Interim rules stall water pact

By Drew DeSilver

Times-News writer

BOISE — A group of water users, lawyers and legislators seeking to avert a shutdown of groundwater pumpers in southern Idaho is getting closer to an agreement, two key lawmakers reported Tuesday.

But Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, and Rep. Golden Linford, R-Rexburg, said the negotiators have yet to agree on interim rules for managing surface water and groundwater in the Snake River Plain Aquifer as one interconnected system.

"That's probably the most contentious, difficult part of the agreement," Noh said.

Such interim rules would be the heart of any pact to avoid a mass shutdown of groundwater pumps in the aquifer. The rules would, among other things, govern what would happen in the event a "call" for water — that is, a formal request that water be distributed strictly according to priority of right

Andrus suffers 1st veto

The Associated Press

BOISE — Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus lost his first veto to the Republican-controlled Legislature in 14 sessions on Tuesday.

The occasion was legislative re-enactment of a tax break for the alcohol fuel industry that Andrus had fought for years. The 24-11 Senate vote, a day after the House voted to override by an even larger margin, broke a string of 104 straight vetoes that had withstood GOP challenges.

"It was bound to happen," Andrus said just minutes after the override. "It's amazing what money will do in politics."

"We feel confident that, out of all this, there will be an agreement struck," Linford said. "Of course, it isn't going to be easy."

Both lawmakers, who chair the House and Senate natural-resources committees, said the Legislature will not end its 1994 session without resolving the water-management dilemma.

But they conceded that any deal reached in the next week or so would, of necessity, be a short-term fix, meant to buy time while comprehensive rules for managing surface water and groundwater together, or conjunctively, are negotiated.

"The long-term policy issues will be argued in the (Snake River Basin) adjudication and in the legislative process," Noh said.

Earlier this year, the Idaho Supreme Court effectively ordered the Water Resources Department to manage surface water and groundwater conjunctively.

Since most groundwater pumpers have relatively new water rights, and the connection between pumping and spring flows is not

Trooper finds money, guns in car driven by illegal alien

By Phil Sahn

Times-News writer

HOLLISTER — An illegal alien hauling six guns — including a semiautomatic Chinese rifle and what appeared to be a fully automatic weapon — should have checked the license plates on his car.

His expired Washington plates caught an Idaho State Police officer's eye Tuesday north of Hollister.

When Cpl. Sydney Edwards pulled the car over and searched it, he found six guns under the back seat. He also learned that the driver was carrying about $800 in cash.

"He consented to the search," Edwards said.

The driver, 21-year-old Sergio Ceballos of Mexico, did not speak English, so Edwards said he gave him a card, written in Spanish, asking for permission to search the car. When the man consented, Edwards found the guns and money, he said.

The man was driving on Highway 93 toward Jackpot, coming from Oregon, Edwards said. He pulled him over shortly before noon.

The man had not been charged as of Tuesday afternoon. Twin Falls County Prosecuting Attorney G. Richard Bevan said that possession of firearms by an illegal alien is a federal felony. Bevan also said the man had been convicted of trying to sell marijuana in Arizona.

Because he is a convicted felon, it is against Idaho law for him to possess guns, Bevan said. The man is scheduled to be arraigned today, and Bevan said he hopes to turn the case over to federal prosecutors.

Weapons taken in the arrest include a Chinese SKS semiautomatic assault rifle with bayonet, 30-caliber M-2 carbine, 9 mm Intratec Luger handgun, 9 mm Walther semiautomatic pistol, Glock 9 mm handgun, and 7.65 mm FEG Hungary

Want E911 service? Move to Acequia

RUPERT — Minidoka County has answered the call for an "enhanced" 911 emergency system — at no extra cost to telephone customers — while four other counties remain on hold.

Dispatchers at the law enforcement building in Rupert started using a computer system Tuesday to gain crucial information on emergency callers.

Without the computer, the only source of information for dispatchers was the caller, who sometimes was panicked or unable to speak, said Carol Andrew, Minidoka County Sheriff's Department dispatcher.

Now, the caller's address flashes on the screen the moment a dispatcher picks up the receiver. After the system has been in operation awhile, Andrew will be able to determine whether a caller is deaf, has asthma or has other special medical problems.

"The only thing it doesn't give me is a house color," Andrew said.

1st on Spielberg's list: Filmmaking vacation; Nazi survivors hopeful

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Now that Steven Spielberg finally got his Academy Award, he's in a position to do anything. So he'll do nothing.

The director of Monday's top Oscar winner, "Schindler's List," said he'll take a sabbatical, hang out with his family and contemplate his next movie project.

"The only way I'll top it is by producing a year off," Spielberg said after the Oscar ceremony. "And that'll be the biggest production yet, I think."

In Israel, meanwhile, Israelis saved by German businessman Oskar Schindler voiced hope Tuesday that the seven Oreviewers and increase world awareness of the Holocaust.

Survivor Jonathan Dresner said the movie did a great thing by "raising, reviving and renewing awareness of the Holocaust."

"So if the prize for this is the Oscar, I can only be very happy," Dresner said.

"Speaking as a Holocaust survivor, I can tell you that we are terribly afraid and aware that after our generation disappears the awareness of the Holocaust will be nothing but two lines in history books," he said.

Although Spielberg's production company has a busy slate with upcoming feature-length versions of the "Fifties," "Capote," and "The Little Rascals," the director won't be stepping behind the camera anytime soon.

Max, Sasha, Sawyer and Theo — their five children and stepchildren.

Money is not an issue for the 46-year-old filmmaker, who has directed the blockbusters "Jaws," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," the "Indiana Jones" trilogy and "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial."

Because he enjoys a huge share of his films' profits, he's worth an estimated $300 million.

His share of the "Schindler's List" earnings will be donated to Holocaust causes.

"Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment is one of the busiest production companies in Hollywood. With his his have come a fair share of bombs, though, including the animated movie "We're Back: A Dinosaur's Story" and the television series "The Quest DSV."

Interest rates will rise again

Knight-Ridder News Service

If you're going to buy a house, a car, a boat, or take out a home equity loan, look in your rate now.

"That's what I did," said David Sowerby, chief economist for Beacon Investment Co. in Ann Arbor, Mich. "I sold my house, and I've locked in a mortgage because I'm on the verge of buying another house."

That's because for the second time this year, the Federal Reserve has increased short-term interest rates as a preemptive move to keep inflation rates in tow.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan did not say Tuesday by how much his organization intended to raise short-term rates. However, the federal funds rate — the rate for overnight loans between banks and a pivotal short-term rate — rose a quarter of a percentage point after the announcement, to 3.5 percent.

Inflation has not been a problem yet, churning at an average annual rate of about 3 percent.

As the economy continues to build, speculation grows that inflation will rise dramatically. To prevent that, the Federal Reserve increased short-term interest rates by a quarter of a percentage point Feb. 4.

But mortgage rates have risen anyway. In the Detroit area, for instance, thirty-year fixed mortgage rates have risen from 6.875 percent to 7.625 percent, said Tom Ricketts, chairman and president of Troy, Mich.-based Standard Federal Bank.

Sowerby said he doesn't believe the Fed's move Tuesday will trigger steep increases in consumer loan rates. Indeed, there is reason to believe that Wall Street has already anticipated the Fed's move.

Sowerby said, however, that the latest increase is but one in a series of short-term interest rate increases expected from the Federal Reserve in the next 18 months.

Economists disagree on how far the Fed will go, and how inflated the economy will get.

"I think the economy is strong," said Jack Barnd, director of business and banking analysis for Detroit-based NBD Bancorp. "But remember, we are in the beginning of the fourth year of economic expansion."

Democrat abandoned Andrus to provide the 23 Republicans the 24th vote they needed for the two-thirds majority to enact the bill over his objections.

Kinghorn, the former state president of the AFL-CIO who served in the Senate during the mid-1970s, was sitting in for his sister, state Sen. Mary Lloyd, while she was away.

Although Lloyd initially assured Democratic leaders her substitute would support the governor, she reportedly advised Kinghorn by telephone late Monday that he could vote his conscience.

"It was a good bill, I thought. Otherwise I wouldn't have voted for it," said Kinghorn.

"I think I better let it go at that. But I don't want anyone to think I was a weakening of the Democratic Caucus. It had nothing to do with partisan politics. It was a one-time thing."

Small-business owners receive earful on Clinton health plan

Newsway

WASHINGTON — Calvin Kleinman went to the White House Tuesday to learn more about national health care. But the businessman came away disappointed and a bit resentful at having to sit through what he called President Clinton's "dog-and-pony show."

"It was a great sell," said Kleinman, who owns Bennett X-Ray Technica in Copiely, N.Y., and who still had mixed feelings about Clinton's plan after the meeting.

"It got the president's point across. I was hoping we were going to get into more meat and potatoes," Kleinman said. "I was hoping for some hand-picked small entrepreneurs from around the United States were brought to the White House Tuesday to counter opposition to Clinton's health plan from small business groups. Business lobbies oppose Clinton's requirement that companies provide health insurance, saying it would lead to massive job losses and bankruptcies. Kleinman gives his 235 employees a choice of three health plans and he pays almost the entire premiums for them. His workers make only a small monthly contribution for family coverage.

While he sat in the audience, 13 business owners, whom the administration described as "heroes," were on stage chronicling stories of either their willingness to pay for insurance despite escalating premiums or tales of difficulty they have had in getting or maintaining affordable policies. Some said they could not afford insurance at all.

Elaine Stone, owner of American Aviation International Corp. in New York City, an exporter of aviation parts and hardware, was one of the president's positive examples.

"I strongly feel we should have universal health care operating via the workplace for everyone," said Stone, who insures her 21 employees and takes the risk of paying the first $5,000 of each employee's yearly claims. It brings down her company's health premiums.

Perhaps the toughest single health care battle the administration will wage this spring is over whether the government should require businesses to provide and pay for health insurance for their workers.

Stone said she pays about 15 percent of her payroll on medical costs. She said her costs would go down under Clinton's plan because it would cap employer contributions at 7.9 percent of payroll.

Kleinman said he would probably see his costs either decrease or remain the same.

Those opposed to such mandates fear government might eventually set aside the cap. They also object to government intruding in their businesses.

The $90,000 system was built and funded by Project Mutual Telephone Cooperative Association Inc.

The company built the system as a service for its customers, many of whom own part of the cooperative, said Charlie Creason, general manager. The company serves residents of Minidoka County, except Heyburn, and parts of Jerome, Blaine, Cassia and Lincoln counties.

Several years ago Project Mutual convinced Minidoka County commissioners to reconsider a local system rather than joining a regional effort.

"It would be cheaper and faster if it were done here at home," Creason said.

Voters in Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls counties approved a measure November 1990 to pay a $1 monthly surcharge on their telephone bills, which would fund the installation of an E911 system in their counties.

Most residents in those counties still don't have enhanced 911 service as the four counties have four other where to place the dispatch center and argued in court over whether a regional system would be legal.

Meanwhile, Project Mutual upgraded the two emergency telephone lines at the last county building last year. Minidoka commissioners spent about $9,000 to lease the system from the company, Creason said.

The system benefits police by providing more information in dangerous situations, Sheriff Paul Fries said.

Cigarette tax eyed for funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $1.25-a-pack increase in the cigarette tax was approved by a House subcommittee Tuesday to finance health reform, including subsidies to help small businesses insure their employees.

But the fate of the substitute bill patched together by Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif., remained in doubt. A-though Stark's Ways and Means health subcommittee rejected two alternative Republican reform plans, he appeared shy of the six votes needed to carry his plan.

Stark's bill would expand Medicare to cover the uninsured and require all employers to help buy insurance for workers and their families by 1997. Firms with more than 100 workers would have to provide coverage by 1995.

fully understood, many lawmakers fear a call by a holder of a senior water right at a spring could force hundreds or thousands of pumps to shut down.

Those fears have tended to cluster around the Hagerman area, water users at the center of the Supreme Court ruling, Alvin and Tim Musser and their lessee, "Butch" Morris. But many other water users — including a couple dozen in the Hagerman area and the entire Twin Falls Canal Co. — are situated similarly to the Musser, and any of them can make a call if they do not receive all the water they're entitled to.

While talks on interim rules continue, Noh and Linford said, the "working group" has agreed on several elements of a water-management plan.

One key element is a recharge project for the west end of the Snake River aquifer, along the lines of the "Campbell plan" unveiled two weeks ago.

The project would divert up to 200,000 acre-feet of water each spring from the Snake River at Milner Dam and run it through the North Side Canal Co.'s system. Later in the summer, a like amount of surplus water from the Upper Snake water bank would be sent down river through Idaho-Power's turbines at Milner as compensation.

Idaho taxpayers would buy that surplus water, perhaps with the assistance of the federal Bureau of Reclamation. Noh estimated it would cost less than $1 million.

The recharge project would last two years and begin next year, he said, although a small pilot project might be done this year.

The working group has also agreed on a two-year moratorium on all new diversions in the Snake River basin.

above King Hill, with exceptions only for certain domestic, commercial, industrial and municipal diversions.

An existing moratorium on new agricultural, municipal, commercial and industrial diversions imposed by Water Resources in May 1992 during the recent drought, covers about two-thirds of the state.

The working group has reached general consensus on several other actions, including:

- A voluntary 5 percent reduction in groundwater pumping in all counties overlying the aquifer.
- Legislation requiring meters on all groundwater pumps. Such a bill already has passed the Senate and is up for hearing this afternoon in Linford's committee.
- An agreement by the Twin Falls and North Side canal companies not to make any calls for two years.
- Attempting to salvage the "presumption" and "accomplished transfer" statutes, two 1980s-era laws declared unconstitutional by 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbut last year. The laws attempted to protect certain irrigators whose water-use did not conform to their written permits, from losing their water-rights during the Snake River Basin Adjudication.
- A bill rewriting the two statutes, as well as making numerous other changes in the laws governing the adjudication, is scheduled to be heard in Linford's committee this Friday.

Christopher sees Korea as critical

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diplomatic efforts to end the nuclear standoff with North Korea have reached a critical point, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Tuesday. The administration left open the possibility of eventual military action.

Christopher

North Korea called the U.S. South Korean decision to deploy Patriot missiles a "declaration of war," but Clinton administration officials emphasized they prefer to gradually increase the pressure without resorting to force.

It remained unclear when, and even whether, the Clinton administration would press for U.N. economic sanctions against North Korea. China cautioned that sanctions could prove counterproductive, although it did not explicitly reject the idea.

"Sanctions will be an option soon to be considered," Christopher told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, unless the communist North Korean government changes course and allows full U.N.-sponsored inspection of its nuclear facilities.

A pre-emptive U.S. military

S. Korea seeks China's help - B5

strike against North Korea's nuclear complex, centered north of the capital at Yongbyon, appears to be among the least likely options, but Christopher suggested Washington was prepared to turn up the heat.

"Our diplomacy has reached a critical point," Christopher said. "We have made it clear to North Korea that it must become a responsible member of the international community or that community will have no choice but to pursue other options. These other options include progressively stronger measures."

North Korea maintains that its nuclear program is entirely peaceful, but the United States and others contend it is being used to manufacture nuclear weapons.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Dennis Boff said the formal go-ahead for shipment of Patriot missiles and an air-defense battalion to operate them in South Korea was given Monday. He said it would take four to six weeks for the missiles and the battalion to reach South Korea, set up and begin operations.

Boff said the Patriots are a newer version of those used in the Persian Gulf War in 1991.

Clinton eyes tax on gambling places

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is eyeing a new tax on gambling establishments — from racetracks and riverboats to Las Vegas casinos — to help finance a $15 billion overhaul of the welfare system.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Monday that the new tax would include gaming enterprises run by American Indian tribes but that state lotteries would be exempt.

But the administration's welfare reform task force has yet to settle on the size of such a tax, and no decisions on the financing strategy are final, the official said.

White House Communications Director Mark Gearan refused to confirm the report Tuesday, although he said, "There is a whole range of topics we're talking about."

He said President Clinton would meet with senior advisers, including some Cabinet officials, to get a briefing on their progress on welfare reform. "This is an informational meeting," Gearan said. "This is not a decision-making meeting."

The Wall Street Journal, however, reported Monday that the task force was considering a 4 percent tax on net gambling revenues — the money left over after payments are made to winners and state coffers. The Journal said such a levy would raise $4 billion over five years.

Clinton raised expectations for sweeping reform by promising during his campaign to "end welfare as we know it" and to require all able-bodied recipients to take a job after two years on welfare.

His aides say the White House will unveil a plan in April to reform Aid to Families with Dependent Children, a federal-state welfare program that supports 5 million families.

Casino industry sources and supporters were quick to denounce any talk of a new tax on gambling revenues.

"The gambling industry should not be singled out because it's a healthy industry, because it is doing well. It should not be pillaged for a particular reform," said Susan McCue, a spokeswoman for Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev.

A horse-industry expert warned that some struggling racetracks, with their high overhead costs, could go under if the administration agrees to the new levy.

Many of the industry's employees are low-skilled workers — people who could end up on welfare if their track is forced to shut down, said the industry official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Congress hears Social Security complaints

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Americans may accidentally give up benefits, just because they don't understand the notices that Social Security sends them, Congress was told Tuesday.

Ethel Zelenka, an attorney for the National Senior Citizens Law Center, said Social Security notices are written in such complex and archaic language that even experienced advocates find them hard to decipher.

As a result, some recipients may inadvertently give up important rights — such as the right to appeal a decision by the agency — Zelenka said in prepared testimony for the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security.

According to June Gibbs Brown, the inspector general at the Department of Health and Human Services, only 75 percent of Social Security customers find agency mail easy or very easy to understand.

Contents of the 240 million notices mailed by the agency each year provide routine information, such as the amount of a recipient's annual cost-of-living adjustment, and explain more complex matters such as decisions on claims for disability benefits.

Many notices require the recipient to contact Social Security within a specific time in order to file an appeal or take other action.

In recent years, Social Security has tried to improve the quality of its mail by requiring notices be written at a sixth-grade reading level, contain no agency jargon, and have an average sentence length of 15 to 20 words.

$1.25 hike on cigarettes approved by House panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $1.25-a-pack increase in the cigarette tax was approved by a House subcommittee Tuesday to finance health reform, including subsidies to help small businesses insure their employees.

But the fate of the substitute bill pitched together by Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif., remained in doubt. Although Stark's Ways and Means health subcommittee was expected to reject Republican versions of health reform, he appeared shy of the six votes needed to carry his plan.

Stark's bill would expand Medicare to cover the uninsured and require all employers to help pay insurance for workers and their families by 1997. Firms with more than 100 workers would have to provide coverage by 1995.

Meanwhile, new reform ideas floated by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, were stealing attention from the Ways and Means subcommittee.

The plan drafted by Dingell's staff also would require employers to buy coverage for workers. But it would soften the sting by letting businesses with 10 or fewer employees pay a payroll tax of just 1 percent to 2 percent to cover their workers.

There would also be subsidies for small firms with low average wages and no more than 75 workers. Companies with more than 1,000 workers would pay a 1 percent payroll tax, but could self-insure. Under Dingell's draft, workers would pay more health costs out of their own pockets, and President Clinton's mandatory insurance purchasing alliances would be made voluntary.

Both the Clinton plan and the original Stark proposal called for a 75-cent increase in the 24-cent federal tax on cigarettes to raise $10 billion a year.

Woody Woodpecker animator dies at 93

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Animator Walter Lantz, who created the conniving Woody Woodpecker cartoon character after a woodpecker disrupted his honeymoon in the 1940s, died Tuesday. He was 93.

Lantz was given an honorary Academy Award in 1978 "for bringing joy and laughter to every part of the world through his unique animated motion pictures."

His cartoon stable also included Andy Panda, Chilly Billy, Smokey Bear, Charlie Beary and Oswald Rabbit. In 1930, he made animation history by producing the first Technicolor cartoon — the five-minute opening sequence of "The King of Jazz."

His wife, Gracie, who helped conceive Woody Woodpecker and gave the bird its contemptuous "Heh-heh-heh-HEHHHH-heh" laugh, died in

U.S. grants visas to HIV patients for Gay Games

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration will allow foreigners with the virus that causes AIDS to attend the Gay Games in New York in June.

Attorney General Janet Reno approved a waiver Tuesday to the rule barring people with the AIDS virus from entering the United States.

Visas granted under the waiver will allow stays of up to 10 days. The Gay Games take eight days. Two additional days were allotted for travel.

Reno acted after the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention advised her there was no public health reason to prohibit the brief stay and the Department of Health and Human Services determined that visits up to 90 days would not harm public health.

Between 10,000 and 15,000 athletes and spectators from more than 40 countries are expected to attend the Gay Games, from June 18-25, according to a State Department cable obtained by The Associated Press last month. The games overlap related events that week, including the 16th annual International Lesbian and Gay Association world conference and Stonewall 25, a celebration of the 25th anniversary of an uprising at the Stonewall Inn, a gay bar in the Greenwich Village section of New York.

"Short-term visits present minimal risk," said Immigration Commissioner Doris Meissner, who recommended the waiver on the basis of the HHS determination. Waivers have been used in the past to permit HIV-infected foreigners to attend academic and scientific conferences, obtain medical treatment, visit close family members and complete temporary business.

The waiver was first sought in January by Dr. Philip Lee, assistant secretary of health.

Woody was inspired by a woodpecker that disturbed the Lantzes' honeymoon at California's Lake June in the early 1940s. Mrs. Lantz suggested her husband create an animated character based on the bird.

The late Mel Blanc was among a flock of actors that became the voices of Bugs Bunny and other Warner Bros. characters in the late 1940s.

Tax on gambling to reform welfare may be good idea

Give this much credit to the Clinton crowd: It has imaginative ideas about separating taxpayers from their money.

The latest administration idea may be a good one. It's a proposal to pay for welfare reform by taxing the revenue of gambling enterprises. The Wall Street Journal reports that a 4 percent tax on gambling's net revenue would raise $4 billion over five years.

Any new tax should be approached warily. Private money is usually best left in private pockets. But welfare reform is an important project, and taxing gambling to pay for it is at least worth talking about.

The notorious outlaw Willie Sutton was once asked why he robbed banks. "That's where the money is," he replied. The Clinton administration is at least as smart as Sutton. It recognizes that gambling is a growing sector of the American economy — an industry whose whole purpose is to transfer money — with all that cash moving from hand to hand, skimming a little for the government is simple.

The idea even contains a certain moral justice. Despite its popularity, gambling is still widely regarded as a social corrosive. Harnessing some of its profits to improve poor people's lives is appealing.

And welfare reform will probably require a revenue source. A new book by Christopher Jencks of Northwestern University states: "The reason welfare reform never quite works is simple. Welfare is the cheapest system yet devised for taking care of children whose parents do not live together and whose mothers have few job skills."

Although President Clinton has promised to end welfare as we know it, no one has yet proposed an alternative that does not bring new costs. Forcing welfare moms to go to work might make America a better place, but it wouldn't save money. Providing those moms with training, supervision and child care would cost twice what we spend on them now, according to Jencks.

But cost alone should not deter Clinton from trying to reform the system. If reforming welfare helps families grow toward self-sufficiency, and the personal and social benefits that self-sufficiency brings, then the money will have been well-spent.

Today, with the shape of reform still unknown, is too soon to say whether a gambling tax is the best way to pay for it. But the idea certainly deserves a place in the debate.

House tries to balance popularity, good sense with crime bill version

As the House wrestles with its version of the crime bill, it is trying to strike a balance between what is popular and what makes sense. It has an opportunity to improve on what the Senate did late last year when it passed a $22 billion monster measure aimed at cracking down on lawbreakers. The Senate bill put bumper-sticker simplicity way ahead of what police and prosecutors think would actually help them reduce crime.

We'll see if the House does better. A useful guide to the proceedings was furnished last month, when the Consortium of Social Science Associations held a forum here to discuss "A Menaced Society: Is the Crime Bill the Answer?"

Freda Adler of Rutgers, the president-elect of the American Society of Criminology, who moderated the discussion, sounded the keynote for the day. "The ideology," she said, "is that tough is smart. That ideology has not been borne out by research."

The subsequent discussion focused on three key elements of the crime bill — additional manpower for community policing; boot camps for young, non-violent offenders; and the "three-strikes-and-you're-out" proposal for lifetime imprisonment of repeat criminals.

In shorthand — my language, not theirs — the judgment is that the first makes a lot of sense, the second is an unproven remedy, and the third is pretty dumb.

Hubert Williams, the former Newark, N.J., police chief who now heads the Police Foundation, said the proposal for expanded community policing appears to be a very promising approach — if cities and police departments are prepared to do their part.

He noted, with proper skepticism, that President Clinton's much-ballyhooed promise to put 100,000 more police on the streets is not all it's cracked up to be. The Clinton bill would make that number available to cities and states — but only if they are prepared to pick up the costs after declining annual federal subsidies expire in five years.

David S. Broder

Even if all 100,000 of them were trained and hired, Williams pointed out, that would put only 20,000 additional cops on the streets of America at any time, given the 24-hour scheduling demands and the administrative overhead in all departments.

Williams said that despite conventional wisdom, professional studies show that neither additional patrol cars nor beat-walking cops in themselves reduce or prevent crime. Policemen on the beat do give assurance to citizens. But what appears to produce results that justify that increased confidence is the reorganization of police departments from paramilitary units into neighborhood assistance organizations — the approach described as "community policing."

It is when police are given the freedom and responsibility to work with the people in a neighborhood in an "interactive, non-threatening way," that the total resources of the area can be mobilized for the fight against crime.

The pending crime bills' legislation's emphasis on that approach is probably its most positive element.

They also subsidize and encourage use of "boot camps" for young offenders — tough physical and mental discipline applied for a short time in hopes it will "straighten them out" before they get committed to a life outside the law. To summarize a mass of studies presented by Doris Mackenzie of the University of Maryland, it's just plain uncertain whether boot camps "work" any better than conventional jails. They are more trying, but the studies suggest that no one should assume they are a panacea.

The final big piece of the crime bills — a prison-building program to accommodate the increase in inmates that would follow the imposition of mandatory, lifetime sentences for perpetrators of three violent crimes — is almost certainly the most wasteful and misguided approach. "Three-strikes-and-you're-out" is wildly popular, governors are falling over each other to sign such laws and Clinton has endorsed the idea — with some limitations on the category of crimes to be covered.

Jerome Skolnick of the University of California-Berkeley, who is the current president of the Society of Criminology, says it may satisfy society's desire for retribution to "lock 'em up and throw away the key," but it almost certainly will not do what people say they want done — reduce their risk of being victims of random violence.

Violent crimes are committed disproportionately by young men between 13 and 23, Skolnick pointed out. The episodes peak at about age 17 and diminish sharply as the criminals enter their 30s. Most of the repeat offenders commit far more violent crimes than they are arrested for.

"It follows," Skolnick said, "that if we jail them for life after their third conviction, we will get them in the twilight of their careers, and other young offenders will take their place."

Instead of keeping these aging ex-marauders in jail for life in what Skolnick called "the most expensive, taxpayer-supported middle-age and old-age (housing and medical care) entitlement program in the history of the world ... we need to concentrate on the young cohorts who are just going into their criminal careers."

That means curbing and treating the alcohol and drug abuse that is a factor in at least half the violent assaults, reducing their easy access to guns — and selectively throwing the book at the few real psychopaths among them.

That's not a bumper-sticker solution. But it makes sense.

David S. Broder writes for the Washington Post.

Dilettantes' 'Annie' wonderful

Theater lovers of the Magic Valley flocked to the College of Southern Idaho auditorium Friday night to welcome back "Annie," that brash, bright-eyed, optimistic little red-headed orphan who enchanted local audiences 10 years ago.

Yes, Jodie Silver who played Annie then was back, but she was sitting in the audience watching Natalie Hobbs, a new, equally talented Annie, capture the heart of Tim Latham, who reprised his role as scruffy billionaire Daddy Warbucks, and beautiful and talented Kassandra Biggers, "Grace," who plays Annie's ally.

Lor' Van Rinsum was terrific as tyrannical, always tipsy Miss Hannigan who was back too, harassing Annie and 12 other adorable orphans who brought the house down with their high-kicking chorus line. Michael Rowe, "Rooster," and Tavin Lyn Gilbert, "Lily," in their roles as a pair of sleazy con-artists performed a real show stopper with Miss Hannigan about their search for Easy Street.

A veteran of 36 years with the Dilettantes, Art Frantz played a convincing Franklin Delano Roosevelt heading a cabinet composed of Dilettante "past presidents," who joined Annie in a rousing chorus of "Tomorrow" that promised an end to the depression and a return of optimism.

For an entertaining evening, please join Annie and her friends Thursday, Friday or Saturday night. MARY COOK Twin Falls Times-News items offer three new cases of outrage on the part of ranchers who feed their livestock on public lands at considerable expense and inconvenience to all the taxpayers who lack those feed-grazing permits. First, we have Joseph E. Tugaw, the veterinarian from Utah who now holds a permit to run livestock in the South Hills at welfare rates. Tugaw bristles in defense of our Idaho senators, the Tweedle-Dee and Tweedle-Dum of Craig and Kemphorne who consistently take the stockman's campaign money and obediently serve his interests. There are other citizens with valid interests, Mr. Tugaw, and they outnumber the welfare ranchers 10,000 to 1. Let us hope and pray that they get out and vote when we have another senatorial election.

Stories show rancher hypocrisy

And the Cassia County commissioners are up in arms in support of the Wild Rose Grazing Association. That group of five Oakley-area stockmen faces a long-overdue reduction in their permitted use of the Cassia Division of the Sawtooth National Forest. This reduction, a mere 15 percent, is based on a long and documented history of insolent neglect and abuse of the congressional intent of the Forest Service grazing permits. The ranchers, who normally take refuge in claims of impending poverty, say this 15 percent cut could cost them $8 million. So how many millions would this poor-mouse association make off of 100 percent of their grazing quota?

Finally, we have the Ingram Ranch near Challis, where Gary Ingram, in a hearing room packed with ranchers and their supporters said, "I have to take care of my land. That's what feeds my family." A noble sentiment, true. But it's also true that Boise State geologist finds the Ingram ranch has two hydro plants that made a quarter of a million dollars in 1992. And the whole spread, including two lighted tennis courts, is being offered for sale at $4.35 million.

And that, folks, is the hardship case that caused our State and Board to reverse a decision to lease some land to the Hailey architect who planned to fence a part of it and see how the watershed fared without heavy grazing.

We all know the romantic tales of How the West Was Won. What we need now is more public attention to some simple truths. And the unvarnished truth is that the man in the street is being skinned alive by those who use and abuse his public lands.

Candidate clarifies position

I'd like to make a couple of comments on our interview.

Your reporter's description of my proposal of property tax relief as "small" is incorrect. I urged Speaker Simpson to present his bill for approximately $70 million this year and $70 million next year, and I fully support it. This would be the largest tax relief bill in Idaho's history and would not increase any other taxes.

I started by proposing $30 million of this some six months ago. I now favor raising it to $70 million because of the incredibly large increase in state tax revenues.

There are other proposals to shift the load to other taxes with net tax increases of some $20 million. I oppose such schemes.

On the water matter, while I do agree with the court's reiteration (7) of "first in time, first in right," I emphasized to you and Mr. Nominating that everyone concerned should respond in a deliberate, cooperative manner.

I believe that a mitigation plan can work this problem out without creating the chaos which would result from shutting some operations down.

Thank you for your courtesy in printing my view. PHIL BATT Boise

Molester has bad history

To Scott Roberts and Judge Burdick: I attended a Kidgie Komi class from sansci Tedd (Robert Tedd) more than 20 years ago. Our class went to the College of Southern Idaho for tournaments and possible belt promotions. I was a white belt, 12 or 13 years of age at that time. I was sitting outside the auditorium meditating before my entry, when Eugene Starr, S. gave me a roundhouse kick in the side of my head. He was with about 30 of his own students as he informed me, "Go in there and get Tedd; we will find out who is the best right now."

I informed Robert Tedd and he made a report to the security guards of the college. Then with Starr's goading and calling Tedd a coward, our sansci just plain out-wised the predators in meekness.

It was promised to be killed from Gene Starr for this, but yet I still live. As Robert Tedd came out of the building, he took just two of his best students with him; one to his left and one at his right side. I followed at a cowardly distance to watch the show, hoping and praying for justice or revenge.

But instead, I got more than Starr bargained for as my teacher and sansci Robert Tedd responded to the call. Starr and all of his men fled fast on their feet. Yet to this day, I still didn't get my yellow belt, but Starr kicked me when I was down, yet he was promoted to Yellow Belt.

Starr is like unto a big dog with a growl of the wolf, with the bite of a mouse. He continually preys upon the weak and yet he only kicks them when they are down. Ancient Chinese says: "What comes around, goes around."

Starr, your "kicking-when-they're-down" syndrome days are over. I'll see you soon in Boise. Here is a free lesson to you from me: "If you think and believe that to meek is to be weak, then I challenge you to be meek for just one week." And one glowing comment I leave you this day, only 21 years later, "Does it hurt?"

We all know that here in Idaho our courts and government systems are messed up, for Idaho worships money more than its love for our children.

Well, Starr, I pray you repent but if you don't, I'll see you in Boise and I'll pay you your just reward, then pray for you.

Chicago gripes about lousy mail delivery

CHICAGO (AP) — The check is in the mail, but will it be delivered? That's the question these days in Chicago, where old, undelivered mail has turned up in mail trucks, back rooms of post offices — even a burning heap under a viaduct.

With the list of postal horror stories growing, two U.S. senators brought the head of the Postal Service to town Monday to address problems that have done what neither snow, nor rain, nor heat, nor gloom of night could do.

"I haven't gotten any mail in seven months!" groused James Burns, a member of a crowd of 300 who told Postmaster General Marvin Runyon their complaints at a meeting Monday night.

Runyon said customer satisfaction in Chicago is below 70 percent, the lowest of any major U.S. city. That's even lower than in New York City, which has been plagued by similar problems in recent months, Runyon said.

The postmaster general told the crowd he is setting up a task force to "look into every nook and cranny" and come up with solutions. An 800-number will be set up to hear complaints, and Runyon said he will return in two weeks to see that improvements have begun.

But Runyon said some of the problems may be due to labor-management friction, and results could take five years.

He was jeered by many in the audience. Wendy Cedrowski said she was hand-delivering her complaints to Runyon. "I wouldn't expect it to be delivered if I mailed it," she said.

"Maybe we should go back the times of the Pony Express," said Irene Jackson. "Then maybe I'll get my mail."

About 40,000 pieces of undelivered

mail, some more than two months old, were found February in a letter carrier's truck parked outside the Lakeview station.

The station was among those cited in a Postal Service report earlier this month that said some Chicago postal employees use drugs and alcohol on the job and threaten and intimidate co-workers.

Last Friday, police discovered more than 100 pounds of burning mail under a South Side viaduct. A mail carrier was charged Monday with dumping that mail. Sen. Paul Simon, who joined fellow Democrat Carol Moseley-Braun in pressuring Runyon to visit Chicago, said that mail may have been burned to cover up another delivery problem.

The same day, 20,000 pieces of undelivered mail — mostly bulk-rate advertisements up to 15 years old — was found behind a home on the Southwest Side. The homeowner, a retired mail carrier, admitted he stashed it because he hadn't been able to deliver it, postal inspectors said. The case is still under investigation.

Alderman Eugene Schuler, whose ward includes the Lakeview station, said his constituents routinely receive mail late, including ads for sales that arrive days after the events are over.

Lillian Miller said she sent a $59.38 check for a telephone bill to Ameritech's Chicago office in November, and it arrived two months later in a veterinarian's mailbox in Australia.

Mack Willis, a mail carrier of the West Side for 13 years, said, "A lack of help is the problem." He said the post office had offered early retirement several years ago and never replaced those who accepted.

Court widens jury definition of doubt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court gave states wide discretion Tuesday on how they tell trial jurors that criminal defendants must be found guilty "beyond a reasonable doubt."

Upholding jury instructions used in California and Nebraska death penalty cases, the court said those definitions of reasonable doubt are constitutional even though the justices don't condone some of the wording.

Taken as a whole, the instruction used in a California case made clear jurors must "reach a subjective state of near certitude of the guilt of the accused," Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote for the court.

In a separate decision, the court told federal judges to treat less harshly those convicted criminals who violate their probation by using drugs. The 7-2 decision in an Atlanta case means a man who violated the terms of his probation had to serve at least two months in prison, rather than 20 months.

The court also heard arguments in two cases brought by California death-row inmates who contend the state's death-penalty law is unconstitutionally vague. A decision is expected by late June.

In the case involving the reasonable-doubt rule, lawyers for Alfred Arthur Sandoval in California and Clarence Victor in Nebraska argued that jury instructions allowed them to be convicted without enough proof.

Since 1970, the Supreme Court has said criminal defendants may be convicted only if the evidence establishes their guilt "beyond a reasonable doubt."

But the Constitution does not require the use of any particular words to define that concept, O'Connor wrote Tuesday.

The jury instructions challenged by Sandoval and Victor said a reasonable doubt would keep a juror from deciding "to a moral certainty" that a defendant was guilty.

Modern jurors might not understand the phrase "moral certainty" by itself, O'Connor wrote. She added, however, that "instructing the jurors that they must have an abiding conviction of the defendant's guilt does much to alleviate any concerns" that the phrase might be misunderstood.

Still, O'Connor said the justices "do not condone the use of the phrase." The court voted unanimously to uphold the jury instruction challenged by Sandoval, who was sentenced to death for killing Marlene Wells on Oct. 31, 1984, in Los Angeles.

The court voted 7-2 to uphold the instruction attacked by Victor, who was condemned for the Dec. 26, 1987, murder of Alice Singleton in Omaha.

Justices Harry A. Blackmun and David H. Souter dissented in the Nebraska case, saying the jury instruction had too much "potentially misleading language."

House considers smoking ban in all public buildings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed national ban on smoking in public buildings — including restaurants and offices — may face its first congressional test this week in the House.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chief sponsor of the ban, unexpectedly postponed a scheduled vote on the bill Tuesday in his Energy and Commerce and environment subcommittee. Aides said the bill was taken off the schedule to work out concerns by some of the lawmakers on the panel.

It was unclear when the measure would be brought up again, but a Waxman aide said the congressman hoped to proceed with the legislation before Congress leaves for its Easter recess this Friday.

The bill, which prohibits smoking in any public building where at least 10 people regularly enter, would be the first attempt at regulating nationwide where individuals are allowed to smoke.

The measure, which has 55 House cosponsors, would not apply to residential buildings. A similar bill has been introduced in the Senate.

Waxman said the nationwide smoking restrictions are necessary to protect nonsmokers, especially children, from secondhand tobacco smoke.

House joins Senate call for Whitewater probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite Democratic reluctance, a congressional probe of Whitewater became a virtual certainty Tuesday as the House joined the Senate in calling for hearings. Special counsel Robert Fiske won his first guilty plea in the case bedeviling the Clinton administration.

The House vote was 408-15 on legislation calling on Democratic and Republican leaders to work out an "appropriate timetable" for hearings without interfering in Fiske's work.

While dates and ground rules for hearings remain to be set, the legislation marked a retreat for House Speaker Thomas Foley, who has been under pressure from Republicans and some Democrats to drop his opposition to hearings.

"While we cannot and should not ignore Whitewater, neither can we allow it to flood the chamber," Democratic Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri said shortly before the vote.

House GOP leader Bob Michel pledged hearings "in a very orderly manner." He added, "I don't want to see any kind of circus atmosphere."

The maneuvering came as Deputy Treasury Secretary Robert Altman became the latest administration official to appear before a grand jury in Washington. The top officer of the savings and loan cleanup, he has acknowledged discussing with White House officials procedural details of that cleanup relating to a failed Arkansas thrift and other institutions.

Satellite venture unites men worlds apart

Seattle Times

SEATTLE — The history of technology is full of legendary two-man partnerships built on friendship and a mutual dream: Microsoft's Gates and Allen, Apple's Jobs and Wozniak, HP's Hewlett and Packard.

But Craig McCaw and Bill Gates? Those close to the philosophical cellular phone king and the doggedly competitive software magnate say that at first glance they're about as likely a match as Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding.

Gates loves Fresca and hamburgers, the vegetarian McCaw keeps bottled water on his desk. Gates is renowned for temper tantrums and shouting matches, while McCaw's associates say they've never even seen him angry.

"Bill can be nice, but it's not his natural mode," said an acquaintance of both men. "Craig is one of the most gracious, self-effacing guys you'll ever meet."

Yet no one close to the two in the industry expressed surprise at Monday's announcement that McCaw and Gates had joined forces to start a new Kirkland, Wash.-based satellite venture to supply "have nots" with data access worldwide.

In the world of business, the lure of the deal far outweighs personal idiosyncrasies. And opposites can attract: McCaw and Gates "really seem to like each other," said a Seattle-area technology investor close to both.

Teledisc Corp., which for three years researched the "information skyway" system as Callings Communications Corp. in West Covina, Calif., filed with the Federal Communications Commission to put 840 satellites in low orbit around Earth.

Starting in 2001, the system aims to shuttle voice, data and other telecommunications to and from rural or remote locations otherwise unserviceable by phone lines. The newly renamed company moved to Kirkland to be close to McCaw's operation.

"It's a great thing if they can pull it off, but it may be a bit of overreaching," said Dick Brass, head of Oracle Data Publishing in Bellevue, Wash., while adding: "I'm not sure anyone except the United Federation of Planets will get the authority to launch 800 satellites into earth orbit."

Gates

The deal reminds Brass of Richard Pryor's line about cocaine being "God's way of saying you have too much money."

Gates, visiting the Far East on business, and McCaw, vacationing out of the country, both were unavailable for comment.

"Bill and Craig know each other but aren't what you'd call good friends."

— Pam Edstrom, public-relations specialist

Associates said their participation in the venture was a natural, given their mutual interest in emerging technologies.

McCaw, whose McCaw Development Co. has been involved since the project's inception four years ago, approached Gates only recently about participating.

Both are graduates of Lakeside School in North Seattle and have known each other for several years.

McCaw two years ago approached Gates about serving on McCaw Cellular's board of directors, an issue that became moot when McCaw moved to merge with AT&T last summer.

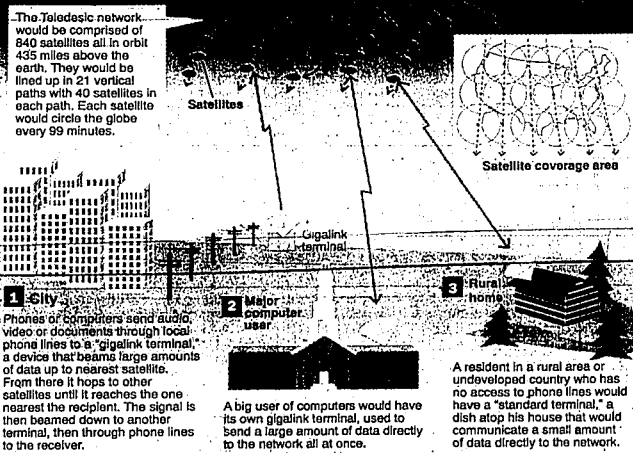

McCaw also served as an usher at Gates' New Year's Day wedding in Hawaii.

"Bill never thought twice about investing in Teledisc," said a McCaw executive who asked not to be named. Gates' $5 million backing was like joining the office pool on the NCAA basketball tournament, the source said: "Five million dollars to him is like five dollars to you and me."

McCaw and Gates both own 30 percent of Teledisc. McCaw Development has a 20-percent stake

Linking the globe by satellite

Teledisc Corp., a company headed by two of the country's most accomplished high-tech entrepreneurs, William Gates and Craig McCaw, is proposing to build a $8 billion satellite communications network linking every spot on the globe by the year 2001. Here's how the system would work with three different users: the residents of a city, a rural home, and a major computer user, such as a large university or corporation.

Source: Teledisc Corp.

and a California venture capitalist another 10 percent. The rest is spread among a handful of employees and backers.

While McCaw assumed chairmanship of the new venture, Gates' backing is "passive," said Pam Edstrom, a Portland, Ore.-based public-relations specialist close to the software billionaire. He will take no official role in the company.

"Bill and Craig know each other but aren't what you'd call good friends," Edstrom said. "Bill certainly has a great deal of respect and admiration for Craig, and some of their interests overlap. But Bill's specialty is software, not orbiting satellites."

Edstrom compared Gates' involvement to his initial $5 million investment three years ago in

Icos, a Bothell, Wash.-based biotech firm. "Icos doesn't have a product yet but Bill really believes in those people," she said. "Icos board is the only one besides Microsoft's he sits on."

Gates has overseen a dramatic spending increase in new information technologies at Microsoft, whose Advanced Technology Group includes 500 employees and an annual budget of $100 million to $150 million.

But Edstrom dismissed speculation that Gates' and McCaw's participation is an attempt at an information "oligarchy," similar to Microsoft's domination of the personal-computer industry.

"If Teledisc is successful with their strategy of basically building a worldwide partnership, Bill's stock will be diluted far below meaningful levels," she said.

McCaw, whose somewhat distracted air is in sharp contrast to Gates' bluntness and focus, calls the coming information boom the next ICE age — information, communication, electronics.

Putting communications in the hands of all individuals, "any time, any place," has long been his stated goal.

"Craig sees this as an opportunity to serve the unserved," said Bob Ratliffe, McCaw's communications chief. "He obviously must have convinced Bill that it was a worthwhile goal."

Will newest space station design fly?

WASHINGTON (AP) — This week NASA officials unveiled yet another "final design" for the space station — the seventh to date and the first to include full participation by the Russians.

The deal gives Russians some badly needed cash and Americans the benefit of Russian experience with long-term space stays. But the arrangement may not go over so well in the House, where sentiment to scrap the project is growing.

The six discarded plans were keyed to building an orbiting laboratory for pure, world-class science. The newest offering, however, will present the station for the first time as an instrument of foreign policy.

Under a 300-page agreement signed last December by Vice President Gore and Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, Russia became a full partner in an international space station with the United States, 10 European nations, Japan and Canada. Lost in the smiles, self-congratulations and backslappings was the fact that the United States was horsetrading to stop Russia from sending sensitive rocket engine technology to India and to abide by the Missile Technology Control Regime. More than 40 countries signed on to the MTCR agreement not to export long-range missiles and missile technology.

It was a good deal for the cash-strapped Russians. The United States agreed to pay $400 million (which happened to be the amount Russia said it would lose by canceling its contract with India) and will send 10 shuttle flights to the Mir-space station through 1997 along with equipment and experiments the Russians need.

The United States gets access to 20 years of Russian space station experience and the opportunity to have astronauts spend a total of 24 months on Mir. America's space corps lags far behind its Russian counterpart in the long-duration flights that are precursors to interplanetary travel.

Truck damaged when welder starts fire

TWIN FALLS - A man welding the door of a truck touched off a fire early Tuesday that burned the truck cab and sent smoke through the shop at the Time Machines automobile dealership.

The Twin Falls Fire Department received a call at 7:39 a.m. and sent 12 firefighters to the dealership at 652 Main Ave. S., said Capt. Dwayne Tucker. The man welding the 1975 Ford truck had doused the fire by the time they arrived, Tucker said.

Four firefighters helped push the truck from the shop. The fire damaged the truck cab, Tucker said.

The repair shop was filled with smoke and some glass on a door had busted, he said. Otherwise no damage was reported.

E911 information meeting set tonight at welfare building

TWIN FALLS - Anyone still confused about the long-delayed effort to bring "enhanced" 911 communications to four Magic Valley counties should attend an information meeting scheduled for tonight.

The public is invited to the 7 p.m. meeting at the Health and Welfare building at 601 Pole Line Road in Twin Falls.

Regional Health and Welfare Director Steve Woodworth will moderate the forum, which will feature presentations by the architect, engineer, financier and legal counsel for the regional E911 project, according to E911 Project Manager Al Sandner.

The project manager from the E911 facility in Idaho Falls also will be on hand to answer questions and explain the operations of an emergency dispatch center, Sandner said.

Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls counties have been attempting to establish a regional E911 dispatch center since 1990.

Enhanced service would allow dispatchers to trace and map 911 calls should the caller be unable to identify the scene of the emergency.

Senate committee approves bill to reveal rebuilt autos

BOISE - The Senate Transportation Committee Tuesday approved a bill that would require vehicles that have been wrecked and rebuilt to disclose that fact on their title certificates.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, is aimed at so-called "salvage" vehicles - cars and trucks that an insurer has paid off as totaled, but which sometimes are repaired, rebuilt and resold.

The measure already has passed the House overwhelmingly, and now goes to the full Senate.

Jerome man says he did not molest 6-year-old girl

JEROME - A Jerome man pleaded not guilty to three counts of lewd conduct with a minor Tuesday.

Jerry Lee Hansen, 34, entered his not guilty plea before Judge J. William Hart Monday. The incident occurred on Feb. 17, 1994, according to court records and involving a six-year-old girl. The felony charge carries a maximum sentence of life in prison. A jury trial will be set.

Man, 43, sent to correctional facility for sex abuse counts

JEROME - A Jerome man was sentenced to the North Idaho Correctional Institution at Cottonwood for treatment and rehabilitation after being charged with abuse of a child under 16.

Thomas Lee Moeue, 43, appeared before Judge J. William Hart Monday on the felony charge of lewd and lascivious acts with a 7-year-old child on June 1, 1993 and Oct. 31, 1993, according to court records.

Ex-con claims he took boots as form of self-punishment

JEROME - A Jerome man stole six pairs of boots to punish himself, he said.

Kenneth Eugene Wynia, 38, pled guilty Monday to a grand theft charge of stealing boots from Valley Co-Op in Jerome.

"I had family problems, work two jobs and have a lot of stress and financial problems. I got drunk and wanted to punish myself, so I jumped the fence and took the boots," he told Judge J. William Hart.

Wynia said he had eight previous felony convictions and had spent three years in prison. The theft charge carries a maximum penalty of one to 14 years in prison and a fine of up to $5,000.

Jones faces challenger

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE - At least one Magic Valley legislator will face a primary challenge this spring: Twin Falls businesswoman Sue Burwell announced Tuesday that she would challenge state Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer.

Jones, who is finishing his fifth two-year term in the Idaho House, says he will file for re-election sometime next week.

Burwell, 52, and her husband, Dick, own Magic Valley Distributing, the area's largest beer and wine wholesaler. Illinois natives; they have lived in Twin Falls since 1976.

Burwell said she plans to stress four issues in her primary campaign: resolving the current water-use fight, combating juvenile crime, providing "fair and balanced" property tax relief, and properly funding public schools.

She said education funding probably is the main difference between herself and Jones.

She supports merit raises for teachers, rather than across-the-board raises, and believes "education should be run more like a business."

"Salaries should be established at levels to entice new teachers and to reward and properly motivate current teachers in Idaho," she said in a statement.

However, Burwell added that "education needs to be funded to levels to ensure students are competitive as they advance in educational levels and enter the work force" and that "facilities and teaching tools need to be competitive."

Although this will be Burwell's first foray into electoral politics, she has served as a substitute legislator for Sen. Joyce McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, and Reps. Celia Gould, R-Buhl, and Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls. Earlier this year, when Gould was absent, Burwell successfully carried a bill for her on the House floor.

She also stood in for McRoberts during the Legislature's organizational meetings in December 1992, and delivered McRoberts' nomination speech for Senate majority leader. McRoberts could not attend the meetings because of a death in her family.

"I've worked a lot with Celia and a lot with Joyce, and I want to be part of everything that's going on here," Burwell said.

Jones said he has heard rumors of a Burwell challenge for several weeks.

"Certainly she's a credible opponent, but I've had credible primary opponents in the past," he said. "I certainly intend to run vigorously."

Jones - one of a handful of GOP moderates left in the House - said he will stress his accomplishments over the past 10 years, ranging from lowering the school age for handicapped children from 5 to 3, to creation of the Idaho Barley Commission.

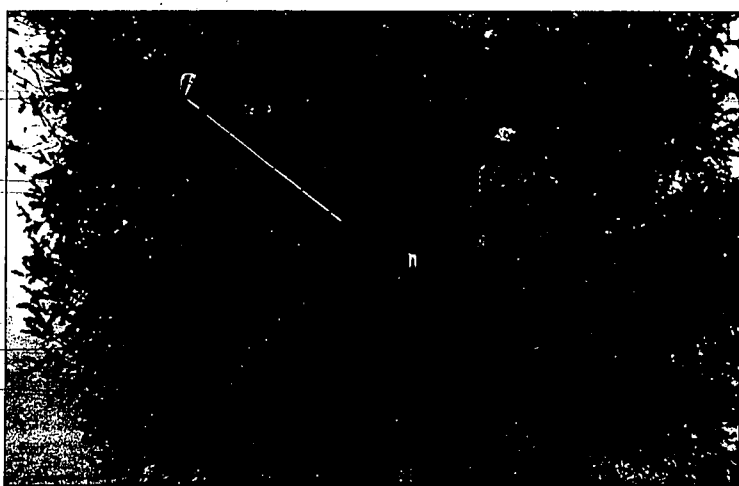

In recent years, Jones has spent much of his energy on education issues. He has supported Idaho's school-reform efforts, pushed to split the State Board of Education, and is vice-chair of the National Conference of State Legislatures' committee on education and job training.

Burwell placed herself philosophically somewhere between Jones and Gould, a more conservative Republican.

The primary election is May 24.

In other campaign news Tuesday, Shoshone Mayor Tim Ridinger filed as a Republican for the House seat now held by Rep. Patie Nafziger, D-Ketchum. And 5th District Judge James May of Hailey has filed for re-election.

Fore-cast: Snow

MIKE SALSBURY/The Times-News

A sudden afternoon snowfall doesn't prevent Twin Falls resident Cecil Patterson from getting his daily exercise Tuesday at the College of Southern Idaho. Although the snow was unexpected, Patterson was able to continue with a portion of his routine that includes hitting a golf ball and walking along the school's fitness trail.

Range promoter making more than reported

By William Brock
Times-News writer

BOISE - The man chosen to promote Idaho's desire for a bomb training range in southwestern Owyhee County is earning $30,000 per year - not the $30,000 reported by the state auditor in January.

To date, Mountain Home businessman Dave Jett has been paid between nearly $100,000 in state money to push the bombing range.

Jett has been earning $3,000 per month since July, State Auditor J.D. Williams

Before July, Jett earned $2,500 per month to back the training range.

In January, Williams was asked how much Jett was being paid and he said the governor's office told him the figure was $30,000 per year. Williams was later asked the same question by the Cable News Network - and, after some research, he discovered Jett was actually being paid more.

"I didn't know he was getting $3,000 a month," Williams said Tuesday.

Scott Peyron, a spokesman for Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, said the conflicting figures stemmed from confusion over which fiscal year was in question.

Jett has been under contract to the state commerce department to promote economic development for Mountain Home since January of 1991, Peyron said. In one fiscal year, however, Jett was paid directly by the governor's office, Peyron said.

The foundation of Mountain Home's economy is the nearby U.S. Air Force base, but Andrus and local businessmen fear the airbase could be closed now that the Cold War is over.

To counter that threat, Andrus is seeking to obtain 25,350 acres of land in a trade with the Bureau of Land Management, then lease it to the Air Force for bomb training. The proposal has come under heavy attack from a variety of angles, but Andrus remains committed to the idea.

Jett's job is "to coordinate the state's proposals to enhance military training and give Idaho the chance to enhance its financial base," Peyron said.

"His salary is a good investment, given the magnitude of the Air Force's contribution."

Deputies warn of scam; group says it's legitimate

By Phil Salm

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls County sheriff officials are warning people to be wary of a Washington D.C. group soliciting money as a non-profit police organization.

In a mailing to a Twin Falls woman last week, the National Association of Police Organizations Inc. (NAPO) said it uses donations and other revenue to put on seminars and conferences and to lobby for anti-crime bills. The letter also promises periodic crime tips to "associate members" - those who donate to NAPO.

But sheriff's investigators say donations to the group bring nothing in return.

"If you want to give to a charity, give to a local organization known to you," said Sgt. Bill McDaniel. People can get all the crime tips they need from local law enforcement agencies "for free," he said.

A spokeswoman for the group said in a telephone interview, however, that NAPO is legitimate and agreed people should be careful about donating money through the mail.

"They're absolutely right to be so (skept-tical). There are more than a few scams out there. ... We have no hidden agenda," said Beth McGee from the group's Washington D.C. office.

NAPO lobbied for passage of the Brady Gun Bill and for anti-crime laws, McGee said. The group also puts on seminars for police groups on such topics as pension benefits, retirement plans and bargaining rights, for example, McGee said.

The group represents 157,000 law enforcement officers nationwide, but none in Idaho; she said. McGee said that as far as she knows, NAPO is affiliated with no police organization anywhere.

A Twin Falls woman received a letter from NAPO last week and alerted McDaniel at the sheriff's department.

In the letter, NAPO Executive Director Bob Scully described the recent rape and murder of a 10-year-old Virginia girl, killed by a parolee.

"Please rush me your gift of $15 or whatever you can before another innocent child suffers a horrifying death. As soon as I receive your reply form, I'll rush you your membership card and insider crime tips."

Jerome man arrested on hit-and-run charges

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - A Jerome man has been arrested in connection with a hit-and-run accident that critically injured two teenagers.

Sebastian Aynla Rodriguez, 23, was arrested Monday evening and charged with two counts for leaving the scene of an accident. He was arraigned Tuesday.

Judge Thomas H. Borresen set Rodriguez' bond at $20,000. Each count carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Rodriguez also was arrested on a bench warrant for failing to pay a driver's license, no insurance, failure to wear a seat belt and speeding on Jan. 4, according to police records.

He had pleaded guilty to the charges and had failed to pay $31 left on the fines. Borresen gave Rodriguez until March 31 at 9:15 a.m. to pay the fine or be held in contempt.

Corney Rose, 34, of Declo, and Louis Scruggs, 16, Jerome, were hit when crossing South Lincoln Street Sunday afternoon. Tuesday afternoon, he was in critical condition in the intensive care unit at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. The car, allegedly driven by Rodriguez, failed to stop after the teen-agers were hit.

"It was less than 30 hours after the accident that we found the car on a farm in Hagerman," Jerome Chief of Police James Dahl said.

Witnesses at the accident scene, gave the police a "brief description of the car and a few numbers of the license plate," Dahl said.

With little information on the car, law enforcement agencies of Twin Falls city and county, Jerome and Gooding counties and Idaho State Police helped trace the car and find Rodriguez.

A tip from the Crime Stoppers program was also called in to the sheriff's department.

"When we arrested him, he said he was scared because of his suspended license, that's why he didn't stop," Dahl said.

INEL site may leak waste into aquifer

By William Brock
Times-News writer

KETCHUM - One of the most vulnerable radioactive waste storage facilities in the United States could be leaking up to 100 gallons of contaminated water into southern Idaho's water supply every day - and no one would know, officials from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratories said Monday.

The decades-old storage facility is only 450 feet above the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer, said INEL spokesman Brad Bugger. The aquifer supplies water for more than 200,000 residents of southern Idaho.

Built in the early 1950s, building No. 603 stores more than 3 tons of highly radioactive fuel rods from nuclear reactors in a trio of water-filled pools. INEL contractor Al Hoskins said at a public information meeting. Trouble is, the monitoring equipment for the building is not sensitive enough to detect a leak of less than 100 gallons per day, he said.

Hoskins said the facility requires about 100 gallons of new water every day, but he insisted that a leak of that magnitude isn't possible.

The fresh water is used to offset evaporation losses from the unlined concrete pools, said INEL spokesman Nick Nichols in a telephone interview. The missing water leaves all radioactive contaminants behind when it evaporates, he added.

In addition to inadequate leak detection, the old building has 10 other "vulnerabilities." Problems include corrosion of metal storage equipment, earthquake concerns and uncertainty over exactly what is being stored.

The list is not a complete inventory of nuclear waste storage problems at INEL; many facilities still not yet been inventoried.

Hoskins' remarks came at an INEL public briefing requested by the Snake River Alliance, a statewide citizen's nuclear watchdog group. The meeting was attended by about 15 Ketchum-area residents, several of whom were sharply critical of Uncle Sam's track record with radioactive waste storage.

City approves more development plans

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - The City Council has approved two more preliminary sets of blueprints for the Stonebrook development in the city's northeast corner.

Represented by Twin Falls real estate agents Steve Keim and Jane George, the Stonebrook development group owns 120 acres southeast of where Locust Street North would intersect with Pole Line Road.

The two plans approved Monday are within a 40-acre residential section of Stonebrook between Locust Street North and Madrona Street North just north of where Locust Street dead-ends.

Also Monday, the council approved several amendments to the city code that alter and strengthen downtown parking regulations.

The changes will:

- Increase the fines to $35 for parking illegally in loading zones or handicapped spaces downtown.
- Increase lease parking rates from $10 per month to $12 per month.
- Expand the operating hours on public off-street parking lots to 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Monday through Friday.

In other business, the council reappointed Donna Brizee, Pete Turner and Tom Trout to the city parks and recreation commission. The council also awarded a $138,746.40 contract to R.M.F. Inc. for the replacement of deteriorating sewer lines in two sections of the Rock Creek interceptor.

House votes to extend local-option tax

The Times-News

BOISE - The Idaho House Tuesday approved a bill that would extend local-option taxing powers, to "resort cities" with populations over 10,000.

The vote was 43-24. Currently, resort cities with 10,000 or fewer people can impose various nonproperty taxes, including hotel/motel taxes, taxes on alcoholic drinks, and general sales taxes. Four cities - Ketchum, Sun Valley, Stanley and Lava Hot Springs - collect some or all of those taxes.

The bill that passed Tuesday is intended to let Coeur d'Alene, population 26,611, in on the local-option tax. The definition of "resort city" is broad enough that some lawmakers, including Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, have argued that it could cover Twin Falls.

The only option for larger resort cities would be a general sales tax mirroring the definition of "resort city." Such a tax would have to be approved by 60 percent of the voters, as is the case with smaller resort cities, and it could last no longer than 10 years.

Committee recommends gym repairs

By Diane Schorzman

Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD - The School Board should go ahead with repairs to the gymnasium, said a school district gym sounding committee.

The 32-member committee, made up of Castleford-area residents, made its decision after touring the gym and talking to other community residents.

The committee, "found that there is a tremendous amount of need," Superintendent Kelly Murphy said. "But there is also a certain amount of reservation as to what the community can afford."

There are five years left to pay on the district's current bond; one year was erased when the bond was refinanced.

"The next step," Murphy said, "is to further poll the general populace to see what they feel they can afford. We want to give every adult community person a say on whether or not we should 'whether we do all of it, half of it, or none of it.'"

The board will conduct either a door-to-door survey or a mass-mailed survey later this spring.

Crumbling walls, flooded pipes, inadequate space and cracked and broken boards in the gym floor are just some of the problems facing the school district. A ballpark figure of $317,000 has been "guesstimated" for the repairs, Murphy said, though he adds that figure is probably high.

He invites anyone in the community, especially those with construction experience, to visit the school to see for themselves just what the problems are.

"We are really open to any ideas," said Murphy.

The board has chosen a teacher of the year and classified staff person of the year, to be announced at graduation on May 26. Bev Gandi, a former Castleford high school teacher, will be the speaker at the graduation ceremonies.

The board voted to let the school bus contract out for bid.

A natural helper retreat is planned for Wednesday March 30. A parent coffee hour will be at 10 a.m. April 5 at the school. The first track meet will be at 3 p.m. March 31.

Leak

administration, said Hoskins, who works for the Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Company. The company operates many INEL facilities under federal contract.

The Ketchikan meeting followed the Department of Energy's release of a nationwide report on what to do with America's spent nuclear fuels. Far from harmless, spent nuclear fuels are still highly radioactive - but are useless because they contain too much waste.

Prior to 1992, nuclear waste from the U.S. Navy were dissolved in acids at the INEL, to recover the highly-enriched uranium it contained. With the Cold War over, there is less demand for enriched uranium, and spent fuels that were once candidates for reprocessing must now be stored safely.

A three-phase plan was been developed for all U.S. facilities that store nuclear wastes. Public comment on the second phase will be accepted until April 4.

Included in the plan is an assessment of the potential problems of each site; a total of 33 problems - eight of them high priority - have been identified at INEL.

Building 603 is among the eight most troublesome nuclear waste storage facilities in the United States, Hoskins said.

Overall, INEL stores 10.8 percent of the nation's heavy metals - which include uranium, plutonium and thorium. It is the biggest federal storage facility in America for spent nuclear fuels.

To solve the problems posed by building 603 and other INEL headaches - federal officials are proposing to move the radioactive wastes into modern facilities. Such a transfer will take at least six years to complete, Hoskins said.

"We're talking about things that last 10,000 years and putting it into facilities that will last 100 years - if we're lucky," charged Buhl environmental activist Bill Chisholm.

"Is there a potential for this being a shell game?" asked alliance worker Margaret Macdonald Stewart.

"One day we'll say, 'Oh my gosh, we need another facility.'"

"Long-term storage of nuclear waste wasn't a priority in the early days of the nuclear industry, said INEL spokesman Brad Bugger, "and there were a lot of assumptions that didn't pan out."

Afterward, Stewart said she was disappointed by the INEL briefing.

"It was all delicately glazed over," she said. "There's some pretty spooky stuff going on out there, but they packaged it up with a happy face."

"I truly believe they want to open up to the public, but it's a whole new world for them, and they're not trained in it."

Rural Washington airport attracts big business

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (AP) — Hidden among the sagebrush and farmland in central Washington's desert is Grant County Airport, one of the nation's largest commercial airports with 4,800 acres and an extra-long landing strip.

Since Larson Air Force Base closed in 1966, the airport has been used by, among others, Japan Airlines, Boeing Co., and Big Bend Community College's flight school for pilot training and aircraft testing.

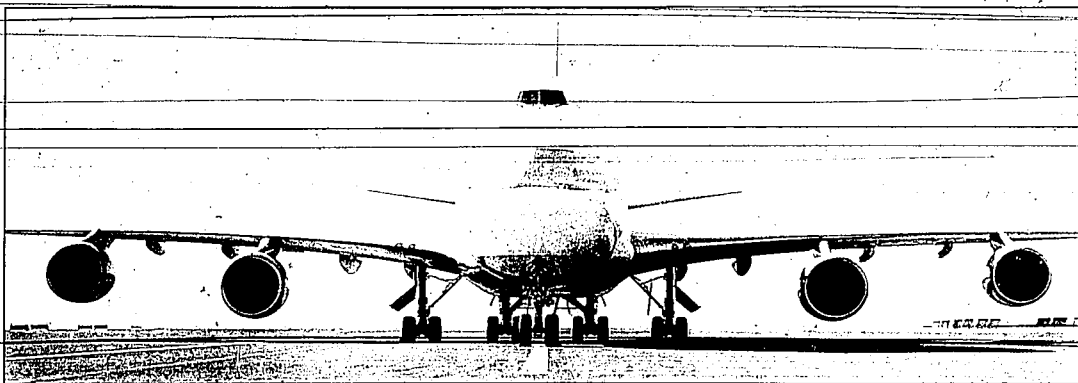

The Moses Lake airport, once home to B-52 bombers, boasts an error-free 13,500-foot runway that is one of the longest in the nation. By comparison, the longest runway at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport is 11,500 feet.

On a recent afternoon, a huge, white plane approached the landing strip and touched down before immediately taking off again. The plane flew a low, tight circle and approached the airstrip again, touched down in the same place, and took off to do it again and again.

It was just another day for the crew at Japan Airlines, and for the airport that saw 150,000 landings and takeoffs during 1993.

Japan Airlines' whose giant white planes have a "JAL" emblem on the fuselage, has tested its Boeing 747's at Grant County Airport since 1968, said Jim Anderson, a flight scheduler for the airline.

"There's very limited airspace for training in Japan itself," Anderson said. "Grant County Airport has everything necessary for training."

A Japan Airlines 747 sits at the Grant County Airport in Moses Lake, Wash., March 3. JAL trains pilots to fly the huge jets at the site.

executive manager of the Port of Moses Lake, which operates the airport. "We've got everything we need to do what we want. We have the runway, the buildings, facilities. All we need are the users."

Japan Airlines is by far the biggest money-maker for the airport, which bases its $3 million to $4 million annual budget on user fees, Bailey said.

As many as 1,400 JAL employees will train each year at the Moses Lake airport, staying for as little as one night to as long as six weeks, Anderson said. "But the same people come back from time to time as they are promoted from one aircraft to another aircraft," he said. "A person might come for co-pilot training and then might come back for retraining."

The airline has about 2,200 air personnel, all of whom train at Grant County Airport, he said. The airline also has instructors, ground personnel and mechanics that live there for two to four years, he said.

"It's just a very efficient place to be trained," he said. "There's the long runway that's controlled by an FAA tower. It's low usage airport so you have very little air traffic. The weather is good at least 10 months a year, and the other two months aren't that bad. It's very conducive to training."

Norm Jepsky, flight test supervisor at Boeing, said Sea-Tac was too crowded to be safe for aircraft testing.

"Anybody who has seen these documents would be proud to go to court and say, 'We present this plan to end the gridlock in the Northwest.'"

But James Geisinger, president of the Northwest Forestry Association in Portland, Ore., said Tuesday that Jackson's ruling was clear.

"The president's proposed forest plan is illegal and therefore cannot end the gridlock strangling rural communities in the Pacific Northwest," he said. "Rey said the administration's response indicates it 'doesn't appreciate the underlying vulnerability' of the plan."

"To regard this as merely a bump in the road ignores the fact this road doesn't lead to a solution," he said. "Clinton's plan 'already is eight months late, it has produced no timber, it was declared illegal by the first judge who looked at it, it still must go before another judge and most every party has commented on it has been critical of it," Rey said.

The Northwest Forest Resource Council, an industry group, filed the lawsuit accusing the administration of violating the Federal Advisory Committee Act. The group argued that the law had been followed, the administration would have developed a plan allowing for more logging.

The plan must be submitted by April 14 to U.S. District Judge William Dwyer of Seattle, who imposed an injunction against logging on millions of acres until the plan is developed.

Although Jackson found the process illegal, he refused to grant the industry's request to throw out the plan and force the government to start over with a new logging strategy.

"I think that is an indication we can move forward," said Kevin Sweeney, chief spokesman for Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

The best scientists available worked as hard as they could on this report," Sweeney said Monday night.

for by a select group of people in a secret process," DeFazio said.

"I think we are looking at further legal logjams with full employment for lawyers but no relief from the chaos in the courts for the forests or timber workers."

The forest plan was developed to outline how much logging can be allowed in national forests in Washington, Oregon and northern California while protecting rare wildlife and countering years of mismanagement.

Option 9 would allow logging at only about one-fourth the annual average of the 1980s.

Industry: Ruling kills forest plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration's Northwest forest plan has little chance of ever taking effect now that a federal judge has ruled the strategy was prepared illegally, timber industry leaders said Tuesday.

The ruling also makes it more likely another "avalanche of lawsuits" will be filed in the ongoing fight over old-growth forests and northern spotted owls, said Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore.

Administration officials say they are moving forward with their logging strategy — known as Option 9 — despite Monday's ruling by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson's that it was drafted in violation of open-meetings laws.

But industry leaders called news conferences here and in Portland, Ore., to declare their confidence the proposal will never see the light of day.

"If you look at Option 9 as the Starship Enterprise, the shields are down and it's not going to take many more photon torpedoes," said Mark Rey, executive director of the American Forest & Paper Association.

"Continuing to forge ahead on this course is a commitment to perpetuating gridlock."

Kimberly mulls trimester schedule

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — A trimester system would have more advantages than disadvantages for the Kimberly School District, the School Board was told this week.

Ralph Campbell, secondary principal, spoke to the Kimberly school board Thursday night about the "pros and cons" of a trimester teaching schedule. Campbell and other members of the high-school staff had visited with faculty members of area schools who were teaching under the trimester system.

Under the trimester program, students would have five classes per year instead of the seven classes under the current two-semester system. The current 50-minute class period would be extended to 70 minutes and the grading period would be 12 weeks instead of 18. A student would be able to earn 15 credits per year instead of the current 14.

With careful planning, students could earn enough credits for graduation at the end of the second grading period in their senior year.

The board gave Campbell and the high school staff permission to further investigate the possibility of a trimester program for Kimberly.

Trustee seats for districts 2 and 3 will be up for election May 17. Anyone interested in running for these positions must file petitions with the superintendent's office by April 15. These board positions are currently filled by Jim Wright in district 2 and Karen Anderson in district 3.

The board voted to spend the $3,500 received from the state lottery on fencing at the new baseball field and to increase the salaries by $5 a day of the substitute teachers who have been with the district more than five years.

Superintendent John Garner announced that elementary counselor Ann McLaughlin will conduct a parenting class at the elementary school starting March 22 and running through May 3.

The board rebired all continuing teachers with four or more years and added another year to Garner's contract.

Hailey council's action irks Blaine Childcare Association

By Raymond D. McAlpin
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County Childcare Association said last week that a day-care ordinance change was a bad play by the Hailey City Council.

The council last week amended the day-care ordinance passed last month. The amendment makes the proposed ordinance more restrictive because it requires more day-care centers to obtain conditional use permits.

Before last week's amendment, the ordinance would have permitted those day-care centers outright.

Blaine County Childcare Association President Katy Nottingham said changing the ordinance without first informing the group of that intent before last week's council meeting was not ethical.

"I think what we're going to do is to talk to an attorney. It's not the changes we are upset with, it's the way they did it," Nottingham said.

"Daryl James told us that we need not attend because it's just the second reading of what was already passed."

The city sent out its council agenda that mentioned day care ordinance 631 would have its second reading. And due to a change in city staff, that agenda was mailed late, according to city clerk Heather Dawson.

Hailey City Attorney Stephen Crabtree said the city acted properly.

"It's a matter of interpretation," he said, adding that the state planning and zoning requirements say amendments to zoning law require holding the first reading.

Crabtree said that in the interest of inclusion the amended ordinance will be presented at a public hearing on April 11.

Hailey City Councilman Brad Siemer, who called for the amendment, said there was nothing wrong with the way the ordinance was amended.

"I was interested in changing the amendment so I contacted (city administrator) Daryl James and (mayor) Steve Kearns and asked them if it was appropriate to amend. They told me it was," Siemer said.

The ordinance as passed during the February City Council meeting allowed day-care centers for seven to 12 children in the general residential district as a permitted use.

The amended ordinance requires those day-care centers obtain a conditional use permit.

"I felt the citizens in the general residential wanted more input as to what happened in their neighborhood," Siemer said.

Siemer points out that people may have the wrong idea about what conditional use means.

"If it's a conditional use, you can still do it. It's just that neighbors that are in about 400 feet can comment on it in a public hearing," he said.

Siemer, at the request of councilman John Carson — who raised concerns that the child-care association was not present at the March 14 council meeting — called the child-care association to inform them of the amended version of the ordinance.

"In terms of informing them that this amendment was going to happen, I'm not going to give it too much gravity," Siemer said. "If I made a faux pas in not notifying people of this amendment, well, gee, what can I say? We've worked closely with the child-care association and with planning and zoning on this ordinance."

Nottingham is not reassured.

"If we're supposed to follow the codes that they set for us, why are they not following the codes we set for them? What type of example are they setting?" she asked.

Wendell plans to add vo-ag class in 1994-95 term

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — School officials want to get a vocational agriculture class for the high school.

Rural resident Mike Roland told trustees at this month's School Board meeting that there would be strong support for a vo-ag program. Many people from the rural area would like to get involved if help for the class is needed, he said.

"There's a lot of concern, and there's a lot of need for it," Roland said.

Vocational agriculture and home economics courses were discontinued several years ago over public protest.

Superintendent Larry Manly said the Wendell district has applied for vo-ag funding, which is available from the state. When the trustees put the 1994-95 budget together, Manly said, they may be able to add the vo-ag class. If so, he explained, the state tentatively will supplement it with about $8,000 to $9,000.

Sparks said that will help start the program with some supplies. The district, he said, will have to hire an instructor. He asked Roland to organize a board of directors for a vo-ag program. Roland agreed to ask a few people to put their names on the list.

In other business:

• Elementary school Principal Karen Osman said her students are gathering pledges for a spell-a-thon to raise money for the elementary school.

• Trustees agreed to hire a new junior high school principal. Manly said state law requires the district to hire the additional principal if the building's population reaches 300.

Junior-senior high school Principal Roy Parton predicted the junior high — which now has 285 students — is sure to have more than 300 next year, he predicted.

During a tour, elementary school Librarian Pam Crawford told the trustees that fifth and sixth graders have been learning to use 18 new computers. Cost of the computers and programs to date is about $28,000, she said.

• Trustees decided to sell the West Point Grange building on the Buhl Highway and the top Pentecostal church west of the junior high school gymnasium by closed bid. Bids will be opened at the April 20 board meeting. Deadline for bids is 3 p.m. that day. The trustees reserved the right to reject any or all bids.

Manly said bids for Phase II of the district's construction project will be opened May 31. The work includes removal of the 70-year-old junior high school library and the old rooms below it. Two classrooms will be converted into a new library. Also, Manly said, two classrooms at the elementary school will be converted into a new and larger library. The current library will be used as a classroom for special education. The work is scheduled to be completed by mid-August.

Meanwhile, the superintendent reported, construction of the new high school turned out better than expected.

"We built it just in time," he said. Because of low the interest rate, the school came in $160,000 under budget, enabling the district to help equip the building with modern technology, he said.

S. Korea to seek China's help to defuse nuclear tensions

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Tensions on the world's most heavily armed border escalated Tuesday, with North Korea accusing South Korea of provoking war, and South Korea saying it needs better security to ensure peace.

South Korean President Kim Young-sam said he would ask China, North Korea's only major ally, to help ease the nuclear standoff on the divided peninsula.

North Korea's official news agency called South Korea's plans to deploy Patriot missiles and conduct military exercises with the United States "provocative steps ... and a declaration of war."

North Korea, after refusing to allow full inspections of sites where it is suspected of developing nuclear weapons, threatened Monday to pull out of an international nuclear controls treaty. That could lead to a U.S. push for international sanctions.

China has backed efforts to get North Korea to permit the inspections. But Chinese Premier Li Peng suggested Tuesday that China would not support economic sanctions.

"If pressure is applied on this issue, that can only complicate the situation on the Korean peninsula and it will add to the tension there," Li said in Beijing.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Michael McCurry said Chinese officials have indicated their willingness to work with the United States on the Korean situation.

Tensions have risen sharply in the past week because of the North Korea's refusal to allow full nuclear inspections or to exchange envoys with South Korea. The envoys were to have discussed ways to make the peninsula nuclear-free.

On Monday, Pyongyang renewed a year-old threat to withdraw from the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty, which it joined in 1985.

The International Atomic Energy Agency, based in Vienna, referred the issue to the U.N. Security Council, opening the way for possible sanctions.

No proposal for sanctions has been made, but the five permanent members of the Security Council — the United States, France, Britain, China and Russia — were meeting privately Tuesday afternoon to discuss the North Korean situation.

Delegation for MIA kin meets U.S. commanders

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Three women representing families of MIAs met Tuesday with the U.S. commanders of a joint task force trying to resolve the cases of Americans lost in the Vietnam War.

Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of POW-MIA Families, said she and two board members were in Hanoi to "assess the joint task force's approach for resolving the issue, whether or not it has a chance for achieving accountability."

Mrs. Griffiths, who has visited the region several times since 1982, has been a frequent critic of U.S. and Vietnamese efforts to account for missing Americans. Her brother is among the missing.

Mrs. Griffiths was accompanied by Sue Scott, chairman of the league's board, and board member Colleen Shine. After arriving Tuesday, they met with Army Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Needham, commander of the joint task force, Army Lt. Col. John C. Cray, head of the MIA Office in Hanoi, and other specialists.

Cray said they were briefed on operations throughout Southeast Asia.

The women will meet with Vietnamese authorities Wednesday. The National League of POW-MIA Families said in a report to its members in December that the families "continue to be victimized by Hanoi's calculated decision to withhold information on — and remains of — America's missing."

The league officers arrived as the joint task force wound up the biggest recovery operation in Vietnam since the end of the war and prepared for a similar search in April.

Sandinista chief kept in capital

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua's Sandinista army chief has been ordered restricted to the capital while prosecutors investigate accusations that he was involved in the fatal shooting of a teen-ager.

Army prosecutor Lester Gallo ordered Gen. Humberto Ortega to stay in Managua for 10 days during investigation of the 1990 shooting of Jean Paul Genie, a case that has become a cause celebre among Ortega's critics.

Ortega accused his critics of using "a tragic and sad event ... to destroy the army and tarnish my image."

Genie, 16, was apparently trying to pass a convoy of army cars when he was shot to death. A military tribunal is investigating allegations by the teen-ager's family that Ortega and his bodyguards were involved.

Perry tours missile base

PERVOMAYSK, Ukraine (AP) — Defense Secretary William Perry stared over the brink of a Ukrainian missile silo Tuesday and saw a sign of peace.

In an unprecedented tour of a former-Soviet intercontinental ballistic missile base, Perry witnessed the gradual dismantling of a site that had possessed the power to inflict heavy damage on the United States.

The gaping SS-24 missile silo into which he peered contained a rocket some 9 feet in diameter, but none of the 10 nuclear warheads that it can carry. They have already been removed and shipped to Russia for dismantling.

Perry also toured the underground command center that controlled some of the 700 warheads at Pervomaysk. Ukrainian officers demonstrated the steps they would have taken to prepare for launching missiles.

"As I stood there watching this process, I admit that I was awed," Perry said afterward.

These days, the chances people will watch an entire commercial are more remote than ever.

How convenient. They just push one button and there goes your TV commercial. There goes your media budget. There goes any chance you ever had of influencing the consumer. In fact, recent studies have shown that the moment a commercial comes on, a startling 48% of viewers either head off to raid the fridge, freshen up in the bathroom, find some way to ignore the commercial altogether, or just plain zap it with their remote control.

Not so when your ad is in the paper—the one medium where people actually want to see the advertisements. In study after study, consumers consistently rate newspapers as the most

Camacho rules out presidential bid

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Peace negotiator-Manuel-Camacho said on Tuesday he would not run for the presidency that could have split the party that has ruled Mexico for 65 years.

The brief announcement, carried live by some national radio networks, calmed months of uncertainty about the Aug. 21 presidential election and sent stocks soaring in New York and Mexico City.

"Between searching for a candidacy for the presidency of the republic and contributing what I can to the process of peace, I choose peace," said Camacho, a former mayor of Mexico City and foreign minister.

He said he was concerned a run for the presidency would harm his efforts to end the uprising by Indian peasants in southern Mexico. He assumed that role after he was passed over in December for the presidential nomination of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

Camacho's popular and prominent role in the peace talks and his obvious unhappiness at being passed over for the presidency had created growing speculation that he might try to replace the PRI candidate, Luis Donaldo Colosio, or jump to another party.

Camacho

himself he was "putting the higher causes of the nation above my aspirations."

Camacho did not mention Colosio Tuesday, or endorse him, but he promised to continue working for "justice, public liberties and democracy" in Mexico. "I will continue doing that with the simple rules of conviction in true politics and public commitment," he said. "I will not do it with the rules of submission or those of silence."

Camacho's actions are a sharp break with past disappointed presidential candidates, who have generally remained quietly in the background after being passed over by the PRI. Uncertainty over Camacho's intentions had helped depress the Mexican stock market and Mexican stocks in the United States, prompting him to write a letter to the Wall Street Journal last week endorsing Mexico's current economic policies.

Tuzla airport opens; U.N. aid lands

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Crowds waved and children carrying yellow flowers sang Bosnian folk songs Tuesday as a U.N. plane flew 22 tons of food and medicine into Tuzla, the first relief flight to the city in almost two years of war.

"It's a great day for the people of Tuzla," said Yasushi Akashi, the U.N. envoy to former Yugoslavia. "Opening of the airport means arrival of peace at long last."

In a ceremony on the heavily guarded airfield, Akashi presented Tuzla Mayor Selim Beslic with a box of seeds.

"I hope, like these seeds, the seeds of peace and hope will keep growing in this city and the whole country," he said.

"We hope this is the beginning of the peaceful period for Bosnia-Herzegovina," Beslic replied. Tuzla, in northeastern Bosnia, is under control of the Muslim-led government of Bosnia. The reopening of the airport, a major goal of relief officials, was blocked for months by Serbs, whose big guns can easily reach the tarmac.

The actual reopening turned out to be more symbolic than life-saving. Truck convoys carrying food and relief supplies have been reaching the city through Serb-held territory recently with relatively few delays.

And Croats and Muslims, whose fighting in central Bosnia blocked aid convoys, signed a cease-fire in February and last week created a joint federation in Bosnia.

"We have to catch up in Tuzla — but it won't be a large-scale airlift," said Kris Janowski of the U.N. High UN soldiers wait as a plane lands carrying UN representative and special envoy Akashi Yasushi, who will officially open the Tuzla airport after its two-year closure.

Commissioner for Refugees in Sarajevo.

U.N. officials are still trying to get Serb approval for regular aid flights to Tuzla, where about 400,000 people depend on humanitarian aid. Akashi said he hoped regular flights could begin within three weeks.

Tuzla has taken in 240,000 refugees from surrounding areas, but suffered little shelling and was spared most of the ravages of Bosnia's two-year civil war.

"I'm very happy that the United Nations has opened the airport and hope it means they will be able to do something special for me," Alija

Dedic, a refugee from Srebrenica, said from his wheelchair at Tuzla's hospital. Dedic, who has two children, said he hoped the United Nations could now fly in proper prosthetics. U.N. officials also want to use the airfield for medical evacuations.

There were other encouraging signs of peace Tuesday in Bosnia.

Janowski said a relief convoy was on its way to the embattled central Bosnian town of Maglaj after initial delays caused by Bosnian Serb inspections.

Red Cross officials said more than 250 Muslim prisoners of war were released by their Croat captors near Mostar, in southern Bosnia. Six Bosnian Croats were released from a government jail. The rest of the approximately 300 Croat and Muslim POWs are expected to be freed within days.

In Sarajevo, U.N. officials said the Serbs were pulling back guns that the United Nations said violated the heavy weapons exclusion zone around the Bosnian capital.

Former vice president Rutskoi avoids campaign talk

MOSCOW (AP) — Citizen Alexander Rutskoi sallied forth Tuesday looking every inch the dignified politician.

The shaggy beard he grew in prison was gone. So were the fatigues the former vice president wore when he headed the armed opposition in October. In a charcoal suit and smart black topcoat, Rutskoi seemed positively vice presidential — perhaps even presidential.

Although Rutskoi was coy about his political future, he talked, walked and acted like a candidate.

"First and foremost I consider myself a citizen," he told the reporters mobbing him at an exhibition in the complex of pavilions once dedicated to the glories of the Soviet economy.

The encounter was no accident. Press releases had gone out to all major news organizations. Something resembling campaign machinery was being cranked up again.

Six months ago, Rutskoi was a vice president locked in combat with his boss, President Boris Yeltsin. Six weeks ago, he was a prisoner in a forbidding former KGB prison.

Now he acts like he's on the comeback trail.

As Rutskoi ventured forth into a capital abuzz with coup rumors hinging on Yeltsin's allegedly failing health, he didn't like what he saw.

"It's all dirt, rags, drunks, poverty. I can't accept that — as a man, or as a citizen," he said, blaming the mess on the Yeltsin government, just like he used to do.

Coup rumors, a fixture of Russian political life, are rampant with Yeltsin on vacation in southern Russia. But Rutskoi brushed them aside.

"They are a farce and a fake," he said, a "deliberate dramatization to distract" attention from the nation's pressing problems.

Yeltsin aides also dismissed the rumors, calling them a crude attempt to force presidential elections before 1996. The government news agency went so far as to report that a psychic gave the president a checkup through vibes and found "no grounds for concern."

"There are too many people eager to be the head of state," Sergei Filatov, Yeltsin's chief of staff, told the ITAR-Tass news agency.

The way Rutskoi sees it, the real coup took place last fall when Yeltsin disbanded parliament, then blasted him and his armed followers out of the parliament building with tanks and troops.

The confrontation landed Rutskoi in jail and seemed to shatter his presidential ambitions. But the new parliament granted a broad amnesty that freed Rutskoi and other Yeltsin foes.

In the anything-goes world of Russian politics, Rutskoi, a 46-year-old Afghan war hero, is now seen as a potentially viable presidential contender again. Former President Richard Nixon met with him during a recent Moscow trip, enraging Yeltsin.

Will he run? "It's too early to say," Rutskoi said with a broad smile.

But as he toured an exhibition of wares made by defense industries converting to civilian production, he did everything but kiss babies — and that's probably because there weren't any around.

He inquired about the prices of pasta machines made by a factory that once made sausage grinders and lamps. He peered into ovens and sampled bread and cheese. He even had one of his jumbo bodyguards step onto an industrial-strength scale to oblige the insistent pack of photographers.

Chernomyrdin says IMF loan is approved

MOSCOW (AP) — The International Monetary Fund has approved a $1.5 billion loan to Russia, Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin said Tuesday.

The new credit is a key vote of confidence in the country's economic reforms, and provides a boost to the government, whose commitment to reform had been questioned after the departure of leading reformers in January.

"The loan had been hung up for months while IMF officials scrutinized the government's 1994 plans for cutting spending and reducing the deficit."

"Everything's been agreed," Chernomyrdin told reporters as he left a meeting with IMF managing director Michel Camdessus.

Camdessus voiced concern Monday about inflation, which totaled about 950 percent for 1993.

Muslims heard more than 1 gun

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian survivors suggested Tuesday that at least two gunmen were involved in the Hebron mosque massacre, contradicting Israeli assertions that a lone Jewish settler killed 30 Muslim worshippers.

But none of the three witnesses who said they heard shots fired from different directions saw a second gunman.

The testimony came in the third week of an Israeli inquiry into the Feb. 25 massacre at the Tomb of the Patriarchs in the West Bank town of Hebron. So far, the panel has listened to hours of conflicting testimony from government officials, army commanders and soldiers. Tuesday was the first day

Palestinian witnesses were heard.

Skeptical members of the five-man panel pressed the witnesses on why they didn't mention a second gunman in earlier statements to investigators and whether they might have heard ricochets or echoes.

Eliezer Goldberg, a Supreme Court justice, asked whether the testimony by some of the 11 Palestinian witnesses who appeared Tuesday might have been orchestrated.

"Is it possible that beforehand you were guided to say something about this?" Goldberg said after five witnesses asked to talk about Jewish settler harassment of Muslims at the Tomb of the Patriarchs, site of the massacre. Witness Mohammed Musbah al-

Jabari, 29, bristled when confronted by Goldberg with his earlier affidavit to the Israeli "human rights" group B'tselem in which he made no mention of a second gunman.

"You want the truth?" al-Jabari said, his voice raised. "The truth is that there was more than one source of firing."

Al-Jabari, an English teacher, said later that he didn't believe the commission, which was appointed by the Supreme Court at the Israeli government's urging, would be fair.

"The court itself follows the same policy as the Israeli government. I came here to tell the truth to the world through the mass media," he said.

PLO, Israel nears agreement to talk

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — PLO and Israeli negotiators have hammered out a draft accord for an armed presence to protect Palestinians in the occupied lands that could reopen stalled peace talks, PLO and diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

The accord — which European diplomats said calls for moving Jewish settlers from the West Bank flashpoint of Hebron — meets a key PLO condition for returning to the talks halted after a Jewish settler gunned down 30 Palestinian worshippers Feb. 25.

Hart feels pressure of Final 4 Can Terps beat Michigan?

The Associated Press

The Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Steve Hart, likely to get more playing time in place of injured Sherron Wilkerson, knows talent alone isn't enough to carry Indiana through the rest of the NCAA tournament.

His inconsistent play at guard must improve if the Hoosiers are to beat Boston College on Friday and then have a chance on Sunday to reach the Final Four.

"Sherron picks up a lot of things I don't do right," said Hart, a 6-foot-3 freshman who averages 4.1 points a game and has played only two fewer minutes than Wilkerson this season.

"He definitely is a player we needed and now I have to pick up my game," Hart said. "I have to start working on things he had over me that I'm going to have to improve in order to play. I relied on him and I think he relied on me for some things, too."

Wilkerson, also a freshman, broke his left leg early in the second half of Sunday's 67-58 victory over Temple. He had surgery on Monday, and Dr. Steve Ahlfeld inserted a rod and several screws to stabilize the fracture.

The Hoosiers aren't sure who will fill Wilkerson's spot. Normally, it would be senior Pat Graham, but Graham is playing with a sore, probably broken, left foot. He hasn't practiced much the last three weeks. Nor has starting guard Damon Bailey, whose torn abdominal muscle has held him back.

Next in line, presumably, would be Hart. "Ball-handling and delivering the ball are two key things," assistant coach Ron Felling said of Hart. "He doesn't catch the ball in traffic, which I think is concentration. Sherron just saw the floor better and Steve just doesn't see some things. He has sort of a predetermined thing on what he wants to do."

"He's just got to relax and look the floor over. He's got to concentrate on being a guard. There's a difference between just being an athlete and being a guard. A guard has to distribute the ball and take it to the open areas."

Hart acknowledges the distinction. "I do feel I'm an asset to the team. I've just got to do other things better," Hart said.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Who says Maryland can't possibly beat Michigan in the NCAA Midwest Regional? From the very first game this season, the Terrapins have come up with one surprise after another.

The season began with an overtime upset of Georgetown over Thanksgiving and continued with Saturday's 95-87 stunner over Massachusetts. In between, the Terrapins went 8-8 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, finishing tied for fourth.

Not a bad showing from a team without a senior and a starting lineup of three sophomores and two freshmen.

"There hasn't been a time all year when this team ever has felt it wasn't good enough to play at this level," coach Gary Williams said recently. "I think with young players that's been a key for us all year. In other words, they've never been intimidated."

And it's not likely that Maryland will fold under the pressure of playing against Michigan in Dallas on Friday night. Certainly, the Terrapins have nothing to lose. A little over two weeks ago, they weren't even sure they would receive an at-large bid to the tournament.

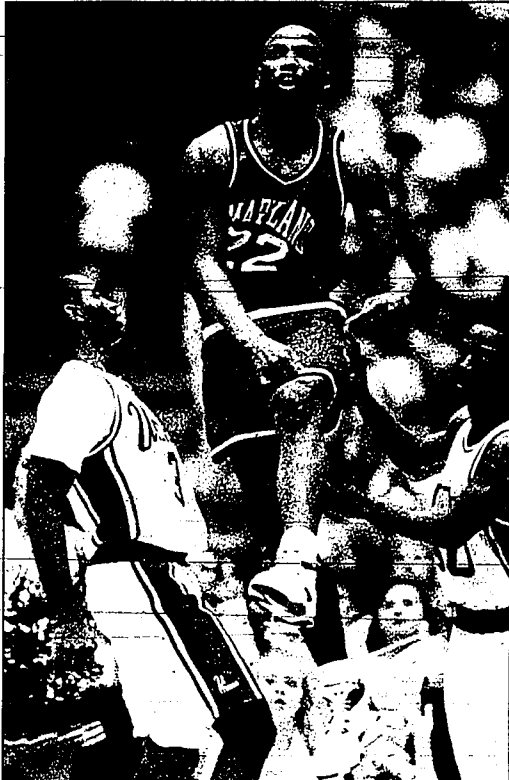

Maryland got in as a 10th seed and opened with a minor upset of Saint Louis. Then came the real upper, a comeback win over a Massachusetts team that earlier handed the Terrapins their most lopsided defeat of the season.

So much for the theory that Maryland would treat its first tournament appearance since 1988 with the happy-to-be-here approach that usually spells disaster. The Terrapins could have certainly been forgiven for such an attitude, considering the school was just two years removed from crippling NCAA sanctions that greatly hindered Williams' recruiting.

"We recruited these guys, the freshmen and sophomore class, with the idea that if they came here Maryland would be just like any other school — that we would be off the sanctions," Williams said. "But saying it and actually getting it done are two different things."

"We haven't had any good news around here in so long. There was a lot of attention this year and I don't know how well we handled it, but at the same time it's better than the attention we got the first two years I was here. I'll take this kind of pressure anytime over the pressure of just trying to get through the day to get to practice."

It's been a long time since the Terrapins have been practicing this late in the season.

CSI coach hopes to snap slump

By Mike Maller

Tacoma and Skagit Valley of Washington.

TWIN FALLS — Despite Tuesday's snowfall, College of Southern Idaho coach Jim Walker had no intention of changing the CSI Classic that starts Thursday from a baseball tournament to a ski meet.

Walker wants the ballgames this weekend to give the Golden Eagles a chance to snap out of their season-long batting slump.

One thing that may help CSI is facing some new competition. Along with the Eagles' most often seen opponent this season, Treasure Valley, the tournament field includes Chemeketa, who CSI has only played once, and new faces in

"It's real nice to get to play some new people who don't know so much about us," Walker said.

Playing the same teams, Eagle batters have been seeing the same pitches over and over again and have not been particularly successful hitting them.

The team's hitters met Monday and set goals of eight hits per game and percentages of success in situational hitting. "I just hope it will snap us out," Walker said. "We're working hard, but our mental attitudes at the plate are really hurting us. If they don't get a hit the first time up, they figure they're going 0-for-4."

NFL adopts 2-pointer

The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — The two-point conversion became a part of the NFL on Tuesday in a move designed to liven-up-a game that last year often seemed to be a long-range duel between field goal kickers.

"I really think it's time has come," said general manager George Young of the New York Giants, co-chairman of the competition committee.

"There was an image out there that we weren't doing enough to score touchdowns. Right or wrong, we had to do something about it."

The two-point conversion will be run from the 2-yard-line rather than the 3, as in college. It comes after a season in which there were three field goals kicked for every touchdown and field goals accounted for 24 percent of the points.

A decade ago, the ratio was two touchdowns to one field goal. It was passed along with two other rule changes designed to add offense, all of which were passed without the participation of the coaches, many of whom were opposed.

Others: — Kickoffs will now come from the 30-yard-line rather than the 35 and will be from a 1-inch-tall to prevent kicks that hang in the air almost as long as punts. Kickers now can use toes from one to three inches.

Failed field goals will now be placed at the spot from where the kick was attempted rather than at the line of scrimmage. That means the kicking team will be penalized between seven and eight yards for missing.

But the major change is the two-point conversion, which has been used by colleges since 1958 and was used by all of the NFL's old rivals, the AFL, World Football League and USFL. But it had always been rejected by NFL coaches, who saw it as one more decision on which they could be second-guessed.

This year, the coaches seemed less concerned, although Dan Reeves of the Giants was the angriest, in part because the kickoff rule would negate his use of two kickers — Brad Daluiso is used primarily to kick off out of the end zone. Reeves was also upset because the coaches weren't allowed in the debate over the rule change — they were told to arrive for the meeting at 2 p.m., and by then the owners and GMs had already voted for the change.

"What was the greatest comeback in history? Buffalo over Houston in the playoffs two years ago," Reeves said, referring to the Bills' overtime win after trailing 35-3 in the third quarter. "They didn't need a two-point conversion to do that."

But the Giants were one of the 23 teams that voted for the change following the lead of Young, whose committee recommended the two-pointer by an 8-0 vote.

Los Angeles Kings star Wayne Gretzky announces that he signed an agreement with L.A. Gear. On the eve of his attempt to break the NHL goal scoring record, Gretzky said that concurrent with his 802nd goal he will donate 802 pairs of shoes to disadvantaged Los Angeles-area children.

Gretzky nears goal

The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — One more goal and the Great One will be the greatest one in NHL history.

When Gordie Howe retired in 1980 at age 52, he had scored a record 801 goals in 1,767 NHL games. Wayne Gretzky was scoring 51 goals as a rookie with the Edmonton Oilers that year.

Now, at age 33 and in his sixth season with the Los Angeles Kings after nine years with the Oilers, Gretzky can pass Howe by scoring once Wednesday night against Vancouver Canucks at the Forum in his 1,147th NHL game.

Gretzky caught Howe on Sunday, scoring his 800th and 801st goals in a 6-6 tie at San Jose. The second goal came with 49 seconds left and tied the game. With the Kings battling for a playoff berth, it might have been their most important goal of the year.

When Gretzky passes Howe, he will own his 61st NHL record. Gretzky has said he had mixed feelings about breaking Howe's record because he admired Howe so much. But with the record one goal away, Gretzky said he feels otherwise.

"Right now, I don't have mixed feelings," Gretzky said at a news conference called to announce he had signed an endorsement contract with L.A. Gear. "Right now, I'm just excited and ecstatic about it. My honest feeling is, I can't wait."

"I want it to happen tomorrow night, believe me. It would be nice to have it happen at home. Hopefully, it happens tomorrow." Gretzky stressed that while he was excited about the record, winning was the most important thing.

"Sunday was a great example, the point was so important," he said of goal No. 801. "It goes hand-in-hand. Tomorrow, we have to win and I have to score."

"My focus still has to be on the hockey club. I've tried to explain to the team. It's going to happen, one game, two games, eight games." The sooner it happens the better so people on the team don't have to think about it.

Entering Tuesday night's action, the Kings were tied with Anaheim, five points behind San Jose in the battle for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference.

Coach considers quitting Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson left the NFL's coach Jimmy Johnson saying he's considering quitting after learning owner Jerry Jones repeatedly threatened to fire him.

"I've heard from numerous reliable sources that (Jones) was in the bar in the early hours of the morning and threatening to fire me and said he was going to fire me at least eight or nine times," Johnson was quoted as saying in Wednesday's editions of The Morning News.

"I am really dumbfounded for the simple reason I don't know what I did," he said.

Johnson confronted Jones about the statements Wednesday at the Dallas office. Johnson said he then left the gathering, the newspaper reported.

"This particular incident makes me pull back and reassess things," said Johnson, who months ago caused waves by saying he was intrigued by the idea of coaching the expansion Jacksonville franchise.

A-3 boys' track looks 'wide open'; Kimberly, Declo vie for girls' title

By Vin Cappiello
Times-News writer

With the exception of Jeff Jeffries, no A-3 coach in District 4 is bold enough to predict where his boys' track team will finish this spring.

But the Gooding coach's reasons start with a core of strong distance and middle distance runners who Jeffries said will be a force with which to be reckoned.

"When we go into district competition, I don't think anyone can get into those kids," Jeffries said of Justin Brown, Dave Hill, Lyle Rogers, Andy Tennant and Jared Nelson. "They're going to be tough."

The Senators are the defending district champions and they also boast three returners from last year's state championship 4x100-meter relay team in Chris Richards, Ryan Lee and Jason Reink.

Jeffries also said Gooding has "seven or eight kids who will run better than 2:15" for 800 meters.

Gooding will see a challenge, other coaches said, from Declo, Glens Ferry and possibly Kimberly, followed by Filer, Valley and Wendell.

"I think it's going to be wide open," Filer coach LaRell Emerson said. "Declo, Kimberly and Glens Ferry traditionally are the team with the most depth. They have to be the teams to beat."

Patterson said his Wildcats probably won't challenge for any team titles, but he is hopeful individuals like Ryan Mai and Justin Walker will provide support in the hurdles and long jump, respectively.

Kimberly coach Filer is optimistic about the chances of his defending district champion medley team, which set a record at 3:43 last year. Shawn Annis, Todd Okarma, Russell Watson and Jordan Beard are all back, as is sophomore Luke Mickelson.

Beard might be the one to watch, Filer said. "Jordan Beard is a legitimate contender for state champion in the mile," Filer said. "He is one of the strongest 800-meter kids in the district."

Predicting the girls' finish seems to be a little easier.

A-3 track season starts

The A-3 track and field season gets started today as seven teams will meet at the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind at 2 p.m.

Teams expected to compete include Buhl, Gooding, ISDB, Kimberly, Raft River, Wendell, Filer, Glens Ferry and Valley.

Gooding girls' coach Joleen Toone said the meet will go on "weather permitting," and that any decision regarding cancellation should be made no later than 11 a.m.

as most coaches are pointing to Kimberly or Declo.

"I think the Kimberly girls finally have some experience," Potter said. "We have people coming back in all areas who have been successful. It's up to them now."

Laura McKinlay is expected to earn points for the Bulldogs in each of the three jumping events. On the track, Potter sees his sprint and middle distance mainstays as Shelly Grupe, Richelle Anderson, Tracy Arrossa, Autumn Giles and Jennifer Martinez. Marilyn Gibby also is a triple threat for Kimberly in the 800, 1,600 and 3,200, Potter added.

Gooding girls' coach Joleen Toone said she also expects Kimberly and Declo to be at the top of the district. And as for her Senators, she is expecting big things from sophomore Toby Braga in the sprints.

"She lifted weights over the summer and played volleyball and basketball," Toone said. "She's maturing and I think she'll do a good job for us."

Braga was also a member of the state champion medley relay team that also included Katrina Renner, who also is expected to excel in the 100 and 200.

Carrie Jo Windes will place Wendell's girls. She was the state champion in the triple jump last year.

Karla Coon and Janae Chandler are Filer's top returning letter winners, Coach Patterson said.

Barnes heads for Atlantic Coast

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Rick Barnes, who coached Providence to the Big East tournament championship this year, was hired Tuesday to coach Clemson.

Barnes replaces Cliff Ellis, who has the Tigers in the third round of the National Invitation Tournament. Ellis said in January this would be his last season after 10 years.

Western Kentucky's Ralph Willard is expected to be hired at Providence within a week. The Providence Journal-Bulletin reported Tuesday.

Barnes was given a seven-year contract at $110,000 a year.

"I plan for this guy to be here a lot longer than seven years," athletic director Bobby Robinson said. Barnes was the only person interviewed for the job, he said.

A 39-year-old Hickory, N.C., native, Barnes said he always wanted to coach an Atlantic Coast Conference team.

'I plan for this guy to be here a lot longer than seven years.'

— Bobby Robinson, Clemson athletic director

"When you grew up in the early '70s, all you saw on TV was ACC basketball," Barnes said. "I think anybody that grows up in this part of the country knows what a great tradition Clemson University has."

Barnes was 108-76 in six seasons at Providence and took the Friars to three NCAA tournaments and two NITs. Providence, 20-10 this year, ended its season Thursday with a 76-70 NCAA tournament loss to Alabama.

Clemson ended the regular season 15-14 and lost to Duke in the second round of the ACC tournament. The Tigers beat West Virginia 96-79 in the second round of the NIT Monday night and will play Vanderbilt on Wednesday.

Barnes can't leave campus to recruit until Clemson's season ends, but he can make phone calls to recruits and organize his staff, Robinson said.

Barnes attended Lenoir-Rhyne and began coaching at North State Academy in Hickory, N.C., in 1977. He was an assistant at Davidson, George Mason, Alabama and Ohio State before being named head coach at George Mason in 1987. After a 20-10 season there, Barnes moved to Providence.

He inherits a team that is losing seven seniors, including starters Lou Ritchie, Andre Bovain, Jeff Brown and Wayne Buckingham. There is also a possibility that junior center Sharone Wright could make himself eligible for the NBA draft.

Smith will face choices, after NCAA

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Coach Tubby Smith has Tulsa in the NCAA tournament's final 16 for the first time, and Golden Hurricane fans couldn't be more thrilled — or worried.

They have been through this routine before: Dynamic coach comes to small university with exciting, up-tempo style; team makes a name for itself; coach leaves for bigger job.

It happened with Nolan Richardson when he arrived from Western Texas Junior College in 1980. In five years at Tulsa he won an NIT championship, made three NCAA tournament appearances and had a 119-37 record before leaving for

Smith

With three consecutive winning records, the first two under adverse conditions, and the school's surprising run through the NCAA tournament, Smith is arguably one of the hottest coaching prospects around. "If Denny Crum can build a championship team at Louisville, someone can do it at Tulsa," said Bob Gardner, a longtime season-ticket holder. "I'm thinking Tubby is the right man — I'd love to see him fulfill our dream."

But already Tennessee has asked for permission to meet with Smith, and outgoing athletic director Rick Dickson said he's gotten a couple of other feelers.

"We're just telling everybody they need to wait until basketball is over," said Dickson, who leaves next month to become athletic director at Washington State.

Haskins views media, officials in new light

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota basketball coach Clem Haskins has vowed to be more combative in dealings with officials and the media.

"I think Bobby Knight has the best philosophy with the media — treat them like dogs, because most of them deserve it," Haskins said.

He also said he planned to risk suspension early next season by protesting the foul disparity between Minnesota's Chad Kolander and opposing centers.

Haskins made his comments Monday in the Star Tribune as the team flew home from Sacramento, Calif., where the Gophers lost Sunday to Louisville in the second round of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Haskins was stung by criticism about the team's inconsistency during what he called a "very successful season."

He had accepted the pressure to contend early in the season, then grew angry at criticism of his team when the Gophers reached the midpoint of the Big Ten schedule with a 5-4 record.

To Haskins, a 20-victory season should be reason for only praise. The failure to contend in the Big Ten was tied to Jayson Walton's season-long knee problems, he said.

'I think Bobby Knight has the best philosophy with the media — treat them like dogs, because most of them deserve it.'

— Clem Haskins, Minnesota coach

But what of the frequent ups and downs? The Gophers defeated Wisconsin twice by more than 30 points and beat Indiana by 50.

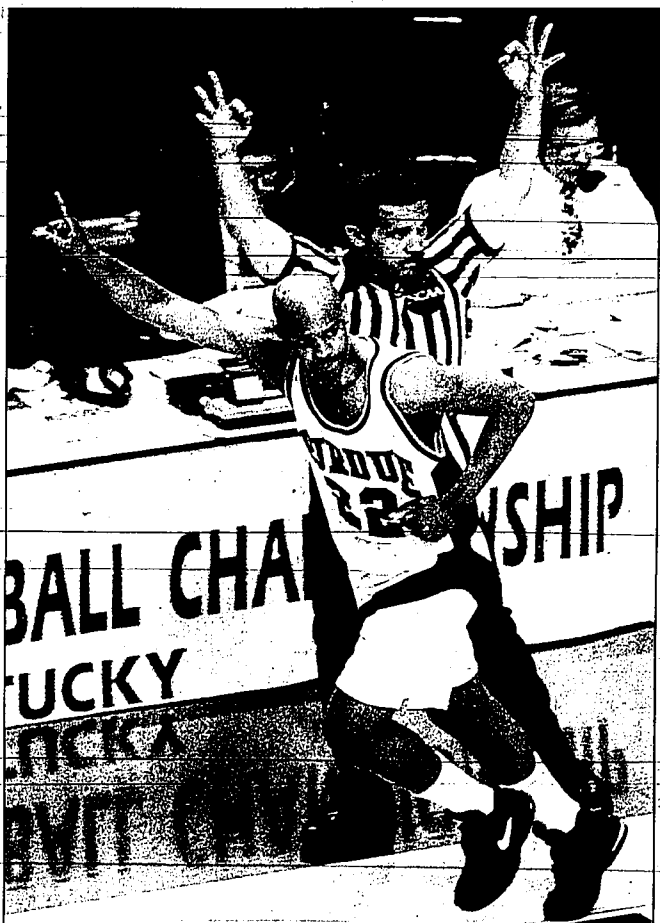

They lost at Penn State and Iowa, and needed three overtimes to defeat last-place Iowa at home. Walton played in all of those games.

"If we get in postseason play, people have no need to worry about ups and downs," Haskins said. "The most important thing is to try to get your team in postseason play."

A Big Ten title? "My ultimate goal is to get in postseason play, not winning the Big Ten championship," Haskins said.

Purdue's Cuonzo Martin heads for the other end after hitting a three-point field goal in the first half of his team's NCAA Southeast Regional game against Alabama.

Off-season work changed Martin into a 3-point gun

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Cuonzo Martin didn't make a 3-point shot in his first two years at Purdue. Now, thanks to a lot of off-season work, Martin is a valuable outside threat for the Big Ten champions.

The 6-foot-6 junior missed all seven 3-pointers he attempted in his first two years. This season, however, he's hit 78-of-176 attempts, giving Purdue another offensive weapon to go with NCAA Division I scoring leader Glenn Robinson.

"We felt he could make 3-pointers and asked him to work on it during the summer," Purdue coach Gene Keady said Tuesday. "He increased his shooting range. Once he developed his confidence it's been really great."

"I knew it would be a plus for our team if I could knock the shot down," Martin said of the long-range shots he has hit with 44-percent accuracy. The 3-pointers helped him post a career-high 16.0 scoring average, second on the team to Robinson's 30.4 mark. "I shot thousands of them before preseason practice began, just shooting from different spots," Martin said. "I wanted to be able to knock the shot down from all areas of the court and be consistent. Now it's my favorite shot."

"We simply weren't going to win if he doesn't make 3-pointers," Keady said. "It's that simple."

The Bulls' makers, No. 3 in the final Associated Press poll, are seeded first in the Southeast regional and take a 28-4 mark against fourth-seeded Kansas (27-7) in one of Thursday's semifinals in Knoxville, Tenn.

Marquette (24-8) meets Duke (25-5) in the other semifinal with the championship game set for Saturday night.

"My confidence is pretty good right now. I'm just playing with noise," Martin said. "We know the old story that you just play them one game at a time. That's what got us the Big Ten championship. That's what got us this far in the NCAA."

The two teams are meeting for only the third time. They last met during the 1949-50 season and Kansas evaded the series with a 60-52 victory on its home court.

However, the Jayhawks have a big edge in tournament experience. Purdue is in the Sweet Sixteen for the first time since 1980, when it lost to UCLA in the Final Four semifinals. Kansas, meanwhile, is seeking its third trip to the Final Four in four years.

"There's no doubt they've got more tournament experience than we do. That's probably a big factor at this point," Keady said. "The next step is going through the mental part of the game and believing you can do it. Everyone has questioned us all year long. It's a matter of taking care of business."

While Purdue's scoring is dominated by Robinson, who needs just 27 points to become the 18th player in NCAA history to score 1,000 in a season, the Jayhawks depend on balance.

Grant Steve Woodberry leads the Jayhawks with a 15.5 average and forward Richard Scott is second at 13.6 on a team that has seven players averaging at least 6.9 per game.

"We just hope that our team defense is good enough to cope with that because that's going to be the key to moving on," Keady said.

Connecticut coach says Florida is mirror image

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun says small things — toughness, getting the loose ball, running for the full game instead of 30 minutes — will determine the outcome of Friday's NCAA game against Florida.

Calhoun said Florida "mirrors" the fourth-ranked Huskies in playing strengths and style and that it will be difficult to find any weaknesses to key on in the Eastern Regional semifinal game at Miami.

"My biggest concern is that Florida is a terrific defensive team," Calhoun said Tuesday in a conference call from Orlando, Fla., where the Huskies were staying before heading to Miami.

"They remind me of a Big East team. They defend well. You are not going to get easy shots. They are a very physical defensive team."

Calhoun said the Huskies (29-4) might try to go inside more because he has not seen Florida (27-7) block a lot of shots. He also would like to get more points from his centers, who averaged only eight points per game during the regular season and are averaging three per game during the postseason.

"I don't expect to see after three games anybody average 20," Calhoun said, "but I'd like to see a few more points."

Connecticut planned to go to Miami Wednesday and begin practicing in a closed session.

Striving forward Donny Marshall, a big factor in the Huskies' 75-63 victory over George Washington in the second round, has a sprained ankle, suffered while going for a layup in the second half of the game.

He has been unable to attend regular practices. But Calhoun said there is no ligation damage and not much swelling, and team doctors expect Marshall to recover in time for Friday's game.

Marshall did some shooting Monday and is undergoing rehabilitation, Calhoun said.

Jordan ends drought, leads team over Sox

The Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Brian Jordan hit a three-run homer and the St. Louis Cardinals ended a 20-inning scoreless drought Tuesday with a 9-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Jordan's homer capped a four-run sixth-off-Wally Ritchie-and-pinch-hitter Mark Whiten had a two-run single in a three-run seventh against Rod Bolton. Gerald Perry added a two-run single in the eighth off Bolton.

Darwin Jackson singled in a run for the White Sox in the fourth. Chicago got four runs in the sixth, including solo home runs by Tim Lincecum and Warren Newton, off St. Louis starter Rene Arocha.

Arocha gave up six hits, struck out three and walked one in six innings.

Rangers (ss) 4, Orioles 2

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — Will Clark's second home run of the game, a two-run shot in the bottom of the ninth, gave Texas a victory.

After Rob Ducey singled, Clark drove Jim Poole's first pitch over the right field wall, breaking a 2-2 tie.

Clark had four hits — his first two homers of the spring, a double and a single — and three RBIs. He is hitting .400 and leads the team in RBIs with 12.

After singling in the first, Clark homered in the third, tying the score 1-1. He doubled and scored in the sixth, putting the Rangers ahead 2-1. The Orioles scored on an infield single by Mark McLemore in the third and a pinch-hit homer by Lonnie Smith in the seventh.

Reds 12, Phillies 9

PLANT CITY, Fla. — Reggie Sanders hit two of Cincinnati's three homers, helping the Reds beat Philadelphia despite four homers by the Phillies.

Ricky Jordan went 4-for-4 with a homer and four RBIs for Philadelphia. But the Phillies couldn't overcome Curt Schilling's worst performance of the spring. Schilling gave up 11 hits and 10 earned runs in four innings.

Reds starter Tom Browning gave up all four Phillies homers — to first. Thompson, Jordan, Pete Incaviglia and Kim Batisse. The Phillies had nine hits and six runs off Browning in five innings.

Sanders' two-run homer — the first this spring — by a Reds' regular — put Cincinnati ahead 3-1 in the first. Willie Greene singled home two runs in the five-run third, and Sanders and Greene homered on consecutive pitches in the fourth for a 10-5 lead.

Incaviglia was 3-for-5 with a solo homer and an RBI single, but fouled out with the bases loaded in the eighth to end Philadelphia's last threat.

Indians 15, Rangers (ss) 7

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — Wayne Kirby knocked in four runs with two doubles, Candy Maldonado hit a three-run homer and Manny Ramirez homered and doubled, driving in two runs, as Cleveland collected 21 hits in the victory.

James Hurst made his first spring start for Texas and allowed nine runs and 12 hits in three innings. Mark Clark allowed three runs and seven hits in six innings for Cleveland.

Maldonado's homer highlighted Cleveland's four-run first. Omar Vizquel hit a two-run home run in the second and Sandy Alomar tripled home two runs and scored on Kenny Lofton's third hit of the game in the third. Manny Ramirez homered in the sixth and doubled home a run in the seventh. Kirby hit two-run doubles in the seventh and eighth.

Bill Ripken drove in two runs for Texas with a double and a single.

Tigers 4, Royals 2

HAINES CITY, Fla. — Junior Felix and Chad Kreuter had consecutive RBIs in a three-run second, helping Detroit beat Kansas City.

Kirk Gibson, who had been 0-for-14 this spring, started the second with a single and stole second before Felix and Kreuter doubled. Milt Cuyler's single scored Kreuter with the third run. Cuyler had three hits and stole two bases.

Shawn Hare homered in the ninth for the final Tigers run.

Mike Moore, the Tigers' Opening Day starter, was the winner despite giving up home runs to Gary Gaetti and Bob Hamelin.

Mets 4, Astros 1

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Jeff Kent hit a three-run homer and Eric Hillman pitched five strong innings, leading New York past Houston.

Astros starter Greg Swindell walked Glenn Davis with two out in the first and Kevin McReynolds followed with an infield hit before Kent homered.

Hillman allowed two hits, walking none and striking out one.

Jesse Barfield drove in Houston's only run with a double in the eighth. Joe Orsulak drove in New York's final run with a double off Mitch Williams in the ninth.

Expos 6, Marlins 3

MELBOURNE, Fla. — Kirk Rueter and Butch Henry combined for five shutout innings to lead Montreal.

Rueter started and went two innings without giving up a hit. Henry followed with three one-hit innings.

Shane Andrews had the biggest hit for Montreal, a two-run double.

Mitch Lyden hit a two-run homer for Florida.

Braves 9, Dodgers 1

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Terry Pendleton's two-run triple keyed a five-run first inning and the Atlanta-Braves won a rain-shortened game.

The rally started with two errors, scoring one run. Fred McGriff's single scored another run. David Justice followed with an infield single and Pendleton's triple brought home McGriff and Justice. Pendleton scored on a single by Raphael Belliard.

The Braves added two runs in the third and Ryan Klesko hit a two-run homer in the fourth.

The Dodgers' only run came in the sixth inning when Tom Prince's groundout to short scored Jeff Treadway.

Couple skates into 2nd with cracked rib

CHIBA, Japan (AP) — Despite the pain of a cracked rib, skater Isabelle Brasseur threw herself into the air, twisted twice and landed in the hands of partner Lloyd Eisler.

After 24 minutes of jumps, spins, spirals and lifts Tuesday night, the Canadian duo stood second after the short program in their bid to defend the world pairs figure skating title.

Next comes 4½ minutes of skating in Wednesday night's long program, which accounts for two-thirds of the total score.

"When you're in competition, you don't want to quit," said Brasseur, skating against the advice of her coach and doctor.

Eisler added: "She's got a lot of courage. I don't know if I would have been able to do it. She did a fantastic job."

A big barrier for the Canadian pair is the Russians, who seem to have an endless supply of dazzling twosomes. After the pairs' short program Tuesday night, Russians were in first and third places, although leaders Evgenia Shishkova and Vadim Naumov barely edged the Canadians.

American pairs Jenni Meno of Westlake, Ohio, and Todd Sand of Thousand Oaks, Calif., were sixth and Kyoko Ina of Guttenberg, N.J., and Jason Dungien of Troy, Mich., 14th. Karen Courtland of Whippany, N.J., and Todd Reynolds of Houston were 16th.

Also Wednesday, Canada's Elvis Stojko hopes to improve on a string of second places — at the Olympics, the 1993 World Championships and the 1993 national championships.

The men skate their short program of required elements, worth one-third of the total score, just before the pairs go into their medal-deciding battle.

Ice dancing Olympic gold medalists Oksana Grischuk and Evgeni Platov won the compulsory waltz and tango, worth 20 percent of the total score. The dancers still have an optional dance on Thursday and a free program Friday.

The men's field includes yet another Russian standout — Olympic gold medalist Alexei Urmanov. Besides Stojko, other challengers include American Brian Boitano, Philippe Candeloro and European runner-up Viatcheslav Zagorodniuk of Ukraine.

Canadians Lloyd Eisler and Isabelle Brasseur skate in the pairs technical program at the World Figure Skating Championships. The Canadians, skating powerfully despite Brasseur's constant pain from a cracked rib, nearly beat the Russians in the pairs program.

BoSox rediscover sweet swing

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — The Boston Red Sox are belting the ball again just two seasons after having their worst batting average since 1968.

Mike Greenwell, Mo Vaughn and Andre Dawson are the heart of the order — all are hitting over .300. The team already has more homers and as many wins as it had for the entire spring training a year ago.

Monday's 7-6 win over the Chicago White Sox improved the Red Sox record to 11-7. Their batting average went to .293, and they had 18 homers. Last spring, they finished at 11-20 with a .276 average and 16 homers.

"I don't think there's a problem about peaking early," Greenwell said. "Hitting well in spring training builds confidence that could carry over into the season."

Vaughn has been the team's most impressive hitter. With two doubles and two RBIs against Chicago, he improved his major-league leading totals to 20 RBIs and 45 total bases. He was tops in the majors in homers with seven, the same number of singles he had.

He even crushes the ball on outs. He hit his seventh homer Sunday in an 11-7 loss to Minnesota but said his best at bat was a first-inning opposite field drive that left fielder Alex Cole caught at the wall.

That's the way betting coach Mike Eisler taught him to hit. The results were obvious last year when he had 29 homers, 101 RBIs and a .297 average in his first season as Boston's full-time first baseman.

The team's batting average improved from .246 in 1992, lowest since 1936 in 1968, to .264 last season. The homer total increased from 84 to 114. Vaughn expects more improvement this season.

"It's the second year with (the same) batting coach," he said. The players "have been together for a while now so guys know what they want to do at the plate."

"Everybody doesn't think we have the capabilities to go out and produce," he added. "We're going to surprise some people. They've got us picked down in the division. We'll sneak up on somebody."

Boston is in the tough AL East with World Series winner Toronto, Baltimore, the New York Yankees and Detroit.

But after beating the White Sox, Dawson was batting .391 with four homers, Vaughn .365 and Greenwell .326 with 12 games left. Last spring, Vaughn hit .403 with six homers, but Dawson hit .288 with two homers and Greenwell .261.

Going into Tuesday night's game, against Minnesota, Boston had scored at least seven runs in six of its previous nine games and was averaging 5.7 runs per game compared with 4.3 last spring and 4.2 in the regular season.

Infielders Scott Cooper and John Valentin are back for their second season as regulars after hitting well last year. And in the offseason, the Red Sox signed two free agents who have starting jobs, Dave Valle and Otis Nixon.

Valle, with 13 homers and a .258 average for Seattle last year, gives Boston hitting it lacked at the catcher's position. And Nixon provides much needed centerfield defense and speed.

Hargrove slammed into past during anniversary conference

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — The grief returned suddenly and powerfully for Cleveland Indians manager Mike Hargrove when he walked into a crowded room Tuesday to discuss the boating accident that killed two of his pitchers exactly a year earlier.

"When I looked out and saw the cameras and all of you sitting there, I don't think it eased me back to last year. It kind of slammed me back into last year," Hargrove said.

Cleveland relievers Steve Olin and Tim Crews were killed on March 22 last year when the boat Crews was piloting hit a dock on Little Lake Nellie during a family picnic on the team's only day off of the spring. Starter Bob Ojeda had his scalp torn open in the accident, but he returned to pitch later in the season.

The Indians commemorated the anniversary privately, closing their clubhouse to reporters all day and holding no memorial service. Flags at Chain O'Lakes Park were at half-staff.

Hargrove and general manager

John Hart met with reporters for about 15 minutes.

"Our decision was to keep the ceremonies to a minimum ... in an effort to allow our players to have their own thoughts and focus on what we have to do," Hart said.

"There's no escaping what this franchise, what these families, what our young players experienced over the last year. Personally, a year ago today I was sitting in this same spot with a terrible, terrible feeling."

Hargrove said there has been surprisingly little talk about the tragedy among Indians players this spring. Some of those affected most deeply — in particular, Ojeda and Kevin Wickander, who was best man at Olin's wedding — are no longer with the team.

Ojeda signed with the New York Yankees during the offseason, and Wickander was traded to Cincinnati last year.

"The mood of the players is as upbeat as it can be," Hargrove said.

"We all are aware of this being the anniversary of the accident. We do have a lot of new faces here who were not here last year." Olin and Crews sustained fatal head injuries as the boat crashed under a dock that now sits on dry land, because the lake has shrunk during the past year. But Hargrove said his conversations with players were close to the victims have not dwelled on "what if."

"They are conversations of 'remember when,' and being able to laugh about them and being able to enjoy the good memories," Hargrove said. "When I say we've moved on, that's what I mean."

"That doesn't mean we have forgotten Tim and Steve. That doesn't mean we have forgotten Laurie (Crews) and Patti (Olin) and their children. The grief is still there. The sorrow is still there. I don't think it will ever leave. The old saying, 'Time heals all wounds,' is not correct. But you learn to deal with it and to go on. We will never forget. But you get to a point that enough is enough, and we need to get on with our business."

Smith, 39, looks away from retirement

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Don't mention retirement to St. Louis Cardinal's shortstop Ozzie Smith, who plans to be playing baseball's most demanding position into his 40s.

"You should stay as long as you can," Smith said. "I want to play at least two more years and then I'll look at it and if I feel like playing longer, I'll re-evaluate it then."

Smith turned 39 in December, so he's not far from his goal. He hasn't made many concessions to his advanced baseball age, either.

He has no plans to dump his crowd-pleasing backflip on opening night. "He looks the same to me," Cardinals manager Joe Torre said.

That's because of his year-round conditioning program. Smith and teammate Bernard Gilkey spent a week in New Orleans in November with fitness guru Mackie Shiltone.

"I'm pretty much on a maintenance program," Smith said. "I go down there because I can get in a working-frame-of-mind; get my words and spirit."

Despite all of his work, Smith sometimes doesn't feel the same. In fact, on the day he arrived at training camp he talked about the end.

"You just don't feel good some days," Smith said. "Yeah, those moments run across your mind. It's like anything else, frustration is part of what we do."

St. Louis Cardinal Ozzie Smith plans to be playing baseball's most demanding position into his 40s.

"But you've got to remember what you're trying to achieve and doing what I do has always been a lot of fun."

Smith's only remaining goal is 2,500 hits. He needs 235 hits to reach it, and figures it'll take two more seasons.

That's a reasonable timetable, considering he's coming off one of his better offense seasons. He hit .288 with six triples, 21 stolen bases and 53 RBIs and has had 150 or more hits the last three years.

He's already a likely first-ballot Hall of Famer for his defensive prowess, although he may have slipped some. He won 13 consecutive Gold Gloves before his streak ended last year, but his error total has gone from eight to 10 in 19 the last three years and his range has decreased.

"Of course my range isn't what it was 10 years ago; but whose is?" Smith said.

Smith said his fielding woes were compounded by three factors: a young pitching staff that often couldn't hit spots, a bad year at third base for Todd Zeile, who had 33 errors and lost confidence and range, and the problem of pin-pointing throws to first.

"He's not 5-10, he's 5-7," said Smith, who's 5-9. "I look down on him, which is not an easy task."

Torre has tried to help keep Smith fresh by extending him from most spring trips. But Smith has played extensively in all of the home games, where he always draws the biggest cheer, so he's not exactly sitting around.

"Joe has a lot of players in camp and he wants to see them all play," Smith said. "I know what all of those parks look like, anyway."

Group suggests female chef cook for president

Only hours after the White House disclosed that executive chef Pierre Chambrin had resigned, the local chapter of Les Dames d'Escoffier, the group of professional women in food and wine industries, urged the White House to consider naming a woman chef to replace him.

"A woman's place is definitely in the kitchen - the White House kitchen," wrote Phyllis Frucht, chapter president.

Also dishing up advice was Public Voice for Food and Health Policy. In a letter to Hillary Clinton, the consumer-advocate group supported selecting a chef "who places a high priority on choosing foods grown with little or no pesticides."

It was reported that Chambrin and three assistants were asked to leave because Chambrin cooks nothing but rich French food, while the Clintons prefer American food, preferably low-fat. (Curiously, pastry chef Roland Mesnier was not asked to resign.) A chef was asked to resign during the Reagan tenure, but this is the first time an entire White House kitchen staff has been shown the door.

Chefs hope to raise awareness of responsible farming, diets

They came, they saw, they signed and they said "organic cheese."

About 50 Washington, D.C., chefs and environmentalists gathered at Restaurant Norm recently to participate in a seminar and sign the charter for the Chefs Collaborative: 2000.

The Collaborative is an educational initiative of the Oldways Preservation & Exchange Trust, a Boston-based, non-profit organization. Through the Collaborative, concerned chefs hope to raise awareness of ecologically responsible farming, healthful traditional diets and minimally processed foods.

Their agenda includes participating in environmental campaigns; promoting fruits, vegetables, grains, legumes and nuts as "center-of-the-plate" foods; and working with public-advocacy groups in Washington.

Chefs in more than a dozen U.S. cities have signed the charter as well. For more information, write Oldways at 45 Milk St., Boston, Mass. 02109, or call 800-340-2300.

Expert on gracious living loves carrot, other juices

Martha Stewart, the expert on oh-so-gracious living, is into carrot juice. Or it's into her. At least once a day, "I drink it immediately after making it," she says. "A big glass-full. It's so good and so good for you."

But Stewart doesn't stop at carrots. "I like bananas and grapefruit juice in the morning," Stewart said. "During the day, if there's a tangerine handy I'll be eating it. I love fresh fruit. I've never stopped at a McDonald's in my entire life. I wouldn't think of it. I'd rather stop in a supermarket and find something to eat there. Whatever I put in my mouth, I want it to taste good and be healthy, too."

Her other favorite foods? Stewart loves to eat local specialties wherever she travels, and ethnic foods. On her recent visit to South Florida, she drank Cuban coffee and ate Cuban food.

Chicken recipe could win you $25,000 in national contest

Incredible Easter breads

Make them conventionally or in your bread machine

Making delectable Easter breads is easier than ever. Whether you employ quicker conventional methods or use your bread machine, you'll have scrumptious results with these recipes.

GIANT HOT CROSS BUN

(For use with bread machine)

Regular Loaf
(about 1 pound)

1/4 cup water (70 to 80 degrees)
1/4 cup evaporated milk
1 egg
1 1/2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 cups bread flour
1 teaspoon Fleischmann's Bread Machine Yeast
1/3 cup imported chopped or snipped pitted dates
3 tablespoons chopped mixed candied fruits
Powdered Sugar Frosting (recipe follows)

Large Loaf
(about 1 1/2 pounds)

1/2 cup water (70 to 80 degrees)
1/3 cup evaporated milk
1 egg
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
3 cups bread flour
1 1/2 teaspoons Fleischmann's Bread Machine Yeast
1/2 cup imported chopped or snipped pitted dates
1/2 cup chopped mixed candied fruits
Powdered Sugar Frosting (recipe follows)

Select loaf size recommended by the manufacturer of your machine.

Measure all ingredients except dates, candied fruits and frosting into bread machine pan in the order that the bread manufacturer suggests.

Process in sweet bread or dried fruit/nut cycle; if machine does not have these cycles, use basic bread cycle on lightest crust setting. Add dates and candied fruits at the signal or 5 to 10 minutes before the last kneading step ends.

Remove baked bread from pan; cool on wire rack. Drizzle or pipe frosting on bread to make a cross.

POWDERED SUGAR FROSTING: In small bowl, combine 1/4 cup sifted powdered sugar, 1 to 2 teaspoons evaporated milk and 1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract. Stir until smooth.

HOT CROSS BUNS

(Conventional)
Makes 1 1/2 dozen buns

5 1/2 to 6 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup sugar
2 packages Fleischmann's Active Dry or RapidRise Yeast
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 cup evaporated milk
1/2 cup water
1/3 cup butter or margarine, cut into pieces
2 eggs

You, too, can make delectable Hot Cross Buns for Easter get-togethers.

1 cup imported chopped or snipped pitted dates
1/4 cup chopped mixed candied fruits
1 egg white, lightly beaten
Powdered Sugar Frosting (recipe follows)

In large bowl, combine 2 cups flour, sugar, undissolved yeast, cinnamon, salt, allspice and nutmeg. Heat milk, water and butter until very warm (120 to 130 degrees). Gradually add to dry ingredients; beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add 2 eggs and 1/4 cup flour; beat 2 minutes at high speed. With spoon, stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough. Knead on floured surface until smooth and elastic, about 6 to 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover. Let rise in warm place until doubled in size, about 45 to 60 minutes. (With RapidRise Yeast, cover kneaded dough. Let rest on floured surface 10 minutes. Proceed with recipe.)
Punch dough down. Remove dough to floured surface.

Knead in dates and candied fruits. Divide dough into 18 equal pieces; shape into smooth balls. Place balls, spacing apart, on 2 greased baking sheets. Cover; let rise in warm place until doubled in size, about 30 to 45 minutes.
Brush egg white over rolls. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until done. Remove from pans; let cool on wire racks. Drizzle or pipe Powdered Sugar Frosting onto each roll to make a cross.

POWDERED SUGAR FROSTING: In small bowl, combine 1/4 cups sifted powdered sugar, 1 to 2 tablespoons evaporated milk and 1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract. Stir until smooth.

Sample favorite recipes of Kimberly residents

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY - The Kimberly Good Neighbors Cookbook, with its collection of 300 recipes garnered from folks who live in the friendly community, will be available soon. The attractive spiral-bound book is a project of the Chamber of Commerce to raise money to buy bulletproof armor for the city's police force.

Index tabs separate a full line of categories, from appetizers to desserts. In addition, there are helpful hints and $3.60 worth of coupons inside. When the book comes off the press in June, it will sell for $6.75 plus tax. If it's ordered now, the cost is just $6, plus tax.

Chamber Vice President Cyndi Barnett said the recipes are from young and older cooks, but that probably 2/3 of them are from senior citizens. There are a good many family favorites that date back a number of years.

"The book offers the opportunity for younger folks to obtain recipes they never got around to asking for from their grandmothers. These women often threw in a pinch of this and a dash of that and tossed it all together, without referring to a formal recipe."

"This has really been a learning experience for me, talking to the senior citizens of this city about their recipes, and their moms' and grandmothers' recipes," Barnett said. "It's really been neat, and I've enjoyed doing it."

One of the old recipes in the book was a Thanksgiving/Christmas tradition in Barnett's home as far back as she can remember. She said her father remembers his mother making it when he was a child. It's called ...

CORN AND OYSTERS

2 cans oysters, undrained
1/4 or more cups ground up crackers
Mix corn and oysters together. Add enough ground crackers to thicken it a little. Bake at 350 degrees for 1/2 hour to 45 minutes, until bubbly and brown.
"It's real oyster and corny," Barnett said. "It's creamy, somewhat like a thick soup, but it's not real runny. It sticks together because of the crumbs."
Next, a recipe given to Barnett by her grandmother four or five years ago. She said she doesn't think it is very old, but it is one she gets requests for all the time.

To pre-order a Kimberly Good Neighbors Cookbook at the reduced price of $6 plus tax, call Cyndi Barnett at 423-6491.

Four in:
2 cups milk - whole or skim
Heat, on low, to 125 to 130 degrees. While that is heating, put in a big mixing bowl:
About 3 1/2 cups flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
Mix very well. Add:
2 packages yeast and the flour.

Make a well in the flour mixture. After the liquid has achieved its desired temperature, pour it into the well. Stir together until dough sticks together in a ball that can be handled. Place on a floured surface. Knead until it's just barely non-sticky - about 2 to 3 minutes. Let dough rest on counter for 10 minutes. Roll out to about 1/4-inch thickness. Use a glass (or for biscuits) to cut dough. Put into 9-by-13-inch pan that has been coated with vegetable spray. If desired, coat with egg white thinned and whipped with 2 teaspoons water. Cover and let set in a warm place for 10 minutes. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes. When the rolls come out of the oven, brush shortening over top.

"They're really light and fluffy," Barnett said.
The following recipe, which may not be a very old one, is from Marge Masters, a good neighbor of Barnett. It makes a nice gift, because several cakes may be made at once and then stored. The sauce is prepared just before giving one away.
"It is really moist," Barnett said. "It has the color of a dark chocolate bread."

Prenuptial prevention may avoid future cure

DEAR ABBY: After reading about the woman who was upset because her fiancé wanted a prenuptial agreement, I had to write.

She should be happy about it — unless she plans to "take him to the cleaners" later.

How I wish I had had a prenuptial agreement! I am presently in the final stages of a very messy divorce. My house, which was in my name alone for four years prior to our marriage, is now his by law!

The lawyer who prepared a "quit-claim" deed for me in 1984 incorrectly put both our names on it. This was supposed to be a "quit-claim" deed in the event that if I died first, my husband could come to live in my house as long as he wanted to, then it would go to my daughter. Not so! Now I have to pay my husband half the appraised value of my home in our divorce settlement. It was paid for by my money that I inherited from my parents before I married him!

How's that for a trusting spouse? He doesn't need the money; he has a good retirement plus Social Security. I still work, and will have to for several more years, just to pay him off.

I trusted him 10 years ago, and look where it's gotten me. If you print this, it may help someone out. Use my name if you must; otherwise, sign me.

LEARNED THE HARD WAY

DEAR LEARNED: Your name is not necessary, but many men as well as women could benefit from your costly experience, so thanks for writing.

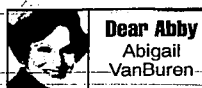

For varied viewpoints, read on: DEAR ABBY: A prenuptial agreement is a vote of no confidence. I come from a family whose parents are divorced. (My father is on his sixth marriage.)

I spend much time trying to figure out what makes a marriage work. Albert Einstein once said, "You cannot simultaneously prepare for and prevent war."

— BEEN THERE (AND BACK)

DEAR ABBY: Prenuptial and postnuptial agreements can be hazardous to your pocketbook!

My mother was married for 24 years to my stepfather. Seven months after they married, under duress, she signed an agreement stating that everything would go to his children. His children refused to give up her part of the estate, thinking that the agreement would hold. It didn't.

Abigail

After lawyers' fees and court costs, everyone ended up losing. Worst of all were the bitterness and stress everyone involved experienced.

— SANDRA GILLESPIE, GEORGIA

DEAR ABBY: This is for a prenuptial agreement:

Follow Abby's advice about getting your own lawyer. Then, if you decide to go ahead with the marriage, be prepared for a life of yours and mine — not ours.

You will then have a business arrangement, not a marriage. And you will never be an equal partner.

It is not a good idea; too much caution and lack of trust will make the partner with less feet undervalued.

— LIVING WITH IT

DEAR ABBY: The best advice I ever received was a suggestion for a prenuptial agreement. The suggestion was rejected for the reasons cited by "Apprehensive." The biggest mistake of my life was getting married without it.

My recommendation: Insist on it. After all, she has rights and interests to be protected, too. If they strike an equitable agreement, they probably won't need it. If they can't reach an agreement, they'd better not get married.

— WALTER A. FIDDER JR., LEBANON, PA.

Bzzzz. Bzzzz. Bzzzz. Unfortunately, this busy signal can be all too familiar to many Americans trying to call the IRS for answers to their tax questions.

You see, when you're busy dialing our special toll-free phone number, 1-800-TAX-1040, so are millions of other taxpayers.

Which means you may have a hard time getting through to us.

So now here's our first piece of helpful advice. Try calling between 8 and 10 a.m. or after 2:30 p.m. And when you call on Wednesday, Thursday or Friday, you've got an even greater chance of getting through.

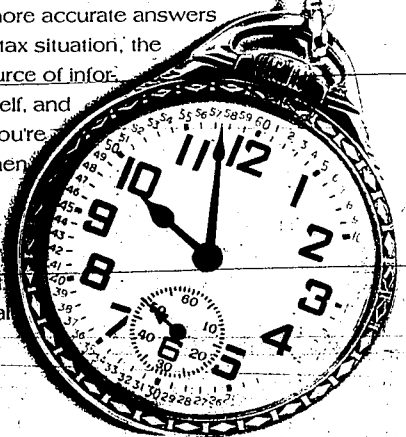

When you do, we'll take the time to make sure we've given you a complete answer to your tax question and that you understand it.

Believe it or not, there is a good time to call the IRS.

But it's a two-way street. You'll get more accurate answers when you know all the facts about your tax situation, the name of any IRS publication or other source of information you used to find the answer yourself, and have the tax form, schedule or notice you're questioning right there in front of you when you call.

So if you have questions, don't hesitate to call 1-800-TAX-1040. But remember, call during a good time. Because we want you to hear good advice. Not a busy signal.

The Octagon symbolizes changing preservation ideas

By Barbara Mayer
The Associated Press

The Octagon in Washington, D.C., built between 1799 and 1800, stands as a symbol of changing attitudes about historic preservation.

Within shouting distance of the White House, the mansion has a colorful place in American political and social history. President Madison lived in the house after the British burned down the White House in the War of 1812, and the Treaty of Ghent ending the war was signed there.

Its changes over the years reflect the history of American remodeling practices. The American Institute of Architects purchased it in 1902 as its national headquarters and has been working on it ever since.

A.I.A. moved its offices to larger quarters next door in 1949. "hardly a year has passed that the A.I.A. has not done repair or restoration work," says a descriptive brochure about the brick and masonry structure, which was turned into a house museum in 1970.

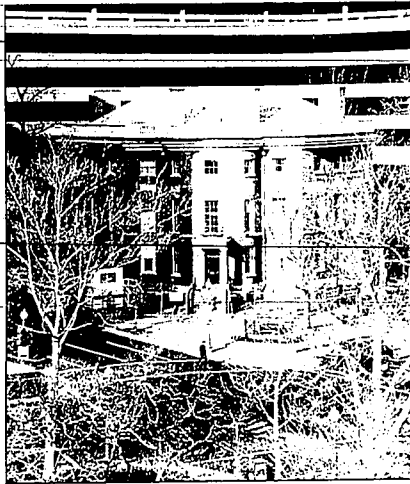

Remodeling started almost immediately after the owner, John Tayloe III, moved in with his family in 1801. The flat roof leaked, and Tayloe had a pitched roof of cypress shingles with east lead flashing built on top of it. The wealthy Virginia planter already had spent over $35,000 (an exceptional sum in those days) on construction; among the unique amenities installed was the forerunner of modern indoor plumbing, including water closets and a well in the basement.

Although Tayloe's wife and children lived there until 1855, the glory days for The Octagon were between 1800 and about 1830. The structure was spared when the British burned down Washington in August, 1814, because the French Ambassador happened to be staying there at the time. Later President and Mrs. Madison took up residence while the White House was being rebuilt. The house is being restored to its appearance between about 1815 and 1825.

Current restoration ethos calls for disturbing the building to the least extent possible.

"We are trying to bring as many finishes, details and elements of construction back to the way they were in the first decades of the 19th century," says Norman L. Koonce, president of the American Architectural Foundation.

The foundation recently removed 20th century "improvements" such as steel beams, put in during the 1950s. In place of the steel, there are now wood beams like those of the original structure. The steel was put in to keep the building from sagging. However, it proved to be too rigid and caused cracks in the masonry walls as the house settled and absorbed the shocks of passing traffic. The steel beams also distorted the original dimensions, since ceilings had to be lowered to accommodate them.

The restoration team also injected consolidants into deteriorating sandstone plaques rather than replacing them.

"In 20 years we will know if that works," says Koonce. "If it does, maybe we discovered a good method of preserving sandstone. If not, we can replace the plaques then."

Like most very old houses, this one needed a new roof. The original 1815 sheathing boards are there, but cedar shingles that date from about 25 years ago were worn out. Cypress logs aren't commercially available these days, but a search turned up some submerged in a Florida freshwater pond.

Artisans used early 19th century tools — a fro and drawing knives to split the shingles and block planes to shape them.

"We expect the cypress shingles to last between 80 and 100 years," says Koonce.

Cast lead isn't available in the U.S., but the foundation imported some from England, along with an English crew to install it. Even the plaster was removed so that a more authentic formulation of lime and horsehair could be applied to the walls. The lime and horsehair combination is historically accurate, but not necessarily better than today's plaster.

An extreme example of this is that all the mechanical systems are being removed from the building and placed in an underground structure next door. Not only will this save wear and tear on the building, but it will also free the original areas to be restored and opened to the public as interpretive exhibits. The basement originally was occupied by servants.

Those responsible for renovations that took place some years ago thought they were using the best techniques available," says Koonce. "We have learned through observation and probes that there are better ways than putting the latest technology into the building."

The Octagon's refurbished entrance foyer, central stair hall and two second floor galleries will reopen April 14 with an exhibition, "Grand American Avenue: 1850-1920."

The show considers six great residential streets in six cities and what happened to them: Massachusetts Avenue in Washington; Fifth Avenue in New York; Prairie Avenue in Chicago; Euclid Avenue in Cleveland; Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles; and St. Charles Avenue in New Orleans.

The show will move later to other cities, including New York, Chicago and New Orleans.

Everyone at home should know how to turn off main water valve

The thin copper pipes that carry hot and cold water in most homes are normally durable and long-lasting, but sometimes develop leaks that can cause severe damage.

Leaks are especially common during cold weather, when frozen water in the pipes can cause pipe walls to crack or poorly soldered joints to loosen.

Do-it-yourselfers can sometimes make temporary repairs to keep water pipes in service until permanent repairs are made by replacing damaged pipe and fittings. Temporary repairs allow toilets, sinks and other plumbing fixtures to remain in use.

Before temporary pipe repairs are discussed, however, another point for dealing with a water emergency should be stressed: Every occupant of a home, including older children, should know the location of the main water valve and know how to turn it off.

Simply turning off the water at the main valve can prevent a burst pipe or other plumbing emergency, such as an overflowing toilet or tub, from becoming a home flood.

There is no standard location for a main water valve, but in homes with basements it is usually near the water meter or water pump. In other homes, the main valve is sometimes under the kitchen sink. If in doubt about the location of the valve, have it pointed out the next time a plumber visits the home. When the valve is located, identify it with a large tag. Main valves, and other water valves, are generally closed by turning the handle clockwise.

Homeowners should also familiarize themselves with the location of shutoff valves to individual fixtures, such as toilets, sinks and tubs. Those individual shutoff valves are often on "inlet" pipes under the fixtures.

Since water valves tend to bind and become hard to close, it pays to spray the stems occasionally with a little lubricant and turn the handles to keep them free. The all-purpose lubricant WD-40, sold at most hardware stores and home centers, is a good choice. I also keep a pair of pump pliers — large adjustable pliers that can grip the valve handle — near my main water valve to make sure I can turn the handle in an emergency.

If a water pipe develops a leak, the first move should be to turn off the main water valve. Once the water is off, pipe repair can be considered.

Temporary pipe repairs are often expedient because many water emergencies happen at awkward times — on weekends or at night when getting a plumber or parts for permanent repairs is often difficult or impossible.

Following are some temporary repair options:

• Special clamp-type pipe sealers used to temporarily repair a leak are available at some hardware stores. These generally consist of two mating plates that are screwed together around the pipe. A rubber gasket is placed over the leak and compressed against it by the clamp.

• Ordinary hose clamps, sold at hardware stores and auto-parts stores, and a piece of sheet rubber can temporarily seal many pipe leaks. Rubber can be cut from an old inner tube from an automobile or bicycle. The hose clamps — the type with screw tighteners — should be a bit larger in diameter than the pipe. For example, use a clamp that opens to at least 3/4 inch to repair a 1/2-inch pipe. To seal a small leak, one clamp compressing rubber directly over the hole will often do. For larger cracks or holes, extend the rubber well past the defect on both sides and use several clamps spaced along the rubber. When the rubber and clamps are in position, turn the clamp screws tight.

• Special repair tape will seal small holes or leaks at pipe joints. This "mending" tape is wrapped tightly around the defect and bonds to itself and the pipe to form a solid seal. Mending tape can be mail-ordered from Improvements, a Cleveland firm (telephone 800-642-2112, for about $13 plus shipping for a 16-foot roll of tape).

It would be wise to prepare a small kit of emergency pipe-repair devices and keep the kit in an easily accessible place — near the main water valve, for example.

Office gadgets become common household items

BRINGING WORK HOME:

Many common household items found in your home began their lives in offices. First they drop in price, so they're affordable to the middle class, then they become simple to use and easy to maintain and then they are heavily advertised and marketed. Typewriters are a classic example; copiers are now making the same transition and copiers and fax machines aren't far behind. The next products to shift from office to home will offer wireless communications, such as cellular phones. American Demographics magazine predicts. But first, the magazine adds, someone must come up with a compelling reason why you and I absolutely can't live without one.

SOME BRIGHT IDEAS: Let's shed some light on lighting. From McCall's magazine comes the following suggested uses: General room light, 50-to-100-watt incandescent; kitchen counter, 13-watt compact fluorescent; reading, 150-watt incandescent (three-way), and outdoor security, 90-watt halogen.

AROUND THE HOUSE: Some household hints, from the Baltimore Sun: To deodorize your garbage disposal, cut a lemon in quarters and drop into disposal, then turn it on. Loosen stains from carpet immediately with a drop of water or an ice cube. This will prevent deeper staining when nothing else is available. Unplug appliances — especially microwave ovens and TVs — when they are not in use. The appliances can catch on fire if struck by lightning during a storm.

Clintons continue tradition of redecorating White House

In the early 1960s, Jacqueline Kennedy set a precedent when she opened the doors of the White House and invited millions of TV viewers inside for a personal tour of the first family's newly-decorated official residence. With each succeeding administration, Americans eagerly await the chance to see the decorative changes made by the new president and first lady.

As with their predecessors, Hillary and Bill Clinton, along with daughter Chelsea, have made their own changes.

"We wanted to create an atmosphere that was warm and welcoming and suited to how a particular family lives and spends its time," said Hillary Rodham Clinton in an interview with Washington, D.C.-based writer Marian Burros for House Beautiful magazine.

For openers, notes Burros, change at the White House began with a room that once served as Margaret Truman's bedroom. It has been turned into the Clinton family kitchen. Chelsea takes her dinner there every evening. Most mornings, she's joined by her parents in the informal setting.

"We use the kitchen for breakfast every day and for lots of dinners when we're not entertaining," said Hillary Clinton.

The Clintons sometimes do their own cooking, often favoring leftovers for late night snacks.

"My husband wanted an office in the residence," Hillary Clinton said. So she called upon Kaki Hockersmith, a Little Rock-based designer admired by the Clintons. Hockersmith redecorated the Clintons' family quarters for them at the Arkansas Governor's Mansion in 1990.

Bill Clinton's preference for strong, rich colors was interpreted and translated into his two White House offices: The Oval Office in the Executive Wing and the Treaty Room in the main section of the mansion. A night owl, Bill Clinton wanted a room where he could read late in the evening, undisturbed, yet be convenient to his family's private quarters.

The Treaty Room, used as a study by President Bush, met all the pre-requisites. Hockersmith turned pale green walls a rich red and replaced chintz curtains with deep red, navy and gold linen draperies.

In the Oval Office, immediately behind his desk, Bill Clinton has an array of collectibles and heirlooms, including a photo of Mother Teresa, a replica of the Clinton/Gore campaign bus, crystal paperweights, small wooden boxes, a bust of Franklin Roosevelt and day letters that spell out "Dad" - a gift from Chelsea.

For Hillary Clinton, her family's contributions to ongoing refurbishment followed her reading 40 books on the history of the White House. She wanted historical reference in her mission to reupholster 73 pieces of furniture and provide conservation services for another 25 historic pieces within the White House private collection.

Hillary Clinton has taken particular pride in filling the shelves on the second floor center hall bookcases with special items and historic pieces retrieved from storage. Among the items now on display are a bust of President Buchanan, a gilt clock with a figure of George Washington and a bronze sculpture of Tiny Tim - President Coolidge's pet cow.

White Socks, the Clintons' pet cat, has yet to be immortalized in the family quarters, many of the Clintons' personal objects and decorative pieces now fill the shelves of the third floor central hall.

Carefully remove infected plant parts to stamp out spore blights

Clean up your act. That's the message professional growers are hearing to stamp out botrytis and other blights caused by spores. The advice is worth noting.

Greenhouses make wonderful incubators for insect and disease infestations. Perfect conditions - plenty of food, humidity and often restricted air movement - contribute to the pathogen's well-being. Because insects and disease do so well there, we can see the progress of infestation as though we were watching on a speeded-up film.

In a recent issue of PPGA News, published by Professional Plant Growers, plant pathologist M.K. Hausbeck notes that, during high humidity, botrytis reproduces spores that ride easily on air currents. If those spores land on a leaf, flower or seedling, he says, and free moisture is present (such as water from overhead watering systems or even condensation) the spore germinates within three hours, penetrates the plant tissue within six to nine hours and, on some plants, produces symptoms within 24 hours.

The strain of botrytis called gray mold is the most common form of the disease. It infects violets, anemones, asters, begonias, callulias, camellias, carnations, chrysanthemums, dahlias, dogwoods, geraniums, lilies, primulas, roses, sunflowers and a lot more. New leaves are most often attacked, and flower buds can become infected, causing a soft rot. Leaves die off and turn black, with a fuzzy look to them. The fuzzies are the spores. Botrytis can infect dead leaves and reproduce on them, too.

Picking off infected plant parts is usually recommended. But Hausbeck found that, if infected plant debris is collected and put into the trash, that isn't good enough.

The uncovered trash container still houses the spores, which can be picked up on air currents. He recommends that trash containers be covered, emptied often and kept away from plants.

Removing an infected plant or plant parts can spread spores, too.

Better to "bring a covered container or plastic bag that can be sealed to the site of the infected plant to be discarded, rather than carry the infected plant through the greenhouse to a trash container," Hausbeck said. "Air currents created by carrying the plant out of the production area will result in many conidia (spores) being released and 'shaken off' enroute."

To clean up botrytis, or prevent its spread, make Clorox your friend, experts advise. Cuttings should be rooted in sterile potting soil in clean containers. Clean everything with a 10 percent Clorox solution. Lower the humidity when you can.

Water outdoor plants early enough in the day so that they and their surrounding mulch can be dry by nightfall. Keeping relative humidity below 85 percent and providing good air circulation keeps free moisture off plants.

Fungicides should be used per label directions, and rotated often. Botrytis frequently becomes resistant to benomyl. Daconil and Mancozeb are two recommended products used to delay the build-up of resistant organisms.

List will assure job gets done right

By Carol V. Muzzie and Randy Johnson
The Baltimore Sun

There's never a problem telling when a renovation project begins - it's that first ring of the crowbar as the old begins to give way to the new.

But sometimes, when you're working with a contractor, it's surprisingly difficult to tell when a project ends.

Both parties are anxious - the homeowner to have life back in order and the new facilities in use, and the contractor to move on to the next job. The problem is that renovation, by its very nature, is an untidy process. There are always surprises that alter the plan or widen the scope of the work - the termite-damaged joist ends that have to be replaced, the shaky plaster ceiling that collapses from the pounding of work above. Supplies don't arrive on time, tools break, the weather turns nasty. And despite the best of intentions on both sides, disputes will arise.

Randy recalls homeowners who grew attached to having the contractor around, and who were reluctant to sign off on the job because the contractor would go away.

And there was another client who insisted on having her kitchen wall cabinets adjusted three times before she was satisfied. And the contractor who left a client with a non-working furnace, and couldn't seem to find the time to get back and fix it.

But there's a mechanism that, properly used, offers a way for both contractor and homeowner to part company with mutual satisfaction.

It's the "punch list," a list of items that, when they are finished, all parties agree constitute completion of the contract.

That word "contract" is important. The punch list is based on the contract, and it's yet another argument for taking the time and trouble to negotiate a good, clear contract to begin with.

If the contract is not specific on some point, the homeowner and the contractor could easily disagree on what a finished job is. The phrase "repair or replace as necessary" is particularly open to misunderstanding. The contractor may see it as doing just what's absolutely necessary to do the task, while the homeowners think a little more finesse is absolutely "necessary" for their happiness.

Homeowners might want to start keeping a list about three-quarters of the way through a job of items they want to make sure are taken care of. As completion approaches, the list should go down to a manageable 20 or so items.

It's important to remember that the punch list is not a list of everything the homeowner would like done around the house, and it's not the time to decide a closet in that upstairs bath would be nice. Items on the punch list must be items specified in the contract. And if there are changes, like that closet, they will require separate negotiation - at the least, a change order, signed by both parties, at the most a new bid. The punch list covers only those items already accounted for in the price of the contract.

Appropriate items for a punch list are things the contractor hasn't finished or things that may have become damaged in the course of the work.

Details - that's what the punch list should contain. It's a wrapping up of all the loose ends. And when everything on the list is completed, the contractor should get a final check and a handshake. And the homeowners should get a new space they love - and a little less noise and dust in the morning.

There are toxic chemicals in our water. Such as oil. And pesticides.

You might think industry is to blame. But they're only part of the problem. You and I, in our everyday lives, are also responsible for a tremendous amount of water pollution.

However, we can all help protect our water. For example, use less toxic household cleaners and practice natural lawn care by composting and using fewer chemicals. And instead of pouring used motor oil onto the ground or into storm drains, simply take it to a gasoline station where it can be recycled.

To find out more, call 1-800-504-8484, and we'll send you additional information on how you can help protect our rivers, lakes and oceans.

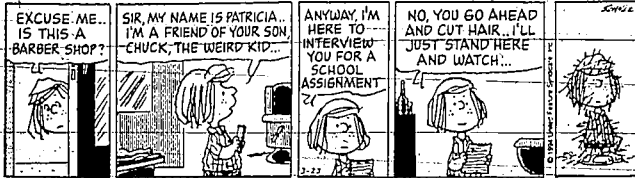

That way we can turn this terrible tide around. And restore the beauty to our water.

CLEAN WATER.

WE CAN DO A LOT.

"It has the texture of an angel food. You just can't believe it," Thomas said. "It's really good, and it's certainly not as expensive."

Gloria St. Clair said the next recipe is one her mom remembers as far back as the 1930s. She said it may have originated in the Netherlands.

KRUMEL TORTE

Here's an easy one contributed by Linda Lewis. She got this one about five years ago from her stepmother who lives in Oklahoma. She said it's a big favorite in that area. There are no eggs, oil or milk in it.

WHACKY CHOCOLATE CAKE

Use 9-by-13-inch ungreased pan to mix and bake this cake.

- 3 cups flour
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 teaspoons soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons cocoa

Blend with a fork. Make 3 holes in dry ingredients. Add to first hole:
¼ cup oil
In the second hole, put:
2 teaspoons vanilla
In the third, put:
2 tablespoons vinegar

Pour 1 cup water over all of this and mix with a fork. It will be slightly lumpy. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 30 minutes. Do not over bake. Cake will look lumpy. If desired, frost with a light powdered sugar glaze.

"You have to watch that you don't overbake it, because if you do it's more like a cake-cake," Lewis said. "If you don't, it's kind of chewy like a brownie type cake."

Revise ideas about sugar

By Colleen Pierre
The Baltimore Sun

Are you sugar shocked? Two new studies published last week joined a growing list proving sugar does not cause hyperactivity in children. In fact, it may have a calming effect.

This is good news, because it allows a little breathing space in the way we eat. But just a little. A radio disc jockey summed up the rebound position, saying "I guess that means kids can have all the sugar they want."

Wrong. Kids still need to eat mostly high nutrient food. The average American gets about 11 percent of calories from 53 grams of added sugars, based on the Nationwide Food Consumption Survey of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture. Nutritionally, that's right on target according to the Food Guide Pyramid.

That's about 13 teaspoons (at 4 calories per gram) of sugar added to all your food for the entire day. Most of us think we don't add that much sugar, but we get it from some surprising places.

We've learned to look for added sugar in cereals. Natural oatmeal contains no added sugar, for instance. But one ounce (½ cup) Post Banana Nut Crunch has 6 grams (1½ teaspoon) and 1 ounce (½ cup) Kellogg's Rice Krispie Treats has 9 grams (2 teaspoons).

Eleven ounces of Budget Gourmet Macaroni-and-Cheese contains 11 grams of added sugar, and one order of KFC vegetable medley salad offers 16 grams.

This is not particularly good or bad. It's just a way of making clear that adding sugar to some foods makes them taste better. And a little is OK, especially for children with high energy needs and small stomachs who are already eating lots of healthy foods.

By May, all processed foods will bear the Nutrition Facts food label, which includes information on added sugars. We'll find some big surprises there.

The Nutrition Facts will show that we're probably getting half of our 53 grams of sugar in food without even knowing it. So the amount we voluntarily add to our meals and snacks should be quite small, about 6 or 7 teaspoons daily.

This has nothing to do with hyperactivity and everything to do with healthy diets. Eating too many high sugar foods displaces better food choices.

One 12-ounce Coca-Cola Classic, for instance, contains 38 grams of sugar (9½ teaspoons), or 70 percent of the day's allowance, and 144 calories, but offers no vitamins, minerals or protein. Twelve ounces of skim milk has about the same calories, and provides protein, vitamin A, many B vitamins, and half the day's calcium along with potassium, phosphorus, magnesium and zinc. When kids drink Coke instead of milk, they get enough calories to stop feeling hungry, but they get short-changed in the body-building department.

If your kid has had her milk, fruit and vegetables and is still hungry, filling in with a soft drink or candy bar (one 2-ounce Milky Way bar contains 43 grams of sugar or 80 percent of your total) is OK occasionally.

So the message isn't exactly "knock yourself out." It just means we can relax and not feel guilty if the kids eat some sweets every now and then.

But we do need to eat more fruits and vegetables. Only 10 percent of Americans eat the minimum 2 fruits and 3 vegetables daily. Here's where added sugar can actually help prove a kid's diet. Perhaps a spoonful of sugar would help the strawberries go down. Or some marshmallows might make a plate of yams palatable!

Business booming at steak houses

By Sam Gugino
Knight-Ridder News Service

Before you put the steer on the culinary endangered species list, here this: Beef is back. Or, more accurately, it never left.

Despite the constant harangue about fat and cholesterol, a certain segment of the population refuses to give up red meat. And while home consumption of beef has declined, restaurant sales of beef, especially in high-end steakhouses, is booming.

In 1992, after years of steady decline, restaurant beef consumption stabilized for the first time since 1984. According to Mary Adolf of the Beef Industry Council, steak eating in restaurants is up 2 percent from 1991 to 1992; prime rib and roast beef are up 4 percent.

Hawaii or the Bahamas, they treat themselves by eating out. Jeffrey Prince, senior director of the N.R.A. concurs. "We've done studies that show that only about one-third of consumers are concerned about nutrition when they dine out. Those that don't - like me - may often splurge or take a vacation from nutrition when dining out," he says.

Morton's also sees no geographical difference in the kinds of steaks people eat and what they eat with them except for a stronger preference for heavier red wines in large urban centers like New York, Chicago and the Bay Area. "A few years ago a Gallup poll showed that Americans' idea of a perfect meal was shrimp cocktail, steak, baked potato, asparagus and cheese cake," Newberg says. "You can't get more basic than that."

Getting a good piece of meat is the key, steakhouse owners say. One reason for their success is that high-quality steaks sold in restaurants and hotels haven't been available in butcher shops and supermarkets for years. So consumers, dissatisfied with lean, but less flavorful steaks from the meat case, have opted for fewer steaks at home.

Easy side dish, dessert recipes capture colors of Easter season

A festive Easter or other springtime meal deserves a spectacular side dish or dessert that captures the pastel colors and the mood of the season.

What's best about these recipes is that they all can be made well ahead of time, leaving you plenty of time to organize an Easter egg hunt or trip to the zoo for the kids.

Wiggling its way into spring is a light and pretty Ambrosia Mold, a simple-to-make side dish that captures the well-loved, sweet-tart flavor combination of orange, pineapple, marshmallows, and coconut. With its variety of textures and delicious tastes, it makes a delicious accompaniment to a succulent ham, leg of lamb or roast chicken.

Lemon mingles with strawberries in an impressive layered Lemon Berry Pie. Layer one features a mound of lemony cream cheese embedded with luscious fresh strawberry halves. Layer two is a quick-fix combo of Jell-O brand vanilla or lemon instant pudding and pie filling and Cool Whip non-dairy whipped topping. For a lovely presentation, crown individual slices with more berries, if desired.

AMBROSIA MOLD

Prep Time: 15 minutes.
Refrigerating Time: 4½ hours.

- 1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple in juice, undrained
- 2 cups boiling water
- 1 package (8-serving size) or 2 packages (4-serving size) Jell-O brand orange flavor gelatin
- 1½ cups thawed Cool Whip non-dairy whipped topping
- 1 can (11 ounces) mandarin orange segments, drained
- 1½ cups Kraft miniature marshmallows
- ¼ cup flaked coconut (optional)

*Or use Jell-O brand orange flavor sugar free low calorie gelatin dessert and Cool Whip Lite whipped topping.

Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Add cold water to measure 1 cup.

Stir boiling water into gelatin in large bowl 2 minutes or until completely dissolved. Stir in measured liquid. Refrigerate 1½ hours or until slightly thickened (consistency of unbeaten egg whites).

Stir in whipped topping with wire whisk until smooth. Refrigerate 10 minutes or until mixture will mound. Stir in pineapple, oranges, marshmallows and coconut. Spoon into 6-cup mold.

Refrigerate 3 hours or until firm. Unmold. Garnish with additional mandarin orange segments and fresh mint leaves, if desired.

Makes 10 servings.
Unmolding: Dip mold in hot water for about 15 seconds. Gently pull gelatin from around edges with moist fingers. Place moistened serving plate on top of mold. Invert mold and plate; holding mold and plate together, shake slightly to loosen. Gently remove mold and center gelatin on plate.

LEMON BERRY PIE

Prep Time: 20 minutes.
Refrigerating Time: 4 hours.

- 4 ounces cream cheese, softened
- 1 tablespoon milk
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 2 teaspoons grated lemon peel
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2½ cups thawed Cool Whip non-dairy whipped topping
- 1 prepared graham cracker crust (8 ounces)
- 1 pint strawberries, hulled, halved
- 2 cups cold milk

2 packages (4-serving size) Jell-O vanilla or lemon flavor instant pudding & pie filling

*Or use neufchatel cheese, Jell-O vanilla flavor sugar free instant reduced calorie pudding & pie filling and Cool Whip Lite whipped topping.

Beat cream cheese, 1 tablespoon milk and sugar in medium bowl with wire whisk until smooth. Stir in lemon peel and juice. Stir in 1½ cups of the whipped topping. Spread evenly in bottom of crust. Press strawberry halves into cream cheese layer, reserving several slices for garnish, if desired.

Pour 2 cups milk into large bowl. Add pudding mixes. Beat with wire whisk 1 minute. Let stand 1 minute or until thickened. Gently stir in remaining 1 cup whipped topping. Spoon over strawberries in crust.

Refrigerate 4 hours or until set. Garnish with reserved strawberry slices. Store leftover pie in refrigerator. Makes 8 servings.

Helpful Hint: Soften cream cheese in microwave on HIGH 15 to 20 seconds.

Crime family cook says Mafia's menu is as lethal as its hitmen

By Rick Hampson
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — "The Mafia

Cookbook" makes it clear why the standup guys are a dying breed. If the feds don't get them, cholesterol will.

As presented by author Joseph "Joe Dogs" Iannuzzi — an underworld Paul Prudhomme who started out cooking for the Gambino crime family and wound up serving the FBI — the Mafia's menu is as lethal as its hitmen.

Joe Dogs claims to have learned his craft as saucier at a swanky restaurant in Cleveland. One day he stole a car and drove to New York, where he worked in various restaurants, cooking food and making booze.

He became friendly with some mobsters, and says he cooked his way into the Gambino family one night in 1974 "with a meal of savory stuffed artichokes, Sicilian style; breaded and sautéed steak and greens; and zabaglione, a dessert prepared with egg yolks, sugar, marsala wine and fresh fruit.

Mobsters, he found, "know what they eat, and when they like it they eat all of it. And then more." They eat all the time, before crimes and after them. "When there are no crimes," Joe Dogs adds, "they eat while waiting for them to happen."

Especially voracious was "Little Dom" Cataldo, a Colombo family soldier, who killed two Colombian drug dealers one night in Florida and immediately thereafter did the same to Joe Dogs' orecchiette with peas and prosciutto.

Joe Dogs honed his craft while cooking for mobsters hiding from the law or each other. "Any meal may be their last," he notes, "so it better be a good one."

But Joe Dogs was as deadly with a stove as any mobster with a .38; his larard had more butter, cream, and beef than a dairy farm.

Occasionally he'd serve something relatively healthy, such as ciceria insalata (dandelion greens salad); more typical is his recipe for shrimp scampi, which calls for a half pound of butter and two cups of sour cream.

"When serving guests with more normal appetites, just keep the sauce on the side," he wisely advises his readers.

Similarly, Joe Dogs' baked pork chops Philadelphia ("a man's man's kind of dinner I'd picked up from a Philly mobster vacationing in Miami") calls for four, inch-thick chops, as well as a half stick of butter, 1½ cups heavy cream and several shots of

Recipes so good, they'll kill ya

The Associated Press

Recipes from "The Mafia Cookbook" by Joseph "Joe Dogs" Iannuzzi (Simon & Schuster, $15):

SHRIMP SCAMPI GAMBINO-STYLE

- 2 pounds shrimp (preferably under 15 to 20 count)
- ½ pound (3 sticks) butter, softened
- 3 shallots, chopped fine
- 4 cloves garlic, crushed and chopped fine
- Juice of ½ lemon
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
- ½ cup plain dry bread crumbs
- 1 egg yolk
- 1 teaspoon Accent (optional)
- 2 teaspoons Red Devil hot sauce

Salt and pepper to taste
Clean, devein and butterfly shrimp. Place them in large, flat pan. Mix butter, shallots, garlic, lemon juice, parsley, bread crumbs, egg yolk, Accent, hot sauce, and salt and pepper to taste in bowl. Spoon over raw shrimp. Place under broiler for 3 to 5 minutes, checking occasionally so that they do not overcook. Spoon excess melted sauce over shrimp and serve.

Serves 5 (add more shrimp for more people).

LEMON GRANITA

- ½ cup sugar
- 2 cups water
- 6 to 7 lemons (enough for 1 cup of juice)

Make a syrup by mixing sugar and water in pot, bringing mixture to boil over medium flame, and boiling for 5 minutes. Turn off flame and allow syrup to reach room temperature. Mix with lemon juice and freeze in cups or pony glasses. (Note: the freezing process will take about an hour more than making ice because of the sugar content.)

His recipe for mussels in light sauce requires 10 pounds of fresh mussels. His osso buco is made with veal flanks 1½ inches thick. His veal marsala, prepared en flambe, starts with two sticks of butter and gets progressively richer.

The Mafia Chef had one problem: Although mafiosi are big eaters, most are unimaginative ones; not meat-and-potatoes men, perhaps, but certainly veal-and-pasta ones.

"But that didn't stop me from experimenting," Joe Dogs writes. "I'd never tell the crew what I was cooking if it wasn't a recipe from the old country. They wouldn't have eaten it (and they might have shot me)."

A volatile killer named Tommy Agro, the author's link to the Gambino family, was a particularly touchy diner. "When TA was nervous, I liked to stay traditional," Joe Dogs explains. "It only upset him more when I experimented in the kitchen."

When Agro, predictably, developed a heart condition, Joe Dogs served him meatless lasagna with eggplant and spinach-and-sun-dried-tomato sauce. But Tommy, a pot-bellied slob who needed six bibs to finish a lobster, still wasn't happy: "I'm eating like a ... rabbit," he groused. "Joey, you got any bacon and eggs and toast out there? I need some meat."

Finally, the turning point in Joe Dogs' criminal life came in a kitchen — Don Ritz's Pizzeria on Singer Island, Fla.

Possibly because Joe Dogs was three months late with some loan shark payments, Agro and his thugs beat him to a pulp. Tommy was about to personally cut off Joe's right hand with a meat cleaver when the restaurant owner's wife walked in and screamed, scaring off the attackers.

The beating drove Joe Dogs to the FBI. Soon he was spying on his old friends and cooking his new ones steak au poivre — with 10-ounce cuts of filet mignon, because they also liked to eat.

At the end of the book Joe Dogs explains that he is in the federal Witness Protection Program, somewhere in "wahoo land," eating in restaurants that advertise "Italian Night" and serve macaroni and ketchup instead of pasta.

But that apparently changed recently when he flew to New York in hopes of appearing on David Letterman's "Late Show" and was expelled from the witness program for breaching security — even though Letterman canceled his appearance.

"What am I gonna do now?" he asked in a telephone interview. "Well, I can always cook."

Firm plans upgrade at 5 Northwest mills

COEUR D'ALENE — Crown Pacific Inland Co. has announced plans to make improvements at five sawmills in northern Idaho and Montana.

"There are substantial investments being made at each of these mills," Crown Pacific vice president Bob Madison said Monday. "It shows we have some faith in the industry.... We plan on being around in the future."

The mills at Coeur d'Alene, Albion Falls, Bonners Ferry and Colburn, and at Thompson Falls, Mont., were purchased last fall from DAW Forest Products Ltd. and W.F. Forest Products.

Portland, Ore.-based Crown Pacific shut down its Spokane, Wash., sawmill last month and a sawmill at Superior, Mont., also was closed.

But union members said they are encouraged by the multimillion-dollar scope of improvements announced by Crown Pacific. Some 1,000 union and nonunion workers depend on jobs the mills provide. "If they're willing to dump some money into those operations, the indication is that they don't plan to close those mills down," said Fred Blair of the International Woodworkers of America, Local 3-10.

Southwest ready to hook into routes of new carrier Morris

SPOKANE, Wash. — Southwest Airlines announced Monday it will enter its first Pacific Northwest market June 6, adding 16 daily round-trip flights linking Seattle, Spokane, Portland, Ore., and Oakland, Calif.

The Dallas, Texas-based airline acquired Morris Air in December and will gradually integrate routes now offered by the Salt Lake City, Utah-based carrier, said Dave Ridley, Southwest director of marketing and sales.

Southwest's strategy is to offer frequent, low-cost flights, making it a perfect fit with Morris, which was largely responsible for a 23 percent increase in passenger boardings last year at Spokane International Airport, Ridley said.

"Southwest will offer $49 one-way unrestricted fares from Spokane to Seattle and Portland, and as low as $39 with seven-day advance reservations," Ridley said. Nonstop flights to Oakland will be $99 one way.

Export trade rips open trade gap

U.S. trade in goods and services

The month-by-month changes in the government's new trade report, which for the first time includes trade in services as well as trade in goods. The following listing shows the overall deficit first, the deficit in goods next and the surplus in services last.

Source: U.S. Dept. of Commerce

Knight-Ridder Financial News

WASHINGTON — A record decline in exports of goods helped widen the U.S. trade deficit in goods and services to a seasonally adjusted $6.3 billion in January, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

The overall trade gap consisted of an $11 billion deficit in goods partially offset by a $4.7 billion surplus in services.

The December trade gap in goods and services was $4.1 billion, with a deficit of $8.7 billion in goods, and a surplus of $4.6 billion in services.

Commerce added services to its monthly merchandise trade report and renamed it the U.S. international trade in goods and services report starting with Tuesday's release.

Commerce also changed its method of reporting trade in goods to a balance-of-payments basis from a census basis.

The January merchandise trade gap on the balance-of-payments basis widened to $9.8 billion from $7.4 billion in December.

The merchandise trade deficit tends to be larger when measured on a BOP basis because Commerce counts U.S. military exports under services and not goods when using the BOP measurements.

Exports of goods and services, on a balance-of-payments basis, fell 4.9 percent to $54.5 billion from $57.3 billion. Merchandise exports on a BOP basis fell 6.7 percent to $38.7 billion in January from $41.5 billion in December, Commerce said.

The decrease in exports in January was led by a $1 billion drop in capital goods, including civilian aircraft and telecommunications, which accounted for about $700 million. Other declines in capital goods included industrial engines and computer accessories. In addition, declines in exports in industrial supplies, foods, autos and consumer goods contributed to the wider trade gap.

The decrease in exports in January was led by a $1 billion drop in capital goods, including civilian aircraft and telecommunications, which accounted for about $700 million.

Exports on a census basis declined $2.7 billion, the largest drop on record. Commerce has only two years of data for exports on a BOP basis, the $2.8 billion drop in January was the largest.

U.S. imports of goods and services fell 1 percent to $60.8 billion from 61.4 billion. This was the third straight decline for total imports and exports of goods. U.S. goods imports fell 0.8 percent in January to $49.8 billion, the lowest level since August, from December's $50.2 billion.

The monthly trade surplus in services, which Commerce released for the first time

Tuesday, shows the U.S. surplus was in range of $3.9 billion to $5.1 billion in 1993. The main estimate of economists surveyed by Knight-Ridder before this report put the January trade gap in goods and services at $4.6 billion. Deficit estimates ranged from $6.8 to $4.1 billion.

Commerce is still using the census basis to measure U.S. goods trade with individual countries.

The U.S. goods deficit with Japan narrowed in January to $4.6 billion, from $5.3 billion in December.

The trade gap with Japan was the smallest since the $4.3 billion gap in June 1993. The U.S. trade deficit with Japan moved into a $171 million surplus with Western Europe from a deficit of $280 million in December.

However, the U.S. trade gap in goods with China widened substantially to $2.2 billion from $1.3 billion in December.

Exports to China dropped to $555 million from $1.03 billion in December. The January level of exports to China was the lowest since September 1992.

A Commerce official said the department received no reports of any problems at U.S. customs ports due to weather. However, it could not be ruled out as a possible factor affecting U.S. trade in January, the official added.

Analysts downplay interest rate hike

Knight-Ridder Financial News

WASHINGTON — Tuesday's increase in short-term interest rates will probably help rein in U.S. growth slightly, although not so much that it falls below last year's pace, analysts say.

Furthermore, the Fed has not yet tightened enough to make a dent in inflation, but price gains may remain at their current stable levels, analysts said Tuesday.

The Federal Reserve's policy-making arm on Tuesday nudged up the federal funds rate target to 3.5 percent from 3.25 percent. On Feb. 4, it also tightened by 25 basis points.

Analysts said the magnitude of the two moves was too small to rein overall growth. However, some sectors of the economy, such as housing, might show some deceleration, they said.

"All you have really done is make it a tad more costly in the mortgage area and a tad more costly for inventories," Stephen Axilrod, vice chairman at Nikko Securities Co. International, said.

"You have made business long-term credit slightly more costly, but profit expectations are still pretty strong, so this is not much of a deterrent," Axilrod said.

He said mortgage refinancings, which have slowed since the first tightening, may fall further, and a few home buyers may be squeezed out of new mortgages.

Analysis

Louis Crandall, chief economist at R.H. Wrigton and Associates, said the impact of Tuesday's Fed move was "not so much slowing the economy from 1993, but ensuring that the rapid growth did not carry over and cause problems."

Overall 1993 real gross domestic product grew 3.0 percent, with the fourth-quarter up 7.5 percent at an annual rate. "We do not think this rate hike will shake the economy off a 2 1/2 percent to 3 percent growth rate," Crandall said.

If growth is too fast, it generates inflationary pressures. This has happened frequently in past recessions, but this time around, the Fed is attempting to act quickly enough to keep growth under control, and thus keep inflation at bay."

Paul Boltz, economist at T. Rowe Price Associates, said with the Fed's latest tightening move, "I don't think they can be described as behind the curve" in terms of fighting inflation.

"The economy will continue to expand at a reasonable pace, not the boiling pace we had late in 1992," Boltz said, predicting growth of about 3.5 percent in 1994.

He said Tuesday's move is not likely to have much economic impact, unless intermediate and long-term interest rates continue to rise, as they did after the last Fed tightening.

However, he and other economists said the Fed's latest tightening move was so widely anticipated and factored into the financial markets, that he did not see a reason for further substantial interest rate increases in medium- and long-term rates.

Crandall agreed that the Fed had managed to move before inflation pressures gathered momentum. Even if the consumer price index creeps up 1/4 point from 1993's level of 2.7 percent, as he expects, that would be mild, given that the economy is in an expansionary phase, he said.

However, he said "if the Fed had dragged its feet any longer," inflation would have risen by much more.

One economist who criticized the Fed for moving too slowly was Allan Meltzer, a professor at Carnegie Mellon University. "They are catching up with where they should have been," he said. "If they continue to tighten gradually, the impact will be very good. We will have stable growth without more inflation."

He agreed with what most economists and policymakers believe: keeping inflation down is the best way to ensure maximum long-term growth. Bursts of growth can Novell Inc. and AT&T said Tuesday they would begin selling software next month that would link businesses' computer and telephone networks.

On the simplest level, the products would allow people to dial telephones by clicking on a name on their computer screen.

In addition, they would allow voice, fax and electronic mail messages to be stored and sorted in one place. Customers could also set up phone conferences by clicking on a series of names.

Provo-based Novell, the leading maker of computer networking software, will bundle the product as NetWare Telephone Services. AT&T will sell the software under the name Passage Way Telephone Services Solution.

It will cost between $75 and $200 per computer, depending on the number bought by a company. Depending on their existing network, some customers may have to buy extra hardware and software to make it all work.
