Knight-Ridder News Service

HAMAR, Norway — This is the story we should have been following all along. The sad, now triumphant story of a little girl from Ukraine. You want to talk about courage? You want to talk about overcoming obstacles? About taking the worst that life can hand you and battling on? Then meet the new gold-medalist in women's figure skating. Her name is Oksana Baiul. With three recent stitches in her right shin and a bad back, she narrowly defeated Nancy Kerrigan in Friday night's finale of the women's Olympic figure-skating competition. And in doing so, finally brought some deserved joy into her life. She lost her father at age 2 when her parents separated. The grandfather who bought Baiul her first skates is dead. So, too, is the grandmother who helped raise her. She lost her mother to cancer at age 13. She lost her former coach, the man who worked with her for nine years, at age 14 when he abruptly left to seek a better life in Canada.

She lives in a country where food lines are a daily part of life. She is 5 feet 4 inches. She weighs 103 pounds. She is 16 years old. "She's had a difficult life since she was young. I don't know how to explain it to you," said Viktor Petrenko, the 1992 gold-medal skater who has befriended and supported her. "She's lost everything. She's lost her parents. She's lost her grandparents. Now that has made her a champion."

In a tight contest with Kerrigan, Baiul narrowly scored high enough marks to take five of the nine first-place marks. The scoring system is difficult and subjective, but the bottom line is this: both Baiul and Kerrigan skated wonderfully, but in the eyes of the judges, Baiul skated just a shade better. The silver went to Kerrigan, the bronze to Chen Lu of China. As for Tonya Harding? Already too far down in the standings to have a chance at a medal, she finished eighth. And was lucky to finish at all. After training for years for the moment, after surviving suffocating media scrutiny for the last two months, after filing the lawsuit, Harding almost was disqualified. "My lace broke. I cut it on the warm-up," Harding said. "I went to try and tighten it and it broke. And then we got another lace and it was too small. I tried to go out and skate with it anyway. I didn't have all the holes laced up." Harding made it out onto the ice seconds before the two-minute limit. She skated briefly, missed a jump, broke into tears and stopped. She asked permission. Sheriff may be close to solving 1970 Jerome slaying

By H.R. Weizel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — In 1970, a dairyman named Reuben Stohler was stabbed to death in his home southeast of Jerome. No one reported the crime until a 19-year-old milk hauler, George "Pee Wee" Silver III, noticed that Stohler's cows weren't being milked. "The murder was investigated but never solved," recalls Silver, now the Jerome County sheriff. "I never forgot it and now that I'm sheriff, I'm going to do my best to find out who murdered Reuben." Nearly 24 years later, Silver may be close to solving that crime. His department has identified a suspect: an ex-convict named Samuel Owens Barnett. "We have a prime suspect and are continuing the investigation," said Dan Chatterton, a Jerome County deputy now investigating the case. The story has taken more than one strange twist. Barnett, who lives in California, was permanently disabled by a gunshot wound two weeks after the murder. As a result of a bone infection, the arm whose hand might match a key palm print in the case may be amputated next week. On Sept. 10, 1970, Silver was hauling milk for his father, George Silver Jr. He made his usual mid-morning stop at the Reuben Stohler dairy. Silver normally picked up 12 or 14 teggallon cans of milk from Stohler. He recalls wondering why there were only five cans on that September day.

In the corral, the cows were bawling, their udders swollen. "They hadn't been milked," he said. Silver drove home and told his father. The next day, there was no milk to pick up, and the cows still had not been milked. The father and a neighbor "figured Reuben had gone someplace because his car was gone," Silver said, so they milked Stohler's cows. "It was something a neighbor or

U.S. expels Russian

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Retaliating for the CIA spy scandal, the United States expelled Russia's reputed top intelligence officer in Washington on Friday after Moscow refused to withdraw him. Officials left open the possibility of punishing other Russians if they're implicated: Aleksander Lyenko, described as a counselor at the Russian Embassy, was declared persona non grata and ordered to leave within seven days. Lyenko "was in a position to be responsible for the activities" of CIA agent Aldrich Ames and his wife, Rosario, State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said. He said Lyenko was the Washington "resident" of the SVRR, the successor to the Soviet KGB. Ames and his wife were arrested Monday on charges of selling secrets to Moscow from at least 1985 to 1993. The Russians protested the expulsion. American officials said it was likely now that an American intelligence officer would be expelled from Moscow, repeating the tit-for-tat pattern familiar in the Cold War era. Washington had tried to resolve the spy case with Moscow without resorting to an expulsion, hoping relations had matured enough to defuse the sensitive issue with the voluntary recall of Lyenko. However, Moscow refused to go along, perhaps out of concern that would leave Boris Yeltsin vulnerable to attack from his critics. Even in expelling Lyenko, the administration softened the blow by emphasizing the importance of strong ties with Russia and the continuation of reforms. Also, the seven-day deadline for his departure was not as harsh as it could have been.

North Koreans agree to nuclear inspections

The Associated Press

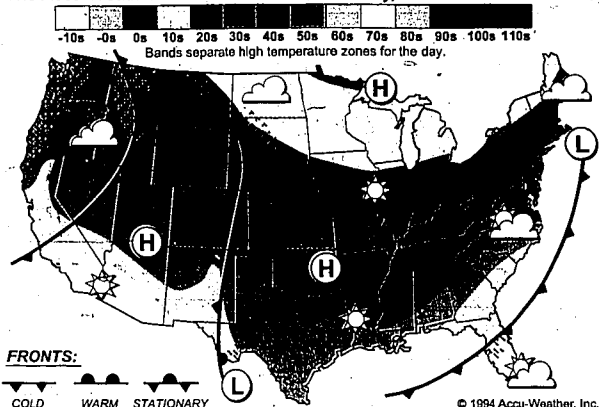

UNITED NATIONS — North Korea agreed Friday to allow U.N. inspectors to visit its nuclear facilities beginning March 1, U.S. and North Korean officials announced. North Korea, which had been resisting international pressure to open sites suspected of building nuclear weapons, has been threatened with economic sanctions if it didn't comply. Thomas Hubbard, a U.S. deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, said the agreement was reached during talks late Friday with Ho Jong, North Korea's deputy ambassador to the United Nations.

Earlier story — A3
The head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, Hans Blix, was to report Monday on whether North Korea leaders would admit agency inspectors. If they refused, the United States had threatened to take the issue to the U.N. Security Council, and possibly consider economic sanctions. Ho, the North Korean ambassador, denied after the talks that Washington had threatened economic sanctions. In the talks, Ho said, the United States agreed to call off joint military exercises this year with South Korea and resume talks on settling the nuclear issue.

Bitter cold extends from Montana to Maine

The Associated Press

Snow spread over the Midwest and strong winds sent temperatures tumbling well below zero from Montana to Maine on Friday.

The storm in the Great Lakes region produced heavy snow in the Chicago area, dropping 4 inches by late morning. That easily made this February the city's snowiest on record with 22.6 inches. The National Weather Service said the previous record was 21.5 inches in 1967.

More than a foot of snow was on the ground across much of North Dakota, eastern Montana, northern Wyoming, northern South Dakota and Michigan.

Milwaukee received 7 inches of snow, and up to 6 inches fell on northern Illinois and northwest Indiana. Muskegon, Mich., received 3 inches of snow in three hours. Southern Minnesota got up to 6 inches of snow overnight.

Snow also fell over the Olympic Mountains of Washington state.

Strong northwesterly winds ushered in arctic air through the central United States, producing bitterly cold wind-chill readings, including readings of 45 below in Nebraska and Iowa. The chill also surged through Montana, Wyoming, the Dakotas and Maine.

A low of 10 degrees below zero at Billings, Mont., broke the record for the day of 8 below set in 1960. In Casper, Wyo., it hit 13 below zero, breaking the record of 9 below set last year. Overnight it was 23 degrees below zero in the Montana towns of Cutbank and Havre.

Strong westerly winds also sent cold air into the Northeast, and snow was expected to arrive Saturday, with southern New England bracing for as much as 4 to 8 inches.

A winter storm watch was posted through today for southern Connecticut, Rhode Island and southeastern Massachusetts. Snow advisories were issued for southeastern New York, northern New Jersey and northeastern Pennsylvania.

In the Southeast, showers and thunderstorms struck southern Florida on Friday, and temperatures were in the 70s and 80s across the Florida peninsula.

Weather summary

Weak high pressure centered over Idaho Friday afternoon.

That allowed for some breaks in the clouds in the south while the area north of a line from Idaho Falls to Hell Canyon remained overcast with occasional light snow.

Temperatures across Idaho were split about like the cloud cover with highs only in the 20s and 30s under the overcast and in the mid-40s to around 60 where some sun broke through the clouds.

Only light precipitation fell across the state during the day.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 70 degrees at Hagerman. Spencer reported the lowest at 10 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 89 degrees at Miami, Fla. Havre, Mont., reported the lowest temperature at 26 degrees below zero.

Murder

friend would do in those days," he said.

Then-Sheriff James "Pat" Burns, now deceased, was notified and went to the farm on Sunday, Sept. 13. He found the kitchen door and a door to the basement open.

"Nothing seemed out of place around the outside area, so I returned home," Burns wrote in a report that remains in the sheriff's department files.

Stohler's son and daughter returned home Monday morning. "I contacted the son and was told that Mr. Stohler had not showed up," the file reads.

"Later I was contacted by the son, who stated that he had found his father in the basement," Burns wrote. Lying face down with his arms draped through the basement steps, the 60-year old man had been stabbed in the back. Photos from the autopsy report show four knife wounds.

"My sister and I got back from San Mateo at about 3 a.m. Monday morning," Delbert Stohler said in a telephone interview Friday. "We didn't find my father until 9 a.m. He was sitting on his legs with his head on the second step in the basement. He had tickets to the fair and a chicken was in the sink half cut up, like he was fixing it to cook."

There was no murder suspect at that time. Stohler's 1967 Ford Fairlane was found abandoned in Des Moines, Iowa on Sept. 30, 1970.

Fingerprints found on the vehicle were kept and have been enhanced with modern technology.

"Fingerprints deteriorate after that long, so they appear smudged and can't be matched to any law enforcement records," Chatterton said.

A good palm print is available, "but in those days they didn't keep track of palm prints, just fingerprints, so there is no match there," Chatterton said Friday.

Irrigation ditches at the farm were drained, but was swept from the house and used in the investigation, and the area was thoroughly searched. No murder weapon was found. A .22-caliber rifle, a stereo and some records were missing.

Barnett, now 61 and living in Stockton, Calif., had lived in Twin Falls and had done roofing jobs in the Magic Valley before Stohler's murder.

About a decade ago, Chatterton said, "an informant in San Joaquin said that Barnett admitted to killing a couple and stealing their money in 1969 or 1970, according to a letter from the San Joaquin (Calif.) sheriff's office which gave our lead to Barnett."

According to law enforcement records, "Barnett has an extensive and violent criminal record, stemming from 1950 to 1980 when he was arrested in Stockton," Chatterton said.

No charges have been filed in the case, and Barnett denies killing Stohler.

"I've done a lot of things wrong in my life and spent a lot of time in prison, but I've never killed anybody. I draw the line there," Barnett said.

Records show that on Sept. 23, 1970, Barnett was shot in Salina, Colo.

In a telephone interview Friday, Barnett said, "I was shot by a 72-year schizophrenic because I wouldn't take his money for a roofing job."

The shooting left Barnett a paraplegic, Chatterton said. Since then, he said, "his deterioration has forced amputation of both legs and may force the amputation of one arm next week."

Chatterton and Silver say anyone who remembers anything about the case should contact them at 324-8844.

ber of factors, not the least of which is how long it takes to get all the records transcribed," he said. "But if this turns out to be another defendant accepting the consequences of the crime, then we will be spared many years of litigation over it."

Wells was executed on Jan. 6. He first demanded that his appeals be dropped in a February 1993 letter, but the legal process began later.

Wood confessed to kidnapping Jernee Underwood last June 29 as she collected on her newspaper route. Her body was found eight days later in the Snake River in Idaho Falls. Wood said he shot the girl in the head the day after abducting her, then returned a week later to sexually violate and dismember her body.

Jernee's mother, Joyce Underwood, said Friday that the family learned about Wood's decision Thursday night, but she had no initial reaction.

Bannock County Prosecutor Mark Hiedeman said he had been hearing for several weeks that Wood was considering dropping his appeals.

"I wasn't surprised. From the first day we that we arrested him, we believed he felt that he wanted to take it all off his chest and take responsibility for what he had done," Hiedeman said.

"He is a loner, but on the other hand, he likes to be with other people," the prosecutor said.

Pocatello police Detective Kirk Nelson said he hoped Wood would use his remaining time to help authorities with other unsolved crimes that might have been committed by the confessed serial criminal.

Idaho Department of Correction spokeswoman Ann Thompson said Wood is refusing all interviews.

Jack Van Valkenburgh, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Idaho, said Wood's decision was unfortunate.

"We just don't believe that the state should ever be empowered to kill someone who need not present any further danger to society," Van Valkenburgh said.

Skater

to fix the lace and skate again, and was given it.

Her subsequent routine was solid, but nothing special.

Kerrigan, meanwhile, skated brilliantly, earning marks ranging from 5.7 to 5.9 that kept her momentarily in first. But a missed triple flip cost her too much.

Bailu came to Petrenko's attention in 1992 when he saw her at an ice rink. He was told her story, told she needed help. He took her on as a student while Galina Zmievskaya virtually adopted her. Now Zmievskaya is both coach and surrogate mother.

Bailu was second after Wednesday's technical program, but again, life decided to play dice games. A German skater collided with Bailu during practice Thursday, cutting open Bailu's shin and injuring her back. She was helped off the ice and given stitches.

She received pain-reducing shots in her back and kneed an hour before competing Friday, then performed a dazzling routine, skating to American show tunes. She missed a move early on, but decided to ad-lib a double-axel combination at the end that Petrenko said "won her the gold."

And then she cried. Cried loud and long.

Kerrigan will go on to millions in endorsements and movie deals. Harding to continued criminal investigations. And Bailu, probably, will finally go on to a better life.

How does she do it? How could a 16-year-old overcome so much sadness to achieve so much?

How?
"I believe the answer is in your question," she said. "That hard life, that difficult life, has made me strong."

Blood product might carry hepatitis C

WASHINGTON — A pharmaceutical company has begun a worldwide recall of a blood product used to treat immune disorders because it may have infected some patients with hepatitis C.

The product is immune globulin intravenous, or IGIV, that is sold under the name Gammagard. The American Red Cross also distributes IGIV called Polygam that is made by the same company and is also being recalled.

Scientists have not proved that the product infected patients. If it does turn out to be tainted, it would be the first viral infection ever discovered in immune globulin that is licensed for sale, the Food and Drug Administration said Friday.

Immune globulin is a concentrate of proteins made from donated blood plasma.

Ex-HUD official sentenced to prison

WASHINGTON — Deborah Gore Dean, a central figure in the HUD scandals during the Reagan administration, was sentenced Friday to 21 months in prison and a $5,000 fine.

U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan handed down three 21-month sentences and ordered they be served concurrently without possibility of parole.

Dean, 39, was executive assistant to former Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce and was the highest-ranking former Reagan administration official convicted in the scandal, which involved parceling out lucrative moderate-housing rehabilitation contracts to developers.

Restaurant owner awarded $7 million

LOS ANGELES — A jury awarded more than $7 million to the owner of a pizza restaurant that burned to the ground during the 1992 riots.

The jury decided that Gold Cities Insurance Agency was negligent and the Insurance Co. of North America acted in bad faith. Dennis Stephan took them to court after his Domino's pizza in South Central Los Angeles was gutted during rioting on April 30, 1992.

N. Korea adds nuclear-inspection conditions

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Korea will not grant visas to International Atomic Energy Agency inspectors until the United States sets a date for resuming high-level talks, a State Department official said Friday.

The North Korean demand was another setback to international efforts to resume inspections of the country's nuclear facilities. Secretary of State Warren Christopher had said only two days ago he expected an early resolution of the visa issue.

Thomas Hubbard, deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, said in remarks prepared for delivery at American University that he had hoped to be able to report that IAEA inspections at seven North Korean sites would resume soon. Hubbard has been discussing the nuclear issue with North Korean officials.

"We've made some progress, but unfortunately we're not quite there yet," he said.

"The North has accepted the inspections required by the IAEA. Incredibly, however, they've refused to issue visas to the inspectors, saying they first want to fix a date for a third round of formal talks with the U.S."

An administration official, briefing reporters on condition of anonymity, said the North Koreans had requested a meeting Friday in New York to discuss the situation.

Clinton says Chicago trip won't stifle investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton is vigorously defending his plans to appear Monday with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, declaring the White House is in no way meddling in a federal investigation of the powerful congressman.

"There is still a presumption of innocence in this country," Clinton said testily after being asked Friday if the Chicago trip amounted to interference with the investigation. "He has not yet been charged with anything."

Clinton said the White House had not consulted the Justice Department about the appearance or tried in any way to influence the department's investigation, which includes allegations of irregularities in Rostenkowski's payroll and office spending practices.

As chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, Rostenkowski has been a potent Clinton ally over the past year and has a critical role in the contentious health care reform debate. But the criminal investigation has cast a cloud over the Chicago Democrat after 18 terms in Congress.

3 new foes all but doom chances for balanced-budget amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — A trio of senators joined opponents of the balanced budget amendment Friday, moving the proposal within a hair's breadth of defeat just four days before a showdown vote.

Sens. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., Harry Reid, D-Nev., and Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, all stated their opposition to the plan, bringing to 30 the number of publicly declared opponents. Thirty-four votes will be needed to kill the measure because constitutional amendments need two-thirds majorities of the Senate and House to pass.

With two other senators publicly leaning against the amendment and six Democrats saying they are undecided, the fate of the measure — which is opposed by President Clinton — seems all but sealed.

Conrad, who had been considered undecided, took to the Senate floor to criticize the plan and said in a later interview that he would vote against it.

Instead, he voiced support for a less stringent version, sponsored by Reid, that would protect Social Security and public-works programs from cuts needed to eliminate the deficit.

"It does not loot the Social Security trust fund in order to provide for a balanced budget," Conrad said of Reid's version.

Reid also announced he would vote against the stricter plan, saying, "It is flawed."

In stating his opposition, Stevens argued that the measure would force spending cuts that would handcuff the country's ability to quickly beef up the military in a budding crisis.

He also said it would compel reductions in agriculture, land management and other programs important to the states in the west.

"This is the wrong amendment at the wrong time to address the wrong problem," Stevens said on the Senate floor.

Stevens had been expected to oppose the amendment. Nonetheless, the announcements by Conrad, Reid and Stevens will make it that much harder for supporters of the plan to round up the votes they will need.

Like most supporters of the amendment, Stevens is a conservative. But he is also a senior member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, which oversees most federal spending. That panel is headed by Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the amendment's most ardent foe.

The amendment would forbid budget deficits beginning in 2001.

DDO denies claims

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Two women claim they were exposed to chemical contaminants while jogging past a hazardous waste cleanup site at Defense Depot Ogden.

Susan Larsen of Harrisville and her friend Debbie Hansen said they experienced immediate discomfort while jogging near the east entrance of the Weber County Fairgrounds near the DDO cleanup site.

Scientist claims he found planets in distant Milky Way galaxy

NEW YORK (AP) — As Archimedes said, Eureka! A scientist says he's confirmed the existence of two planets orbiting a dense star in the Milky Way Galaxy.

They would be the first known planets outside our own solar system.

"The thing, to me at least, is a clear-cut case," Alexander Wolszczan of Pennsylvania State University said Friday. Other scientists also called the new data convincing.

In 1992, Wolszczan and a colleague said they had found evidence that at least two planets were orbiting an extremely dense star called a pulsar about 1,300 light-years from Earth, in the direction of the constellation Virgo.

Minnesota senator will face charges

WASHINGTON — Sen. Dave Durenberger will be re-indicted on charges that he abused his Senate expense account, his attorney said Friday.

Tom Green said Justice Department officials told him the new indictment of the Minnesota Republican probably would be issued Friday. The initial indictment was dismissed by a judge in December.

Durenberger was indicted last year on charges that he and two associates hid his ownership in a Minneapolis condominium so he could be reimbursed by the Senate for staying there.

Durenberger, who is not seeking re-election this year, was denounced by the Senate in 1990 for the condominium deal and other alleged financial improprieties.

Pace of federal tax returns picks up

WASHINGTON — The pace of federal tax return filing is beginning to rebound; the Internal Revenue Service said Friday.

The IRS had received 29.2 million returns through Feb. 18, down 5.5 percent from the same period last year. A week earlier, the year-to-year filing gap was 10 percent.

The average refund so far this year, $1,204, was up 7.7 percent from last year.

Despite the overall lag in filing, IRS programs to cut down on paperwork are growing in popularity. Electronic returns, filed directly to the agency's computers, totaled 8.9 million, up 7.2 percent from the same period last year.

House members promise no gay bias

WASHINGTON — A majority of House members have promised not to discriminate against homosexuals in hiring and promotion, a gay rights group said Friday.

A total of 225 of the 435 members of the House signed and returned statements to the Human Rights Campaign Fund reading: "The sexual orientation of an individual is not a consideration in the hiring, promoting or terminating of an employee in my congressional office."

The statements had been distributed to the lawmakers by the campaign fund, which says it is the largest national gay lobbying group.

Peep-canes big in old days

Canes with hidden swords aren't just movie props. Lots of them were made in bygone centuries. And canes with whistling flasks. And canes with little perches in the handles wherein could be seen pictures of women without much on.

Catfish taste with their tails:

You can say this about an eagle's eyesight: If that bird could read, it could perch on a football field's goalpost and read a newspaper under the goalpost at the other end.

Q. Don't all primates have opposable big toes?

A. All but man.

Q. How long does a court trial last in Great Britain, typically?

A. Only a few days, seven if extraordinary. 14 max. Even major murder cases rarely last more than a week. Longest appeal procedure takes only three months.

Said the cautious watcher Christian Nestell Bovee: "Tranquil pleasures last the longest; we are not fitted to bear the burden of great joys."

Q. What's the "standing" part of a rap?

A. That's part away from the end where you tie the knot.

Q. In all those wagon train trips westward in the frontier years, how many pioneers were actually killed in Indian attacks?

A. Between 300 and 400, scholars now estimate.

It wasn't until after the Revolutionary War that Americans started building houses with dining rooms.

If the averages hold, arsonists will set fire to 56 American houses today, according to the collectors of federal numbers.

'I'm ready,' says 1st woman combat pilot

LUKE AIR FORCE BASE, Ariz. (AP) — The Air Force's first woman fighter pilot says she isn't anxious to carry out a deadly attack but will be up to the task if duty calls.

"I'm as ready as any of the other guys," Jeannie Flynn said.

"We went through the same training and I feel I received the best training possible so that when the time arrives I'll be able to do the right thing," she said at a news conference Thursday.

Flynn finished six months of training in the F-15E Strike Eagle, a plane many consider the nation's hottest fighter jet.

She was the first woman approved for such a role after then-Defense Secretary Les Aspin lifted the ban on women in combat April 28.

The 27-year-old St. Louis native said she hopes the United States will stay out of war.

"But if we go, I'm going to be part of my squadron and if my squadron goes, I want to be with them," she said.

The first lieutenant finished her training with the 55th Fighter Squadron near Phoenix on Feb. 10.

She now goes to 24 weeks of survival training at Fairchild Air Force Base in Washington state before beginning her assignment with the 336th Fighter Squadron at Seymour

Female Navy pilot lands duty on aircraft carrier

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Lt. Shannon Workman has become the first woman to qualify to fly combat aircraft off Navy war ships.

Ms. Workman, 26, flew her final qualifying flight Saturday from the carrier Dwight D. Eisenhower.

"It was a great feeling to finally be done," she said.

A total of 73 aviators qualified for carrier operations last week as the Norfolk-based Eisenhower conducted training exercises. Starting next month, the Eisenhower will start receiving the first of an estimated 600 women among its 6,000-member crew, said Command Master Chief Petty Officer Bob Conklin.

The ship will be the first Navy warship to integrate women since Congress lifted the combat-exclusion law last year.

The Navy also plans to bring women aboard two other carriers this year.

Johnson Air Force Base near Goldsboro, N.C.

"I wouldn't have qualms having her on my wing," said Capt. Jeff Fiebig, one of Flynn's instructor pilots at Luke. "She is very tough, physically and mentally, and was definitely an above average student."

There is no system of class ranking or grades for the eight pilots and eight weapons officers who took the course, said Maj. Josef Seidl, another instructor. He said that at Seymour Johnson, Flynn would train with a lead pilot for 18 to 30 months.

He said he expected her to reach lead-pilot status.

"Her best performance was in the air-to-air training, which is difficult because you are in a high-g environment," Seidl said, referring to the increased gravity force in the cockpit.

The course included 224 hours in the classroom, 37 hours in simulators and 64 hours in the air.

Travel agent gives $50,000 to teach youths geography

BOISE (AP) — Boise travel agent Linda Grable-Curtis is backing up her interest in teaching the young about other cultures with a sizeable donation to geography instruction in Idaho.

That personal involvement turned into a $50,000 financial commitment and earned Grable-Curtis recognition in the March issue of National Geographic magazine.

"I always wanted to do something for young people, with something that I'm tied to," said Grable-Curtis. "I'm just putting my money where my mouth is."

Since 1990, she has donated $5,000 a year to the society for educational programs nationwide. She is one of about 14,000 people who contribute to several hundred thousand dollars to the society's Education Foundation each year, said Dorothy Jacobson, foundation deputy director.

Initially, Grable-Curtis hoped to reach a $25,000 goal through annual donations. Now, she expects to continue contributing as long as she is capable.

She set up a Geography Knowledge Fund through the Idaho Community Foundation that provides learning materials or enhances geographic programs in the public schools.

Born in Argentina to an oil businessman who traveled the world, Grable-Curtis can list her trips to far-off lands like the index to an atlas.

Cascade woman named 1994 mother of year

CASCADE (AP) — The 1994 Idaho Mother of the Year for the first time is the daughter of a former Idaho Mother of the Year.

Marilyn Hoff Callender, 69, a Cascade mother of four, will attend American Mothers Inc.'s 59th annual convention in Salt Lake City at the end of April or beginning of May.

"I'm on cloud nine," Callender said. "It certainly pleased my mother."

Callender's mother was the 1958 Idaho Mother of the Year. Marion Kerby, 93, still lives on the ranch south of Cascade where Mrs. Callender was born.

Callender has two sons and two daughters. The oldest teaches in Alaska and the second is a Boise Cascade Corp. manager. The other two are attending graduate school. One is in the third year of medical school and the other in the second year of law school.

Callender has been married to Robert "Bud" Hoff, who died in 1972, and Hoff's cousin, Frank Callender, who died in 1986. She now works as office manager at Cascade Lake Realty, which sponsored her nomination.

Lodge denies entry to black; loses charter

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — Moose International officials yanked the charter of the group's largest lodge, a week after the lodge denied membership to a black man.

Moose regulations prohibit lodges from rejecting applicants on the basis of race.

"This action was taken because of repeated violations-of-Moose International's general laws and stated policies," said Kurt Wehmeier, a spokesman for the 105-year-old fraternal and service organization.

Wehmeier would not say whether Thursday's decision to shut down the 7,500-member lodge was linked to the Feb. 16 vote that denied membership to James Yates.

Bosnia truce appears to hold on eve of talks

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — A truce between Muslim-led government and Croat forces appeared to be taking hold Friday on the eve of Washington-sponsored talks to begin the former allies.

Under intense international pressure, particularly from the United States, both sides seemed determined to make the truce work. Many previous cease-fires in the 22-month war have failed.

The world community has been seeking to turn a truce in Serb-destined Sarajevo into a lasting peace for Bosnia. A Muslim-Croat truce would increase pressure on the Serbs, considered the main aggressors, to stop fighting.

The truce took effect after Croatian President Franjo Tudjman gave up to Western demands and accepted a U.S.-backed plan for a joint Muslim-Croat state on Thursday. Bosnia's Serbs would be free to annex their land to Serbia.

Croatian Foreign Minister Mate Granic and the leader of Bosnian Croats, Kresimir Zubak, left for Washington to negotiate with Bosnian Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic, who has been there for a week.

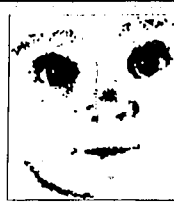

Muslim-led government troops and Croat militias have been fighting in central Bosnia and the southwestern city of Mostar for nearly a year.

Their previous alliance against the Serbs, who have captured 70 percent of Bosnia, fell apart as they each sought to control the remaining 30 percent.

U.N. officials and Bosnian and Croatian radio reported fighting in central Bosnia, particularly around Vitez, before the truce took effect at noon (4 a.m. MST).

But by evening, the United Nations observed only "very limited small-arms exchange of fire in Gornji Vakuf, Vitez and Mostar," said squadron leader David Fillingham, reached at the U.N. Bosnia command's headquarters in Kiseljak.

U.S., Britain hope to salve wounds

LONDON — It has been a long while since a British prime minister's visit to the United States was festooned with symbols chosen to reassure the world that the two governments are closely allied.

But recent strains in Anglo-American relations have so troubled both governments that when John Major arrives in Washington on Sunday, he will be accorded hospitality unseen since Prime Minister Winston Churchill blew smoke congenially with President Franklin D. Roosevelt in the 1940s. The symbolic gestures include a night's sleep in the White House, a ride on Air Force One and a trip with President Clinton to Pennsylvania, where Major's father and grandfather worked earlier in this century. The touches are described by officials on both sides as a calculated salve for bruises suffered during recent rough foreign policy episodes in Bosnia and Northern Ireland.

Yeltsin sends peacekeepers to Bosnia

MOSCOW — Russia decided Friday to send 300 more peacekeepers to Bosnia, expanding its presence a day after President Boris Yeltsin promised a more active foreign policy.

The move, which brings the number of Russian peacekeepers in the former Yugoslavia to 1,500, was approved by the upper house of parliament following requests from both Yeltsin and U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali.

Yevgeny Podkolzin, commander of Russia's paratroop forces, told reporters that some of the 300 additional soldiers will reinforce the 400 Russian paratroopers in the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo.

Mandela defends, chides de Klerk

KIMBERLEY, South Africa — ANC leader Nelson Mandela called on supporters Friday to stop chasing President F.W. de Klerk from black areas, saying the ANC can win elections "hands down" without help from hecklers.

But he also chided de Klerk for complaining, saying: "South Africa has got robust politics, and sissies should not address political meetings."

Burglar snatches Charles' cuff links

LONDON — A burglar got into Prince Charles' apartment at St. James's Palace and stole cuff links, tie pins and other personal items while the prince was on vacation, a spokeswoman for the royal household said Friday.

A member of the prince's staff discovered the break-in Friday morning. Scotland Yard police said they believed the burglar could have gained entrance by using scaffolding covering the front of the palace.

Reichstag goes under wraps

BONN, Germany — Parliament voted Friday to permit the artist Christo to wrap the Reichstag in cloth, after a sharp debate over the uses of this stark symbol of German history.

Christo already has bundled the Pont Neuf of Paris and dotted the Japanese and California hills with giant umbrellas.

He had been trying for 23 years to get permission to swaddle the once and future seat of Parliament in silvery cloth.

The vote was 295 in favor, 226 against, with 10 abstentions. The rest of the 662-seat Parliament wasn't present.

Ex-ranger to detail Forest Service politics

KETCHUM — Ecosystem management and the behind-the-scenes politics of current U.S. Forest Service reforms will be the subject of a Thursday night talk in Ketchum.

Tom Kovalicky, former supervisor of the Nez Perce National Forest, will highlight the 7 p.m. program at the Presbyterian Church of the Bigwood. Admission is free.

As a forest supervisor, Kovalicky made headlines in the late 1980s when he refused to increase timber harvests on the Nez Perce forest. He has been featured in Smithsonian and Audubon magazines.

Kovalicky retired three years ago and now works as a consultant to the Forest Service and other government agencies.

Work set to start Monday on new Clear Lake Grade

BUHL — Construction of a new Clear Lake Grade north of Buhl will begin Monday, the Idaho Transportation Department has announced.

Irrigation work, the first stage in the reconstruction project, will be completed by April 15.

Construction and realignment of the grade will begin this summer and last about nine months.

The new Clear Lake Grade would be east of the current road with two 12-foot lanes, shoulders, a guardrail and a truck lane. The total cost for the project has been estimated at $6 million.

Construction had been delayed because the new roadway up the north side of the Snake River Canyon toward Wendell will destroy two acres of federally protected wetlands.

The Transportation Department has developed plans to replace those wetlands with young cottonwood or poplars and wetland vegetation beside the new Clear Lake Grade.

Prosecutor Bevan will speak at GOP women's luncheon

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan will address the county's Republican women at a Monday luncheon.

Bevan will talk about the state's juvenile justice system and related county issues.

The meeting begins at noon at the Canyon Springs Inn, 1357 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Health of Idaho's rivers set as topic of March symposium

BOISE — A symposium on the environmental health of Idaho's rivers will be held March 18-19 at the Red Lion Riverside Hotel in Boise.

The sessions will begin at 8 a.m. on both days.

Titled "Rivers at the Crossroads: Law, Science, Politics and People," the symposium will take an eco-system approach to the discussion of Idaho's rivers.

House passes amendment to allow government change

BOISE — A proposal to change the Idaho Constitution to allow optional forms of county government was approved by the House, despite fears from rural legislators it could bring more bureaucracy.

The vote on Friday was 47-19, exactly the two-thirds majority needed, and it was sent to the Senate. If that chamber approves the proposed amendment, and a sponsor predicted it would, it will appear on the November general election ballot.

The amendment was approved by 18 of 19 Democrats, with Rep. Charles Cuddy, D-Oronofe, against. The GOP divided 29-18, with almost all of the opposition coming from lawmakers representing rural areas.

If the amendment is approved, the next Legislature would have to pass laws authorizing different forms of county government. Then voters in each county would decide whether they wanted to try something new.

Since statehood, all 44 counties have been governed by three-person county commissions.

Kempthorne declines to vote for water act

By Patricia Willens
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The Clean Water Act cleared a hurdle Friday with near unanimous approval of a key Senate committee but without the support of Idaho Sen. Dirk Kempthorne.

Kempthorne said the sweeping revision of the act encroaches on a state's right to manage its own waters, burdens it with more mandated costs and pushes the act's authority too far into habitat and species protection.

The act is "one of the more successful environmental laws," the Republican rookie said. "I am not yet prepared to support it in its current form."

The reauthorization of the Clean Water Act is one of the major environmental packages before Congress this year. The proposal, backed by the Clinton administration, would tinker with the original 1972 version while shifting focus to new areas of concern.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, said the current act has successfully targeted so-called "point" pollution, that which enters the water from a single source such as a pipe. Now, he said, the task is cleaning up "non-point" pollution, or runoff.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, 38 percent of rivers, 44 percent of lakes, and 32 percent of estuaries are unusable for fishing or swimming because of silt and nutrients from farm and urban runoff, combined with sewer overflows and sewage.

"This insidious problem poses the greatest threat to clean water and is responsible for nearly two-thirds of remaining pollution nationwide," Baucus said.

Bill supporters say the revisions would

'... one of the more successful environmental laws ... but ...'

— Sen. Dirk Kempthorne

reduce by $30 billion a year the nation's clean water bills, saving cities about $11 billion and businesses about $17 billion.

The bill raises funding for state revolving loans for wastewater treatment plants and encourages flexible, innovative state approaches to meet federal requirements — all without increasing unfunded federal mandates, Baucus argued.

Under a new formula to determine states' need for clean water funds, Idaho would receive slightly more federal money, Idaho is currently allotted $12.4 million and, under the revised formula, would receive $12.5 million.

Still, Kempthorne said, federal and state agencies needed to keep a better eye on the money.

He amended the act to ensure that federal fines and permit fees from a specific project go towards only that project's improvement.

And he established that EPA's fees for point source discharges must only cover the cost of permitting and enforcement, not serve as profit revenue.

His greatest concerns, though, would wait until April, when the bill would make it to the Senate floor and his amendments might have a better chance of passage.

Among other items, Kempthorne said he was apprehensive about the act's anti-degradation policy and the "outstanding resource" designation of water like the Snake River which then limits uses of the river all the way upstream to Idaho.

Police seized 7.5 pounds of marijuana, 8.2 grams of cocaine and 8.9 grams of methamphetamine in a drug bust Thursday in Twin Falls.

Bust nets 7.5 pounds of pot; 14 children found in house

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A local woman with prior drug convictions was arrested Thursday and 14 kids — six of them hers — were taken into custody in Twin Falls' biggest marijuana bust in more than a year.

Authorities seized 7.5 pounds of marijuana, 8.2 grams of cocaine and 8.9 grams of methamphetamine, said Merrill Kelley of the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics. Street value of the drugs was estimated at more than $28,000.

Arrested was Sherland Hoskins, 38, of Twin Falls. Hoskins, who was convicted on drug charges in 1987 and 1988, was held on charges of possessing, delivering and trafficking in marijuana. She also neglected to buy a tax stamp for the drugs, Kelley said.

The bust began to unfold Thursday afternoon, when an informant purchased $40 worth of marijuana at Hoskins' home at 182 Ash St. N.

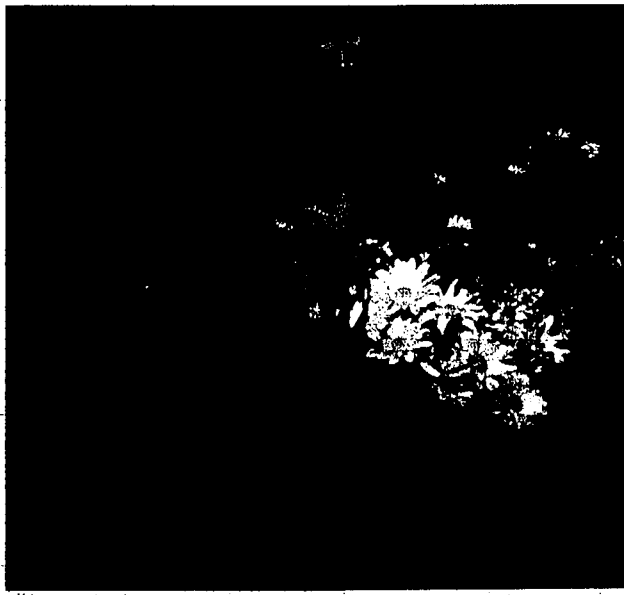

A search warrant was quickly prepared, but Hoskins had left her home by the time it was ready. Even so, drug agents said they stopped her in her car on Blue Lakes Boulevard and discovered nearly 5 ounces of marijuana under the seat. Hoskins was arrested and brought back to her home.

At 5:30 p.m., after knocking several times, law enforcement officers kicked in the door.

Inside, they found five small children — including Hoskins' 4-year-old daughter who was baby-sitting three younger children. Nine teenagers were also in the house, and the smell of marijuana smoke hung in the air.

Manslaughter charge filed despite glitch

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An involuntary manslaughter case was dismissed and refilled a half-hour later Friday because prosecutors needed to clear up "technical problems" in their evidence against Mark Szabo.

"There was an unforeseen technical problem," Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Loren Bingham said Friday.

"Information from our witnesses that we assumed was there was not," Bingham said.

He declined to comment Friday on the nature of that information. However, any potential hurdles presented by witnesses' testimony could be overcome, he said.

"I don't know that it's cleared up but we don't feel it's insurmountable," he said.

Szabo, 21, was arrested in connection with a fatal car accident at an intersection where a stop sign had been vandalized.

In January, Robert Maxwell of Buhl was riding in a car with his wife northeast of Buhl when a pickup struck the Maxwells' car as it passed through an intersection. Maxwell later died from injuries sustained in the accident.

Police officers found that a stop sign had been removed from the intersection that would have informed the driver of the pickup to stop.

Shantell Farnworth and Robert Maxwell allege they saw Szabo throw the stop sign on the ground, while James Tyree contends he saw Szabo hitting the sign, according to an affidavit filed with the court.

Szabo's listed address is Cathedral City, Calif., though he was staying with various people in the Buhl area at the time of the accident.

He is unemployed and was planning to return to California before his arrest, according to the affidavit.

Szabo is being held in jail on $10,000 bond.

He faces a March 2 preliminary hearing before Twin Falls County Magistrate Judge Charles P. Brumbach. Public Defender Michael Wood has been appointed as Szabo's attorney.

Darrington bill tosses 'gang clothing' issue to school boards

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Is a teen-ager wearing baggy pants and a backward Los Angeles Raiders cap:

a) A big football fan who doesn't know his waist size?

b) A drug-dealing, murdering gang-banger?

c) Just trying to look cool?

School boards would have specific authority to decide questions like that under a bill being sponsored by state Sen. Deaton, D-Declo.

The bill would specify that local boards have the power to ban "gang-related apparel," defined as clothing that "if worn or displayed on a school campus, reasonably could be determined to threaten the health or safety of the school environment."

Darrington, a history teacher at Burley Junior High School, says his measure would help schools with gang problems make sure those problems don't grow out of control.

"Who's going to run the show in these schools — the students or the school authorities?" he asked the Senate Education Committee Friday. "If we set the rules, the students will follow them. If they don't, we'll have to deal with them."

Caryn Tenbrink, a senior at Centennial High School in Meridian, agreed that Darrington's bill would help at her school.

"Kids can hide behind this apparel and think, 'The gang's behind me; they'll support me,'" Tenbrink said. "You take away that apparel and you take away that feeling of power."

But Aaron Browning, also a Centennial senior, disagreed. He called the bill "a Band-Aid over a very deep wound."

"I'm afraid of the people in red bandanas and L.A. Raiders jackets who belong to gangs," Browning said. "But if you take (those items of clothing) away, I'm still going to be afraid of them."

Brianna Carey, a Boise High School junior, asked whether a district's list of prescribed clothing would grow each time a new item of clothing was identified as "gang-related."

"Every time a gang in L.A. changes its colors, why should we have to buy new clothes?" she asked. "My life should not revolve around a bunch of kids three states away. We'll be their puppets, and they don't even live in Idaho — they don't even know where it is."

And Dawn Lammers, a senior at Borah High School in Boise, said some of the most messed-up kids in her school wear "Eddie Bauer jeans, Dockers and Polo shirts," not hooded sweatshirts or other stereotypical gangwear.

But Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Killen said targeted bans on gang clothing could be part of an overall solution to gang activity in the schools.

"Yes, it is a Band-Aid," Killen said. "But I defy anyone to come up with a single solution. Numerous Band-Aids can stop hemorrhaging."

Darrington's original bill refers to district-wide dress codes. But based on advice from the attorney general's office, he wants to amend it so dress codes could only apply to schools identified as having gang problems.

Also based on the attorney general's advice, Darrington wants to amend the bill to define "gang," to require that dress codes specify what is considered "gang-related apparel" and what the penalties for wearing it are, and to require that students be given advance notice of the dress code and the penalties.

The committee will decide Monday morning whether to send the bill to the full Senate for amendment and a vote.

Here's how Idaho lawmakers voted on recent key issues

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Here are the votes of Idaho's senators and representatives on key legislation in Congress this past week.

Senate votes:
1) BILL: TALBOTT — The Senate confirmed Tuesday by a 66-31 margin the nomination of Strobe Talbott to be deputy secretary of state.

Sens. Larry Craig and Dirk Kempthorne, both Republicans, voted against confirmation.

House votes:
1) BILL: H. RES. 343 — The House voted Wednesday by a 361-34 margin, including 29 members who voted "present," to approve a resolution condemning a speech made by a former aide to Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan as racist, anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic. Khalid Abdul Muhammad made the speech last year at Kean College in New Jersey.

Rep. Mike Crapo, Republican, voted to condemn; Rep. Larry LaRocco, Democrat, voted present.

2) BILL: SCHOOL 1 — The House voted Thursday by a 424-1 margin to approve an amendment to the reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 bill that strikes language requiring education agencies to prove that full-time teachers are certified to teach in their subject areas. It also clarifies that nothing in the bill can be applied to home schooling.

Crapo and LaRocco voted to eliminate any applicability of the bill to home schooling.

3) BILL: SCHOOL 2 — The House voted Thursday by a 374-53 margin to approve an amendment to the reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 bill that reaffirms the inapplicability of the act to home, private and religious schools not receiving federal funds.

Opponents feared the amendment would imply some federal government power over those types of schools that do accept federal funds.

Crapo and LaRocco voted to clarify the bill's non-application to schools that do not receive federal aid.

The attendance record tracks the cumulative attendance of members to date when they are physically present for roll call votes.

Senate attendance, present and voting:
Crapo 99.55 percent, Kempthorne 99.77 percent.

House attendance, present and voting:
Crapo 98.74 percent, LaRocco 97.95 percent.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — D. Arthur Haycock, secretary to five presidents of the Mormon Church, died Friday after complications from heart surgery. He was 77.

Haycock, of Bountiful, was a former temple and mission president for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and former secretary-treasurer of the church-owned Deseret News Publishing Co.

He was born in Farmington and educated in Idaho and Utah public schools. He graduated from South High School in 1933 and attended LDS Business College and the University of Utah.

In the late 1930s he began work in the church's financial department during the administration of President Heber J. Grant. He was personal secretary to presidents George Albert Smith, Joseph Fielding Smith, Harold B. Lee, Spencer W. Kimball and Ezra Taft Benson and traveled the world with them many times.

During David O. McKay's administration, Haycock served as assistant secretary to the First Presidency and secretary to the Council of the Twelve.

He also was Benson's administrative assistant from December 1952 to June 1954, when Benson was U.S. secretary of agriculture.

Haycock was then called as president of the Hawaii Mission, serving until August 1958. He had been a missionary in Hawaii from 1935 to 1937 and was president of the Hawaii Temple beginning in 1986. His wife, Maurine, was temple matron.

Haycock also was secretary to the Church Missionary Committee. He was elected secretary of the Deseret News Publishing Co. in November 1958 and was named treasurer later that year. He retired in 1986.

Haycock held numerous church positions, including patriarch in the Bountiful Utah Orchard Stake, and at the time of his death he was a sealer in the Salt Lake Temple and high priests group instructor in the Orchard 7th Ward, Bountiful Utah Orchard Stake.

He is survived by his wife and four daughters. A funeral is scheduled Tuesday in the Orchard 7th Ward.

EIS included in mill reclamation

MOAB, Utah (AP) — An environmental impact study will precede the proposed disposal of millions of tons of uranium tailings at the Atlas Mill near this southeastern Utah town.

Drugs

Continued from B1 — "It was a heartbreaker," said Don Walden of the Tri-County Drug Task Force. The children were released to their parents, but Hoskins' kids are in the custody of the Department of Health and Welfare.

Twin Falls residents Dennis Falgout and Tim Thompson, both 18, were given misdemeanor citations for being present at a place where illegal drugs were being used, Kelley said.

Officers found a small amount of marijuana, plus the cocaine and methamphetamines. Stolen equipment from the U.S. Forest Service was also found, Walden said.

Hoskins was later taken to jail, where she handed over a key for a storage locker on Kimberly Road and gave her consent for officers to search it.

The federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) announced Friday that it had reevaluated the mill's proposed reclamation plan and would include the preparation of an environmental impact statement.

Minidoka County school program is model for teaching Hispanics English

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

RUPERT — For his first year at Paul Elementary School, Omar Berrigara, now 13, couldn't speak to classmates and didn't understand his teachers.

He watched television to learn.

That was eight years ago, when little help was available to Hispanic immigrant children. But now, a Minidoka County school has a program to help children learn English, said Pete Espinoza, director of Migrant Education.

The program has become a model for other school districts who recognize the need to teach English more effectively, he said.

The "English as a Second Language" program helps children learn English in the classroom among their peers, which gives students more self-confidence in learning, Espinoza said.

"We don't force children to learn to speak. We personalize the instruction for them so that the student is able to perform better," Espinoza said.

Garth Baker, principal of Paul Elementary School, said his school has involved teachers, aides and students in helping children learn English.

Some bilingual children help translate the teachers' words in class. Teacher's aides kneel by the students' desks and whisper translations in their ears, he said.

"Teachers have a frustrating job,"

Baker said. "It's tough today, but we're a little more aware of their needs. We used to think, 'you don't speak English? Well tough.' It just tickles me what we're doing now."

Minidoka County's program has become a model because it has a high percent of Hispanic students learning to speak English, Espinoza said.

The Minidoka County School Board recently adopted guidelines for the language program with the goal of teaching English more effectively, he said.

The school district has 17 teachers with masters degrees in teaching English and Spanish-speaking students, Espinoza said. Those teachers can translate and clarify difficult English words while teaching other subjects, he said.

Burley Butte landfill expected to accept garbage after April 1

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A controversial landfill on Burley Butte is expected to start receiving trash as soon as it is completed, but road closures may delay that completion.

Lynn Peterson, site manager for Boise-based Dispose-All Inc., said the landfill will open for business sometime after April 1.

The Burley Highway District's seasonal road closures have stopped some the heavier trucks from delivering gravel to the site to prevent damage to area roads.

But trash might start arriving in spite of a pending lawsuit seeking to prevent the landfill from opening. The suit is scheduled to be heard in federal District Court in Boise on Dec. 5. Cassia County Prosecutor Steven Bywater said.

Bywater has said he would seek a court injunction to shut down the landfill until a lawsuit is settled between the county and the company. But he will wait until he hears from Dispose-All president Doug Lomow, he said.

Lomow could not be reached for comment.

Dispose-All filed a counter-suit last November in response to the county's suit in August seeking to block the landfill. The county says Dispose-All must apply for a zoning permit and disclose financial information.

Lomow has said that the company's finances are none of the county's business. He also says he doesn't need the permit because the landfill was started before the county's ordinance requiring the permit was adopted.

Dispose-All has met all requirements for operation of the landfill, said Gary McOmber, solid waste coordinator for the South Central District Health Department in Jerome. But the landfill's operation plans have not yet gotten their final approval, he said.

The landfill has satisfied state environmental officials.

It has met all state requirements, said Mike McMasters, prevention and certification supervisor with the Twin Falls regional office of the state Division of Environmental Quality.

The site was certified in December, and construction and groundwater monitoring plans also have been approved, he said.

Andrus calls for massive dump cleanup

DENVER (AP) — Cleaning up the nation's radioactive-waste dumps should be the federal government's top priority in the post-Cold War era, Idaho Gov. Cecil D. Andrus says.

Andrus, in an address at the University of Denver law school Thursday night, said the "peace dividend" from military spending cuts should be spent on a cleanup program.

"If we developed a cleanup technology, it would spread to every state," Andrus said. "That's different from stacking the stuff in the desert and hoping the wind will blow sand over it."

Andrus

In 1988, Andrus gained national attention when he closed his state's borders to shipments of plutonium and other radioactive wastes from the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant. He did the same thing four years later with commercial nuclear waste from the Fort St. Vrain power plant in Colorado.

Andrus said Coloradans do not want nuclear waste in their state and, "I don't want it in Idaho."

"The biggest fear I have is it will migrate into the underground water supply," he said.

Beneath the arid southern Idaho desert rests the Snake River Aquifer, one of the world's largest underground water supplies.

Since Andrus refused to accept the waste, Colorado has agreed to store its own wastes until new repositories are opened.

BURLEY — A Washington man and his two passengers were injured Friday when their car crashed into a fast-food restaurant.

The driver, Timothy Mood, 23, of Kennewick, Wash., and two passengers, Richard Hoffman, 27, and Sergio Mendoza, 26, were treated at Cassia Memorial Hospital and released.

No information was available at press time on where the passengers live, an Idaho State Police dispatcher said.

The car crashed and rolled once at Burger's Etc on 8th and Overland Avenue at 11:18 a.m., the dispatcher said. Alcohol was involved, she said.

Dog obedience classes have openings

RUPERT — Openings are still available for beginning dog obedience classes each Thursday evening at Rupert Harmony Hall at 123 K St.

People will learn to train their dogs in basic commands such as heeling, walking and approaching their owner when called, Virginia Hansen, trainer and member of the National Organization of Dog Obedience Instructors said.

The 10-week classes run an hour every Thursday starting at 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. The cost is $35.

"It's just a good basic training for competition or a well-trained pet, hunting and herding," Hansen said.

People can bring dogs of any age and size as long as they are vaccinated. Dogs must be on a leash and chain collar, she said.

For more information call Hansen at 678-8892.

Valley's Muslims seek community in small numbers

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They grew up, all them, in the company of non-believers.

So they smile when people wish them a Merry Christmas, smile the half-knowing, half-terrified smile of a stranger in a stranger land.

"To be a Muslim in Twin Falls is not so bad," said Refik Masic, 25, who came here two months ago from war-shattered Bosnia-Herzegovina. "But it's nice, sometimes, to be with friends, to be with other Muslims. Especially during Ramadan."

This is the third Ramadan (the Muslims' month of fasting and reflection) in Twin Falls for Mustafa Mimun. A 40-year-old Bulgarian of Turkish extraction, Mimun fled his Christian neighbors to find the peace to practice his faith among other Christian strangers.

"Never once since I arrived did I feel that I was not welcome here," said Mimun, now a kitchen supervisor at Cactus Pies in Jackpot. "I am free."

Twin Falls' Islamic community consists of five families — three more, all Bosnians, are scheduled to arrive next week. In a town that wears its Christianity like a badge of honor, the Muslims gather in tiny rented homes, kneeling with palms skyward, and repeat the prayers as timeless as the crescent moon, symbol of Mohammed's presence.

"The Muslim community has been established in Idaho for several years now," said Furkan Mian, a Pakistani immigrant and Boise businessman who is one of the leaders of Boise's Islamic community. "But in places like Twin Falls, it is very difficult because there are so few."

Minority is cause for fear for the Twin Falls Muslims, because Christians ran them out of their previous homes.

Masic, for example, was tossed out of his bed in Vichici, a half-Muslim, half-Croat village in southern Bosnia, at gunpoint by a Christian friend. He spent five months in a Croat concentration camp, and left his father and sister behind.

During Ramadan there are few fellow Muslims with whom Refik Masic can pray. Masic is a Bosnian Muslim who came to Twin Falls two months ago.

Mimun, his wife and two children fled their home in southern Bulgaria in the wake of the collapse of the communist regime in 1990. Bulgarian Christians took their frustrations out on Turks like the Mimuns, who spent a year in a refugee camp in Austria before being allowed to emigrate to the United States.

So it's developed that survival for Masic and the Mimuns has meant not being surprised by anything — not even by the knock on the door of the house Masic shares with his mother and brother a few weeks after they arrived. "It was Croatian lady," he said. "She gave us things and told me that if we needed anything else to call her. She told me she didn't agree with what the Croats were doing to the Muslims in Bosnia."

"I think, in general, relations between Muslims in Idaho and Christians are very good," Mian said. "But we hear things from time to time, not from any organization but from people."

In part, Mian suspects, that's because the Muslim communities in Boise, Moscow and Pocatello — Idaho's three university towns — are visible and growing. There are more than 500 Muslims in the Boise area, and in Moscow, the Muslim Student Association owns its own mosque.

"We are the fastest-growing religious group in America," Mian said. "In a few years there will be more Muslims in the United States than Jews, and with all the newcomers coming to Idaho from California and elsewhere, we will continue to grow here too."

The Boise Muslim community has made a point of building bridges, he said.

"We will go speak to any group that will listen to us," Mian said. "There's even a prisoner on death row at the (state prison) who I am praying with."

But the mosque at the Boise Islamic Center is a long way from Twin Falls, especially during Ramadan, a season of faith and strong emotions among Muslims.

Some day, when I make some money and get a car, I'll go to the mosque in Boise," Masic said. "Some day. But not now. Now I'm busy building a new life."

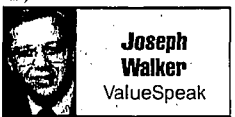

"Our mosque," said Mimun, "is our home."

'Why?' is a tough question

Life's toughest and most revealing questions, it seems to me, are those that begin with "why." Why is there so much pain and sorrow in the world? Why must innocent children suffer for the mistakes of their parents? Why does mankind seem unable to resolve serious problems between people without violence?

Why... why... why?

Philosophers have struggled to find answers to those questions for centuries. About the best they've been able to come up with is "just because... just because... just because." (No, I take that back. Robert Frost had an honest response when he said, "In three words, I can sum up everything I've learned about life: It goes on." Which is about as comforting as what the Beatles had to say on the subject: "Ob-la-di, ob-la-da.")

ValueSpeak

That's why I value the perspective of Leon, a friend who is valiantly fighting a battle against cancer that he already knows he will lose. A year ago, Leon was a man in his prime. A lifetime of hard, physical labor had given him the physique of a man much younger than his 58 years. And coming up through the School of Hard Knocks had given him a refreshing point of view and a delightfully quick, cheery, self-deprecating wit.

"I figured you might be able to use these," he said last summer as he handed over a box filled with the plumpest, juiciest peaches I'd ever seen. "If I figured wrong, just wrap up the box and give 'em back to my wife for Christmas. She loves dried fruit."

Leon hadn't missed a day of work on account of sickness in more than 20 years when he hurt his back last fall. Since he'd been doing a lot of heavy lifting all those years, he assumed the odds of injury had finally caught up with him. But after his doctor examined him thoroughly, he said he would need to call in an oncologist for consultation, and Leon knew he was facing more than a slipped disc and a hernia.

The discovery of cancer seemed to set off a chain reaction of bad events in Leon's life. There were problems with worker's compensation, then problems with Leon's medical insurance. Then his brother died. Then Leon became paralyzed. Then there were car problems. Then came word that the cancer had spread so far so quickly that therapy and surgery were quite useless.

Leon wasn't quite keeping pace with Job, but he suddenly understood that Bible story more intimately.

At first, Leon admits, he found himself asking the "why" questions — a lot. Why him, when he was the only member of his family who hadn't abused his body with alcohol? Why now, when he and Mae were looking forward to slowing down a little and enjoying the grandkids? And why cancer, with all of its attendant pain and uncertainty?

But "why" isn't so important to him any more. Instead, he's focusing on "how's." How to make the best use of the time he has left; how to make amends for past insensitivities and inadequacies; how to accept and live life as it is; how to cope.

"The way I see it, God's the only one who knows why, and he doesn't seem to want to tell me," Leon says. "So I can't worry about that. I can only worry about what is. This is the hand that life has dealt me, and so I'm going to play it out the best I can."

And that's really all any of us can do, isn't it? Our faith, whatever it may be, can provide some answers and a great deal of personal peace. But when it comes right down to it, we have to accept the vicissitudes of life at face value and do the best we can to overcome them. Yes, there is pain and sorrow in the world — we can't change that. But we can do our part to help alleviate it. We can work to ease the pain of suffering children, and we can curtail man's inhumanity to man by controlling our own violent urges and then reaching out to our neighbors in a spirit of tolerance and love. Such answers may not sit very well with many in a world that demands instant and complete satisfaction. But those are the best answers we have. And once we come to accept those answers... well, that's where faith and courage come in. Faith is what helps us cope with "whys" when the only answer is "because." Courage is what it takes to accept "because" as an answer without surrendering to it.

And if it sounds like I'm advocating tilting at windmills — you know, dreaming the impossible dream, fighting the unbeatable foe, never giving up in the face of overwhelming odds — so be it. It worked for Don Quixote. And it's working for Leon. That's a good enough reason "why" for me.

Cult hunt comes up empty

By Michael Hirsley
Chicago Tribune

Last fall, the Illinois Senate Education Committee went on a hunting trip looking for cults.

The committee was armed with a resolution passed in May. S.R. 448 contained a lot of frightening "whereases" about David Koresh and the Branch Davidians, up to 6 million members in 2,000 U.S. cults, "increased awareness of the destructive nature of cult activities," and cult recruitment on college campuses.

The latter was the resolution's focus.

"Whereas, college students who become involved with cults undergo personality changes, suffer academically, are alienated from their families, are robbed of the very things universities were designed to encourage: freedom of thought, intellectual growth, and personal development..."

S.R. 448 resolved that the committee recommend "state- or campus-level policies" for dealing with cults.

Forensic experts explain shroud

By Duncan Mansfield
The Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A centuries-old drawing technique could have produced the image widely believed to be Jesus on the Shroud of Turin, according to University of Tennessee forensic researchers.

"The bottom line I think is that we have demonstrated that it doesn't require a miracle to produce the image on the shroud," said Randall R. Bresce, a specialist in textile fibers.

The 14-foot-long linen revered by some as Jesus Christ's burial cloth has been enshrined at Italy's Royal Chapel of Turin since 1578, though the Catholic Church has never claimed it was a holy relic.

The cloth bears the faint yellowish negative image of the front and back of a man with thorn marks on the head, lacerations on the back and bruises on the shoulders. They recall the accounts of Jesus' crucifixion.

Though radiocarbon tests in 1988 suggested the shroud was no more than 700 years ago, 13 centuries after Jesus' death, researchers have reached no consensus on how the image was created.

Robert Dieguez, a spokesman for the Shroud of Turin Research Project, which arranged the 1988 testing, said he welcomed the new research, but didn't think it would shed any new light.

"We postulated for years and we ran out of postulations," said Dieguez, a retired chemist at the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico.

Researchers Bresce and Emily A. Craig, an expert in forensic reconstruction, say in a study published Wednesday by the Society for Imaging and Technology that a variation of a technique known as carbon-dusting was used. "We are not saying that the Shroud of Turin is a forgery. There is no way anybody could ever prove that," Craig said. "What we are saying is that an artist can produce an image that has all of the characteristics of the shroud."

University of Tennessee researchers Randall Bresce and Emily Craig view drawings they say bolster their study that suggests an artist using 13th century methods could have created the image on the Shroud of Turin.

As recently as 1981, a 32-member U.S. research team spent five days examining the shroud and concluded the image was not the product of an artist. But Craig said, "With our method, the fibers have the same microscopic appearance as fibers from the actual shroud."

Bresce developed a technique for dating material from individual fibers. Craig is an expert in creating computer-generated faces from the bones of murder victims. With carbon-dusting, it's possible to create detailed, three-dimensional renderings without brush strokes. They resemble soft black and white photographs.

Finding family values requires thought

I think it is great that people across our land are expressing a renewed concern for family values. I will join with those who say, "It's about time we began to recover our family values," for they certainly have been in a state of deterioration for almost two centuries.

Family values are concepts and principles derived from the nature of the family structure. We must not make the mistake of taking just any ethic or moral rule which we feel is right and proper and calling it a family value.

I would like you to consider two values.

The first is an understanding or vision of self in which the view of himself/itself existing as part of a group. The concept of self would be expanded to include not just the single individual but also the group or community. In ancient Israel, this concept of self was so strongly embedded in the thinking that when the Old Testament speaks of Jacob, we are hard put to tell whether the reference is to Jacob the man, Jacob the family, Jacob the tribe or Jacob the nation.

This flies in the face of our passion for individualism. Our heroes and models are independent, self-sufficient individuals whose existence and being are dependent upon no one else. We cannot wait until the children are on their own. We want them to feel guilty should they ever have to ask for help.

ages. Our culture is becoming more and more age-graded in its composition.

We have accepted as best the concept of being with persons of your own age—in one's school, through working places, in our churches, in our lodges and even in our recreation. Why single out LDS?

I read The Times-News religion survey in the paper on Feb. 19. Why is the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) singled out? Is it because we feel we have something that has helped us and we want to share it with others? Is this wrong?

When an individual buys an automobile that he enjoys and it serves him well, in most cases, he tells others about it so that they might share his good fortune. This is the way we feel about our religious beliefs. Growing up, becoming adults and raising families at this time has enough challenges that I feel we need all the help we can get.

I've taken classes in American religions and world religions. I have spent hundreds of hours discussing religion with leaders of many other churches. These experiences, coupled with the study of the scriptures and getting on my knees and asking the Lord (James 1:5), has convinced me that being "Mormon" and trying to live its teachings to the best of my ability is the best lifestyle for me. As a result, like the individual who is satisfied with his automobile, I have tried to share my good fortune with others. Some have accepted and others have not. Whichever the case, it has not changed my respect and love for them as individuals.

We need to spend less time and effort concerned with what might be wrong with others and more time becoming Christ-like ourselves. If our commitment is to selflessness and becoming Christ-like, we do not see the weaknesses or mistakes of others; we just want to love and help them in any way we can. Is not this the way Christ would have us be?

Cult

scheduled hearings late last year in Springfield and Chicago. But as parents or students testified about how their families' cohesion was ripped by mind-controlling religious cults, the committee's mission alarmed a coalition of religious groups, scholars and civil-liberties advocates.

To them, S.R. 448 took on the imagery of a powerful weapon being used in a frightening kind of hunt.

The resolution "conjures up the chilling specter of a modern-day witch hunt" for "unconventional and/or unpopular religious groups," sociology professor Gary Shepherd of Oakland University wrote the committee.

Nancy Ross, a leader in the coalition, said: "Labeling a group a 'cult' has the same stigmatizing effect that labels such as 'communist,' 'subversive' and 'black radical' had in past generations."

This week, the committee issued its report. If S.R. 448 was a weapon, the report it evoked sounded like a toy pop gun.

Naming no cults and proposing no tough policies, the report concluded "there is a problem with these organizations" that "can best be resolved through public awareness."

The committee recommended that colleges and universities provide information about cults to incoming students and act as a clearinghouse to receive and report complaints of cult activities.

Asked how the committee defined "cults," Sen. Frank Watson, R-Greenville, the chairman, said: "It can't be done. Cult is a buzzword. One person's cult may be another person's religion. That's the problem with doing anything legislatively about this problem."

Because of federal and state constitutional guarantees of free exercise of religion under the separation of church and state, the report concluded that "state government should have no role in debating, scrutinizing or endorsing the doctrine or beliefs of any group."

Other than alarming some religious groups, Senate Education Committee members have little to show for the tax dollars spent on their cult hunt.

Toms enjoys rare lead at Buick Invitational

SAN DIEGO — David Toms, saying he has kept his confidence despite two mediocre years on the PGA Tour, got a-esteem-boost Friday with his second consecutive 65, good for a three-stroke lead in the Buick Invitational.

Toms' 14-under-par total at Torrey Pines broke him out of a three-way tie with Ronnie Black and Doug Martin, who shared the lead with him after the first round.

Black shot a second-round 68 and dropped into a second-place tie with Mark Wurtz, who had a 64. Martin shot a 73 that left him back in the pack.

Craig Stadler, Kirk Triplett, Brad Faxon and Tom Byrum were four shots off Toms' pace. Defending champion Phil Mickelson had a 69 and was seven shots behind Toms.

Washington, Agassi post wins in Nuveen tennis tourney

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — MaliVai Washington, who struggled to get past an unheralded second-round opponent in three sets, beat Stefano Pescosolido of Italy 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 Friday to reach the semifinals of the Nuveen Championships.

In other singles matches, Karsten Braasch of Germany beat Jordi Bunillo 6-3, 7-5, and Luiz Mattar of Brazil beat Chuck Adams 7-6 (8-6), 6-4.

Bunillo, a 21-year-old Spaniard, upset Stefan Edberg in the first round and beat Fabrice Santoro of France to get into the quarters.

Fifth-seeded Andre Agassi overwhelmed No. 3 seed Brad Gilbert 6-1, 6-2 in the last singles match of the round.

Washington, the world's No. 22 player after reaching his first Grand Slam quarter-final four weeks ago at the Australian Open, is seeded second.

Eagles net important win

Ricks loss puts CSI closer to 3rd seed for regional

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho men had two major goals before them Friday night.

They accomplished the first, breaking away from a 17-17 tie midway through the first half to beat Colorado Northwestern 94-72. And they got the needed assist from Snow College's Badgers, who knocked off Ricks College 80-74 to keep CSI's hopes for a third seed in next week's regional tournament alive.

CSI can get there by beating Eastern Utah in its final regular season home appearance at 8 p.m. today — and Dixie provides another assist by beating Ricks in St. George.

That combination would leave CSI and Ricks tied for third in the Scenic West Conference standings but CSI would take third seed by virtue of having beaten Dixie — the second tie-breaker in regional by-laws. Ricks and CSI split head-to-head during the season.

In raising their record to 22-7, the Eagles had some early problems with the Spartans.

"We came out ready to play, I felt, but we made three or four mistakes at the start. That was enough to cool our adrenalin flow and we had to battle the rest of the night to win it," Coach Steve Irons said.

Although the Eagles moved ahead 40-27 in the closing eight minutes of the half, Irons said he wasn't comfortable at halftime.

"We knew we had them out-manned inside and that's what was keeping us ahead," he said of the shorter Spartans.

The Eagle defense caused the major breakout early in the second half as first Delmonte Madison hit six straight points, Shawn Bankhead came up with a bucket and Aaron Bell added two free throws. In two and one-half minutes, CSI had exploded into a 20-point lead.

"Shawn got us going with those three straight steals and we were able to capitalize on all of them," Irons said. "Then we tried some different defenses after that and I felt that we caught them a couple of times."

ANDY ARENZA/The Times-News

Ayton Tesch of CSI breaks past Colorado Northwestern's Shaun Moore for a first half basket.

Colorado did the same things that let it take CSI into overtime early in the season. Guards Shaun Moore and Damon Dailey used Coach Paul Conrad's clear-cut offense to hit the Eagles for 24 and 20 points, respectively.

But the Spartans didn't shoot the percentage they had in December.

After Bankhead and Madison sparked CSI into its 20-point lead, freshman Chad Harding came off the bench to score 12 points — getting eight on the offensive glass.

In the game's other oddity, neither team got into the bonus situation in the first half but the end of the contest, CSI had shot 38 free throws and Colorado 24.

CSI women pull away after halftime

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There's the old story about the boss not wanting to give the employees too long a time off because he'd have to retrain them.

That about sums up how College of Southern Idaho women's Coach Joel Bate felt through the first several minutes of the Golden Eagles' 69-45 Scenic West Conference win over Colorado Northwestern Friday night.

Coming off a 10-day layoff, the Eagles had five turnovers in the first two minutes but trailed only once because Colorado was having the same problems.

"Finally we started playing pretty well in the second half but I was worried until then," Bate said.

Actually, the Eagles pretty much had established their dominance by halftime, although the lead was only 27-17. Their biggest lead of the half came at 24-10.

In the second half, the Eagles started getting the ball inside to Amber McEwen and Marcia Jenkins and pulled steadily away.

McEwen ended with 20 points, three more than Jenkins. They were the only Eagles in double figures. Deyce Robbins had 14 to lead Colorado.

The victory keeps the women in the hunt for third seeding in the Region 18 tournament, slated to begin Wednesday in St. George at Dixie College.

CSI and its sophomores make their final appearance at 6 p.m. tonight against Eastern Utah. The Utahns beat CSI in the conference opener last December.

While all eyes on ice, Norway continues its medal plunder

The Associated Press

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Tonya Skated. Then Nancy skated. And then Oksana Baiul skated off with the gold.

The 16-year-old Ukrainian, a bit player in the figure skating soap opera of the past seven weeks, suddenly became the star Friday night by sweeping past Nancy Kerrigan to finish first in another bizarre evening at the rink.

Kerrigan, who survived a brutal attack aimed at knocking her out of the Olympics last month, won the silver. The bronze medal went to Chen Lu of China.

Tonya Harding and Nancy Part II deflected attention from Norway's best day yet in the games, as the hosts swept to five medals and the top of the Lillehammer medals chart before the women even laced up their skates.

And Canada qualified for its second gold medal hockey game in as many Olympics with a 5-3 victory over previously unbeaten Finland. The Albertville silver medalists will play Sweden, which knocked off the Russians 4-3, in Sunday's medal game.

Most of the world was waiting for the skating sequel to the top-rated Kerrigan-Harding showdown. Not the Norwegians; they focused on their hometown heroes, who naved in five medals in just hours to start the day.

Norway, after inviting the world to Lillehammer, has now taken more medals than any of its guests.

"I am ecstatic. This is far out," said Harald Christian Strand Nilsen, one of three Norwegian medalists in the Alpine combined.

Norway's excellent adventure began with the gold-silver-bronze sweep in the combined, as the good times turned to hard times for U.S. skiers. America's Tommy Moe, who already has a gold and a silver, managed only a fifth-place finish — the fourth straight race without a medal for the skiers.

Moe, who was third after the downhill portion of the combined, missed his chance to become the first

Baiul, Kerrigan both good as gold

By Jack Craig
Boston Globe

"Both were worthy of the gold medal," Dick Button said Friday night after watching Oksana Baiul and Nancy Kerrigan perform their long programs.

Button is the reigning American authority on figure skating, as he's done decisive analysis on ABC during five previous Winter Olympics.

"Nancy skated beautifully ... brilliantly. I thought when she finished, she had the gold because she was leading going in," Button said.

He was surprised that Kerrigan's technical marks were not higher. "If she did a double instead of a triple, that's not a mistake," he said. "Baiul had a few little mistakes."

"When the scoring is very close, that is when nationalism raises its ugly head."

Teams try to prolong seasons

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

Three Magic Valley schools get a second chance to qualify for the state boys' basketball tournament with playoff games today.

Burley meets Preston at Pocatello High School at 1 p.m. today with the winner advancing to the Class A-2 tournament at Meridian Thursday. At Mountain Home, Dietrich plays Notus at 1:30 p.m. for a Class A-4 berth followed by Filer against Fruitland for a Class A-3 spot.

Preston defeated Snake River by three points Thursday to make the playoff. The Indians use relentless and somewhat reckless pressure, fouling often and forcing frequent turnovers, to break down opponents.

"They just keep coming at you, and they don't care about the fouls," said Burley coach Bill Cowell. "It's not pretty to watch. Hopefully, we can turn it into a basketball game."

The Bobcats haven't seen a serious press this season, but Cowell is not worried about his team's ability to handle it.

Rebounding, Preston hits the boards hard, and free throw shooting will be keys.

Essentially, the Bobcats need to play a solid game.

"If we do, we'll be all right," Cowell said. "We probably have to step it up a notch from the way we played Wednesday (in the district final loss to Jerome)."

Fruitland likes to shoot 3-point goals and tends to score a lot of points.

"They're good shooters and really quick," said Filer coach LaRell Patterson. "We're going to have to step up the defense and get on their 3's."

Patterson thinks the defense played in District 3 might not be up to that demonstrated weekly in the Canyon Conference, presenting Fruitland with a little frustration. The Wildcats, 16-8, will look to post players Ben Tvedty and Ryan Mai to counter the Fruitland scoring machine.

And Filer will try to take its time while pounding the ball inside.

"We're going to have to control the tempo of the game," Patterson said. "We can't run with these guys."

The A-3 tournament will be at Centennial High School in Meridian.

Notus, 24-1, was ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press A-4 poll for most of the season and did not lose a game until the District 3 tournament.

"We're aware of where they were at all year," said Dietrich coach Randy McCowan. "We were talking about how that's sort of a fictional thing. I think we really feel we can beat them."

The Pirates, who eliminated the Northside Conference's Richfield in the state football playoffs, thrive on outside shooting. But McCowan doesn't think Notus handles the ball as well nor is as quick as Northside nemesis Carey, which handed four defeats to the 15-12 Blue Devils.

The Pirates may take things slowly, but Dietrich will continue its all-ahead-full style of play.

"We seem to play better when we get up and down the court," McCowan said. "If we throw more than three passes, we think we're in a delay game."

Americans still looking for record

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Time is running out for a record-setting fifth medal from America's Alpine skiers, but their compatriots in short-track skating could clinch the best Winter Games ever for the United States.

To win a medal today in the women's slalom, the U.S. skiers must overcome a powerful field headed by three Olympic champions.

The favorite, Swiss racer Vreni Schneider, won two titles in 1988. A third would rank her with Italy's Alberto Tomba, the only Alpine skier with three gold medals.

"Everything is possible," Schneider said. "I could win another gold medal or I could win nothing."

Americans won medals in the first four Alpine events here, but were shut out in the next four. There are only two more chances, in the men's and women's slaloms, for the U.S. team to match the five Alpine medals won in 1984.

Together, the Alpine skiers and short-track skaters had accounted for seven of the 11 U.S. medals heading into Friday night's slalom. In the women's figure skating, the best U.S. showing ever in a Winter Games was 12, and the short-trackers had medal chances in all three races scheduled tonight.

There is a U.S. team among the four finalists in the men's 5,000-meter relay. Andy Gabel of Pewaukee, Wis., is a favorite in the 500, and Cathy Turner of Hilton, N.Y., has a chance for a third medal in the women's 1,000.

The only other medal event

Saturday is the men's biathlon relay, expected to be a battle between the Germans and Russians. No other country has ever won.

The four-man bobsled start runs, wrapping up Sunday. Also on tap is the bronze-medal hockey game and two consolation matches: the Czech Republic vs. Slovakia for fifth place and the United States vs. Germany for seventh.

CBS will cover all the events, as well as a figure-skating exhibition, and will preview Sunday's gold medal hockey game.

In addition to Schneider, top contenders in the women's slalom include Sweden's Pernilla Wiberg, who won the Alpine combined title here, and Italy's Deborah Compagnoni, who won the giant slalom. Slovenia's Urška Hrovat also is a threat.

America's best hopes are Julie Parisien of Sugarloaf, Maine, and Eva Twardokens of Santa Cruz, Calif. Parisien's fourth-place finish in 1992 was the best by a U.S. woman in the Olympic slalom in 20 years.

Schneider has won five World Cup slaloms this season and placed second in two more. In addition, to two golds from 1988, she has won a silver and a bronze in these Games. A fifth medal today would give her more than any other woman in Alpine skiing.

Schneider is one of two gold-medal favorites in action today for Switzerland, which has bounced back with seven medals after a shutout in the first week of the Games.

Moe brings skis, ego back to U.S.

OVER, Norway (AP) — Get ready, America. The Tommy Moe show is coming to town.

Moe heads home Saturday with a gold medal in downhill, silver medal in super-giant slalom and a fifth-place finish in the combined — the best ever performance by an American male skier at one Olympics.

Now it's time to reap the rewards of his new celebrity status. There's fan mail to answer, a video game endorsement to sign and a date on David Letterman to book.

Tommy Moe, superstar. It's got a nice ring to it.

"I'm all for it," Moe, 24, of Palmer, Alaska, said Friday after the combined event. "I'm not going to get carried away. I'm out there to be a spokesman for skiing. I don't want to go all over the country doing appearances and things like that, but I wouldn't mind going on David Letterman."

Moe said Letterman asked him to appear on his show next Tuesday. But Moe won't be able to make it then because he'll be in Aspen, Colo., preparing for the next World Cup races. So who needs Letterman? "I think I can name any one of those shows and be on it, Jay Leno or whatever," Moe said.

Moe is also in demand by Nintendo, which wants him for a downhill video game. But first, he has to catch up on his fan mail.

"I get 60-100 letters a day, most from elementary kids in the U.S.," Moe said. "I'm going to have to find somebody to help me answer them all. I'll definitely drop 'em a postcard. I have little Tommy Moe postcards of me skiing."

His fan mail includes a telegram of congratulations from President Clinton.

"That was pretty cool," he said. "I got it hanging on my wall."

In Alaska, they're starting printing Moe Town T-shirts.

Moe said he won't let the throngs of success overwhelm him.

"A lot of different things are opening up for me, but I haven't changed and I'm not going to go around being arrogant like I'm a big downhill star," he said.

American Tommy Moe of Palmer, Alaska, bends a pole in his second run of the slalom portion of the men's combined event in Haffell, Norway, Friday. Moe finished 5th.

Moe is not the only American skier-riding a crest of Olympic success: Djann Roff-Steinroter won gold in the women's super-G and Picabo Street took silver in the downhill. Jeremy Nobis, Eva Twardokens and others have also posted strong results.

"We're getting recognition now," Moe said. "I heard 80 million people watched the downhill on TV in the States. It's good for the sport, I hope a lot of young kids can look at us as role models and try to be skiers."

They will get to see Moe competing in World Cup downhill in Aspen, Colo., March 4-5, and Vail, Colo., on March 17.

"I'm going to go there and enjoy the limelight," he said. "I haven't been in North America for three months. It's going to be a little culture shock for me. All I'm missing for my trophy shelf is a first place in a World Cup race."

Last week, Moe became the first American man to win two Alpine medals at a single Olympics. He was third after last week's downhill portion of the combined. But he's not a slalom specialist and was considered an outside shot only for a medal Friday.

Moe stayed in third place after the first slalom run with a time of 52.93 seconds. He said he needed "to ski out of my brain" on the second run to win a medal.

He came close, skiing another strong run of 49.34 for an aggregate of 3:19.41. That was less than three-tenths of a second off the bronze medal in what wound up as a 1-2-3 Norwegian sweep by Lasse Kjus, Kjetil Andre Aamodt and Harald Christian Strand Nilsen.

"This was the best slalom of my life," Moe said. "This is just another great finish for me. I'd give myself 8 or 9 on a scale of 10."

"It's been kind of a dream-come-true Olympics for me," he said. "Today was just icing on the cake. I was cheating out the whole day enjoying the whole experience. I ski better when I'm having fun. Today I was definitely having fun."

American ever to win three Alpine medals in a single Olympics. He skied well, but the day belonged to the Norwegians.

"I had good luck today," said Moe, who plans an appearance with David Letterman after leaving Norway. "I just didn't have enough."

Next up: The ski jumping, where Espen Bredesen and Lasse Ottesen finished one-two to boost Norway's medal total to 25 — the best in the Games, and the best winter showing ever for the Norwegians. The bronze went to Dieter Thoma of Germany.

"We had super spectators here today. This is simply wonderful," said Lasse Kjus, gold medalist in the combined.

Kjetil Andre Aamodt finished second, giving him two silvers and a bronze in Lillehammer. Norway has 10 gold, 11 silver and four bronze.

The Norwegians, as they have throughout the Games, performed for a raucous hometown crowd. More than 35,000 people cheered wildly as Kjus, Aamodt and Nilsen danced at the bottom of the hill to the traditional Norwegian folk song "Victory Is Ours."

"It was a great atmosphere," Aamodt said. "I have never experienced anything like this."

It was a day of vindication for Bredesen, who heard the cheers of 40,000 flag-waving countrymen two years after he was mocked for a last-place finish in Albertville. He won a silver last week in the long-hill jump.

Canada, which lost the 1992 gold-medal game to the Unified Team, ended Finland's six-game winning streak with a 5-3 semifinal victory. The once-dominant Russian team, depleted by defections to the NHL, came up 4-3 losers against Sweden in the other semifinal.

55 dead in worst Mideast violence since '67 war

Israel, PLO peace issues

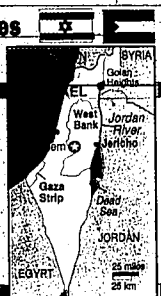

What Israel and the PLO settled, what remains unresolved.

UNRESOLVED ISSUES:

- Size of the Jericho region under Palestinian rule.
- Transfer of authority in 13 of 38 administrative departments now run by the Israeli military, including broadcasting rights, water allocation, electricity and land zoning.
- Deployment of a Palestinian police force.
- Release of Palestinian detainees held in Israeli jails.
- A trade agreement.

RESOLVED ISSUES:

- ✓ Israel can prevent anyone from entering at border crossings from Jordan and Egypt. Palestinians will run one of two wings of the crossing from Jordan and can display a Palestinian flag. Israel will run the crossing from Egypt.
- ✓ Jewish settlements will be grouped into three regions in Gaza, and the Israeli army will be allowed to establish bases in each of the regions. Soldiers will have the right to patrol three main roads from Gaza to Israel.
- ✓ Israel's right of hot pursuit is limited.
- ✓ Palestinians will lead night patrols in Jericho, and Israel will lead them in Gaza.
- ✓ Palestinians will be allowed to set up a resort area on the northern shore of the Dead Sea, outside of the Jericho region. Two religious sites outside the Jericho region will be under Palestinian control.

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank — Arabs rioted throughout Israel's occupied lands and President Clinton tried to rescue the Mideast peace talks after a Jewish settler opened fire Friday with an automatic rifle and grenades on rows of kneeling Muslim worshippers packed into a mosque.

The violence claimed the lives of 55 Palestinians, including at least 40 Muslims cut down in the massacre at the mosque inside the Tomb of the Patriarchs, a 2,000-year-old shrine for Muslims and Jews where Abraham is said to be buried. A retired American was stabbed to death in a revenge attack.

About 170 Palestinians were wounded in the mosque attack and subsequent riots.

The violence was the worst since Israel captured the West Bank and Gaza Strip in the 1967 Mideast war. It shattered the atmosphere of reconciliation that the Palestine Liberation Organization and Israel had nurtured at the negotiating table.

Clinton moved quickly to lead the talks, calling PLO and Israeli officials to Washington to negotiate until they agreed on a plan to implement Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and West Bank region of Jericho. Israeli officials said Maj. Gen. Amnon Shahak and Israel's negotiating team would leave Monday for Washington.

Israeli officials said the mosque attack was by a lone gunman — Dr. Baruch Goldstein, 38, a Brooklyn-born physician from a nearby settlement. But Palestinians questioned whether more than one gunman was involved.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin called PLO chairman Yasser Arafat to express his regret. "As an Israeli I am ashamed of this deed," Rabin said.

Arafat said the attacks would set back peace efforts. "What kind of peace are you talking about if the crimes and killings against our people do not stop?" he said on Radio Monte Carlo.

At the United Nations in New York, the U.N. Security Council was drafting a statement condemning the attack and calling on Israel to provide better security.

The massacre ignited stone-throwing attacks on soldiers and army shootings throughout the occupied lands, although most centered around Hebron, a city of 80,000.

Thousands of relatives gathered at two hospitals in Hebron and pelted the occupied lands and clamped a curfew on Hebron. It also sealed off the Gaza Strip and banned Palestinians under age 40 from entering Jerusalem.

The mosque attack began about 5:45 a.m. after a tense evening in which Muslims and Jews quarreled over rights to the site.

Each was marking a major holiday: the Muslims the holy fasting month of Ramadan, and the Jews Purim, which celebrates the Jews being saved from massacre by an ancient Persian king.

The attacker returned to the Ibrahim Mosque early Friday armed with a pistol, grenades and an Israeli-made Galil assault rifle, which can fire 750 rounds per minute.

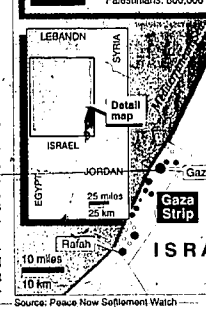

His face was covered with a white scarf.

The army poured extra troops into the massacre, believed to be the bloodiest since Israel seized the occupied territories in the 1967 Mideast war, set off rioting across the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and fired back the Middle East peace process.

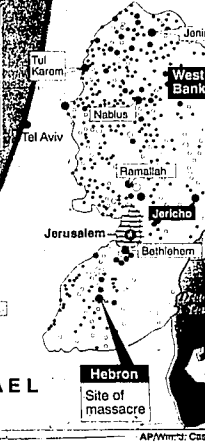

Approximate population figures for occupied territories as of Sept. 1993

Gaza Strip: Israeli settlers: 4,000; Palestinians: 800,000

Philosophy of violence ruled killer's heart

The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Baruch Goldstein, 38, a Brooklyn-born physician, was shot dead on his lap in a synagogue on Friday by dozens of Palestinian worshippers in a Hebron mosque on Friday.

A disciple of the late Rabbi Meir Kahane, who preached violence against Arabs and their expulsion from the Land of Israel, Goldstein was typical of the well-armed radical settlers who have threatened Middle East peace efforts.

Goldstein

Arab extremism. His attack at the Tomb of the Patriarchs, a site revered by Muslims and Jews as the burial place of the patriarchs, was the worst since Israel captured the West Bank from Jordan in the 1967 Mideast war.

In all, 55 Palestinians were killed and about 170 wounded in the violence, which was the bloodiest since Israel seized the occupied territories in the 1967 Mideast war, set off rioting across the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and fired back the Middle East peace process.

In any case he did not expect to survive. A suicide note found after the 5:45 a.m. attack at a Kiyat Arba clinic where he did emergency duty read: "Thank you for everything, for working with you. I enjoyed working as a doctor, wishing for full redemption."

David Ramati, a Chicago-born Kiyat Arba resident, said he saw his friend several hours before the attack at a synagogue reading of the Book of Esther. The story, about Jews rescued from a massacre in ancient Persia, is the basis for Friday's Purim holiday.

Goldstein "seemed quite at peace with the world. He sat with his children in his lap. It was a picture of family domesticity," Ramati said. A graduate of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University in New York City, Goldstein belonged to the Jewish Defense League under Kahane's leadership there.

In Kiyat Arba he represented the Kach party founded by Kahane in the mid-1970s on the local council.

"Kahane Chai," a group founded in Kahane's name, praised Goldstein after Friday's attack as a "Samson in the night" who "sanctified God's name."

University of Jerusalem Professor Ehud Sprinzak, an expert on Israel's extreme right, described Kiyat Arba as a "homeless" nest of radical settlers, the only settlement where Kach has gained significant political influence.

"There is a philosophy of violence — they believe it's God's will that they commit violence against goyim," a Hebrew term for non-Jews, he added.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"We can outrun the wind and the storm, but we cannot outrun the demon of Hurry."
— John Burroughs.

The play of a slam brings on a special excitement for an unwary declarer. He must fight the impulse to hurry the play, eager to land the big bonus. Today's South learned this lesson the expensive way.

West led the club 10 and South was quick to realize that he needed dummy's diamonds to make his slam. So he won dummy's club queen to start the suit. A low diamond from dummy went to South's queen, and South led a heart to dummy's ace to lead a second diamond past East's ace. This time East hopped up with his ace and led a second heart, knocking out dummy's heart king, the vital entry. Dummy's diamonds were now established but there was no entry left to cash them — down one.

South makes his slam if he forgoes the hurried-dummy entry in clubs. Instead, he wins the first trick with his club king and crosses to dummy's heart ace to lead diamonds. His king wins and he leads a second heart to dummy's king for another diamond play. East can either win or duck; it no longer matters. If he wins, he cannot neutralize dummy's club entry, and if he ducks, South gives East his diamond ace to claim 12 tricks.

It's fun and exciting to bid a slam! It's even more fun when one avoids the traps to score the slam.
