Nancy dazzles crowd but Tonya stumbles

The Associated Press

HAMAR, Norway — The showdown over, there was Nancy Kerrigan, showered with flowers after a nearly perfect performance.

And there was Tonya Harding, staring from a VIP booth, applauding with everyone else.

Maybe winning is the best revenge. Seven weeks after a knee clubbing that Harding's ex-husband admits he planned, Kerrigan skated an elegant technical program Wednesday that entranced a sellout crowd and put her in position for a gold medal Friday.

Harding bungled two jumps and skated tentatively throughout, landing in 10th place with no chance of a medal.

"It's hard to explain the feeling you get. I'm just really proud of myself," Kerrigan said.

Sixteen-year-old world champion Oksana Baiul of Ukraine was second and European champion Surya Bonaly of France was third heading into Friday's free skate, worth two-thirds of the total score. Two-time Olympic champion Katarina Witt, dressed as Robin Hood, but finished sixth. Kerrigan, looking regal and confident, seemed to brush aside the Jan. 6 attack and skated the performance of her life.

More than 100 million Americans and a billion more viewers around the world were expected to watch the most provocative drama in Olympic history.

The night couldn't have been more magical for Kerrigan. The next-to-last skater, she was introduced to the loudest ovation in the 6,000-seat Olympic Amphitheatre. Dressed in white chiffon accented by black velvet, she smiled widely at a banner pleading, "Marry Me Nancy" hung at the

Law may settle who will succeed state school chief

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Who will run to succeed Jerry Evans as state superintendent of public instruction depends largely on who state law will permit to run.

In an emotional news conference Wednesday, Evans announced he would not run for a fifth term as Idaho's top school official. His announcement took many political observers by surprise, and touched off a flurry of speculation as to who might run for his job.

Last month, former Post Falls school superintendent Anne Fox declared her candidacy for the post. So far, she is the only announced candidate, although such names as former Meridian superintendent Nick Hallett and former state Sen. Gail Bray have been mentioned.

But Bray, a Boise teacher, told The Times-News she wasn't interested in running, even if the law were changed to allow her to do so.

Under current state law, only people with valid Idaho school-administrator certificates, like Hallett, can serve as superintendent of public instruction. According to the state Department of Education, only 1,740 people have such certificates.

Potential superintendents also must be college graduates and be "actively engaged in educational work in the state public schools or in the state educational institutions."

For years, both liberal and conservative forces have sought to loosen these restrictions, with little success. Two bills to remove some of the qualifications were pending in the House until Wednesday, when House Education Chairman Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, pulled them back into his committee for further work.

One bill, sponsored by Rep. Clint Stennett, D-Ketchum, would remove the requirement for an administrator's certificate. The other bill, sponsored by Rep. Fred Tilman, R-Boise, would require only that candidates have a bachelor's degree.

Easement may be laid out to protect Oregon Trail ruts

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Oregon Trail right-of-way may be treated like any other highway to protect the old wagon ruts through the desert south of Jerome.

Actual ruts from the wagons traveling the Oregon Trail are visible between Highway 93 and Shoshone Falls on land owned by the state of Idaho. The state Department of Lands has advised the Jerome Historical Society that an easement along the trail, similar to a major highway, is the best way to protect the trail from destruction by developers, said Howard Kestie, Department of Land area supervisor.

"We're doing a land-use plan, but we can't guarantee the trail will be protected, if an easement isn't in place," he said. Developers could build in the area in the future and would need water and sewer lines installed across the trail.

"We'd have to put them where they'd do the least damage to the trail," Kestie said. A requirement for a frontage road could also present a problem, he said.

The Historical Society has established

White House holds temper over spy case

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration sought Wednesday to keep U.S.-Russian relations from suffering a major setback, even as intelligence sources blamed the deaths of two agents on the CIA official who has been accused of spying for the Kremlin.

Faced with congressional calls for an immediate suspension of Russian aid, the White House warned of diplomatic reprisals unless Moscow ceases its espionage activities in the United States and cooperates with efforts to assess the damage done to U.S. intelligence by accused spy Aldrich Hazen Ames.

Ames, the former head of the CIA's Soviet counterintelligence division, and his wife were arrested on espionage charges Monday. The government contends that since 1985 they traded intelligence secrets first to the Soviets and then to the Russian Federation for payments totaling $1.5 million.

"This is a very serious case and it has to be pursued aggressively and we will do that," President Clinton told reporters at the White House.

On Capitol Hill, the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said the damage inflicted on the CIA's intelligence-gathering operations in the former Soviet Union had been "enormous" during the nine years that Aldrich is alleged to have been a Kremlin "mole."

"If assuming some executions occurred," DeConcini said, refusing to elaborate.

Former intelligence officials told the Los Angeles Times that at least two CIA agents, both Russians, were executed after being caught while Ames was providing Moscow with information about the CIA's intelligence-gathering abilities in the former Soviet Union.

The old schoolhouse, which served as the West Point Grange for 40 years, was designed by the same architects who designed the Idaho State House, according to longtime Grange secretary Audrey Schiffer.

Grange hall reverts to school district

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — After more than 40 years as a grange hall, an old country school house west of Wendell has been returned to the school district.

And the school district is going to sell it. Trustees said this month that the West Point Grange and its acre of land is being assessed and will be sold as soon as possible.

The old schoolhouse was deeded to the grange in 1952, with the provision that if the building ceased to be used for community purposes, ownership would return to the school district, Superintendent Larry Manly said.

The grange recently disbanded, he said, so the property has come back to the school.

But the district has no use for the cinder block building, located a half-mile south of the West Point Store on the main road to Buhl, Manly said.

Audrey Schiffer, of Wendell, who was secretary for the West Point Grange for 36 years, said this farmer's social organization had been on the decline for quite a number of years.

"The younger people aren't interested in it at all," she said. "Nowadays it's just an entirely different situation."

In the heyday of the grange, Schiffer recalled, West Point had 60 to 70 active young members who worked together on dozens of community service projects, had big dinners together, held regular dances and socialized at card parties.

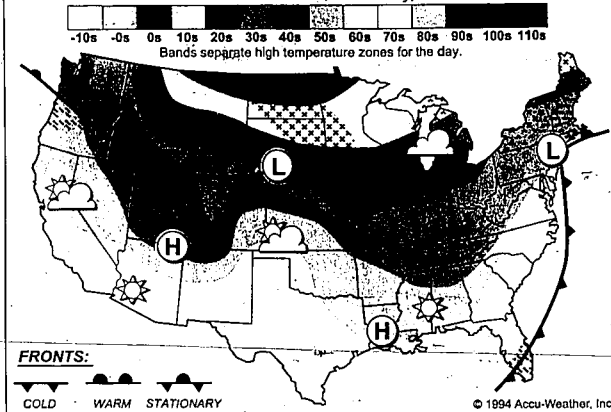

When they decided to let the charter go, the group was down to nine active members with only one under age 60.

"The rest of us are all in our 70s and 80s," Schiffer said. "We couldn't afford the upkeep."

Snow spreads over much of nation; rain falls on East Coast

The Associated Press

Heavy snow spread across the Northwest, Midwest and East as Wednesday, rain fell from the Atlantic Coast to the Appalachians and temperatures rose in the South.

At least several inches of snow fell from Iowa to Maryland. In Wisconsin, up to 15 inches fell in Juneau County and 11 fell in Springfield and Victory. In Illinois, 8 to 11 inches fell on the Chicago area. Ten inches were on the ground in Lewistown, Pa., and 8 inches fell near Frederick, Md.

Winter storm warnings were in effect through today across Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine and eastern sections of Upstate New York.

Up to a foot of snow was reported in parts of Washington state, Oregon, Montana and Idaho.

Weather summary

A winter storm warning for the northern and central mountains and a high wind warning for the upper Snake River valley and highlands were in effect through midnight Wednesday.

A strong surface low pressure center over the Idaho Panhandle is expected to move into central Montana today but a strong pressure gradient over eastern Idaho was still causing gusty wind Wednesday afternoon and evening. This storm produced heavy snow in the northern and central mountains. Residents are advised to avoid travel into the areas covered by Wednesday's storm and wind warnings.

Clouds covered the state, and light rain was reported at Rexburg and St. Anthony. There were reports of nearly 10 inches of new snow at Island Park.

Temperatures at mid-afternoon were in the 40s in the north and southwest and in the 20s in the southeast. Wind chills were near zero in some areas.

The highest temperature in the state Wednesday was 45 degrees at Hagerman and Lewiston. St. Anthony reported the lowest at 4 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Wednesday, the highest temperature was 86 at Lakeland, Melbourne and Miami, Fla. Glendive, Mont. reported the lowest at 17 below zero.

Warmer air was headed toward the northern and mid-Atlantic states, and snow was changing to rain. Flood watches were posted through Thursday across parts of Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

Rain fell from portions of the mid- and south Atlantic Coast into the southern Appalachians and along the Gulf Coast. Severe thunderstorms produced tornadoes and golf ball-sized hail near Corpus Christi, Texas.

About 1K inches of rain fell at National Airport in Washington, D.C.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 70s and 80s on the south Atlantic and Gulf coasts. A high of 79 in Pensacola, Fla., broke the record for Feb. 23 of 78 set in 1949.

Temperatures were in the 50s and 60s as far north as eastern Kentucky, southern Ohio and West Virginia.

Black said he pulled back the bills because both were up for amendments, and there was confusion about which amendments would be proposed for which bill and why two separate bills were trying to change the same sections of law.

Black's committee will decide Monday which bill to send back out to the full House, either with or without amendments. He said he didn't think Evans' decision to retire would affect the legislative process, though some of the initial impetus for removing the qualifications arose from anti-Evans sentiment.

Evans' departure leaves an open seat, and presumably more people would be interested in running for it now than if Evans had decided to run for a fifth term.

That increased interest, combined with too much loosening of qualifications, could result in a highly politicized office, warned Sen. Laird Noh, a Kimberly Republican who is vice-chair of the Senate Education Committee.

Evans' friends and critics alike have praised him for being a steadfast advocate of the schools in his 16 years as superintendent, rather than pushing any outside agenda.

"He tends to be more educationally oriented than politically oriented," said Twin Falls Superintendent-Terrill Donich. "His bottom line has always been the kids, and that's sometimes gotten him in trouble with members of his own party."

If he were an advocate for one narrow interest or another in the ongoing educational debate, Noh said, the schools could end up paying the price.

"I'm very concerned with maintaining standards, and I'm also concerned we don't end up with a schools superintendent who's elected by a real minority in a primary election," he said. "One way to guard against that is to set reasonable standards for the job."

For Noh, "reasonable standards" might mean either an administrator's certificate or a master's degree in business administration, combined with "strong experience" in education.

a preservation committee to survey the land and prepare a map prior to submitting a request for an easement, said Clair Ricketts, president of the Jerome Historical Society. Donations are needed to fund the easement application, he said.

The Oregon Trail is visible for about one mile from Highway 93 north of the Jerome Bridge. A sign along the highway describes the historic location.

"It is the only place in the United States where there is a parking place so tourists can pull off the highway and actually look at the Oregon Trail," Ricketts said. The trail is also visible near Shoshone Falls, though about half of the three miles of trail markings have been destroyed, he said.

Future plans include construction of a bike trail along the trail, Ricketts said.

Elderly oppose CPR following cardiac arrest

BOSTON (AP)—Elderly people say they would prefer not to have CPR for cardiac arrest after they learn how slim their chances of survival are, a study concludes.

The researchers found that many people who initially favor CPR change their minds after they understand the long odds of getting better. "Most seniors are good gamblers," said Dr. Donald J. Murphy. "It's not the life-sustaining machinery that intimidates them. They just don't want to be on for any length of time if the prognosis is poor."

CPR—cardiopulmonary resuscitation—is used to shock the heart back to life following cardiac arrest. Murphy and colleagues surveyed 371 patients over a one-year period at a geriatrics clinic in Denver.

Initially, 41 percent said they would like to have CPR if their hearts stopped while they were being treated for an acute illness.

But when they were told that their chances of surviving were only between 10 percent and 17 percent, half of them changed their minds. Just 22 percent still wanted CPR.

Asked what treatment they would want if they had a chronic illness in which they were expected to live less than a year, 11 percent initially said they would choose CPR.

But after learning their chances of surviving long enough to be discharged were between zero and 5 percent, half were no longer interested in CPR.

The researchers said older patients understand information about likely health outcomes.

"I said to myself, 'OK, this is it. This is the Olympics,'" she said. The bronze medalist at the 1992 Olympics hit everything, from a double flip with her hands at her side to spins in which she reached heavenward.

Even before she finished, the crowd was clapping and cheering. When the music stopped, hundreds of American flags waved.

Kerrigan's coach, Ery Scottford, leaped in the air then gave Kerrigan a bear hug as she left the ice.

"This was my goal, to be here," she said. "It would have been great to have the chance to defend my (national) title. I'm so glad I could be here anyway."

A huge roar greeted the marks, which included six 5.9s of a possible 6.0. Seven judges had her first; Kerrigan had made her job easy, erasing any suspicions she might get a sympathy vote by outskating the field.

If anyone in the crowd regarded Harding as a villain, it was not apparent by the cheers and applause she received. Banners in the crowd read "Frank Loves You Tonya" and "USA Go For the Gold Tonya."

She folded her hands in prayer and gazed heavenward before starting her routine, but skated an uninspiring program to music from "Much Ado About Nothing."

Harding, 23, sat sneezing as marks ranging from 4.8 for technical merit to 5.6 for artistry were flashed on the scoreboard.

"You can't be perfect every time," Harding said. "I was happy with it."

After skating, Harding sat with her coach and her lawyer in a sky-box and watched as she dropped in the standings. She clapped grimly after Kerrigan's performance came to a triumphant end.

Owl gets new beak

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — An owl with no beak bite got help when a nature center staff called in a dentist.

The great horned owl lost her lower beak in either a fight or a cage mishap last year. Lately the top of the owl's beak began to deteriorate, said John Walker of the Chet Ager Nature Center in Lincoln's Pioneer Park.

Dentist Tom Fritsch, who once filled cavities and performed root canal surgery on zoo monkeys, was asked to help.

"If that beak falls off, the oral and nasal cavities would be exposed and that's the problem," Walker said Tuesday. An unprotected mouth cavity could cause infection or swallowing problems, she said.

Fritsch made a mold of the bird's mouth, had an acrylic beak made and attached it to the owl. The first one fell off.

He tried again Monday with a stronger adhesive and it was still on Wednesday, according to naturalist Kay Young.

"Hang in there, baby," Fritsch urged his feathered patient as he attached the fake beak to her face.

Woman found frozen lives, leaves hospital

CHICAGO (AP) — A 91-year-old woman found frozen to the floor of her unheated home a month ago was released from the hospital.

Victoria Moryn had two toes amputated and will need physical therapy, Armella Bernacki, a spokeswoman for St. Mary of Nazareth Hospital, said Wednesday. "She's in good condition. She's healthy," Bernacki said. Moryn was released Tuesday and will be staying with friends, she said.

Moryn, a widow who lived alone, was discovered Jan. 17 in her unheated home, unconscious and kneeling barefoot in an inch-thick layer of ice from leaking pipes.

Administration wants sharper Northwest logging cutbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Stricter controls of logging on federal land in the Pacific Northwest were proposed Wednesday by the Clinton administration as a way to save more fish and wildlife.

The government's latest plan calls for allowing about 10 percent less logging in some of the region's oldest forests than the administration had initially proposed last year.

Logging would average 1.1 billion board feet annually over 10 years instead of the 1.2 billion that Clinton had projected when he unveiled the original plan last summer.

But harvests may be even smaller in the next few years while the government seeks to lift a 1991 court injunction that halted logging across millions of acres to protect the northern spotted owl.

The spotted owl was declared a threatened species in 1990.

The new plan would reduce the timber harvest by expanding no-logging zones along streams and rivers in Oregon, Washington and Northern California.

Environmentalists had warned the original plan was illegal because it didn't go far enough to protect the habitat for threatened fish species as well as the spotted owl.

Officials at the White House and the Agriculture and Interior departments briefed members of Congress and their staffs on the proposal Wednesday.

"I'm pleased they are doing more to protect streams," said Rep. Elizabeth Furse, D-Ore. "We have to protect a $1 billion fishery."

The plan could be changed again before the administration submits it to a federal judge in Seattle for approval next month, said administration officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Environmentalists and timber industry officials alike had predicted the annual logging levels would drop below 1 billion board feet annually under the revised plan announced Wednesday.

The same lands produced more than 5 billion board feet of timber a year during the 1980s.

In 1991, U.S. District Judge William

Dwyer halted logging on government forests in the region, ruling that the harvests on government land were violating environmental laws.

The revised stream protection in the new Clinton plan actually would have reduced annual harvests to about 900 million board feet if no other changes were made.

However, the proposal calls for an additional 67 million board feet of timber a year in California by allowing timber companies to cut younger trees.

It takes about 10,000 board feet to build a typical single-family home.

Environmentalists said it was not clear whether the new restrictions would satisfy conservation groups, who have threatened more legal action to stop logging.

"We applaud that they continue to try to get it right," said Jim Owens, director of the Western Ancient Forest Campaign.

But Brock Evans, vice president of the National Audubon Society, said, "It doesn't seem like they're listening. It's a one-third of the remaining ancient forests open to logging."

Cycles may boost global warming

NEW YORK (AP) — Average temperatures from North America to Europe go through long-term natural cycles that may boost the effect of global warming there in coming decades, a new study suggests.

The cycles, where they occur, may now be adding to the effect of heat-trapping greenhouse gases, said Michael E. Schlesinger.

But he cautioned that scientists cannot yet predict how fast the cycles will warm or exactly how long the warming phases will last. He also said climate is influenced by many things, making it difficult to predict temperature trends.

The oscillations, which take 50 years to 88 years to complete a warming-and-cooling cycle, appear over the North Atlantic Ocean, North America, Western Europe and Northern Africa in data from 1858 to 1992, the study said.

VA head decries homeless vet totals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Up to a quarter of a million veterans are homeless, and the inability to help more escape the streets is an "American tragedy," Veterans Affairs Secretary Jesse Brown said Wednesday.

Brown, in testimony before the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, said the number of veterans on the streets or in shelters has not decreased in recent years despite "spending millions and millions of dollars" every year.

"This is an American tragedy, and it must not be allowed to stand," he said.

White House welfare plan due April 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration will submit its welfare reform proposal to Congress by April 1, Budget Director Leon Panetta said Wednesday.

Panetta announced the date while testifying before the Senate Finance Committee on the administration's proposed 1995 budget. President Clinton had said in his State of the Union address that the proposal would be ready sometime in the spring.

Meanwhile, an administration official said the administration's welfare reform task force is leaning toward imposing a two-year time limit on welfare benefits on the youngest and newest mothers on the rolls, while exempting older women.

Clinton has promised to provide day care, education and training for parents on welfare and then require those who are still unemployed after two years to join a work program.

But the plan could cost as much as $7 billion a year when fully implemented, money the administration has promised to find by cutting other government programs.

By limiting the new programs to parents born after 1970 and new applicants, the cost would be significantly less than $7 billion a year, the official said Wednesday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The new requirements would affect about 1 million of the 4.5 million parents who receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the official said.

"The rationale behind it would be to focus attention on the younger parents, to really make an effort to break the cycle of welfare dependency at the beginning," the official said.

At the same time, the administration hopes to discourage young women from having children. Its plan is expected to require most mothers under 18 to live with their parents to qualify for benefits.

House stops postal probe vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House bowed to the wishes of a federal prosecutor Wednesday and called off a scheduled vote on whether to investigate allegations of embezzlement at the House Post Office.

At the last moment, the House leadership of both parties agreed to a request by Eric H. Holder Jr., the U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, to delay a probe until a federal grand jury completes its investigation of the post office.

Holder said the grand jury probe, which is nearing completion, could be damaged by a parallel investigation by the House ethics committee.

"I urge the House to refrain from such actions, and to affirm the paramount public interest in permitting the grand jury to determine fairly whether the criminal laws have been violated, whether by members of Congress or others," Holder wrote in a letter to House Speaker Thomas Foley and House Minority Leader Robert Michel.

"My request is all the more urgent now, as this important (grand jury) investigation is in its final stages and will be concluded in the near future."

Passage of a House resolution would be certain to embarrass Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Photographers wait outside the home of Aldrich and Marie Ames on Wednesday. The couple's neighborhood in Arlington, Va., is home to numerous military and government workers who don't talk much about their affairs.

Spy couple seemed like ideal neighbors

New York Daily News

ARLINGTON, Va. — They were a lovely couple, elegantly dressed, with an adorable little boy, a large but tasteful house and a well-tended yard. Rick and Maria Ames appeared to be the perfect Randolph Street neighbors — until they were arrested in one of the biggest spy scandals the nation has ever seen.

"I'm very surprised. They were very nice people and seemed to be ideal neighbors in every way," said William Rhoades, a retired government official who lives on the same winding, affluent street in Arlington, a suburb of Washington.

"He was a friendly fellow, not a stiff person, like other foreign service officers," Rhoades said of Aldrich (Rick) Ames, whom Rhoades last saw Monday morning, backing his red, $25,000 1992 Jaguar out of his driveway.

Neighbors said the Ameses were a couple who kept to themselves and never had loud parties. They exchanged Christmas cookies last year with neighbor Tommy Morton, a romance novelist, but she hardly knew them.

They built a tall wooden fence alongside the house, but it appeared to hide nothing more than a child's jungle gym in the hilly back yard.

Maria del Rosario Casas Ames — called Rosario — was sighted taking her preschool child, Paul, sledding, and the maid sometimes walked him down the street.

Rhoades' 17-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, described Maria Ames, a part-time graduate student at Georgetown University in Washington, as "intellectual looking" and "well-dressed."

The Ameses apparently had expensive tastes: A clean-wiped yellow trash can next to the garage held empty bottles of fashionable Pellegrino water and Italian wines.

The couple also had the front yard landscaped, William Rhoades said, and on Tuesday colorful Christmas lights still adorned the trees in front of the $540,000, gray two-story house that the couple paid for in cash.

It would seem that a government worker — Ames told neighbors he worked for the Eastern Europe desk at the State Department — might give some next-door neighbors by acquiring such an expensive car and house on his $70,000-a-year salary.

But that wasn't the case. "I did think he paid too much for his house," said Jerry Groves, a retired schoolteacher who lives nearby. But "I'm a real estate agent."

Randolph Street may be the perfect setting place for a spy. Quiet and difficult to find in this Washington suburb, it's just minutes from downtown.

The neighborhood is full of retired military and government officials who know not to inquire too deeply into their neighbors' affairs.

Federal agencies immune from suits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agencies cannot be forced to pay when they violate someone's constitutional rights, the Supreme Court said Wednesday in sparing the government from potentially major financial losses.

Federal officials already can be sued over alleged constitutional violations under a 1971 Supreme Court ruling. Allowing such lawsuits against federal agencies would end the deterrent effect of the earlier ruling, Wednesday's unanimous decision said.

"If we were to recognize a direct action for damages against federal agencies, we would be creating a potentially enormous financial burden for the federal government," Justice Clarence Thomas wrote for the court.

Any such expansion of government liability should be left up to Congress, he added.

The court also issued separate decisions letting federal agencies refuse to give employees' home addresses to unions that want to use the information to seek new members, and making it easier for some people to win civil rights lawsuits against government officials.

The high court also ruled unanimously in the case regarding civil rights lawsuits against government officials.

Federal appeals courts must consider all legal precedents — even those not raised by the people who appeal — in reviewing rulings that shielded government officials from lawsuits, Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg wrote.

The decision reversed a ruling that said if a person fails to find the right legal precedent to support his case, it is not up to an appeals court to do it for him.

The case involved a man who said Idaho police improperly arrested him in his home without a warrant in April 1987. Charles K. Elder's lawyers failed to cite the right legal precedent.

The Supreme Court sent Elder's case back to a federal appeals court for further study, including a precedent his lawyers did not mention.

The case involving lawsuits against federal agencies stemmed from the 1982 firing of John H. Meyer from his job as an executive at Fidelity Savings and Loan in San Francisco.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. had been appointed federal receiver for the thrift, and Meyer was fired with no chance to contest the action. He sued the FSIC.

Meyer said California law gave him a constitutionally protected right to the job he had held for 16 years, and said the federal agency could not take his job away without giving him some type of due process, such as a hearing.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a $130,000 award a federal jury ordered the agency to pay. The Supreme Court overturned that ruling.

Thomas also wrote the court's unanimous opinion in the case involving union efforts to get federal workers' home addresses.

"Disclosure would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy," Thomas said.

Court upholds laws limiting Ute reservation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Utah authorities can prosecute Indians for crimes committed on a portion of the Ute Indian Tribe's reservation that was restored to the public domain nearly a century ago, the Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The 7-2 decision said federal laws enacted in 1902 and 1905 diminished the Ute and Ouray Reservations.

At stake, the justices had been told, was everything from law enforcement and regulations for hunting and environmental safety to business licensing and liquor laws for the more than 18,000 residents — only about 300 of them Indians — of the 400,000 acres in dispute.

The disputed land stretches over Duchesne, Uintah and Wasatch counties. The controversy did not affect an additional 1.2 million acres of the Ute reservation.

Robert Hagen was arrested and charged by state authorities in 1987 with selling marijuana out of his home in Myton, Utah. The town is located with the reservation's boundaries as set when it was created in 1861.

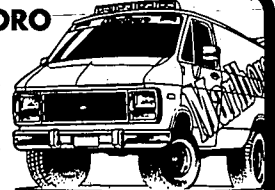

Hagen originally pleaded guilty but later withdrew his plea and argued that the state lacked the authority to prosecute him.

Journal reports U.S. develops latest generation of stealth fighter

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. Air Force apparently has developed a new stealth aircraft capable of spying or bombing, an authoritative British defense journal reported Wednesday.

Jane's International Defense Review published a drawing of the diamond-shaped plane, which strongly resembles a smaller version of the B-2 stealth bomber.

The unidentified aircraft has been seen in flight in several places across the southwestern United States and was captured on two videotapes, one made near Groom Lake Air Force Base in Nevada, the magazine said in its March issue.

The Air Force "is not in a position to comment on the story, one way or another," according to spokesman, Col. Doug Kennel, in Washington.

Jane's International Defense Review published this drawing of what the journal called the latest U.S. stealth aircraft. The aircraft reportedly has been seen flying over the Nevada desert.

and were never hit by Iraqi fire. The F-117 was put into service so quickly that some features of conventional fighters were omitted. "Compared with the F-117, the new aircraft would have greater range, all-weather sensors, greater weapons capacity" and perhaps new measures to frustrate advanced radars, Sweetman said. "The F-117 does not have any ability to hit targets that are covered by cloud. This aircraft could very likely do that," he said in an interview. The sketch is based on the assumption that the single-seat, twin-engine aircraft has a wingspan of about 66 feet and is no less than 40 feet at the center line. It probably weighs just over 30 tons fully loaded and could be powered by two General Electric F404 engines, Sweetman said.

He said the U.S. Air Force acquired 250 F404 engines during the F-117 program. Since 59 F-117s were built, there would be enough extra engines for between 35 and 40 twin-engine aircraft, leaving a 20 percent allowance for spares, he said.

Observers first assumed the aircraft was designed for reconnaissance, but other sources have identified it as an attack aircraft, Sweetman said.

He said it could be both — an attractive proposition when costs are rising and Pentagon budgets are shrinking.

Jane's has known about the plane for over a year but waited for "a sufficient body of evidence" before publishing, said Beal, the editor. In addition to the videotapes and eyewitness reports, Beal said there is a continuing Air Force requirement for stealth aircraft, which have become essential to modern warfare.

The United States is not building any more F-117 fighters and only 20 B-2 bombers have been authorized for production.

Nazis try to thrust down middle in Italy

Knight-Ridder News Service

The battle around Aprilia in the Anzio beachhead earlier had convinced the Germans that a drive from the west, down the Italian coast, would be too vulnerable to Allied naval guns.

An attack from the east across the Mussolini Canal was impractical because the ground was too soft for vehicles. Thus a powerful thrust down the middle by six divisions (Herman Goring Panzer, 3rd Panzer Grenadier, 4th Parachute and 65th, 114th and 715th Infantry) was planned. In reserve, ready for the final drive to the beach, were the 26th Panzer and the 29th Panzer Grenadier divisions plus a battalion of "Tiger" heavy tanks.

VI Corps commander Maj. Gen. John P. Lucas had redeployed his defending units. The battered 1st British Infantry Division had gone into reserve, replaced in the line by the newly arrived 56th British Infantry Division. The right was still held by the 3rd U.S. Infantry Division but its front was now shorter as the 45th U.S. Infantry Division moved in to hold the center — the area the Germans had chosen for their attack. The U.S. 1st Armored Division (minus Combat Command B which was still in southern Italy) was in mobile reserve.

The balance was 120,000 Germans against 100,000 Allies. At dawn on Feb. 16, 1944, the attack opened. While diversionary attacks pinned the 3rd and 56th Divisions, the main German assault fell on the 45th Division's 157th and 179th Infantry Regiments. The Americans were pushed back a mile by evening.

At midnight, the Germans resumed the attack, widening the gap despite the furious fire from Allied artillery and air strikes (including the use of heavy B-17 and B-24 bombers). The 45th Division could not hold and fell back. The 1st Armored counterattacked and while it could not retake the lost ground, it did stop the German panzers.

Tanker Sgt. Charles Keyser distinguished himself. He called in artillery strikes that knocked out seven enemy tanks. He then led his two-tank team on an offensive that destroyed several other German armored vehicles including three more tanks. Yet the Germans kept coming.

Faced with six new opponents, Keyser tried to withdraw but his tank was hit. Badly wounded, he managed to get away and stagger back to U.S. lines during the night.

The VI Corps was now on its final beachhead defensive line. All reserves were committed. It was stand or die. Rear echelon service troops were rushed forward as riflemen. 90-mm antiaircraft guns became direct fire antitank weapons. This was the crisis.

On Feb. 18 the Germans committed their last reserves: the 26th Panzer and 29th Panzer Grenadier. The battered regiments of the 45th division rallied once more. Fighting was hand-to-hand all along the line.

On paper, the 179th Regiment should no longer have existed, its losses had been so heavy — but it held.

Meanwhile the heaviest concentrations of artillery and bombing yet seen were poured on the enemy attackers. The Germans tried again on Feb. 19, but had lost their momentum.

The fighting was vicious, but the only serious penetration was thrown back by the 1st Armored fighting in support of the 45th Division. The crisis had passed.

On Feb. 29 the Germans tried to regain the Mussolini Canal but the 2nd Division smashed each assault. The Germans then assumed a defensive posture.

People play Social Security for sucker

The federal government has sent checks totaling more than $160,000 per year directly to a Denver liquor store owner, who then uses those taxpayer dollars to run a tab for 40 alcoholics who are supposed to be using the government money to get help for their problem.

That's just one example of how a federal program has gone startlingly wrong. Across the country, the government is paying hundreds of millions of dollars each year to feed the habits of drug addicts and alcoholics. Under this cockeyed policy, addicts and alcoholics receive federal benefits because they are disabled by their substance abuse. But the benefits often are then used to perpetuate the addictions, and the addicts and alcoholics ride along on a drug-laden train fueled by their continuing disabilities.

This disturbing program has come to light as a result of a year-long investigation by my staff on the Senate Special Committee on Aging and the General Accounting Office. The investigation examined the payment of benefits under the Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) programs. The GAO has estimated that last year the federal government paid $1.4 billion to 250,000 drug addicts and alcoholics who receive benefits under these two programs. But only 78,000 — less than one-third — are required to receive treatment or have a third party manage their benefits for them, and those controls are so lax that abuses abound. The other 172,000 are not required to receive treatment and often use their cash benefits to buy more drugs and alcohol.

The director of a homeless shelter in Denver reported that SSI is, in effect, "suicide on the installment plan" because the program provides ready cash to addicts and alcoholics with no strings attached for follow-up or treatment. In San Francisco, a drug addict used his disability benefits to buy high-grade drugs, then diluted them into small doses and realized huge profits by reselling them on the street. One mental health worker said his caseload of illegal drug users was 99.5 percent SSI recipients, and he reported several deaths from drug overdoses.

The purpose of the Social Security disability programs is to provide benefits to people who can't work because of medically certified physical or mental impairments. Drug addiction and alcoholism are qualifying disabilities under both programs. Determining disability is a five-step process, and if benefits are denied, there are avenues of appeal. Since it often takes a year or more to award benefits, and because benefits are retroactive to the date of application, it is not unusual for lump sums as large as $15,000 or $20,000 to be awarded to substance abusers — sometimes with devastating results.

The GAO has estimated that last year the federal government paid $1.4 billion to 250,000 drug addicts and alcoholics who receive benefits under (the Social Security Disability Insurance and Supplemental Security Income) programs.

Congress has tried with little success to build controls into the system. To stop payments from feeding addictions, it required that all SSI payments to addicts and alcoholics be paid to a third party. Congress also required that a disabled drug addict or alcoholic participate in a substance abuse treatment program, if such treatment is available, as a condition of receiving SSI benefits.

Neither of these policies applies to SSDI recipients, however, and the controls in place for the SSI program have not been well enforced.

The Social Security Administration has abdicated its responsibility by failing to adequately monitor whether recipients receive treatment. Maine, for example, is one of many states that have never had an agency approved by SSA to refer addicts and alcoholics to treatment and monitor their attendance.

Clearly, reform is needed. In conjunction with a number of other senators, I am introducing legislation this week to strengthen the treatment requirements and revamp the disability program by:

- Stopping the practice of putting cash directly in the hands of substance abusers. Benefits would be directed to an institution or approved agency to manage.

- Prohibiting distribution of lump sum retroactive payments to substance abusers until treatment is completed.

- Requiring that all addicts and alcoholics receive treatment.

- Requiring the Social Security Administration to conduct continuing reviews of individuals' eligibility and all state governments to have agencies to monitor addicts and alcoholics.

- Making additional treatment available for substance abusers.

- Removing from the rolls those who profit from such illegal activities as drug dealing, and setting tough penalties for those who defraud the disability programs.

Environment determines quality of education

Mr. Maughan, I taught reading, writing, arithmetic and geography today, as did all of my colleagues. I teach these subjects every day, although you claimed that my colleagues and I do not. Just what classrooms have you been in lately? Could it be that you haven't visited a classroom in 25 to 50 years and that you are commenting on issues with which you've had no recent experience? Most writers on educational issues of The Times-News make their lack of recent exposure to a classroom abundantly clear within their first sentences.

Coincidentally, your letter appeared next to an article citing the five strongest determinants of school success: Number of absences from school, number of hours spent watching television, number of homework pages, quantity and quality of reading material in the home, and the presence of two parents in the home. Return these factors to 1940s standards and your 50-year-old education you touted will work just fine!

If you were actually setting foot in any classrooms, you would discover what educators discover every day. Schools are made not so much by the strength of curriculums but by the strength of the environments and society from which the children come.

South Central Board of Health supports bill

We support Senate Bill 1478, which was introduced by Sen. Joyce McRoberts and establishes an Idaho Health Care Commission. It represents a sound approach to coordinated oversight of health care and health planning.

Sen. McRoberts has conducted a comprehensive study both within and outside of Idaho to identify a mechanism to set us on track for control of our health care solutions at the local and state level. The approach also supports the many efforts in our Magic Valley communities to collaborate to improve health and health care.

Our board has had the opportunity to provide input into this bill. We agree with its approach and believe it supports local solutions through collaboration. It represents well the interest of the consumer of health care and the residents of our communities.

Pigs in Congress support those who elected them

I, like most Americans, worry about our national debt. I've come to one conclusion about solving this matter. First, we have to persuade West Virginia and King Kong to secede from the union and he and Texas can form their own pork city or state or country, whichever ever suits them.

If that doesn't work, then Congress should move lock, stock and barrel (all of Washington) to West Virginia, and they can wallow in King Kong's piggery.

Washington used to have U.S. senators and congressmen. Now it has forsaken the United States to its own states, God blessed America, and Congress has damned it.

What else can we do when everyone works a tit-for-tat with pork. How can we build up our economy as long as our fat pigs keep feeding on the ones that elected them? The whole mess is sickening, so like other millions, we surrender to the filth that no one can help.

Movie not in Twin Falls, despite number of theaters

I've been waiting for the movie "Schindler's List" to come to Twin Falls. There is surely a monopoly on theaters in the area!

I'd be willing to pay a little more for admission to see a new release sooner. Maybe others feel the same?

Think Smart... Think Safety

Larry Golay

Dear Magic Valley,

Did you know that your garage door and electric opener may be a risk to your pets, children, or even yourself?

In 1993, research proved time and time again that electric operators were not sensitive enough to protect against injury.

The doors coming down would not always reverse upon contact with items underneath.

The research brought forth a new government Law "UL 325" that states electric openers are required 3 forms of sensitivity.

One: The now existing pressure sensitivity.

Two: Photo eyes — new for the entrapment law.

Three: A 30 second delay new, meaning return to up position.

All openers that date back prior to 1981 should not be repaired — but rather removed. For anyone in the door industry to work on or repair them is illegal.

All openers dating 1982 to 1993 are marginal in safety but do have the pressure sensitivity system.

If you would like more information on safety features of garage doors and openers, we at Overhead Door would more than welcome the opportunity to discuss these very important facts with you.

We will be at the Home and Garden Show this weekend with product samples, videos and representatives to answer any questions you may have.

Hope to see you there.

Entrust your safety to the specialists at Overhead Door Company. We care. Look for the Overhead Door banner.

Sincerely,
Larry Golay

Tigers grab win

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — Playing a nearly flawless game at College of Southern Idaho Wednesday, the Jerome Tigers left no doubt that they earned the Class A-2 District 4 championship.

Outplaying Burley all around, the Tigers downed the Bobcats 69-54 to gain a berth in the boys' state basketball tournament in Meridian next week. Burley can also travel to state if the Bobcats can win a one-game playoff against either Preston or Snake River at 1 p.m. Saturday at Pocatello High School.

The Tigers put all five starters into double-figure scoring and built a 54-33 lead by the end of the third quarter.

"Our kids knew they had something to prove tonight," said Jerome coach Brent Clark. "They came over and got the job done. They really did a great job of execution."

Through three periods, the Tigers made 22 of 41 shots from the field, outrebounded Burley 22-15 and had two turnovers to the Bobcats' 10.

Chris Williams scored 18 of his 22 points before halftime to spark Jerome to a 38-25 lead.

"They played a great game," said Burley coach Bill Cowell. "I think we can play better than we did, but I can't take anything away from Jerome. They shot the ball really well, and when you do that, you're going to win."

Aaron Bay added 12 points for the Tigers. Scott Holtzen, John Perry and Jacob Tolman scored 10 each.

After pulling out to a 21-14 edge in the first period, Jerome scored their first eight points of the second quarter and jumped to a 35-17 edge before Burley could get back into the game.

Burley's Bob Platts tallied the first basket of the third quarter to trim the lead to 11, but the Tigers scored the next 10 points.

"It feels like a ton of bricks has been lifted off our shoulders," Clark said. "We had a lot of expectations on us from the community."

Jerome plays the 8:30 p.m. game in the first round at state Thursday, March 3, against the second-place team from District 1-2. If Burley wins Saturday, it would play at 2 p.m. Thursday against the Boise area champion.

"I hope we don't see Burley again until the state finals, and I hope we're there again," Clark said, rooting for a Jerome-Burley rematch of the 1992 Class A-2 state championship game.

Wendell whips Filer for 2nd straight title

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

WENDELL — The Wendell graduating class of 1994 completed its two-year reign in Fourth District Class A-3 basketball, beating Filer 57-46 Wednesday night for its second straight title and trip to state.

The Trojans will meet the winner of the 5th-6th district runner-up playoff Saturday in the 8:30 p.m. game next Thursday when the state playoffs begin at Centennial High School in Meridian.

Filer has a second chance to gain a spot in state, playing the third district runner-up in a 3:30 p.m. Saturday playoff in Mountain Home.

Murtaugh bests Carey, 67-59

By Ron Gates
Times-News writer

JEROME — Not even five consecutive missed bonus free throw opportunities over the closing two minutes were enough to keep Murtaugh from successfully defending its District 4, Class A-4 boys' basketball championship Wednesday.

The Red Devils, ranked No. 5 among teams by the Associated Press, gave lie to the polls by topping second-ranked Carey 67-59.

"We were fortunate," said Murtaugh coach Craig

CSI teams could rank 3rd in finals

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It is stated — not without some glee — throughout the Scenic West Conference that College of Southern Idaho's finishing out of first place is good for the league.

Maybe so. More appreciated, to be sure, outside of Magic Valley. But it certainly made a lot of people happy. For the first time in a long while, the season does go into the final weekend with a strong possibility that the top four teams could be shuffled in both the men's and women's division. That also would scramble the first-round pairings and bracketing for the regional finals, slated to open at Dixie College in St. George, Utah, next Wednesday.

Both CSI teams have a chance to place third, which would align them with the Nos. 2, 7 and 6 teams in the lower bracket. "Utah Valley and Eastern Utah appear to have the one and two seeds clinched among women. CSI is in the hunt with four other schools for third — and one of the teams the women face will be Eastern Utah."

The men could only get there by knocking off Colorado Northwestern and Eastern Utah this weekend and hoping Snow and Dixie handle Ricks in Utah. CSI then would win third on basis of conference tie-breakers.

The CSI men swept CEU and Colorado Northwestern in the first conference weekend while the women beat CNCC but lost to Eastern Utah.

Colorado will be the first in this weekend, the women squaring off at 6 p.m. and the men at 8 p.m. Eastern Utah comes in Saturday with Wendy's providing a coupon for a single burger to anyone entering the gymnasium before halftime.

"The men's seeding race isn't over. Dixie has the homecourt locked up but a win by North Idaho there Friday night would give the Cardinals the top seed and drop Dixie to second." "The only thing we can do is concentrate on taking care of business here and then seeing what happens elsewhere," said CSI Coach Steve Irons.

"We expect Colorado Northwestern to come in loose as a good with nothing to win but nothing to lose, either."

CSI needed an overtime to nip Colorado in December, largely because Shaun Moore and Damon Dailey collected 27 points apiece in bright displays of single-handed combat with the CSI defense.

"It appears Colorado is still doing the same things," said Irons. "A lot of clear out and one-on-one. We can't let that happen."

Eastern Utah has lost one of the starters from December but brings back the players who hit the Eagles hardest.

Rosell Ellis is averaging 17 points and 8 rebounds as a swing man while Leon Carter has been working the middle for 2.8 blocks and 7.8 rebounds.

"We watched Eastern play two games last week at Dixie and Snow. They were right in it both nights until the last few minutes when the favorites stretch out to win by double figures. It seems they are having a little trouble finishing but can play with anyone in the region," Irons said.

But it was just the opposite in Price when CSI saw a 12-point lead melt to nothing over the last five minutes but won on two Shawn Bankhead free throws.

"Defensively, I'd say the key was definitely Ellis. He hurt us last time — along with (Toby) Bush who got 23 against us the first time," Irons said.

No conference team has handled the CSI women like Eastern Utah did in December.

The inside punch of Natalie Hawks with 23 points and Jennifer Heuseveldt with 14 and the outside scoring of Angela Ross put the Eagles away early as Eastern racked up a 96-72 win.

Much of that was due to Eastern Utah's willingness to run the court — especially their taller girls — while CSI did a poor job of falling into defensive transition.

After that, CSI and Coach Joel Bate, made a good run through league, starting with Colorado Northwestern, until

Legion baseball league needs players for spring

JEROME — The American Legion baseball league is recruiting players for the spring season.

Jerome baseball players, 16 to 18 years old, who want to play on American Legion teams, are asked to attend a meeting Saturday at 1 p.m. The meeting will be held at 515 12th Ave. E. in Jerome.

Anyone wanting to play, and unable to attend the meeting, can call John Harding at 324-3125 before Saturday.

Northern Arizona AD takes same post at Colorado State

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Northern Arizona athletic director Tom Jurich has been appointed to an identical post at Colorado State University. CSU officials announced Tuesday.

Jurich, 37, will take over the job at Colorado State, a member of the Western Athletic Conference, on March 1 and has been paid $95,000 annually. He has been serving as Northern Arizona's athletic director.

Jurich began his career at Northern Arizona, a member of the Big Sky Conference, in 1984 as a special assistant to the athletic director and worked his way up in the athletic department.

Colorado State President Al Yates said he liked Jurich's "external connections," which should help improve the university's national stature.

Blair leaves Olympics with 5th medal

Harding stumbles, places 10th; Kerrigan tops figure skaters

The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — It was a day for Olympic goodbyes — a fond farewell to Bonnie Blair and her five gold medals. A too-soon sendoff to the U.S. hockey team and its hopes. A harsh see-you-later for Tonya Harding and her longshot bid.

Throw in a big hello for Nancy Kerrigan, who put seven nightmare weeks behind her to grab first place in a women's figure skating competition rife with intrigue and excitement.

With Harding looking on, Kerrigan flashed a wide grin after completing a near-perfect Wednesday night run over the ice in Hamar. Once the best scores of the night were posted, she stood — clutching an armful of flowers — and waved to a cheering crowd, relishing her moment of triumph.

Harding stared stonily from a private box and applauded politely at the end of Kerrigan's program.

Blair, in her farewell after four Olympics, skated to a record-breaking fifth gold medal Wednesday to emphatically end the greatest career of any American Winter Games athlete and any U.S. woman Olympian ever.

Blair got the medal, but Harding and Kerrigan got all the attention — and Harding took the ice first, her hands folded in silent prayer. "Go for the gold, Tonya!" read one sign in the crowd, which applauded as she skated out.

Wearing a gaudy red outfit with matching makeup, she stumbled on her first jump — a triple lutz combination. She did not fall, but wound up in 10th place — out of the running for a medal with Friday's free skate to come.

Kerrigan was followed in the standings by Oksana Baiul of the Ukraine, Surya Bonaly of France and Lu Chen of China. The sentimental favorite, Katarina Witt, wound up with sixth and an outside shot at a medal.

Harding's routine was a victory of sorts, since only the threat of a $25 million lawsuit and a last-minute deal with the United States Olympic Committee cleared the way for her appearance.

More than 100 million Americans were expected to tune in for the on-ice conclusion to the off-ice soap opera, which concludes Friday with the free skate.

Witt, making her Olympic comeback after six years away, was unflustered by the massive scrutiny. Despite a good-looking routine, she received a series of unimpressive

Laws, budget on Fish, Game agenda

BOISE — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission will take care of largely housekeeping and legislative matters in a meeting March 3-4 in Boise.

The meeting begins at 9 a.m. March 3 at the Fish and Game Department headquarters, 600 S. Walnut. A public hearing will be scheduled, date and time to be announced.

Legislative update and budget planning should top the agenda.

Wildlife exhibit goes on display in Boise

BOISE — A special non-game and watchable wildlife exhibit will be displayed by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at the Boise Town Square Mall.

The non-game program assists more than 400 species of amphibians, birds, fish, mammals and reptiles that are classified as non-game or endangered or threatened species because they are not normally hunted, fished or trapped.

Department biologists and volunteers will be on hand to answer questions and hand out brochures and informational packets.

Representatives of the Idaho Falconers Association will attend, displaying falcons, hawks and owls.

Art enthusiasts help Idaho duck harvest

BOISE — Wildlife art enthusiasts are a major funding source for Canadian waterfowl projects which contribute to Idaho's duck harvest.

The Idaho department of Fish and Game has made the sixth payment to North American Waterfowl management plan, pre-funded by Ducks Unlimited, for the Keho Lake Project in Alberta.

The check for $8,999.28 brings Idaho's total payments to $148,444.60 and leaves a balance of $191,344.40.

The payment constitutes 20 percent of revenue from waterfowl prints and associated artwork, which includes collector stamps, belt buckles and other products.

The remaining 80 percent of art revenue is dedicated to habitat improvement projects in Idaho.

The payments were authorized and the percentage established in legislation creating the Idaho waterfowl stamp.

Hunters purchase the stamps, and collectors buy the art.

The Alberta projects were chosen because they produce mallards, the primary species hunted in Idaho. Those birds migrate through, or winter in the state.

BOISE — Winning entries of the latest Idaho Wildlife photo contest will highlight the new issue of Idaho Wildlife Magazine, a production of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

More than 30 color or black-and-white images will be included in the winter issue.

Other articles in the issue include "The Future of Hunting in Idaho," which uses surveys to show why people hunt; social trends opposed to hunting and pro-active strategies hunters can take to avoid losing the privilege.

"Oh, Deer, What Happened to the Season of '93?" analyzes southern Idaho mule deer status at season's end.

An index to 1993 issues is included as well as regular features on hunting, fishing, fish and game cooking and enforcement topics.

Idaho Wildlife is available at all department offices for $2.50 a copy or by subscription for $12.95 a year. Subscriptions may be placed by calling 1-800-IDA-Wild to charge a Visa or MasterCard account.

Owl perches at Coeur d'Alene Airport

HAYDEN — Coeur d'Alene Airport officials are hoping shotguns and other means will succeed in scaring away a snowy owl that has taken up residence near its runways.

"Right now, it hasn't caused any problems, thank God," operations manager Phil Cummings said, "But it's a potential hazard, not only to itself, but to the aircraft and their occupants."

Airport employees on Thursday used a shotgun with noisemaking ammunition to temporarily scare the bird away from the airport's two runways. But Cummings expects the 20-inch-high bird with a 5-foot wingspan to return.

Airport employees can frighten the bird, but cannot harm it, said Rick Donaldson of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife office. The owls are not considered threatened or endangered, but are protected by federal laws against physical harassment, he said. The owls spend summers in Alaska and Canada and winter in the lower 48 states.

"I hope we can scare him away," Cummings said. "It's a novelty for people to be able to see something like this. We're just trying to avoid problems."

Ice adds intrigue to diving

LEWISTON (AP) — Bumping your head on the surface isn't usually much of a problem for divers.

It took a few minutes to realize why his diving instructors were warning him to watch his head, said Mike Lusco. "They sent us down in pairs and the person I was with kept pointing up," he said with a laugh.

The ice cap on top of the lake he was diving in made the warning more than just a courtesy.

Lusco, of Spokane, Debbi Denner of Lewiston and Clearwater County Search and Rescue team members Tim Norton and Mike Tinsley headed west to Leavenworth, Wash., in January for an annual training class in diving beneath the ice.

"It was definitely different for us, even though we do a lot of diving," Lusco said. "It was different but it was fun."

Still, there are those even in the diving community who can't quite fathom why anyone would dive in the frigid waters of an ice-capped lake.

"A lot of the divers we go out with said, 'God, how do you do that?'" he added.

The diving in frigid water wasn't as cold as some might think, they said. Nearly all of the divers wore dry suits that kept them from getting wet. Heavy clothing inside the dry suits kept them from getting cold.

Although the temperature of the ice was 32 degrees Fahrenheit, the water deeper in the lake was warmer.

As it gets very cold and approaches the freezing point, water gets lighter. That's why ice floats. Deeper in the lake, the water temperature actually hovered near 38 degrees, Lusco said.

One member of the class wore a heavy-duty wet suit that was fine underwater. "As soon as you get out of the water, you want to have a set of dry clothes ready," Lusco said.

Most active divers in the Northwest already use dry suits to keep them comfortable in the region's cold waters, he added.

The equipment needed for ice diving is actually pretty minimal, Lusco said. The divers go into lakes with ropes attached to simple harnesses to help guide them back to the holes they entered through.

The training class focused on how to cope with the rope and how to deal with an emergency situation — like the rope breaking.

A lot of the session was just plain fun. The students played water polo under the ice with the air bubbles that were trapped beneath the ice and practiced navigation and underwater rescue methods, Denner added.

The group faced a problem right off, finding an ice-covered lake, Denner said. The mild winter has kept ice from forming on the lake originally set for the training, which was sponsored by the National Association of Underwater Instructors.

Lusco and Denner operate Landlocked Divers at Lewiston. The diving community in the Quad Cities area is larger than most might think, they say.

Most certified divers, however, enjoy the sport once or twice a year on outings to the Caribbean or some other warm-water destination.

Lusco and Denner say a surprising number of divers also venture out in the Clearwater River during the summer months when the water is low and clear.

Under-the-ice-diving is more of an adventurous experience. "I was more curious than anything because I wanted to do something that no one else was doing," Denner said.

The sport probably doesn't have a whole lot of potential for rapid growth, Lusco added. "I think it's something people do to be able to say they've done it."

The class offered a safe way to learn the ropes of diving under the ice. "It was a very well-organized situation," Lusco said. He added he also wanted some experience to be ready to salvage a snowmobile if the situation arose.

The pair had tried to take the class in the past but the scheduling had interfered, Denner said.

Go for bass when the ice melts

ATLANTA (AP) — Bass can be caught in cold weather, even up North.

You don't have to wait for spring to get bass, if you time it right, according to In Fisherman's Al Lindner, of Brainerd, Minn. Just check to make sure it's legal.

Just before the ice goes out, you can get bass in bays off larger lakes, Lindner said.

It's about the only time when structure plays little or no role in bass fishing.

"I don't know what they're doing there, it may be oxygen," he said.

For whatever reason, bass will cruise the muddy bottoms as the ice begins to melt. The best time can be as it is melting away from the shore.

"You may have to lay some boards to get to where you can walk on it," Lindner said.

"You'll want to look for them in fairly shallow water, 4 to 10 feet. Soft bottom bays, shallow, muddy, dark — the same areas the crappies and bluegills pour into as soon as the ice is off the lakes. The bass already are there," Lindner said.

They usually will be on the move, swimming across the bottom, looking for a meal after a winter when they've basically kept their mouths shut.

He recommends either jigs or live minnows as bait.

Lindner suggests several holes in a line, so that a squadron of cruising fish will hit at least one bait.

"Look for them belly to the bottom. Keep that minnow six inches off the bottom, tops," Lindner said. "If you use a depth sounder, you can watch them come past your hole. They're cruising real slow, right off the bottom. You'd be surprised in that cold water, they're not as dormant as you'd think they'd be."

They get more active as the ice melts.

Hit the water the first day you can get a boat on it, provided it's legal, said Don Caggiano of Terrytown, N.Y., a regular on the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society trail.

He recalled one day on Greenwood Lake, on the New York-New Jersey border, when he caught a dozen bass in less than 3 feet of water.

Bass can be caught off of a variety of cover, including floating chunks of ice, Caggiano said.

On his memorable day, the cover was logs on the protected side of the lake. He used a white spinner-bait.

"I was just crawling the spinner-bait along the limbs of the trees, slow rolling it, just pumping it up and down off the bottom," he said.

Other bait for those first days of fishing include a small hair jig with a port trailer or a grub to crawl along the bottom.

"Just fish it very slowly," Caggiano said. "The bass metabolism is very slow, they're not very active."

Find the most protected area of the lake that gets the most sun — usually a northern cove. Caggiano said shallow water near a dropoff to deeper water is best.

Winter storms improve area ski outlook

TWIN FALLS — Storms bringing new snow have dramatically improved conditions at all of the ski areas and in the backcountry in the Sawtooth National Forest.

Snow conditions on the Twin Falls ranger district are the best they've been all season. Snowmobiling will be excellent with approximately 100 miles of groomed trails.

Nordic skiing on designated trails also will be excellent with grooming operations in progress. Magic Mountain reports the entire mountain open. More information is available by calling 423-6221.

Avalanche hazard is moderate. Changing weather conditions could modify that rating. Updated conditions may be obtained by calling 737-3200. The danger does not apply to Magic Mountain or other developed ski areas.

Soldier Mountain on the Fairfield district reports a 30-inch base and deeper snow on snow-making runs. The ski hill received 11 inches Monday. Daily updates are available by calling 764-SNOW.

Snowmobile trails are being groomed on the Salt-Bowen road and over Wells Summit. Updates on Lawrence Creek trail cross country trail grooming are available at 764-2202.

Ketchum Ranger district reports Sun Valley ski area on Bald Mountain has excellent ski conditions with 77 inches at the top and 60 inches at the base, composed of man-made and natural snow. Information number is 622-2093.

At Sun Valley Nordic Center 40K of diagonal and skate skiing are available. Ski with a forest ranger talks at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Thursday and Saturday.

A five-minute recorded avalanche forecast is available by calling 622-8027. Avalanche hazard is low below 7,000 feet and moderate to high above that. The backcountry is active with multi-layered snowpack and wind. Visitors should avoid anything steeper than 34-degree slopes.

The Sawtooth National Recreation area is reporting 9 to 10 inches of new snow. Cross country skiing grooming report number is 726-6662.

Saturday and Sunday the Bellevue B, the annual Sawtooth Snowmobile Club Race, is scheduled. For that reason, cross-country skiers are urged to avoid the Baker Creek and Eastley Hot Springs area.

Avalanche hazard is moderate and several already have occurred. The rating will increase with additional storms.

Nordic skiing is reported excellent on the Butley district. Snowmobiling is "pretty good" on Sublett and ski conditions at Pomerelle Ski Area are excellent on groomed runs.

Visitors are reminded that forest fires are in place on the crest. These are signed. A travel map is available at any forest office.

Muzzleloaders become popular hunting weapon

By Angus Phillips
The Washington Post

The newest thing in hunting these days is old as the hills — primitive weapons, as more states offer deer hunters a special, early fall season for muzzleloaders.

That suggests it's time to buy a muzzleloader, since nothing looks more attractive from a deer hunter's perspective than to hunt the pleasant time of year, before the woods are overrun with modern firearms gunners.

But I've never shot a muzzleloader. What's it like? Is it safe? How can you get your hands on one?

To find out I called my deer-hunting guru, Tom Hardesty, who said to come by his place next morning and fire off a few rounds. He has an inexpensive muzzleloader with which he's hunted successfully in both West Virginia and Maryland during the traditional late-winter season.

His old blunderbuss was in minor disrepair — he'd broken the end off the ramrod last fall in his haste to load it when a big buck showed up unexpectedly. But it was workable.

We tossed gun, powder, swabs, patches, round balls, powder measures, cups, ramrod and various gadgets and cleaning tools in his truck and headed to a neighbor's farm. It was a damp, cold day, but Hardesty had no doubt the old-time would fire, as long as we took care to keep firing caps and powder dry.

Once there, he propped the gunstock on a foot, pointed the barrel away from his face and poured 68 grains of black powder I'd measured out for him down the long iron barrel. We next wrapped a .50-caliber round ball in a pre-coiled cotton patch and rammed it down the tube till it nestled tight against the powder charge.

He flipped the gun over and, with a little brass gadget, tucked a firing cap into the touch-hole and eased the hammer gently down on it for safe-keeping. In under a minute, we were ready to shoot.

Hardesty propped a target against an earthen backdrop, paced off 40 yards, put gun to cheek, cocked the hammer, squeezed the trigger and with a loud report, sent the ball hurtling along at 1,500 feet per second. It left a hole of shattered plywood 2 inches from the bull's-eye.

The puff of sulfurous blue smoke wafted away on the cold breeze, and it was my turn. We were loaded again in a minute.

From 10 yards closer, just so I wouldn't miss the target entirely with the unfamiliar gun sights, I put the ball just about as close to dead center as he had.

Hardesty said that was about as he expected. He echoed the view of many muzzleloader fans that the guns, with their heavy, rifled barrels, are actually more accurate than modern shotguns shooting rifled slugs.

He said he can consistently shoot a 3-inch group at 50 yards, which he considers plenty accurate for deer hunting in the deep brush, where most shots are close.

Okay, so they're accurate and reasonably safe. Now how do you get hold of one of these things?

That part's easy. It turns out muzzleloaders fall through the cracks of increasingly stringent federal firearms regulations and as a result are easy and cheap to buy.

They're officially classified as replicas, not guns, so purveyors need no license to sell them. You can get muzzleloaders at furniture stores, for heaven's sake.

Hardesty handed over a catalog from a mail-order house in Georgia, Gander Mountain, which offers the very gun he has — a CVA Sierra Stalker — complete with powder flask, powder measure, bullet starter and a handful of other gizmos, postpaid, for $139.99. All you need to add is a $10 can of powder that lasts 10 years and some caps and balls, he said. How can it be so cheap?

"There's not much to a muzzleloader, really," said Gary Pospelman of CVA. "It's just a barrel dropped into a wooden stock. The only moving parts are a few springs in the hammer; it's not much different than what was around a hundred years ago."

Pospelman said interest in muzzleloaders is growing as more states approve special hunting seasons, and as deer populations across the nation continue to expand.

Pospelman said folks interested in buying a muzzleloader should look for ones with adjustable sights, since the cheapest models have fixed sights that are hard to correct if the bullet doesn't fly straight.

Happily, the Sierra Stalker has adjustable sights. My own October wandering the tangled woods like Daniel Boone, with ol' Betsy under my arm.

Buybacks bring cash for guns that don't work

By Steve Waters
Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

Analysis

I'm tickled by all the praise for various gun buyback programs that are suddenly the rage. Anti-gun types are proclaiming the programs a phenomenal success at getting instruments of death off the streets.

According to an excellent source, the joke is on them. A New York City police officer, who shall remain nameless, told a friend of mine the inside story of gun buybacks. Essentially, the guns being bought are useful only as paperweights.

My friend's friend, who collects the firearms that are turned in, said a small percentage of the guns work. He told of a gentleman who showed up with several dozen inoperable handguns in a cardboard box. At $100 per gun, that made the box of junk worth several thousand dollars.

"I know it's supposed to be no questions asked," said the policeman, "but I've got to ask you: Where did you get all these guns?"

"I'm a gun dealer," the man replied. "I use these guns for parts. With what they're paying to buy back guns, I can afford to not turn these in."

The policeman also said that several people, most of them elderly, tried to turn in guns that were worth lots of money. Recognizing the guns' value and not wanting these people to be ripped off, he suggested they sell the guns to a gun dealer.

As promised, Florida Rep. Ron Klein, D-Boca Raton, has scuttled his bill, HB 241, which would have restricted semiautomatic firearms and many popular sporting guns. His new bill, HB 1913, will restrict 37 specific semiautomatic guns.

Whether the bill will have any impact on crime is doubtful; even Klein says so. What's certain to happen if the bill is passed is that gun manufacturers and dealers will make money for a change.

A local gun dealer told me that prices on so-called assault weapons already have jumped dramatically. For example, Colt's AR-15 used to list for $599 but usually sold for $475. Now the same gun's suggested retail price is $878. Individuals are advertising AR-15s in this paper's classified ads for as much as $1,200.

"Wholesale prices are up 25-30 percent and retail prices are up anywhere from 30-50 percent," said my source, who also said most gun dealers usually work on a 5 percent to 10 percent markup. "People who never dreamed of owning these guns are buying them to be grandfathered in."

Park will charge fee for back-country campsites

MOAB, Utah (AP) — Canyonlands National Park will begin charging from $10-$25 for use of designated back-country campsites in the Island in the Sky and Needles Districts starting March 1.

The non-refundable charge will cover the costs of issuing permits, expanding the reservation system and providing and maintaining back-country toilet facilities.

"Canyonlands back-country use has risen exponentially over the past six years. Increased backcountry use is affecting other park operations. The permit fee will allow the National Park Service to recover costs that are currently unfunded. Funds collected will be maintained in the park and earmarked for backcountry management," said Walt Dabney, park superintendent.

Dabney said the park also plans to limit the number of permits issued for the busy spring season for the most popular areas in the Needles District.

A total of 434,000 visitations were reported at Canyonlands last year, according to a record. Backpackers will pay $10 for each overnight visit to a campsite. The fee will be $25 for use of back-country vehicle campsites.

whether reintroduction should occur. A decision on how to proceed would be up to the Fish and Wildlife Service director and Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

They can agree with the recommendation in the environmental statement, choose another alternative described in the document or craft an alternative of their own, Bangs said. He expects a final decision before summer.

Some opponents of wolf reintroduction complained the draft environmental statement did not adequately depict the impact of wolves. They demanded the document be rewritten, but Bangs disagreed.

"I don't see anything we really overlooked," he said. "We'll go out there and see what happens — if someone points out a glaring problem and we have to go back and fix it, that's fine, too."

Bangs said all sides in the wolf issue are staking out positions, probably in preparation for lawsuits that will try to alter the ultimate decision.

ChiSox Radinsky will approach cancer treatments with tenacity

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Scott Radinsky, so committed to exercise he often biked to workouts and games, will take the same determined approach while undergoing treatments for Hodgkin's disease, his teammates said Wednesday.

"He will go like he does when he goes in a game. He's not going to hold back," Chicago White Sox reliever Roberto Hernandez said.

"At least he knows what's going on. He knows what lies ahead. Rad is as tough as they come mentally and physically," Jack McDowell said. "I think that will come into play."

Radinsky, 25, underwent surgery Monday to remove a malignant lymph node from the left side of his neck. He's returned to his Simi Valley, Calif., home, and will soon begin treatment that will include chemotherapy and radiation.

Radinsky, very popular in the clubhouse, was also a singer in the rock band "Ten Foot Pole." On the mound, the left-hander appeared in a career-high 73 games last season with an 8-2 record and 4.28 ERA.

"I was like everybody else, shocked and amazed that he's got to find out he's got cancer," said Hernandez, who overcame physical problems three years ago when he had a blood clot in his forearm and needed surgery.

"We're all going to wonder what is going to happen. We're not wondering what is going to happen to Radinsky the ballplayer but Radinsky the person. That's what everybody is thinking about."

"The thing he's probably going to go through is what I went through. 'Why me?' And all that. All I had to do was have a vein taken out and replaced. He's going to have to go through chemotherapy and whatever kind of other stuff. Knowing him, he will come out of that smiling."

Ozzie Guillen, whose wife's sister is married to Radinsky, talked to his teammate Wednesday morning.

"He's taking it right away. He's taking it strong. He knows he's got to go through a lot of stuff. The doctors explained it to him. He's calm. I think he's all right," Guillen said. "He impressed me. His voice was real normal."

One teammate knows the fear that Radinsky is experiencing. Outfielder Darin Jackson had surgery for testicular cancer in 1987. When he fell ill last season, Jackson underwent tests to see if the cancer had returned. It had not, and his condition was finally diagnosed as hyperthyroidism.

"When I had it come up on me personally, I thought to myself, 'It took me so long to get here and now this is going to happen. Bad timing,'" Jackson said. "That's something that is always going to bother you when you only have a short career."

The White Sox won't be able to replace Radinsky. But they will have to fill his important role as a setup man for Hernandez, who saved 38 games last season. Radinsky had averaged 68 appearances during his four seasons with the White Sox.

Left-handers Larry Thomas, Dennis Cook, Brian Givens and Wally Ritchie will be given a long look in the spring. Scott Christman, the team's first-round pick last June, is another left-hander in camp. Cook, who pitched with Cleveland last season, Givens, Ritchie and Christman are all non-roster pitchers.

Yankees name Key opening-day starting pitcher against Rangers

The Associated Press

No one should be fooled by the demeanor of the man they call Jimmy "Low" Key.

Under that placid exterior is a determined pitcher, one New York Yankees manager Buck Showalter expects to turn to for the big game. Few are bigger than the first.

"He may not wear his emotions on his sleeve, but he is as emotional as the next guy," Showalter said Wednesday after announcing in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., that Key will be his opening-day starter. "Jimmy is certainly deserving of the honor."

Indeed, the 32-year-old left-hander was 18-6 in 1993, his first season with the Yankees after coming aboard via free agency from Toronto.

Key's assignment April 4 will be tough one — the power-laden Texas Rangers. But Will Clark-Juan Gonzalez-Jose Canseco notwithstanding, Key has a bit of history on his side.

As an opening-day pitcher, he is 4-0. At Yankee Stadium, he is 16-3 with a career earned run average of 2.60.

"I'm looking forward to it," said Key, 8-2 in the Bronx last season. "It's a matter of my style of pitching and the ballpark sets up great with the grass and the big alleys."

At Sarasota, Fla., the Michael Jordan watch continued. This time, the wannabe Chicago outfielder swung the bat a little more. He faced two or three balls that would have been hits in a 26-pitch session against White Sox left-hander Dennis Cook.

Jordan, who took 16 of 30 pitches a day earlier against Jose DeLeon, watched only nine — mostly curves — go by Wednesday. He swung and missed only once against Cook, who was throwing about 80 mph.

Chicago White Sox' Michael Jordan faced left-handed pitcher Dennis Cook in his second day of batting practice against major league pitchers Wednesday in Sarasota, Fla.

"You can't hold that against him, swinging and missing," Cook said. "There are a lot of guys making a lot of money swinging and missing."

Manager Gene Lamont agreed. "Nobody beats on the pitchers (early), I don't think," Lamont said.

Kevin Mitchell was the only no-show when Cincinnati began workouts at Plant City, Fla. The outfielder, chronically late, must be in camp by March 1.

This time, even manager Davey Johnson couldn't find his cleanup hitter.

"Once in the winter, I was able to track him down out in the desert where he was riding his dune buggy," Johnson said.

Outfielder Wes Chamberlain and pitcher Heathcliff Slocumb agreed to one-year contracts as the Philadelphia Phillies held their first full-squad workout at Clearwater, Fla. Eight Phillies remain unsigned.

The Los Angeles Dodgers signed infielder Mike Sharperson to a minor-league contract. Sharperson had opted for free agency when his rights were assigned to the Dodgers' Albuquerque farm club after the 1993 season.

Baylor accepts Big Eight merger offer

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor voted Wednesday to become the first Southwest Conference school to accept a merger offer from the Big Eight, starting a process that is likely to dismantle the nearly 80-year-old league.

"We are delighted and excited that our board unanimously voted to accept the invitation that's been offered," Thomas Powers, chairman of the Board of Regents, said after a 24-hour board meeting. "We think the financial possibilities of this new alliance are exciting."

Two other original SWC members, Texas and Texas A&M, and longtime member Texas Tech all had regents' meetings scheduled this week to consider the offer from the Big Eight.

A formal announcement of the merger appeared to need only the rubber-stamp of the regents at the schools.

"We're looking forward to the challenge," Baylor president Herbert Reynolds said. "I believe it's a new era for us."

Reynolds said Baylor received the invitation late last week and the Big Eight schools voted unanimously to invite his university, Texas, Texas A&M and Texas Tech.

Disintegration of the SWC, which began in 1990 after Arkansas joined the Southeastern Conference, would leave Houston, Rice, Southern Methodist and Texas Christian to fend for themselves.

The offer was designed to find the best possible television contract beginning in 1996-97. The Big Eight, with other conferences already signed with networks, decided having the four SWC schools would make for a more lucrative offer.

Texas A&M regents are to speak by conference call today, with boards at Texas Tech and Texas to discuss the offer Friday.

That's the Big Eight's deadline for the SWC's so-called "haves" to accept or reject its invitation, sources told The Associated Press.

Lions ink coach, vow to sign QBs

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — His wishy-washy dealing with Detroit quarterbacks last season is coming back to haunt Lions' coach Wayne Fontes.

Erik Kramer is already gone, and it's hard to imagine either Rodney Peete or Andre Ware wanting anything more to do with the Lions.

Wednesday, the Lions announced the signing of former Minnesota Vikings assistant Tom Moore to be their quarterback coach. But, at the moment, the only quarterback the Lions have under contract is Chuck Long.

"We are going to get a good guy," Fontes said. "We are not going to panic or end up with a guy off the streets."

That's brave talk from a guy who wasted a No. 1 draft pick on Ware, the 1989 Heisman Trophy winner, then couldn't find a way to use him. Ware spent the next four years caught up in a merry-go-round with Peete and Kramer.

It wasn't pretty.

The Lions won the NFC Central two of the past three years. But that was mainly because Kramer stepped in late in 1991 and late in 1993 and saved them. Yet he was never considered the No. 1 quarterback.

"If I thought he was our long-term answer, we wouldn't be out there looking," Fontes said. "There are some good quarterbacks out there who are contacting the Detroit Lions."

Kramer, deciding he had taken enough, signed earlier this week with the Chicago Bears. They gave him $8.1 million for three years. The Lions had been inching up their offer to Kramer, but he never even called them back.

Clearly, Kramer didn't want to bargain with the Lions. He wanted to play. "They never made me feel like they wanted me," Kramer said. "I wanted to be somewhere where they believed in me from the start. The Lions were like, 'Yeah, we want you, until we can find someone else.'"

The Lions started the 1993 season with Peete at quarterback. Peete lost the job to Ware, who lost it back to Peete, who eventually lost it to Kramer. I drove all three of them bananas. And they all were unrestricted free agents when the season ended.

I haven't spoken to the Lions' front office," Kramer said. "But I'll bet their reaction was, 'Good, we'll sign somebody else.'"

Somehow, the search for a successor seems just as confused as the quarterback controversy that almost spoiled the regular season. The Lions are romancing everyone in sight.

Scott Mitchell, the Miami Dolphins' backup, was at the Silverdome on Monday. He appears to be the Lions' prime interest.

But the Lions also are expecting visits next week from Sean Salisbury of the Vikings and Chris Miller of the Atlanta Falcons. They also hope to set up a visit within the next two weeks with Bernie Kosar, who was dumped by Cleveland and signed by the Dallas Cowboys as Super Bowl insurance.

If those visits don't pan out, Warren Moon and Jim Harbaugh might be available in trade. Houston's asking price for Moon might be too high for the Lions. The Bears likely would take less for Harbaugh now.

Washington's Mark Rypien and the Rams' Jim Everett also are reported to be up for trade.

Filer hearing focuses on comprehensive plan

FILER - The City Council has planned a public hearing for 7 p.m. Tuesday at Filer City Hall, 300 Main, to consider amending the comprehensive plan and land-use map.

The comprehensive plan covers the city of Filer and neighboring land. It is intended to provide the visions, goals, policies and actions which will guide community development and minimize potential conflicts.

Copies of the comprehensive plan are on file with the Filer clerk between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at City Hall; phone 326-5000. Written comments will be accepted until 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Jerome emergency workers receive disaster certificates

JEROME - Jerome County Disaster Services Director Art Brown and Debra L. Hays, member of emergency services at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, have received certificates from the Idaho Bureau of Disaster Services indicating their completion of training to design and evaluate disaster procedures and drills.

"We're very fortunate to have St. Benedict's as a member of the team," Brown said. Hays will also represent the Medical Center on the local emergency planning committee.

Idaho auto insurance rates rank 4th lowest in country

BOISE - Idaho residents pay the fourth lowest auto insurance rates in the country, according to a study by the National Association of Independent Insurers.

In 1992, Idaho motorists paid an average of $490.20 a year for insurance, or only 70 percent of the national average, to rank Idaho 47th among the 50 states and the District of Columbia. The national average was $710.18.

March symposium to assess health of rivers across Idaho

BOISE - A symposium on the environmental health of Idaho's rivers will be held March 18-19 at the Red Lion Riverside Hotel in Boise.

The sessions will begin at 8 a.m. both days.

Titled "Rivers at the Crossroads: Law, Science, Politics and People," the symposium will take an ecosystem approach to the discussion of Idaho's rivers.

For more information, call Idaho Rivers United at 208-343-7481.

Jerome accepts applications for summer, seasonal work

JEROME - The Jerome Recreation District is accepting applications for seasonal maintenance and summer pool staff positions.

Applicants for maintenance jobs must be at least 16 years old, in good physical condition and must possess a valid Idaho drivers license. Depending on the position, minimum requirements to work at the pool may include current certification in Red Cross first aid, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, lifeguard and water-safety instruction.

For more information contact the Jerome Recreation District Office, 2444 S. Lincoln St., or call 324-3389.

New spring and summer guides listing the offerings through the Jerome Recreation District will be available at the district office and several offices in Jerome the first week of March. Anyone interested is encouraged to pick one up and start planning summer activities.

DEQ grants Jerome waiver in number, type of water tests

JEROME - Careful water management has paid off for Jerome and reduced water-testing costs.

The Division of Environmental Quality informed Robert Culver, water department director, that Jerome had been granted a waiver in the number and kind of tests required of city water.

"Because of past water quality that showed up in tests, and the purity of our water, we got the waivers on our three wells," Culver said. The waiver will save about $20,000 per year.

Salmon Tract stockholders plan to fight $2.2 million settlement

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE - A tentative settlement in the long-running Salmon River Canal Co. lawsuit would pay $2.2 million to downstream landowners who suffered property damage in a 1984 flood.

But a group of Salmon Tract farmers who oppose the tentative settlement have hired their own attorney and are vowing to fight the deal.

"It mostly has to do with the amount of money we're being asked to pay," said Dick Parrott, one of the dissident canal company shareholders.

The dissident group consists of 20 to 25 Salmon River shareholders, Parrott said.

The 174 shareholders of the Salmon River Canal Co. voted on Feb. 11 to approve the tentative deal. Voting by shares, the vote was about 78 percent for, 22 percent against.

Attorneys for the canal company and the "Burgess group" of downstream landowners would not discuss terms of the tentative settlement during a hearing Wednesday in federal bankruptcy court.

But according to Parrott, the deal would have the canal company pay the downstreamers a lump sum of $2.2 million to compensate them for damages caused by an emergency water release from the Salmon Falls Dam 10 years ago.

The company would borrow the money from large shareholders, banks, or both, Parrott said. The loan would be repaid through assessments on all the company's shareholders.

The deal is contingent on the canal company lining up the necessary financing by March 15, company attorney Joseph Meier said Wednesday.

The canal company sought protection under federal bankruptcy laws last April, after a jury awarded the downstreamers $2 million in damages. A state judge later added another $2 million or so in interest, court costs and attorneys' fees.

Late last year, Meier filed a proposed reorganization plan under which the company would pay just $1.2 million over five years to the downstreamers. It also would pay back a $125,000 loan from First Security Bank.

But the downstreamers objected, so a hearing on the proposal was held in December. A second hearing was supposed to have begun Wednesday, but Bankruptcy

Twin Falls not finished with E911

By H.R. Weikel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Aside from withdrawing its financial support, Twin Falls still wants to be in on a regional enhanced 911 emergency response system, City Councilman Chris Talkington said Wednesday.

"The City Council is interested in the Regional E911 cooperation if the legal and financial barriers can be cleared," Twin Falls City Councilman Chris Talkington said at the board's meeting Wednesday.

On Feb. 7, the Twin Falls decided to withdraw operational funding for the E911 system. That meant about $256,000 annually would not be available for the E911 facility, Talkington said.

At the same meeting, the council recommended that Twin Falls County remove itself from the regional E911 board, Talkington said.

City Attorney (Fritz) Wonderlich reviewed a court decision that said that the E911 joint powers agreement was an "illegal agreement and void," Talkington said, still quoting the minutes.

He did say that if the current E911 structure is legal, Twin Falls might reverse its decision.

But Twin Falls is still a member of the E911 Board Talkington said.

"We have not withdrawn. We have withdrawn operational funding only," he said.

Jerome City Administrator Larry Paine said elected officials had not been kept informed and didn't know enough about the E911 system.

Al Sandner, project manager of the regional E911 system, said he had tried to talk to the Twin Falls City Council but was not invited.

"You are invited. I will come over and pick you up," Talkington replied.

The E911 Board plans to meet with the Twin Falls City Council at 7 p.m. Monday, with a work session starting at 4 p.m.

"We'll see if we can get the meeting on Channel 10," Talkington said.

Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Towles said he believes in the E911 system.

"If we splinter now, we're in a worse po-

Janelle Jardine describes how a planned Elm Street extension would run through what is now the side yard to her Lawndale Drive home.

Lawndale residents fear city's decision will create nightmare from Elm Street

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Residents of Lawndale Drive in the city's northeast section are angrily protesting a City Council decision to lengthen Elm Street past their homes.

"Everybody said this street would never go through," Janelle Jardine said Wednesday. "There's no reason for it."

Toward the end of the City Council's Feb. 7 meeting, the council approved the construction of Elm Street North between Cheney Drive to Lawndale Drive, thinking the residents of Lawndale Drive also favored the southerly extension.

However, residents whose side yards would be bulldozed asked the council Tuesday afternoon how the city could allow a street to run through their yards without their knowledge.

The city would co-sponsor with Melco Inc., the construction of Elm Street south to Lawndale. Melco planned to expand its self-storage business along the proposed Elm Street extension.

Melco initially sought to avoid extending Elm through the yards. The company approached Jardine last summer to ask if she would circulate a petition to vacate the Elm Street right-of-way through her yard, Jardine said Tuesday.

She and 20 other Lawndale residents did so willingly, she said. But something had changed by Feb. 16, when she saw survey stakes in her yard, she said. "I didn't dream it was the road," she said.

The Elm Street extension would require uprooting several large trees in the Jardines' yard, and would pass a scant four feet from the Crumbliss' bedroom window.

"For me to see somebody who doesn't care come in and rip all this out ... it breaks my heart," Jardine said Tuesday.

Crumbliss, who has lived on Lawndale for the past 36 years, did not know that Elm Street would be paved past her house until last week.

"It's really strange that they would want to open up that short street," Crumbliss said Wednesday.

Councilman Tom Condie said he only voted for Elm Street's construction because Melco's survey crews had indicated that Jardine and Crumbliss supported the project, even though that support seemed implausible.

"I just couldn't believe they felt that way," Condie said Wednesday.

According to a taped record of the Feb. 7 council meeting, Condie asked City Engineer Gary Young if the two neighbors had been contacted.

Survey crews had indicated that contact had been made and that the crews "got an unusually cordial welcome compared to what they expected," Young responded.

Now that he has learned that the neighbors do not welcome the project, Condie and other council members have urged the city to stall construction of Elm Street, at least for the time being.

"I don't think voting on something like this should have been done," Condie said. "This was kind of a real surprise to me."

In an Aug. 2, 1993, City Council meeting, the council voted 7-0 to deny Melco's request to vacate Elm Street between Cheney and Lawndale.

The minutes of that meeting show that Condie expressed concern about granting the vacation if the road would be needed in the future.

Elm Street North provides another north-south corridor to relieve traffic along Blue Lakes Boulevard North. Young said Wednesday.

"This is not a 'road to nowhere,'" city staffers wrote in a July 23, 1993, report to the council. "It can be extended to serve the 10 acres behind the Weston Plaza, then turned easterly to connect to Locust Street North and beyond."

Young held to that position again Wednesday.

On Monday, the council will reconsider its position on extension plans for Elm Street North.

City might limit left turns on Blue Lakes

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Expect to see left-turn restrictions along Blue Lakes Boulevard North in the near future.

City and state officials are considering small barriers along Blue Lakes that would limit the areas in which cars could make left-hand turns, City Engineer Gary Young confirmed Tuesday evening.

But no plans nor funding have been established yet, Young said.

"It's in the 'let's talk about it' phase," he said.

The idea was discussed after the city planning and zoning commission granted a special use permit for a new convenience store, gas station and car wash at 506 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

The new facility, which would replace a Chevron station demolished in December, was approved with the recommendation that a sign prohibiting left turns be erected at the site.

By a 5-4 vote, the planning commission approved the preliminary blueprints for a 145-home subdivision next to the new Oregon Trail Elementary School on Park Avenue.

Commission Chairman Fran Florence, Vice Chairman Ken Sutzman and Commissioners Vickie Traxler, Lex Heyer, and Kevin Dane voted in favor of Park View Estates.

Commissioners David McCluskey, Bob Daigle, Tom Mikesell and Rick Palmer voted against the proposal.

The planning commission also granted special use permits for a new McDonald's restaurant at 869 Pole Line Road, two day-care facilities, and a chlorine injection-building next to the existing water pumping station in the Snake River Canyon.

The McDonald's restaurant, to be owned and operated by Bill Kyle, would be located at the corner of Pole Line Road and Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Access, however, would only be provided to the restaurant from Pole Line Road.

Commissioners expressed concern about present and future traffic conditions at that intersection.

Kyle informed the planning commission that the state Department of Transportation is accepting bids for the placement of street lights along Blue Lakes Boulevard between Pole Line Road and the Perrine Bridge.

Kyle also owns the McDonald's restaurant at 305 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Jailer joins fray for Fraley's seat

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY - A county jailer has added his name to the ever-growing list of Republican candidates to challenge incumbent Twin Falls County Commissioner Jim Fraley.

Bob Wright, of Kimberly, announced Wednesday that he would seek the Republican nomination from the 3rd District.

Wright, 53, is a staff sergeant at the county jail and a former farmer who says he has been waiting for a chance to enter the political arena.

The county commissioners have not been as good as he needs to be, he said.

"I'd like to see the county set a few more goals than in the past," he said.

One such example is the new 12-bed juvenile detention center, which, when constructed in the Twin Falls industrial park, will not provide enough room for the region's needs, he said.

Twin Falls County alone has had as many as 22 youth offenders to care for, he said.

"That has been one goal that has been dragged out and dragged out," he said.

Wright also said he thinks the county's enhanced 911 communications need to be dispatched from within the county.

"I don't like the regional concept at all," he said.

County residents are demanding a change in their government and Wright says he is better qualified to bring about that change.

Wright is the fourth candidate to announce his campaign for county commissioner from the 3rd District.

Local real estate agent John Etheridge, former Twin Falls City Councilwoman Pam Dowd and deputy county assessor Daleine Talbot also intend to challenge Fraley for the Republican nomination.

No Democratic candidates have announced yet for the 3rd District race.

The 3rd District covers the eastern section of Twin Falls County, including Kimberly, Hansen, Murtough, Hollister and some parts of Twin Falls city. Primary elections will be held May 24.

Harassment or fair comment? Mayor, residents square off at council meeting

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Some local residents say they have a right to criticize city officials.

But Mayor Jim Martin says those who criticize during City Council meetings are out of order.

Steve Wilkins was one of 36 people who filled Hagerman City Hall Tuesday. He complained about several city policies and asked when a moratorium on new water hookups would be lifted.

Martin said no one knows yet, but information on the city's new water system project will be available at a public meeting set for 7 p.m. on March 3 at the senior citizens center. The moratorium will remain in place until the new water system is completed.

Wilkins continued to question city policies. Martin cut him off, saying Wilkins was out of order.

Several people shouted that Martin should let people speak.

Martin said he is determined to follow parliamentary procedures.

People in the audience have no right to speak out, he said. Those who wish to speak on a certain issue have to be on the agenda.

"When we are in session, no one from the floor can break in and speak," Martin said. "When the business is done, then we will open up the floor."

He said that he allows discussion as a courtesy, not as an obligation.

At the end of the meeting, Martin gave area resident Fred Walmsley permission to speak. Walmsley said he has been to many public meetings in his life, but this council meeting was the sorriest display of democracy he has ever seen.

Martin called Walmsley out of order, which brought an outburst of jeers and shouts of disapproval. Walmsley started to leave, but the people called him back, and Martin agreed to let him continue.

"Let's find a way to control tempers, be rational and let people talk," Walmsley said.

Martin said he and the council do not have to stand for harassment from anyone.

In other business:

Several people expressed concern about a proposed extension of the Hagerman sewer system to the development project of Roger and George Crandlemire almost two miles north of Hagerman on Billingsley Creek. Martin assured the people that this matter will have to be put on the agenda in order for the council to make a decision on it.

Merl Egbert of the South Central District Health Department in Gooding said Wednesday that the Crandlemires have not submitted formal plans with an engineered drain field, so his department has not made any formal objections on a permit request.

But two ditches across the property eliminate most of the land that could be used as a drain field, he said.

"Essentially, they're water-locked," Egbert said. "They don't have room for a normal drain field. ... They're too close to water and water tables."

Though alternate drain field systems might be acceptable, the best alternative for the Crandlemires is to get sewer service from the city of Hagerman, Egbert said.

Buzz Beutler applied for a building permit, but Bruce Bothwell objected. Bothwell charged that the city has double standards in issuing building permits. He said his own request for a building permit should be considered immediately. The council tabled Beutler's request and agreed to put Bothwell on the agenda for the next meeting.

After reviewing a list of expenses for softball tournaments as presented by Mike Miller, the council voted to waive proposed user fees for the tournaments for 1994. The council also waived user fees for the Chamber of Commerce on the city's Fossil Day in May.

Joe Gluck of Region IV Development reported that the city's new water system is nearing completion and construction on the rest of the city's water project is expected to begin in mid-June. He estimated that the project could be completed by mid-December.

13 hearings come before Jerome P&Z on Monday

JEROME — The Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission has 13 public hearings on its agenda Monday.

In the Jerome County Courthouse the commission will conduct hearings at:

• 7:30 p.m. on a permit request by John Reitsma for signage and fertilizer works.

• 7:45 p.m. on an amendment to the Jerome County zoning map to reflect the city's annexation of Jerome School District property.

• 8 p.m. on an amendment of the text of the county zoning ordinance, chapter 19.

• 8:15 p.m. on Luis Bettencourt's request for a variance to locate a pond from which irrigation water can be pumped less than 50 feet from a public right of way.

• 8:30 p.m. on an Idaho Land and Cattle Inc. request to rezone property from A-1 agriculture to A-2 agriculture.

• 8:45 p.m. on an Idaho Land and Cattle Inc. request for a text change in the zoning ordinance signifying a special-use permit is required, with materials, equipment and work performed, inside an enclosed building in the A-2 agricultural zone.

• 9 p.m. on a request by John Beers for a permit to split a lot in the North Rim Fairways subdivision for two separate homes.

• 9:15 p.m. on a Gen State Trust Inc. request for a special use permit to build and operate a facility to manufacture engineered roof and floor trusses.

• 9:30 p.m. on a variance request submitted by Larry Stuhlgberg to enclose an existing carport and build an addition onto the present house.

• 9:45 p.m. on Del Kohrt's request for a special use permit to divide and sell his property into one-acre lots.

• 10 p.m. on a permit request by Del Kohrt to divide property into one-acre or more ranchettes.

• 10:15 p.m. on a permit request by A. C. Houston Lumber Inc. to build a facility to manufacture roof and floor trusses and other building components.

• 10:30 p.m. on a permit request by Northside Implement to build and operate an implement store south of Jerome.

In other business, the commission will review Kelly Lee's request for a special use permit to build a repair shop, rezoning property into the city impact area, a proposal for a planned unit development and Jack Hyder's final plan.

For further details, contact planning and zoning Administrator Art Brown at 324-8811, ext. 75.

Bruneau snail appeals anger Farm Bureau

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Farm Bureau and ranchers on Wednesday labeled an environmentalist appeal over an endangered species listing of the Bruneau hot spring snail frivolous and an insult to Idahoans.

The Idaho Conservation League and the Land and Water Fund of the Rockies on Feb. 11 appealed U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan's Dec. 14, 1993, rejection of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's endangered listing over "serious due process violations."

"The Idaho Conservation League has no grounds for the snail appeal to the 9th Circuit Court (of Appeals)," said Rayola Jacobsen, Farm Bureau assistant public affairs director.

"U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the U.S. Justice Department declined to appeal because they knew they didn't have the grounds for an appeal."

Fish and Wildlife proposed listing the Bruneau Hot Springs snail as an endangered species in 1985. At the time, only two colonies of the snails were believed to exist along the Bruneau River and a tributary, Hot Creek, in southwestern Idaho.

The agency contended pumping groundwater from the aquifer that feeds the river and creek was dangerously reducing the snail's habitat.

After a series of studies and administrative delays, Fish and Wildlife issued its final decision listing the mollusks as endangered last winter.

The Farm Bureau filed a lawsuit last May on behalf of 59 Owyhee County farms and ranches affected by the Fish and Wildlife Services decision.

Ryan agreed with Farm Bureau arguments that federal officials improperly delayed the process, did not provide the public with adequate notice of their plans and failed to allow adequate public comment.

He said Fish and Wildlife also ignored crucial information during the final months before the ruling.

After Ryan's decision, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt toured the snail's habitat and said it appeared the issue could be solved administratively.

The environmentalist appeal contends Ryan erred on the procedural side, said Laird Lucas, Land and Water Fund staff attorney.

While federal officials did miss deadlines in the listing process, Ryan's interpretation that the enterprise had to start all over again missed the mark, Lucas said.

The two groups agreed with Ryan in his rejection of challenges to Fish and Wildlife's scientific findings that there was a "rational connection" between the factors contributing to the springwater drop and the agency's decision to list the species.

Wednesday said the Conservation League and the Land and Water Fund have no problem appealing since they receive their legal work for free.

"The Land and Water Fund is an environmental group made up of volunteer attorneys," Davis said.

"They've made it clear that suing the people of Idaho, at any cost, is more important than the families, the culture and the economies of our state."

Tombstone repeals ban on carrying guns in public places

TOMBSTONE, Ariz. (AP) — It's legal once again to strap a six-gun to your hip and stride down the wooden sidewalks of this old Wild West town where Wyatt Earp shot it out at the OK Corral.

The City Council in "the town too tough to die" has settled a lawsuit backed by the National Rifle Association and repealed its ban on carrying guns in public.

The ordinance was adopted in 1977 for fear that the mock gunfights staged regularly to entertain tourists could lead to real bloodshed. Folks were worried that someone packing iron could be spooked into drawing when the actors start firing blanks, Mayor Alex Gradillas explained Tuesday.

"Now everybody's kind of leery, because anybody can be carrying loaded guns if they wish," Gradillas said.

Judge Jim Pappas postponed it until April 28 and 29 to give the company time to secure financing and allow the parties to try to finalize their settlement.

At Wednesday's hearing, Pappas refused to either endorse or block the canal company's proposal to assess its shareholders $525,000, or $8.74 a share, before the start of this year's irrigation season.

That assessment is in addition to the $7.50 per share the company plans to charge its shareholders for the regular maintenance and operation of its canal system.

Of that $525,000, $400,000 would be set aside for the downstreamers as a "down payment" on any settlement, and $125,000 would be paid to First Security.

If no settlement is reached, the company will have to assess another $3 per share to cover its legal expenses, Meier said in his motion.

But Pappas said it appeared to him the company already has the authority to make the assessments, and there was no need for him to rule on the matter one way or another.

"I don't intend to micro-manage this company," the judge said. "I'm not going to order an assessment of $2 a share or $5 a share or $10 a

Manure-burning power plant suffers regulatory setback

Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO — To the chagrin of cattlemen in Southern California's Imperial Valley, a federal energy commission Wednesday turned down an appeal from the world's only plant making electricity from cattle manure.

The rejection could spell bankruptcy for the Imperial plant, which burned 1 million tons of manure from 1988 to early 1993 before venturing into cattle raising to find a solution to the perennial problem of the cattle industry: what to do with all that dung.

"This is very bad news for us," said Ross Jenkins, general manager of Phillips Cattle Co. in El Centro, Calif., and chairman of the feedlot council of the California Cattlemen's Association. "Sometimes I don't think there's anybody in Washington who understands Imperial County or the cattle business."

The unanimous decision by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission came without discussion at a meeting in Washington. Plant owners are studying whether to appeal to federal court. At issue is whether the Mesquite Lake plant deserves a waiver from a requirement that it use no more than 25 percent natural gas to turn its generators.

When last year's rains turned the cattle manure slurry, the facility was forced to switch almost entirely to natural gas to keep operating and sought a waiver.

Southern California Edison, which buys power from the manure plant, opposed the waiver and demanded that its owners repay $6 million to $9 million.

Under an arrangement in which utilities are required to buy power from independent producers who use alternative sources, Edison pays 10 cents per kilowatt for manure power. But it can buy natural gas-generated power for a third that amount on the open market.

Edison official Tom Gibbs said now that the waiver has been denied, the company wants to "try to work out a repayment schedule that will keep (the plant) in business."

The commission agreed that Edison's customers should not be stuck with paying extra for electricity produced by natural gas.

The amount of any repayment, and the repayment schedule, will be subject to negotiation between Edison and the manure plant owners, with litigation a possibility.

"This is just one battle in an all-out war," San Diego attorney Bill Eigner, representing the plant owners, said Wednesday's decision.

The commission found that the problems caused by last year's rain were not an anomaly but were symptomatic of technical flaws in the manure plant, flaws that led to a lawsuit between the original investors and the engineers who built the plant.

The California Public Utilities Commission, in urging the federal commission to reject the appeal, had called the manure plant a technological failure.

However, plant engineers hope to have the facility back on line next month, burning manure once again.

Still, they worry that if they are required to make the repayment in a lump sum, it would dry up investment money still needed for the experimental plant.

Obituaries

Kathryn A. Duffee Brumfield

WENDELL — Kathryn Ann Duffee Brumfield, 53, of Fallon, Nev., and formerly of Wendell, died Monday, Feb. 21, 1994, at the Churchill County Hospital in Fallon.

She was born Nov. 14, 1940, in Twin Falls, the daughter of Dale and Clara Duppung Duffee. She grew up in Wendell on the family farm, later living with her husband and children on the Sand Springs Ranch and farm out of Wendell. Kathryn eventually moved with her children to Springfield, Idaho. There she was appointed the first woman supervisor at Simplot's in Aberdeen, where she successfully ran the swing shift. She also lived in Blackfoot with her husband for a time.

She is survived by her husband, Dale Brumfield of Fallon, Nev.; her mother, Clara Duffee of Wendell; three children, Douglas W. Pilant of Medford, Ore., and Vickie Pilant Wortman and Valerie Pilant Mitrucker, both of Pinedale, Ore.; two sisters, Kurma Echevarria of Boise and Ginger Cox of Tucson, Ariz.; two brothers, James and Dewey Duffee, both of Wendell; nine grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her father, Dale D. Duffee in 1989.

The funeral mass will be held 2 p.m. Friday at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Wendell, with the Rev. Timothy Ritchey officiating. Burial will follow at the Wendell Cemetery. Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray's Wendell Chapel.

Earl J. Gould

TWIN FALLS — Earl Jay Gould, 80, of Twin Falls, died Tuesday, Feb. 22, 1994, at his home.

He was born Sept. 30, 1913, in Marshall County, Iowa, the son of Lemert Charles and Pearl Adeline Hilderbrand Gould. He was a produce manager at a grocery store in Iowa. He moved to California in 1970, where he managed apartment complexes. He retired to Idaho in 1983. He married Velda Rosanna Scoville on Sept. 7, 1935, in Albion, Iowa. She preceded him in death on March 14, 1984.

He was a member of the Loyal Order of Moose No. 313 in Marshalltown, Iowa.

He is survived by a daughter, Jannace Kirkdorfer of Twin Falls; a son, Ronald Gould of Riverside, Calif.; six grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; two sisters, Velda Walters of Conrad, Iowa, and Irma Shipley of Reinbeck, Iowa; and one brother, Percy Gould of Quartzite, Ariz.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 26, 1994, at Bay Colonial Funeral Home and Crematory, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls, with the Rev. Dan Romans officiating. Cremation will follow with a private family inurnment at a later time. Friends may call from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. today and Friday at the funeral home. The family will receive friends from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Friday evening.

Man survives 3 days stranded in desert

By Liz Wright
Times-News Writer

RUPERT — As Douglas Nelson walked across the snow-covered desert, lost and disoriented, for three days and two nights this weekend, he thought about his wife and seven children.

"I had to get back to them," Nelson, 39, a Rupert truck driver, said Tuesday as he recovered from hypothermia, frostbite and dehydration at Wood River Medical Center in Hailey.

What started out as a sight-seeing tour Friday, turned into a survival ordeal after Nelson tried to take a shortcut home through the Kimama desert. He got lost and his pickup truck ran out of gas 20 miles from the main road across the desert from Carey to Kimama, he said.

For three days Nelson ate snow and slept under sagebrush and in a small cave to stay alive.

In a statement to police, Nelson wrote that he became lost Friday after following tire marks down a dirt road in the desert.

He missed the signs back to the main road, said Capt. Jean Ramsey of Blaine County Sheriff's Department.

Nelson said he thought it would be a shortcut back home to Rupert. About 9 p.m., he heard the engine die.

"I knew there would be no one coming out that way," Nelson said.

He headed back toward the road he had left. He walked for several hours until about 2 a.m. When he was too tired to continue, he scraped the snow from under a sagebrush and slept.

"I was scared I wasn't going to make it then," Nelson said.

Saturday he got up and walking back to his pickup truck for an extra pair of jeans, he said. That night he slept in his truck.

Sunday, he walked all day toward Carey. That night he found a small cave in the lava rocks and laid down to sleep with his feet in the small cave to keep them dry and the cave's overhanging keeping the snow off the rest of him, he said.

Monday morning, he started walking again. At about 6 p.m., he saw a farmhouse and knocked on the door.

Nelson was taken by ambulance to the hospital. He was released Wednesday afternoon to his family.

Briefly in Mini-Cassia

Minidoka School Board sets evaluations

RUPERT — The Minidoka School Board plans a special meeting tonight at 7 for its yearly evaluation of school district administrators.

School Board members will evaluate Superintendent Michael Bishop. Bishop will evaluate all principals, administrators and assistants. The meeting is closed to the public because it concerns personnel, Bishop said.

The evaluations determine whether a person continues to work for the district, board member Russell Holland said.

Holland said he thinks the board will not give Bishop such low marks that he is not rehired next year. Bishop has come under fire recently from teachers, parents and students angered by his proposal last December to fire Minico High School Principal Steve Hubbsmith.

In a no-confidence vote last month, 75 percent of teachers and school staff said they had no confidence vote in Bishop's leadership.

Assistant Superintendent Bob Pavlock will evaluate all principals, including Hubbsmith, Holland said.

Evaluations are being continued from last week's regular meeting because the School Board members did not have time to get them, Bishop said.

The meeting will be at the Central School Office, 633 Fremont Ave., Rupert. For information call the district office at 436-4727.

Soil, Water district schedules tree sale

BURLEY — The East Cassia Soil and Water District is having its annual tree sale. Trees are available for homeowners and farmers or ranchers for use as windbreaks, shelterbelts, habitat projects and landscape plantings.

Trees available include Austrian Pine, Colorado Blue Spruce, Purple Lilac, Red Cedar, Siberian Peashrub and White Birch. They come in bundles of 10 and cost $10 per bundle. A 50 percent deposit is required with each order.

For more information or to place an order, call the Soil and Water Conservation Office at 678-1225.

Woman to speak about personal power

BURLEY — Janet Hagberg, a nationally recognized speaker and author, will speak via live satellite from Minnesota on a "Journey to Personal Power" at the Cassia County Extension Office from noon to 2:30 p.m. today.

Hagberg will lecture on how to become a stronger person and a leader. From the University of Minnesota, she will address the six stages of personal power. The class will include a personal assessment quiz at the end.

Hagberg has worked as a family counselor, a university teacher and administrator, and a home economist. She has written four books.

Cost is $5 for the lecture and refreshments. People are asked to pay at or send payments to the Cassia County Extension Office, 1451 Overland Ave., Room 2, Burley 83318. Seating is limited to 20 people. For more information call 678-9461.

Father starts legal action over daughter's overdose

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Larry Jensen wants to make sure no one else dies of an accidental drug overdose at Bingham Memorial Hospital.

Jensen's 14-year-old daughter, Lori, died last month while recovering from surgery at the Blackfoot hospital.

The girl's right ovary was removed on Jan. 24. At that point, someone changed her pain medication from morphine to meperidine, also known as Demerol, without changing the dosage administered by a mechanical device.

Lori was found dead at about 2 a.m. on Jan. 25.

Autopsy results released last week said the Wapello girl died of an accidental overdose of meperidine.

"I want them to straighten the mess out is what I want. I don't want any one else dying," Jensen said Wednesday. "I think there's something wrong out there. Hey, there's no reason she should have died. There's got to be something wrong."

The father has started legal action against the county hospital. Bingham

Memorial administrator Robert Peterson said the hospital's insurance carrier instructed him not to comment on the case.

The hospital also faces legal challenges from former employees and one patient. The Bingham County Commission has denied five tort claims, which are required before a lawsuit can be filed against a government agency.

Three former nurses claim they were fired to stop them from discussing their contention that safety conditions at the hospital were deteriorating.

Peterson said there was no connection between those concerns and Lori's death. Bingham County Commission Chairman Dale Arave agreed, "It was probably just a coincidence." But he said convincing people might be difficult.

"At this point in time, there doesn't seem to be a major lack of confidence in the hospital," Peterson said.

Arave said Jensen's lawyers already have met with hospital officials, and he expects the case would be settled.

Shirts spoof energy departments radiation compensation promises

SPOKANE (AP) — People who criticize his glow-in-the-dark shirts spoofing Department of Energy proposals to compensate radiation experiment victims are missing the point, Bill Voiland says.

"The point is not so much to make fun of the victims as it is to make fun of the government offering free money," Voiland said of his Radiation Accumulation Determination shirt kits.

"If anybody feels they're hurt by it, I'll send 'em a letter, maybe a free sticker, or a radiation discount."

Energy Secretary Hugh O'Leary is reacting hysterically to reports that some people were unwittingly exposed to radiation during tests from the 1940s through 1960s, Voiland contends.

His R.A.D. shirt kits contain a postcard to O'Leary's office, offering the buyer a chance to request immediate compensation from the government. The sender can check amounts of $1,000, $10,000, $100,000, or fill in a blank for an amount of the sender's choice.

Turn out the lights and a large dollar sign appears on the front of the $16.95 T-shirts, or $24.95 sweatshirts.

Tasteless, said the executive director of a Spokane-based Hanford nuclear reservation watchdog group.

Lynn Stembirge of the Hanford Education Action League likened the shirts to making fun of someone struck by a hit-and-run driver.

"If you've seen an interview with an atomic veteran, or a downwind worker who has buried children who died from leukemia, this is in appalling bad taste," Stembirge said. "I don't think most downwinders are out there for a buck. They want the truth."

A shave and a haircut

Trustees name superintendent

MARSING (AP) — Trustees have selected the superintendent intern and curriculum director for Montana's Big Fort School District as the new superintendent for the Marsing School District.

Daniel Arriola, 39, is a former Parma High School principal. He will replace Joe Whitten, who is retiring. Arriola will begin his duties on July 1 at a base salary of $47,000.

Marsing just implemented a five-year plan as far as curriculum and facilities and finances, and we need someone to drive that," school board Chairman Joe Usabel said. "We figured this might be our man. He is very energetic."

Arriola was principal at Parma High School from 1989 to 1991, and principal at Goldendale Middle School in Washington from 1991 to 1993.

He earned a master's degree from Boise State University, a master's in school administration from the University of Idaho, and educational specialist and superintendent credentials from the University of Idaho.

Teen-ager touts abstinence as safest sex

DEAR ABBY: I applaud your response to "17 and Well-Informed." You said that abstinence is the only foolproof protection against venereal disease and unwanted pregnancies.

In an era and in a society where it is assumed that adolescents and young adults are having sex anyway, your statement bears repeating. If all sexually active young people would be motivated to cease their sexual activity outside of a committed, monogamous relationship, a host of national crises such as teen-age pregnancies, abortions, and unwanted and abused children could be virtually eliminated.

Today's youth needs to realize that sexual activity does not need to preclude finding an identity and proving maturity. It can, in fact, inhibit both. I challenge my peers to take offense at the assumption of our educators that we do not have control over our own bodies.

I am not writing from a nursing home or a monastery. I am a 19-year-old college girl who recently met a wonderful man whom I hope to marry someday. And when we do marry, we will consummate our marriage in complete confidence that neither of us is infected with a venereal disease, nor will we have to struggle with guilt feelings from past sexual encounters. He is 20, and also a virgin.

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

— 19 AND PROUD TO BE A VIRGIN, LEBANON, PA.
Thank you for helping to convince sexually active young people that the only safe sex is no sex. And although condoms reduce accidental pregnancies and venereal disease, they are not foolproof.

DEAR ABBY: Here is what happened to me: I sat down one morning and wrote out Christmas cards.

When I got to the W's in my address book, my fingers were numb. (I have the start of carpal tunnel syndrome.) I sent my brother and his wife a Christmas card, but on the envelope, I addressed it using his first and last name. On the inside of the card, I addressed it to all the family and sent a gift certificate, and wished them a happy trip, as they were going away.

Two weeks went by, and I got the card back marked "refused." I checked the address, and it was right, so I phoned my sister-in-law who said she rejected it because it had only my brother's name on the envelope!

Was I wrong to have addressed it that way? I addressed it like that on several other holiday cards and no one complained. (They were happy to get a card.) Is my sister-in-law hung up on manners and protocol?

— PATTY H., BONITA, CALIF.

DEAR PATTY: You should have addressed the card to both your brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. ( ). However, your sister-in-law was petty and rude to have returned it marked "refused." DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to Patricia Murck's letter regarding the abortion issue. I don't understand how, after editing five years worth of videos and writings concerning abortion, she could have come to a conclusion about the pro-life movement that is so completely wrong.

Pro-life DOES encourage information on birth control (not just abstinence) and sex education. It also promotes the fact that all children, born and unborn, are precious — and all human life should be afforded the respect and dignity that it deserves.

Heart Association seeks items

The Times-News

BOISE — The Idaho Affiliate of the American Heart Association has planned a State of the Heart silent auction to raise funds to aid in the fight against cardiovascular diseases.

The event is a showcase of unique items promoting tourism and special events throughout Idaho. Items to donate include such things as getaway bed and breakfast packages, complimentary weekend hotel accommodations, restaurant packages, white water trips, rodeo tickets, pieces of art and others that highlight the uniqueness and creativity of Idaho.

Items received will be listed for auction in a State of the Heart brochure. Complementary items may be packaged in order to encourage higher bids. Items of highest value and the most unique items will receive their own listings. All participants will receive an ample supply of brochures upon request for distribution. Participants will be included in all news releases and media efforts. Items will be on display at various shopping malls and other store-front windows.

Brochures will be distributed through mailings and face-to-face deliveries. Bidders may call or fax their bids to the American Heart Association between May 13 and June 17. The individual submitting the highest bid on any given item by June 17 will receive that item. To be included in the State of the Heart brochure, donated auction items must be received no later than April 30. Send items to the American Heart Association, Attention: John Pratt, 270 S. Orchard, Suite B, Boise 83705.

The Idaho Affiliate's goal for 1994 is to raise $75,000 from the auction. It would like to have at least 75 items donated.

Boy earns Eagle Scout

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Randy Tolman has earned the Eagle Scout Award through the Boy Scout of America. The award will be presented to Randy at a court of honor set for 7 p.m. Thursday at the Twin Falls LDS 3rd Ward Church on Elizabeth Boulevard.

To earn the award, scouts must complete 21 merit badges and an Eagle project. For his project, Randy built a podium and a bench for the Department of Corrections on Washington Street. Randy, 17, is a junior at Twin Falls High School, where he is a member of the Chamber Singers.

He is a member of Troop 100, sponsored by the Twin Falls LDS 3rd Ward.

Woman pleads with commission to stop Gritz from moving to area

GRANGEVILLE (AP)—The Idaho County Commissioners heard from a woman pleading with them to stop James "Bo" Gritz and his followers from moving into Idaho County.

The woman, who did not identify herself, spoke with the commissioners over a speaker telephone during the board's regular monthly meeting on Tuesday.

Claiming to be "the only Jewish family in Kamiah," the woman said she is frightened of the report that Gritz, who has been labeled by a human rights group as anti-Semitic, is taking up residence on property he and others have purchased near Woodland, about seven miles north of Kamiah.

"I think they bought their property under false pretenses," the woman said.

The commissioners were sympathetic to the woman's concerns, but said there is no way they can stop Gritz from coming to Idaho County.

"Legally we don't have any right to deny access to this county to anybody," Commissioner Patrick Long said.

The Portland-based Coalition for Human Dignity issued a report last week saying Gritz and his followers plan to establish what they call a "Christian Covenant Community, a base of operations for Christian patriot tax protesters and anti-Semitic fanatics."

Gritz has been unavailable for comment.

County installs panic buttons after threats

MOSCOW (AP)—Threats against Latah County elected officials and employees have prompted installation of courthouse "panic buttons" that will summon emergency help from the sheriff's department.

County commissioners, who have received death threats, have approved a $1,262 expenditure for 11 new wireless transmitters around the courthouse. The county already has eight such devices in courtrooms and in offices where money is handled.

"We've had some bad phone calls," Ann Alexander, commissioners' assistant and risk manager for the county said.

Those calls include a death threat against Commissioner Shirley Greene that came in to Alexander. The person on the other end said, "We're going to get Shirley."

Alexander said it is not an isolated incident.

"I've received death threats," Commissioner Mark Solomon said. "Mine usually come mailed."

Solomon has turned those letters over to the sheriff's department.

Alexander said she herself received a threat from someone who said she'd be asked if commissioners didn't do what the caller wanted.

Only Hispanic judge seeks election in Canyon County

Third District Judge Sergio Gutierrez, 39, announced Wednesday that he would run for the Canyon County bench in the May 24 election. So far he is unsupported.

Gutierrez, who replaced retired 3rd District Judge Jim Duallite, said Tuesday he still feels like a newcomer and plans to make an impact in the months ahead. "I'm just getting off the ground. I don't think we can consider the first couple of months even getting off the ground," he said.

Sydney Omarr Horoscope

IF FEBRUARY 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have unusual voice, sense of drama, can be self-indulgent, must constantly be alert where diet, nutrition is concerned. Members of opposite sex find you attractive but many are reluctant to make commitments. You are sensitive, psychic, capable of knowing what will be fashionable or otherwise.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Freedom! Scenario features travel, writing, reading, expressions of love. Restrictions removed — all stops out! People want to be with you, you exude "joyousness."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some people will claim, "You're sticking too close to home!" Focus on family relationships, domestic adjustment, flowers, gifts. Love will not be unrequited.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): Emphasis on being "up and about." Recovery from setback almost miraculous. Accent style, perceptiveness, ability to perfect technique. Involvement of third party expected. Security!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Money all about — don't stay too long, cash in chips. Spotlight on responsibility, personal possessions, income potential. Lost article located, apparent loss boomerangs in your favor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What you do "naturally" receives round of applause. Reach beyond previous restrictions — go for wider audience, get better display for prices, talents. Libra involved, these letters in name: I and R.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money comes from surprise source — you earned it but almost forgot it. Intuition saves the day — follow hunch. Secret meeting topic agenda, provides spice. Leo will play outstanding role.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): More people express appreciation for your creative efforts. You might be dubbed "power behind throne." Focus on the unorthodox, do things your way despite those who express skepticism.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep resolutions relating to diet, nutrition. You'll star at social function. Accent versatility, diversity, humor. Leo moon coincides with promotion, added prestige.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Review Scorpio message. Stick to familiar ground — refuse to be diverted to erroneous path. Spotlight on philosophy, education, spirituality, journey. Don't go off course. Style!

CAPIORUM (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Additional information regarding relative concerning money, possible inheritance. Dig deep for information, reject superficial responses. Flirtation might lead to something serious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on home, property, family, information concerning money and how it got that way. Attention also revolves around legal rights, business partnership, marital status. Yours involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Psychic faculties surge forward — refine techniques, emphasize quality, promote illusion. Means don't be "earthbound." Permit imagination to soar.

MacArthur no party animal

General Douglas MacArthur didn't go to parties. Those who believed their futures could be foretold in dreams a century ago — and they were — thought a married man, who dreamed of a garter, was about to get into a terrible fight with his wife, because she would find out about his romantic affairs.

Tomatoes are full of dirt. Red tomatoes are full of clay. White tomatoes are full of water. If Michigan held the letter of its state law against foretelling the future for money, both weather predictors and stock advisers could be fined and jailed. Or so contends a legal precisionist.

A Japanese proverb goes: "All married women are not wives." It's a saying that means different things to different people. What does it mean to you? "Are you happy, and if so, why?" Sociology students sometimes poll the public with that sort of query. An instructor who overzealously says he's concluded the happiest people are those who answer by saying they have no idea.

Lentil soup certainly has been around a long time. Biblical scholars say it was the "mess of pottage" eaten by Esau in Genesis.

Historians say Benjamin Franklin and Alexander Hamilton were the only two founding fathers not born into some sort of upper class.

Nothing in baseball's big league rules says a bat can't weigh as much as 100 pounds, if that suits the batter.

Marshal takes office in face of budget cuts

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's new U.S. marshal said his greatest challenge will be "doing more with less" because of expected federal budget cuts while maintaining an office of "good, professional, quality people."

"That's what we have now," former Pocatello Police Chief Jim Benham said Tuesday as he was sworn in to lead the 20-member Marshals Service office in Boise.

Benham, 49, said he hoped to be sworn in quietly at the federal building with his wife, Elizabeth, and a few friends, before heading upstairs to his new desk. Instead, the ceremony drew television cameras, a courtroom full of state and federal officials, Attorney General Larry Echo Hawk, and a contingent from the office of Congresswoman Larry LaRocco.

U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge administered the oath of office.

Benham was confirmed by the Senate on Feb. 10 to replace Republican appointee Mike Johnson. He was nominated by President Clinton on LaRocco's recommendation after 25 years with the Pocatello Police Department, the last five as chief.

Marshals guard federal courts, serve warrants, track fugitives and protect federal witnesses.

"My five years as chief were mostly administrative," Benham said. "But I still plan to go out in the field."

Plan seeks $127 million in property tax relief

BOISE (AP) — If enacted, a bill introduced in the House tax committee on Wednesday would be the largest property tax cut in state history.

Sponsors were optimistic that the measure, which contains many proposals defeated in the past, as a package could win enough support to trim property taxes $127 million statewide.

In return, the 5 percent state-sales tax would be imposed on some services that now are exempt.

The bill was approved for introduction with limited discussion by the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

A subcommittee will start on it right away, said Chairman Steve Antone.

The chairman of the Senate tax committee, Sen. Jerry Thorne, took part in the final tooling of the measure.

"It certainly is a culmination of what we thought we learned this summer through our tax hearings," Thorne said. "As it stands now, I would want to support it. It's had some good minds working on it, good input, good study. Let's roll it."

Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus has proposed many of the same things over the years but couldn't get the GOP-dominated Legislature to go along.

Last year he presented a property tax package that would have cut property taxes $64.6 million and generated another $65.1 million in tax revenue. He got nowhere and this session didn't try again.

Andrus told the Idaho Press Club on Wednesday he supports the concept embodied in the plan, but doubts the Legislature will adopt it.

"You're talking about putting it (sales tax) on goods and services that heretofore have been exempt and that's not going to be easy," Andrus said.

The measure was drawn up by a bipartisan coalition of Democratic Rep. Wally Wright of Bayview, Republican Reps. Golden Linford of Rexburg, Allan Larsen of Blackfoot and Tom Loertscher of Idaho Falls, and GOP Sen. Stan Hawkins of Ucon.

"Not everyone is going to like this change," said Linford. He said the proposal was the 20th draft of the legislation.

"After a long and sometimes difficult labor, a baby is born," he said, as he gave the 38-page bill to the committee.

"A pretty obese baby," quipped Antone.

The measure would:

- Remove local school maintenance and operation from property taxes.
- Make more purchases subject to the sales tax. Telecommunication services would be taxed, along with lottery sales, repairs and some construction labor.
- Take away from people with incomes over $20,000 the $15 per person tax credit designed to offset the sales tax on groceries.
- Make homeowners a higher property tax exemption. They now can exempt up to $50,000 of a home's value from property tax. The bill would make it up to $60,000.
- Mandate that anyone who must make quarterly estimated tax payments to the federal government would have to make quarterly payments to the state. Linford said that would generate a one-time windfall of $52 million, which could be used to ease transitional problems.
- Andrus proposed the same thing last session, estimating the one-time revenue at $50 million.
- Keep taxing districts from increasing budgets more than 3 percent from one year to the next unless 51 percent of the voters approve.
- Remove the personal property tax from about one-third of the items now subject to it, but the purchases would be subject to sales tax.

Hong Kong adopts ill-fated reforms

HONG KONG — Lawmakers adopted the first phase of Gov. Chris Patten's democratic reforms early Thursday, ignoring Chinese threats to scrap the changes when it reverts the colony in 1997.

After 10 hours of heated debate, the 60-member Legislative Council approved Patten's electoral bill on a voice vote. The vote paves the way for further reforms and will almost certainly provoke reiterations from Beijing.

The bill contained what Patten said were the least contentious elements of his reform package unveiled in October 1992. It lowers the voting age to 18 from 21, scraps appointed local council seats and introduces single-member districts for 1994-1995 elections, Hong Kong's last as a British colony.

New Russian parliament hits Yeltsin

MOSCOW — In its first major action, Russia's new parliament took a swipe at President Boris Yeltsin Wednesday by granting amnesty to leaders of the 1991 Soviet coup and the hard-liners who fought him last fall.

Yeltsin, who disbanded the last parliament just five months ago, issued an angry statement denouncing the vote as a "dangerous path which contradicts the national interests."

"Regrettably, having barely started its work, the State Duma has shown that it hasn't drawn any lessons from the bitter experience of the Supreme Soviet," said Vyacheslav Kostikov, Yeltsin's press secretary. The vote came one day before Yeltsin is to deliver his first, long-delayed speech to parliament's powerful lower chamber, the State Duma.

Israel: Troops leave when accord signed

JERUSALEM — Israeli troops will start leaving the Palestinian autonomy zones the minute a full agreement on self-rule is sealed, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said Wednesday.

Peres also echoed the chief Palestinian negotiator, Nabil Shaath, who said in Egypt that an agreement on security and civilian government issues could probably be reached within three weeks.

In Paris, though, negotiators ran into difficulties in talks on economic relations between Israel and the autonomy zones planned for the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank region around Jericho.

Explosion at fireworks market kills 16

BEIJING — An explosion at an outdoor market specializing in fireworks killed 16 people and injured 17, an official newspaper said Wednesday.

Vendors lit firecrackers near their stalls, causing sparks that ignited boxes of fireworks at the roadside market in Yuanzhi county in northern China, the Industrial and Commercial Times said.

The explosion, which occurred Feb. 5, also destroyed 19 tractors and 11 bicycles and shattered windows in three nearby buildings, the report said.

S. African president lashes out at ANC

POSTDENE, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk lashed out at the African National Congress Wednesday after young rock-throwing protesters disrupted one of his campaign appearances and forced cancellation of another.

De Klerk was hit in the neck, reportedly with a paper wad, and the South African Press Association said a youth was arrested later for pointing a toy gun at de Klerk's motorcade.

Groups of supporters of de Klerk's National Party later clashed with ANC rivals at the site of the canceled appearance Wednesday night. De Klerk wasn't present, but when a National Party official announced the rally in the Rodepoen township was called off, the opposing groups threw rocks at each other and some shots were fired.

Police fired tear gas to separate the groups, and one man seen shooting an automatic pistol was arrested. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

Aidid says leaders near Somali pact

NAIROBI, Kenya — Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid said Wednesday he and other Somali faction leaders are near agreement on a transitional government, an initiative the militia chief apparently hopes will foil a U.N. democracy plan.

Aidid, who fought a five-month war against U.N. forces, declined to go into specifics at a news conference in Nairobi. But he said the government would be made up of nominated representatives from all 15 of Somalia's major factions.

Bosnia, Croats sign cease-fire

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian government and Bosnian Croat military chiefs, under mounting diplomatic pressure, signed a cease-fire agreement Wednesday.

The agreement will become effective Friday, Croatian state television reported.

While previous cease-fires have all collapsed, there was heightened pressure on both sides to silence their guns in the wake of a two-week truce around the Bosnian capital Sarajevo.

Word of the accord came after almost five hours of negotiations in the Croatian capital, Zagreb, between Rasim Delic, the Bosnian government commander, and Ante Roso, the Bosnian Croat commander.

Significantly, the talks were attended by Gen. Jean Cot, the U.N. commander in all of former Yugoslavia, and Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, the commander of U.N. forces in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

No details of the agreement were immediately known, but the cease-fire would apply to central Bosnia, Mostar and other parts to the southeast of the warring republic where the two sides have been locked in bitter fighting for at least 10 months.

A woman and her daughter move a stove on a makeshift sled as a child collects firewood for heating Wednesday in Sarajevo.

The United States considers an end to the fighting between Bosnian Croats and Muslim-led government forces in central Bosnia crucial to an overall peace settlement. Numerous previous cease-fires have failed. Bosnian Croats and the government were initially allies, but are now battling for the 30 percent of Bosnia not claimed by the Serbs.

The cease-fire agreement reflected a new diplomatic push in the wake of the success of NATO's demand that Bosnian Serbs remove their heavy weapons from around Sarajevo.

There have been hopes that the plan that worked for Sarajevo, would work elsewhere in the country, but the shooting on Tuesday of five Swedish peacekeepers near the government-held city of Tuzla underscored the difficulty of realizing those hopes.

NATO jets were called to fly over for U.N. peacekeepers after the Tuesday shooting.

The alliance jets flew low over the area later in the day but did not fire because of lack of specific target information, U.N. officials said today. But NATO warned that it would use air power to protect peacekeepers.

The NATO deputy secretary-general, Sergio Silio Balanzino, said the Western alliance "was ready to intervene and provide whatever measure was deemed necessary ... close air support, even air strikes."

It was at least the third time in recent months that NATO jets monitoring a U.N.-declared no-fly zone have been asked to overfly areas where Nordic troops have come under fire.

But Tuesday was the first time warplanes were called in to fly over since NATO's threat to bomb any Serb heavy weapons not removed from Sarajevo by last Monday.

Sudan agrees to air drops for starving southerners

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — After denouncing the U.S. ambassador for visiting war-torn southern Sudan, the government has agreed to his request for air drops of relief food to aid the starving people he saw there.

The official Sudan News Agency also reported Wednesday that Foreign Minister Hassan Abu Salih said his ministry knew in advance of Ambassador Donald Petterson's plans to visit rebel-controlled southern areas.

On Sunday, the ministry told the agency that Petterson's three-day visit last week violated Sudanese sovereignty and showed "open alignment by the United States with the rebel movement."

Petterson visited areas of recent fighting, travelling from Nairobi, Kenya, where most relief operations for southern Sudan are headquartered.

He told reporters in Nairobi after the trip that bombing raids had forced thousands of refugees to flee camps near Sudan's borders with Zaïre, Uganda and the Central African Republic. He said the refugees were living in fear and near starvation in the bush.

The Sudanese military is the only force in the war with aircraft, but it has denied involvement.

The government claims the fighting is between factions of the rebel Sudan People's Liberation Army, but rebel leaders and relief workers in the area have denied this.

The Sudanese news agency said Petterson briefed Abu Salih on Tuesday about his southern tour.

"The ambassador told the minister that he had noticed displacements of people from a number of camps ... (who) need relief to be dropped to them from the air," the agency said.

It said the government agreed to such an operation, but did not say who would carry it out or when it might begin.

Both sides in the 11-year civil war have sometimes blocked food deliveries, arguing the other side would use relief planes for military purposes.

Measurements cause cartridge confusion

Cartridge nomenclature is a little confusing but can be very interesting.

There is no universal standard for the naming of cartridges and the confusion is increased by the fact that both metric and English measurements are used.

The .308 Winchester is the same cartridge as the 7.62 X 51mm NATO and the .358 Winchester is known in Europe as the 8.8 X 51mm. (The 51mm denotes the length of the case.)

Often the nomenclature reads more like a code or formula than a name. Many cartridge names not only include the caliber or bore diameter, but added names and numbers which are intended to distinguish between different cartridges of the same caliber.

David Hocklander
Hunting

When unlocked, these nomenclature codes reveal many interesting and useful facts about the cartridge.

A look at some of the more common cartridges will prove how cartridge nomenclature can be both confusing and informative.

The .223 Remington is the same caliber and cartridge as the military's 5.56mm. (Both can be fired in such well known rifles as the Ruger Mini-14, the AR-15, and the M-16.)

That must mean that the .243 Winchester is just another name for the 6mm Remington but that would be too easy. They are the same caliber but not the same cartridge.

Then consider that the .240 Weatherby is not a .240 caliber but a .243 caliber bullet in a specialized case. Then there is the .44 Magnum which is not a .44 caliber but .429. The .357 magnum actually shoots a .38 caliber bullet.

Let's face it, the numerical notations can be a little misleading.

It is very common for cartridge nomenclature to include a name. It may be the manufacturer such as Mauser or Savage, or it may bear the name of its creator like Weatherby.

What is most difficult to understand are the notations which represent distinguishing features of the cartridges. Even when the caliber—which is usually the first number—is given accurately, the meaning of these trailing notations can be hard to interpret.

A good example is the venerable .30-30. This notation came from the original load which was a .30 caliber 160 grain bullet charged with 30 grains of smokeless powder. The .30-06 is the 1906 model of this .30 caliber cartridge.

Put a .45 caliber bullet over 70 grains of black powder and you have a .45-70. The study of nomenclature can turn confusion to logic as these hidden messages are revealed.

The name .250-000 relates the story of a .25 caliber bullet which was originally pushed from its Savage case at 3000 feet per second. About twenty years later this .250-000 case was necked down to .22 caliber and the .22-250 was born.

There are other cartridges which carry their genealogy in their name. The .25-06 borrowed its case and its last name from the .30-06 but another descendant of the .30-06, the .270, is not called the .27-06.

Some cartridges gave birth to several new varieties. Take the .308 Winchester which provided the cases for the .243 Winchester and the .358 Winchester (plus several wildcats). They could have been called the .243-308 or the .358-08 but it just didn't happen that way.

Finally some cartridges have descriptive words attached. A "magnum" is a cartridge which is more powerful, has a longer case, or has a larger powder capacity in relation to the size of the bore.

The "improved" notation usually means the shoulder of the case has been sharpened to increase powder capacity and increase performance.

The "swift" in the .220 Swift aptly describes one of the fastest of all cartridges.

The 9mm has two descriptors depending on which country you are in at the time—in Germany it is the Luger and in the rest of Europe it is the Parabellum.

When all is said and done research into the nomenclature of cartridges can be fun and informative. Besides, such trivia might sometime win you a friendly bet or two.

MAGIC MOUNTAIN—Most folks don't know it, but an overnight ski trip to the Thompson Creek Hut would do them a world of good.

It's a chance to experience Mother Nature on her own terms, get some healthy exercise and rediscover the joys of friendship. The cares of modern civilization fade to insignificance, while the texture of newly fallen snow assumes new importance.

Out there, ermine tracks in the snow carry more significance than scowls from the boss. Some friends and I spent a night there last weekend—and we're still savoring the adventure. In our view, weekend trips into the back-country make Monday mornings much easier to face.

The Thompson Creek adventure got rolling on Saturday, when I met John Meyer for breakfast at The Buffalo Cafe. John is a charter member of the High Desert Nordic Association, which operates the hut. Actually, Meyer's outdoor credentials stretch all the way back to World War II, when he served with the U.S. Army's famed 10th Mountain Division.

Needless to say, John Meyer is a good man to have along in the back-country.

Fortified by coffee and omelettes, we embarked on the almost-an-hour drive through Hansen, up Rock Creek Canyon to the Magic Mountain Ski Area. We parked next to the lodge, hauled out our equipment and prepared to hit the trail.

The parking area was a-bustle with throngs of cheery downhill skiers, clumping around in ungainly plastic boots. They eyed us—with our leather boots and rucksacks—like we were escapees from a halfway house for the criminally insane.

Moments later, we were far from the ogling crowd—gliding through three inches of fresh snow on the Rogerson road. After a mile or so, we passed a scattered collection of cabins and all evidence of prior travel vanished.

From that point on, we had nothing but pure, untracked snow beneath our skis. Overhead, a warm sun was inlaid in a flawless blue sky. It was, as they say in the Himalaya, an auspicious day.

The most direct route to the hut runs along the Rogerson road, then forks off on the Upper Penstemon Trail. That route, which is clearly marked, is an easy 3.6 mile jaunt.

Fortunately, we had plenty of time and energy—and the day was far too nice to take the shortest route. Meyer, who knows the trail system as well as anyone, chose to continue up the road toward Deadline Ridge.

As a newspaperman, I'm skeptical of anything involving deadlines, but the ominously named ridge was a delight. The name, according to local lore, stems from the fact that cattle grazed on one side, while sheep grazed on the other; any animals that crossed over wound up dead—hence the name.

Once atop the ridge, we were confronted with an enormous sweep of territory that took in much of southern Idaho. To the west lay the Jarvis Mountains, while the Soldier Mountains dominated the view to the north. To the east was Independence Mountain and the Granite Peaks were visible in Nevada.

It was a view worth whooping and hollering about—and we had it all to ourselves.

Our solitude was finally broken by several groups of snowmobilers. Their presence was revealed by degrees—first we heard them, then we smelled them and, finally, we saw them. Accompanied by noise and fumes, they belonged to a different world than ours.

McKinney, 58, said he grabbed the deer around the neck and pushed it away, but the animal pressed the fight again. When the deer, which McKinney guessed weighed between 60 and 80 pounds, came at him a third time McKinney clenched his fist, set his feet and tagged the doe with a right jab.

"I popped it right in the mouth," he said. The doe went down for the count. "I told the others, 'Let's get out of here,'" McKinney said.

McKinney reported the incident to the state Department of Wildlife. He said he didn't think the deer was seriously hurt. "I wouldn't have hit it but I didn't know what else to do," he said. "It was getting mean."

Lee Stream, a state wildlife biologist in Yakima, said the encounter was most likely an attempt by the deer to test its dominance over the humans. Wild animals that have been tamed lose their fear of humans, he said, and in the wild, fighting is often a means of establishing a pecking order.

It's not unusual for an animal that's been tamed to attack humans, Stream said. "This just reinforced my opinion that people should never tame wild animals," McKinney said.

To their credit, the snowmobilers kept off the trails and stuck to the unplowed roads. Somehow, in that vast landscape, it felt like there was plenty of room for everyone. The snowmobilers even did us a favor by returning an errant member of our party, who took a wrong turn and skied off on his own.

After a short scamper along the ridge, we turned east and descended into the Thompson Creek drainage to find the hut. Like a bloodhound on a track, Meyer led us unerringly to the hillbilly Hilton.

The hut, actually a canvas wall tent stretched over a sturdy wooden frame, lies in a grove of trees at an altitude of about 7,200 feet. Approaching from above, the hut isn't marked. Skiers who approach along the Upper Penstemon Trail are guided by a succession of orange-topped poles.

To enter the hut, visitors must duck beneath a plastic tarp stretched between woodpoles that flank the doorway. Once inside, it doesn't take long to size up the decor: A woodburning stove, a propane cookstove, a table, two lanterns, three chairs and bunks—with foam pads—for seven people. At the bottom of it all, there's a plywood floor.

The real beauty of the hut lies in the fact that overnight visitors needn't bring much more than a sleeping bag and food. Pots, pans, plates and silverware—even sharp knives—are provided.

It didn't take long for us to get a fire going and whomp up some vittles. Soon, the hut was filled with the aroma of Uncle Bill's three-alarm curry. We began swapping tales and our words were punctuated by the clink of wine glasses.

"This is what it's all about," I remember thinking. "Being alone in the wilderness with good friends and no distractions."

Darkness fell and we threw a few more logs on the fire.

After a couple of hours, I stepped out to heed the call of Nature. A bright moon hung overhead and the show glistened like a field of diamonds. The trees were dusted with ice crystals and the scene was a page from a Hansel-and-Gretel fairy tale.

Turning to the tent, I found that it, too, held delight for the eye. The bright lamps cast vivid shadows on the translucent canvas, highlighting the movements of my friends within. I watched, transfixed, at the elegance of their unwitting shadow theater.

Simple pleasures for simple people, I suppose. At that moment, I wouldn't have traded that tent and those friends for another Saturday night anywhere on earth.

Twin Falls resident John Meyer, above, knows the trails near Magic Mountain as well as anyone. Below, Meyer shovels snow from atop the Thompson Creek Hut.

Hut reservations just a phone call away

The Times-News

An overnight stay at the Thompson Creek Hut isn't hard to arrange. For reservations, simply call Dennis Kincaid at 423-5442.

The hut is located on U.S. Forest Service land, but it is operated by the High Desert Nordic Association. Kincaid is a member of the nordic association and he'll mail you the requisite information—including a guest registration form, vehicle parking information, map and equipment checklist.

For association members, the overnight fee is $5 per person; for non-members, it's $15 a head. Membership in the High Desert Nordic Association costs $15.

On weekends, the minimum hut fee is $20 for members and $45 for non-members. On weekdays, there is no minimum fee for members and the non-member minimum fee drops to $30.

Visitors are obliged to bring their own food, clothes and personal equipment. Aside from those items, the hut is well-appointed for rustic back-country living.

In addition to bunks for seven people, the hut contains a propane cookstove and cooking equipment.

A pair of lanterns is provided, as well as a wood burning stove for heat. An ample supply of firewood, a splitting maul and snow shovels are kept outside. A simple latrine is located about 50 feet away.

There is no electricity or running water at the hut, but water can be obtained by melting snow.

A large bowl is provided for snow melt.

Judge may make final wolf decision, federal biologist says

The Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont.—The biologist in charge of the environmental impact statement on wolf reintroduction at Yellowstone National Park says he doesn't know whether the document's conclusions will stand.

"It beats me what's going to happen," said Ed Bangs, a biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. "I'm just ready for this whole thing to be over."

Release of the document is expected within the next couple of months.

Bangs said the final decision about reintroducing wolves to Yellowstone might be made by a judge.

A draft environmental statement recommended releasing experimental populations of wolves in Yellowstone and central Idaho in an effort to get the predators established in those places. Because the wolves would be classified as "experimental, nonessential populations," any that attacked livestock could be moved or killed.

Company requests netting ban

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore.—An aluminum company executive has asked an appeals court to halt the commercial gill-net season for spring chinook salmon on the Columbia River.

Kenneth D. Peterson Jr. asked the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco on Tuesday for a temporary restraining order. Peterson filed a lawsuit last week that claims the harvest kills fish that are protected under the Endangered Species Act.

On Friday, U.S. District Judge Malcolm Marsh rejected Peterson's claim that the states of Oregon and Washington acted illegally when they allowed the commercial season to begin Feb. 15.

Peterson, chief executive of Columbia Aluminum Co., filed the lawsuit as an individual, saying the harvest jeopardizes his children's chances of enjoying salmon in the future.

A similar lawsuit was filed in Seattle by Direct Service Industries Inc., an aluminum industry group. Commercial gill-net fishing is allowed for spring chinook returning to the lower Columbia. However, some Snake River spring chinook, protected as a threatened species, are caught inadvertently.

Russia leads medals race; U.S., Canada in battle for 5th place

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Russia leads the medal race entering the final stretch of the Winter Games but count on Norway to make the battle interesting heading to Sunday's close.

Bonnie Blair kept the U.S. team on line for its best finish ever. Trace "the Ace" Worthington in freestyle aerials and Diann Roffe-Steinrotter in the giant slalom may add to the nine medals so far today.

Still the U.S. team will be in close combat with Canada for fifth place overall until the end of the Games. They are tied going into today's events.

Both teams are in line for five or six more medals, and Saturday's short-track races should decide who finishes fifth. The U.S. record is 12 medals, set at the 1932 and 1980 Winter Games, both in Lake Placid.

Of course, there are more medal events now: 61, compared with just 38 in 1980 and 14 in 1932.

Canada already has its best Winter Games' haul, its nine medals topping the seven it won in 1932 and '72.

Germany has been surging in recent days and, along with Russia and Norway, appears to be the only nation capable of breaking the 20-medal mark. Italy, the surprise team of the Winter Games, already seems assured of fourth place with its best medal performance ever.

After Wednesday's medal events, Russia led with 21 medals, including 10 gold. Norway was second with 17 medals, including eight gold. Germany had 16 medals. Twenty events remain in the last four days.

If athletes live up to predictions, Norway is in line for eight medals, while Russia can count on no more than three or four. Germany could gain five more medals.

"From now on, it will depend on the form of the moment," said Valentin Sych, the head of Russia's team. And he said Norway could get the edge because of home-field advantage.

George Stenshoel, Norway's team leader, said it would take about 25 medals to top the charts, and the hosts are on track for the magic number.

Some athletes, like cross-country star Vegard Ulvang, have not lived up to expectations. But others, like freestyle ski gold medalist Styne Lise Hatstad, have outdone themselves to win gold.

Norway's emergence as a top Alpine skiing nation could give it up to four more medals. In the Nordic skiing events, including the blue-ribbon 50-kilometer men's race, Norway should add another four.

One women's cross-country race and one women's biathlon are the best hopes for more Russian medals. So far, little has gone wrong for Russia, which has gained unexpected wins in men's speedskating and women's Alpine skiing.

For Germany, the top nation in the 1992 Albertville Games with 26 medals, the Games have been mixed.

After favorites Gunda Niemann and Kati Beyer failed to finish in the super-G, fortunes have turned around.

"It's been a good compromise between good and bad luck," said Heinrich Henze, head of the Olympic team office. Over the past few days, Germany has been on a roll.

Seizinger won the downhill and Markus Wasmeier won his second Alpine gold Wednesday, taking the giant slalom on top of the men's super-G. Jens Weissflog won two golds on the jumping hills for Germany and goes for a triple on the small hill Friday.

The Germans also have more medal chances in the four-man bobsled, the biathlon relay races and women's speedskating.

Up to Wednesday, everything seemed to go Italy's way. But even Alberto Tomba's crash in the giant slalom could not dampen enthusiasm.

Winning medals in almost every event it entered a credible challenger. Italy already has 15 and is assured of ending up the best nation among the traditional Alpine powers.

Austria, third in the Albertville medal table, is lagging in seventh place with seven medals. Switzerland, with four, and France, three, have had terrible times in Norway. These countries have few medal chances left.

Italian Tomba misses giant slalom gate, 3rd gold in event

OVER, Norway (AP) — Tomba Bomba-ed.

Alberto Tomba missed a gate in the giant slalom Wednesday and missed his chance for an unprecedented third straight gold medal in the event.

He also fell short in his first try at becoming the only Alpine skier to win medals in three straight Olympics, and the only to win four golds.

Tomba still has a chance to capture a fourth Olympic title in Sunday's slalom, his favorite event this season.

"I'm aware that Italian fans had a lot of expectations, but I go for all or nothing in the Olympics. And today it was nothing," said Tomba.

A man never at a loss for words, Tomba stood silent and stunned for some minutes at the finish line. Dozens of his shocked fans quickly put Italian flags away, their enthusiasm suddenly cooled down.

"You can not always have a good day," Tomba said as he recovered.

It was his second-worst effort of his three Olympics.

The 27-year-old skier from Bologna known as La Bomba for his explosive style between gates tumbled in his first and last Olympic super-G race at Calgary in 1988, before winning both the giant slalom and slalom.

He added one gold in the giant slalom and a silver in slalom at Albertville two years ago.

The faith of Tomba's supporters, who had captured the front rows at the Hafjell arena by lining up in freezing temperatures at dawn, had been already cracked in the first run.

The defending Olympic champion was a distant 13th, 1.19 seconds slower than Austrian leader Christian Mayer.

He trailed earlier finishers in the second run when he hit a blue gate in the bottom part of the course and missed the start.

"I was overly cautious in the first run, and overly fast in the second. I never skied a giant slalom course as fast as today's second run," Tomba said.

"I'm calm. I'm aware that years change, courses change, the results change. It was far better for me to miss a gate rather than finish seventh or eighth. Certainly I had been hopeful of another result today."

Italy's Alberto Tomba was disqualified for missing a gate in his second run in the men's giant slalom in Norway Wednesday.

He said that Markus Wasmeier's close victory "was really surprising as everybody had been betting on Aamodt, Thorsen or me."

"Markus took all the risks and he was lucky to make it to the finish line. I am really happy for him," said Tomba, who lifted Wasmeier onto his shoulders after the race. The veteran German skier won the Olympic super-G last week.

"Sunday is another day, and I hope it's a good one," Tomba said of the slalom. "I was faced with a lot of pressure in the last few days. If you leave me alone, I can do it. I can play the ace in the next race."

Russian skier will attempt to claim 10th medal in cross-country event

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — It's intermission for Tonya and Nancy, so turn the spotlight on Russian Lyubov Egorgova as she races for Olympic immortality. And be prepared to duck, because the Quebec Air Force is ready for takeoff.

Went out, too, for the U.S. Alpine team. Two straight races without a medal seems like eternity after a 4-for-4 streak, and the women's giant slalom provides a chance to get back on track.

Egorgova, a low-key superstar who tends to blush at compliments, has won either a gold or silver medal in all nine of her cross-country events over two Olympics.

A medal in today's 30-kilometer race would extend that unprecedented streak to 10 and tie her for most Winter Olympics career medals. A victory would make her the all-time gold medal leader for the Winter Games, she stands tied with Soviet speedskater Lydia Skoblikova at six golds each.

Egorgova has been playing down her chances before every race here, while racking up three golds and a silver, so her disclaimers before the 30K were less than convincing.

"It will be very difficult to win a medal again," she said after a relay victory Monday. "I am tired and it's a very long race. I don't think it's possible."

Her top challengers include teammate Elena Vialbe and Italy's Manuela Di Centa, along with Egorgova va a quadruple medalist in Lillehammer.

The 30K is one of six medal events Thursday — the most of any single day during the Games. Others include the women's giant slalom, the men's and women's freestyle aerials, the team Nordic combined and the women's 500-meter short-track speedskating.

There will be short-track qualifying heats for the men's 500 meters and 5,000-meter relay, plus four hockey consolation games. One of those will match the U.S. team against the Czech Republic, with the winner merely getting a crack at fifth place.

CBS will cover the giant slalom, cross-country, short track skating and aerials, as well as previewing Friday's finals of the women's figure skating featuring Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan.

TNT's afternoon coverage will include the Nordic combined as well as the other medal events.

The collective favorite in the men's aerials is the so-called Quebec Air Force — a trio of Canadians who have dominated the sport for seven seasons. Among them is Philippe LaRoche, the reigning world champion.

The women's favorite is Lina Chervazova, who could collect the first Olympic medal for Uzbekistan since the republic gained independence during the Soviet Union's breakup.

The top-ranking U.S. woman — Nikki Stone of Westborough, Mass. — was eliminated in qualifying, but Trace "the Ace" Worthington of Park City, Utah, is a medal contender in the men's final.

Favorites in the giant slalom include Deborah Compagnoni of Italy, defending gold medalist Pernilla Wiberg of Sweden and Vreni Schneider of Switzerland. Anita Wachter of Austria also is strong in the event, but questions linger as to whether she has shaken off the death of teammate Ulrike Maier after a downhill crash last month.

The Americans are outsiders, but that was the case last week when they won medals in four straight races, including a super-giant slalom gold for Diann Roffe-Steinrotter.

"The Olympics can be a great leveler," she said Wednesday. She'll try for gold No. 2 in the GS.

In the Nordic combined, Japan takes a commanding lead into the cross-country portion after winning the ski jumping leg Wednesday. The Japanese will start with a 5-minute, 7-second lead over Norway in the 30-kilometer relay.

We thought 3 minutes is good enough. Now it's 5, so we are sure to win the gold," said Japan's Kenji Ogawa, the world individual champion.

The U.S. team was seventh out of 12 teams after the jumping and could better the top American finish of eighth, achieved in 1992.

Contenders in the women's 500-meter short track speedskating include Cathy Young of Hilton, N.Y., and Nathalie Lambert of Canada.

Shimer edges Herberich in bobsled race

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Randy Will was all smiles, Brian Shimer breathed a sigh of relief and Jim Herberich left the Olympics stoned, beaten by two-hundredths of a second.

Will and Shimer won the two U.S. spots in this weekend's four-man bobsled race, with Will posting the fastest time in two trial runs.

Herberich, in his first Olympics as a driver, was just behind and out of luck. "I'm just psyched," Will said. "Like anyone, I hope to medal. But if I don't it doesn't really matter to me."

Will, 29, of Binghamton, N.Y., easily clinched a fresh shot at a medal in his third and last Olympics. He finished ninth in the four-man in 1992.

"We've been disrespected," said Will's side pusher, Jeff Woodard said. "This whole year has been Shimer, Shimer, Shimer. We've been beating Shimer in just about every race."

Shimer, who finished 13th in last week's two-man, has never driven a four-man at the Olympics.

His rivalry with Will has another dimension: Will is racing an Italian sled Shimer dropped for the all-American Bo-Dyn project financed by stock car racer Geoff Bodine.

"The Bo-Dyn sleds, they're still testing them," Woodard said. "It's just not the right time."

Will clocked a total time of 1 minute, 44.54 seconds. Shimer, of Naples, Fla., had 1:44.87; Herberich, of Winchester, Mass., had 1:44.89.

Herberich lost decisive time hitting the wall early in his second run. He was left looking back at a season as the up-and-coming U.S. driver.

"We just got beat by two-hundredths, that's really hard to swallow," crew member Chip Minton said.

Herberich finished 14th in the two-man.

Gustav Weder, considered the favorite for the four-man gold after successfully defending his two-man title last week, was guaranteed the Switzerland 1 spot before the Olympics.

USA pilot Brian Shimer narrowly survived a race for a spot on the four-man bobsled team Wednesday in Norway.

5% of competitors use asthma medicine

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Many Olympic athletes needed asthma medicine when they arrived in Norway because of cold weather, but few are still using the drugs during the Games, Olympic officials said Wednesday.

Prince Alexandre de Merode of Belgium, head of the IOC's medical commission, said 87 athletes have declared they are using asthma medicine before events, about 5 percent of the 1,880 competitors.

The percentage "is nothing strange," Merode said, and anti-doping tests have not turned up any violations of Olympic regulations.

The most used medicine is salbutamol, "which doesn't affect the performance of the athlete," he said. The drug dilates bronchial passages and makes breathing easier.

Some athletes, like U.S. figure skater Tonya Harding, have had asthma for years and regularly use medicine.

Others, practicing before the Games, found at first that physical effort in temperatures as low as minus-4 degrees brought on asthmatic symptoms, including shortness of breath.

The Lillehammer Olympics have been the coldest Winter Games in history.

CBS News quoted Merode Tuesday as saying "nearly 60 percent of the athletes begin to be asthmatic, and that is not normal."

But in an interview Wednesday, Merode said: "Before the Games, we had quite a high percentage recorded as using medication and having respiratory difficulties. But that has decreased."

The International Olympic Committee classifies medicines as banned, restricted or permitted. Salbutamol is permitted, meaning an athlete may use it if a doctor certifies that the drug is for therapeutic purposes.

Merode said a competitor may even use an anti-asthma inhaler during a long event, like the 50-kilometer cross-country skiing, when the effect of an earlier dose wears off.

"There is absolutely no issue here," IOC spokesman Andrew Napier said of the asthma medication. "But there is concern that some sports in very cold weather can cause health problems."

Cross-country skiers, particularly, risk damage to their breathing passages because of their prolonged effort in extreme cold.

"We have had consultations that confirm this possibility but we need to look into the question more deeply," Merode said. "Some studies will be made."

TOKYO — Japan's analog high-definition TV system sprang back to life Wednesday, a day after the top broadcasting administrator delivered a death sentence for the country's attempt to lead the next wave in electronics.

The suggestion that the government would switch its support to a digital-HDTV system — even when the other elsewhere drew angry protests from the public broadcasting network and electronics companies, both of which have invested heavily in analog HDTV.

So Akimasa Egawa, director of the Broadcasting Administration Bureau, on Wednesday retracted his statement and said the government will still promote the Japanese system.

The debate illustrated the difficulty of redirecting a huge, decades-long effort that has brought together just about everyone with a stake in Japanese broadcasting — even when a more advanced technology is emerging in the United States and Europe.

High-definition televisions, long seen as the next major leap in broadcasting, have a much sharper picture and a wider screen than conventional TV.

Japan is the only nation now broadcasting regular high-definition programs, nine hours a day in an experiment begun in 1991 that is now considered a sign of Japanese technological dominance.

Now, critics say the Japanese system is inferior to ones under development elsewhere because transmissions are in conventional analog format.

That makes it difficult to integrate a Japanese HDTV with computer-based multimedia equipment, such as problem the digital systems will not have. But those who have invested in analog are not about to give up without a fight.

"We've spent several hundred billion yen to a trillion yen (several billion dollars) and we've spent all this time, and now we've got the best in the world," said Tadahiro Sekimoto, head of the Electronic Industries Association of Japan and president of NEC Corp.

Mikio Kawaguchi, the president of the public Japan Broadcasting Corp., which developed the Japanese system, said it would be "entirely unwielded" to believe the decades-long development of HDTV was a mistake. He noted that there is no digital system in existence "at this time."

In retreating, Egawa said plans to begin full-time regular broadcasting in the future in 1997 will go ahead as scheduled.

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell on Wednesday, giving back most of Tuesday's gains, after investors decided they were concerned about inflation and interest rates after all.

Stocks were also pushed lower by a drop in bond prices that was fueled by a unsatisfactory auction of 2-year notes. The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 19.98 at 3,891.68.

Declining issues narrowly outnumbered advancing ones on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,177 down, 951 up and 642 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 309.9 million shares, against 270.67 million in the previous session.

Broad-market indexes were also lower. The NYSE's composite index fell 0.35 to 261.13, the Nasdaq index fell 2.04 to 789.11, and at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.64 to 471.74.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrials rose 24 points after Congressional testimony by Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan allayed investors' fears that inflation would prompt the Fed to raise interest rates. Greenspan said that while the Fed is likely to tighten credit, the timing of rate increases was not certain, and that "overall price pressures appear to remain dampened."

On Wednesday, traders took the view that inflation is at the door, and that it is likely to cause long-term problems for stock prices.

Lacking any fresh economic data or other market-moving news, stocks closely tracked bonds, which fell after a disappointing auction by the Treasury of 2-year securities.

The 30-year benchmark bond was off 17-32 and yielded 6.63 percent.

There were some big losses among economically sensitive stocks, including Alcoa, which fell 1 to 76; Goodyear, down 1 1/4 to 106 1/4; Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing, down 1/4 to 106 1/4; and United Technologies, off 1 1/4 to 67 1/4.

On the New York Stock Exchange, British Petroleum rose 1/4 to 65 1/4 on market-leading volume of 24.7 million shares on the NYSE, after adding 1/4 on Tuesday. Earlier this week the company reported substantial earnings gains. Analysts also attributed the rise to a trading strategy linked to the company's dividend payments.

Wal-Mart Stores added 1/4 to 29 1/4 in active trading on the NYSE.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"Women sometimes forgive a man who forces the opportunity, but never a man who misses one."
- Tallyrand.

"I make the game if diamonds are 3-3 or if I don't lose four heart tricks," announced South. "Not only was I unlucky, but also the opponents had to play perfectly."

"You overlooked an opportunity," observed North. Study the layout to see if you can spot what North meant.

South took his club king and started the diamonds by cashing his ace and leading another toward dummy. (West would have been better off dropping his jack under South's ace.) When West's jack appeared, South mumbled something about falsecards and took dummy's queen. When the diamond king brought a spade discard from West, South was forced to concede a diamond to East to establish his ninth winner.

This was the opening East needed. He switched to the heart jack to pick up South's queen and a low heart came back to East's king. A third heart through South's 9-6 resulted in four losers, and South's quest for an overtrick lost another cold game.

South went wrong when he tried for diamonds to be 3-3 (or for West to have four). When West plays the diamond jack at trick two, South should duck in dummy, allowing West to win. This blows an overtrick if West falsecarded with J-10-X, but it ensures the game because West cannot break the heart suit to get four defensive winners.

MUSIC LOVERS TEND TO BE RADIO ACTIVE

They really can't help it. It's instinctive. The song fades away, the first few words of your commercial come on and... (PUSH) your message is history.

Unfortunately for advertisers, radio listeners are a push-button, station-hopping bunch. Because it's the music, not your message, that matters to them most.

And how could you be certain to reach them anyway? Although nearly every household in the Magic Valley has a radio, less than 10% of them are actually turned on during the average quarter hour, 6 a.m. to midnight. Your ad dollars can only fall into the cracks of this extremely fragmented audience.

Newspaper advertising, however, is different. Newspapers let you show your product. Offer a coupon. And tell your story with no time restraints.

If you're currently advertising on radio, we'd like to change your tune. Call us at (208)733-0931 and discover the power of the printed word.
