers and injured major leaguers when the team is on the road.

Rockies

It didn't take Howard Johnson's long to find his lost home run swing.

After hitting a ball over the fence during a spring training workout with the Colorado Rockies Thursday at Tucson, Ariz., Johnson was smiling.

"I've been working on my swing all winter," said Johnson, a free agent who spent the past nine seasons with the New York Mets. "Normally, I'm a slow starter in the spring, so this is a good starting point."

Johnson is coming off two injury-riddled seasons. His best year was 1991, when he led the National League with 38 homers and 117 RBIs, while collecting 34 doubles and stealing 30 bases.

Japan's Makoto 'Mac' Suzuki practices Thursday with the Seattle Mariners at their training camp in Peoria, Ariz.

Cubs

Manager Tom Trebelhorn is trying to fill a tough spot in Chicago — replacing Jim Lefebvre as manager of the Cubs.

"Jimmy had a lot of support here and I realize that," Trebelhorn said. "But the job is mine now and I will work very hard to gain the loyalty of everyone in the organization."

Lefebvre was fired after the Cubs finished fourth last season in the National League East. They were 84-78, finishing above .500 for only the second time in 22 years, but wound up 13 games out of first.

Cardinals

Gregg Jefferies never wanted to go to salary arbitration. Now he's glad he did.

"They didn't give us much choice," Jefferies said Thursday after an arbitrator picked his $4.6 million request instead of the St. Louis club's offer of $3.7 million.

They didn't want to negotiate at all. Only Ruben Sierra, awarded $5 million in 1992 as a member of the Texas Rangers, has received a higher award in arbitration.

Jefferies made $2.65 million in 1993 when he hit .342 with 16 home runs, 83 RBIs and 46 steals. It was his best year, but he didn't think he'd win at arbitration.

Reds

Pitchers and catchers got right to work when Cincinnati opened camp, with coach Ray Knight conducting a lengthy session on bunting.

"We aren't going to have the problem that we had last year in failing to lay down a sacrifice," Knight said. "This is the easiest part of the game, and we are going to teach them if it takes all day every day we are here."

The drill was intended to set the tone for the Reds' camp, which manager Davey Johnson has said will be demanding.

When practice began, Johnson said the workout might have to be limited to 1½ hours because of wet fields. But the sun appeared and Johnson kept the 17 pitchers and five catchers an extra hour.

Daytona deaths cast pall on speedway

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)

— Race drivers, like jet pilots or downhill skiers, flash a macho image with little room for fear.

But even racers can't ignore it when it tragically strikes.

So, things have been a more somber and serious than usual this week in the garage area at Daytona International Speedway as the drivers deal with the deaths of longtime competitor Neil Bonnett and rookie Rodney Orr in crashes during practice for Sunday's Daytona 500.

And those events have three of the most aggressive Winston Cup competitors, with past histories of rough driving tactics — Rusty Wallace, Ernie Irvan and Dale Earnhardt — preaching safety first.

Prior to Thursday's 125-mile qualifying races, Wallace, who walked away from a horrifying, barrel-rolling, flipping crash in last year's 500 with a cut under his chin, stood up the pre-race drivers' meeting to talk about safety and common sense.

"You can't just mash the gas and throw your brains in the trunk out there," he said earlier in the week.

That was the message he delivered to his colleagues Thursday before what turned out to be two fairly safe 125-mile qualifying races. There were a couple of spins and one crash, but no injuries.

Pro football's free agents list grows

NEW YORK (AP) — The list of NFL free agents is getting longer before it gets shorter.

While the league office released its list of 369 uncontracted free agents, many teams were unleashing even more by cutting loose their own players to make more room under the $33.8 million per team salary cap.

The shakedown was likely to continue before players began jumping teams — the first signings are likely to be re-signings of a team's own free agents.

In fact, general managers and personnel directors, who met for 3½ hours in Indianapolis last week will be schooled next week during a one-day meeting in Orlando on just how much of that money can be used for salaries and how much has to be set aside for other things.

"I can't tell you how much we're going to spend and nobody else can tell you how much they're going to spend," says Washington general manager Charlie Casserly, who may cut quarterback Mark Rypien among others to open up salary cap room. "But for every dollar you spend, you'll have to subtract a dollar."

"We're going to have to walk before we can run with this," said general manager George Young of the New York Giants, who currently have between $10 million and $11 million to spend on 23 roster slots — not counting money taken out for rookies, bonuses and injured reserve.

That $11 million figure is about standard, although it varies from almost nothing to around $20 million for teams like New England, Cincinnati and Tampa Bay, have-nots who will be forced to spend at least $30 million to meet the minimum salary cap. But even those teams weren't ready to jump.

"We've been getting ready for free agency," says Patrick Fortie, New England's director of football operations. "But a lot of it is going to depend on how teams will react to keeping their own players and what their chinking point will be."

That means watching the big guys, like the two-time champion Dallas Cowboys.

Dallas has 35 players under contract for $27 million, giving the Cowboys just under $7 million to spend on their own players and any new ones they might want to sign.

People need connection to church

I've been thinking a lot about preaching recently, ever since I spent a week listening to Pope John Paul II work his particular magic on about 180,000 young people in Denver.

As I've rolled those many speeches over in my mind, it's occurred to me that the pontiff missed many opportunities during World Youth Day to pump up kids into an enthusiastic embrace of the Catholic brand of Christianity.

In the first place, these young people are having trouble finding hope in their future. They look upon the world as an enemy, the veritable dragon that will sting their generation. But in reality, these young people have led privileged lives, living in a time when their nation was not at war, in an era of relative prosperity that has been filled with technological surprises and breakthroughs.

Clark Morpew
Faith today

They ought to be excited just to be alive in this world. But they are not. And the pope failed to address their desperation.

In fact, mostly the pope scolded and admonished rather than reassuring, encouraging and praising. I wish he had told stories from his youth, about his mother dying when he was only 9 and the uncertainty he lived with as a youth during World War II.

I wish he had talked about his days working for the resistance movement in Poland, his decision to enter an underground seminary and his commitment to the priesthood. Why didn't he talk about what it felt like to be chosen as the Vicar of Christ or his role in the fall of Communism in Eastern Europe and his dreams for the world?

Instead, he scolded them: "Woe to you, America, if you do not protect life." He instructed that the United States is living in sin. He was narrowing in on particular issues: sexual abuse by priests, abortion, homosexuality, the diminishing priesthood and sexual promiscuity.

My guess is, that negative message was lost on these young people who were being praised all over Denver by cab drivers, waitresses, hotel folks — just about everybody — as the nicest throng of kids they've ever seen. I saw a young couple kissing, no fighting and no drunkenness or tomfoolery. So much for sin. These people don't need scolding; they deserve praise.

But in an effort to be fair to the pope, he isn't the only cleric who is missing opportunities with people today. When you consider all the sermons being preached on Sunday mornings by well-intentioned clergies, it adds up to a monstrous pile of words.

Some of those sermons connect, change people's lives, start helpful movements that reach the vulnerable and bring comfort to afflicted people. But many accomplish nothing and are, quite literally, a waste of time.

I think most preachers fail because they refuse to take fundamental steps in sermon preparation.

First, when the preacher has studied the text thoroughly using all the theological devices, an important question must be answered: What does this mean for the lives of the people in this congregation?

To answer that question, a preacher has to know the audience: the pain they suffer, the fears haunting them and the joys encouraging them.

The second question a preacher must be able to answer is: How can this text and sermon encourage the people in this congregation?

Preachers, it is futile to scold. You are not an angry, Old Testament prophet railing on the pagans. You are the shepherd of a group of well-meaning people who sometimes go astray. Encourage the flock.

The third question the preacher must ask is: "What does this mean for my life? Here is where it gets painful because the preacher has to look deep inside to see how this text points its bony finger back at the pulpit.

What fears and inadequacies or strengths and victories does this text address in your life? Tell your people how the text gets at you. Finally, the preacher should ask: "What does this text mean for the world? What does it say to the people of Bosnia, those suffering from hunger in Cuba or the confused people of Russia? And, further, what does the text require of the people sitting in that little congregation that you are addressing?"

Now, dear readers, I want to give you an opportunity to tell your clergy what you think of their preaching. What irritates you, puts you to sleep, pleases, inspires, surprises, comforts and sends you home feeling better?

Can prayer save American family?

'Yes,' says Idaho's Mother of the Year

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Is there hope for the American family? One Twin Falls mother says yes — through the power of prayer.

Lorayne Smith has mounted a campaign to strengthen the American family. She's taken her cause to churches, mayors, even the governor — asking everyone to join her in a week of prayer for families, beginning Friday.

Smith's project is part of her role as 1993 Idaho Mother of the Year, a title bestowed upon her by American Mothers, Inc. The group sponsors statewide prayer vigils annually, and encourages Mothers of the Year in each state to initiate related observances.

Smith has asked churches to incorporate family scriptures and prayers into their Feb. 27 worship services. To underscore the importance of her efforts, she decided to share her ideas with Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The result: Andrus has issued a statewide proclamation designating Feb. 25 through March 6 as "Prayer Vigil Week."

In part, the proclamation reads, "I urge churches of all faiths to enlist their membership to join in prayer during this week asking divine strength for not only mothers and fathers, but for all who work with or have an influence on our children and youth so they may be successful in instilling moral precepts into these young people's lives which will help them to become happy, productive and successful adults."

Smith is excited about the project, she said, because she feels that the only lasting way to fight crime is to instill moral teaching in individuals, beginning with the family.

"All you have to do is read or hear the daily news to see the lack of moral values," said Smith, who was a Times-News reporter for 30 years until her retirement in 1989. "In Twin Falls, where we are just beginning to receive reports of gangs and other big city crime, prayer is especially important."

So far, Smith has contacted 67 Idaho mayors and mailed more than 100 letters to churches and related groups. The city

Local churches bring family themes to pulpit

The Times-News

A number of area churches have made plans to incorporate "Strengthening Families" themes into their Feb. 27 services. Here's a list of churches currently planning observances.

- Twin Falls Episcopal Church of the Ascension, 10 a.m.
- Overcomers Christian Fellowship of Twin Falls, 1 p.m.
- First United Methodist Church of Twin Falls, 11 a.m.
- First United Brethren Church of Twin Falls, 11 a.m.
- Calvary Pentecostal Church of Twin Falls, 10 a.m.
- Salvation Army, Twin Falls, 11 a.m.
- Our Savior Lutheran Church of Twin Falls, 11 a.m.
- Eastside Southern Baptist Church of Twin Falls, 11 a.m.
- First Baptist Church of Twin Falls, 11 a.m.

The Twin Falls LDS Stake, along with LDS Wards in Buhl, Filer and Hollister, will conduct observances during their Feb. 27 meetings. The Jackpot Branch of the LDS Church will also hold an observance that day.

Fellowship, will help coordinate arrangements with area churches in southern Idaho.

"We will be involving young people and families in our Feb. 27 service," said Rieke, who pastors Our Savior Lutheran Church. "We will be doing our liturgy differently, and we will do everything around the theme of 'Strengthening Families.'"

Evans is working with his group to plan a fifth Sunday prayer concert, on May 29, when various pastors will lead segments devoted to prayer for the family.

"People can pray for families on their own, too, anywhere," said Smith, who, with her husband Vernon, has raised four children. "In many ways, what I have done (contacting churches) is like casting bread on the waters."

'Living in sin' bias case mirrors others

The Associated Press

BOSTON — A high court in Massachusetts has become an arbiter in a culture clash pitting religion against the sexual revolution.

In a case that bears resemblance to others around the country, two Catholic brothers are facing charges of discrimination because they refused to rent an apartment to an unmarried couple.

The brothers claim they were following their religious beliefs, but the state says their rental business doesn't qualify as a religious activity.

"Catholicism is not on trial here, but (the brothers') strongly held religious convictions are," said Jay Sekulow, counsel for the American Center for Law and Justice, a Virginia group founded by religious broadcaster Pat Robertson.

The center, which is representing the landlords, Paul and Ronald Desilets, presented arguments last week before the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court.

Nikolas Nikas, another attorney with the Virginia group, said the landlords were justified in refusing to go against their religion. He also noted that fornication is still against the law in Massachusetts, although authorities say it is rarely, if ever, enforced.

"The commonwealth is attempting to force the Desilets to violate their sincerely held religious beliefs," Nikas said.

But Judith Beals, an assistant attorney general, said the landlords are engaged in a commercial activity, not a form of worship that is protected under the law.

"The landlords have not shown how the government has restrained them in their religious worship," Beals told the court.

Similar cases have arisen in other states. In 1990, the Minnesota Supreme Court ruled in favor of a landlord who also refused to rent to an unmarried couple because of his religious beliefs. In California, the state Court of Appeals sided with a landlord, but the state Supreme Court last year refused to make a ruling.

Last year in Wisconsin, a state judge ruled a woman violated open housing laws by placing an ad for a "Christian handyman" to rent a room in her home.

Such cases evoke different views of how far religious liberties should extend.

Anne-Marie Amiel, an attorney with the Rutherford Institute, an organization that specializes in religious civil liberties, said if a person rents a room in his or her home, "they should be allowed to choose who they want under their own roof."

But she said, if someone owns a string of

Prayer before, after games under attack

MADISON, Wis. — The practice of having pre-game and post-game prayers conducted for University of Wisconsin football players by a Catholic priest is under review after an anti-religion group complained about it.

The priest and players said coach Barry Alvarez encouraged attendance at the prayers but did not require it.

The Rev. Michael Burke is rector of Holy Name Seminary in Madison where the team has held preseason training for more than 20 years.

Anne Gaylor, president of the Madison-based Freedom from Religion Foundation, said Burke was acting as an unofficial chaplain to the team. She claimed that relationship violated principles of separation of church and state and urged UW officials to end the relationship.

Burke said that Alvarez and his staff encourage players to attend the prayers.

"That's probably a fair characterization. He (Alvarez) does not require them to attend," said Steven Malchow, an Athletic Department spokesman.

Malchow said Alvarez had no comment on the issue.

Profanity threatens Utah theater grants

SALT LAKE CITY — A Mormon Church official has protested profanity in a production at the University of Utah's Pioneer Memorial Theatre and has threatened to withdraw an annual church grant.

Theater directors said the contents of productions will not be changed.

In a recent letter to theater directors, President Gordon B. Hinckley, first counselor to church President Ezra Taft Benson, objected to profanity in this winter's production of "Conversations With My Father."

Hinckley threatened to withdraw the $15,000 annual grant from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Foundation unless the theater cleans up its act.

Church spokesman Don LeFevre said the letter was private correspondence and he declined to comment.

Pioneer Theatre Company Artistic Director Charles Morey and Theater Managing Director Chris Lino said the content of productions will not be altered, however, and they expect foundation support will be dropped.

"We are committed to serve the entire community by producing a broad repertoire of theater drawn from the mainstream of American intellectual and cultural life," Morey said.

Pastor's job soothing failed Olympians

ATHENS, Ga. — The Rev. Doug Nix is part of the U.S. team at the Winter Olympics — with the job of helping athletes deal with both winning and losing.

"A lot of the athletes contending have had a lifelong dream of winning the gold medal. But there's only one winner. We'll be there to help them adjust emotionally to the defeat," said Nix, college pastor at Prince Avenue Baptist Church in Athens.

In Lillehammer, Norway, Nix will be on call 24 hours a day. He will help operate a coffee house in the Olympic Village, preach, sermons at a Baptist church and offer one-on-one counseling to athletes.

He is one of an eight-person clergy team sponsored by the Rev. David Ginn's Action Ministries, the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board, the European Baptist Convention and the Lillehammer Baptist Church.

"I never dreamed in a million years I'd be going to Lillehammer," Nix said before leaving last week. "But I'm going, and I'm asking the Lord to use me."

Church to turn tabernacle into temple

VERNAL, Utah — The Mormon Church has announced plans to convert a historic tabernacle, built near the turn of the century, into a temple in this northeastern Utah town.

Church spokesman Don LeFevre said it is the first time an older building has been restored for use as a temple.

There has been a long debate over what to do with the tabernacle since 1984, when a Save the Tabernacle Committee was created. The tabernacle, dedicated in 1907, has not been occupied for several years and is in serious disrepair.

"After giving prayerful consideration to the matter and following extensive study, we have concluded to use the shell of the building, restoring its original outward appearance, and creating within it a beautiful temple," the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints announced in a letter.

Night ministry aims at endangered teens

By Mary Schmach
Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — The Rev. Thomas Behrens — you can call him Tom — is sitting at the counter in the Dunkin' Donuts at the corner of Clark and Belmont on Chicago's North Side. The air smells of cigarettes and doughnut grease.

Outside it is night, though not yet the heartless bottom of the night — 1 a.m., 2 a.m. — when it becomes clear that the kids standing on the corners, lingering in the diners, staring into store windows, have nowhere safe to go.

Inside, the lights are bright, and across from Behrens three young guys in denim, leather and sunglasses slouch in a booth, in a haze of smoke and adolescent cool.

"Tens need a lot of attention," Behrens says while the coolsters dramatically dote out pennies to a woman with a conspicuous hanger and no change for coffee.

"But," Behrens continues, "we back away from teenagers, personally and institutionally. It's easy to be concerned about children because they're cute little cherubs. Teenagers aren't cherubs."

In 17 years working the neighborhood, Behrens has learned a lot about teenagers, and about the dangers and lure of the night. It is in places like this Dunkin' Donuts that he and his colleagues at the Night Ministry seek out stranded teenagers who can't or won't go home, trying to bring them not so much to salvation as to safety.

In January, Behrens won one of three awards from the Chicago Community Trust — $75,000 to spend studying what leads teenagers away from their families and into the streets.

Experience has already taught him plenty. Ordained in the United Church of Christ, Behrens, 48, began as the only employee of the Night Ministry in 1976. He had two master's degrees, along with four years in mortgage banking.

By the mid-1980s, as he saw more and more teenagers living on the streets, he decided that homeless teens should be the ministry's focus.

The teenagers he met had left home for various reasons — they were terrified to tell their parents they were gay, their parents had kicked them out, their parents had sexually abused them, they were using drugs.

Their backgrounds varied too. "I've met kids on the street from some of Chicago's most recognizable and well-to-do families," he says.

A bespectacled man with blood hair and a wide, open face, Behrens is, by his own description, shy. In the 10 years he worked the streets, it wasn't in his nature to walk right up to needy teenagers.

Instead, he'd hang around. Lean on a parking meter. Sit on a bar stool. Make himself part of the scenery, until someone would wonder, "Who's the guy in the funny clerical collar?" and strike up a conversation.

What that said wasn't always nice.

"This was part of the test," he says mildly. "I'd be in a place and the language would get worse, the jokes would get rancid. They'd whisper to the bartender, 'Send him over a drink.' They'd see how I'd handle it."

After a while, the young people on the street got to know him. They'd invite him places, like the juice joint that turned out to be a front for a pornography business. He'd listen to their stories, help them find places to stay. He struggled to convince them that he wasn't seeking sex, the currency in which many traded.

Behrens, who is married and has three children, is now the Night Ministry's executive director. He oversees a staff of 45, including four street ministers who work the Dunkin' Donuts and similar territory.

Two years ago, the ministry opened a 16-bed shelter for homeless youths between 14 and 21. It recently began operating a roving health-care bus, which runs from 8 p.m. until 2 a.m.

"You know," Behrens says, leaning on the Dunkin' Donuts counter, "a few years ago my father said something to me. He said, 'I gave you and your brothers a wonderful gift. I loved your mother every day of our lives.' I understand what he meant now. What he gave us is security."

Security is the one thing teenagers on the street lack most, the thing he would most like to give them.

"Homeless teens are among the casted people to ignore because they're among the hardest to reach," he says. "They're striving for independence at the same time you're trying to reach them. But homeless kids want to be at home. More than anything, they want to be safe."

Hong Kong expels U.S. evangelist

Los Angeles Times

HONG KONG — Chinese authorities have expelled an American evangelist in the most dramatic example yet of a recent crackdown on foreign religious activity in China.

David Balcombe, a Christian pastor at the nondenominational Revival Christian Church in Hong Kong, told reporters here Wednesday that public security officials raided an underground "house" church in the central province of Henan where he and six colleagues — two Americans, two Indonesians and two Hong Kong residents — were staying. The police confiscated their belongings, detained them for four days, then "personally escorted" Balcombe to the airport. The other six were released separately.

"We were seized on Feb. 10 ... and accused Feb. 15 of violating new regulations dealing with foreigners and religious activities," Balcombe said. "I don't know if this is an isolated incident or an enforcement of a new policy to restrict the activities of Christian foreigners working in China."

The Revival Christian Church's headquarters, the Faith Christian Fellowship, is in Oakland, Calif.

The Chinese government has always had laws against religion, but they are enforced inconsistently.

The new rules specifically ban proselytizing by foreigners and forbid churches to engage in what the government calls destructive, independent, unauthorized or overseas-financed activities.

Missionaries

4 Magic Valley youths go on missions

Four young people from the Magic Valley area have been called to serve missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Sister Erlene Diane Strader, daughter of Tom and Nancy Strader of Twin Falls, will serve for 18 months in the Georgia Atlanta Mission. She will speak in sacrament meeting at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 1st Ward chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard and again at 3 p.m. Sunday at the LDS Institute Ward at the Twin Falls West Stake Center, 667 Harrison. She will enter the Mission Training Center in Provo, Utah, on March 2.

Strader graduated from Twin Falls High School and the College of Southern Idaho, where she majored in pre-med. She has earned a Young Woman in Excellence Award through the Young Women's Association and served on the LDSA Council.

Sister Michelle St. Clair, daughter of John and Linda St. Clair of Twin Falls, will serve for 18 months in the Illinois Chicago Mission. She will speak in sacrament meeting at 12:30 p.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 7th Ward chapel on Eastland Drive North and will enter the MTC March 9. An open house is planned for 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday at the St. Clair residence, 1020 Centennial Drive.

St. Clair graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1990, where she was a member of the National Honor Society. As a teen-ager, she earned a Young Womanhood Award through the Young Women's Association. She graduated from Ricks College in Rexburg in 1992 with a degree in floral design management.

Elder Matthew K. Jacobsen, son of Bill and Maurine Jacobsen of Twin Falls, will serve for two years in the Georgia Atlanta Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 9 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 11th Ward chapel on Eastland Drive North and will enter the MTC March 2.

Jacobsen is a 1993 graduate of Twin Falls High School, where he participated in wrestling and performed with the Madrigals and Chamber Singers. He has been employed at Kelley Garden Center during high school and since graduation.

Elder Justin D. Olsen, son of Jerry D. and Sheryl Olsen of Twin Falls, will serve for two years in the California Sacramento Spanish-speaking Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 12th Ward chapel, 824 Caswell Ave. W., and will enter the MTC March 2.

Olsen earned an Eagle Scout Award through the Boy Scouts of America and has received a Duty to God Award. He graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1993.

Three Magic Valley area young men have recently returned from serving missions for the LDS Church.

Elder Shane Stepien Frey, son of Wesley and Myrna Frey of Twin Falls, served for two years in the Texas Houston East Mission. He will report on his mission at 9 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 5th Ward chapel on Maurice Street.

Frey graduated from Filer High School and attended the College of Southern Idaho before his mission.

Elder Eric Andersen, son of Ron and Terri Andersen of Murtaugh, served for two years in the Indiana Indianapolis Mission. He will report on his mission at 11:45 a.m. Sunday at the Murtaugh Ward chapel.

Andersen earned an Eagle Scout Award through the Boy Scouts of America and is a 1990 graduate of Murtaugh High School, where he was active in track, football and basketball.

Elder Stephen Andersen, son of DeVon and Geraldine Andersen of Murtaugh, served for two years in the Greece Athens Mission. He will report on his mission at 11:45 a.m. Sunday at the Murtaugh Ward chapel.

An Eagle Scout, Andersen graduated from Murtaugh High School in 1987, where he was active in track, football and basketball. He attended the College of Southern Idaho, where he participated in track.

The Times-News welcomes news of church missionaries. Send information to Ellen Thomason, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Sharp truths can pierce even a calloused heart

Max Lucado, in his book, "And the Angels Were Silent: The Week of Jesus," tells of his first church memory. It is unlike any I have ever heard.

Many people have church memories that are religious in nature — patent-leather shoes, Sunday school classes or Christmas pageants. Max's memory is about callouses, a dull sermon and a straight pin.

There Max was in the pew next to his father, who had to keep a hand in Max's lap to keep him still in the service. Max became fascinated with his father's hand. It was calloused from doing the work of a mechanic — long hours of gripping a screwdriver or wrench, twisting and turning it over and over.

On the back of the pew in front of Max were name tags with straight pins to hold them onto articles of clothing. Max decided to see how deep the calluses went. He took the straight pin and inserted it into the callous a fraction of an inch. Then he looked up to see if there was any response.

None. Then he probed further, this time an excited exclamation from his father. One last push and his father yanked his hand away, closing his fist as he did, driving the pin in further.

His mother, the mother almost died of embarrassment, his little brother giggled and his father glared down at him. He got the distinct impression that his dad's hand would drive home another point once they left church.

I find myself doing the same thing now — trying to penetrate callouses with a point. Only now it is from the pages of the paper, not in the pew. Now the tool is truth, not a pin, and the callouses are not on the hand but on the heart; Thick, dead skin wrapped around the nerves of the soul — the result of hours of rubbing against the truth without receiving it.

In an early sermon to the fledgling church, Peter probes the hearts of his listeners with these words, "The god of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Him that God exalted with his right hand to be a prince and a savior, for to give repentance — to — Israel — and forgiveness of sins." (Acts 5:30, 31).

Peter hit a raw nerve. The nerve was the sinfulness of man. The pin was the cross of Christ.

You "slew him" too. Your sin crucified Christ. God "laid on him (Christ), the iniquity of us all" (Isaiah 53:6).

You can try to deny your sin. You can try to drown it out with nouns (people, places or things). But the only valid option is to deal with it by repenting of your sin.

The choice is yours. Say no and develop a thicker callous around your heart. Or say yes and allow God to give you a clean heart. Forgiveness is only a prayer away.

rental properties, "you are basically a commercial landlord. The (fair housing) laws apply to you."

A federal law passed last year, called the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, prevents any form of government from interfering with a person's exercise of religious freedom unless it can show a "compelling" interest.

Some religious groups say the law bolsters the case of landlords such as the Deslites.

While the government has a legitimate interest in ensuring open housing, it has a variety of tools to achieve that goal without having to "run roughshod over the religious liberties of others," said Brent Walker, general counsel for the Baptist Joint Committee, which focuses on religious liberty issues.

The Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts sided against the landlords in the case now before the high court.

"We care a lot about free exercise of religion," said Sarah Wunsch, an attorney with the organization. "What landlords want goes way beyond what anyone considers free exercise of religion."

For instance, she said a small community where most residents share the same religious beliefs could essentially screen the people who live in the local rental housing.

Wunsch also said the case raises questions about separation of church and state. If a landlord were to evict someone for bringing in a boyfriend or girlfriend, it would draw the court system into the process to enforce the landlord's religious beliefs, she said.

In Massachusetts, the state sued the Deslites after they turned away a young couple in 1989 from an apartment in the small western Massachusetts town of Turners Falls.

The couple, Mark Lattanzi and Cynthia Tarail, had sent an advertisement in a newspaper for a roommate.

But Paul Deslites asked Tarail whether the couple planned to get married, and when she said no, he turned them down.

According to court papers, Deslites told Tarail: "I don't go for that living in sin stuff."

A Franklin County Superior Court judge ruled in favor of the landlords in 1992, citing their religious rights.

Beals charged that the brothers violated the state's fair housing law, which prohibits discrimination based on marital status. She said that law recognizes the rights of married couples, despite the statute against fornication.

The couple, Mark Lattanzi and Cynthia Tarail, had sent an advertisement in a newspaper for a roommate.

But Paul Deslites asked Tarail whether the couple planned to get married, and when she said no, he turned them down.

According to court papers, Deslites told Tarail: "I don't go for that living in sin stuff."

Jobless find revived spirituality, balanced work attitude

The Associated Press

Not too long after she began working at a hospital in Pittsburgh, rumors of impending layoffs nearly paralyzed Margaret Matthews with fear.

It wasn't until a decade later that the layoffs actually came. Then her fears of unemployment were confirmed. More than once Matthews faced empty cupboards.

After nearly two years of sending out scores of applications, she found a job working with the disabled. Now the old fears have disappeared as she learned during her unemployment to place "ultimate faith" in God.

"It became a real tight friendship because you're constantly leaning on him. And you're very much aware you're leaning on him. ... I could feel the warmth. I could feel the love," she said. "You lose your fear."

The way individuals live out their faith at work has gained growing theological attention in recent years in reaction to a secular society that would limit religion to services and private prayers.

Ironically, one of the richest sources of reflection on the spirituality of work is coming from the unemployed, who have been forced by losing their jobs to take a step back and examine the meaning of their earthly vocations.

Where once work defined their lives, many unemployed people find their faith deepening as they turn to God to help them face the trials of unemployment, said Joseph Gosse, author of a booklet on "Unemployed Workers."

The booklet is part of a series of publications on the spirituality of work developed by the Chicago-based National owned by the Chicago-based National own sense of self-worth and meaning." Gosse said. "We can't think again about this question of Jesus: What will it profit us if we gain the whole world and suffer the loss of our undying souls?"

Joseph Belechek, unemployment counselor for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Pittsburgh, says God directed him to his current job after he spent 25 years as a manufacturing manager.

No one is saying unemployment is a good. Pope John Paul II has called unemployment "in all cases an evil."

The Canadian Catholic bishops told their flock: "Everyone must show particular attentiveness and compassion to the anguish and needs of the unemployed."

But Gosse said in his interviews with unemployed people, many spoke of a deepened spirituality.

Some reported returning to the faith they grew up with.

"When I felt worthless, I found that my religious values were still there. I found the support I needed in my church," said the one man who spent 18 months looking for work.

In his own experience, Gosse remembers the solace he took during busy days of looking for work of just being able to stop in a church in the afternoon and pray.

"You're thrown back on a deeper sense of security, a deeper sense of faith," Gosse said. "You have to somehow realize, your work, what you do, didn't comprise all your meaning."

Joseph Belechek, an unemployment counselor in southwestern Pennsylvania, said some people also consider career changes to fields such as social work once they have left the rat race long enough to examine their lives.

"I'm finding more and more people whose attachment to God is becoming much stronger. It seems they've lost that desire to earn megabucks," he said.

that started Belechek working with the jobless and eventually led him to leave his job for one at half the pay assisting the unemployed for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Pittsburgh.

"I know God directed me into this position," he said.

Many unemployed people do go through stages of anger at God, particularly as their time of joblessness drags on, but those that keep their faith are also the ones who are more likely to retain the self-confidence to get new jobs and to avoid taking their anger out on their spouses and children or other emotional pitfalls of unemployment, Gosse and Belechek say.

Matthews, who is single, is one who testifies to the power of faith.

During her unemployment, Matthews remembers being down to her last meal and having people show up at her door with five or six bags of groceries and people she had never met sending her $100 or $150 when she needed it most.

"For my own spiritual self, I learned ultimate trust in God," Matthews said. "I knew in my heart I had to do this walk."

Lent can — and should — be more than short-term diet

By Tom Schaefer
Knight-Ridder News Service

Even the faithful often treat Lent simply like a short-term diet.

Ask someone to define the meaning and purpose of "Lent" and watch people scratch their heads. (Are you talking about that fuzzy stuff on fabrics and in people's navels?)

Traditions die hard, but I doubt that many people understand what this centuries-old season of the Christian church means, much less observe its ancient practices.

The know-it-alls know that Lent began this week on Ash Wednesday (Feb. 16) and will continue for 40 days until Easter, April 3. And the know-it-all-and-more folks know that the Eastern Orthodox Church's Lent is usually at a different time. This year its lenten season starts on March 14. (Just don't ask for an explanation as to why the times differ; it's too involved.)

But back to the meaning of Lent. It commemorates the time when Jesus spent 40 days in the wilderness fasting and praying. In solidarity with him, Christians were supposed to spend time seeking spiritual renewal.

Then someone got the idea to do not only some cleansing of the soul but some cleaning of the home. And so were born Shrove Tuesday (clean out the kitchen cupboards) and its French equivalent Mardi Gras (get down and dirty before all that cleaning). Everyone had a high old time before entering the austere season of Lent.

Did anyone consider the contradiction between fall-on-your-face drunkenness preceding prayer and penitence? Or were such extremes intentional? I digress again.

Lots of people still take time to do some spiritual introspection, though I suspect that even among many of the faithful, Lent is often treated more like a short-term diet. They refrain from eating from one major food group — caffeine, colas, for instance — for six weeks and consider their efforts at observing a spiritual discipline completed.

For those who want a more serious commitment during Lent but still need some direction, may I suggest a program published by an organization called Alternatives?

The non-denominational group was formed in 1973, offering suggestions on ways to counteract the commercialism of Christmas. Now, for the first time, it has published a lenten calendar offering suggestions to enrich people's lives during a time of self-sacrifice. Some of their suggestions include finding a quiet place in which to reflect in solitude, getting involved in a local charity and helping someone learn a craft or skill.

To order a copy of the lenten calendar "The Joy of Discipleship," send $1.50 plus $1.80 postage to: Alternatives, P.O. Box 429, Ellenwood, Ga. 30049.

The fact is, many of us have forgotten the importance of introspection. And Lent can be a time to learn how to get spiritually in shape.

And maybe even do a little housecleaning.

Pastor has room for God, suicide

By Susan Ager
Knight-Ridder News Service

None of us can say, and Tom Eggebeen can't be sure, either. But the God he knows would never punish people for taking their own lives, but would cradle them more closely, reserving for them a special mercy.

Eggebeen is a Presbyterian pastor, but he is a different man of God. Or maybe he is a man of a different God.

Eggebeen's God favors compassion over principle. People over rules.

Eggebeen (pronounced EGG-a-been) has stepped forward — before any other mainstream minister in Michigan — to support two rude-on-religion types named Jack Kevorkian and Geoffrey Fieger who say ending your life when you're sick and desperate has nothing to do with religion and everything to do with control.

More than that, Eggebeen is a calm, articulate voice soothing those who wonder if supporting death with dignity contradicts their faith in God and the Bible.

"People are angry because they're afraid," he says. "Afraid of offending God. I'd like to take away some of that fear."

On Jan. 30, Kevorkian and Fieger stood in the sanctuary of Eggebeen's church, St. Paul's in Livonia, Mich., and, between services, promoted their petition drive to put their "mercy amendment" on the ballot.

"They have borne the brunt of so much hatred in the name of Jesus," Eggebeen says of the pair. "I can't blame them for being a little sour about religion."

Their amendment to the Michigan State Constitution would guarantee terminally ill people the right to seek a doctor's help to end their lives.

Within a day, Eggebeen got many angry calls. Asked what they said, he replied: "I am a servant of Satan. I will burn in hell forever. I am a deceiver, an evil man. I'm nauseating and disgusting."

He was girded for criticism, but "I'm still stunned by it, the absolute pure hatred that pours through a telephone line, all in the name of Jesus — which is a contradiction of huge proportions."

As Eggebeen and I spoke in his office recently, calls continued to pour in. "Listen," one assistant instructed others. "That's all. Just listen."

Piled high on Eggebeen's desk were all sorts of books, including Bibles, books about life and death and a Kevorkian biography. The Bible is stored on his IBM computer, too, and Eggebeen logs on to search for the word "Judas," looking for the verse in Matthew in which the apostle hangs himself in remorse for having betrayed Jesus.

Judas' suicide isn't the only biblical one. Samson killed himself in the Old Testament. Saul, too, to avoid capture by the enemy.

"The Bible portrays them as tragic figures," says Eggebeen. "At no point is suicide condemned. I find no evidence in scriptures where God judges the weak and finds them wanting because of their weakness. If there is any judgment in the Bible, it's against the proud and the presumptuous, who see themselves as morally superior."

The 49-year-old pastor was 20 years younger, posted at a parish in Altoona, Pa., when he first confronted suicide.

"On a Sunday afternoon, a woman I knew well from the parish called to say, 'My husband just killed himself.' The man had walked upstairs to his bedroom, lay down on his bed and put a pistol in his head."

Knowing them to be loving, gentle people, "I decided right then and there that suicide was not a mortal sin, and may not be any more sinful than any other stupid things we do in our lives, but instead a sign of weakness, the fundamental weakness of being human."

Since then, medical technology has extended human suffering, testing our stamina, keeping alive men and women who would have grown ill and died quickly a century ago.

Any number of those people have clutched Eggebeen's shirt and his conscience and whispered, "Why am I still alive?"

Ancient prayer practice program slated

Robert Putman

TWIN FALLS — A parishwide program of ancient prayer practice, "Centering Prayer," is planned for this week at St. Edward's Catholic Parish Hall, 161 Sixth Ave. E.

Sessions are set for 7 to 9:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday will be led by Paul Robert, who is trained and certified by Contemplative Outreach Ltd. from the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York City.

Contemplative prayer was prominent in the early Christian Church for about 1,600 years. In conventional prayer and most meditations, people project their thoughts and words to God. In contemplative prayer, people turn themselves to use time and silence to allow God to communicate with them.

For more information, call 736-8196.

Church plans series of special services

Putman Bible College

TWIN FALLS — The Community Christian Church, 303 Grandview Drive S., has planned a series of special services with Bill Putman.

Putman will talk about living in the victory of restoration and the joy and peace of renewed relationships. Services are set for 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday. The Sunday evening service is presented in cooperation with the Intermountain Church Planters Association.

Putman is the minister of the King's Christian Church and executive director of the Montana Christian Evangelizing Association, both in Missoula, Mont. He previously served as public relations director at the Boise

St. Edward's hosts Bishop Tod Brown

TWIN FALLS — St. Edward's Catholic Church, 161 Sixth Ave. E., will host Bishop Tod Brown of the Diocese of Boise and representatives of four surrounding parishes for the Rite of Election at 10 a.m. today.

The Rite of Election is the second step in Christian initiation for those studying for entry into the Catholic faith. The rite closes the first period of study and commitment and marks the beginning of the final, more intense preparation during the period of Lent. Admission to election belongs to the bishop, which makes him the presiding celebrant for the event.

Today's Rite of Election is for 20 people from St. Edward's, 11 from the St. Nicholas Parish in Rupert, seven from St. Jerome's Parish in Jerome, three from Our Lady of the Snows in sun Valley and one from St. Anthony's in Wendell.

The Idaho Council of Catholic Women will host a reception in the parish hall following the ritual.

Hallelujah Brass present Sunday concert

TWIN FALLS — The Hallelujah Brass will present a special musical concert at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene, 1231 Washington St. N.

The Hallelujah Brass is a group of 20 students from Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa. The group performs for civic functions and in concert settings and church services throughout the Northwest, the British Isles, the Caribbean, New Zealand and eastern Australia. Jim Willis directs the group.

The public is invited to the free service. Child care will be provided.

Public invited to chorus performance

TWIN FALLS — The "Galatin Valley Male Chorus" will share special music Sunday at the Twin Falls Reformed Church, 1631 Grandview Drive N.

Services are set for 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. The public is invited. A freewill offering will be taken to help with traveling costs.

The Galatin Valley Male Chorus is a 40-voice male choir from Manhattan, Mont. It has been singing together and sharing the gospel through music for two years. Howard Walhof is director.

Lutheran church begins Lenten services

EDEN — The Trinity Lutheran Church, 1602 E. 1100 S. (three miles south of Eden) is beginning its series of Lent and services leading up to Easter this week.

Sunday school classes begin at 9:15 a.m., with worship following at 10:30 a.m. Lenten services, with Pastor Ronald Andersen, are set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays.

For more information, call 825-5277.

Worship commission plans luncheons

RUPERT — The Worship Commission of the Rupert United Methodist Church has planned its annual series of noon luncheons and speakers during Lent.

Each week will feature a light lunch at noon in the fellowship hall. A guest speaker will talk for 15 minutes. A freewill donation will be taken to help with the cost of food, and any profit will be divided between the Community Oasis and the Ministerial Association.

Speakers planned through March are Duane Knos this Tuesday, Carol Thompson from the Small Church Center in Filer on March 1, Terry Figgins from the Rupert Christian Church on March 8, Steve Oglevie from the Rupert Church of the Nazarene on March 15, Jim and Barbara Rodgers on March 22 and Lucky Bourn on March 29.

For more information, call 436-3354.

Nazarene church sets Family Skate Night

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene has planned a Family Skate Night for 7 to 9:15 p.m. Thursday at Skateland on Kimberly Road.

Cost is $3 per person. The event is sponsored by the Magic Valley Churches of the Nazarene.

Catholic parish sets Lenten luncheons

JEROME — St. Jerome's Catholic Parish has planned a series of Lenten luncheons.

The Catholic Church Women will serve a soup and sandwich lunch with pie for dessert from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Friday and March 4, 11, 18 and 25 in the parish hall. Cost is $3 per person.

Performance precedes ice cream social

TWIN FALLS — The Jubilation Singers, Jubilation Ringers and Jubilation Bells of the First United Methodist Church in Boise will perform at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the First United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E.

The group of 30 junior high singers and handbell ringers will perform a variety of sacred songs for approximately 45 minutes. Stephen and Susan Taylor will direct. An ice cream social follows.

The public is invited and admission is free.

Ascension Priory offers 4 Lenten sessions

JEROME — Ascension Priory is offering a Lenten series consisting of four evening sessions.

"Spirituality in Adult Development: Growing Up and Growing Old Gracefully" looks at the spirituality connected with the tasks of the adult. Presenters will be Father Boniface Lautz, OSB, and Father Joel Kehoe, OSB.

Boniface has extensive background in ministry with the elderly and dying; and Kehoe, who has a master's of arts degree in counseling psychology, works with couples and families.

Sessions are set for 7:30 to 9 p.m. March 3, 10, 16 and 24 at the Ascension Priory, 541 E. 100 S. An offering of $5 per person per session is suggested. For more information or to register, call Kehoe at 324-2377.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thompson, The Times-News, P.O. Box 348, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Dow falls 35 as Treasury bonds dive again

Knight-Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — The Dow industrial index fell 35 points Friday to close at 3887 as the U.S. Treasury bond market tumbled for a second straight day amid rising fears that U.S. inflation may become more troublesome in coming months, prompting further tightening actions by the Federal Reserve.

Such tightening, in a worst-case scenario, could reverse the massive flow of money from interest-bearing accounts into stock mutual funds over the past three years. It could eventually stifle the U.S. economic recovery, which many economists believe only recently, in the fourth quarter of 1993, began to gather momentum.

The U.S. 30-year bond, up 3/32 as stocks opened, rolled over at mid-morning and did not stop falling until early afternoon, when it was down as much as 14 points. Yields rose as high as 6.64 percent from a session low of 6.58 percent.

Since Oct. 1, October, long yields have risen from an all-time low of 5.77 percent to Friday's intraday high. Moreover, the rise, on a technical basis, appears to be accelerating, analysts said.

By tumbling in tandem with bonds, the stock market shook off the clear upside bias from its third-Friday explosions of equity derivatives, which otherwise might have boosted prices.

Before the market opened, the New York Stock Exchange reported buy-side imbalances of 50,000 shares or more to Friday's expirations among nearly a dozen major blue-chip stocks, although major buy-side imbalances tied to the settlements of index futures near the close fell to only two stocks.

There apparently were some sell-on-close orders tied to the expirations of the February series of common stock options.

Nor was the damage generally deemed over by the market's close. Continuing, atrocious action in the bellwether Dow utility index — which peaked in September and has been locked in a clear downturn ever since — suggested more grief ahead for stocks as it has sliced downward through major resistance at 215.00 this week.

MK seeks closer ties to Mexico in move

The Associated Press

BOISE — Morrison Knudsen Corp. is moving its Boise-based Mining Group headquarters to San Antonio, Texas, this summer, to be closer to its coal mines and poised for expansion into Mexico.

The company said Friday that the move would place 88 percent of the Mining Group's domestic personnel in one location while affecting about 40 of its 1,671 Boise employees.

The Mining Group already has more than 100 salaried employees at three Texas locations, and two-thirds of its 10 million tons of domestic coal production is in Texas.

"As management, marketing, engineering and administrative staffs move closer to field operations, direct communication will be enhanced and the operational mines will be better served," Mining Group President Robert Timstman said in a news release. "We look forward to the move which will further strengthen our competitiveness in a changing marketplace."

Morrison Knudsen also cited plans for expanding into Mexico to take advantage of the North American Free Trade Agreement as a benefit of the move.
