McRoberts flays health lobbyists for killing panel

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Senate Majority Leader Joyce McRoberts blamed the health-care industry lobbyists for scuttling her attempt to establish a state health-care commission.

The Twin Falls Republican made no attempt to hide her disappointment and frustration Tuesday, as it became clear that the Senate Health and Welfare Committee would kill her bill.

"It's clear now, more than ever, that our health-care providers don't want the Legislature or the public to learn any more about their system than they want to tell us," she told the panel before it voted.

"There has not been a clearer demarcation of support and opposition — physicians, hospitals and nursing homes against

1994 Idaho Legislature

all the rest who are frustrated with a lack of information about our current system."

The commission's main tasks would have been gathering information about health care costs and expenditures, analyzing the data, and making reform recommendations to the Legislature.

If a hospital or other provider refused to provide requested information, the commission could have obtained a subpoena from a district judge.

McRoberts has been working on the commission concept for nearly a year. She said after Tuesday's vote that she had revised it several times to meet objections from health-care provider groups.

In fact, the bill killed Tuesday was a revision of one she had introduced last month. The biggest change was a statement that the commission would "not have nor exercise rate-setting authority" — a concession to jittery health-care providers.

But none of the changes were enough for the providers, McRoberts said. Every time she met one set of objections, she said, the providers would bring up new ones.

"I would say they were opposed to the concept (of a health care commission)

2 leave jobs at courthouse after probe

By Stan L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — One county employee was fired and her immediate supervisor resigned Monday in the wake of last week's disciplinary probe by the county clerk's office.

The fired employee's identity was not revealed because she can appeal her dismissal, officials said. Chief Deputy Court Clerk Sherri Broyles said she gave Twin Falls County Clerk Bob Fort two weeks' notice. Her last day as chief deputy will be March 18, Broyles said.

However, Broyles will continue working for the clerk in an undetermined part-time position.

Fort emphatically denied asking for Broyles' resignation.

"Absolutely not," Fort said Tuesday. Her resignation is not a public matter, Broyles told The Times-News Tuesday.

"Why shouldn't I (resign)?" she asked. "That really isn't any of your business."

Lisa Barini-Garcia, attorney for the fired county employee, said her client has considered filing an appeal before the county commissioners. "We are contemplating an appeal," Barini-Garcia said. "That's about as far as we have thought."

[Any appeal must be made by Monday. At the appeal hearing, both the employee and the county representatives would have the opportunity to call witnesses and present evidence.

Barini-Garcia said that Fort's written notice cited the following rules from the county's personnel manual as the basis for her firing:

"Any action or inaction which is a hindrance to the effective performance of county functions or reflects discredit upon the county or its employees, will be considered just cause for disciplinary action."

"Failure to perform the duties and carry out the obligations imposed by the state constitution, state statutes, county ordinances, or rules and regulations of his or her department."

"Careless, negligent, or improper use of county property, either on or off duty, at any time or location."

"Inefficiency, incompetence, or negligence in the performance of duties."

Marvel takes Land Board to court over grazing lease

By William Brock
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Idaho Land Board was "arbitrary and capricious" when it rejected the high bidder for a state grazing lease and awarded it to a rancher who didn't bid at all, a Hailey environmentalist charged in a legal action filed Tuesday.

Acting on behalf of John Marvel, who heads the Idaho Watersheds Project, Ketchum attorney Debra Kronenberg filed a petition for judicial review with the 5th District Court in Hailey.

Kronenberg's action seeks to set aside the Land Board's Feb. 8 decision and send the matter back to the board with specific instructions on how to handle disputed grazing leases.

Marvel

"We've done this reluctantly," he said, "but this is an important Constitutional issue."

Bill targets Marvel - B1

"We hope to have the court require the State Board of Land Commissioners to follow the law and the constitution of the state of Idaho," Marvel said in a telephone interview.

"We've done this reluctantly," he said, "but this is an important Constitutional issue."

Marvel added that the court filing "can ultimately be resolved."

Health issue reaches Congress

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Before hundreds of lobbyists and government officials in the regal House Ways and Means Committee chamber, Congress officially began work Tuesday on changing the way Americans buy and receive medical care.

After months of waiting for the White House to design and refine a health plan, and watching the public's comfort level with its complicated details slip away, the opening of the Subcommittee on Health mark-up Tuesday refocused attention on the obvious: this is Congress' ball now and it is carrying it forward.

"This is where it's at after all the months of hoping and trial balloons. We're finally at ground zero," said David Hebert, lobbyist for the National Association of Life Underwriters. "Anyone interested in health care should be in this room."

Lobbyists out in force - A3

Ground zero was the gilded committee chamber under the deliberative management of subcommittee chairman Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., whose attacks on the Clinton plan have been colorful and damaging.

Now it is Stark, his 11 subcommittee members and his self-designed Medicare-style reform that are in the crosshairs of assorted interests. As Stark's subcommittee crept through a reading of his bill, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee signaled that he is considering modifying one or two of the most controversial elements of the Clinton plan: health insurance purchasing "alliances" and a requirement that employers purchase insurance for their employees.

Post Office goes after 3-cent price increase

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Paying bills, writing to aunt Maude or sending out a Valentine will cost a bit more next year.

The post office wants to boost the price of first-class stamps to 32 cents.

That three-cent increase will cost the average household between 60 cents and 75 cents a month, the agency said Tuesday.

But it means nearly $3 billion in added revenue for an operation that lost $1.7 billion last year and is struggling to hold the red ink to $1.3 billion in 1994.

The proposal now goes to the independent Postal Rate Commission, which has 10 months to hold hearings and rule on the request.

"None of us wants to raise postage rates," said Postmaster General Marvin Runyon. "We're sensitive to the impact of our price increases on customers."

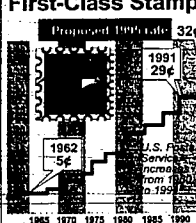

The post office accepted a proposal put forth in January by the Postal Rate Commission, which called for an across-the-board increase of 10.3 percent, which is essentially what the postal governors proposed.

Included in the plan are a 32-cent charge for the first ounce of a first-class letter and 25 cents for each additional ounce. That's up from the current price of 29 cents for the first ounce and 23 cents for each added ounce.

Post cards would increase from 19 cents to 21 cents and other rates would rise accordingly.

The plan calls for a rate increase

Price of a First-Class Stamp

Other proposed increases:

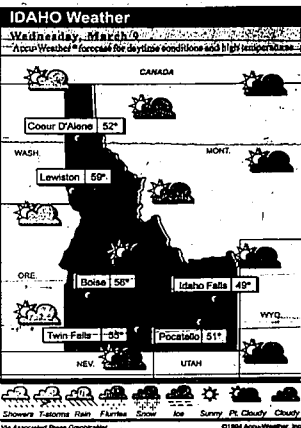

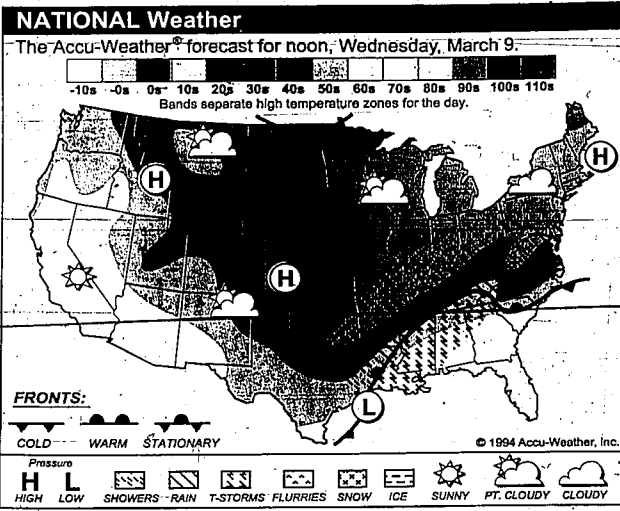

Item	Current Price	Proposed Increase
Postcards	19¢	21¢
Each additional ounce of a piece of first class mail	23¢	25¢
High-speed express mail	Minimum $10.95	Minimum $11.95
Parcel post (based on weight)	From $1.97 to $38.60	From $2.97 to $39.60

Source: U.S. Postal Service AP/Wm. J. Castella of about 10.3 percent for first- and second-class regular-rate mail, 10.2 percent for third-class and 13.2 percent for fourth-class.

First class is cards and letters, second-class is magazines and other periodicals, third class is advertising and fourth class is parcels.

This system has been bringing dry northwest winds aloft to bring sunny skies and mild to cool temperatures. A weak upper level disturbance has produced higher clouds across the state as it moved over the high pressure ridge. The weak disturbance and mountain effects produced some lower clouds in the southeast parts of the state Tuesday afternoon.

Winds were generally light to moderate and variable at most locations.

The highest temperature in the state Tuesday was 60 degrees at Payette. Stanley reported the lowest at 3 degrees below zero.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 93 degrees at Laredo, Texas. Rosau, Minn., reported the lowest temperature at 2 degrees below zero.

Snow buries Southern Plains, Ozarks; rain extends east

The Associated Press

A developing storm spread snow through the southern Rockies and southern Plains on Tuesday while streams of rain extended ahead of the weather system all the way to New England.

The snow and rain extended along the leading edge of cold air which curved from the southern Plains through lower Mississippi and southern Appalachians into New England.

Heavy snow fell across parts of northern Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, with snowfall rates of 1 to 2 inches an hour, the National Weather Service said.

Accumulations by early afternoon included 9 inches at Rogers, Ark.; 8.5 inches at Branson, Mo.; 8 inches at Pineville, Mo., and Harrison, Ark.; 7 inches at Cassville, Mo., and 6 inches at Gainesville, Mo., and Tulsa, Okla.

Snow fell up to an inch an hour in the Texas Panhandle. Schools were closed, one traffic death was blamed on more than anything," she said.

Robert Sechusen, executive director of the Idaho Medical Association, confirmed McRoberts' assessment.

"We don't see the need at this time for a commission," Sechusen said. "We do see that there are some problems with the system, but we don't need a commission or some other form of bureaucracy to deal with them."

The IMA represents Idaho physicians.

Robert Rainey, president of the Idaho Health Care Association, said only nuclear energy is regulated more tightly than health care, adding that the industry doesn't need another government agency looking over its shoulder.

Rainey said the IHCA, which represents nursing homes, opposed McRoberts' bill because the five commissioners would have been appointed by Gov. Cecil Andrus, subject to Senate confirmation.

"The governor has a demonstrated record of appointing providers," Rainey said. "He's been doing so for the last two years, from every pulpit he can."

The physicians, nursing homes and hospitals support another bill that would establish a two-year task force to recommend a health care plan to the Legislature's special committee on health care. McRoberts co-chairs that committee.

Representatives of providers and insurance companies would have at least one seat on the 17-person task force.

The health-care industry is one of the biggest contributors to legislators' campaigns, giving more than $50,000 to lawmakers in the 1991-92 election cycle.

The Idaho Hospital Association alone gave $17,000 to legislators in that two-year election cycle, and the IMA chipped in $13,450.

Treasury bars rifles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department has cracked down on a Chinese-made MAK90 rifle that was designed to get around an earlier ban on AK-47s.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms found some of the weapons were made so they could accept machine-gun components while others would allow attachment of a silencer or flash hider.

Health-care lobbying hits fever pitch in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four Connecticut psychologists surrounded Rep. Nancy Johnson as she made her way to Congress' first health-care reform drafting session, pitching their arguments amid the hubbub of elevators and corridors.

Mental health treatment, and particularly the kind of outpatient therapy that psychologists provide, should be covered under any new health plan, they urged. "This is a huge problem in our society," said Daniel Abrahamson, director of a mental trauma treatment center in South Windsor.

Johnson, a Republican member of the Ways and Means subcommittee that has first crack at devising a new health-care plan, was firm: The government should not define health benefits, but leave that to be fought out among medical professionals.

The 20-minute "walk and talk" lobbying session was one of hundreds of visits that took place Tuesday on Capitol Hill as Congress got down to the business of rewriting the nation's health coverage.

In addition to the psychologists from across the country, more than 300 dentists pushed to preserve the tax deductibility of dental coverage; some 200 restaurant owners pressed their arguments against forcing employers to pay for health care;

Former first ladies Rosalynn Carter, right and Betty Ford testify on Capitol Hill Tuesday during hearings on mental health and substance abuse issues involved in health care reform.

Wendy Webster, spokeswoman for the National Restaurant Association, whose lobbyists were large sticklers reading "NO Mandates." The association also began airing television ads that warned jobs will be lost if restaurants are forced to pay for health benefits, because the industry is labor-intensive and many workers now have no coverage.

And the association has activated its "key contact" list — a database of restaurant owners across the country who have personal friendships with members of Congress. One is Stephen Elmont, owner of a Boston restaurant, who has played host to Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., at his establishment and raises campaign money for him.

"When it's all said and done," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Kerry want to know what it's going to do to my restaurant," Elmont said. "Politics is local."

The psychologists were clearly concerned that their battle is uphill. They and other mental health professionals received a sympathetic hearing at the White House while President Clinton's plan was being developed, particularly from Tipper Gore, wife of Vice President Al Gore.

"Things become very complicated when you have this issue hitting Capitol Hill," said Bryant Welch, the American Psychological Association's chief legislative strategist. Clinton's bill, which provides mental health coverage, is increasingly seen as a dead letter, and "the landscape is constantly changing" as costs become the controlling factor.

When Johnson, a Republican, suggested that psychologists should fight their battles in the health-care marketplace and not in Congress, Welch contended market forces already had directed excessive resources into private mental hospitals. Psychiatrists and hospitals "have a much more powerful lobbying and marketing force" than other, lower-cost segments of the mental health care field, he said.

Later Bryant and other psychologists sought counsel from Rep. Ted Strickland, D-Ohio, who also is a psychologist and has worked with prison inmates. "I think we've got problems," Strickland told them. "There is going to be terrific pressure to minimize what we do."

We've got to fight it. We may need to walk to the edge of the cliff, and see who is the first to go off."

Mental health advocates were getting a boost from two respected former first ladies. Rosalynn Carter, who has crusaded for mental health care for two decades, and Betty Ford, whose own battle with alcoholism led to the establishment of a respected treatment center, told the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee that mental health should receive parity with traditional medicine in any new system.

The dentists visiting the Capitol Tuesday sought to preserve favorable tax treatment for dental insurance premiums. If caps are put on deductibility of benefit plans, some health proposals envision, dental care will suffer, they argued. The American Dental Association also was launching a grassroots effort to involve local dentists in districts of key lawmakers.

Clinton turns to veteran lawyer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House acknowledged additional contacts with federal regulators about the Whitewater investigation Tuesday, even as President Clinton tried to still critics' doubts by naming respected Washington attorney Lloyd Cutler as his chief counsel.

Clinton was naming Cutler at a late-afternoon news conference. Cutler agreed to serve only on a temporary basis, up to 130 days, so he wouldn't have to sever ties with his law firm.

Cutler, 76, a pillar of Washington's legal establishment, made clear he wasn't anxious to turn to the same job he'd held in the Carter administration.

"I've done it before, as you know," Cutler told reporters outside his home. "You don't look forward to it, but you do it. You're asked to do it and you have to do it."

As Cutler's appointment was about to be announced, the White House acknowledged more contacts with regulators about Whitewater, raising further questions about whether the administration had tried to meddle in the federal investigation.

Previously, the administration had confirmed contacts on three occasions.

"Based on what we know, there were some incidental contacts and other follow-up conversations," one senior administration official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"Nothing dealt with the substance of the Resolution Trust Corp. investigation."

Asked how many additional contacts there were, the official said: "A few."

The official said the additional contacts became known as a result of conversations and the examination of documents in the aftermath of subpoenas being served on administration officials by Whitewater special counsel Robert Fiske.

Clinton had said he wanted to fill the counsel's post with an individual of unquestioned integrity and experience who would help put his presidency back on track.

Cutler is known as the sort of lawyer that business executives turn to when they have serious problems. His recruitment by Clinton was a measure of the problems facing White House officials as a result of their mishandling of questions growing out of the Clinton's investment in an Arkansas real estate deal.

Analysis - A5

Six White House officials, including Cutler's predecessor, Bernard Nussbaum, and four Treasury officials are under subpoena in the Whitewater investigation.

Nussbaum resigned under pressure Saturday, criticized by many White House aides as lacking a solid political judgment and for making Clinton's problems worse.

The subpoenaed officials were ordered to testify Thursday after it was learned they had been briefed on the status of the Whitewater investigation by federal regulators, raising questions about whether the probe had been compromised.

Republicans pressed for congressional hearings into Whitewater, and the dean of the Tennessee congressional delegation, Republican Rep. James Quillen, said Clinton should quit.

"He should resign," Quillen said. "His staff has fumbled the Whitewater affair by asking for briefings of the status of the case. That's unheard of. It looks like President Clinton is trying to whitewash the Whitewater affair."

House Banking Committee Republicans released a list of 40 Whitewater witnesses they want to call before a March 24 hearing. They don't have power to force them to testify, however.

The list includes Arkansas figures, current and former senior White House aides, officials of the savings and loan cleanup agency and federal prosecutors.

Among them: James McDougal, former head of Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan; White House Chief of Staff Mack McLarty; former White House Counsel Nussbaum; Jean Hanson, general counsel of the Treasury Department and Roger Altman, deputy treasury secretary and interim head of the Resolution Trust Corp.

A new poll by ABC News found that 36 percent of Americans believe both the president and his wife acted illegally in their Whitewater dealings. Forty-nine percent said Whitewater was a serious matter.

Yet, the survey showed that Republicans in Congress — Clinton's chief accusers — also got low marks. Fifty-eight percent of respondents said the GOP was pressing the issue just to score points against Clinton.

FBI can't keep promise to help workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI can't keep its promise to find jobs here for every employee who doesn't want to move with its 2,500-person fingerprint division to West Virginia, FBI Director Louis J. Freeh said Tuesday.

Freeh blamed the turnaround on budget cuts and a sharp reduction in normal turnover in FBI posts. The guarantee of other Washington jobs was made in 1990 by then-Director William S. Sessions.

All 2,500 division employees can keep their jobs by moving to Clarksburg, W. Va., 250 miles away, and Freeh urged them to go. An earlier FBI poll found that 1,600 would not move, 170 would move and 200 employees of other FBI divisions wanted transfers to Clarksburg.

He said the government will pay all relocation costs and West Virginia has promised to help those with low or middle incomes with low-interest-rate mortgages and loans for closing costs and down payments.

"Those who decide against transfers will be given a priority for employment in other parts of headquarters, and we will offer retraining for new FBI jobs," Freeh said.

He added that some would retire before the six-year move is finished and he would seek approval for early retirement and cash incentives for some others who leave voluntarily.

But based on present estimates, "a still-to-be-determined number of employees" will have to be fired from 1996 through 1998 if they reject transfer to Clarksburg, Freeh said.

Shuttle astronauts enjoy easy day

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Columbia's astronauts exercised, drew blood and lounged in a vacuum sack Tuesday while scientists on the ground handled the major work.

It's a preview of life on NASA's proposed international space station — a combination of hands-on and remote-control experiments for weeks on end, dull perhaps for TV viewers but electrifying for scientists.

University of Maryland physicist Robert Gammon was excited with the results of an experiment he was conducting from NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. It's one of 11 primary experiments aboard Columbia, almost all of which are controlled from the ground.

Rock singer's ex-wife alleges abuse

LOS ANGELES — Axl Rose's ex-wife accuses him in a lawsuit of punching her, slapping her, shoving her, kicking her, tying her up, gagging her, spitting on her and dragging her by the hair.

After one beating, the lawsuit said, Erin Everly passed out and woke up in a hospital to learn she had been injected with heroin and cocaine and gone into cardiac arrest. The former Mrs. Rose also said he forced her several times to have sex and claimed to be "in touch with spirit and extraterrestrial beings."

Rose, lead singer for Guns 'N' Roses, wouldn't comment on the Superior Court lawsuit filed Monday.

IRS head promises better assistance

WASHINGTON — IRS Commissioner Margaret Milner Richardson assured lawmakers Tuesday her agency is improving its ability to answer its telephones. Last year, according to a congressional report, only about one in four callers got through during tax season.

This year, the Internal Revenue Service has installed additional telephone equipment and extended its hours over some weekends and holidays, she told the House Government Operations commerce, consumer and monetary affairs subcommittee.

"Access to our telephone system is critical to its success, and we are taking numerous steps to assure accessibility," she said.

Lawmakers dig into CIA over moles

WASHINGTON — A congressional panel warned that the CIA was headed for disaster if the agency didn't improve its ability to detect turncoats in its own ranks.

That was in 1987, two years after Aldrich Ames allegedly began spying for the Kremlin.

The report of the House Intelligence Committee, released Tuesday by the current chairman, Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., noted problems now being cited by investigators in the Ames case.

Glickman has begun a new investigation into CIA flaws in the wake of the Feb. 21 arrest of Ames, who, with his wife, is charged with spying since 1985 for the Soviet Union and then Russia in exchange for some $2.7 million.

Senate ponders aircraft liability

WASHINGTON — Senators clashed Tuesday over whether to prohibit liability lawsuits against manufacturers in crashes of small aircraft that are more than 15 years old.

The limitation has long been sought by the industry, which contends expensive, never-ending lawsuits are strangling general aviation. It has been bitterly opposed by trial lawyers.

Republican Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, whose home state of Kansas is headquarters to three leading small-aircraft companies, urged the Senate to exempt manufacturers from liability when their older planes crash. Kassebaum, whose constituents include the Wichita-based companies Cessna, Lear and Beech, said the proposal would revitalize a moribund industry, which she said has lost 100,000 jobs nationwide over the past decade.

Report: Anti-gay violence declines slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Incidents of anti-homosexual violence in six major cities declined last year, a gay group said Tuesday.

But the report's author said such violence "remains an epidemic that is out of control."

"Because of under-reporting by victims, we estimate that these figures constitute only a fraction — the tip of the iceberg, if you will — of the actual number of last year's incidents," said Martin Hiraga of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, the report's author.

The number of anti-gay incidents reported to gay and lesbian service agencies in six major cities declined 14 percent, from 2,103 in 1992 to 1,813 last year, the report found.

Meanwhile, the number of anti-gay offenses — such as harassment and vandalism — rose 5 percent, from 3,316 to 3,484, in the cities of Boston, Chicago, Denver, Minneapolis-St. Paul, New York City and San Francisco, the report said.

While the decline in incidents coupled with the increase in offenses might seem to indicate each incident involved many more criminal or victimizing acts, the figures indicate 300 apparently orchestrated harassing phone calls over one weekend to a group in Minneapolis-St. Paul. That harassment campaign was counted as 300 offenses, but just one incident.

Excluding that situation, the number of offenses per incident still rose 11 percent, from 1.6 to 1.8.

"Whether reports of anti-gay incidents are up or down, anti-gay violence remains an epidemic that is out of control," Hiraga said.

He stressed that while the report focused on six cities, the task force received reports about anti-gay hate murders elsewhere.

They include an African-American gay man shot in the head in Kansas City, Mo., on June 27, the day of a Lesbian and Gay Pride Picnic; a 25-year-old lesbian shot in the back at a gay bar in Macon, Ga.; a young gay man beaten and stabbed to death by three young men in a park frequented by homosexuals in Little Rock, Ark.; and a gay man shot 15 times by three men in Tyler, Texas.

Brenda and Wanda Henson, "life partners" of Overt, Miss., whose Camp Sister Spirit has been harassed for months, brought their tale of threats and attacks to the news conference.

"We should have the right to live in peace on our property, in our community, without intimidation or harassment," an emotional Wanda Henson said as she put her arm around Brenda Henson.

The offenses that increased in the six cities last year were:

- Arson, up from two to six.
- Vandalism, up 10 percent, from 141 to 155.

Harassment, up 35 percent, from 4,230 to 5,665, including the 300 in Minneapolis-St. Paul.

Offenses that declined were:

- Threats and menacing, down 9 percent, from 667 to 603.
- Physical assaults, down 16 percent, from 848 to 710.

Female federal agents allege harassment

WASHINGTON (AP) — When special agent Gayle Wyche complained about sexual discrimination in the Drug Enforcement Administration, she says, a supervisor told her he would solve the problem — on condition she begin a personal relationship with him.

"He suggested we would go bar hopping, hot tubbing, etc. together on a weekly basis. He explained to me that this was how other female agents in the Denver division were 'taken care of,'" Wyche testified to a House investigative subcommittee Tuesday.

Shirley Ann Garcia, an investigative assistant for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said the special agent in charge in Dallas flicked his cigarette ashes down the front of her blouse several times.

Wyche, Garcia and three other female employees of federal law enforcement agencies — including the Federal Bureau of Investigation — alleged sexual harassment and retaliation in a hearing of the House Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee on oversight and investigations.

Spokesmen for the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms didn't immediately return telephone calls seeking comment.

"Federal law enforcement agencies ... have often lagged rather than excelled in abiding by the (federal) sexual harassment guidelines," said District of Columbia Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton, a Democrat who once chaired the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

"It is time that these agencies get the message that in the employment relationship, sexual fun and games have no place, especially when one party does not want to play the game at all."

Norton called the testimony from the five women "tragically instructive."

She told Richard Stiner, director of special investigations at the General Accounting Office, that his approach was too "timid" because he recommended changing the Drug Enforcement Administration's internal procedures for handling sexual harassment complaints rather than bringing in an outside party.

A new report by the GAO,

Congress' investigative arm, on sexual harassment complaints at the drug agency was released at the hearing.

It concluded that processing times for complaints were long, averaging 392 days; investigations and case files were incomplete; female employees feared retaliation for reporting alleged harassment; employees lacked understanding of what behavior constitutes sexual harassment; and the agency's disciplinary actions were perceived as, insufficient to deter future harassment.

As Whitewater controversy grows, so does Clinton's frustration

By John King
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As the Whitewater controversy expands and Republican attacks grow louder, President Clinton is increasingly frustrated not only by White House mistakes but by the reluctance of Democrats to rush to his defense.

With a few exceptions, the task of defending Clinton has been left to White House aides and political advisers, a circle of allies that has gotten smaller because aides subpoenaed in the investigation cannot talk publicly about the affair.

Political advisers are trying, to little avail so far, to prod Democratic members of Congress to defend the president.

"I ask them, 'How come when these Republicans get up and denigrate on these issues there are no Democrats rushing into the breach?'" Clinton political adviser Paul Begala said of his recent conversations with Democrats in Congress. Begala gets a standard answer: "They say when they go home that people never mention it, so why not leave it as a bunch of hot air from the Republicans?"

Indeed, polls suggest a majority of voters take the view that Republicans are leveling many charges against Clinton hoping to make political gain. Yet the polls also show rising doubts about the way Clinton has handled the controversy, a trend of great concern to a White House whose only comfort so far is that Whitewater hasn't eroded the president's solid job-performance ratings.

A handful of Democratic lawmakers interviewed this week, when guaranteed anonymity, gave another reason for not rushing to Clinton's defense: Like most White House aides, they know little or nothing about the first family's Whitewater-related dealings. They're worried that another shoe — or more — might drop.

Two also said that botched White House handling of the controversy left them nervous.

"I'm not saying they have something to hide; in fact I doubt very much that they do," said a Democratic House member who has been a loyal

Study finds 1 in 10 rely on food help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 26 million Americans rely on food pantries, soup kitchens and emergency feeding programs, and thousands are turned away because the shelves are bare, according to a study sponsored by the country's largest hunger-relief organization.

Released Tuesday on Capitol Hill by Second Harvest, a nationwide network of food banks, the study found that children account for almost half of all people needing a bag of groceries or a hot lunch from a food pantry or soup kitchen.

The study comes as Congress wrestles with President Clinton's 1993 budget proposal to eliminate federal spending on commodities distributed to food banks under the Emergency Food Assistance Program, or TEAP, saving $40 million.

According to Second Harvest's study, 25.9 million people, or 10.4 percent of the U.S. population, use feeding programs served by the Chicago-based network of food banks. Forty-three percent are 17 and younger, and 73 percent of households served have annual incomes of less than $10,000.

The study was conducted by the VanAmburg Group, a marketing research firm, and was based on a nationwide sampling of 34 food banks, 3,182 agencies, and interviews with 8,596 recipients. It was financed by a grant from Kraft General Foods.

Mideast travel warning out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has again advised U.S. citizens to avoid travel to East Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza due to violence in the area.

This has been the department's consistent advice since the Feb. 25 attack on a Muslim mosque in Hebron.

Within Israel itself, Americans were advised Tuesday not to use public transportation, stay away from big stops, avoid crowds and demonstrations and "maintain a low profile" to reduce risk.

However, limits imposed last Friday on travel by U.S. government employees in the territories were canceled.

Analysis

Clinton ally. "But if I'm going to participate in a defense strategy, I need to be convinced there is a strategy."

If Whitewater becomes a major election-year issue, Clinton might face another problem: So far, Democrats have rebuffed Republican demands for a congressional investigation, but that resolve could crumble, as Democratic opposition to naming a special counsel did, if hearings become an issue back home.

So far, the most vocal Clinton defender among senior congressional Democrats has been House Speaker Thomas Foley.

"There's no evidence of anything wrong in this matter. None," Foley said Monday.

But most of the defenses offered by other Democrats have been less forceful.

Sen. John Breaux of Louisiana, for example, said Tuesday on NBC's "Today" program that congressional hearings on Whitewater were "clearly not necessary" and Republicans were "stirring up the waters" instead of getting about the business of health care reform and anti-crime legislation.

But Breaux did not challenge House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich after Gingrich suggested on the program that the Clintons' Whitewater land investment and its relationship with a Little Rock savings and loan might have involved Small Business Administration fraud and "an effort to manipulate the entire regulatory process of Arkansas."

Clinton loyalists insist that help is on the way.

"In the next few days you will see Democrats more and more aggressively coming to the president's defense," Democratic National Committee Chairman David Wilhelm said in an interview. "The Republican frenzy here is really out of desperation, but we're not going to leave it unanswered."

Wilhelm refused to discuss in any detail the reluctance of Democrats to rush to Clinton's defense so far, except to say that many were caught off guard by the subpoenas issued to White House aides Friday, and surprised at the level of media focus on Whitewater.

"I think people are now ready to fight," Wilhelm said, promising that party leaders would rush to Clinton's defense at this weekend's Democratic National Committee meeting in Cleveland. He also said more Democrats in Congress would step forward. But he would not name any.

A tiny note of reason echoes through Capitol

Maybe it was only a futile gesture of defiance. But Tuesday's vote on public-school funding showed that reason and prudence are not yet extinct in Boise.

Up to now, a "spend to the moon" philosophy has dominated this year's school-budget debate. The education lobby wanted a $95.5 million increase (18 percent!) over this year's spending. The governor wanted even more. And legislative leaders have signaled that they won't stand in the way.

In that context, Tuesday's tiny note of dissent by the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee roared like thunder. The committee approved a $620.5 million school aid proposal — an increase of only $92.5 million.

That's not much of a cut, really. But the key point is that JFAC proposes to sock a fair amount of that money into one-time expenses (such as supplies, textbooks, school-reform grants and new technology), instead of pumping it all into salaries.

That's the right direction for lawmakers to go. The previous proposals, though popular with teachers, would set Idaho on a course toward fiscal calamity. Locking in big, permanent pay raises during this time of rising tax revenue could force tax increases or program cuts if revenue falls someday — a scenario that has been played out in state after state across America.

The committee members appear to understand that danger.

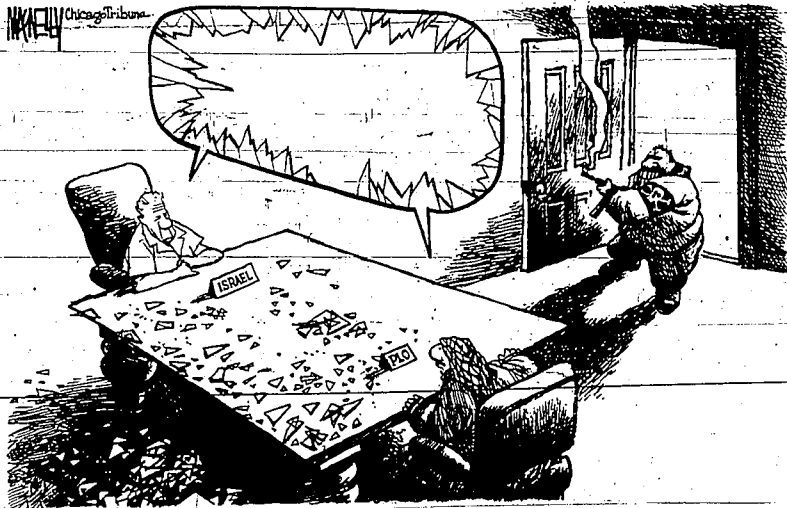

Unfortunately, they may be in the minority. Soon after Tuesday's vote, predictions were being made that the JFAC recommendation would be squashed in the Senate. And the education lobby was howling mad.

You can bet that JFAC members who voted for the lower figure will be targeted for election opposition by the Idaho Education Association, the powerful union representing some Idaho teachers.

Opponents of moon-shot budgeting will be vilified, predictably, as "anti-education" — even though no one has explained how enormous pay raises would improve Idaho's schools.

Legislators voting on the side of fiscal restraint appear to understand the difference between spending wisely and simply spending more. They know that what the education lobby demands is not the same thing as what Idaho's children need.

For the sake of Idaho's schools as well as Idaho's taxpayers, they mustn't give up the fight.

Conference coverage weak

I am an 18-year-old senior at Wendell High School, and the reason I am writing this is because of my interest in sports.

Over the past few years I have developed into a daily sports reader because I am always too busy to watch every sport game that I would like to. So I frequently resort to your newspaper. With all of my sports experience and one year in a journalism class as a sports editor/writer, I feel that I know the field well and I am pleased to say the coverage has been enjoyable and satisfying.

On the other hand, however, this last season lacked information concerning the A-3 Canyon Conference boy's basketball games. I feel that the details were redundant and weak, pictures were scarce and the few extra feature articles were short and speculative. With the high-end intense level of competition in our league of play, I feel, as a reader and as student, the teams deserve more — not just for Wendell but for the whole Canyon Conference.

I am not trying to criticize your work, nor am I pointing out your coverage of Wendell basketball, but I feel that next year more effort and emphasis should be placed in this administrative methods.

But evidently, members of the School Board are not taking the concerns of the patrons and employees very seriously. Whose concerns are they taking seriously? Whose business are they about?

Mr. Walton's letter puts blame on the Idaho Education Association and even the National Education Association. That has no merit at all. The current problems in the district are strictly local. And certainly, they have nothing to do with an NEA newsletter or a speaker at Meridian High School in 1992, as he suggests.

During the many years I worked in the school district both as a teacher and a secretary, I have never come in contact with any teachers who were so-called "power hungry," as some have suggested. I have only worked with dedicated teachers and other employees who want and deserve to be treated fairly and with respect.

They all deserve to be appreciated for the many hours they put in to do the best possible job of educating our children.

Let's support our teachers and other district employees!

Department could stop accidents

On the evening of Feb. 18, my son was on his way home from co-workers and collided with a semi-truck on Sweetzer Pass (I-84, Mile Post 258) due to icy conditions of the road. Vehicles from both directions could not make the hill, causing a traffic jam and four collisions.

My son said a police officer had told him the roads had been slick at 6 o'clock and that they had notified the state Highway Department that they needed to be sanded. At 9:15, after four accidents, the first sanding truck arrived.

I did some investigation on my own and have concluded that the state Highway Department allows needless accidents to happen on the interstate highway that runs through the Mini-Cassia area to the Utah State line. I rate maintenance personnel very low in preventive maintenance. South Idaho is noted for strong, gusty winds and winter ice storms that come up without warning. I don't believe they do a very good job of planning ahead for storms that frequent this area.

My oldest son has been a relief driver the last two winters for a local milk hauler. He told me that often when he has taken a load to Salt Lake and has been on his way home at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning when there was a storm, there would be snow plows and sanding trucks out working between Tremonton and the Idaho border. From there to Burley, he would see no maintenance equipment.

The week of Feb. 14-22, snow and ice storms were forecast, yet sanding trucks responsible for this area were left unattended. The loader in the Sublett area had a flat tire on Friday, the 18th, and was not fixed by evening, delaying sanding trucks by causing them to drive to the Ogden interchange to be loaded and then back to Sweetzer. A very expensive weather station was installed at Cottrell this last year, including sophisticated radio equipment and digital signs at each end of this stretch of the freeway, allowing it to be closed quickly, if necessary, instead of allowing hundreds of vehicles to go into this area and risk injury or death.

In order to keep road conditions safe, maintenance personnel are required to be on call 24 hours a day, but what good does it do if they respond after accidents have already happened?

McMahon protects community

I am writing to thank General Manager Dick McMahon of KKVI for his brave stand concerning his recent refusal to air the "Roseanne" episode in which a lesbian character kissed the heroine.

In a day and age when nothing is sacred to the television industry, it is nice to know someone is willing to keep community standards in mind before airing a show. I am a senior at Twin Falls High School who is deeply concerned about the moral problems so present today.

I do not think anyone could deny that television does have an impact on the way people act, especially children who might have seen this show because of its 8 p.m. airing time. True, parents should be monitoring what their children watch, but the fact remains that many do not. It is up to other people to see that these children are not harmed by the parents' carelessness.

Thank you, Dick McMahon. Keep up the good work!

Censorship kills individuality

To KKVI management:

Television at my house is regulated and censored the old-fashioned way — by the pushing, pulling or pressing of a button. The button is located on the TV or on a small box carried around the house. Tests have shown that, with a little patience, a chimpanzee can be trained to perform this simple task. Fortunately for the individuals in Twin Falls not able to accomplish this, the management of KKVI and its sanctimonious cronies are here and ready to champion the cause. These people seem to censor and regulate with impunity.

Due to the controversy and press surrounding the "Roseanne" show, I switched from it to decide for myself. I found that it had been replaced by a documentary. This decision, no doubt, was made by the censorship club in an attempt to control individuality and ensure all the residents of Twin Falls a secure place in heaven.

I switched to Channel 3 and watched the "Roseanne" show and, after that, sat through "NYPD Blue." So, congratulations to the well-trained chimpanzees at KKVI who can push, pull or press the buttons. For all residents in Twin Falls whom you believe unable to perform this simple task for themselves, you have my sincere thanks and gratitude.

Politicians have not learned from predecessors' mistakes

The all-too-familiar words — investigation, subpoena, grand jury, resignation — have echoed through Washington again this past week. And along with them has come one gloomy realization: If you drew a chart of the learning curve of White House staffs for the last quarter-century, the line would be nearly straight.

From Watergate to Whitewater, the men and women who work behind the gates at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. have shown stunning little ability to learn from the mistakes of their predecessors. They go on doing the same dumb things, over and over, and they are perennially shocked when trouble results.

How many times do we have to read about such things as crasing tapes, shredding documents, bugging phones, setting up back-channel communications, going out like the loop, and other manifestations of hunkering down and covering up, before someone gets the message? How many more designated fall guys have to be pushed overboard before someone stands up and shouts, as in the old IBM ads, "Think!"

To be fair, hundreds of people have served honorably and worked diligently in the White House over the past 25 years, and they are perennially being clouded in any way. They are not at fault. But too many others — far too many — have abused power, confused private goals with public responsibilities and brought embarrassment and worse to themselves, their presidents and the country.

Unless one is prepared to believe that knavery is endemic in the upper reaches of American life, you have to suspect there is something in the environment of the White House itself that breeds a lack of common sense, even disregard for the law, among too many people who work there.

Never having been employed on the premises, I can only speculate, but I would make several guesses.

Part of the problem is simply the media-fed glorification of the White House. People of modest means and modest talents find the celebrity and influence of a White House staff position heady stuff. They are flattered and courted all the time — and they inhale the heady fumes of short-term celebrity.

At a benign but ludicrous level, they claim, as John Sununu did, that it's OK to use presidential aircraft for keeping dental appointments because they need to be in "constant communication" with the White House. At a more sinister level, they come to believe that their own interpretation of a president's wishes is enough to justify evading the law and lying to Congress, as Oliver North did.

The vanity and arrogance factors have caused problems in the White House for decades. Scandals among presidential cronies are nothing new. There were vicuna coats in Eisenhower's time, deep freezers in

David S. Broder

Truman's, and a lot worse when Harding was there. But this problem has been given new dimensions by the carryover and exaggeration of the worst features of modern presidential campaigns into the presidency itself.

The modern campaign relies heavily on espionage ("opposition research"). It is but a short step from them to the "enemies lists" of the Nixon era or the "war rooms" that have been set up under President Clinton.

When White House staffs are recruited primarily from those who proved most adept at swatting the opposition during the campaign, they bring to their combat weapons with them. They tend to see everyone — Congress, other politicians of both parties, the bureaucracy and the press — as forces who must be subdued if the president is to prevail.

Too often, the result is a "bunker mentality," an "us against them" mindset that becomes a justification for underhanded tactics and questionably legal maneuvers.

Campaign veterans see the candidate as "the man," and proudly display their loyalty to him. In the free-for-all rivalry of politics, that mindset may be justified. But when they take their oaths as White House officials, they acquire a responsibility to the Constitution and to the American people that should — but too often does not — circumscribe the ways they use their power. They may serve "at the pleasure of the president," but they serve in a government of laws, where he is but one official.

Any president is entitled to have loyal lieutenants around him. But experience has shown that surrounding himself exclusively with personal and political loyalists is an invitation to trouble. The wisest thing a president can do is to add several veterans of past administrations — of his own and the opposite party — to his staff. And the next most useful antidote to abuse of power is to bring in at least a few people who have had lives and careers of their own, men and women who can afford to tell a president when he and his courtiers are going astray.

If President Clinton had been foresighted enough to do this at the start of his administration, he might not be facing what he is today. His reported choice of Lloyd Cutler as White House counsel to replace the unfortunate Bernard Nussbaum is a belated recognition of this reality.

David S. Broder writes for the Washington Post.

Team deserves better treatment

I would like to start off by saying I am extremely disappointed in KMYT News.

The Twin Falls High School Basketball Team went to State and finished a very impressive second place. Obviously, second place was not good enough to make a top story for the evening. It was not even good enough to make the third or fourth story. Instead, it was stuck in the sports section. This is where every other sports story is stuck.

I believe TFHS deserves some recognition. The game was a close and well-fought battle.

Even when the story did run, it was just a quick little story. Instead, KMYT spends more time on foreign and out-of-state news. Who cares about that?

It is as if TFHS is unimportant and so is the TFHS team. Come on. Give our school a little respect.

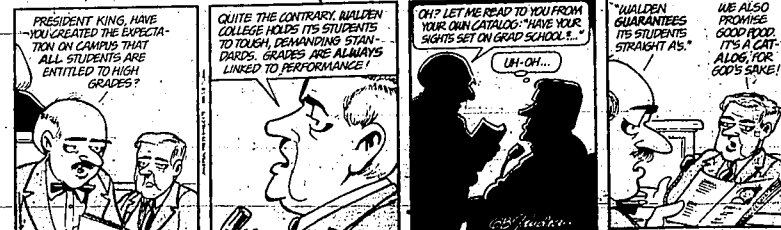

At least this would have made for a more cheerful top story for the evening. Maybe that's a little too much to ask for from KMYT.

Support Minidoka teachers

I am sure there have been problems between employees and/or patrons and previous school administrators. But never in my 40 years of having children attending Minidoka County schools and being an employee of the district for most of those years have the problems escalated to the current level. A very large group of patrons and a big majority of the employees feel the problem is so serious they want the superintendent to resign. There must be some very valid reasons why so many people feel so strongly about the current superintendent's

Chief blames security for massacre

An Israeli border policeman strikes a Palestinian woman with the barrel of his rifle in East Jerusalem Tuesday as clashes erupted following a march marking International Women's Day.

Photographers trampled, shot as police stop protest

JERUSALEM (AP) — A bullet hit the leg of a photographer for the French news agency and an Associated Press photographer was trampled by a police horse Tuesday when officers broke up an Arab protest in east Jerusalem.

Police spokesman Shmuel Ben-Ruby said officers used tear gas and rubber bullets after "dozens if not hundreds" of demonstrators joined a march by some 50 women commemorating International Women's Day and started throwing stones.

The incident came a day after AP photographer John Gaps III was wounded in the thigh by a plastic bullet fired by an Israeli army sniper in the occupied Gaza Strip.

Awad Awad of Agence France-Presse said he was shot in the calf Tuesday after ignoring police warnings not to take pictures. He said one policeman "told me if I do not stop taking pictures he will shoot me."

Awad, 24, was treated at Mukdass hospital and released. The AP's Eyad Warshavsky, 24, said that when police tried to clear the street "we started running... for some reason

I fell and I felt two horses stepping on me. A horse hit me in the head."

Warshavsky was treated for a broken wrist at Hadassah Hospital and released.

Ben-Ruby said he "heard that a horse trampled on a photographer, apparently while moving forward or backward. It certainly was not intentional." He said he did not know about Awad's injury, but "if he was among the demonstrators then it's possible."

"We try to permit reporters to do their work," Ben-Ruby said. "We don't interfere... but if someone stands behind a horse or among demonstrators I can only express regret."

Ben-Ruby said 14 people were arrested, including a Palestinian U.N. aid worker who tried to prevent an arrest. He was released after questioning.

There were no other reports of injuries. Witnesses said the demonstrators were angry because police wanted to break up the march, which did not have a permit. Some of the women carried signs condemning the U.S. Israel-PLO autonomy pact.

International Women's Day was marked in Cambodia by a march protesting the exploitation of prostitutes and in Russia by pro-communist women banging pots around President Boris Yeltsin's office.

Turkey's first woman premier, Tansu Ciller, laid a wreath of red and white carnations at the tomb of Ataturk, whose 1930s reforms gave Turkish women rights they enjoy in no other Muslim country.

In Algeria, by contrast, Islamic militants set Tuesday as the deadline for women to wear veils in public or risk assassination. Hundreds of women defied the warning, marching through the streets of Algiers with portraits of slain women and cries of "Neither veil, nor robe!"

The focus of the German "women's strike" was the eastern states, where the demise of communism has meant the loss of jobs, child care and abortion rights for women.

The response of eastern German women has been an informal "high style" in Brandenburg, a state with 2.6 million people, 33,000 children were born in 1989 but only 12,500 last year. About 6,000 Brandenburg women had sterilization operations last year.

"Women simply can't afford children," said Dr. Siegmund Steppuhn, a state health official. Many of the women got sterilized "to make themselves more attractive on the labor market."

At 1 p.m., women across Germany were urged to make noise for 10 minutes to show they would not settle for low-wage jobs, layoffs and the Supreme Court's decision last year throwing out a liberal abortion law.

Bonn City Hall was wrapped in a purple ribbon, the symbolic color of the women's movement.

Women mountain climbers staked out a purple banner reading "Germany in Women's Hands — That Would Be Tops!" on the Zugspitze, Germany's highest mountain.

In Potsdam, the Brandenburg capital, about 50 men and women blocked a major bridge in the city center, creating a huge traffic jam.

Regine Hildebrandt, the feisty Brandenburg social affairs minister, noted that two out of three people without jobs in the state are women and that unemployment among women is 63 percent. In the communist days, 91 percent of East German adult women had jobs, compared to 55 percent of West German women.

The "women's strike" originally was conceived as a general strike in which German women would take to the streets and let men do the work at office and home.

The commission's recommendations are not binding. But findings of similar panels have resulted in the dismissal or reprimand of senior officials.

Yatom said the gunman, Baruch Goldstein of the Jewish settlement Kiryat Arba, reached the Tomb of the Patriarchs at about 5:20 a.m. on a Friday when Muslims were marking a key day in the holy month of Ramadan and Jews were celebrating the Purim holiday.

About 400 to 500 Muslim worshippers were gathered in the Ibrahim Mosque, a wing of the 2,000-year-old building. On the other side of a partition, 13 Jews were praying, Yatom said. The Jewish worshippers told army investigators they didn't see Goldstein enter the mosque.

Ten soldiers should have been posted at the entrances to the compound and inside, Yatom said. Instead, only one army officer was on duty inside and four border policemen were stationed at two gates outside.

Three additional border policemen should have been there by 5 a.m. but overslept, Yatom said.

The officer inside sent a soldier who should have patrolled indoors to another posting away from the compound and an Israeli policeman didn't show up for duty indoors, Yatom said.

Yatom said the security arrangements "had they been carried out in full, could have prevented the way in which Goldstein acted, the massacre."

Yatom asserted no armed Israelis were allowed in the mosque area during Muslim prayers.

Nevertheless, Goldstein, who was wearing his army reserve uniform and was known to the guards, entered the mosque through the main gate, along with the Muslim worshippers. Once inside, he fired long bursts from his Galil automatic rifle, emptying 110 bullets into the kneeling worshippers over a period of 1.5 minutes, Yatom said.

By the time the army guard had pushed his way into the mosque, the shooting was over and he found Goldstein lying in a corner, beaten to death by worshippers, Yatom said.

Israelis bomb bases

MARJAYOUN, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes bombed suspected bases of Iranian-backed militants in southern Lebanon Tuesday, a day after nine people were killed in guerrilla attacks on a border zone occupied by Israel's army.

Security sources said four fighter-bombers attacked the Milita bluffs in Iqlim al-Tuffah, Arabic for Apple Province, in two sorties this afternoon.

A cyclist tries to keep up with a Sarajevo streetcar on its first run in two years Tuesday as it approaches the war-damaged government building on 'Sniper Alley.'

Sarajevo streetcar takes run down 'Sniper Alley'

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Some Sarajevoans cheered. Others cried. Still others didn't believe their eyes.

Emerging from their shell-scarred garages on Tuesday, two portly red-and-yellow streetcars lumbered down "Sniper Alley" as if the past two years of war had never happened.

Emina Ostroski, 61, wept as she watched the electric trolleys rumble by.

"We are crying... I am happy, my heart is beating," she sobbed. "I didn't expect to survive to see something like this."

But it was hard to ignore the reality of war along the trolley path.

The streetcars passed by gutted buildings, stopping in places where stations once stood. The buses, escorted by two U.N. armored vehicles and packed with U.N. peacekeepers, Bosnian soldiers and city officials, slowed at one point so peacekeepers and Bosnian workers could remove an anti-tank barricade.

Restoring the streetcar system, destroyed soon after the war broke out in April 1992, is a part of the United Nations effort to restore normalcy in the war-torn Bosnian capital.

The latest cease-fire has been holding in the city, with minor violations for three weeks, with besieging Serbs heeding NATO's determination to end the city's ordeal.

Yet full peace is far away. Tuesday's trial run was only over a three-mile stretch of tracks instead of the full nine miles. The Serb-held portion in western Sarajevo remained off limits, and officials held little hope that the full line would be operating soon.

Yet the sight of the two trolleys was enough to thrill the hundreds of people along the wayside. After all, they were the first trams since last May 2, when a streetcar got in the way of a gun battle between city defenders.

"I see it but I can't believe it is happening," Hajra Hamzic, 50, said with tears in her eyes as the old wagons rolled by.

"This opens, in a way, room for more and more peace," said French Brig. Gen. Andre Soubirou, U.N. commander in Sarajevo. Soubirou boarded the first car at a stop just 300 yards from the Jewish Cemetery, where French troops have been engaged in sniper duels with Bosnian Serbs in recent days.

After the streetcar turned at the French base in the Skenderija neighborhood and returned to the station, Soubirou shook hands with the driver, Mirza Cengic.

"We are very glad for you and for your city," Soubirou told the driver. "This is a dream I still don't believe. I'm in this tram and it looks like peace is coming but I can't help it being skeptical," said passenger Adem Luvic 35.

Other bystanders held the same skepticism. Sarajevo has been without electricity for most of the war and even now little is available.

"Maybe it would be better if they give the electricity to my home, so that I can live a semi-normal life," said Zlatan Pasic, 31.

Indian jet crashes into Russian plane

NEW DELHI, India — An Indian jetliner on a training flight swerved off its flight path Tuesday and crashed into a parked Russian plane at New Delhi international airport. Both planes caught fire and at least seven people were killed.

The Sahara India airliner was practicing takeoffs and landings at the domestic airport when it lost control on its fourth takeoff and crashed at the neighboring international airport, said Aditya Arya, police chief of the two airports. He said seven were injured.

The Boeing 737-200 narrowly missed the main terminal building of the Indira Gandhi International Airport before slamming upside down into an AeroFlot Ilyushin 86, Arya said.

Thieves return royal marriage warrant

LONDON — A royal warrant which gave Queen Elizabeth II permission to marry has been returned to the Public Record Office after thieves tried to sell it on the black market.

A spokeswoman at the Public Record Office said Tuesday that the warrant, signed by Elizabeth's father, King George VI, was stolen last spring at a time when builders were removing asbestos from the records building in Kew, west London.

The theft was announced after two men involved in the asbestos removal and another man pleaded guilty Monday to trying to sell the documents. They were sentenced to do community service.

Police detain Chinese student leader

BEIJING — Police briefly detained China's most-wanted student leader from the 1989 pro-democracy movement Tuesday, three days before Secretary of State Warren Christopher is to visit Beijing.

Wang Dan, who was detained for about 24 hours last week, was again whisked away today by three plainclothesmen while he was eating dinner with his family at home, a relative said. He was released an hour later.

The Clinton administration has said the detention of as many as 14 dissidents since Wednesday has cast a pall over Christopher's visit, which begins Friday.

China lashed back Tuesday, asserting the United States has no business criticizing the police roundup.

Speeding train derailment kills 63

DURBAN, South Africa — A speeding train filled with black commuters derailed Tuesday, and 63 people died when the cars smashed into a wooded hill.

A railway investigator was trying to determine if a bomb sent the train off the tracks.

A thunderstorm burst at 12 hours after the crash, workers using cranes completed the grisly task of lifting the eight derailed coaches. Bodies had been found throughout the sweltering day, but officials said they did not expect to find any more dead.

Some 370 people were injured. The train was approaching a station outside the northeastern port city of Durban, about 350 miles southeast of Johannesburg, at about 5:20 a.m. when all but two of its 10 cars derailed.

Inquest into Hendrix death ruled out

LONDON — The attorney general on Tuesday ruled out a new inquest into the death of Jimi Hendrix, the famed rock guitarist who died in 1970.

Kathy Etchingham, Hendrix's former girlfriend, has been campaigning for a new inquest. She claims Hendrix died earlier than officially recorded.

In December, Scotland Yard announced it had reopened its investigation of Hendrix's death.

But the attorney general, Sir Nicholas Lyell, "has concluded in the light of all the evidence that this is not an appropriate case for the granting of consent" for a new inquest, his office said.

Hendrix died in London on Sept. 18, 1970, after leaving the message "I need help bad, man" on his manager Chas Chandler's answering machine. He was 27.

Crash victim hobbles for help

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A passenger in the Cessna airplane that crashed at the Jackpot airport early Sunday hobbled on an injured ankle in darkness about 1½ miles to get help.
Ted Brucke, 27, remained hospitalized in Twin Falls Tuesday, recovering from a concussion and torn ligaments in his left ankle.
Brucke, an Idaho State Police officer stationed in Twin Falls, was riding in the back of the plane when it crashed after takeoff around 2:30 a.m. Sunday.
A 20-year-old law-enforcement student at the College of Southern Idaho, Nicholas
Wood of Twin Falls, died in the accident.

The pilot, 39-year-old Denny Goodman of Gooding, sustained a compound fracture in his left leg, and Marian Maestas, 37, also of Gooding, suffered head injuries.
The four had flown to Jackpot around midnight Saturday to eat, Brucke said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.
He remembers little of what happened;
the plane took off, and the next thing
Brucke knew, he was waking up.
"When I came to, Marian was holding her head," he said.
The walk to Cactus Pete's Casino remains hazy, and Brucke isn't sure how long he was unconscious after the plane went down. The aircraft took off around 2:30 a.m.; Brucke said he made it to the casino around 4.

Woods' fiancée, Kristi Shockey, said
Tuesday she believes Brucke saved Maestas' life by hiking through the darkness to get help. "If Ted hadn't walked all that way, she might not have made it either," Shockey said.
Maestas was flown to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise on Sunday.
A hospital spokesman Tuesday said Maestas was listed in serious condition.
Goodman was listed in fair condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.
Wood, from McCall, and Brucke, from Cascadia, had known each other for years.
But their friendship had grown since Wood moved to Twin Falls to study at CSI.

He had ridden with Brucke in his patrol car numerous times, Brucke said.
Like his father, grandfather and uncle, Wood wanted to join law enforcement and aspired to become an ISP officer. He had only a few academic hours left to get his degree, Shockey said.
Sunday's accident came two days after Shockey and Wood became engaged to get married. They had dated for three years and shared a home for 2½ years.
Friday night, Wood brought home an engagement ring.
"It's only been two days and I already miss him more than I can stand," Shockey said.

Kimberly seeks city official as McAdams takes over as mayor

KIMBERLY — The City Council has chosen a new mayor.
Councilman George McAdams took the oath of office as mayor Tuesday night after the council voted unanimously to appoint him.
"What we're going through right now, I think it's going to take somebody with quite a bit of knowledge of city government to run this city," Councilman George Nauman said.

McAdams was chosen from a field of three applicants. Kimberly residents Oliver Bibby and Betty Murray also had applied for the position.
McAdams' appointment leaves an empty seat on the City Council, for which both Bibby and Murray have applied.

David Overacre also has applied for the vacated seat, which the council hopes to fill at the next regular meeting.
McAdams replaces former Mayor Jesse Posey, who retired last month in the middle of his term. The next mayoral election will be in November 1995.

UFF mechanics suffer burns while clearing clogged pipe

TWIN FALLS — Two mechanics at Universal Frozen Foods suffered 2nd-degree burns early Tuesday as they cleared a clogged pipe using hot water and steam.
Plant Manager Mike Johnston said.
Contacted at his home Tuesday evening,
Johnston did not have the two victims' names, but he said they had been evacuated to the Intermountain Burn Center at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center in Salt Lake City.

The accident happened around 2 a.m.
One victim suffered burns on up to 12 percent of his body, Johnston said. The other victim evidently was not burned as badly.

The two were clearing a pipe of grease and potato debris when "it suddenly opened," spraying the two with hot water and steam, he said.

They were taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and then transported to the Utah hospital.

The Times-News could not obtain a condition update on the two mechanics Tuesday night.

Twin Falls officials assess 'State of the City' Thursday

TWIN FALLS — Mayor Gale Kleinkopf and other city officials will make their "State of the City" address to the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Thursday morning.

The program will be from 7 to 8:15 a.m. at the Canyon Springs Inn. Tickets are still available for the event through the chamber. Kleinkopf and council members Howard Allen and Chris Talkington will discuss the city and answer questions about how the city can work with businesses.

Shoshone Falls, Twin Falls ready to rumble again

TWIN FALLS — Anyone hankering for a view of thundering waterfalls is advised to head for Shoshone or Twin Falls.
As of Tuesday morning, more than 3,000 cubic feet of water were plunging over Shoshone Falls every second. One cfs adds up to 449 gallons every minute.

By contrast, only 830 cfs were going over Shoshone Falls at this time last year, according to officials from the Idaho Power Co.

Senate easily confirms Smith for Transportation Board

BOISE — On a unanimous voice vote, the state Senate Monday confirmed Leon Smith, Jr. of Twin Falls for a new six-year term on the Idaho Transportation Board.
The board has authority over state highways and supervises the Idaho Transportation Department.

Smith was appointed to the board in February 1991 to finish the term of Phil Batt, who had resigned to become chairman of the state Republican Party. Smith's new term will run to Jan. 31, 2000.

Smith, 56, is a partner in the Twin Falls law firm of Smith & Becka. He has served as mayor of Twin Falls and as Twin Falls County prosecutor. He is also on the board of directors of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Caddie crunch

A Cadillac is removed from a downtown Twin Falls sidewalk where it came to rest after leveling a parking meter and striking a stone wall between the Mail-Cinema and Sam's Jewelers Tuesday afternoon. Florence Lytle, 69, of Twin Falls, lost control of her 1990 Cadillac Eldorado at about 3 p.m. Tuesday, according to Officer Connie Pullin of the Twin Falls Police Department. No citations are expected, Pullin said.

Measure would hamper ability to bid against ranchers with grazing leases

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Hailey environmentalist Jon Marvel may have a harder time finding state grazing leases to bid on, if a bill introduced Tuesday in the Legislature becomes law.

The bill, which is supported by several state farm and ranching organizations, would set stiff new conditions for bidding against ranchers who currently lease state grazing lands.

It also would allow the director of the state Lands Department to reject applicants for such "conflict auctions" if the current leaseholder is managing the land according to a written grazing management plan. Such plans are intended to enhance the quality of grazing lands.

Will Ingram, the Challis rancher whose lease renewal Marvel challenged, particularly likes such a plan. The Land Board cited Ingram's plan — and the key role played by the contested parcel of state land in it — as one of the main reasons it rejected Marvel's bid last month.

Don Hobbs, head of range operations at the Lands Department, estimated that between 50 and 100 state-approved grazing management plans currently are in effect.

But other leaseholders may be operating under similar plans approved by the federal Bureau of Land Management or Forest Service, Hobbs said.

The state has about 1,300 grazing leases covering 2 million acres of state endowment lands, Lands Director Stan Hinton
said.

Under the bill introduced Tuesday, applicants would have to be "competent and agreeable to fulfilling all provisions of any existing, department-approved grazing management plan" to be allowed to force a conflict auction.

The bill also lists several criteria the Land Board must consider in deciding who should get the lease — all of which arose during the Marvel-Ingram dispute. The criteria include:

- Whether the current leaseholder had enough of his own grazing land to adequately feed cattle without the state land in question.

- The importance of the state land as part of the leaseholder's total operation, and his or her "ability to remain economically viable throughout the life of the lease."

- The tax revenues that would be directly or indirectly generated by picking one applicant over another.

- In addition, the bill states that "preference shall be given to private economic enterprises." That appears to be a direct slap at Marvel, whose Idaho Watersheds Project is a nonprofit environmental organization.

- Sen. Laird Noh, a Kimberly sheep rancher who opposed Marvel's attempt to lease the land, called the measure "a well constructed, responsible bill," adding that he hoped it would encourage more ranchers to set up grazing management plans.

- They'd better, warned Stan Boyd, a lobyist for the Idaho Cattle Association and the Idaho Wool Growers Association who had a hand in drafting the bill.

- "That's the heart of this bill," Boyd said.
"This is to get them scurrying to get into a grazing management plan. If they don't, they'll be left twisting in the wind."

Doctors hope deal with hospital would give them greater say in management

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A new local "doctors' company" will begin plans this week that could change the future of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center as well as health care in the valley.

Meanwhile, Magic Valley Regional is moving ahead with plans to make up every doctor, pharmacist and hospital in the valley by computer.

The doctor's company is Magic Valley Health Network, a new for-profit partnership of some Twin Falls physicians led by Dr.
Wayne Wright.

Wright told Magic Valley Regional's board Monday night that his doctors' group is gaining members and wants to talk to the board about forming a partnership with the hospital. Magic Valley Health Network would seek partial control of the management and decision making of the hospital, he said.

The county-owned hospital is managed by Quorum Health Resources Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., which manages hospitals nationwide and has kept Magic Valley Regional operating profitably.

"I don't know where Quorum would fit.
Quorum could be retained or we could bring in somebody else," Wright said Tuesday.
Quorum is on a year-to-year contract to run the hospital.

On Monday the hospital board agreed to talk to Wright's group about working together.

The Magic Valley Health Network already has seven local physicians working on salary. Those family physicians' patients pay their bills to the network, and the network pays the physicians. The hospital has to pay the difference to the physicians if patient fees to the network aren't enough to pay their salaries, Wright said.

The purpose of the network is to organize local doctors to prepare for national health care reform.

The Magic Valley Health Network will also begin planning on Thursday for a "locally managed health insurance product,"
Wright said.

Wright also said that response from local doctors has been mixed.

"There are some of us physicians who would like to keep managed care out of town. But the reality is it's coming to town," he said.

Meanwhile, David Garets, chief information officer for the hospital, said he is applying to the federal Department of Commerce for a $500,000 "super highway" grant to help pay for the initial costs, for hooking up the hospitals, doctors and pharmacists in the ## Plan eyes shift for students

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Redistricting Twin Falls District schools may send 1,500 students to new schools next fall, possibly busing four-and five-year-olds to a new "Kindergarten Center."

The Twin Falls School District Board began discussions Tuesday night of redistricting, which will require hundreds of students to go to new schools in the fall.

"It's going to be a major shift of students. We expect to move 1,500 students to new schools," said board Chairman Steven Tolman. "About a quarter of our patrons will have a transition."

One of the least expensive ways to redistrict is to require kindergarten students to go to a new school — like making Bickel Elementary exclusively for kindergartners.
Superintendent Terrell Donich said. The redistricting is required to deal with Twin Falls' growing population so the number of students in each of the schools is even, he said.

But some parents and teachers of kindergarten students told the board that busing four- and five-year-olds to the south Twin Falls school would put too much stress on the children.

"The kindergarten years are one of the most important years to ease that transition into school. And having a kindergarten center is a real solution," Tolman said.

Tammi Stanley, a kindergarten teacher at Sawtooth Elementary School and a parent of a child about to enter kindergarten.

While a kindergarten center would help kindergarten teachers work together and probably better, Stanley said she's still opposed to the idea. With the kindergarten center, children would be exposed to a whole new environment in first grade and not be able to be with many of the friends they made in kindergarten.

Kindergartners also need to be around older children so they can learn to deal with them, she said.

Stanley also said kindergarten teachers across town are opposed to the idea.

Tolman said the kindergarten center is only an idea, but the board needs to decide by the end of April how it will handle the redistricting.

Donich presented preliminary redistricting maps showing that without the kindergarten center, other elementary students would have to be bused across town to new schools.

"Either way there are going to be happy and unhappy people," Donich said. "No one likes to have their kids moved from the school they're used to."

Planners OK development of 4-plexes

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Local developer Tim McMaster didn't give up when the city denied his request last fall to build 90 studio apartments between Filier Avenue West and the Rose Street North cul-de-sac.

The city planning and zoning commission Tuesday unanimously approved Mc-Master's modified proposal to build 52 units of four-plexes and multi-family homes on the same property.

Glenn Rains was not as lucky.
Prompted by the protests and questions of dozens of his neighboring property owners, Rains withdrew his request for a zoning change at 961 Filier Ave. W.

He still wants to build 40 homes on 11.65 acres southwest of the intersection of Filier Avenue West and Grandview Drive.

He argued that the development's homeowners' association would ensure a nice and affordable neighborhood.

Seastrom financing moves ahead

By Mick Normington Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Financing for the Seastrom Manufacturing Co. Inc. plan took another step as the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency approved the company's development proposal.

On Monday, the agency's board members unanimously accepted a development offer by Seastrom Manufacturing President Bob Seastrom. The agency gave Seastrom 12 months to open the doors to his $3.3 million plant in southeast Twin Falls near Eastland Drive and Eldridge Avenue.

Twin Falls Economic Development Director Dave McAlindain is preparing to go before an Idaho Department of Commerce advisory council on March 18 seeking a $350,000 grant to help pay for improvements to the future Seastrom's site.

The grant funds come from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Twin Falls is the only economic development agency asking for such a grant this quarter from the Commerce Department.

"So the competition is really good for us," McAlindain said.

That money would be combined with $330,000 in tax increment financing. The combined $680,000 would pay for two new streets near the Seastrom Manufacturing plant.

Improved electrical lines, new water lines, curbs and gutters, and other site preparation, he said.

The block grant, tax-increment financing and Seastrom Manufacturing's industrial development bonds are the "three legs" to getting the new plant up and running because the company isn't getting any tax breaks, he said.

"Without any one of these three legs this project can't stand," McAlindain said.

First Seastrom Bank of Idaho is underwriting the roughly $2.5 million in revenue bonds for Seastrom Manufacturing, which should be issued in June.

Under tax increment financing, a city's urban renewal agency pays for property improvements for a company moving into the city. Then the company pays taxes to the county, and the county in turn repays the urban-renewal agency in the case of Seastrom Manufacturing, for about 10 years.

Idaho allowed tax increment financing in 1988 as a way of helping cities attract new companies. McAlindain said that while Twin Falls has been one of the most active and most successful cities using the financing method, this is the first time Twin Falls has used the measure to attract a new company.

Twin Falls previously used tax increment financing to help Universal Frozen Foods Co. and Hensinger Cold Storage Co. to expand; Precision Tile Co. also intends to use tax increment financing for the plant it's developing on the southwest side of Twin Falls.

Small-town ski hill plans expansion

BOISE (AP) — McCall's homey ski resort, Brundage Mountain, is profiting from more skier visits and looking for million-dollar expansion in the next three to five years.

The resort on Monday announced it will add a children's center, beginner ski area, quad lift, a skier services building and restaurants at the top and bottom of the mountain.

Brundage and other Idaho resorts could come out ahead with legislation which gives them a credit against their sales tax for any capital improvements they make on their mountains. It is intended to keep the Idaho ski industry competitive with other states.

Housing

But his neighbors wondered why they needed as many as 50 homes in an area still outside the city limits.

"A year ago, we bought our home because it was in the country," said Filer Avenue resident Mary Hopkins.

George Hanev wondered whether Rains' proposal met the planning commission's need to organize and manage growth.

Commissioner Bob Daigle said he, for one, could not see who would want to build a $70,000 or $100,000 home on a 4,000-square-foot lot.

"This looks like 10 pounds of fertilizer in a 5-pound bag," Daigle said. Rains pointed to the Villa Vista subdivision as an existing development that would be comparable to his proposal.

Commission Chairman Fran Florence said the commission still had too many "unanswered questions" to answer before voting on the zoning request.

Rains then withdrew his request, but said he would be back to the planning commission with restrictive covenants and more specific plans for the neighborhood.

He said afterward that he was surprised that so many residents protested his request.

In earlier business, the planning commission voted 5-3 to approve a modified plan for expansion at the Magic Valley Mall.

Hospital

Magic Valley by computer. This computer system would have medical records for all local residents.

"What we're talking about is one repository on patient information for the entire 11,000 square miles of the Magic Valley," Gareis said. "We're trying to provide the care givers with the necessary information about you."

His computer idea is getting national attention, and US West is asking the Commerce Department to help fund the start up, he said. Gareis has already gotten Magic Valley Regional listed as Idaho's "demonstration center" for medical information technology, which will help the hospital obtain future federal funding for the project.

Magic Valley Regional would be the first hospital hooked to the system, then Minidoka Memorial Hospital and then the other four hospitals in south-central Idaho. While that is going on, physicians and pharmacists' offices across the Magic Valley would also be hooked up.

The system would contain medical histories on local residents so medical workers could better treat them in their offices or in emergencies, Gareis said. But the system would also come with security measures so that private information could only be seen by a patient's doctor, he said.

Mini-Cassia/Idaho

A sure sign

With the arrival of milder weather, early spring cleanup has begun around the Mini-Cassia and Magic Valley area. Here, Judy Mohman tidies up the gazebo area in Rupert Square earlier this week.

Briefly in Mini-Cassia

Eden voters OK lagoon funding

EDEN - Voters approved a $115,000 bond issue Tuesday to construct a new sewage lagoon. Of 81 ballots cast, 74 were "yes" votes, and four were "no" votes, said City Clerk Edith Utt. Three ballots were improperly filled out.

Red Cross meets today in Burley

BURLEY - The public is invited to attend the monthly meeting of the Mini-Cassia Chapter of the American Red Cross at 7 a.m. Wednesday at Price's Cafe.

All Red Cross volunteers workers, particularly blood mobile workers, from Minidoka and Cassia Counties are urged to attend. The meeting lasts one hour or less.

City planner speaks to Chamber

BURLEY - Growth planner Lorilee Critchfield will lecture on ways to control development of the Mini-Cassia area at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon noon Thursday at Price's Cafe in Burley. Critchfield, a professor of sociology and political science at Idaho State University, says plans made now to encourage and control growth will prevent mistakes that have plagued other communities.

Critchfield has been working with the Mini-Cassia Development Commission since November 1993 to form a combined growth plan for the two counties. She has been studying the growth of communities statewide through a grant from the Northwest Area Foundation.

The public is invited to attend. For more information call the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce at 436-4793.

Spring Expo set for this weekend

BURLEY - Radio station KBAR-FM is hosting its seventh annual Spring Expo at the Best Western-Burley Inn and Convention Center Friday and Saturday.

Local merchants will display their wares at booths and award prizes to the public from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Drawings for grand prizes will be at 5 p.m. Saturday. The weekend's events will be broadcast live, station assistant manager Gerald Thaxton said.

House ribs lawmaker, passes bill

BOISE - State Rep. Jim Kempton won a small victory Tuesday in his attempts to settle the status of the old Albion Normal School campus, but not before taking a ribbing from fellow House members.

Kempton, an Albion Republican, wants to encourage the city and the state Parks and Recreation Department to work together to decide whether the old teachers' college has a future as a "field institute" within a state park.

But in his four years in the Legislature, Kempton - a former physics professor - has developed a reputation for long, complicated floor speeches that often sail over the heads of his colleagues.

On Tuesday, just as Kempton was about to launch into an explanation of how the city of Albion came to acquire the normal school campus, they all held up large signs reading "ENOUGH ALREADY!"

A chastened Kempton quickly wound up his speech with "Good bill - should pass" and sat down. The bill passed 69-0 and now goes to the Senate.

Law trashing out-of-state garbage likely, aides say

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Congressional aides in Washington, D.C., have told a Burley woman that passage of a bill to restrict the importation of out-of-state municipal trash is likely this session.

Angered by a controversial private landfill being built near her home, Susan Duncan flew to Washington D.C. this week to join others lobbying Congress to let states stop imports of out-of-state trash. "I'm sure I play a key role just because of what's happening in Burley," said Duncan of the Idaho Rural Council.

She said she has heard opposition from only one member of Congress, who said he didn't think states could properly decide whether to allow importation of waste.

Cassia County is not alone in its landfill woes, Duncan said in a telephone interview from her Washington hotel room Tuesday.

"This is a western problem," she said. "There's a perception that it's easier to dump it (in western states) because there's so much space."

Duncan, along with citizen groups from Colorado, North and South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, has been meeting this week with aides of Senate and House members to urge the passing of a law that:

- Gives states the right to determine whether to accept other states' garbage, including municipal, non-hazardous, industrial and all other wastes.
- Forces private companies to disclose how much out-of-state waste they plan to import and to state their environmental track record.
- Would apply to existing contracts already held by private landfill companies whenever they renew their permits, expand, or change owners.

States do not have the right to restrict garbage coming across their borders because it is considered interstate commerce under the U.S. Constitution, Duncan said. Only Congress has the authority to regulate interstate commerce.

During the last congressional session, the Senate passed a bill delegating that authority to the states, but the bill died in the House, she said.

Duncan, an outspoken opponent of the Boise-based Dispose-All Inc., which is building a private landfill on Burley Butte, fears the landfill company will import out-of-state waste.

Last week, Cassia County Commissioner John Adams said the county's "flow-control" ordinance will prevent Lomow from hauling trash to his private landfill from surrounding counties. The ordinance guarantees that private haulers don't undermine the revenue base for the new six-county landfill being built at Milner Butte.

Duncan said if Cassia's ordinance is not worked correctly, Lomow could get around it.

Parent proposes student drug tests

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY - A DeLoe parent says he wants to make sure that the drug culture does not victimize his son, who is entering the Burley Junior High School.

That's why Jonathan Peterson says he wants every student at Burley High School and Burley Junior High to take drug tests at the start of each school year and be subjected to random testing.

"I'm afraid if we don't take a drastic step we'll lose more kids," Peterson told the Cassia County

School Board Tuesday night. "It works the army, it's what our kids need."

Peterson said he plans to gather signatures to petition the School Board to require school officials to conduct mandatory drug testing of all students.

Like military officers or workers at a tight-security company, students should be held to certain standards, Peterson said.

At the beginning of the school year, hospital lab officials would charge about $20 per student to test their urine for drug traces, Peterson said. Those who "flunk" would be given counseling and rehabilitation. The state Department of Health and Welfare would subsidize counseling for those who couldn't afford it, he said.

To make sure students stay free of drugs, school officials would hold a surprise random drug test once during the school year.

But school district attorney Doug Whipple said such a law would challenge the Constitution and may be an invasion of privacy.

Unlike in the military or in a job, students don't have a choice whether they go to school, he said.

Rupert issue prompts bill in Boise

The Times-News

BOISE - State conflict-of-interest rules for public officials would be loosened a bit under a bill introduced Tuesday in the Idaho House.

The measure, sponsored by the Association of Idaho Cities, intended to address situations where an official has only a "remote interest" in a pending government contract.

An incident last year in Rupert spurred the bill. City Councilman Dwaine Altred who works as vice president and manager of First Security Bank's Rupert branch, came under criticism because the city keeps some of its money in Altred's bank.

But if the bill introduced Tuesday becomes law, Altred's Scott McDonald said, Altred probably would be deemed to have only a "remote interest" in the arrangement, since he is not a major owner of the bank and is a salaried employee.

The current law has been interpreted to prohibit cities from doing business with the employers of any city council members. The new bill would remove that prohibition if only a remote interest was involved.

However, the official having the remote interest would have to disclose it to his or her colleagues, could not attempt to influence them, and his or her vote would not be counted when the council or other body voted on the deal.

Heyburn ponders animal shelter costs

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

HEYBURN - City Council members will consider whether a new animal shelter is worth more than $100,000 of their budget.

Heyburn is among the Minidoka County cities asked to share the costs of an animal shelter. The request comes after five months of discussion of alternatives on funding and location by a joint city and county panel.

The panel has asked each city and the outlying areas of the county to pay according to population size. The building would cost about $75,000 to build, and it would cost $12,000 to $24,000 to hire a part-time or full-time person. Year-round maintenance would cost about $3,750 each year, said Minidoka Commissioner John Remsburg, a panel member.

Council members will consider the issue at their regular 7 p.m. council meeting.

Stray animals are now taken to the Burley Animal Shelter for $5 per animal. In September, the county was forced to shut down the county holding tank for animals when the Minidoka County landfill closed.

Heyburn's costs initially were several thousand dollars lower when the Rupert City Council proposed to build the shelter in Rupert using more donated labor. But volunteers fizzled after neighbors of the proposed site complained of potential noise and traffic.

Rupert Mayor W.F. "Bill" Whitton, who originally drummed up volunteer support from businesses, said he has talked to several people who are still interested in helping out.

But he said he will wait for the cities to decide whether they want to fund it before asking for donated money and labor.

Heyburn Mayor Glen J. Loveland said if the City Council decides to pay the money, they would probably write it into next year's budget.

"It is something we don't want to part with, but I suppose that in my opinion we need to pay our share," Loveland said.

Cigarette tax measure may be amended

BOISE (AP) - A bill boosting Idaho's cigarette tax to 55 cents per pack in an effort to discourage smoking is up for amendment in the House.

After two days of hearings, the House Revenue and Taxation Committee voted Tuesday to let representatives decide its fate.

Rep. Jim Kempton, R-Albion, said that although he didn't like "social engineering" through taxes, he wanted to cut the increase from 50 cents a package to 10 cents a pack.

Kempton also promised an effort to earmark revenue from the higher tax directly to educational programs seeking to discourage young people from taking up the habit.

"This is where the problem is and this is where the legislation should go," he said.

If the bill becomes law, it could generate $3 million to $5 million in new tax revenue. That would more than double funding for anti-smoking educational programs.

The bill also called for an increase in the tax on other products. It's now 35 percent of the wholesale price but would go to 55 percent. Kempton wants to lower that increase to 5 percent.

The committee was sharply divided. An effort by Rep. Hilde Kellogg, R-Post Falls, to hold the bill died on a 9-9 tie. Then the panel voted 10-8 to put the bill up for amendment.

Voting against amending the measure were Republicans Celia Gould, Donna Jones, Kellogg, Mark Stubbs, Allan Larsen, Dave Eivens and Dan Mader and Democrat Wally Wright.

Stubbs, a cosponsor with Rep. Elaine Hoffman, D-Pocatello, said putting the bill up for amendment would allow a "butcher job" on it. "We have held it for three years. It's time we did something," said Wright. "It would be criminal to hold it at this time."

Mary Estilla Flora Vance will be honored on her 80th birthday at an open house at the Church of the Brethren building, 461 Filer Ave. West in Twin Falls.

Plan a nutty party for Little Peanuts

Fat, breast cancer link still unclear

With Hillary Clinton hard at work on our country's future health insurance plan, illness prevention is on most Americans' minds, including those in the White House. Last month, the White House dining room staff set a precedent for the rest of the country when it revamped its menu, offering lower-fat meals.

We've all heard results of the thousands of studies that show lowering fat intake lowers the risk of certain types of cancer, heart disease and stroke.

But according to a recent review of scientific research on diet and breast cancer, the facts aren't clear about the relationship between fat intake and breast cancer. And because one out of nine women will get breast cancer in their lives, according to the American Cancer Society, we should be interested in the contradictions in these studies.

The review, published in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association, said that animals' studies overwhelmingly show high-fat diets increase risks for breast cancer.

Yet studies that look at large groups of women produce conflicting results. Twelve studies show that diets high in fat and low in Vitamin C increase a woman's risk. But three studies, including one of 90,000 nurses, could find no connection between fat and breast cancer.

Studies show breast cancer is six to eight times higher in North America, northern Europe and Australia than in most Asian and African countries. In addition, breast cancer is more common in countries with higher per-capita intakes of fat, saturated fat, animal protein and total calories.

Six studies show that high alcohol use — about 40 grams a day — increases risk for breast cancer.

Several studies indicate soybean products reduce cancer risks, even for premenopausal breast cancer.

The least-processed products like tofu, soy milk, tempeh and soy flour retain the most phytochemicals and seem to have the greatest effect, but much more study is needed.

Phytochemicals are a recently discovered group of elements in food that are not vitamins or minerals and contain no calories but are biologically active and appear to have a cancer-preventive effect.

Other apparently protective elements include Vitamin A, beta carotene, Vitamin E and dietary fiber. Other studies suggest pasta, cereals and vegetables high in Vitamins A and C might be helpful.

So what should women eat? Because so many studies show that lower-fat intakes reduce one's risk for other cancers, heart disease and stroke, we should reduce fat even when absolute proof that it prevents breast cancer.

Experts suggest that women who are at a high risk of getting breast cancer (such as those whom it runs in their families) aim for 20 percent of calories from fat. That's about 50 grams a day before menopause and 40 grams a day after.

To increase your fiber, vitamins and minerals, aim for two to four fruits, three to five vegetables and six or more grain products daily, at least three of them from whole grains.

Also, limit alcohol to one or two drinks a day, if at all.

Start replacing some meat with soy products. Experiment with stir-frys, veggie burgers and Southwestern seasonings.

After all, if Hillary can give up Southern deep-fried chicken in exchange for pineapple shrimp salad with low-fat yogurt dressing, can't all of us do the same in exchange for a little peace of mind?

If most children had their way, birthdays would be celebrated every day of the year, and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches would be the meal of choice for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Here's the next best thing — a peanut butter birthday party!

The party was specially created by Meredith Brokaw and Annie Glibar, co-authors of the Penny Whistle series of books, virtual party bibles for parents everywhere.

"A birthday party is one of the most important occasions of the year for anyone. But it's for children that birthdays really stand out," says Brokaw. "Children believe that their year begins on their birthday and all other events either come before or after."

You do have time for a nutritious breakfast

By Jon Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — You've overslept. Bobby can't find his left shoe. Jennifer wants some help with her French braid, Ralph is barking and wants to go for a walk right now and your blouse needs to be ironed. You're going to be late for work.

Maybe there isn't time to sit down for a morning meal — but you can still eat breakfast. There are lots of foods that are nutritious and portable.

Quick breakfast tips — C4

Idaho Dietetic Association member Sue Ormond, of Wendell, said one can't eat anything in the morning. It doesn't have to be traditional breakfast foods.

"Use plain bread and stuff it with different things — scrambled eggs, ham slices or just anything," she said. "That's a great thing to just eat in the car as you're driving to work."

IDA member, Helen Hopkins, of Gooding, said a lot of people just don't like breakfast foods so they skip breakfast altogether. But she said these folks can be creative about what they eat without sacrificing nutrition.

"I am not a big breakfast person, and I also like to sleep — and I don't allow myself much time for getting ready in the morning," Hopkins said. "So I get me a giant glass of milk and drink on that while I'm getting ready, and then I grab some fruit to eat a couple of hours later."

Hopkins said she keeps crackers or Chex mix around for a morning snack. Sometimes she has veggies and a dip. Or, she might munch on...

BREAKFAST BALLS or SNACK ON A STICK

Makes 12-15
3 cups miniature marshmallows
1/2 cup margarine
1/2 cup peanut butter
1/2 cup of a cereal like Cheerios or Kix
1/2 cup raisins
1/2 cup shelled sunflower seeds
Cover a cookie sheet with waxed paper and lightly grease it. Set aside. Put marshmallows and margarine in a saucepan over low heat. Stir constantly until marshmallows are melted and smooth. Add peanut butter. Stir until well blended. Remove from heat. Add cereal, raisins and sunflower seeds. Mix until evenly coated. Let stand about 2 minutes. Shape mixture into small balls, and place on greased waxed paper-covered cookie sheets until firm — about 30 minutes.

Option: A popsicle stick may be inserted in center of ball for an easy to carry snack.

Hopkins said these are fairly low in fat and calories.

"They are crunchy and are like popcorn balls," she said. "It's a great snack to have for kids, if they're in a hurry, to take and eat in the school bus."

Here is another easy and quick-to-fix breakfast alternative.

BREAKFAST PIZZA

1 whole grain English muffin, split
4 tablespoons spaghetti or pizza sauce
1 ounce (approximately 2 tablespoons) grated part skim mozzarella cheese Spread 2 tablespoons sauce on each English muffin half. Sprinkle cheese over the Dietician Molly Slough says it is important to eat breakfast. Fresh fruit is one alternative to the typical sit-down breakfast.

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading with amusement the letters from people who have had trouble with their names.

The name I had trouble with was not MY name; it was the name of the university I attended. When I would tell people I was at Johns Hopkins University, nine out of 10 would say, "Oh, so you go to John Hopkins ... and you want to be a doctor!"

Abby, to set the record straight, the name of the school is Johns (note the "s" after John) Hopkins. And not everyone at Hopkins wants to be a physician; in fact, two-thirds do not. I have seen Johns Hopkins written as "John Hopkin," "Johns Hopkins," "James Hopkins" and "St. Johns Hopkins." The admissions office has received letters with at least 20 other spellings.

When Milton Eisenhower (brother of President Dwight Eisenhower) was president of Johns Hopkins University, he spoke at the University of Pittsburgh, and was introduced as the president of "John Hopkins." When he got to the lectern, he said, "Thank you; it's nice to be speaking in 'Pittsburgh'!"

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

—CHRIS GREGG, BALTIMORE
DEAR CHRIS: Thanks for an amusing and informative letter. Read on for more information concerning Johns Hopkins from the university's Office of News and Information:

Who was Johns Hopkins? First things first: Why the extra "s" after John? Because his first name was really a last name. His great-grandmother was Margaret Johns, daughter of Richard Johns, who owned a 4,000-acre estate in Calvert County, Maryland.

Margaret Johns married Gerard

Hopkins in 1700. One of their children was named Johns Hopkins.

The second Johns Hopkins, grandson of the first, was born in 1795 on his father's tobacco plantation in southern Maryland. His formal education ended in 1807 when his parents, devout Quakers, decided on the basis of religious conviction to free their slaves and put Johns and his brother to work in the fields.

Johns left home at 17, for Baltimore and a job in business with an uncle, then established his own mercantile house at the age of 24. He was an important investor in the nation's first major railroad, the Baltimore and Ohio, in 1847 and became a director and chairman of its finance committee.

In 1867, Hopkins arranged for the incorporation of the Johns Hopkins University and the Johns Hopkins Hospital, and for the appointment of a 12-member board of trustees for each. He died on Christmas Eve, 1873, leaving $7 million to be divided equally between the two institutions. It was, at that time, the largest philanthropic bequest in U.S. history.

Readers, I may have told you more about Johns Hopkins than you really cared to know, but I found it fascinating!

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Well-Adjusted-Reader," who said that when an 80-year-old man remarries, all he wants is "a nurse or a purse."

I'm so fortunate and thankful that my wonderful 84-year-old husband of 55 years wants only "a cook and a book."

You may use my name.
—WANDA NEUBERT,
FARIBAULT, MINN.

Abby shares more of her favorite, easy-to-prepare recipes. To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.30 in Canada) for Dear Abby, More Favorite Recipes, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Who could forget to dial 1+208?

Due to the increasing demand for new telephone numbers and area codes throughout the U.S. and Canada, people in Idaho will have to change the way they dial.

For all long-distance calls in the 208 area code that you previously preceded with a 1, you must now dial 1+208. Since you are already in the habit of adding a 1 before dialing long-distance calls within the 208 area code, this should be simple to remember.

There's no change in rates for these calls. And 911, local calls and long-distance calls to other area codes will not be affected by the new dialing plan. But anyone with preprogrammed Speed Calling numbers, modems, fax machines or other automatic dialing equipment will need to reprogram any 1+ numbers within the 208 area code.

For more information about 1+208 dialing, contact your local phone company.

Everyone's flocking to the newest fast food

By Phil Vetal
Chicago Tribune

Never underestimate the power of a little spit.

The humble, often underappreciated chicken has become the new item of the fast-food world, all because some entrepreneurs thought to put a few birds on a stick, roast them, and market them in an eat-in/carryout fast-food format. Now all the world, it seems, is getting in on the rotisserie chicken act.

The leader in this revolution is Boston Chicken, which has been making headlines on the food and financial fronts. The aggressively expanding Boston Chicken now has 243 stores; by the end of the year, the company expects to have 450 stores.

When Boston Chicken's stock went public last year, its spectacular first day on Wall Street had people predicting that the stock soon would be trading at recreational-drug prices. That hasn't happened, but people still are buzzing.

Seeing the writing on the wall, KFC jumped into the rotisserie-chicken fray with its Rotisserie Gold brand.

Healthy breakfasts can be easy

By Joan Bean

Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Dietetic Association (IDA) is putting the word out that breakfast is too good to miss.

Molly Slough, a member of the Magic Valley branch of the association, said, for a variety of reasons, breakfast is all too often skipped.

"You convince yourself that it's too early to eat and you don't feel like eating," she said. "And you don't realize what you're missing until you get back into the habit of eating."

Slough said she eats her breakfast while putting on her makeup and fixing her hair, before leaving for work. With a bowl of cereal close by, she can do both without losing time.

"There are a lot of really good low fat cold cereals on the market, so that doesn't take a lot of preparation time," she said.

Sue Ormond, another IDA member, said there are some things to watch for when buying cereal products.

For example, choose those that are whole grain, and not totally refined. The way you can tell is to check the label for the words "whole wheat flour" or "whole oat flour" or "rolled oats," not just "oat flour" or "wheat flour."

"One thing you need to watch for when buying cereal is that you're not shopping for candy," Ormond said. "A lot of the cereals are very high in sugar."

She said to look at the list of ingredients to see how much sugar is in the cereal. The recommended amount of sucrose and other sugars is about three to five grams per serving. Sucrose content should be low in comparison to the amount of edible starch.

Cereals that contain raisins and nuts are higher in sugar, she said. But if you want them, it's more economical to throw in your own.

The words "high in fiber" on a cereal package might mean it has a lot of nuts or dried fruit in it. Sometimes these are formed into little clumps.

"And the way they clump is to add oil to it to get it to stick together," Ormond said. "So you are buying a food that naturally is low in fat, but the manufacturer has added a lot of fat back in to get it to stick together."

For children, she said, there should not be an emphasis on lowering fat. Kids need some fat to provide them with energy.

Ormond said nutrition is a matter of choice and food should be enjoyed, not something to feel guilty about.

"Eat in balance and in moderation, and have a good variety," she said. "If you're always all concerned about the fat content, all you're going to eat is a minimal amount of food; then that's not a good food selection either."

Another IDA member, Helen Hopkins of Gooding, quoted a 1991 Gallup survey that said of 407 children 9 to 15 years old in a sampling, nearly 60 percent said they had skipped breakfast.

She said similar studies have shown that participation in school, and how well kids do there, declines when breakfast isn't consumed. With adults, work productivity drops dramatically.

Hopkins said some people skip breakfast because they are trying to lose weight.

"But skipping breakfast actually promotes binge eating, because you're so hungry and you tend to binge out a little bit more later," she said. "So it doesn't help at all there."

Here are some alternatives to a sit-down breakfast, eggs, cereal and toast type breakfast, suggested by members of the Idaho Dietetic Association:

- Peanut butter sandwich
- Bagel with string cheese or mozzarella
- Fresh fruit
- Fruit flavored yogurt with different kinds of cereal sprinkled in it
- Eggs on toast
- Open faced cheese sandwiches on bread, English muffins or tortillas
- Leftover pancakes, waffles or French toast that has been frozen, may be thawed or reheated to make sandwiches. Pancakes may be topped with yogurt and rolled up. Put pureed fruit on pancakes or toast.

Pickle recipe found

By Ellen Hawks
The Baltimore Sun

Patricia Cox of Ellicott City, Md., requested this pickle recipe. One was given to her many years ago by her husband's aunt, but it has been lost.

WEISERT'S BREAD-AND-BUTTER PICKLES

Yields 8 to 10 pints
25 to 30 medium-sized cucumbers

8 large white onions
2 large sweet peppers (optional)
1/2 cup salt
5 cups cider vinegar
5 cups sugar (2 1/2 pounds)

2 let star mustard seed
1 teaspoon turmeric
1/2 teaspoon cloves (whole)
Wash cucumbers and slice as thin as possible. Chop or slice the onions and peppers very thin. Combine with cucumbers and salt and stand 3 hours covered in ice cubes. Drain.

Combine vinegar, sugar and spices in a large preserving kettle and bring to a boil. Add the drained cucumber mixture and heat thoroughly, but do not boil. Pack while hot into sterilized jars and seal at once.

Weisert notes that when she makes potato salad or coleslaw, she uses the liquid from the bread-and-butter-pickles as the vinegar. "I don't add the pickles to the salad or slaw," she says.

Other variations from responses to the pickle recipe included using garlic, Molly Moore of Timonium, Md., added 3 cloves of garlic to the cucumber and onion mix and removed them when she drained the mixture. And she was inventive, soaking her soon-to-be pickles in a plastic cooler with ice. Donna Becker of White Marsh added 3 cloves of chopped garlic, which she did not remove from the mixture.

Carol Park of Kelson, Wash., requested the Snickers bar cake. Here's a recipe from Susan Manning of Cockeysville, Md.

In a 2-quart bowl, combine cream, condensed milk, chocolate chips and heat in a microwave oven on high for 1 1/2 to 2 minutes, or until melted and smooth when stirred. Stir in remaining teaspoon of vanilla. Remove 1/2 cup of the chocolate mixture and set aside to cool. While remaining mixture is still warm, add the Snickers pieces and stir until combined. Some will melt and others will remain chunky. Set aside to cool.

When mixture is firm enough to spread, put half on one cake layer, put other layer on top and spread remaining ingredients on top. Frost sides with the reserved cup of chocolate mixture and spread remaining on top of cake. Sprinkle peanuts on top and around top edge of cake for border. Chill until an hour before serving.

sauce. Broil (or microwave 1-minute on medium-high) until cheese is hot and bubbly.

For a crispier crust, toast muffin halves before adding the sauce and cheese. These may be prepared the night before and popped into the oven in the morning.

"These are wonderful," Hopkins said. "They're just like mini pizzas."

When IDA member, Molly Slough, of Twin Falls, is in a hurry in the morning, she said she just grabs some toast and either a glass of milk or juice.

"It's better than nothing," she said. "You could put peanut butter on it, and you could take a piece of fruit to eat in the car on the way to work."

The following is a recipe for handy breakfast bars that may be wrapped in airtight packaging and stored in the refrigerator for a day, or put in the freezer.

Meatball recipes make simple, satisfying family fare

Feel like savoring some simple, satisfying and comforting fare?

Three Easy Meatball Meals will provide just the change of pace you're looking for. One batch of these versatile beef meatballs is the beginning of a soup, sandwich or stew depending upon the ingredients you pair with them. Most of the add-ins are things you probably keep on hand — canned beef broth, salsa, prepared spaghetti sauce, onions, jarred beef gravy and seasonings.

The basic meatballs are easy to prepare and economical, too. Because they're so easy, you can shape two batches, and bake them at the same time. Eat one now, and freeze one for a head start on another meal.

To freeze the meatballs, cool slightly, wrap, label and date the package. Freeze up to three months. To defrost, place the package of frozen meatballs in the refrigerator the night before you're ready to use them in Spicy Beef 'n Zucchini Soup, Italian Meatball Sandwiches or Easy Meatball Stew.

Serve the sandwich filling in warm crusty rolls with a vegetable salad accompaniment. The soup is perfect with wholegrain rolls and fresh fruit. If stew is on the menu, warm corn muffins are a good go-with. Make them from a mix, or, if time is short, purchase ready-made muffins from the supermarket.

THREE EASY MEATBALL MEALS

Total preparation and cooking time: 30-40 minutes.

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 cup soft or 1/2 cup dry bread crumbs
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Heat oven to 400 degrees. In large bowl, combine all ingredients, mixing lightly but thoroughly. Pinch off approximately 1 1/2-inch pieces of beef mixture to make 20 meatballs; place in ungreased 15-by-10-inch jelly roll pan. Bake 10 to 13 minutes or until no longer pink and juices run clear. Use meatballs in one of the recipes below, proceeding as directed.

SPICY BEEF 'N ZUCCHINI SOUP: In large saucepan, combine 2 cups diced zucchini, 1 can (14 ounces) ready-to-serve beef broth, 1 cup prepared chunky salsa and 1 cup water; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer 3 to 5 minutes or until zucchini is crisp-tender. Stir in cooked meatballs (1 recipe) and 1 tablespoon chopped fresh cilantro; heat through. Top with corn chips, if desired, immediately before serving. Makes 4 servings.

ITALIAN MEATBALL SANDWICHES: In large nonstick skillet, heat 1 teaspoon vegetable oil over medium heat until hot. Cook and stir 1/2 cup thin bell pepper strips and 1/2 cup thin onion wedges 3 to 4 minutes or until tender. Reduce heat to medium-low; add cooked meatballs (1 recipe) and 1 jar (14 ounces) prepared spaghetti sauce. Cover; cook 5 to 6 minutes to heat through, stirring occasionally. Spoon equal amounts into 4 split hoagie rolls; sprinkle with mozzarella cheese, if desired. Makes 4 sandwiches.

EASY MEATBALL-STEW: In large saucepan, combine 1 jar (12 ounces) brown beef gravy, 1 small can (8 ounces) stewed tomatoes (undrained), 1/2 cup water, 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves and 1/2 teaspoon pepper; bring to a boil. Stir in 1 package (16 ounces) frozen vegetable (with potato) mixture. Reduce heat; simmer 10 to 15 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in cooked meatballs (1 recipe); heat through. Sprinkle with chopped parsley, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Cook's Tip: To make soft bread crumbs, place 1 slice torn bread in food processor, fitted with steel blade, or blender container. Cover; process 30 seconds, pulsing on and off until fine crumbs. Yield: 2/3 cup.

Simple meatballs make for three tasty family meals that don't require a lot of hassle.

If fridge, freezer are bare, don't despair; meals wait on shelves

By Sharon Crowder
Newport News Daily Press

You're rummaging desperately through the refrigerator and freezer for something to fix for dinner. You come up with a couple of carrots, a half-empty container of yogurt and a piece of onion.

All is not lost — if you have a can of beans, tomatoes or corn on the shelf. Canned vegetables can save you.

With a can of beans, you can whip up a nutritious course to serve in a wedge of pita bread. You can heat the beans with a can of pureed tomatoes and spices to serve as a sauce on cooked noodles or as a filling for tortillas. Got a can of creamed corn or tomato juice? Transform it into soup with spices and a few other ingredients, garnish with chopped green onions or a dollop of yogurt.

From a taste standpoint, fresh vegetables most always are best. When you're talking convenience, however, it's hard to beat canned. They're a good substitute for out-of-season varieties and can be used to bolster the nutritional content of meals. Best of all, they can be plopped on the shelf and forgotten until there's nothing else in the house for dinner. For folks who find getting to the store on a regular basis difficult, a good stock of canned veggies can mean nutritional salvation.

There are more than 40 different varieties of beans and 130 types of vegetable products now available in cans. They provide almost the same

Here's how to get the most from canned veggies

Newport Daily Press

COOKING:

- Don't overcook canned foods. They need only a quick heating.
- When using in soups, stews or casseroles, add near the end of cooking and simmer just long enough for flavor to blend.
- Since the liquid in the can contains nutrients leached from the food it's packed with, it should be used when heating the food — or for broth.
- CHOOSING AND STORING: Read labels. Canned foods offer complete nutritional labeling, allowing choices for people on sodium, fat and calorie-restricted diets. Dozens of low-sodium and no-salt added vegetables are available.

- Look for cans without dents or other signs of damage. Dents do not affect the contents of the can as long as the seal is not broken and the can doesn't leak. If a can is leaking or the ends bulge, the food should not be used. Return the unopened container to the store where it was purchased.
- Off odors or flavors or mold inside the can are signs that the contents are bad and should not be used.
- Canned foods are graded by appearance, flavor and texture and usually priced accordingly. Brands vary widely. Try a variety of brands, including house and generic labels, to determine which suits your taste and pocketbook. Select canned vegetable ables appropriate for the dish you're making. It's not necessary to buy expensive, whole tomatoes for soups and stews, for instance, when crushed ones, which are less expensive, will do.

- Keep canned foods in a cool, dry place, away from direct sunlight. Storage above 80 degrees should be avoided.
- Most canned foods will retain their quality for two years or more. For best results, the Canned Food Information Council recommends using canned foods within a year after purchase.
- Canned foods should retain their wholesomeness as long as the container remains intact.

wilted. Add the tomatoes, bean liquid, salt and pepper. Cover and simmer for about 10 minutes until vegetables are tender. Add the drained beans and simmer for another 20 minutes. Meanwhile, cook and drain macaroni. Toss with butter and grated cheese, then mix with the bean sauce and a little of the bean liquid. Serve in heated bowls and sprinkle more cheese and chopped parsley on top.

CABBAGE SLAW

(Serves 12)
4 cups thinly sliced cabbage
1 can (8 ounces) whole corn, drained

- 1 can (8 ounces) cut green beans
- 1/2 cup sliced green onions and tops
- 1/2 cup unsalted peanuts
- 1/2 cup fat-free mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 2 tablespoons skim milk
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons white vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon dried dill weed
- 3 dashes red pepper sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper

Combine cabbage, canned vegetables, onions and peanuts in large bowl. Mix mayonnaise and remaining ingredients; spoon over vegetable mix and toss. Refrigerate until serving time.

nutritional value as fresh, says Stanley Gershoff and Catherine Whitney, authors of "The Tufts University Guide to Total Nutrition."

The disadvantage, however, is that the sodium content of canned foods can be high. Those on salt-restricted diets should read labels carefully and purchase salt-reduced or salt-free alternatives. There is no need to wait until you're desperate to try the recipes here.

PASTA-WITH-BEANS

(Serves 6-8)
1 16-ounce can white beans
1/2 cup olive oil

1/2 cup sugar

Spray two 9-by-14-inch round pans with Pam, and dust lightly with flour. In a large mixing bowl, combine flour, 1 1/2 cups of sugar, cocoa and baking soda. Add milk, margarine and vanilla. Beat with mixer on low for 30 seconds or until combined. Beat on medium to high for 2 minutes, scraping bowl sides. In small bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add 1/2 cup sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Fold into batter. Pour batter into pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted comes out clean. Cool in pans on wire racks for 10 minutes. Remove, cool on racks, frost. 12 servings.

Devil's Food Cake (with chocolate frosting)

- 2 cups all-purpose flour

- 1/2 tsp. of baking soda
- 1 1/2 cup skim milk
- 1/2 cup applesauce

1/2 teaspoon cloves (whole)
Wash cucumbers and slice as thin as possible. Chop or slice the onions and peppers very thin. Combine with cucumbers and salt and let stand 3 hours covered in ice cubes. Drain.

Combine vinegar, sugar and spices in large preserving kettle and bring to a boil. Add the drained cucumber mixture and heat thoroughly, but do not boil. Pack while hot into sterilized jars and seal at once.

Weisert notes that when she makes potato salad or coleslaw, she uses the liquid from the bread-and-butter pickles as the vinegar. "I don't add the pickles to the salad or slaw," she says.

Other variations from responses to the pickle recipe included using garlic. Molly Moore of Timonium, Md., added 3 cloves of garlic to the cucumber and onion mix and removed them when she drained the mixture. And she was inventive, soaking her soon-to-be pickles in a picnic cooler with ice. Donna Becker of White Marsh added 3 cloves of chopped garlic, which she did not remove from the mixture.

Carol Park of Kelso, Wash., requested the Snickers bar cake. Here's a recipe from Susan Manning of Cockeysville, Md.

MANNING'S CHOCOLATE CANDY-BAR CAKE

Serves 12 to 14

3 cups flour
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup vegetable oil
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 cups cold water
2 tablespoons vanilla extract, divided
1 cup heavy cream
6 ounces (or one cup) semisweet chocolate chips
1 cup milk chocolate chips
1 1/2 snack-size Snickers candy bars cut into thin slices
1/2 cup chopped peanuts

Heat oven to 350 degrees.

In large bowl, mix flour, sugar, cocoa, baking soda and salt. Whisk in the oil, vinegar, 2 teaspoons vanilla and 2 cups cold water, blending well. Divide batter evenly into two greased 8x8-inch cake pans. Bake for 25 to 28 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted into center comes out clean. Let cakes cool in pans for 15 to 20 minutes, then put onto racks to cool completely.

In a 2-quart bowl, combine cream, semisweet and milk chocolate chips in a microwave oven on high for 1 1/2 to 2 minutes, or until melted and smooth when stirred. Stir in remaining teaspoon of vanilla. Remove 1/2 cup of the chocolate mixture and set aside to cool. While remaining mixture is still warm, add the Snickers pieces and stir until combined. Some will melt and others will remain chunky. Set aside to cool.

When mixture is firm enough to spread, put half on one cake layer, put other layer on top and spread remaining ingredients on top. Frost sides with the reserved 1/2 cup of chocolate mixture and spread remaining on top of cake. Sprinkle peanuts on top and around top edge of cake for border. Chill until an hour before serving.

Note: When a microwave is called for, the mixtures may be melted in a double-boiler.

Everyone's flocking to the newest fast food

By Phil Vettel
Chicago Tribune

Never underestimate the power of a little spit.

The humble, often underappreciated chicken has become the news item of the fast-food world, all because some entrepreneurs' thought to pop a few birds on a stick, roast them, and market them in an eat-in/carryout fast-food format. Now all the world, it seems, is getting in on the rotisserie chicken act.

The leader in this revolution is Boston Chicken, which has been making headlines on the food and financial fronts. The aggressively expanding Boston Chicken now has 243 stores; by the end of the year, the company expects to have 450 stores.

When Boston Chicken's stock went public last year, its spectacular first day on Wall Street had people predicting that the stock soon would be trading at recreational-drug prices. That hasn't happened, but people still are buzzing.

Seeing the writing on the wall, KFC jumped into the rotisserie chicken fray with its Rotisserie Gold brand. Broil's and Pasta is offering rotisserie chicken, though not all stores have the new product just yet.

And watching happily, and probably with a bit of bemusement, are supermarkets, which have been selling spit-roasted chickens for many years and have watched sales climb with this latest boom.

Rotisserie chickens to go combines the convenience of fast food with the aura and aroma of home cooking. Somewhat, carryout roasted chicken seems more like Real Food than do other fast foods. To paraphrase the slogan of another convenience food, a burger is a burger, but a whole chicken with side dishes is a meal.

Another thing that clearly has helped make rotisserie chickens popular is their positive image. Rotisserie chicken is perceived to be a better nutritional choice than fried chicken or burgers.

The theory goes: 1. Chicken is better for you than red meat. 2. Food cooked on a spit (which allows some of the fat to drip away) is generally lower in fat than the same food cooked in oil. 3. Ergo, rotisserie chicken is a significantly more healthful fast-food option, yes?

Apparently, no. In January, the Tufts University Diet & Nutrition Letter announced that rotisserie chickens had little place in a low-fat, low-calorie diet. In one example, a half-chicken plate at Boston Chicken (including corn bread, mashed potatoes and squash) with a small-soda compared unfavorably with a Big Mac, large fries and chocolate shake; the chicken plate had more calories, fat and sodium.

One easy way to cut a lot of fat and calories from a rotisserie chicken is to remove the skin. The Tufts letter warned, however, that many people find a crispy chicken-skin difficult to resist.

Healthy breakfasts can be easy

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - The Idaho Dietetic Association (IDA) is putting the word out that breakfast is too good to miss.

Molly Slough, a member of the Magic Valley branch of the association, said, for a variety of reasons, breakfast is all too often skipped.

"You convince yourself that it's too early to eat and you don't feel like eating," she said. "And you don't realize what you're missing until you get back into the habit of eating."

Slough said she eats her breakfast while putting on her makeup and fixing her hair, before leaving for work. With a bowl of cereal close by, she can do both without losing time.

"There are a lot of really good low-fat cold cereals on the market, so that it doesn't take a lot of preparation time," she said.

Sue Ormond, another IDA member, said there are some things to watch for when buying cereal products.

For example, choose those that are whole grain, and not totally refined. The way you can tell is to check the label for the words "whole wheat flour" or "whole oat flour" or "rolled oats," not just "oat flour" or "wheat flour."

One thing you need to watch for when buying cereal is that you're not shopping for candy," Ormond

said. "A lot of the cereals are very high in sugar."

She said to look at the list of ingredients to see how much sugar is in the cereal. The recommended amount of sucrose and other sugars is about three to five grams per serving. Sucrose content should be low in comparison to the amount of edible starch.

Cereals that contain raisins and nuts are higher in sugar, she said. But if you want them, it's more economical to throw in your own.

The words "high in fiber" on a cereal package might mean it has a lot of nuts or dried fruit in it. Sometimes these are formed into little clumps.

"And the way they clump is to add oil to it to get it to stick together," Ormond said. "So you are buying a food that naturally is low in fat, but the manufacturer has added a lot of fat back in to get it to stick together."

For children, she said, there should not be an emphasis on lowering fat. Kids need some fat to provide them with energy.

Ormond said nutrition is a matter of choice and food should be enjoyed, not something to feel guilty about.

"Eat in balance and in moderation, and have a good variety," she said. "If you're always all concerned about the fat content, all you're going to eat is a minimal amount of food; then that's not a good food selection either."

Another IDA member, Helen Hopkins of Gooding, quoted a 1991 Gallup survey that said of 407 children 9 to 15 years old in a sampling, nearly 60 percent said they had skipped breakfast.

She said similar studies have shown that participation in school, and how well kids do there, declines when breakfast isn't consumed. With adults, work productivity drops dramatically.

Hopkins said some people skip breakfast because they are trying to lose weight.

"But skipping breakfast actually promotes binge eating, because you're so hungry and you tend to binge out a little bit more later," she said. "So it doesn't help at all there."

Here are some alternatives to a sit-down bacon, eggs, cereal and toast type breakfast, suggested by members of the Idaho Dietetic Association:

- Peanut butter sandwich
- Bagel with string cheese or mozzarella
- Fresh fruit
- Fruit flavored yogurt with different kinds of cereal sprinkled in it
- Egg on toast
- Open faced cheese sandwiches on bread, English muffins or tortillas
- Leftover pancakes, waffles or French toast that has been frozen, may be thawed or reheated to make sandwiches. Pancakes may be topped with yogurt and rolled up. Put pureed fruit on pancakes or toast.

Sauce: Broil (or microwave 1 minute on medium-high) until cheese is hot and bubbly.

For a crispier crust, toast muffin halves before adding the sauce and cheese. These may be prepared the night before and popped into the oven in the morning.

"These are wonderful," Hopkins said. "They're just like mini pizzas."

When IDA member, Molly Slough, of Twin Falls, is in a hurry in the morning, she said she just grinds some toast and either a glass of milk or juice.

The following is a recipe for honeydew breakfast bars that may be wrapped in airtight packaging and stored in the refrigerator for a day, or put in the freezer.

NO-FAT BREAKFAST BARS

Makes about 18
1/2 calories each 2-inch square

1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup raisins
1 cup ripe bananas, mashed
2 egg whites
1 egg quick cooking rolled oats
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 cup skim milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Stir together flour, oats, baking powder, cinnamon, baking soda and raisins. Add bananas, milk, egg whites and vanilla, and beat until smooth.

Spread batter evenly into either a 9 by 13-inch non-stick pan, or one that has been coated with vegetable spray. Bake until golden brown and just beginning to pull from pan and springs back when lightly touched - about 35 to 40 minutes. Cut into 2-inch squares.

"They're pretty heavy - very dense, and they have a banana oatmeal type flavor," Slough said. "They're really good and fill you up."

Another eat and run type of breakfast is this ...

LOW-FAT BANANA BREAD

1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
2/3 cup sugar
4 egg whites
1 cup ripe bananas, mashed
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 cup applesauce
1/2 cup skim milk
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Mix together the flour, baking soda, baking powder and salt. Set aside. In a mixer bowl mix milk, sugar and applesauce. Add egg whites one at a time, and beat until they are smooth.

Fold in with the dry ingredients. Put the batter into a loaf pan sprayed with vegetable oil. Bake 60 to 65 minutes.

And from Ormond, here is a recipe for another eat and run type food. It makes a large bowlful of batter that may be stored up to a month in the refrigerator.

RAISIN BRAN MUFFINS

Makes 5 dozen

1 (15 ounce) box Raisin Bran
1/3 cup oil
3 cups sugar
4 eggs

1 quart buttermilk
5 cups flour
5 teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons salt

Mix together. Fill tins (covered with paper liners) to 2/3 full. Bake at 375-400 for 15 to 20 minutes.

This is an old recipe, and to cut the cholesterol use 2 eggs and fill the cracked shells with water, and add to the mixture. If the shortening or fat seems high in an old recipe, much of the time it can be cut by about 50 percent. If the batter is too heavy, water or applesauce may be added. And you can use half the eggs the recipe calls for or just use the whites.

Party

about 1/3 cup). Stir in peanut butter and cinnamon until blended. Separate ladyfingers. Spread flat surface of half by ladyfingers with peanut butter mixture; cover with remaining ladyfingers.

Makes 12 servings:

HONEY NUT SUNDAE TOPPING

Have a whole week of "sundaes" with this sweet addition to your ice cream.

1/2 cup Roasted Honey Nut Skippy creamy or Super Chunk peanut butter
1/3 cup maple-flavored pancake syrup
1/2 cup water

In 1-quart bowl stir peanut butter and syrup until combined; gradually stir in water until smooth. Serve over ice cream. You can decorate the sundaes with chocolate chips, chopped peanuts, raisins, marshmallows or granola.

Makes about 1 cup.

PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

A tried-and-true favorite for adults and kids alike!

1 1/2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup Skippy creamy or Super Chunk peanut butter
1/2 cup (1 stick) corn oil margarine
1 cup packed brown sugar
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In medium bowl combine flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt; set aside.

In large bowl with mixer at medium speed beat peanut butter and margarine until smooth. Beat in sugars until blended. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Add flour mixture; beat until well blended. If necessary, refrigerate dough.

Shape into 1-inch balls. Place 2 inches apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Flatten with fork dipped in sugar, making crisscross pattern.

Bake 11 to 13 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove; cool completely on wire rack. Store in tightly covered container.

Makes 5 dozen cookies.

Meatball recipes make simple, satisfying family fare

Feel like savoring some simple, satisfying and comforting fare?

Three Easy Meatball Meals will provide just the change of pace you're looking for. One batch of these versatile beef meatballs is the beginning of a soup, sandwich or stew depending upon the ingredients you pair with them. Most of the add-ins are things you probably keep on hand—canned beef broth, salsa, prepared spaghetti sauce, onions, jarred beef gravy and seasonings.

The basic meatballs are easy to prepare and economical, too. Because they're so easy, you can shape two batches, and bake them at the same time. Eat one now, and freeze one for a head start on another meal.

To freeze the meatballs, cool slightly, wrap, label and date the package. Freeze up to three months. To defrost, place the package of frozen meatballs in the refrigerator the night before you're ready to use them in Spicy Beef 'n Zucchini Soup, Italian Meatball Sandwiches or Easy Meatball Stew.

Serve the sandwich filling in warm crusty rolls with a vegetable salad accompaniment. The soup is perfect with wholegrain rolls and fresh fruit. If stew is on the menu, warm corn muffins are a good go-with. Make them from a mix, or, if time is short, purchase ready-made muffins from the supermarket.

THREE EASY MEATBALL MEALS

Total preparation and cooking time: 30 to 40 minutes.

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1/2 cup soft or 1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Heat oven to 400 degrees. In large bowl, combine all ingredients, mixing lightly but thoroughly. Pinch off approximately 1 1/2-inch pieces of beef mixture to make 20 meatballs, place in ungreased 15-by-10-inch jelly roll pan. Bake 10 to 13 minutes or until no longer pink and juices run clear. Use meatballs in one of the recipes below, proceeding as directed.

SPICY BEEF 'N ZUCCHINI SOUP: In large saucepan, combine 2 cups diced zucchini, 1 can (14 ounces) ready-to-serve beef broth, 1 cup prepared chunky salsa and 1 cup water; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer 3 to 5 minutes or until zucchini is crisp-tender. Stir in cooked meatballs (1 recipe) and 1 tablespoon chopped fresh cilantro; heat through. Top with corn chips, if desired, immediately before serving. Makes 4 servings.

ITALIAN MEATBALL SANDWICHES: In large nonstick skillet, heat 1 teaspoon vegetable oil over medium heat until hot. Cook and stir 1/2 cup thin bell pepper strips and 1/2 cup thin onion wedges 3 to 4 minutes or until tender. Reduce heat to medium-low; add cooked meatballs (1 recipe) and 1 jar (14 ounces) prepared spaghetti sauce. Cover; cook 5 to 6 minutes to heat through, stirring occasionally. Spoon equal amounts into 4 split hoagie rolls; sprinkle with mozzarella cheese, if desired. Makes 4 sandwiches.

EASY MEATBALL STEW: In large saucepan, combine 1 jar (12 ounces) brown beef gravy, 1 small can (8 ounces) stewed tomatoes (undrained), 1/2 cup water, 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves and 1/2 teaspoon pepper; bring to a boil. Stir in 1 package (16 ounces) frozen vegetable (with potato) mixture. Reduce heat; simmer 10 to 15 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in cooked meatballs (1 recipe); heat through. Sprinkle with chopped parsley, if desired. Makes 4 servings.

Cook's Tip: To make soft bread crumbs, place 1 slice torn bread in food processor, fitted with steel blade, or blender container. Cover; process 30 seconds, pulsing on and off until fine crumbs. Yield: 1/2 cup.

Simple meatballs make for three tasty family meals that don't require a lot of hassle.

If fridge, freezer are bare, don't despair; meals wait on shelves

By Sharon Crowder
Newport News Daily Press

You're rummaging desperately through the refrigerator and freezer for something to fix for dinner. You come up with a couple of carrots, a half-empty container of yogurt and a piece of onion.

All is not lost—if you have a can of beans, tomatoes or corn on the shelf. Canned vegetables can save you.

With a can of beans, you can whip up a nutritious main-course dip to serve inside a wedge of pita bread. You can heat the beans with a can of pureed tomatoes and spices to serve as a sauce on cooked noodles or as a filling for tortillas. Got a can of creamed corn or tomato juice? Transform it into soup with spices and a few other ingredients, garnish with chopped green onions or a dollop of yogurt.

From a taste standpoint, fresh vegetables most always are best. When you're talking convenience, however, it's hard to beat canned. They're a good substitute for out-of-season varieties and can be used to bolster the nutritional content of meals. Best of all, they can be plopped on the shelf and forgotten until there's nothing else in the house for dinner. For folks who find getting to the store on a regular basis difficult, a good stock of canned veggies can mean nutritional salvation.

There are more than 40 different varieties of beans and 130 types of vegetable products now available in cans. They provide almost the same

Here's how to get the most from canned veggies

Newport Daily Press

COOKING:

- Don't overcook canned foods. They need only a quick heating.
- When using in soups, stews or casseroles, add near the end of cooking and simmer just long enough for flavors to blend.

CHOOSING AND STORING: Read labels. Most canned foods offer complete nutritional labeling, allowing choices for people on sodium, fat and calorie-restricted diets. Dozens of low-sodium and no-salt-added vegetables are available.

Look for cans without dents or other signs of damage. Dents do not affect the contents of the cans as long as the seal is not broken and the can doesn't leak. If a can is leaking or the ends bulge, the food should not be used. Return the unopened container to the store where it was purchased.

Off odors or flavors or mold inside the can are signs that the contents are bad and should not be used. Canned foods are graded by appearance, flavor and texture and usually priced accordingly. Brands vary widely. Try a variety of brands, including house and generic labels, to determine which suits your taste and pocketbook. Select canned vegetables appropriate for the dish you're making. It's not necessary to buy expensive, whole tomatoes for soups and stews. For instance, when crushed ones, which are less expensive, will do.

Keep canned foods in a cool, dry place, away from direct sunlight. Storage above 80-degrees should be avoided.

Most canned foods will retain their quality for two years or more. For best results, the Canned Food Information Council recommends using canned foods within a year after purchase.

Canned foods should retain their wholesomeness as long as the container remains intact.

wilted. Add the tomatoes, bean liquid, salt and pepper. Cover and simmer for about 10 minutes until vegetables are tender. Add the drained beans and simmer for another 20 minutes. Meanwhile, cook and drain macaroni. Toss with butter and grated cheese, then mix with the bean sauce and a little of the bean liquid. Serve in heated bowls and sprinkle more cheese and chopped parsley on top.

CABBAGE SLAW

(Serves 12)
4 cups (thinly sliced) cabbage
1 can (8 ounces) whole corn, drained

- 1 can (8 ounces) cut green beans
- 1/2 cup sliced green onions and tops
- 1/2 cup unsalted peanuts
- 1/2 cup fat-free mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 2 tablespoons skim milk
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons white vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon dried dill weed
- 3 dashes red pepper sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- Combine cabbage, canned vegetables, onions and peanuts in large bowl. Mix mayonnaise and remaining ingredients; spoon over vegetable mix and toss. Refrigerate until serving time.

nutritional value as fresh, says Stanley Gershoff and Catherine Whitney, authors of "The Tufts University Guide to Food Nutrition."

The disadvantage, however, is that the sodium content of canned foods can be high. Those on salt-restricted diets should read labels carefully and purchase salt-reduced or salt-free alternatives. There's no need to wait until you're desperate to try the recipes here.

PASTA WITH BEANS

(Serves 6-8)
1 16-ounce can white beans
1/4 cup olive oil

1/4 cup sugar

Spray two 9-by-14-inch round pans with Pam, and dust lightly with flour. In a large mixing bowl, combine flour, 1/2 cups of sugar, cocoa and baking soda. Add milk, margarine and vanilla. Beat with mixer on low for 30 seconds or until combined. Beat on medium to high for 2 minutes, scraping bowl sides. In small bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add 1/2 cup sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Fold into batter. Pour batter into pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes, or until a toothpick inserted comes out clean. Cool in pans on wire racks for 10 minutes. Remove, cool on racks, frost. 12 servings.

Lighting the key to room's beauty

By Gary Krino
Orange County Register

Lighting. Flip the switch and we've got it, right? Maybe. It doesn't matter how beautiful a room might be or how much you've spent on it. If the lighting isn't right, it's simply not going to work as well as it should.

The proper lighting should add beauty and drama to a room. It can open-up a smallish space, giving it an airy appeal. Or it can make a large room appear cozy and inviting. Lighting can create a stimulating atmosphere or, a quiet feeling of relaxation.

The key word in all of this is "can." Getting the lighting right can work magic. If you don't get it right, the results will be less than inspiring.

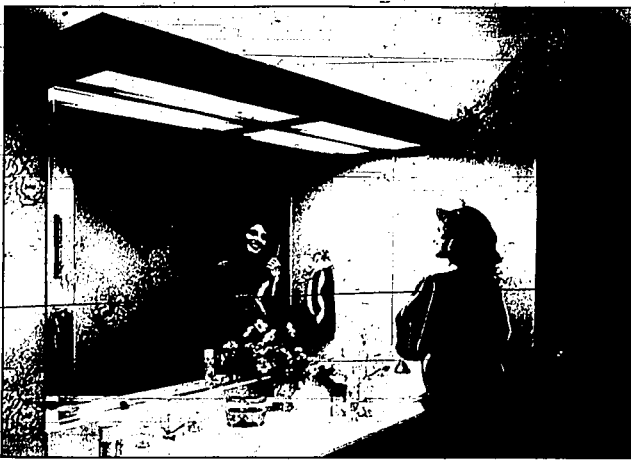

According to the American Lighting Association, when planning lighting you should look at the activities that will be happening in each room, the atmosphere you want to create and the decorative elements you want to highlight.

Keep in mind that light can be absorbed and even wasted in dark-colored rooms, or reflected and used as additional light in light-colored rooms. Also take note of spaces that will serve more than a single purpose and those that will require more than one type of lighting.

There are three basic types of lighting: general, task and accent. A good lighting plan should combine all three types, according to function and style.

Here's a look at the basics of the three lighting groups and how they work in particular situations.

• General: Also known as ambient lighting, it provides an area with overall illumination and radiates a comfortable level of brightness.

Photo

A simple fluorescent canopy provides flattering light for grooming.

Chandeliers, ceiling- or wall-mounted fixtures, recessed or track lights are basic forms of general lighting.

A good way to think of general lighting is that it replaces sunlight in a room.

• Task: This form of lighting helps you perform specific tasks such as reading, sewing, cooking, homework, hobbies, games, or, if you're the sort who actually gets around to it, balancing the checkbook.

Basic types of task lighting are recessed-or-track-lighting; pendant lighting (lighting suspended from the ceiling with shades or globes to avoid glare) and portable lamps. Task lighting should be free of distracting glare and shadows, and should be bright enough to prevent eye strain.

And, speaking of eye strain, one of the most important types of task lighting is lighting for reading. The light should come from behind the reader's shoulder.

Try placing a floor lamp at either the left or right side of the reading chair.

The light (it also can be a table lamp) should be 40-42 inches off the floor, and the bottom of the shade should be at eye level to avoid glare.

• Accent: This adds drama to a room by creating visual interest. As part of a decorating scheme, it is used to spotlight paintings, house plants, sculpture and other particularly interesting items. It also can be used to highlight the texture of a wall or drapery.

An important thing to remember is that accent-lighting requires at least three times as much light on the focal point as the general lighting around it. Accent-lighting includes track, recessed or wall-mounted fixtures.

Old print tablecloths are latest home-fashion fad

By Charlyne Varkooyi
Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

Hold on to those hand-me-downs. Tablecloth kitsch from the '40s has become today's new home fashion statement.

The festive patterns of fruit, flowers and state maps on white cotton are hot properties from flea markets to the Spiegel catalog. Collectors are buying them for their vintage fabric, which they transform into curtains, slipcovers, pillows, even hatbox coverings. Designers consider them the perfect partner for the rustic country look and an escape to the innocent charm of the past.

Last August's premiere issue of "Memorabilia & Country," magazine showed vintage tablecloths tied together and made into wall curtains. (Patterns don't need to match; just look for complementary colors.)

Lyn Peterson, interior designer and president of the fabric firm Motif Designs, used her flea market find to give a vintage twist to a window valance. (It's a great design idea because you don't have to worry about stains; they can be hidden on the flip-side.)

You can sometimes find these treasures at flea markets or yard sales, but they are more common at antique shows. Depending on the dealer, the size and style of the cloth, you can pay from $15 for a luncheon size floral to $200 for a hard-to-find motif.

"The price often depends upon if the dealer makes it a specialty," says Terry Beall, a Miami dealer of '30s, '40s and '50s collectibles whose prices range from $15 to $45. "If the dealer has a large collection, you usually pay more. Expect to pay less if you go into a store and they have only one or two."

Margaret Meier, an Oakland Park dealer who has been collecting vintage fabrics for close to two decades, has carried these kitschy cloths for about eight years. Her prices range from $35 to $125. She says cloths with African-American motifs bring the highest prices, followed by those with state maps and fruit motifs. Florals are the least expensive.

"I can sell every one with a black theme that I can get my hands on," she says. "A few people are looking to collect all 50 states. There are a lot of them with Florida, Arizona, Texas and Alaska maps — anywhere they got a lot of tourists." But Tink thinks it's going to be hard to come up with states like Iowa and Nebraska.

Stains — especially hard-to-remove coffee stains — can be a problem for collectors who frame the state maps. But most do come out because these sturdy cloths were vat dyed, a heat and alkaline process that prevents bleeding and fading. Dealers suggest you use a strong detergent like Biz, followed by a non-chorine bleach, then dry them in the sun.

Another option: new versions of the old patterns. The spring/summer Spiegel catalog features a collection of "tablecloth" fruit motifs in window accessories, table linens, chair pads and wallpaper border. Prices range from $19.90 for four napkins to $39.90 for a 90-inch round tablecloth. (Call 1-800-345-4500.)

Get crabgrass while it's young

Sunburn. Greening lawns. Budding forsythia. Signs of spring are everywhere. Resist.

Mother's Day is the date we usually recognize as officially safe to set tender annuals out and sow seeds without fear of frost. That's two months away. Tomatoes have no business out there yet.

A nicely victorious battle with new spring weeds might be what the doctor ordered for spring fever, though.

Crabgrass is one of those weeds that won't go away unless you get it while it is a mere babe — less than two inches tall.

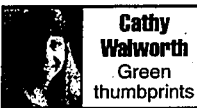

Crabgrass is an annual grass. That may seem surprising since it's always there. But it reseeds itself nicely in late summer and hits the ground running the following spring. You could pull it, but it's often firmly rooted. You could hoe it, but may have other plans for hoe-induced blisters.

Crabgrass killer, a weed killer just for crabgrass, says on the label to load up the sprayer and spray now.

Follow the label directions, and in a couple of weeks the crabgrass that has sprouted will probably be gone.

For the more stubborn clumps, a second application might be necessary.

"Dacthal," a pre-emergent weed

Cathy Walworth Green thumbprints

killer in granular form, can be spread now to keep weed seeds that haven't sprouted from becoming a problem. This two-pronged attack should take care of your crabgrass.

To avoid future infestations, water the lawn deeply, then let it dry out. Crabgrass is a shallow-rooted (but what the book says; the author obviously never met my crabgrass) weed that flourishes where you water lightly.

Crabgrass has a hard time even getting started if the lawn is well-fertilized, thick and healthy. That goes for just about any lawn weed. Seeds have to have a place in the sun to sprout — and if the lawn is thick and lush, weed seeds haven't got a prayer.

Dear Readers, I need some help. I brought back a product from the Northwest Flower and Garden Show that claims to get African Violets to bloom, and keep them blooming in six weeks. I can kill a violet in much less time than that. If you normally get along well with violets and would like to participate in an experiment, please drop me a line in care of The Times-News.

We will supply two African violets for the trial, so you don't have to use some you might be emotionally attached to. My thanks ahead of time.

The nuts and bolts of organizing your workshop

By Nick Harder
Orange County Register

The next time a bad-weather day this winter keeps you indoors, here's an idea that can make it brighter. Clear off your workbench and get your workshop organized.

OK, so it's not as relaxing as falling asleep on the couch watching old movies. But once your shop is better organized, you'll be able to actually do some of those home projects you've been postponing.

Here are some suggestions to get you started. You know all those nuts, bolts, screws and assorted thingamajigs you've kept throwing into that box? You know, the box you kept promising yourself you'd eventually sort through. Now is the time. In fact, this is a job you can do while watching an old movie.

If you don't have one already, buy one or more of those plastic, military organizers from your local hardware store or home center. Chances are you'll need a large one with many drawers, probably even two or more of them. If you're like me, you have a tremendous number of odd-size things you just can't throw out.

You also can use small, empty glass or plastic bottles, ranging from the type in which baby food is sold to larger ones from peanut butter or jam. Once cleaned, they make excellent storage containers. Then buy or have on hand several dozen small labels and a pen or pencil. Make sure the labels fit the organizer drawers or bottles. Self-adhesive labels are the best.

A ruler or measuring device of some type will help. Set up a table — a card table will do — and pour the contents of that container of stuff onto a corner of the table nearest you. Begin organizing one item at a time. Arrange items by categories such as screws, bolts and nuts.

Then, you may be able to put some items in drawers right away, such as one-for-a-kind items.

Measure the other items. As you measure, take a drawer or jar and put the items into it. Mark a label and put it with the items. Be sure to indicate on the label the size and type of item. Print legibly and as large as possible.

Keeping items in groups and sizes will help you determine how many drawers you'll need. Most of the plastic drawers have dividers. You might find it more efficient to put two or three sizes of items in a drawer if they'll fit. It might not be a bad idea to write in pencil on each label in case you need to change it later.

This is the type of project that can take hours or days. Don't give up on it. Just find another good movie to watch while you're doing it.

Breathe new life into old home

By Barbara Mayer
The Associated Press

Elise and Curt Hine line started with a modest house and a shoe-string budget. By working on one or two projects at a time over a number of years, they've turned a plain old farmhouse into a charmer.

"We call it the ultimate recycling job," says Elise Hine line about the two-story circa-1920 farmhouse in the center of Ridgefield, a picturesque old town in Connecticut.

Virtually every square foot of the house and its lot have been changed in some way. Hine line redid the grounds, built a picket fence and gate, and put up a large Victorian barn out back. He also repainted the exterior of the white house and removed the shutters to simplify the facade and emphasize the multipaned 20-over-20 windows, one of the house's most appealing features.

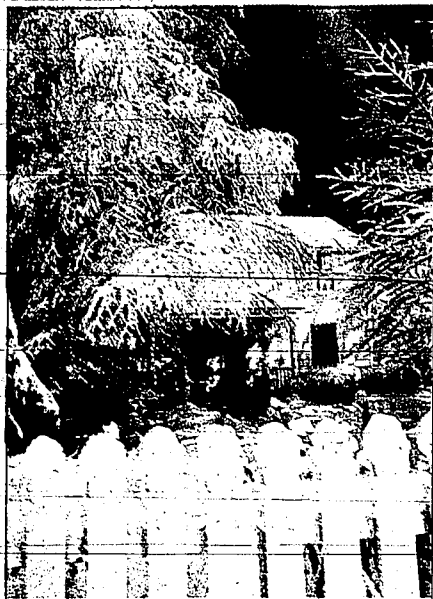

The house, which encompasses about 1,600 square feet of living space, has a living room, dining room, kitchen, bedroom and tiny mud room on the ground floor, and three bedrooms and a bath upstairs.

Thanks to the renovations, visitors today experience the charm of the small house, framed by plantings of birch, oriental cherry and rhododendron. You approach the house along a brick walk built by Curt Hine line, stepping onto the porch he widened and into the house through the front door that he relocated to make a more gracious entryway.

Inside, the most extensive attention was lavished on the master bedroom suite in an L-configuration on the ground floor, where the house's first occupant ran a home laundry. An addition to the original house, it was heated only by a kerosene stove. Hine line gutted the space, insulated, rewired, added closets and raised the ceiling.

"We heat it with a woodstove in the winter, so it's a cozy little apartment for us," says Elise Hine line.

Perhaps the most intriguing feature in the room is the soaking tub in one corner. The round tub, six feet in diameter, is actually an animal watering tank purchased from the Sears farm catalog. They had it plumbed and then painted it themselves with white epoxy paint.

"As a child in the Midwest, Curt took baths in an old galvanized tub," says Elise, "and that was his inspiration."

She prefers the claw-footed tub in the upstairs bathroom for soaking.

"We saw the neighbors loading it to dispose of it and they gave it to us in another instance of salvage," she recalls.

As a professional house painter who offers special finishes — marbling, mottling, combing, sponging, wood graining and stenciling —

Hine line decided to make his house an example of the art of faux finishing. Consequently, the walls of most rooms and some floors have special finishes.

The master bedroom is stenciled. The mud room walls are combed and the floor of the room is painted in a diamond pattern. The dining room is done in combed stripes in matte and sheen finishes, so the pattern comes partially from the different degrees of shininess. The living room has been glazed and ragged.

In the upstairs bath, the walls are ragged and sponged, and the tub is marbled. In a bedroom upstairs, several different combing techniques are combined in blocks, all in the same color, for a subtle variation. Another room is sponged in different blocks of the same color.

As any painter knows, a good job requires surface preparation and the most interesting painted rooms are those with architectural detailing. Before the paint went on, Hine line repaired plaster walls and added decorative crown moldings and baseboards, and in at least one room, wainscoting of thin vertical boards applied to the bottom third of the wall.

The couple also treated the floors to interesting paint finishes. After getting down to the natural amber color of the fir by scraping off the dark finish, Curt Hine line applied a light amber stain. Then he stenciled a border in the living room and dining room by adapting a traditional quilt-pattern design called "carpenter's wheel."

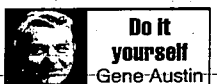

Hine line finished several cupboards already there with so-called vinegar painting. This 18th century technique calls for the addition of vinegar to the other ingredients in the emulsion. Then a wash of putty is passed over the wet surface and the marks of the putty become part of the pattern.

Are there any projects left? Of course. Someday the couple hope to redo the kitchen entirely. In the meantime, they have repainted the existing metal cabinets and bought some new appliances.

To build a strong shed, start with a good plan

Q: I want to build a storage shed in my back yard, using wood parts and wood siding. There is an existing concrete pad on which I can build the shed, which I want to be 10 feet by 12 feet. I've checked bookstores, but can't find much on shed building. Can you help? I enclose a lot of specific questions. —B. Ingram

A: Judging from the questions, it seems you are planning to build a shed without a plan. While this is possible, I don't recommend it, especially since it is easy to get step-by-step plans. A good source of shed plans is Craft Patterns, 3545 Stern Ave., St. Charles, Ill. 60174 (telephone 800-747-1429).

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

Craft Patterns offers six shed designs in its catalogue, which costs $3 and includes hundreds of patterns for woodworking projects ranging from furniture to yard decorations. The Craft plans include a shed with barn-style roof and double doors. The shed can be built 10 feet wide and in any of four depths, including 12 feet. The shed is nine feet high.

The catalogue also offers a contemporary-style shed in 10-by-12 size, plus smaller and larger sheds.

One of the simplest ways to build a shed is to buy a kit. In these, the walls and other sections of the shed are pre-assembled, and it is only necessary to fasten them together. Grossman's, a home-center chain with several stores in the Philadelphia area, sells a kit for a barn-style shed, 10 feet by 12 feet, for about $1,200. It is also possible to buy shed plans at Grossman's, including materials lists, and to assemble a kit to build a less-expensive shed.

Some other home centers and lumberyards sell various types of shed kits or can supply plans, materials and construction tips.

An excellent book for would-be shed builders is "Sheds: A Do-It-Yourself Guide for Backyard Builders," by David Sittles ($17.95 paperback, $21.95 hardcover, Camden House). This book is an excellent guide to shed building and has detailed instructions for building a basic 8-by-10-foot shed. Those who want special touches for their sheds, such as cupolas or clerestory windows, will also find guidance here.

"Sheds" is available at bookstores or can be ordered by calling Camden House at 800-343-550.

Q: I just had new storm windows and screens installed. I was told it is OK to leave the screens in place for winter even though they will be exposed to freezing rain and so forth. What do you think? Should I remove and store the screens? —B. Schwartz

A: Most people leave their screens in place because it is more convenient to do so. In general, however, the life of a screen will be extended if it is removed and stored in winter, but not because of freezing rain and cold weather.

Many modern screens are made of fiberglass, and the most damage to them is caused by ultraviolet rays from the sun. Reducing the exposure to sunlight by storing screens in winter should extend their lives.

Even if the screens are made of aluminum, they will have a better appearance and probably last longer if you store them for half the year.

The club said Kruk has been told to "take it easy for a couple of weeks." Team physician Dr. Phillip Marone will re-examine Kruk on Friday in Clearwater.

Marone said Monday that Kruk had a hematoma, or gathering of encapsulated blood, in his scrotal sac. The injury stemmed from a bad pickoff throw last season by reliever Mitch Williams.

Kruk, 33, hit .316 with 14 homers, 85 RBI and 100 runs last season.

CSI baseball team looks to better offense at invitational

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho baseball team will search for some improvements on offense at the Treasure Valley Invitational Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The Golden Eagles join Ricks, Chemeketa, Ore., Snow and Treasure Valley for two days of round-robin play followed by single elimination on Saturday.

CSI opens at 3 p.m. Thursday against

Ricks and goes against Chemeketa at 8 p.m. "We need to accomplish two things," said Eagles coach Jim Walker. "No. 1, we have to prove we can score in the first inning. We're middle-of-the-game type scorers. When we get into a nine-inning game, that's fine but we've got to get into a seven-inning game, we got pressure to score earlier."

"The second thing is that we get some consistency. We need to find a batting order we can go with instead of throwing out a bingo."

Of the seven CSI players with the most at bats on the team this season, the highest batting average belongs to Devin Chavez at .289. He led the region in hitting last year at .467.

As a team, the Eagles are batting .256. Walker sets a goal for his team to hit .350. "We're still missing what I'd call a legitimate leadoff hitter and a No. 3 hitter," Walker said. "We don't have anything coming from our outfield at all, which leads me to believe we may have some infielders out there soon."

"We've probably had a new lineup every game."

The CSI defense continues to be the strong point of the Eagles. The team fielding percentage stands at .964, more than 40 points higher than usual.

Reliever lead Soto and starter Kevin Shafer head the pitching staff with 2-0 records.

"All four of our starters have gone five innings plus," Walker said. "I've tried to leave them in to get through some adversity."

The Eagles start a three-week homestand with a visit from Utah Valley State College at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

POCATELLO — Numbers do not lie. However, as applied to the Idaho High School Wrestling Championships numbers seldom paint a reliable picture.

The 1994 competition for class A-1, A-2 and A-3 gets underway Thursday afternoon at Idaho State University's Holt Arena. Matches through 12 in each class will run in order from 3 p.m. until completion.

Wrestlers return to the mats at 9 a.m. Friday for the first of that day's three sessions. Fourth through sixth place will be decided between 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Saturday. Championship matches will follow immediately after a 4:45 p.m. pro-match ceremony.

Only two area wrestlers, Minico senior Paul Fries in the Class A-1-171-pound classification and Gooding's Lyle Rogers (135) — a junior who earned last year's A-3 119-pound crown, are expected to garner individual titles.

A significant step down in comparison to 1993 when six of nine Magic Valley favorites gained the title round, five emerged victorious and Twin Falls' heavyweight Geoff Pierce increased the gold medal count to six.

Ten of the 28 District 4 grapplers are likely to contend for individual championships. That is an improvement of seven from a year ago. The team outlook surpasses even that.

Minico, with six top-four picks among 17 qualifiers, boasts the state's largest A-1 contingent.

John Daly practices his driving Tuesday at the Chapultepec Golf course in Mexico City.

Daly's back Golfer hopes he has controlled problems

The Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — John Daly is back. With his booming drives. With his enormous talent. With a personality golf desperately needs.

He is back also with a parcel of problems he hopes this time to have securely wrapped and under control.

"I feel like it's a whole new year. Everything is positive. I want to get on with my career, get on with a new life. It feels good," Daly said Tuesday.

This is John Daly Gets a Life — Take Three.

He burst on the scene as a rookie in 1991 and won the PGA.

He dropped off the tour late in 1992 to deal with his drinking problem.

He was suspended late in 1993 after he withdrew in a pro-am round in Hawaii.

MURTAUGH — The middle was the key Tuesday night when the Canyon Conference all-stars continued their long mastery of their Magic Valley Conference counterparts.

The A-3 girls claimed a 49-32 decision, jumping into a 12-point lead in the first nine minutes. Later, the boys manhandled the A-4 entry 105-80.

The all-star game precludes another that will cover all classifications in Magic Valley. The top 20 graduating boys and girls from the district will meet at 6 and 8 p.m. Monday at College of Southern Idaho gymnasium.

A-3 girls 49, A-4 girls 32

Valley's Holly Henry and Mandy Schwarz and Kimberly's Erin McEwen provided the early points as the Canyon Conference went ahead 8-0 and was never headed.

The Magic Valley Conference girls didn't score until 4:19 remained in the first period on a shot by Castleford's Amber Schilder. The Canyon Conference never got more than an 18-point lead but dominated the rebounding and prevented any chance of a Magic Valley comeback.

The Class A-4 girls had no one over six points while the 8 points of Jennifer Branchflower topped the Canyon Conference with 8.

A-3-Schwarz 3-0-0-3-6, Michelson 3-0-0-2-7, Hamilton 2-0-1-2-4, Ritchie 1-0-0-2-5, Henry 1-2-2-1-4, McCabe 1-4-2-6, McEwen 3-0-1-0-6, Blockstock 2-0-2-1-4, Branchflower 3-2-2-1-8, Totals 19 8-12 16-46

A-3 boys 105, A-4 boys 80

They were having a basketball game, basically, when a three-point contest broke out.

Once the A-3 boys had things pretty well in hand, they spent the last 23 minutes shooting 3-pointers. And whoever brought it over the 10-second line got the shot.

About the only consistent assist passing came from Castleford's Duwayne Kimball, but it wasn't enough to keep the A-4 stars in contention.

Canyon Conference coach Bill Mitchell, Valley, said jokingly that having centers outside shooting three-point goals is nothing new for the Viking coach because "we never have a center."

The A-3s wound up with 14 3-point goals and began taking them in earnest as the second half began.

The problem for the A-4s was getting rebounds as the taller A-3s dominated inside. Flier's Ryan Mat and Deole's Travis Malloy must have swatted about eight and six field goals attempts, respectively.

The Canyon Conference had five men in double figures, with Malloy and Gooding's Bill Squires having 18 each. Bryan Brown of Murtaugh paced his team with 14, two more than Raft River's Clint Udy.

The boys played two 20-minute halves and that made the last eight minutes of the contest mostly dull. After 32 minutes of play — high school duration — the A-3s led 91-64. That left only the fabled 100-point mark to interest spectators and Valley's Jed Wyatt got it on a 3-pointer with 2:30 remaining.

The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Twenty-seven years after he laced on skates to join the other 6-year-olds on his hockey team, Wayne Gretzky is still afraid.

Now he's scared he will drag out the task of becoming the NHL's leading goal scorer.

"I think that my whole sports life from the time I was 6 years old, I've always played in fear," Gretzky said. "In fear of failure, in fear of not being successful. At the age of 6, I was scared to death I wouldn't make the team."

"I think that fear carried over into respect for other players, helped me prepare better for games, made me a better athlete."

Gretzky, already the league's career points leader and the holder of 59 other

NHL records, needs three goals to tie and four to break Gordie Howe's record of 801.

Gretzky and the Los Angeles Kings next play the Chicago Black Hawks at the Forum on Wednesday night.

"I don't want to drag it on so people have to travel from city to city," Gretzky said Tuesday during a news conference and conference call from the Forum.

Mourning leads Hornets over Suns

BYU needs to defeat Utah to salvage season

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Alonzo Mourning returned from a 15-game absence and scored 24 points, helping Charlotte, a No. 8 seed, defeat Phoenix Sunday night.

Without Mourning, out with a torn calf muscle, the Hornets went 1-14, giving up an average of 116 points per game. The win over the NBA's highest-scoring team proved Charlotte's 35 games behind New Jersey in the final Eastern Conference playoff spot.

The teams entered the fourth quarter

Price and nearly got his first career triple-double with 18 points, 10 assists and eight rebounds, with no turnovers. Price, nursing a bruised knee and strained back, was not in uniform.

Mitch Richmond and Wayman Tisdale led the Kings with 15 points each despite miserable shooting. Richmond was 7-for-22, Tisdale 8-for-21.

Spurs 115, Rockets 99

SAN ANTONIO — J.R. Reid scored a season-high 24 points as San Antonio moved into first place in the NBA Midwest Division for the first time this season by defeating Houston.

Willie Anderson had 22 points and David Robinson and Vinny Del Negro 21 apiece for the surging Spurs, who won for the 17th time in 20 games.

Hakeem Olajuwon had 28 points and 11 rebounds for the Rockets, who were in first place from the beginning after starting 15-0.

Cold outside shooting doomed Houston, which missed its first 12 3-point attempts and hit 43 percent from the field in the game. San Antonio made 54 percent from the field and outscored Houston 52-38.

NBA leading rebounder Dennis Rodman was ejected with 10:56 left in the game, after his second technical foul.

Robinson's jumper capped a 15-5 run to close the third period, giving San Antonio its largest lead to that point at 95-70.

Bulls 116, Hawks 95

CHICAGO — Scottie Pippen scored a season-high 39 points as Chicago defeated Atlanta, snapping the Bulls' five-game losing streak and the Hawks' six-game winning streak.

The Bulls, who lost their four previous games and six of eight at Chicago Stadium, pulled away with the help of 11 3-point goals and the run of 13 or more consecutive points. Their 116 points was the first time they went over 100 in six games.

Pippen scored 14 points in the fourth quarter, when Chicago broke open a close game with a 13-0 run. The Hawks trailed just 86-85 before Steve Kerr and Ben Armstrong hit consecutive 3-pointers. Pippen added a basket and Pete Myers converted a four-point play for a 99-85 advantage.

Kevin Willis led the Hawks with 21 points.

Clippers 116, Mavericks 110

DALLAS — Ron Harper scored 36 points and Dominique Wilkins 34 as Los Angeles beat Dallas for the 10th straight time.

Wilkins scored the first four points of a 10-0 run that enabled the Clippers to snap a five-game road losing streak. Wilkins hit two free throws with 1:41 left to snap a 102-102 tie, then followed up Harper's missed layup to make it 106-102.

Charlotte Hornets forward Frank Brickowski tries to pass around Phoenix Suns center Mark West during the first half at the Charlotte Coliseum in Charlotte, N.C., Tuesday.

Jim Jackson had 31 points and Tony Campbell 18 for the Mavericks, who lost their fifth in a row.

Jazz 100, Timberwolves 86

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Jazz tied a franchise record with their 10th consecutive victory as Karl Malone had 30 points and 11 rebounds against the Minnesota Timberwolves on Tuesday night.

Chris Smith scored 21 points and Thurl Bailey 18 for the Timberwolves, who lost their fifth straight game and 14th consecutive road game.

The victory pulled the Jazz into a half-game of second-place Houston in the Midwest Division race. San Antonio leads the division by one game over the Rockets.

Jay Humphries had 16 points and Tom Chambers 13 as the Jazz improved to 25-6 at home. Utah was based in New Orleans the last time the franchise won 10 straight games — in 1977-78.

The Timberwolves trailed 14-2, but were behind just 75-70 with 11:26 left before Malone made two short jumpers to start a 10-2 run that made it 85-72 with 8:43 remaining.

The sport included a flagrant foul on Smith for shoving John Stockton into the basket standard and a technical on Minnesota coach Sidney Lowe for protesting. Stockton hit two of three free throws and Hornacek finished the run with a 19-foot jumper, and the Timberwolves trailed by at least 10 the rest of the way.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A week ago, Brigham Young coach Roger Reid was poised for his fourth Western Athletic Conference championship. All the Cougars needed to do was hold serve at home, where they had won 20 games in a row.

Talk about last weekends.

First, an 84-82 overtime loss to New Mexico on Thursday handed the WAC crown to the Lobos, and then a 70-61 loss to BYU on Saturday.

In three days, Reid not only lost the Marriott Center win streak, but slipped into this week's conference tournament as the No. 3 seed.

"Anytime you play a couple games and lose, sure, you feel let down," he said. "But really, how can you feel let down when you go into overtime and lose to the team that won the league, and then lose a one-point game to Utah? It's not as if anybody else has lost."

While Reid remains upbeat, it won't get any easier. If the Cougars (19-8 overall, 12-6 in the WAC) are to salvage their season, they'll have to do it against Utah. The Utes (14-13, 8-10) are seeded sixth, but come into Thursday's 12:30 p.m. game fresh from a 79-72 upset of UNM on Saturday.

BYU beat Utah in both regular season meetings, but the games were close — 64-62 Jan. 8 in Salt Lake City, and 73-70 in Provo on Feb. 26.

During the tournament they're feeling pretty good about themselves," Reid said of his archrival. "They present a challenge, but we beat them twice, so I think there's some confidence there."

But Utah coach Rick Majors also is optimistic, noting that the Utes had won both their previous encounters with BYU, and this time have the additional incentive of survival — only by winning the tournament can Utah, with its sub-20 win record, advance to the NCAA playoffs next week.

BYU's only chance to go to the NCAAs, Majors said, "BYU's our next game and they're the best team in the league ... (but) we've lost twice at the buzzer. The last couple times the game have been decided on a missed shot here or there."

tied 71-71. A three-point play by Charles Barkley put the Suns ahead 78-75, but an 8-0 run put the Hornets in front 83-78 with 6:44 left.

Dell Curry and Hersey Hawkins started the decisive spur with 3-pointers and Muggsy Bogues capped the run with a 3-point shot.

Curry joined Mourning with 24 points for the Hornets, and Frank Brickowski had 19. A.C. Green scored 20 points and Barkley 16 for the Suns.

Magic 95, Nuggets 88

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal had 29 points and 16 rebounds and Orlando got an unexpected lift from Orlando guard, Free Radcliff, in a victory over Denver.

Radcliff scored eight fourth-quarter points and Dennis Scott, trying to keep his mind off the death of his father, finished with 17 for the Magic, who outscored the Nuggets 12-4 down the stretch.

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf scored 22 points and Bryant Stith 20 for the Nuggets, who won seven of their previous nine games, including a 99-89 decision over Orlando in Denver last Friday.

The Magic shot only 41 percent from the field, but put the game away by making six of seven free-throw shots in the final 3:15.

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Cleveland matched a team record with its 11th consecutive victory, beating Sacramento behind 18 points each from Terrell Brandon and John Williams.

The Kings have lost five straight overall and 10 in a row at the Richfield Coliseum, where they have not won since 1994.

The Cavaliers, who had seven players score in double figures, won 11 straight games twice before, most recently in 1991-92.

Heat hopes to regain streak, earn another bid to playoffs

MIAMI (AP) — The best stretch in Miami Heat history is over. Or maybe not.

A team-record seven-game winning streak Monday night, a 112-106 loss to Boston, but the team hopes to quickly regain momentum.

"We're on such a high right now and playing so well and feeling so good about ourselves that we don't want to lose this feeling," center Rony Seikaly said. "We can bounce back."

Miami, bidding to make the playoffs for the second time in the team's six-year history, has a chance to consolidate its strong position in the standings over the next 10 days.

Of the five games that span, four are at home and only one is against a certain playoff team — Phoenix on Friday. Beginning with Denver at Miami Arena on Wednesday, the schedule offers a chance to build another winning streak.

"There's no doubt," Seikaly said. "I don't know if we can, but we will."

"We still have our confidence," guard Steve Smith said.

Following the team's first defeat in more than two weeks, the biggest concern involved the status of reserve guard Bimbo Coles, who dislocated his right finger on Jan. 12.

He will be sidelined at least two weeks, disrupting coach Kevin Loughery's substitution pattern that worked so well in recent games.

"We'll miss Bimbo a great deal," guard Brian Shaw said. "He's a spark plug when he comes in, and gives us a lot of energy. He's one of the best defensive players, if not the best, on this team, and he makes things happen for us."

Cole's absence likely will mean more playing time for Harold Miner, who recently after missing 15 games with a knee injury.

The biggest puzzle about the Heat remains their inconsistent play at Miami Arena, where they're 14-14. On the road they're 18-12, the best record in the Eastern Conference.

"We have to take care of what we're doing at home," Shaw said.

Monday's loss, however, had less to do with a Heat meltdown than with the Celtics shooting 61 percent.

"They could have beaten anybody," Seikaly said.

Lewis calls bout with Jackson filler

NEW YORK (AP) — WBC champion Lennox Lewis agrees that his May 6 fight with Phil Jackson is just filler.

"These fights are stepping stones to keep me busy," he said Tuesday after a news conference with Jackson, the No. 4 challenger in the WBC.

Lewis, 28, would like to fight Evander Holyfield, the WBA and IBF champion, but says boxing politics preclude the bout he and fight fans are interested in.

"I hate being part owner of a heavyweight — championship crown," the Briton said. "I would rather be undisputed heavyweight champion of the world."

"He doesn't understand why Jackson is his opponent," Bob Greenway, an HBO vice president, said Oliver McCall and Tony Tucker, ranked as the top two challengers by the WBC, were excluded because they were too young.

"Don King," Greenway said, "is sure why Lionel Butler, ranked third, was bypassed."

"It is bothersome to me," Lewis said. "With these fights, you're further away from your goal. Even with these fights, anything could happen. You could get cut or hurt your hand, and that could be the end of your dream."

Lewis, the first British heavyweight champion since Bob Fitzsimmons in 1897, is 24-0 with 20 knockouts. He has fought just five times in the last two years, and not at all since a seventh-round knockout of Frank Bruno last Oct. 1.

His only defense since winning the WBC title in a second-round knockout of Razor Ruddock on Oct. 31, 1992, was a 10-round decision over Tucker last May 8.

"The American public needs to see more of Lennox Lewis," Lewis said. "With me, most of my earlier fights are in Europe."

Jackson, 29, isn't the coach of the Chicago Bulls. He is 30-1 with 27 knockouts.

"I know he's underestimating me," Jackson said of Lewis. "I know he's taking me for granted."

WBC heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis, left, and No. 4 challenger Phil Jackson announced their May 6 bout Tuesday.

He's going to be very upset he decided to fight Phil Jackson."

The fight is scheduled for Atlantic City, N.J.

Green Bay wins berth to NCAA tournament

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Logan Vander Velden sensed it was time. As a senior in the final minutes of the Mid-Continent Conference tournament, his team needed a lift and it needed baskets against a quick Illinois Chicago defense.

"I looked up and there were about three minutes left and I hadn't done anything. And I said, 'I've got to step it up.' I felt I had to take over a little and some of my shots began to fall," Vander Velden said.

His final shot with 12.2 seconds left did it and it was the one that counted most. He hit a drive to the basket, fouled by Mario Bailey on a block and converted a three-point play that put the Phoenix on top.

Gary Grzesk added a pair of free throws after Kenny Williams missed a 3-pointer. That gave Green Bay a 61-56 victory and a berth in the NCAA tournament.

Shoreland Ford, named the tournament MVP, led UIC (20-9) with 27 points. The Flames have lost in the conference tournament finals three straight years and lost three times this season to Green Bay.

Nordgaard led Green Bay with 22 and Vander Velden finished with 14. Williams was held to 12 points, 10 under his average, by the Grzesk's tough defense. He made only 3 of 16 shots.

Phoenix went up 54-49 with 2:13 left on a basket by Vander Velden. But Williams then made two free throws. After a Phoenix turnover and two missed layups, Ford hit two from the line with 1:25 left to cut the lead to one.

SW Louisiana 78

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — Southwest Louisiana earned its sixth trip to the NCAA tournament Tuesday night, defeating Western Kentucky 78-72 in the Sun Belt Conference championship game.

Western Kentucky's final seven points of the half to trail 37-34, but turned the ball over first two possessions of the second half while Southwest Louisiana's Barry Bowman sank a 3-pointer for a six-point advantage.

Kevin Willard's driving layup with 15:09 to go pulled Western Kentucky to 45-41, but Southwest Louisiana's Greg Starks hit a 3-pointer and followed with a 16-footer in a 9-2 run that increased the margin to 54-42 less than three minutes later.

After a turnover, Willard hit a 3-pointer and lane jump as Western Kentucky scored nine consecutive points to pull to 54-51 with 9:48 left.

Southwestern Louisiana, sparked by Moore's 3-pointer from the left wing, countered with eight straight points to go up 63-52.

Western Kentucky replied to 65-60, but Starks scored four points as Southwest Louisiana went on another 8-0 run to lead 73-60 with 4:12 seconds left.

Western Kentucky hit four consecutive 3-pointers, including two by Greg Glass, to close the gap in the final minute.

Cuban coaches 2 Army boxers to championship wins

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Jesse Ravelo won a boxing gold medal, listened to the Cuban national anthem, then walked away.

That was in 1967.

But when Ravelo left his country after winning a Pan American Games title in Canada at age 16, he did not leave boxing.

He boxed, coached amateurs and briefly as pro until 1983. He also started coaching in the U.S. Army in 1978.

Ravelo is attending the U.S. Amateur Boxing Championships this week as head coach of the strong Army team.

He became head coach last year and the Army won seven gold and four silver medals at the military championships. This year, Army won an unprecedented all 12 military titles.

Two of the Army boxers at the U.S. championships were Eric Wright, 165, one of six defending champions in the competition, and William Clark Jenkins, 125, boxing in the tournament for the seventh time.

Wright won Monday night, but on the Tuesday afternoon he was upset 51-24 by Ronald Simms of the Air Force. Simms stayed on top of Wright in tired badly in the third round.

Jenkins was to box Tuesday night.

There were a total of 95 bouts on the two cards.

Other defending champions advancing in the afternoon were Albert Guardado, Topeka, Kan., 106; Abayomi Miller, Toledo, Ohio, 132; and Derrell Dixon, Lynnwood, Wash., 201.

Defending champions Lupe Suarez, Tucson, Ariz., 139, and Antonio Tarver, Orlando, Fla., 178, were to fight at night.

Guardado became the first defending champion to advance Tuesday, scoring well with combinations to head and solid body blows for 30-6 win over Sean Johnson of Washington.

By outpointing David Jackson of Seattle 23-12, and Dixon stepped Alan Hillberg of Sioux Falls, S.C., in the second round.

Ravelo's Pan Am gold medal for Cuba was won at 132 pounds in Winnipeg, Manitoba. He said defecting was easy because his father, mother and brother already were in California.

"They arranged everything for me," he said. "I just walked away from my father's house and they got me across the border."

Ravelo had not been allowed to accompany his family to the United States because he was of military age.

He joined the Army in 1971, and in 1972 he served a six-month tour in Vietnam.

The 43-year-old father of six children ranging from 1 to 24 and the grandfather of three is stationed at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. He coaches the base team as well as the service team.

Some students think renaming team, gymnasium in bad taste

LOS ANGELES (AP) — United they fell. Now they stand divided.

Students at Cal State Northridge pulled together after the Jan. 17 earthquake ripped apart their campus. Now they're fighting over the name of the basketball team.

At issue are the Matadors. Many team members, and many fans, think they should be renamed the Quakes. Under the plan, the Matadome, as the gymnasium is called, would become the Quake Center.

But many students think it's tasteless to celebrate an event that killed 61 people, including many near the school, injured more than 10,000 people and caused an estimated $2.0 billion. More than $350 million in damage was recorded on campus, where every building was damaged.

The issue comes up formally before the Senate this week. If the Senate approves, it soon will be taken to a campus-wide vote in an April student government election.

Supporters of the name change say the school should capitalize on the name recognition that comes from the 6.7-magnitude Northridge quake to put the university on the map.

"It would help the campus be recognized nationally. Everyone knows where Northridge is now," said Rodney Lazar, vice president of CSUN Associated Students. "I bet if you came on this campus and asked people, three out of four would know we are the Matadors."

Philadelphia Phillies Dave Hollins hopes to be a better hitter than he was here against the St. Louis Cardinals last season.

Hollins in best shape with right wrist healed

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — The news is not good for those National League pitchers updating their file on Dave Hollins.

"It feels nice to be hitting with two hands again," Hollins said after pounding the ball in batting practice at the Philadelphia Phillies spring training camp.

Playing with a broken bone in his right wrist most of last season, the third baseman hit .273, drove in 93 runs, scored 104 times and played in his first All-Star game.

Now the wrist is fully healed and Hollins is in the best shape of his career.

"I think he's on the verge of a big, big season," teammate Lenny Dykstra said.

Hollins hurt his wrist last May while taking an awkward swing, and aggravated the injury, leading a bad-bounce ground ball in June.

"I took a test at the end of the year," he said. "It was 90 pounds vs. 140 pounds in my left hand on one of those squeezers. And that's my dominant hand, showing up only 90 pounds. So it was weak."

Once the season was over, Hollins began an arduous rehabilitation in his hometown of Orchard Park, N.Y.

"Mainly I had to treat it," he said. "I had nerve damage and surgery and you're not going to build any strength until the nerve settles down because it was suppressing the muscle from firing."

Hollins hired personal trainer Bob Bateson, who treated the wrist with massage and ice.

"After about a month, we started doing light hand grips and wrist curls and worked ourselves up to heavier weights," he said. "When the nerve finally settled down around Christmas time, by the last month (before camp), it really got strong."

Bateson didn't just deal with Hollins' wrist. He put Hollins on a training regimen designed to build endurance and strength.

"We would do weight-training three days a week and agility work two days a week," Hollins said. "He pushed me hard, a lot harder than I could push myself."

During this time, he didn't pick up a bat.

"As long as I was swinging, it wasn't going to heal," he said. "That's why I didn't hit this whole winter. It's the first winter I hadn't hit in the off-season. I took the whole winter off from any kind of hanging on it."

Because of that, Hollins was one of the first Phillies to arrive in Clearwater for spring training. After intensive batting practice, "There was no pain," he said.

Pinch-hitter gives Reds win over Phillies

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Pinch-hitter Adam Hyzdu homered in the 10th inning Tuesday, giving the Cincinnati Reds a wild 14-13 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in a game in which 24 runs were scored in the first three innings.

Cincinnati batted around in each of its first three innings, taking a 13-11 lead. Curt Schilling was chased after two innings, allowing nine runs — eight earned — and 10 hits. Red starter Erik Hanson allowed seven runs and six hits in one inning.

Exhibition baseball

Chuck McElroy gained his second win of the exhibition season, and Jeff Brantley pitched the 10th for his second save.

Mets 5, Marlins (ss) 0

MELBOURNE, Fla. — Pete Smith pitched four shutout innings in his second spring start.

Smith, projected to be the Mets' No. 3 starter, hasn't allowed a run in seven innings. He was acquired from Atlanta for Dave Callagher in an offseason trade.

He gave up hits to the first two Marlins he faced, a single to Chuck Carr and a double to Rick Renteria, but was helped out of a possible jam when Carr was caught stealing.

Royals (ss) 4, Marlins (ss) 3

HAINES CITY, Fla. — Russ McGinnis hit a two-run double with one out in the ninth.

Two errors by Marlins rookie third baseman Alex Aramandem helped the Royals lead the bases before McGinnis doubled down the left-field line to drive in Phil Hilt and Shane Harris.

Royal starter Kevin Appier fielded the Marlins to one infield single and struck out three in three innings.

Indians 15, Royals (ss) 4

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — Jim Thome and Ruben Amaro homered to lead a 21-hit attack.

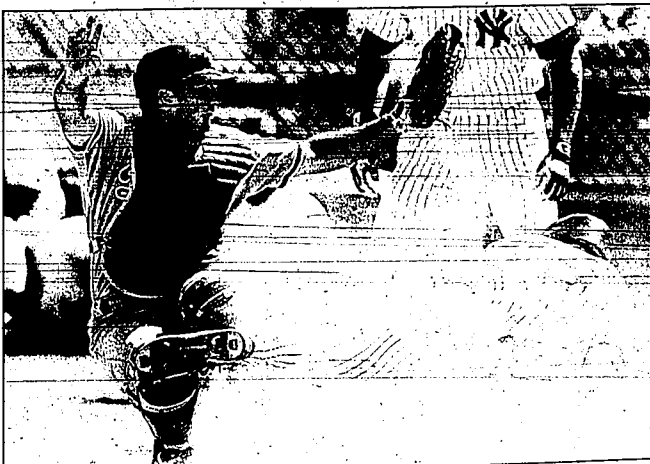

Cleveland scored nine runs in the seventh off Doug Harris and Scott Rusklin. Rookie Hubert Perry's three-run double was the big hit in the inning.

Charles Nagy made his second start of the spring for Cleveland, allowing two runs and three hits in three innings.

Astros 7, Braves 4

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Rookie Orlando Miller had a pair of hits and drove in two runs.

Tony Tarasco, trying to become the Braves starting left fielder in place of the injured Ron Gant, hit a three-run homer and singled. Chipper Jones, another contender, was hitless in two at-bats with a pair of walks. Ryan Klesko was 0-for-1 as a late inning replacement for Fred McGriff.

Braves starter Steve Avery allowed one run and two hits in two innings and struck out two.

Tigers 6, Rangers 5

FORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — Shawn Hare bloomed a two-run single and scored in a four-run seventh.

Doug Davis hit a three-run homer in the seventh for Texas, the Rangers' ninth homer in five games.

White Sox 3, Twins 1

SARASOTA, Fla. — Scott Sanderson pitched two innings of two-hit relief Tuesday in his first appearance for Chicago.

Michael Jordan went 0-for-2 and is 0-for-10 in four spring games. He almost got his first hit on a close play at first in the eighth inning but was "called out" by umpire Matt Winters.

Jordan fouled out in the sixth and made a diving one-handed grab of Gene Larkin's fly in the eighth.

Yankees 3, Dodgers 2

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Robert Eenhoorn hit a 12th-inning bouncer through the legs of first baseman Henry Rodriguez, allowing Jale Leach to score from second.

Billy Masse singled off Drew Hall opening the 12th. Leach ran for Masse and Dave Silvestri sacrificed. Roger McDowell hit Gerald Williams with a pitch, then struck out Russ Davis before Eenhoorn's grounder.

Pirates 4, Cardinals 3

BRADENTON, Fla. — St. Louis errors led to Pittsburgh's final two runs, and non-roster outfielder Darren Reed homered.

Altagracia Pena, who required stitches in his mouth Monday after taking a batting-practice line drive to the jaw, pitched the ninth inning for the save. He is unscathed upon his two appearances since missing the 1993 season with an injured right elbow.

Luiz Alicea hit a solo homer in a two-run sixth inning, but the Pirates tied it at 3-3 in the bottom of the inning on Jeff King's run-scoring single.

Red Sox 8, Expos 5

FORT MYERS, Fla. — Greg Blosser broke a seventh-inning tie with a three-run double.

Mo Vaughn hit his third homer of the spring for the Red Sox, who have won four of five. Jeff McNeely had three hits, including a two-run double, and Carlos Rodriguez and Luis Ortiz added RBI singles.

Shane Andrews hit a two-run homer for the Expos, who have lost three of four.

Blue Jays 7, Orioles 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Rick Holfeld's bases-loaded triple off Lee Smith in the ninth snapped the tie.

Smith, obtained as a free agent during the offseason, has given up five runs in 1 2-3 innings this spring. He entered in the ninth and gave up a walk and two singles before Holfeld, who has never played in the majors, hit a one-out drive to center that Damon Buford dived for and missed.

Chicago's Sax wears cast to heal sore heel

The Associated Press

Chicago second baseman Steve Sax returned home to California on Tuesday, wearing a cast on his left leg to immobilize his sore heel.

Sax, 34, was expected to wear the cast for at least one week. White Sox trainer Herm Schneider said, "The cause of the problem is unclear. Schneider said it could be either a bone spur, bursitis or plantar fasciitis."

The problem developed in January while Sax was running up hills during training. Sax, who hit .235 in 57 games last season, hasn't played in any of the club's spring training games.

Rangers. Roger Pavlik's return to the Texas rotation remains in doubt while his right rotator cuff remains sore.

The injury first was thought to be a bruise, but then was diagnosed as a partial tear. He was expected to begin the season on the disabled list and now general manager Tom Greve says Pavlik could be out the next two months.

"If I miss one start, it'll still put me in the middle of April," Pavlik said. "I'd rather take a little extra time now to be ready for the full season."

Indians. Cleveland designated hitter Eddie Murray was a last-minute scratch from Tuesday's 15-4 victory over Kansas City. Murray has a pulled hamstring, and Hargrove said he would not make the trip to St. Petersburg, Fla., where the Indians play Baltimore on Wednesday.

Reds. Cincinnati first baseman Hal Morris said he has some basic goals for this season: hit the ball and avoid injury.

Morris missed almost half the season last year after he separated his shoulder March 30 in a fight with Cleveland Indians pitcher Jose Mesa during one of the Reds' final spring games.

rather than be on and off the disabled list all season."

Dr. John Conway, the team's orthopedic consultant, said it's unreasonable to expect Pavlik to be ready for the opener.

Joining Pavlik on the sidelines is left-handed reliever Ritchie Moody. A magnetic resonance imaging exam showed he also has a partially torn rotator cuff in his pitching arm.

Morris, 28, came back to play in 101 games and hit .317, his third time over .300 in four years. He hit seven homers and drove in 49 runs.

"My goal is to play at least 155 games," said Morris, who has had three stints on the disabled list over the past two years. "I don't want to take any days off."

Pirates. The Pirates cut their spring-training roster to 50 by reassigning pitchers Jeff McCurry, Urbano Lugo, Darby Farnsworth, and Angelo Escobar and infielder Jose Sandoval to their minor-league camp.

Manager Jim Leyland is worried about getting all 22 of his pitchers enough work.

"There's no sense keeping 50 some people and having some of them get in the way of the players who are trying to get ready for the season," Leyland said.

John Smiley, now with the Reds, stopped by the clubhouse Tuesday to talk to his ex-teammates. Smiley pitched against the Pirates on Sunday.

Red Sox. Pitcher Scott Bankhead will miss a scheduled appearance Wednesday against the Toronto Blue Jays because of a minor pull in his right hamstring.

Red Sox reliever Jeff Russell threw batting practice Tuesday for the first time during spring training. He threw for 10 minutes and later said he felt fine. He has been restricted by a bone spur on his left ankle.

Minor leaguer Shayne Bennett finally arrived in Fort Myers on Tuesday after the longest trip of anyone in the organization. Bennett is from Adelaide, Australia.

Dodgers. Tests showed pitcher Mike Milchin sustained no more serious than a strained forearm, and he may continue workouts.

Rookie Todd Williams has a small ligament tear in his pitching elbow. He is to rest his arm and be re-evaluated in seven to 10 days.

"It was set up for me to take two at-bats and come out, no matter how it felt, and it was all good," he said. "I was scared off my butt two months ago. But the therapists worked hard with me and told me I'd be ready, and they haven't lied to me yet."

When I was sent down last season, it was a humbling experience," he said. "When I got back up, I pitched 10 times better because I was aggressive and I didn't baby myself."

Now, he admits that maybe it all happened too fast — the easy wins, the quick ascension, the endorsement money, the talk of him replacing former Cy Young Award winner Doug Drabek in the Pirates' starting rotation.

"I was just in the majors a couple of months, maybe I grew too fast. I thought I was going to be a big league star too soon," he said. "There was a line in a movie I saw this winter that 'Sometimes a tree grows too fast and you've got to chop off the tree and let it grow again.' That's what I've got to do."

"I'm starting all over again."

Texas Rangers' Jose Canseco struck out during the fifth inning against the Minnesota Twins in Fort Charlotte, Fla., Sunday.

Canseco wants to return as fierce hitter, not pitcher

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Jose Canseco's given up pitching. Heading the ball over the fence is his past, too.

He thinks his back troubles are behind him, and he hopes to regain the form that made his baseball's scariest hitter of the late 1980s.

"He told me on the bench the other day 'I'm feeling so good it's scary,'" Texas manager Kevin Kennedy said. "I told him I speak of him in the same terms. I'm really proud of what he's doing and what he's done this winter. He's having fun with his teammates. I'm happy to see that. He's talking on the bench. He knows he can hit all pitches again."

Over the past two seasons, Canseco has played in 179 games and missed 145. He underwent season-ending elbow surgery last July 9 to repair an injury from his May 29 pitching performance against the Boston Red Sox. Canseco, who had been practicing a fastball and knuckleball, hurt his elbow on the second of 33 pitches.

Three days later, pain was temporarily displaced by embarrassment. Carlos Martinez of the Indians hit a fly ball to Canseco in right field, and Canseco allowed it to bounce off his head and over the fence at Cleveland Stadium.

Canseco spent the winter rehabilitating at his home in Miami, rather than in Texas. He worked with two personal coaches on his entire body, not just his elbow.

"I learned some techniques about running, distributing my weight more evenly," he said. "I just wanted to better myself in each and every area. I didn't want to leave any area untouched."

Sales push Albertson's to No. 4 in U.S.

The Associated Press

—BOISE— Its sales grew 11 percent to $1.3 billion in 1993, helping Albertson's Inc. leapfrog two competitors to become the nation's fourth-largest supermarket chain. The sales increase lifted Albertson's over Winn-Dixie Stores Inc. of Jacksonville, Fla., and A&P of Montvale, N.J., analyst Richard Church of Smith Barney Shearson in New York said Monday.

Kroger, American Stores and Safeway are the nation's three largest food and drug chains.

Part of Albertson's growth last year was due to its acquisition of 74 Jewel Osco food and drug stores. That nearly doubled its stores in Texas, from 65 to 117.

Albertson's spokesman Michael Read said the goal has never been to be the biggest purveyor of groceries, just the best.

"We're trying to offer things people want in a clean and friendly store at the right price," Read said.

The company said its net income was $339.7 million, or $1.34 a share, in fiscal 1993, compared with $269.2 million, or $1.02 a share, the previous year.

Albertson's earned $127 million in the fourth quarter on sales of $3.1 billion. A year earlier, the company earned $105.7 million on $2.7 billion in sales.

Separately, the company's board of directors increased the quarterly dividend from 9 cents to 11 cents. It also authorized management to repurchase up to 2.5 million shares between April 1 and March 31, 1995. Brooks O'Neil, a Piper Jaffray Inc. analyst in Minneapolis, said Albertson's is able to keep growing relative to other supermarket chains because it continually modernizes old stores, shuts marginal stores and builds new ones.

"They closed 19 stores, remodeled 42 stores and opened 39 stores during the year," O'Neil said. "That's the company's commitment to all phases of keeping itself current."

Worker productivity hits 8-year high, labor costs fall as 1993 comes to close

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The productivity of American workers was improving at the fastest rate in eight years as 1993 came to a close, but the cost of their labor was falling at the steepest pace in 10 years.

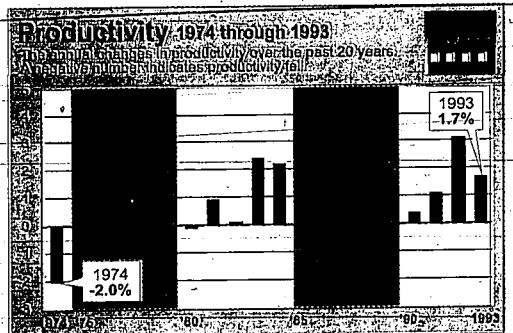

Analysts acknowledged the improvement was coming at the expense of jobs, but contended it will mean greater employment later. And, they added, the lack of inflation means greater buying power now. "There's no unmistakable pain for workers who are not getting employed now," said economist Stephen S. Roach of Morgan Stanley & Co. in New York. "But as companies become more competitive, they will be the big job creators for the U.S. economy."

The Labor Department said nonfarm productivity — output per number of hours worked — shot up a revised 6.1 percent at a seasonally adjusted annual rate from October through December.

It was the best improvement since a 6.9 percent advance in the first three months of 1986. Fourth-quarter productivity originally was reported rising at a 4.2 percent rate.

Increased productivity helps keep prices under control and thus is essential for improved living standards and to make American products more competitive overseas.

Unit labor costs shrank at a 3.1 percent annual rate in the fourth quarter, the largest decline since a 4.8 percent drop in the second quarter of 1983.

Source: U.S. Dept. of Labor

AP/Wm. J. Castella

With job creation so slow, workers generally are unable to bid up their wages and benefits. And since labor typically represents about two-thirds of the cost of a product, the report suggested little inflationary pressure.

Despite a 4 percent productivity gain in third-quarter, productivity for all of 1993 increased just 1.7 percent. That was revised up from 1.6 percent in the government's initial estimate but still was little more than half of the 3.1 percent advance in 1992.

Productivity was held back last year by annualized declines of 1.8 percent in the first quarter and 0.4 percent in the second, when the overall economy slowed from its robust pace in the final three months of 1992.

Former prof pushes computer business

The Associated Press

METALLIC FALLS, Wash. — One day residents of this northeastern Washington state town will log on computers and tap into the world, if Charles Taylor has his way.

Taylor's Omnilink computer training center here already has spawned several home-based computer businesses among the area's displaced cement and timber workers.

Now, Taylor wants residents of this northern Bend Oreille County town of 200 to begin thinking of themselves as an "electronic village" poised to take advantage of the electronic future.

"We have the basis in this end of the county to be a model for how to shift from this old model of extracting trees and minerals and participate in the electronic future," Taylor said recently.

That future doesn't pay well, but Taylor said residents who live in low-cost rural areas would be happy to make the $5 to $6 an hour doing data processing work in their homes.

Taylor is looking for more clerical jobs and hopes to build a regional network of data gatherers to do market research for big companies. Already, some of his students have been hired by his daughter, Shelby Taylor of Palo Alto, Calif., to type and assemble e-commerce materials.

Taylor recently won a $14,991 grant from General Telephone Co. to set up an electronic bulletin board and train Selkirk High School students.

H&R Block eyes credit card market in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — H&R Block plans to issue credit cards through a Utah thrift it is trying to buy.

The company is seeking regulator approval to buy the thrift from Shearson Lehman Brothers for $250,000.

"We are still in the preliminary stages so it is too early to tell how many people in Utah we might eventually employ," said Cotter Cunningham, H&R Block assistant vice president.

Non-bank financial services wanting to issue credit cards have been flocking to Utah to buy charters-in-thrifts. The charters allow companies that under federal law cannot own full-service banks to own a company that has federal deposit insurance. AT&T, Ford and Sears issue credit cards from Utah. The companies issuing credit cards have 2,500 employees in Utah.

Investors dump overvalued stocks, sending market down

NEW YORK — Investors seized on a rise in credit market interest rates as an excuse to sell stocks on Tuesday, pushing share prices broadly lower after two days of advances.

Analysts said jittery market players were mostly selling stocks that ran up in value over past sessions.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 4.50 to 3,851.72 and declining issues outnumbered advances by about 11 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 298.03 million shares at 4:05 p.m., up from 285.58 million in the previous session.

After starting the day higher, bonds turned negative at mid-morning, pushing up interest rates and taking stocks down with them, analysts said.

Many analysts said stocks were looking more to the economy's growing strength than to interest rates for direction now and the sell-off in bonds was little more than an excuse to shed stocks after advances on Friday and Monday.

The markets are nervous about building national pressure on the Fed to raise rates, if the Federal Reserve will tighten credit again, analysts said.

Defense industry shakeout gains impetus

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At a meeting with top defense industry executives several months ago, the Pentagon's acquisition chief, John Deutch, held up charts showing the variety of companies involved in each aspect of the weapons business and how many suppliers would likely be needed in the future. In most categories, only one or two companies were predicted to survive.

"You could hear the gasps at the back of the room," said one Clinton administration official. Now, with the proposed acquisition of the venerable Grumman Corp. by Martin Marietta Corp., the shakeout in the industry is visible for all to see: fewer, larger companies splitting up a smaller pie. Although the restructuring has been gathering momentum for several years, much of its recent impetus has come from Washington, where officials hope that the efficiency that comes with consolidation will let the military get the most from its shrinking budgets.

The Pentagon and Justice Department are already working to remove antitrust roadblocks to defense mergers and acquisitions. And with a five-year budget deal worked out between Congress and the administration, both buyers and sellers in the industry can negotiate with a clearer view of how big the Pentagon budget will be and which weapons are likely to be bought.

"What the Congress and the administration have said is, 'Let the games begin,'" said Robert Paulson, who heads the aerospace practice for the New York-based consulting firm of McKinsey & Co. "This process is not even half over yet. There are many more deals to come."

"My guess is that we're only halfway through this process," said Malcolm Currie, a former chairman of Hughes Aircraft Co. who once directed the Pentagon's research operations.

One way to gauge the intensity of activity is to look at sales prices, which so far have continued to climb relative to profits, sales, and other measurable benchmarks. "Prices have gone up a peg or two over the last year, but from our perspective it is still a buyer's market," said Loni Corp. Chairman and Chief Executive Bernard Schwartz, whose acquisitions have vaulted Loni to the front ranks of defense electronics firms. "What people are realizing is that their worst fears about the future of the business were exaggerated," said Barry Blechman, president of Defense Research Inc. of Washington.

"We're pretty close to where the bottom is as far as defense budgets are concerned; companies have

At the Pentagon this week, Noel Longueur, Deutch's principal deputy, said the administration's review of military plans "made it clear that there will have to be additional downsizing," particularly among small and mid-sized firms that supply prime contractors such as Martin Marietta, Hughes and Lockheed Corp.

Among the prime contractors that have yet to make a major acquisition is Los Angeles-based Northrop Corp., whose future has been in doubt since Congress drastically cut its order for the company's flagship B-2 "stealth" bomber two years ago and canceled several missile programs. Industry officials said Northrop and Grumman negotiated for several months last year about a merger before deciding the match was not ideal.

It was not the first time Northrop got left at the altar. Northrop dropped out of recent silent auctions for International Business Machines Corp.'s Bethesda-based Federal Systems Co. division (which went to Local) and the aircraft and missile divisions of General Dynamics Corp.'s fighter plane operations. It also passed up an opportunity to buy LTV Corp.'s aircraft division, taking instead a minority ownership position behind the Carlyle Group, a Washington investment firm.

Also stirring the early rounds of mergers and acquisitions have been a number of big companies such as Raytheon Co., Boeing Co., Rockwell International Corp., AlliedSignal Inc. and TRW Inc., which traditionally divided their attention between defense and nondefense work. Executives of these firms have been in recent years to invest in their nondefense businesses rather than take the riskier course of trying to survive as a major Pentagon contractor.

Others, such as Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp., General Electric Co., Magnavox Electronics Systems Co. and Honeywell Inc., sold off divisions or exited the industry completely.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"The loss of wealth is loss of dirt. As losses in all times assert; The happy man's without a shirt." - John Heywood.

"How did they make the game on board 15?" asked a team player. "Both finessees were outside for me." "It was cold for 10 tricks," was the reply. "Declarer made the game without ever taking a finesse." "I was told declarer took dummy's club king, drew trumps and tied the diamond finesse. It lost to East's King and East had an easy exit in clubs or diamonds. Dummy's diamond ace took East's 10, and South led a low heart to his nine for another losing finesse. He could not avoid the loss of two more heart tricks, and the game went one down." The successful declarer put little faith in finessees and played as if the diamond queen were not in dummy. He won dummy's club king, drew trumps and then cashed two high clubs, discarding dummy's low diamond. He led a diamond to dummy and instead of finessing, he won the ace and exited with the diamond queen. East won and had no good choices. If he led a minor, South would enjoy a ruff and shift. And if East broke the heart suit, South would score a heart winner.

The "unlucky" South blamed his loss on the failure of two finessees. In reality, he played the hand poorly. Had the diamond finesse worked, he would have gained nothing. He would still have had to break the heart suit himself, losing three tricks in the process.
