Clinton targets dwindling fish

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration proposed new restrictions Friday on logging, grazing and other activity along thousands of miles of streams in the Pacific Northwest to help save troubled fish species.

The proposed protection zones would run along as much as 16,800 miles of streams managed by the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management in eastern Oregon, eastern Washington, Northern California and Idaho.

The riparian buffer strips — from 50 to 300 feet wide — are similar to those planned for national forests with northern spotted

Plan calls for grazing, logging restrictions along streams to improve fish habitat

owls in western Oregon and western Washington.

It is an effort to save several salmon and trout species from extinction, the Interior and Agriculture Departments said in a joint statement Friday.

"Recent reports have found about half of the 400 stocks of native Pacific anadromous fish are showing significant declines in numbers and 106 already are extinct," they said. The timber industry objected that the government was pushing through a major policy that would reduce logging without offering the kind of public participation that would be required under a more stringent environmental impact statement.

Studies have shown that logging and grazing along stream banks accelerate erosion which fills streams with silt and eliminates shade needed to keep the waters cool enough for some fish.

The plan is designed to help chinook, coho, chum, sockeye and pink salmon as well as steelhead and sea-run cutthroat trout.

The new strategy does not apply to private lands nor would it add new conservation measures to the area within the range of the northern spotted owl.

The administration will accept public comment on the plan for 45 days before moving to make it formal government policy on the lands.

The administration projects the new restrictions along the rivers would result in ranchers being allowed to graze 42,000 fewer "animal units" per month — a unit being equivalent to a cow and her calf or five sheep, the government said.

Managing Bennett Hills

BLM seeks comment on plan that includes recreational promotion

By William Brock
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — It has cost $600,000 so far, but a Bureau of Land Management plan for the Bennett Hills is still far from ready — and the plan will probably change once the public gets ahold of it.

BLM officials are hoping for broad public interest in refining the plan, which was released Friday. A formal public comment period on the Bennett Hills plan will run from April 1 to July 1, said Area Manager Bob Cordell.

"We have a very vocal public that say they want a meaningful input into the way we manage public lands," said Mary Gaylord, manager of the BLM's Shoshone District. The collaborative approach "is signaling a change in the way we go about public land decision making," she said.

At stake is the management future for 650,000 acres bounded on the south by the Snake River, and stretching north to the Milner-Gooding canal, Magic Reservoir, the Sawtooth National Forest boundary, and Camas, Willow and King Hill creeks. Nearly 100 miles of Snake River shoreline is involved, Cordell said.

Central to the plan is a more aggressive promotion of the area's recreational attractions, officials said.

The 387-page draft management plan spells out four management alternatives — including one advocating no change in current management practices. In its final form, it will determine how the area is managed for 15 to 20 years.

The BLM's preferred alternative seeks to maximize the area's social, economic and environmental values, Cordell said.

To that end, maximum grazing limits will be trimmed to 54,751 animal unit months — down 33 percent from the current maximum. From a practical standpoint, the reduction exists only on paper, Cordell said.

U.S. troops end Somalia mission with best wishes

The Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — American troops ended their mission in Somalia and returned to the sea Friday wrapped in the din and dust of their helicopters and armor. They left knowing they helped end a famine but could not pacify a hostile country.

"Operation Quickdraw," the highly orchestrated withdrawal of the last Marines, began moments after a giant C-SA Galaxy carrying about 50 men lifted off the runway en route to Dover, Del.

The last Marines lumbered into the surf 24 hours later aboard an amphibious assault vehicle commanded by Lt. David Wolcott, 24, of Newtown, Conn.

"I suggest you get out of here while you can,"

Wolcott said to journalists as he batted his hatch and headed into the surf.

The departure of the Americans and most other Western troops has left a cloud of uncertainty over the U.N. mission. Morocco, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates will soon join the exodus.

Pakistan, whose 5,600 soldiers make up the largest contingent in the U.N. force of 19,000, has not said if it will remain beyond May 31.

"We are apprehensive," Maj. Chris Budge, the U.N. military spokesman, said as the Americans withdrew. "It would be difficult for UNOSOM to repel an all-out offensive."

Gunmen have reappeared on Mogadishu streets largely abandoned by U.N. peacekeepers. Banditry and attacks on aid groups have increased at an alarming rate.

Limbaugh pitching OJ sours Floridians

The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Rush Limbaugh being paid $1 million to pitch orange juice on his show?

Some state lawmakers think the idea is a lemon, and they're responding by trying to shake up the Florida Citrus Commission.

The lawmakers say they're afraid that Limbaugh's combative conservative ideology will spoil the state's citrus industry.

And they're flabbergasted that he would be hired by the same commission that dumped former spokesmen Anita Bryant and Burt Reynolds for making too many waves.

"We're concerned about Florida's image and the image of our most important agricultural products should not be enmeshed in politics," state Sen. Peter Weinstein said.

"It boggles the mind that the Citrus Commission would choose somebody with such strident political views regardless of what they are."

In response, a Senate committee has withheld confirmation of Gov. Lawton Chiles' latest three nominees to the Citrus Commission until the governor assures them he'll make the panel more diverse.

All 12 of the commission's members are white; 11 are men. The three nominees are all white males.

Weinstein, a member of the Senate committee, said he thinks a more diverse panel would have chosen a spokesman other than Limbaugh.

The commission hired Limbaugh in mid-February, shortly after Reynolds was canned because of his bitter divorce with Lori Anderson. Since Limbaugh was hired, the commission said, it has received 10,000 letters, faxes and phone calls. About 55 percent think Limbaugh ought to be dropped.

Among those complaining are gays, feminists and environmentalists; some have urged a boycott of Florida orange juice. The response caught commission officials by surprise. By comparison, only 30 people called when Reynolds was dumped. The commission also dropped longtime spokeswoman Anita Bryant in 1980 because she publicly opposed homosexuality.

Snow, rain strike Southwest; storms spread across Southeast

The Associated Press

Snow and rain hit the Southwest and thunderstorms moved across the Southeast on Friday.

A fierce Alaskan storm brought heavy rain and mountain snow to Southern California, with 1.14 inches of rain falling in Oceanside, Calif.

Snow accumulations across Southern California's mountain ranges were heavy, with as much as 10 inches reported at Mount Wilson in the Los Angeles area and 3.5 inches in the Sierra Nevada range above the Owens Valley.

Farther east, snow fell across sections of Arizona, Nevada and parts of the central Rockies. In Colorado, 8 inches fell at Winter Park and Beaver Creek Resort.

As the storm moves east, moisture from the Gulf of Mexico will be lifted over a cooler dome of air covering the Plains, the National Weather Service said. That means

Survey eyes health care stories

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Press coverage of health care reform has been balanced but it has tended to emphasize the politics rather than the medical fallout of reform, a new study of the public and the press reveals.

As time has gone on, the study released Friday also asserts, the public appears more confused about what is contained in the administration's health care proposal than it was when the proposal was first announced in September.

These are some of the results of a "monitoring project" on health care by the Kaiser Family Foundation, the Times Mirror Center for the People and the Press and the Columbia Journalism Review. The findings, the second installment of the monitoring project, are derived from a public opinion survey and a content analysis of 2,000 newspaper, magazine and television stories about health care published between Sept. 1 and Nov. 30, 1993. That roughly covers the period from the president's introduction of the health care plan to a joint session of Congress through Thanksgiving last year.

The content analysis found media coverage "overwhelmingly balanced or neutral," with 80 percent of the stories about policy disputes falling into this category, 73 percent of the stories about the prospects of passage in this category and 68 percent of the stories about President Clinton in this category. Those stories that were not neutral tended to be critical of the administration or its plan.

But the survey was more critical of the focus of the press coverage. The largest single category of stories, 31 percent of the combined print and TV reports, focused on the political impact of health care, such as on the president's standing or those of other political figures.

The next largest focus of coverage, 21 percent of the stories, concerned the impact of reform on the health care system, such as the structure of health alliances or how they affected insurance companies.

The $4,751 AUM figure is the actual amount of grazing that occurs in a typical year averaged over the past nine years, he said. An AUM is enough to feed a cow and a calf — or five sheep — for one month.

"We're leaving the door open to modify those stocking rates," Cordell said. "Presently, there are 114 grazing permits spread over 87 allotments, he noted.

Grazing in stream and river bottoms will be allowed as long as the riparian area is required to keep stock out. Limits may also be placed on the duration of grazing and the season in which it is permitted in such areas.

The BLM's Shoshone District Grazing Advisory Board has pledged $5,000 to hire a forest ranger to help gather a wide spectrum of public comment on the matter. Though paid by grazing interests, the facilitator will not be an advocate for them, Cordell said.

The preferred alternative also seeks to:

Trade 36,000 acres along the north rim of the Snake River for state lands elsewhere inside the management area.

Withdraw Big Wood, Dry and King Hill creeks from consideration for federal Wild and Scenic River designation. None of the creeks are unique enough to warrant the designation, Cordell said, adding that some sections of the Snake River may be eligible.

Extend environmental protections for the area around Stanley.

Create six new Areas of Critical Environmental Concern and expand two existing areas to protect shrublands that are genetically pure redband trout in the King Hill area. Some 14,500 acres of land would fall under the new status.

Add about 5,000 acres to the Wildlife Isolated Tracts Program to restrict winter use of motor vehicles in areas used by upland game birds. In severe winters, further closures would be sought to make life easier for deer, antelope and game grouse.

Promote the use of the Bliss-Fairfield road and the Davis Mountain Road, both of which are esteemed for their beauty. Recreational destinations such as Magic and Mormon reservoirs, the City of Rocks area will also be promoted.

No significant changes are in store for sand and gravel operations, which remove hundreds of thousands of tons of material from the Bennett Hills area every year, Cordell said.

Mexican rebels go on alert after shooting

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — Rebels in southern Mexico have shelved for now a draft peace agreement reached between them and the government, charging Friday that the government was poised to restart the war.

The rebels said in a statement that the government was going to use the assassination of the ruling party's presidential candidate as an excuse to attack them. They claimed troop build-ups and aerial attacks in the region in recent days. The accusations could not be immediately confirmed, and there was no reaction from the government.

The communication was a serious setback to efforts to end the uprising that erupted Jan. 1 in southernmost Chiapas state by rebels protesting Indian poverty. At least 145 people were killed before the government called a cease-fire on Jan. 12.

The rebels said the assassination on Wednesday of presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio "is only a prelude to a grave military offensive the federal government is planning against our positions and our forces."

"We are on red alert," the rebels said, adding that they would observe a current cease-fire and take action only if they are attacked.

In their statement dated Thursday, the rebels also said they had suspended consideration of a draft peace accord reached March 2 with the government.

being heard by Hurlbut in a specially built court building in downtown Twin Falls.

Instead, the Water Resources director would serve as an "independent technical expert" for Hurlbut. The director's reports on who held which water rights would, unless challenged, automatically become part of Hurlbut's final decree.

If someone challenged portions of the director's report, he or she would have the burden of proving it was wrong.

The presumption and accomplished transfer laws were passed in the 1980s to protect water users who had changed the terms of their use without going through the procedure laid out in state law, as well as those whose rights were so old they did not meet modern standards of specificity.

The new laws would state that such users were in the "local public interest" and could be claimed in the adjudication, so long as other water rights existing at the time the change was made weren't injured.

The bill also includes a bar on awards of attorneys' fees against the state, and a requirement that the federal government pay the costs of formally notifying all other affected parties of its water-rights claims.

Several other bills moving or about to move through the Legislature also are part of the proposed settlement, including a two-year moratorium on most new diversions in the Snake River basin above King Hill, and a passel of measures meant to pave the way for an aquifer-recharge project in the western end of the aquifer.

Representatives of the various interested parties reportedly are close to an agreement on such a recharge project, Newcomb said, and the federal Bureau of Reclamation has tentatively agreed to buy 45,000 acre-feet of water from the Upper Snake water bank for a small-scale recharge effort this year.

Clinton returns show Whitewater losses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton sank $46,636 into their Whitewater real estate investment and lost nearly all of it, according to tax records they made public Friday. The returns contained no major revelations and generally supported the Clintons' recent accounts.

White House and Treasury Department officials to discuss the government's investigation of the savings and loan.

Along with the tax returns, the White House made public a letter in which Denver attorney James Lyons supported what Clinton himself revealed at a nationally televised news conference Thursday night — that the tax-deductible loss from the Whitewater investment was some $20,000 less than the $68,900 Lyons reported two years ago.

'You guys have got them; you can do what you want with them.'

— President Clinton

Clinton said he had repeatedly cited that figure. Lyons wrote that the $20,000 was actually a loan to finance the purchase of a lakefront house — for Clinton's mother. Lyons said the new calculation would not require the Clintons to pay back taxes since the interest was deductible in either instance.

Clinton on Friday sought to explain his lapse in memory on the loan by saying, "Keep in mind all this happened in the heat of the '92 campaign."

The returns listed about $22,000 in interest deductions in 1978 and 1979 said to be associated with the Clintons' 230-acre Whitewater land venture, which they started in 1978 with James McDougal and his then-wife Susan. McDougal also owned the Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan which later went bankrupt and was taken over by federal regulators.

Overall, interest and other Whitewater-related payments made by the Clintons over the 1978-90 period came to $46,635, according to the documents, the sum Clinton now contends they lost on the land deal.

The Clintons say they sold their remaining interest in the property to McDougal in 1992 for 1,000, which they reported as a capital gain.

That is under investigation by a special counsel said to likely be a subject of hearings by Congress later this spring.

"You guys have got them; you can do what you want with them," Clinton declared as the documents were released.

Meanwhile, the White House disclosed that a 12th administration official, White House staff secretary John Podesta, had received a subpoena to appear before a Whitewater grand jury in Washington.

The grand jury, working with special counsel Robert Fiske, is looking into meetings between

First week of abortion law brings anger

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A doctor took a seat, introduced himself and simply started reading from a script to some two dozen young women contemplating abortions.

Then, after the state-mandated speech, another clinic official had something to say.

"I apologize that the state of Pennsylvania has so little respect for women," said Doyle Steinberg, associate executive director of the downtown Planned Parenthood clinic.

As one of the nation's most restrictive abortion laws went into effect this week, Pennsylvania abortion clinics and some of their clients struggled — angrily — with the requirements.

The provisions include a 24-hour waiting period after counseling from a doctor and a parent's or a judge's consent for unmarried girls under age 18. It also requires clinics to provide informational material, including graphic color pictures of fetuses.

Annmarie Doan, 26-year-old divorced mother of three from Bensalem, was among the women crowding into the Elizabeth Blackwell Health Center for Women in downtown Philadelphia on Wednesday.

"It should be nobody's business if I'm here or not," Doan said. "I'm old enough to know what's best for me. They don't walk in my shoes every day. They don't pay my bills."

Doan, who had an abortion years ago, said she suffered emotional problems that were compounded by her pregnancy.

"It's something I can't deal with, the birth would be," she said. "Why should I have to wait 24 hours if I already said down and reasonably thought about this?"

When the law was enacted in 1988, it was considered the most restrictive in the country. Seven other states now have some kind of waiting period, but only Pennsylvania and Mississippi require patients to travel to the same clinic twice. Five other states are engaged in legal battles over waiting periods.

Kathy Liebler, spokeswoman for the Pennsylvania Department of Health, said the first week was running smoothly, clinics were providing the booklets as required and the department had received no complaints.

By midweek, a Philadelphia-based hotline for pregnant teens had received about 30 calls, with about 40 percent of callers saying they might decide to get an abortion in a neighboring state, said director Lisa Shulock.

The Cherry Hill Women's Center in New Jersey said it had received about 20 calls from Pennsylvanians concerned about the law, mostly teens.

The Allentown Women's Center stamped the state's booklet with a disclaimer: "This material was prepared by the Pennsylvania Department of Health. It contains some biased and inaccurate information and is not endorsed by the Allentown Women's Center."

Abortion foes say the 24-hour waiting period allows women to make reasoned, well-informed decisions.

Abortion providers say the new law only makes getting the procedure more difficult because it requires a second trip, a situation especially daunting for rural women in a state where, the Women's Law Project says, 98 percent of abortions are performed in eight of the 67 counties.

Abortion activist considered bombing clinic

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — An activist admitted Friday she shot an abortion doctor and even considered bombing his clinic after she learned her attack didn't stop him.

"I'm concerned about innocent, helpless babies being killed by other people who won't stop unless somebody stops them," Rachelle Shannon said during nearly 1½ hours of testimony in Sedgewick County District Court.

Shannon, 37, of Grants Pass, Ore., was charged with attempted murder for shooting Dr. George Tiller last Aug. 19 outside his Women's Health Care Services clinic. She also is charged with two counts of aggravated assault for allegedly pointing a gun at two clinic employees who chased her.

Shannon is being held on $1 million bail. The case was expected to go to the jury Friday after closing arguments and instructions from the judge. If convicted, Shannon faces about 10 years in prison.

Rachelle Shannon describes during her testimony Friday how she shot abortion doctor George Tiller.

Tiller but didn't intend to kill him. She said she had practiced with the gun and could have killed him.

Shannon testified that she shot

if she had wanted.

But whether she meant to kill Tiller was irrelevant, Shannon said, "because it would have been right either way to try to stop what he's doing."

"If somebody kills George Tiller, I would not assume they did the wrong thing," she said.

Tiller, who was wounded in both arms, returned to work the day after the shooting. Shannon fled in a car but was arrested early the next day in Oklahoma City.

Shannon testified that she asked police about her possible bail and Wichita public transportation because she was thinking about "doing more" to stop Tiller from working. She had learned that Tiller was already back at work.

District Attorney Nola Foulston asked Shannon during cross-examination whether she was "more" to "do more." She replied she wanted to close Tiller's clinic by bombing it.

Clinton visits soldiers hurt in N.C. crash

POPE AIR FORCE BASE, N.C. (AP) — President Bill Clinton chartered site of a devastating military plane crash Friday and visited with two dozen soldiers burned in the tragedy.

"It was very, very moving, and I'm very glad I came," Clinton said after his hospital visit.

The sky was overcast and the air heavy as Clinton's motorcade crawled by the burnt, crumpled remains of the C-141 transport plane that exploded Wednesday after being hit by an F-16 that had collided with another plane in midair.

The president left his car to view the area where 500 paratroopers waiting to board the C-141 were engulfed by an inferno. The death toll had climbed to 22 by the time of Clinton's somber visit.

Clinton said he made "small talk" with burn-victims at the Womack Army Medical Center at adjacent Fort Bragg. His first stop was the intensive care unit, where he spoke to two badly burned victims of the accident, according to White House spokesman Jeff Eiler.

The president also spoke individually with 26 less severely injured patients with burns on their hands. Clinton said he was especially moved by a military couple's plight. He said the husband was burned putting out the fire burning his wife.

"The morale of the people who've been burned ... is very high," the president said. He said one person after another told him they could not wait to get back to work.

Department plans smoking ban

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — In the latest U.S. administration attack on the tobacco industry, Labor Secretary Robert Reich on Friday proposed a sweeping ban on smoking in all indoor workplaces, including bars and restaurants.

Employers could designate smoking rooms in non-working areas, but these rooms would be required to have outside ventilation and air could not flow from the smoking rooms into the rest of the building.

Reich said the proposal, which affects 6 million workplaces, would increase the productivity of the American workforce while protecting workers from heart disease, lung cancer and respiratory ailments.

The ultimate impact will be a net savings in lives and to the economy," said Joseph Dear, head of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. "OSHA is charged with protecting the health of America's working men and women and this proposal does just that."

Dear said it would probably be at least two years before the new rule would take effect. Labor Department Solicitor Tom Williamson said the proposal might be revised after the agency receives input from the public.

The new non-smoking policy would apply in all offices and schools and in the break rooms of manufacturing facilities, Dear said. He said it would not apply to outdoor facilities or to self-employed individuals who work at home.

The smoking ban would be one of the most wide-ranging efforts ever undertaken by OSHA, Dear said. It is part of a broader proposal rule that addresses indoor air quality in the workplace.

American businesses would have to spend an estimated $8.1 billion to comply with the proposed rule in its first year and then $6.6 billion a year thereafter, Dear said. But Reich said increased productivity, due to the improved health of workers, would mean a savings of $15 billion a year.

A ban on smoking in the workplace could spark a significant decline in smoking rates across the country.

P. Roy Vagelos, chairman and chief executive officer of the pharmaceutical giant Merck & Co., recently testified before Congress that since his firm went smoke-free in 1989, 25 percent of the company's smokers have quit and another 25 percent now smoke fewer cigarettes.

Friday's announcement by Reich came the same day that Food and Drug Administration Commissioner David Kessler was on Capitol Hill, testifying about his decision to consider regulating cigarettes as an addictive drug.

U. S. must improve forces in S. Korea, Perry says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States must improve its ability to quickly move hundreds of warplanes into South Korea — and to support them once there — in the event of an attack from the North, Defense Secretary William Perry said Friday.

As well, South Korea should beef up its defenses by purchasing anti-aircraft radars, Apache helicopters and precision-guided bombs, the secretary said at a Pentagon briefing.

While Perry emphasized that Washington is hoping diplomatic means will resolve the current standoff with North Korea over nuclear inspections, he said it was a "prudent precaution" to ensure U.S. troops and their South Korean allies are in top form.

This is a matter of concern to us, we have made a number of recommendations to the South Korean government," Perry said.

Perry announced that he will travel to South Korea next month to discuss "a number of short-term measures" that are being taken to improve the readiness of the 34,000 U.S. forces stationed there. Also under discussion will be several long-term suggestions for bringing the 750,000-man South Korean force.

North Korea's million-man army and its heavy concentration of artillery units near the demilitarized zone — which could strike points deep in the

Perry

South — are out of proportion for a reasonable defense of the country, Perry said.

Meanwhile, North Korea has put its army on high alert and told its people war appears inevitable, South Korean officials said Friday.

But Perry said the United States "will not be intimidated either by actions or statements from the North Korean government," arguing that such defensive measures as the deployment of Patriot missiles to South Korea is not a provocative step.

In the short term, more munitions, supplies and spare parts should be moved onto the peninsula so entire wings of U.S. tactical aircraft could be moved into position, Perry said, presumably from bases in Japan, Alaska and other points.

About 80 U.S. F-16 fighter jets are located at Osan and Kunsan Air Bases in Korea, along with anti-tank A-10s, observation aircraft and attack helicopters. More than 100 F-16s and F-15s are in nearby Japan, while dozens of additional F-15s could be brought in from Elmendorf Air Force Base in Alaska.

Stocks take a tumble

The Associated Press

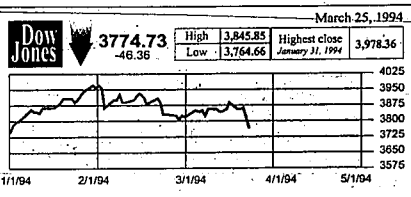

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell Friday to their lowest levels since the first trading session of the year after long-term bond yields passed the 7 percent mark.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell sharply for the second consecutive session, closing at 3,774.73, down 46.36, and the Dow's lowest close since Jan. 3.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume was moderate at 249.56 million shares, compared with 303.79 million Thursday.

Broad-market indexes also fell. The NYSE's composite index fell 1.67 to 256.29. The Nasdaq composite index fell 3.23 to 783.45.

Idaho's office in Mexico aids state's businesses

The Associated Press

BOISE — For Morse-Starratt Products Co. in Meridian, the new Idaho Trade Office in Guadalajara, Mexico, is a big help.

"I've sent my product brochures. They're already researching markets for me," Sue Paul, vice president of international sales for Morse-Starratt, said. The company, which manufactures hydraulic wire cutters, is among at least 800 small- to middle-size Idaho companies that could benefit from the new office, sponsored by the state Commerce and Agriculture department.

Fifty Idaho companies now do business in Mexico, but that could double in the next year or so because of the North American Free Trade Agreement, said Dave Christensen, administrator of the Commerce Department's Division of International Business.

The Guadalajara office, which opened earlier this month, is one of two tax-supported Idaho state trade offices abroad. The other is in Taiwan. Paul said the office should break down language barriers and other impediments to trade between Idaho and Mexico still remaining after enactment of NAFTA. "It shows we're really trying to make this work and we're interested in developing a good business relationship," Paul said.

Before the trade office opened, she relied on the American consulate to research opportunities in Mexico.

Used-home sales drop

The Associated Press

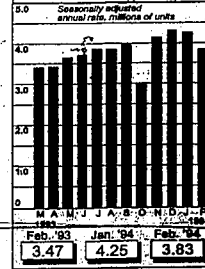

WASHINGTON — Winter weather and rising mortgage rates slowed sales of previously owned homes in February, but analysts said housing activity will remain strong.

The National Association of Realtors said Friday that sales fell 9 percent last month, to a rate of 3.83 million a year, lowest since 3.70 million last June. Sales were off in every region in the nation.

But Realtors President Robert H. Elrod downplayed the loss should be viewed in the context of following the highest sales rates on record in December and January. Sales shot up to a 4.35 million annual rate at year's end before slipping to 4.24 million in February. "We anticipate any loss in terms of market activity because of adverse natural conditions will be made up later in the year. 1994 still has the potential to be a record-breaking year for home sales," he said.

Despite the drop in February, sales remained 10.4 percent above the 3.47 million rate of a year earlier.

A student gestures to a line of riot policemen during a demonstration in Paris Friday. Street battles erupted in Paris as tens of thousands of students nationwide marched in protest against a plan to pay young people below the minimum wage.

3,300 police try to tame French students' protest of pay plan

PARIS (AP) — Street battles erupted in Paris as tens of thousands of students nationwide marched in protest Friday against a plan to pay young people below the minimum wage.

Five policemen and a TV cameraman were injured in the Paris scuffles between youths hurling bottles and stones and riot police with helmets and shields. Officers charged at the youths to make several arrests.

About 3,300 police officers were deployed in Paris.

The protest campaign has grown larger over the past three weeks. Conservative Premier Edouard Balladur, derided for backing down during previous social unrest, pushed his wage plan into effect this week.

Marches took place in dozens of cities and towns in every region of France. A turnout of 20,000 was reported in Lyon and 10,000 in Grenoble.

Thousands of students, teachers, union representatives and parents marched peacefully in Paris, but hundreds of youths on the fringe of the March began battling with police.

In the southeastern city of Besancon, hundreds of students protested outside a sports arena where France was playing Hungary in a Davis Cup tennis match, delaying the start of play by 45 minutes.

In Nantes, 240 miles west of Paris, overnight clashes led to 22 arrests and dozens of injuries, including nine policemen who were hospitalized. Rioters smashed store windows, tore down billboards and destroyed bus shelters.

Israel alert for Passover Arab attacks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops poured into the occupied territories and police went on high alert elsewhere Friday after Arab radicals threatened attacks during the Passover holiday.

But autonomy talks with the PLO appeared back on track as Israel agreed to allow armed Norwegian observers and Palestinian police in Hebron, where a Jewish settler shot 30 Arabs to death at a mosque a month ago.

In Hebron, the army lifted a curfew that had been in effect since the Feb. 25 massacre. Earlier, troops closed most of the city's main mosques, preventing prayer on the Muslim Sabbath following the arrest of a settler for killing a Palestinian man near Askalon on the Mediterranean coast.

Elsewhere, a Palestinian was reported wounded in the head by gunfire, and soldiers wounded two Palestinians in the occupied Gaza Strip when a group of stone-throwers attacked a patrol following Friday prayers.

Despite the unrest, it appeared Israel-PLO talks on implementing their Sept. 13 autonomy accord for Gaza and the West Bank town of Jericho were gaining steam. The talks were suspended after the massacre when the Palestine Liberation Organization demanded steps for protecting Hebron Palestinians that went beyond the accord.

In Cairo, Egypt, chief Palestinian negotiator Nabil Shaath emerged Friday morning from a 14-hour negotiating session holding a copy of a draft agreement that he said required the approval of PLO and Israeli leaders. Details were not released.

Officials in Jerusalem said Israel had agreed to armed Norwegian observers and Palestinian police in Hebron.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told Israel Radio there was no agreement yet on numbers or on who would command the Palestinian police. He said Israel insisted on retaining "control over security."

Mob runs U.N. team from town

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — An armed, pro-army mob ousted a team of U.N. observers from their beds and forced them out of a town where they had been investigating reports of human rights abuses, a U.N. spokesman said Friday.

Uniformed soldiers later allowed the demonstrators to shove and push the departing U.N. personnel when they were stopped at an army outpost on the outskirts of Hinche. U.N. spokesman Eric Falt told The Associated Press.

Conference bans all toxic waste exports

GENEVA (AP) — After years of dumping their toxic wastes in poor countries, industrialized nations agreed Friday to ban the practice despite opposition from the United States, Japan and Germany.

The decision was seen as a victory for environmental groups and Third World nations, which have argued that they should not be used as garbage dumps for potentially poisonous products from industrialized nations.

With space running out for dumping toxic waste and local opposition to such dumps growing, wealthy nations have increasingly sent waste abroad.

Some developing nations in need of money have continued to accept shipments, while others have imposed a formal ban but lack the resources to monitor it.

The ban on waste exports for final disposal — incineration or burial — was made effective immediately. Exports of wastes for recycling, about 90 percent of toxic-waste exports, will be illegal as of Dec. 31, 1997.

"At last, the loophole of being able to export waste under the guise of recycling will be eliminated," said Kevin Stairs of the environmental group Greenpeace.

Presidential candidate buried

MAGDALENA, Mexico (AP) — Funeral ribbons fashioned from plastic bags hung from roadsides Friday in this dusty northern town where the ashes of slain presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio were returned for burial.

Thousands of people lined the highway from the Mexican border town of Nogales to Colosio's hometown, 50 miles south.

Clusters of people, including groups of school children, held Mexican flags and Colosio campaign posters as they awaited the procession from Nogales' airport.

"He is dead, but not in our hearts and minds," Orfilid Rochin said at a funeral service in Magdalena.

Colosio had been favored to win Aug. 21 presidential election when he was shot in the border town of Tijuana as he campaigned Wednesday evening.

Other parties have suspended campaigning temporarily, and the elders of Colosio's ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party are pondering a replacement.

The party has never lost a presidential election since it was founded in 1929 and Colosio had been virtually assured a victory.

Fernando Ortiz Arana, the party chief who has been mentioned as a possible candidate, said the party would not be rushed into a decision.

An opinion poll by the newspapers La Reforma of Mexico City and El Norte in Monterrey said most people surveyed in the two cities believed the man accused of killing

Colosio did not act alone.

There was no clear consensus, however, on who might have ordered the killing.

The suspected assassin, Mario Aburto Martinez, 23, is in a federal prison near Toluca, about 40 miles west of Mexico City, Mexico's attorney general, Diego Valdes Rios, said Aburto confessed to the killing.

He could face up to 30 years in prison for murder plus 40 more if convicted on terrorism charges.

Mexico has no death penalty.

In the town of Zamora in the western state of Michoacan, where Aburto was raised, the few people who would discuss the issue told the Mexico City newspaper Reforma that Aburto and his family are devout Jehovah's Witnesses.

Synagogue firebombed in Germany

LUEBECK, Germany (AP) — Suspected right-wing radicals firebombed a synagogue early Friday, shocking the Jewish community and prompting a quick government reaction.

The attack in the northern port caused no injuries to six people living upstairs but charred two front rooms laid out for what was to have been the first Passover Seder at the Luebeck synagogue since World War II.

It was one of the worst attacks against Jews during a 34-year resurgence of violence and reminded some Germans of "Kristallnacht," the November 1938 wave of terror when Nazis burned and wrecked Jewish stores, synagogues and homes.

"I was four years old and stood right over there and watched them plunder the synagogue," said the Rev. Karl Ludwig Kohlwege, the Luebeck bishop, outside the blackened brick building.

Croats, Muslims join forces; Serbs decline

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Croat and Muslim military chiefs began to combine their commands Friday, a day after Bosnian Serbs formally rejected an invitation to end Bosnia's war by joining a new Muslim-Croat federation.

It was the latest sign of growing cooperation between Muslims and Croats, who just weeks ago were bitter rivals for Bosnian territory not held by Serbs.

They agreed to form a federation under an accord signed March 18 in Washington.

There were few reports Friday of major fighting and aid convoys were able to reach their destinations. Russia sent 100 more peacekeepers to Sarajevo.

Croat militias and the Muslim-led government had been allies at the start of the war, which erupted when Bosnian Serbs armed by the Yugoslav army rebelled.

More than 200,000 people are believed dead or missing after 23 months of war.

A warrant had been out for Heinrich's arrest on the probation violation since November, according to documents filed in the superior court of Los Angeles County, Calif.

Until recently, she had been in the custody of the Blaine County Sheriff's Office on grand theft charges there, said Sgt. Chris Ward.

But Blaine County officials did not learn of Heinrich's California record until after they released her, Ward said Friday.

Twin Falls Police Officer Andrew Johnson tracked her down at the airport and arrested her at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, according to a report filed at the Twin Falls Police Department.

Lawmakers give local tax relief

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — The tax-relief express rolled through the Idaho House Friday, as lawmakers overwhelmingly approved a $127 million shift in school funds from local property taxes to the state.

Although many legislators — even some of the proponents — were concerned that they would have to raise sales taxes or slash state spending down the road to pay for the relief, their desire to cut property taxes now and deflate the 1 Percent Initiative proved stronger.

"If you think this is going to be a bill without funding, what if the 1 Percent passes?" asked co-sponsor Steve Antone, R-Rupert. "Now there's a bill without any funding."

After more debate, the final vote was 60-9. Two of the nine "no" votes were from north Idaho Democrats who've already announced they won't seek reelection.

The bill, whose main sponsor was House Speaker Mike Simpson, would remove school districts' authority to levy property taxes for their regular maintenance and operations (M&O) expenses. That money — estimated to be $127 million for the 1994-95 fiscal year — would instead come from the state.

Half the property tax would be taken off next year, and the other half in 1996. Simpson's bill relies entirely on Idaho's economy's continuing to boom long enough to pay for the two-year shift.

After that, he conceded, there might not be enough money to pay for both the property-tax relief and the rest of the state budget.

"Will that make setting budgets more difficult? You bet it will," the Blackfoot

Republican said. "But that's all right — that's what we were elected for. I can tell you I don't mind making tough decisions."

Simpson said that by drawing an "off-limits" marker around such a large chunk of state revenue, he hoped to force a slowdown in the growth of state government.

But several of his allies on the House floor tacitly admitted that a future tax increase was more likely. Antone, for example, referred to a rejected rival tax-relief bill that would have raised $80 million by extending the sales tax to a wide array of services.

"Those options are still available if this bill gets into trouble down the road," he said.

Rep. Walt Wright, one of the authors of the rejected bill, said he still believed taxing services was the way to go. But with just a week or so left in the session, he said, Simpson's bill was the only one that had a chance of passing both the House and the Senate.

"We must have property-tax reduction," the Bayview Democrat continued. "However we get there, we must have it."

But the bill's opponents played it as, in Rep. Dan Hawley's phrase, "fiscally absurd," and said opponents were footing themselves if they thought growth could accommodate the shift.

"It takes political courage to vote against 'this bill,'" said Rep. Kitty Gurnsey, the Boise Republican who co-chairs the Legislature's budget committee. "It doesn't take any courage to vote for it, because you can go home and be a hero and say, 'I voted for property-tax relief.'"

"I know we won't defeat this," said Rep. James Lucas, R-Moscow. "It's going to fly out of here, and then we'll be just like a bunch of gamblers. We're betting that the economy's going to work and the weather's going to work, and it may not."

The Simpson bill now goes to the Senate, where support for it appears to be nearly as strong as in the House. Gov. Cecil Andrus has criticized the concept behind the bill, but has not said whether he will veto it.

Buhl students fight gravel lot parking

By Kathy Surelly
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Parents' objections to a high school parking policy this week led to the formation of a parent-student committee to look into the problem.

Several parents have objected to the policy that freshmen and sophomores must park in a gravel parking lot on the side of the school.

"When was this policy established and why is it suddenly being enforced?" Ray MacDonald asked the board in a meeting this week.

The policy was established years ago when the ninth grade was added to the high school, high school Principal Hy Schieve said. The lack of parking spaces in the front paved lot was the reason for the enforcement of the policy, he said.

The school puts warning tickets on cars improperly parked in the front lot.

"After receiving a warning, the cars will be towed away if they are parked there again," Schieve said.

Gene Thurman told the board that he counted 21 empty parking spaces in the lot at 11 o'clock that morning.

MacDonald suggested that students be allowed to park on a first come, first served basis.

"When I had an old pick up I didn't mind parking in the gravel lot, but I have a new pick up now and I park it in the paved lot," K.C. Busmann, a Buhl High School sophomore, told the board.

"I cherish my pick up, and I want to take care of it just as much as a junior or senior does. Cars ped out on the gravel lot and spray cars with gravel ruining the paint job. More fence borders also happen in that lot because there are no markings or dividers," Busmann said.

"This is age discrimination. It's about equal rights and equal pay," MacDonald said.

"Kids need to be treated as individuals with rights. It's being run like a concentration camp over there," Thurman added.

The principal's response was: "What other rules would you like me to change for you? Why do you think some rules don't apply to you? We are working on a new handbook if you would like to have input, your comments are welcome."

The board recognized the safety problem including lunch time and after school speeding in the area.

"I am concerned about safety. I recommend that a committee of parents and students be formed to work with the principal to solve these problems," board member Armand Eckert told the parents.

House approves grazing preference bill

The Associated Press

BOISE — House-passed legislation giving ranchers with management plans for their state grazing allotments preference in renewing those leases has been endorsed by a Senate committee.

The nearly unanimous vote by the Resources and Environment Committee on Friday cleared the way for final legislative action on the bill. The legislation was prompted by the ill-fated attempt of Hailey architect Jon Marvel to claim a grazing lease so he could let the land lie idle and recover from decades of grazing.

The lone dissenter was Democrat Mary Lou Reed of Coeur d'Alene, who called the bill unnecessary since the livestock industry's concern about Marvel's attack on the grazing lease in Custer County was settled by the Land Board to would receive no special consideration if a challenger like Marvel tries to take their lease.

Critics claimed that denies other potential users of the public range, including other ranchers, from a fair shot at obtaining a lease when it comes up for renewal every 10 years. They also contend too much emphasis in awarding leases is placed on commercial use of the land when a no-use alternative can be chosen to take an environmental value.

Bob Sears of the Idaho Cattle Association maintained the key to the bill was the rancher preference because it provides stability for those taking care of the land, while encouraging others to adopt management plans. Less than 300,000 of the 1.9 million acres of state grazing land are under management plans.

"We feel that it's important that we carry the message to the ranching community that management plans are a necessity to ease the minds of the public about what's going on with the resource," Sears said.

The fate of the bill, should it clear the Senate, was unclear since Gov. Cecil Andrus was the only member of the Land Board to support Marvel.

Senate OKs optional local government

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Senate has narrowly approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow counties to experiment with alternatives to the longstanding three-member commission form of government.

The amendment on Friday received the exact 24-vote two-thirds majority required for passage. It now goes to the House, where an almost identical proposal was approved earlier this year.

If endorsed by voters in November, the amendment directs the Legislature to come up with specific options for county governments that counties could choose from. Any decision to abandon the existing scheme for one of the options would have to be ratified by county voters.

"The point is to let the local people try to reinvent government, to find out if there's a better way to do it," said Republican Phil Childers of Boise, who is running for the Ada County Commission.

The Legislature has already voted to submit three constitutional amendments to voters this fall.

One would place future legislative reapportionment in the hands of a citizens commission, another sets out the rights of victims of crime and the third removes auditing functions from the state Auditor's office and changes the name of the office to state Controller.

Panel passes wilderness bill

States News Service

WASHINGTON — A key House committee passed Montana Wilderness legislation Wednesday under the watchful eyes of Idaho's congressional delegation.

Where the Montana bill goes to a future Idaho bill go. Montana and Idaho remain the only states for which wilderness designations have not been agreed, leaving them essentially without management plans for 15 million acres of wild, roadless land.

But it will take a while, Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., said, his experience pushing for a Montana plan five different times has been arduous.

"Sixteen years. Montanans have tried for 16 years to get this issue past us. There are no other wilderness bills that have gone through as lengthy a process," he said before the Natural Resources Committee passed the bill.

loggers, miners, and recreational drivers.

The region is the largest wild land base in the lower 48 states, and home to the largest herds of elk, big horn sheep, mountain goats, as well as lynx, mountain lions and cougars, Williams said. The area also is the last remaining home of the grizzly bear outside Alaska.

The Idaho delegation is split on the best approach to handling their wilderness areas. Democratic Rep. Larry LaRocca has pushed ahead with a bill similar to Williams' bill, but only for his 1st congressional district.

Rep. Michael Crapo has opted for a series of meetings in his district that seek a consensus plan among the various interest groups. The next meeting is scheduled for Saturday in Idaho Falls.

On Capitol Hill, congressional aides said they a future Idaho bill would likely borrow from Montana's water rights provision as well as adopt the so-called release language which permits multi-purpose land uses.

How these particular issues are hammered out in the contentious House vote on the Montana bill will serve as how-to guide if the Idaho delegation ever decides to introduce a statewide bill.

Buhl council accepts new City Hall

By Kathy Sursely
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The City Council Monday accepted the new City Hall on the recommendation of the architects.

Pete Anderson of Myers Anderson, a Pocatello architectural firm that designed the building, told the council that a few minor items needed to be resolved, but said the contractor, Hayes Construction, would take care of them.

"I recommend acceptance of the building. It is in compliance with contract documents. We have signed off on it," he said.

Council members expressed concern about the acoustics in the council chamber, handicap access to the police department after hours and the heating and cooling system.

Anderson assured them that the air system would be taken care of and that the acoustical problems could be resolved by a sound technician.

"Your accessibility needs requirements, but you can look at options in the future," Anderson said.

In other action, the council, following a court directive, sent plans for the Apple Orchard Partnership's Courtyard Subdivision back to the planning and zoning board.

The city did not approve the development's preliminary plan last year on the recommendation of the planning board.

The partnership filed an appeal. The court ordered the city to uphold, conditionally uphold or overrule the planning board's recommendation to reject the plan.

In other business, Councilman Chris Sacks asked the council to resolve the address issue in the next two weeks.

"It has dragged on long enough. I recommend that we hold a special meeting next Monday to resolve this," he said.

Council President Tom Tappen suggested that addressing for the perimeter roads — Clear Lakes, Sawtooth, Fruitland and Burley — be decided at a meeting on Monday, and the impact area addresses the following Monday.

The council agreed to the two meetings at 7 p.m. Monday and on April 4 at City Hall.

The planning board plans public hearing on Thursday, April 7 at 7 p.m. at City Hall on rezoning an area south of the city. The area is bordered by Miller Street, Burley Avenue and Moon Glo and Clear Creek Roads. The area is being considered for annexation into the city.

Senate passes transfer for landfill

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Senate approved a bill Friday night that would immediately transfer land south of Hub Butte from the federal government to the county for construction of a new garbage landfill.

County Commissioner Jim Friley testified on behalf of the Twin Falls County Land Fill Act of 1993 before a Senate committee earlier in the week.

The federal Bureau of Land Management still owns the land immediately south of the county's existing landfill where a new one will be built.

Counties face an April 9 federal deadline to either open new landfills or monitor their existing ones in compliance with stricter environmental regulations.

Federal procedure, however, requires the BLM to wait until a public comment period ends April 15 before transferring land ownership to the county.

Friley had already said that the county would rather keep its existing landfill open than transport county trash to the regional landfill at Milner Butte.

The U.S. House has yet to act on the bill.

Hagerman breaks ground for rooms

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman School District will hold a groundbreaking ceremony at 10 a.m. Monday at the elementary school, 324 N. Second Ave.

The district saved up money in its plant-facility fund to build two new classrooms, School Board Clerk Clark Ainsworth said.

Because the school has so little room, a fourth grade class has been meeting in the school library, Ainsworth said.

Justice, power company will pay for dam's effects

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The Justice Department and Bonneville Power Administration are to foot the multimillion-dollar bill to compensate the Colville Confederated Tribes for lands flooded by Grand Coulee Dam, an attorney said Friday.

The deal calls for the Justice Department to make a $53 million lump-sum payment for compensation. The dam was completed in 1942, while the Bonneville Power Administration would pay at least $15.25 million a year for future use, said Harry Sachs, a Washington, D.C., attorney who represented the tribe.

It approved by the Colville Business Council, the tribe's general membership and Congress, it would become one of the largest settlements ever between the federal government and Washington state Indian tribes.

"The tribe's desire was not some giant lump-sum payment and that would be it," Sachs said. "The tribe wanted what it had been promised — annual payments that the government had promised in the late 1930s. It was on that basis that we negotiated the settlement."

The settlement was reached after months of negotiations between representatives of the tribe and federal agencies, the attorney said.

Tribal leaders, who have reportedly endorsed the offer, sent information packets this week to tribal members, who will vote on the settlement April 16.

Tribal officials were attending federal services Friday and were unavailable for comment Friday, their secretaries said.

Officials of the Justice Department and BPA in Washington, D.C., said they could not comment on the federal offer until next week.

The Colvilles first sued under the Indian Claims Commission Act in 1951 for lands lost when the Columbia River dam was completed in 1942, creating Lake Roosevelt. The dam, built without fish ladders, destroyed annual runs of salmon in the upper Columbia River.

Negotiations continued off and on for decades, but the claims were generally disputed by the government until 1991, when representatives of the tribe approached Justice, BPA and the Interior Department about a negotiated settlement, Sachs said.

"It was an enormous sense of justice that had gone on through three generations at the tribe," he said. "The first generation starved in tears as the last salmon disappeared and as their villages were flooded."

Cigarette tax hike cleared for final vote

BOISE (AP) — A House-passed multimillion-dollar increase in the state cigarette tax has been cleared by Senate tax writers for a final legislative vote.

The Local Government and Taxation Committee late Friday voted 5-1 to send the 10-cent-a-pack tax hike to the full Senate. The money is earmarked for anti-substance abuse programs in the public schools.

"We need to look at this as progressive health policy," Rep. Elaine Hoffman, D-Pocatello, said. "This product poses a serious health risk to every year than any other product."

The increase, the first since the cigarette tax was doubled in 1987 to 18 cents a pack, is estimated to generate between $7 million and $8 million a year.

Hoffman and Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, said the revenue would finally bring Idaho's support of educational programs in schools to the national average of $35 a year per student. Even at that, they said, it is a minimal amount to counter what they claimed were efforts by the tobacco industry to lure more young people to cigarettes.

"We're in a public war with the tobacco industry," Stubbs said. "We're asking to escalate the money we put into that publicity war."

But opponents denied the industry is trying to convince young people to start smoking and maintain cigarette makers are actually spending their own money to keep under age people away from cigarettes.

Distributor John Wagers warned that the increase would actually have a reverse effect of reducing the revenue generated by tobacco products because it will force some people to stop smoking for financial reasons and it will drive others to purchase cigarettes on the Indian reservations, where no tax is charged.

That shift is taking place yearly as tobacco prices rise, Wagers said. While overall cigarette sales declined by 1.5 percent from 1992 to 1993, reservation sales rose by 1.5 percent. The lost taxes totaled more than $8 million for the state.

Tobacco Institute spokesman Bill Roden called using the higher tax to stop people from smoking sales a "dangerous precedent because the same action could be taken in the future to achieve other social policy goals. He specifically cited the failed attempt in Congress to impose a large tax on ammunition as a means of gun control."

But supporters urged the committee to see beyond such unfounded warnings and not let concerns about revenue shifts or tax losses outweigh a decision that is in the best interest of Idaho children.

Andrus appoints sheep commissioner

RUPERT — Gov. Cecil Andrus has appointed local sheep rancher Henry Etcheverry to the Idaho Sheep Commission. Etcheverry, 44, will meet twice a year with the commission's six members, who oversee the budget for programs that monitor the health of sheep across the state. The commission funds itself by charging a nickel per pound of wool sold, Etcheverry said.

Etcheverry helps manage his family's corporation, Etcheverry Sheep Sheds, in Rupert and Lava Hot Springs. His father, Jean-Pierre, immigrated to the United States in 1927 from the Basque region of southern France and started the company in 1947, he said.

Etcheverry's term starts in May and ends Jan. 1, 2000. Etcheverry replaces John Faulkner, of Gooding, whose term expired.

Meeting to decide zoning near river

RUPERT — Building homes 60 feet from the Snake River will be the subject of a public hearing at the Mitigado County commissioners meeting at 2 p.m. Monday.

The county's zoning ordinance restricts people from building homes closer than 100 feet from the riverbanks.

But the zoning committee has granted variances to most people who have asked to build 60 feet from the banks, said Pam Day, office manager of the county building and zoning department.

The ordinance was drafted many years ago based on state recommendations, Day said.

The hearing will be at the Minidoka commissioners' office in the Minidoka County Courthouse in Rupert. For more information call 436-9511.

Coalition formed to fight anti-gay rights initiative

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A coalition has been formed to fight plans by an Oregon group to place an anti-gay initiative on the Nevada ballot.

Organizers of the campaign for Liberty held a press conference Thursday to say they will fight the proposed initiative, which would mean civil rights laws do not apply to homosexuals.

Gay rights activists in Northern Nevada have been much more vocal about their opposition since the Nevada Citizens Alliance filed the initiative petition Jan. 25.

Timothy Chanaud, an executive at R&R Advertising Inc. and the campaign manager for Campaign for Liberty, said the past two months have been spent building a coalition to oppose the initiative that would change Nevada's Constitution and allow discrimination against gays.

Chanaud and 22 others appeared at the press conference to show broad-based opposition to the Nevada initiative.

Beverly Baum, the coalition's spokeswoman, said the coalition was diverse and included both gays and straight people.

The initiative's advocates must gather 51,339 signatures from registered voters by June 21 to qualify for the November ballot. A constitutional change would require voter approval in 1994 and in 1996.

"Our objective is to have people read it and understand it," she said. "It's designed to mislead."

The initiative would forbid any legalization of marriage between homosexuals or granting of spousal benefits to gays or lesbians.

Daisy Stanley of Reno, director of the alliance supporting the initiative, said Thursday she had no idea how many have signed the 15,000 to 20,000 petitions that are being circulated.

Lucille Lusk, a Las Vegas and executive director of the conservative Nevada Concerned Citizens, said petitions are being circulated by her members, but that the campaign needs to become more organized.

Board votes to sell Park media groups

ITHACA, N.Y. — The board of directors of Park Communications Inc., one of the nation's biggest media groups, voted Friday to seek the sale of the company.

The 14th Park owns the daily South Idaho Press in Burley and the weekly Wood River Journal in Halley.

The vote came after the estate of Roy H. Park, the company's founder, decided to dispose of its 89.6 percent stake, said company spokesman Jack Claiborne.

The company has not agreed to sell out to any specific purchaser yet, Claiborne said. He refused to comment further.

Commissioners to talk about waste station

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The tall, tan Almoliba waste transfer station is a target for vandals, breaks up the view of the mountains and ruins the historical ambience of the Old California Trail nearby, neighbors say.

Cassia County commissioners will discuss how to make the building more tolerable along with other topics at their regular meeting Monday.

Tom Bennett, who lives about a mile from the site, said no one knew the station was being built until construction started several months ago. But commissioners have said they had never heard any complaints about the building until recently.

Over the past several weeks, bullets have been shot through the metal walls, ceiling lights have been shot out and someone has tried to pull out the gates at the newly-built station, said Terry Schultz, coordinator of the Regional Solid Waste District.

The vandalism started after a March 13 newspaper story about neighbors angry with the location of the building, Schultz said.

Moving the building is probably not an option, but possibilities include extra landscaping or cutting the height of the building, county Administrator Tim Hurst said.

Cassia commissioners plan to discuss the issue at 2:30 p.m.

In other business:

- Commissioners will consider whether to auction Cassia Memorial Hospital building and property. Western Health Care Corp. is interested in buying the hospital and turning it into a senior citizens' living and care center, Hurst said.
- The land must be appraised before being auctioned, he said.
- In September, a Burley lawyer and a real estate businessman filed a lawsuit charging county commissioners with violating the state's open meeting law and subsidizing Intermountain Health Care Hospitals Inc., which is building a new hospital in Burley. A trial is set for Nov. 15.
- Commissioners will discuss whether to enforce a junkyard ordinance on several landowners after neighbors have complained that they let junk build up on their land.
- The ordinance would force the landowners to put up eight-foot white fences around their lots and apply for a permit to operate. Commissioners have to decide whether the land should be considered junkyard, Hurst said.

- Commissioners will consider approving the closure of four county-owned and operated landfills on April 6.
- Recent cold-weather has delayed the opening of the regional landfill to April 6 instead of March 30, Schultz said.

Former county sheriff's drunken driving trial set

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A jury trial has been set for April 14 for a former Cassia County sheriff's department patrol officer who faces a drunken driving charge.

Tony Chapa, 30, will be tried on the charge that he had been drinking when he rolled his 1990 Mazda on an off-duty evening Nov. 1.

Chapa quit his job Feb. 1 with Cassia County Sheriff's Department. Sheriff Billy Crystal said Tuesday.

Chapa cited personal reasons for leaving, Crystal said. Crystal declined to comment on the reasons.

Crystal said he doesn't know whether he would have fired Chapa if he was convicted of drunk driving.

Chapa had a good record with the department, but if he was convicted, he couldn't drive a police car because his license would be suspended, Crystal said.

"In our opinion it's a very serious charge. It's not something we would take lightly if it is a police officer," Crystal said.

Chapa now lives in Phoenix, Ariz., Crystal said. Chapa could not be reached for comment. His lawyer, Ray Pena, declined to comment on any aspect of the case, saying it would violate client privilege.

Chapa had worked for the department since 1987. Before that he had served in the National Guard for six years.

Man arrested in killing conspiracy

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A former volunteer at the Cathedral of the Madeleine has been arrested following a purported conspiracy to kill two men who claim he molested them as altar boys nearly 20 years ago.

Steven Jeremiah Crowley, 49, a Salt Lake insurance executive, was booked into the Salt Lake County Jail Wednesday for investigation of conspiracy to commit aggravated murder.

He was arrested after he allegedly paid $750 to a police informant for a 9mm handgun and silencer. Police said Crowley allegedly told the informant he intended to kill the two men and Jane Weiss, a clinical social worker who was counseling one of them.

Contacted at home Thursday night, Crowley said there was no truth to the police allegations "as far as I'm concerned."

"I'm not going to answer your questions, so don't ask," he said.

According to police reports, some

Catholic Church officials were aware in the 1970s of allegations that Crowley had molested altar boys. He was relieved of his duties, only to return to the voluntary job a couple of months later.

Sex crimes detectives, Catholic Church officials and Crowley's accusers fear he may have molested dozens of boys over the years.

Monsignor Francis Mannion of the Salt Lake Catholic Diocese told police that Crowley "has had access to the altar boys for many years" prior to his being relieved as an usher at the cathedral in August 1993.

"There is a fear that there could be many, many more," Mannion said Thursday.

He is aware of four former altar boys — including the two named as possible targets of the alleged conspiracy — who claim they were molested.

"I think the hardest thing, that eats deep down inside, is that people knew it was going on," said Peter Leary, one of the two men Crowley is alleged to have targeted.

Mannion said he and Bishop William K. Weigand learned of the allegations just last August, when Leary came forward. Weigand has since been appointed bishop in Sacramento, Calif.

Mannion could not say why Crowley, after the allegations in the 1970s, was allowed to return as an usher.

"I wish I could tell you," he said. The earlier allegations, Mannion said, were handled "internally" by an unidentified priest. "People handled matters very, very differently back in the late '70s and early '80s," he said. Parents were told and it was decided that no criminal or civil action would be taken, Mannion said.

"I don't think the whole story was told," said Leary, the son of a former district judge in Salt Lake who since has died. "All I know is I went the first to say it. I knew it was going on, yet I didn't do anything."

Last year, Leary sought counseling for depression and his therapist urged him to confront Crowley and report the alleged incident to police.

He filed a report in early December. A week later, the second man came forward.

Sex crimes Sgt. Ed Lyman said there was no possibility of criminal charges in the alleged molestations.

Board suspends teacher

SANDPOINT (AP) — A Sandpoint elementary school teacher was suspended with pay after allegedly using a jump rope to tie an unruly special education student to a desk.

Bonner County School District officials would not disclose the teacher's name. But others familiar with the case said Farmin Elementary third-grade teacher Lynn Franck was relieved of her duties Wednesday.

"All I can say is we do have a teacher suspended and there is an ongoing internal investigation," school district attorney Charles Dodson said Thursday.

Franck, who has been a teacher for more than 20 years, was not at school Thursday and did not return messages left for her at her home.

The teacher allegedly used a jump rope to loosely tie a female special education student to a desk on March 18. The girl has attention-deficit disorder and sometimes has trouble staying in her seat.

"This is egregious behavior. The child was severely traumatized," said attorney John Topp, who was tipped by the student's parents.

Topp said the student apparently

Shooting at Utah party leaves 1 dead, 3 injured

WEST VALLEY CITY, Utah (AP) — One man was killed and three other men were wounded early Friday when a gunman burst into a home and started shooting as a party was breaking up, police said.

The four men were shot at about 4 a.m. when several men broke through the front door and one man opened fire with a .25-caliber semiautomatic handgun, said Detective Jim Crowley.

Investigators believed they had identified the person responsible for the shooting, but had not located him by late morning. Capt. Rich Sweney said earlier, a juvenile brought in for questioning may have been an accessory, he said.

Vincent R. Archuleta, 28, was dead at the scene from a single gunshot wound to the chest.

Jerry T. Pacheco, 22, was shot in the lower back and was undergoing surgery at University Hospital Friday. Eddy J. Aguilar, 30, was shot in the upper arm and treated and released from the same hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Jennifer Doli.

Randy Montoya, 28, was taken to Pioneer Valley Hospital in a private car. He had been shot in the upper arm, with the bullet penetrating his chest wall.

He was listed in stable condition Friday afternoon after undergoing surgery, a nursing supervisor said.

Archuleta, a construction worker who had moved to the Salt Lake Valley from Delta, Colo., died.

The party had started hours earlier at the house, where Brenda Miera, 27, lives with her two children. Neighbor Clarice Kelson said Miera had told her the party was thrown to celebrate her sister's graduation.

Testimony over dog's death miffs lawmakers

BOISE (AP) — Bannock County Sheriff's Department officers did not reveal that a county police dog may have been killed by friendly fire when they testified before a legislative committee earlier this month.

"No one likes to be lied to. No one likes to be told half-truths," Rep. Alan Lance, R-Meridian, a member of the House Judiciary and Rules Committee, said Friday. "I'm positive there was nothing about friendly fire."

Bannock County Detective Jerry Hickman said the sheriff's department discovered on March 9 or March 10 that an officer — not suspect Gerald Cox of McCammon — probably fired the shot that killed Kai Von Dortheckel, a German shepherd.

On March 11, Sheriff Bill Lynn testified before the House panel in support of a bill making it a felony to kill or seriously injure a police dog. Lynn told lawmakers Kai was killed when Cox shot the dog in the mouth with a shotgun during a March 5 dispute near Swan Lake.

The committee approved the bill after hearing from Lynn and other law enforcement officials. It easily passed both the House and Senate and was signed into law by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

But Lynn announced on Tuesday that a videotape showed Cox's shot did not kill Kai. Instead, the dog was killed as officers fired several shots at Cox.

CSI earns 2nd seed in Classic

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The final game Friday determined who would be the top seed heading into the CSI Classic. A 7-6 victory by Chemeketa over CSI gave the Chiefs the top seed and the first round bye in the single elimination tournament today.

Second-seeded CSI and fourth-seeded Treasure Valley will play at 10 a.m. in the opening game of the tournament. It'll be the eighth time that the two clubs have played this season. The winner of that game will advance to the championship game at 6 p.m.

Third-seeded Tacoma will play fifth-seeded Skagit Valley at 12:30 p.m. The winner of that game will advance to play Chemeketa at 3 p.m. That winner will play in the championship game against the CSI-TVCV winner.

Chemeketa 7, CSI 6

CSI spotted the Chiefs a 7-3 lead heading into the bottom of the seventh inning, but the Golden Eagles would battle back.

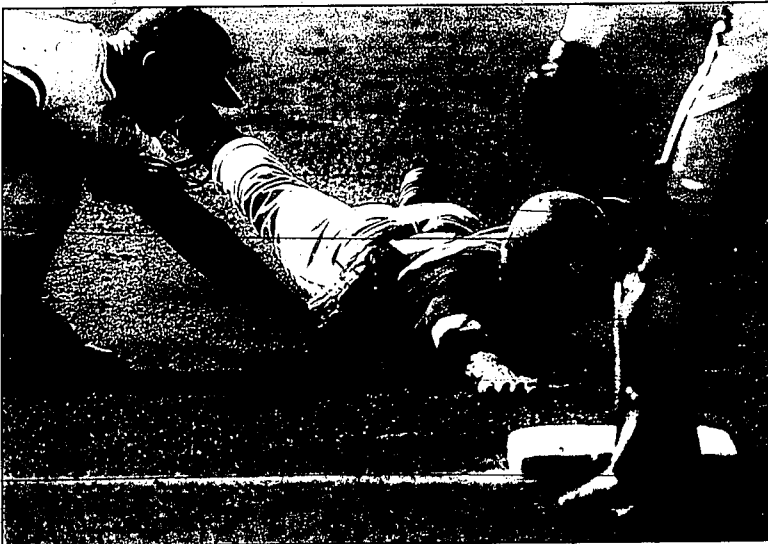

Kumandae Miller and J.D. Hegsted knocked in two runs and Duane Phillips helped close the gap to 7-6 when he drew a bases loaded walk. With one out and the bases full, the Golden Eagles knocked into a double play to snuff the rally.

Once again in the eighth, CSI loaded the bases with one out trailing by a run, but the Chiefs Tony Matteson struck out two batters to end the game.

"What can I say?" said CSI coach Jim Walker. "We beat ourselves."

The Golden Eagles stranded 11 runners in the game while the Chiefs left nine on board.

CSI's Bodee Allred scores a 74 in the bareback competition Friday night.

CSI's Allred tops bareback riders

By Ron Gates

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Rocky Mountain Regional student rodeo director Bodee Allred knows a good thing when he sees it.

The College of Southern Idaho cowboy donated the bull riding belt buckle for the 18th annual CSI Rocky Mountain Regional rodeo, but apparently liked the looks of the prize enough to hang onto it.

Allred, who led a 1-2-3 CSI sweep in Friday's first event, bareback riding, scored 82 points aboard a PRCA National Finals bull for his second triumph of the rodeo's first go round.

"Ten feet tall and bullet proof," is how announcer Zeb Bell described Allred after his winning 8-second spin. He was all that and more en route to a 74-point total on "Sensation," in the broncs.

CSI coach Shawna Davis, his team well on their way to their fifth consecutive regional win, was all smiles after that event which saw All-Around Cowboy leader Robert Bowers finish one point back and Jerome's Jeff Rupert — fourth in the bulls as well — finish 68 for third place.

Bell's pronouncement that: "Oh boy, is it CSI's night," came an hour later, right after CSI's Amber Meeker recorded a 15.92 to take over the barrel racing lead.

That one, though, proved premature as Idaho State's Tara Ferguson (15.69) and Weber State's Amy Allen (15.74) eclipsed Meeker's early standard.

Nevertheless, it was indeed a night to remember for the Golden Eagles whose team ropers Kirk Smith and Mike Broderson joined forces to turn in the best time in their event, 8.6 seconds.

Lloyd Ketchum, the 1991 Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association champion bull fighter, captured the fans in a special exhibition.

Michigan defeats Maryland, could win 3rd straight Final 4

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Juwan Howard gave Michigan another big game when they needed him most and put the Wolverines in position to withstand a late rally.

Howard had 24 points and 11 rebounds Friday night to put Michigan only one game away from a third consecutive Final Four appearance with a 78-71 victory over Maryland in the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Michigan (24-7), which has lost the championship game for two consecutive years, will play top-seeded Arkansas on Sunday for the right to advance to Charlotte. President Clinton has made plans to attend.

Arkansas routed Tulsa 103-84 earlier Friday in the other semifinal at Reunion Arena.

Howard, a junior who had 62 points and 17 rebounds in two earlier tournament games, dominated freshman sensation Joe Smith, who scored only 12 points after getting 29 and 22 in the Terps' two tournament wins.

Michigan led by 21 points at 66-45 with 8:47 to play, but Maryland made a series of runs and cut the lead to 73-64 with 3:29 to go.

Howard then scored a basket before he fouled out with 2:49 left. A basket by Exree Hipp cut the lead to 75-68 with 1:27 to play, but Jimmy King scored on a breakaway.

Maryland, which started two freshmen and three sophomores, missed shots on two straight late possessions when it had a chance to cut the lead to three.

NCAA Midwest Regional semifinals

Jalen Rose scored 16 points, King 13 and Dugan 11 for the Wolverines.

Maryland (18-12) was paced by Keith Booth with 17 points and Duane Simpkins with 11.

Arkansas 103, Tulsa 84

DALLAS — Clint McDaniel helped knock his hometown school out of the NCAA tournament and get top-seeded Arkansas within one victory of the Final Four.

McDaniel doubled his scoring average with 15 points in the first half, when the Razorbacks jumped out to an early lead on their way to a 103-84 victory Friday over 12th-seeded Tulsa in the Midwest Regional semifinals.

McDaniel, who grew up in Tulsa, tied his career-high with 19 points and Scotty Thurman and Corliss Williamson scored 21 each for the Razorbacks (28-3), who last got to the Final Four in 1990 when they went through Dallas.

Tulsa (23-8) got 35 points from Gary Collier and 19 from Shen Seals, but was not able to overcome a big early deficit and a poor shooting night. It was a far different game than their first meeting this year, when Arkansas needed overtime to win 93-91 at Tulsa.

BC pulls off another surprise victory, beats Indiana, 77-68

The Associated Press

MIAMI — Howard Easley and Gerrod Abram made sure Boston College's improbable ride through the NCAA tournament didn't end Friday night.

NCAA East Regional semifinals

The ninth-seeded Eagles pulled off their third consecutive surprising victory, scoring the last nine points of the game to oust fifth-seeded Indiana 77-68 in the NCAA East Regional semifinals.

Easley and Abram did plenty of damage with their outside shooting, and they also held Damon Bailey, the Hoosiers' leading scorer, to 10 points.

Easley made four 3-pointers and finished with 18 points, including a clutch basket that helped Boston College pull away after Bill Curley hit two foul shots for a 70-68 lead with 1:46 to go.

Abram added 15 and Curley had 11 points and 13 rebounds for Boston College (23-10), which beat eighth-seeded Washington State in the first round and then knocked top seed North Carolina in its second game of the tournament.

Indiana (21-9) rallied from a 14-point first-half deficit to lead 64-59 before Boston College finished the game with an 18-4 surge in the final seven minutes.

Pat Graham led the Hoosiers with 16 points. Brian Evans added 14 and Alan Henderson had 12.

Boston College, which shot 47 percent from the field in its first two tournament games, got off to another fast start. Six of the Eagles' first eight baskets were 3-pointers and left Indiana in a 22-8 hole.

The Hoosiers dug out, though, with an impressive run of their own. Graham came off the bench to hit a 3-pointer and also converted a pair of three-point plays as Indiana methodically worked its way back into the game.

A pair of free throws by Evans capped a 23-11 run and trimmed the Boston College lead to 33-31, with 6:17 left in the half. A basket and two free throws by Hucksby gave the Eagles some temporary breathing room before Indiana, countered with Graham's 3-point play and Todd Leary's layup in the closing seconds to trail 40-38 at the half.

Davies, McGann tied at 68 in Shore tourney

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Laura Davies, trying to make it two victories in a row, and Michelle McGann, winless in her six years on the tour, matched 4-under-par 68s Friday to share the second-round lead in the Dinah Shore tournament.

Davies, from England, rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt on No. 18 to pull into a tie with McGann. A five-time winner since joining the American tour in 1988, Davies is coming off a victory at Phoenix last weekend.

Nancy Lopez, tied with Alice Miller and Lisa Walters at the top beginning the second day of play at Mission Hills Country Club, shot a 72 to fall two strokes back.

Miller, Jan Stephenson and Donna Andrews all were one shot back of the co-leaders; Miller with a 71, and Stephenson and Andrews with 69s.

Walters shot a 74 to drop back into a group of five players, including Betsy King, with a 72, at 2-under for the tournament.

Helen Alfredsson of Sweden, the defending champion, shot a 72 after opening the tournament with a 76.

Davies, who finished last week's tournament at 15-under, good for a four-shot victory over Beth Daniel and Elaine Crosby, said she is simply playing the best golf of her life so far this year.

Laura Davies chips onto the 15th green where she bogled to hole during the Dinah Shore tournament Friday in Rancho Mirage, Calif.

McGann, who came on the tour when she was only 18, has been knocking on the door, but not quite able to break through with her first win. She finished in a tie for second in the World Championship of Golf last year, and had nine finishes in the top 10. She also played well enough to earn $315,921.

Zoeller tops Players field, but could lose advantage

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller finished off a 67 after a lengthy rain delay and took a 4-shot lead Friday in the uncompleted second round of the Players Championship.

There was no assurance, however, that Zoeller's advantage would stand up when Greg Norman and 71 others completed second-round play Saturday morning. They were stranded by darkness on the TPC at Sawgrass after an early-morning squall stopped play for almost three hours.

After the second round is completed, the field will be cut to the low 70 scorers and the third round will begin at 9:30 a.m. (MST).

This event was already completed, however, by John Daly and defending champion Nick Price.

Daly struggled to a fat 80 and completed two rounds at 154, 10 over par.

Price, who used a victory here last season as the springboard to Player of the Year honors and had finished first and second in his last two starts, shot 76-149 and went home, confident he failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

Zoeller reached the tournament halfway point at 133, 11 under par.

When darkness fell, Norman had caught him and at least two others had a chance.

Norman, the British Open champion who opened this tournament with a 63, was 2 under for the round and 11 under for the tournament with 8 holes to play.

Mike Springer, who had an eagle-3 on the ninth hole, and Jeff Maggert were at 9 under par. Springer had three holes of second round play remaining, Maggert seven.

Aoki, Gilbert share 1-stroke lead in Doug Sanders Classic

KINGWOOD, Texas (AP) — Isao Aoki, making his first start of the year on the PGA Senior Tour, and Larry Gilbert each shot 4-under-68 Friday for a one-stroke lead over three other golfers in the opening round of the Doug Sanders Celebrity Classic.

Gilbert, Aoki, Chi-Chi Rodriguez and Tommy Aaron were one shot back, followed by Jim Albino, Jim O'Hern, and defending champion Bob Charles, all at 2-under 70.

Aoki, who arrived in the United States from his native Japan on Monday, said he wasn't paying attention to the scoreboard and didn't even know he was leading the tournament when he finished his round at the 6,659-yard Deerwood Club, northeast of Houston.

"Happy day," said Aoki, who speaks little English.

Aoki, beginning his third year on the Senior Tour, had a lone bogey to go with five birdies — three of them on the back nine.

Larry Gilbert, a career club pro who joined the Senior Tour last year, played bogey-free golf and converted four birdies to tie Aoki.

"I've been flirting with starting to play good for the last three weeks," he said. "I had it around the hole all day long."

Gilbert, whose best finish this year was a tie for 21st at the GTE West Classic earlier this month in California, was in the last group to tee off and finished in near-darkness as play was slowed by the tournament format that had one pro playing with four amateurs.

Saturday regional championships to determine women's Final Four

The Associated Press

The NCAA Women's Final Four will be known by late Saturday night after the four-region championships determine who moves on to Richmond, Va., for next week's national semifinals and final.

Upsets of top-ranked Tennessee, defending NCAA champion Texas Tech and No. 12 Vanderbilt in region semifinals play Thursday means that newcomers or teams that haven't been to the final four for a while will advance.

In the East, at Rutgers University, top-seeded Connecticut (30-2), the Big East champion, will meet third-seeded North Carolina (30-2), the Atlantic Coast Conference winner.

In the Midwest, at the University of Arkansas, fourth-seeded Louisiana Tech (29-3), the Sun Belt winner, will meet second-seeded Southern Cal (26-3), the Pac-10 champion.

In the Midwest, at the University of Texas, top-seeded Penn State (28-2), the Big-Ten co-champion, will meet sixth-seeded Alabama (25-6).

In the West, at Stanford, the second-seeded Cardinal (25-5) will face top-seeded Purdue (28-4), the other Big Ten co-champion.

Connecticut has a twin-tower approach in its post positions in 6-foot-4 All-American Rebecca Lobo and 6-7 freshman Kara Wolters. UConn has been to the Final Four once, in 1991.

The title game will be played Sun, April 3. CBS will televise the Final Four.

U.S. outplays India in Davis Cup match

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Jim Courier cruised to an easy win, while Todd Martin needed some big serves and strong nerves to give the United States a 2-0 lead over India Friday in its bid to reclaim the Davis Cup.

AP photo

Martin defeated Leander Paes 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, 7-6 (7-1), after Courier beat Zeeshan Ali 6-1, 6-1, 6-2.

The U.S. team can win the best-of-5, first-round World Group series Saturday, when Patrick McEnroe and Richey Renberg meet Paes and Gaurav Natekar in doubles.

Paes, ranked 324th in the world, mixed lobs, passes, drop shots and tumbles on the grass court to stretch Martin to a fourth-set tiebreaker.

But the ninth-ranked Martin rattled four service winners, including a second-serve ace that kicked up chalk and skidded out of Paes' reach, to win the tiebreaker. He closed it out with a forehand service return down the line.

Playing his first Davis Cup match, Martin said the Indian crowd cheered him in the second set. "It rattled me a little, and that's all it takes," he said.

But after a few words from non-playing captain Tom Gullikson and the other players, "I was lucky enough to regain my composure for the third set," he said.

Paes lost his rhythm in the third set, but he thought he had a mental edge in the second and again in the fourth. Martin "pulled out of that situation every time," Paes said, and saved a break with another ace on his second serve.

Martin "is very solid. He comes at you every point, especially the big points," Paes said. "Every time you feel you are getting on top of him, he comes up with big serves, solid returns, good volleys."

Courier had no trouble with Ali after the Indian won his first service game with four straight points. Then Courier romped through the next nine games.

Jim Courier returns a shot from India's Zeeshan Ali in the first singles match of the India-U.S. Davis Cup tournament in New Delhi Friday. He defeated Ali 6-1, 6-1, 6-2.

Tyson fails equivalency test, must stay in jail

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Tyson's plans for early release from prison have been put on hold because he failed the high school equivalency exam.

Tyson, who is serving a six-year sentence for rape at the Indiana Youth Center, can retake the two-day test in 90 days, Phil Slavens, assistant superintendent of operations at the facility, said Friday.

If the former heavyweight champion had passed, he would have had three months deducted from his sentence, making him eligible for parole next February. Tyson is scheduled to be released in May 1995.

Tyson's supporters said he was more determined than ever now to pass the test, and still hopes to be released early.

"I just want to emphasize, that though we certainly had hoped to pass on the first time ... many persons have had to take it two and three times," said Muhammad Siddiq, an Indianapolis Public Schools teacher who is tutoring Tyson.

Slavens said it was "reasonably common" for inmates to fail the test, but more than 50 percent of every testing group usually passes.

"I can guarantee you — and I say that with all sincerity — Mike Tyson will pass the test this year," said the Rev. Charles Williams, president of the Indiana Black Expo and a friend of Tyson's.

Slavens would not say what areas Tyson failed.

Japan's Sato narrowly wins technical program

CHIBA, Japan (AP) — The Olympic women's medalists weren't sorely missed after all at the World Figure Skating Championships.

The hometown fans had Yuka Sato, whose nimble jumps and flashy footwork gave her a narrow victory in the technical program Friday as she sought her first world title.

France's Surya Bonaly and Canada's Josée Chouinard also landed triple lutz-double toe loop combinations and were behind Sato going into Saturday night's free program, which decides two-thirds of the score.

Sato was fifth, Bonaly fourth and Chouinard ninth at Lillehammer.

Gold medalist Oksana Baiul of Ukraine is recovering from an injury from the Olympics, silver medalist Nancy Kerrigan of the United States is resting, and bronze medalist Chen Lu of China dropped out Thursday with a broken foot.

Kerrigan's replacement, 13-year-old Michelle Kwan of Torrance, Calif., was a disappointing 11th after falling on her triple lutz and failing to make her required combination jump.

"I felt great, but I could have done better," she said. "It just didn't work out right."

Chouinard said Friday's top performances "were as strong as at the Olympics, except it was other skaters doing it."

In the ice dancing, however, the level might have slipped a little.

Evgeni Platov of the Olympic ice dancing champion pair had to jump back to his feet quickly after a rare fall as he and Oksana Gritschuk rock and rolled to the world title.

Russian or Soviet twosomes have won nine of the last 10 world championships in both ice dancing and pairs competition.

Gritschuk and Platov had said they felt no real competition in the absence of Russian counterparts Maia Usva and Alexander Zhulin, the Olympic silver medalists.

Every tongue confess

Church explains 1st-century teachings to 21st-century believers through musical

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

Woman at the well: "My life had been so full of searching ... then I met a stranger one day, a Jew."

Twin Falls businesswoman: "One day at work, I was just sitting there in my office crying. I wasn't sure why. Kathy must have walked by and heard me ..."

—from "Every Tongue Confess"

TWIN FALLS — When the Cornerstone Song Company takes the stage on Easter Sunday morning, audiences will be introduced to first-century Christians standing alongside the believers of today.

"Every Tongue Confess" is a brand new musical, blending real-life testimonies of contemporary church members with ancient testimonies of characters from Bible days. Laura Tracy, Cornerstone Baptist Church choir director, found the musical when she was searching for something special to perform on Easter.

"It was the last one I listened to," Tracy said. "I knew immediately that it had both great music and a great message."

The music is challenging. Tracy explained. Song titles range from "Is He the One?" to "Where the Nails Were" to "Feed My Sheep."

The title for the musical is taken from Philippians 2:10-11: "... at the name of Jesus every knee should bow ... and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord." (RSV)

There are 23 speaking parts in the script. Thirteen singers are currently in rehearsal for "Every Tongue Confess."

They call themselves the Cornerstone Song Company and usually present three or four musicals a year at the church. In all, 30 performers are taking part in the Easter performance. Cornerstone pastor, Scott Thomas, is handling the narration and the closing remarks.

Cornerstone Baptist Church Choir Director Laura Tracy says the new musical 'Every Tongue Confess' has both great music and a great message.

Thomas said he is pleased with the way practices are going.

"This depicts exactly what our church is trying to accomplish — taking first-century teachings into the 21st century," Thomas said. "Even though the Bible was written 2,000 years ago, it still applies today."

First-century royal official: "I met Jesus in Cana while my little boy was lying sick at Capernaum."

Roman centurion: "I met him at the foot of the cross. I could have stopped the whole thing ..."

Cornerstone church member: "I met him one day at school, on the way to the library."

Several of the Cornerstone church members are constructing a backdrop for the church's stage. A CD provides the background music. The songs are contemporary in style. The singers have written their own testimonies, adding a personal touch to the performance.

Performance set

Cornerstone Song Company will perform "Every Tongue Confess," by Gary Driskell and Marty Hennis, at 11 a.m. Easter morning, April 3, at the Cornerstone Baptist Church, 315 Shoup Ave. W.

The public is invited.

Tracy's mom, Lucille Tracy, talks about wondering why God has given her crippling arthritis, but eventually realizing how she could encourage others through her own experience.

Judy Hanchey talks about how her son almost died when he was 18 years old. Through her faith and the faith of others, she said, she made it through the darkest of days. Today, Hanchey's son is 29 and singing in the Cornerstone choir with his mom.

"Christ is alive and at work today just as he has always been," Thomas explained. "God still works through the resurrected Lord."

"The stone was rolled away. We ran into the tomb, but the tomb was empty. Christ had risen."

Study: Kids of smoking moms just up

Great news! I found it! Just what you were looking for:

- A reason to quit smoking! According to a study published in the "Pediatrics" journal, women who smoke at least a pack of cigarettes a day are twice as likely to have children with extreme behavior problems.

In other words, children are more likely to act up the more Mom lights up. The study indicates that there are "thousands of toxins in cigarette smoke, any one of which could affect behavior." "All of which makes me even more grateful that Anita is a lifelong non-smoker. I have a hard enough time handling my kids' behavior as it is. A few more toxins and my happy home would probably go up in smoke."

So to speak.

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

- A reason to get married first! Another study (they, a Ph.D.) has to be good for something) indicates that the divorce rate among couples who live together before they are married is 50 to 100 percent higher than for those who get married first. According to a survey in "Demography," statistical evidence suggests that living together before marriage "may reinforce the idea that intimate relationships are fragile and temporary," which may "reduce the expectation that marriage is a lifetime relationship."

- Evidence that anyone can change! How about this quote from Jane Fonda (yeah, that Jane Fonda) in "USA Today": "When you see what's happening to the kids, you can't help but think that somebody should have been at home, minding the kids."

Fonda went on to say that she understands that "a huge percentage of women can't afford to stay home with their children." But she made it clear that time and experience have altered her view of the significant contribution made to society by stay-at-home moms.

What's next — Madonna as a national spokesperson for abstinence?

- A reason to avoid pride like the plague! Pro basketball's multi-millionaire, Shaquille O'Neal, likes to tell about the time his high school team was playing for the state championship. O'Neal was nearly 7 feet tall at the time and was already attracting national attention; the opposition's tallest player was 6 feet 3 inches tall.

"I was pretty cocky," O'Neal said. "I was bragging that no one could stop me, that I was going for 50 points and we'd win the championship."

Of course, that was before he picked up four quick fouls and spent most of the game on the bench. But, even though he only scored eight points, he still had a chance to deliver the championship. With five seconds to play and his team down by one, O'Neal was fouled in the act of shooting. With two free throws, he could give his team the title.

He missed. Twice.

Remembers O'Neal: "That was the last time I ever said I was better than anyone."

- A reason to cheer! The Washington Redskins might not be your favorite team, but you've got to like Redskins cornerback Darrell Green — and not just because he's a pro bowler and a four-time winner of the "NFL's Fastest Man" competition.

Green established the Youth Life Foundation, aimed at helping underprivileged youth in the Washington, D.C., area. Every year he hits teammates and friends up for cash, loads a van with clothing and food and makes numerous trips into D.C.'s roughest neighborhoods to help the needy. Recently, he added the Darrell Green Learning Center, a Bible-based project aimed at teaching reading skills and character development.

"I just ask God to lead me to the right places," Green says of his avocation. "I pull up to an apartment building and say, 'Hey, I'm Darrell Green. So, you need some clothes?'"

- Someone to blame! What do these have in common? Here's the list: Two incredibly violent R-rated films ("The Silence of the Lambs" and the "Alien" "Aliens" triple pack), one shamelessly exploitive documentary ("Madonna: Truth or Dare") and four — count 'em, four — offerings from Playboy and Penthouse.

Answer: All were best sellers.

If you're in the entertainment industry, the message is pretty clear, isn't it? Sleazy stuff sells. And until it stops selling, you're going to keep producing it. So when it comes right down to it, we have no one to blame but ourselves for Hollywood's creative crisis.

And you were looking for someone to blame, weren't you?

Group of Jerome moms prays on behalf of students, teachers

By H.R. Weizel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — A group called Moms In Touch with God, Children and Schools has set out to make a difference in Jerome.

Each week, five area mothers meet together to pray for one hour. They pray for students, teachers and the school district staff.

"We've gotten thank-you notes from teachers and other mothers, so we know something is happening out there," said Debbie Dahl, a member of the Moms In Touch prayer group.

Women in the group, in addition to Dahl, are Carla Strunk, Maylene Harding, Colleen Drain and Catherine Fox.

On a larger scale, Moms In Touch is a nondenominational international prayer group formed to:

- Stand in the gap for children through prayer.
- Pray that children will receive Jesus as Lord and Savior, then, in turn, stand boldly in their faith in Jesus Christ.
- Pray for teachers and staff.
- Pray that teachers, administrative staff and students will come to faith in Jesus Christ.

- Provide support and encouragement to moms who carry heavy burdens for their children.
- Pray that schools may be directed by biblical values and high moral standards.

- Be a positive, supportive influence on schools.

The hour of prayer is divided into four segments: praise, prayer to give God glory, moments of silent confession and thanksgiving prayers. Interceding on behalf of children, teachers and school administrators completes the prayer time.

Jerome Moms In Touch are praying that each child will know "how wide and long and high and deep the love of Christ is, and know this love that surpasses knowledge."

The mothers borrowed this concept from Ephesians 3:18 and 19. They pray students will have godly attributes, obey their parents, choose godly friends, and be protected from the evil one, drugs, alcohol, tobacco, victimization and molestation, premarital sex and physical danger.

Group members also pray for a student's choice of a male and career and that a child will be wise in the use of God-given gifts, talents and abilities.

The group prays for students and teachers by name.

So far, in Jerome and across the country, the feedback has reportedly been positive.

According to Moms In Touch literature: "It has been shared by many teachers how much they have appreciated and counted on our prayers. One teacher, with tears in her eyes, expressed how she couldn't believe that we would actually take the time and concern to pray for her. She thought the only other person who ever prayed for her was her mom."

The Jerome moms have been meeting since September, from noon to 1 p.m. on Tuesdays at the Carla Strunk home, 935 N. Eisenhower.

Notices are being placed in each Jerome school, asking students and staff to submit their needs and concerns, Strunk said.

Our goal is to have a Moms In Touch group for each of the five Jerome schools, Strunk said.

Jerome School Superintendent Jim Cobble said he doesn't perceive this as being in violation of church and state laws.

"I don't think there is any conflict," he said. "I think they just want to let people know they have an organization and are concerned about the welfare of the schools and are praying on behalf of the schools."

Another Moms In Touch group meets on Saturdays at the Twin Falls home of Julie Overacre to pray for Morningside Elementary School students and staff, school board members, the superintendent and secretaries.

Dennis Sonius, Morningside's principal, said the group has not contacted him.

"This is the first I've heard about it," he said last week.

Requests for further information should be directed to Overacre at 733-7645. Contact Strunk at 324-7629.

Book of Mormon critics take hits

By Vern Anderson
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — When Brent Metcalfe compiled a book of essays last year suggesting that Mormonism's founding scripture wasn't the ancient history it purports to be, he expected some criticism.

Nearly a year later, he's getting it, in a virulently volume that exceeds his own book by 100 pages and seeks to expose him as a faith-destroying secularist masquerading badly, as a well-meaning pursuer of historic truth.

Metcalfe, his fellow essayists and their publisher again have run afoul of the Foundation for Ancient Research and Mormon Studies (F.A.R.M.S.), and the gloves, if there ever were any, are off.

"Pseudo-plaus" "shoddy pseudoscholarship," "deceptive and specious" and "distorted" are just some of the barbs aimed at Metcalfe and other contributors to "New Approaches to the Book of Mormon: Explorations in Critical Methodology." The salvoes contained in the 566-page "Review of Books on the Book of Mormon" come as no surprise, given the longstanding animus between scholars and the church.

F.A.R.M.S., many of them professors at church-owned Brigham Young University, and those published by the independent Signature Books.

Two years ago Signature threatened to sue F.A.R.M.S. for referring to some of its writers as "anti-Mormon." Last year, a review by BYU history professor William Hamblin containing an encrypted message — "Metcalfe is butthead" — was hastily edited out after the "Review" had gone to press.

The continuing scholarly battleground is the Book of Mormon, which church founder Joseph Smith said he translated "by the gift and power of God" from ancient gold plates given him by an angel. Most Mormons — please see HITS/C2

How can we fully experience Palm Sunday?

As I prepare for tomorrow's celebration of Palm Sunday, I find myself reflecting on how domesticated the Christian church has become. Jesus' triumphant ride into Jerusalem has become.

It's not that the church completely misunderstands the meaning of this special day in the Christian year. Our processions of children waving palm branches and the special music and liturgies that proclaim this victorious occasion are all appropriate expressions of the exhilaration and joy the crowds experienced as they rejoiced and praised God while watching Jesus as he rode by on his way to the temple and eventually to the cross. It is good and right that we include this in our worship.

But what in our celebration of Palm Sunday do we acknowledge the unmet and distinctive needs of Christ's Messianic claim? The people had been waiting for a messiah of great stature, wielding great political power, someone who could command armies to crush their oppressors. Instead Jesus came as one of the poor, as one who had little interest in compliance with the power structures of his day, and taught that we should love our neighbors, not try to conquer them.

What will be said or acted out that will describe the profound statement Jesus' ride makes concerning the nature of God's Kingdom, who would be included and who would not? How will we point out the revolutionary nature of the harsh opposition to injustice that defined Jesus' ministry throughout his entire life and culminated in this final entry into the temple city? Will attention be given to the prophetic imagery of this ride and the confrontation this represented to the religious leadership of the first century?

I suspect that these aspects of our Palm Sunday observance won't receive as much expression as will our less obtrusive traditions. We tend to be more comfortable with children waving palm branches than we are with the truly radical claims Jesus made.

If we honestly want to appreciate this festival celebration, perhaps we ought to leave our homes and our sanctuaries and go back out into the streets. Perhaps we ought to line the roads of our communities and witness to Christ's entry into our own lives. For, there is where we will more fully experience the true meaning of this holiday — that even if we fail to adequately proclaim Jesus as the Son of God, this truth is so magnificently powerful that the very earth we stand on will shout out the miracle of this ride.

Morpheus column does not tell truth of group

In his "Faith Today" column of March 19, Clark Morpheus has offended me deeply and been guilty of false advertising.

Mr. Morpheus' piece recounts the work of the Jesus Seminar, a group of so-called scholars who evidently divide their time between denying that the text of the Bible is authentic and seeking headlines as a way to continue their project.

This column does not speak to the qualifications of the Jesus Seminar members. I wonder if they have any credible basis to offer as a reason why anyone should listen to their heresy.

Their views are clearly heretical. A short list of the insights this group has developed, by committee vote, includes: Jesus didn't teach the Lord's Prayer. Jesus' comments on certain events are additions by later writers, some of Jesus' last words on the cross are not his at all.

Pseudo-science attacking traditional Christian beliefs is not new. Attacks on the word of God by skeptics is not new. The use of respectable media to undermine the very basis of faith is not new. However, I can't accept this claptrap without loud objection.

My faith doesn't come from committee hearings and majority decisions but from the Holy Spirit active in the word of God. Those who oppose the scriptures do not seek to clarify faith but to destroy it. Urge you to discontinue publishing Morpheus' column, or at least to put it in a different section of your paper where its anti-Christian diatribes might be a bit more appropriate.

As of the false advertising charge, I refer to the column's title, "Faith Today." Faith in what? Not the faith of the Christian church. Not faith in the words of Jesus. Faith in the majority opinion of unknown "scholars" doesn't qualify-for-space-on-the-religion page.

Additionally, Morpheus' coy tactic of identifying himself as "an ordained clergyman" seeks status without responsibility. He is ordained in the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. If you allow him to spread this garbage, you at least should be sure to completely identify its source.

Sex abuse case shows church-media rift

By Frank P.L. Somerville
The Baltimore Sun

It should have come as no surprise that Roman Catholic Church leaders vented some righteous indignation and criticism of the press recently in the wake of a report of sexual abuse charges against Chicago Cardinal Joseph Bernardin.

Archbishop William H. Keeler of Baltimore, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, had presaged the reaction in November when a man dying of AIDS made his shocking accusations in a $10 million lawsuit. Setting off a standing ovation for Bernardin at the November meeting of the Catholic hierarchy in Washington, Keeler had assured the press and influential Chicago prelate of the church's "full support" and expressed the certainty that he would be vindicated.

Devoing the bulk of his remarks as elected head of the conference to an attack on the news media for "misleading and sensational reporting," Keeler told the assembled cardinals, archbishops and bishops, "As we watched the media take up the story of the allegations against Cardinal Bernardin, we also could not fail to note that being in the story is, for some, a value that outweighs providing the best and most accurate reporting."

Keeler's comments were to be expected. Were they justified? Richard Schwarzlose, a professor of journalism history, law, and ethics at Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism, told the Associated Press that, in his opinion, the reporters' handling of the allegations against Bernardin was generally fair.

"Only a decade or two ago," the professor said, "a lawsuit like this would probably never have been filed, and if it were it probably wouldn't be covered. Back then, there was what would have been called a 'gentlemen's agreement.' Maybe we'd call it a 'cover-up' today."

The fact is that the climate of cynicism and suspicion in which Bernardin was forced to defend his innocence was created by the church authorities themselves through their years of denial, cover-up and inaction in the face of clear evidence of priestly abuse of children.

When the accusations against the cardinal surfaced in November, there was a rush to judgment on all sides. A Vatican official had quickly termed the allegations "filthy, worthy of the devil." On the side, in walk outside the bishops' hotel in Washington, representatives of a national organization of victims of priests' abuse criticized the Vatican and some of the American bishops for what was described as "vicious" and "hostile" language about the cardinal's accuser.

Last week, a spokesman for the victims' organization — the Chicago-based Survivors Network of Those Abused by Priests, or SNAP — praised Bernardin's magnanimity toward his accuser but cautioned that neither complainants nor the accused can properly be judged before all the evidence is in.

The suit claiming the cardinal had sexually abused him more than 15 years ago was dismissed after the plaintiff admitted that he had no clear memory of the alleged occurrence and that the charges were otherwise unsubstantiated.

Speaking on behalf of the Catholic Church in the United States, Keeler said, "While this sad chapter comes to a close for Cardinal Bernardin, it continues to raise troubling questions which must be dealt with."

"Without impugning the seriousness of authentic cases of sexual abuse, important questions remain concerning the role of certain attorneys, psychiatrists and media in bringing reckless charges against innocent people. The role of CNN and others in the accusations made against Cardinal Bernardin is a story deserving of telling."

A spokesman for the archbishop said CNN was singled out because it had given what has turned out to be a flimsy lawsuit the kind of continuous and sensational coverage one would expect for a declaration of war. In tandem with the Bernardin story, the cable network aired reports on confirmed cases of pedophilia among Catholic priests under the heading, "Fall from Grace," he said.

The American Medical Association warned last year that false accounts of possible sexual abuse in childhood can result from memory enhancement therapy, which the doctors' group said is "fraught with problems of potential misapplication."

The mere hint of possible sexual abuse of a child, and certainly a formal charge in court — whether proved or not — can ruin a person's reputation. This is not a problem for the news media alone to ponder. It should seriously engage the reading and viewing public and society as a whole. Would that the principle of innocent until proved guilty were operative psychologically as well as legally.

S. Carolina preachers face rising stress

GREENVILLE, S.C. — South Carolina's preachers are facing mounting stresses because of unrealistic expectations, societal pressures, and financial difficulties, state church officials say.

"I call it a clergy crisis," said Reggie McNeal, director of leadership development for the South Carolina Baptist Convention.

The Rev. Ike Patterson, a 20-year Southern Baptist pastor, said stress from some of the new pressures on ministers drove him to leave his church five years ago.

"People want pastors now who are young, who know every organizational skill, who are able to preach as good as any of the larger churches on television and at the same time can bandage up scraped knees, come eat supper with them and go to every meeting of every ladies' or men's prayer group in the church," Patterson said.

Patterson now is the director of pastoral services at Charter Hospital.

Church members can help reduce stress by taking their ministers off the pedestal, Patterson said. They can support the family, encourage the pastors to take time off and offer words of appreciation, he said.

Texas winery to sell sacramental wines

CEDAR PARK, Texas — A Texas winery has been laboring in the religious vineyards hoping to break California's lock on the sacramental wine business.

Hill Country Cellars, located in Cedar Park northwest of Austin, next month will introduce Brother Thomas wines, the first Texas-made label produced exclusively for Roman Catholic and some Protestant churches.

"We've done our market research and we know that there is a part of the market here that we can acquire," said Bill Atwood, Hill Country's general manager.

The state's sacramental wine business includes at least 900 Catholic churches and hundreds of other Protestant churches, according to Ruben Carlin, a marketing specialist for the Texas Department of Agriculture.

He said it is not unusual for a church to spend $4,000 to $5,000 on 100 cases of sacramental wine each year.

Sacramental wine production is similar to other wine-making in Texas, said D. Russell Smith, Hill Country's winemaker.

But sacramental wines must contain only materials "of the grape," he said. Wines sold for general consumption can include additives and clarifiers.

Disabled Christian composer speaks about death

By Kristin E. Holmes
Knight-Ridder News Service

Jon Eareckson Tada explained to the crowd that the well-adjusted author/singer/artist who sat before them was a long time in the making.

Her journey from self-pity to acceptance started 27 years ago on a raft in the Chesapeake Bay.

With one dive into shallow water, she snapped her spine and changed her life. She was paralyzed from the neck down. And while in the hospital, she begged her friends to help her commit suicide.

"I was so depressed," said Tada, 44. "I'm so glad there was no (Dr.

Jack) Keovorkian or right-to-die movement when I was injured. Had he been operating, his suicide contraption, I would have written him a letter."

Endo came to the Westminster Theological Seminary in Glenside, Pa., near Philadelphia, recently to talk about death and dying. A widely known Christian speaker, she works as an advocate for the disabled and, brush in mouth, paints landscapes. She gave two speeches during the three-day conference in early March.

In her talks, Tada, who lives in Agoura Hills, Calif., skewered both Keovorkian and the right-to-die movement.

She called the Michigan doctor's brand of medicine "preying on the disabled" and tantamount to advocating that a person is better off dead than disabled. And for right-to-die activists, compassion is an anonymous with lethal injection, she said.

On the other hand, she is not an advocate of heroic measures to extend life in all circumstances.

"What is the difference between providing someone with all the life, to which they are entitled and prolonging his death?" said Tada, who has written 18 books including "When Is It Right to Die?"

"It is right to die when it is time to die," she said, answering her own question: "When a person rapidly and violently deteriorates and there is no chance for recovery. There is a point after which it is futile to go into a full-court press."

Tada's life deterioration she faced four years ago with her father, when he became debilitated after a series of strokes. The family decided that there would be no feeding tube.

Tada says her own bout with thoughts of suicide fell on the other side of the when-is-it-right line.

"My problem was not physical paralysis but my clinical depression," Tada said. "I realized I didn't want to die, but I wanted to be relieved of my pain and hopelessness."

believe Smith and the book's claims for itself — that it is a history of Israelites who sailed to the Americas in 600 B.C. and were visited by a resurrected Jesus Christ.

"Take away the Book of Mormon and the revelations, and where is our religion? We have none," Smith said in 1834.

Indeed, there is nothing that sets the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and its nearly 9 million members further apart from mainstream Christianity than the revelations in the book as divinely revealed ancient scripture.

"Honest investigators will conclude that there are so many evidences that the Book of Mormon is an ancient text that they cannot confidently resolve the question against its authenticity, despite some unanswered questions that seem to support the negative determination," Mormon Apostle Dallin H. Oaks said at the F.A.R.M.S. annual dinner last October.

What separates the Book of Mormon's detractors from its defenders, Oaks said, is that the former rely exclusively on scholarship, while the latter combine scholarship, faith and revelation.

Metcalf and the nine other essayists in "New Approaches" — most of them at least nominal Mormons — place the Book of Mormon squarely in the 19th century. Most, including Metcalf, see it as entirely Smith's creation. A few agree it is frontier fiction but believe it contains inspired truths.

The essayists, employing what Metcalf calls "literary and historical-critical methods," question the book's authenticity on a variety of levels — textual, archaeological, demographic and linguistic.

In a few instances, they are credited by the F.A.R.M.S. reviewers for new insights, but some of the compliments are decidedly left-handed.

BYU political scientist Louis Midgley, for example, calls "New Approaches" an "important event" because of the law professor John Welch, for "their spirit of reconciliation" and civility. Others, he said, minimize and obscure important issues by "ad hominem attacks and hostility."

BYU's Hamblin points out that Metcalf, a technical writer for a Utah computer company, never attended college and, he contends, is an anti-Mormon prone to pedantry.

Commenting on a recent article in the independent journal Dialogue, Hamblin said "Metcalf's writing betrays an academic immaturity which could benefit from a healthy dose of disciplined skepticism in a good undergraduate program."

Said Metcalf: "I consider it a compliment if the review is any indication of what it means to have a degree."

David Said Levi is a native of Cuba and student at Yeshiva University in New York. He hopes to become the only native-born rabbi in Cuba.

Man could be Cuba's only native-born rabbi

By Joe Ungaro
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The traditions began with Abraham and they've been passed down faithfully for nearly 4,000 years. But they came close to dying out for a generation of Jews in communist-controlled Cuba.

Fidel Castro never said they could not worship but most of Cuba's Jews fled the island after he took control in 1959. Many others gave up going to the synagogue and the island was left without a rabbi.

One man now hopes to become the only native-born rabbi in Cuba. David Said Levi, a 22-year-old telephone technician from Havana, began classes at Yeshiva University here last Sept. 1. Administrators at Yeshiva say he is the first Jew ever granted permission by the Castro government to study at a university in the United States.

Levy's schooling was arranged by Barry Katz, a Jewish businessman from New Orleans. While in Cuba for the Pan American Games in 1991, Katz went to a synagogue in Havana to worship and there he met Levy.

There are four synagogues but only about 600 Jews in Havana, down from about 13,000 in pre-Castro Cuba. Levy estimates there are only about 1,200 left in the country of over 10 million people.

A generation gap, of sorts, has emerged among Jews in Cuba.

Levy, speaking English with the help of an interpreter, said most of the middle-aged Jews lost interest in religion but older people had continued worshipping.

The government left the temples open and the people who used them maintained them.

The older people taught the younger but the community had no ordained leader of its own. A conservative rabbi from Mexico, Canada, or Argentina would occasionally come to the island to supplement the teachings and perform important ceremonies.

In the last few years, Levy says, many young people began rediscovering their roots. Levy was one of several young Jews spending a lot of time in the synagogue when Katz came to visit.

"He was in the synagogue every day," Katz said. "He really impressed me with his sincerity."

Levy had even taken a position of responsibility in the Jewish community. An 80-year-old man taught Levy the ritual slaughtering techniques necessary to produce kosher chicken and beef.

taught the techniques to his younger brother so there could continue to be kosher meat in Cuba.

"There is no one in Cuba to do the circumcisions, or burials or to teach," Katz said. "He had a sincere interest in becoming a rabbi and serving his community."

Katz said people were constantly asking him to help them get out of the country during his visit to Cuba.

"You walked down the street in Cuba, people ask you 'Can you help me get out?' but this young man was very sincere about learning how to become a rabbi so he could teach," Katz said.

The Cuban government was willing to let Levy leave if he could get a commitment from a rabbinical school. Katz, a 45-year-old real estate investor, knew some people at Yeshiva University so he called the admissions director and the head of the school's Sephardic Studies department to make inquiries.

"They said if I could get the young man out and get him to America, they would give him a scholarship and help him become a rabbi," Katz said.

It was two years before a visa could be arranged and Levy brought to this country, time that Levy used to study on his own. Before starting classes, Levy spent two weeks in New Orleans with Katz.

"In two years, he was able to learn how to read the Torah, which is in Hebrew. That's pretty difficult to do," Katz said. "In New Orleans, the rabbi at my congregation said (Levy) was able to read and speak Hebrew at a high school level, which is amazing because there is no one to teach Hebrew there."

Levy's adviser, Rabbi M. Mitchell Serels, said Levy is a solid student. His English has improved steadily but if he ever gets lonely for Spanish, he need only walk a block. The campus, at the northern end of Manhattan, is in the middle of a Hispanic neighborhood.

In addition to his rabbinical studies, Levy is enrolled as a computer science major at Yeshiva College. Yeshiva, which is America's oldest and largest university under Jewish auspices, requires all students to enter a dual program.

It will take four years for Levy to earn a bachelor's degree from the school's liberal arts and sciences division. It will take him eight years to become a rabbi.

Many of Levy's classmates will become doctors and lawyers, but Levy says he is not tempted by the promise of life in the United States. "My promise was to return," he says.

had to be rewritten to get aldermanic approval and survive a legal challenge.

"Instead of going through all that agony, it makes much more sense to withdraw it," she said.

When the proposal first became known, clergy and residents flooded Mayor John DeStefano Jr.'s office with calls, and 140 people packed a public hearing in downtown.

Many at the public hearing argued that it was unconstitutional because it would let local government entangled in religious affairs.

Tradition falls to love in interfaith marriages

By Ellen Cragger
Knight-Ridder News Service

In this corner, thousands of years of Jewish history.

In that corner, romantic love.

"Gandy Sadler chose love."

"Our children understand that their father isn't Jewish," says Sadler, of Canton, Mich., whose husband of six years, James, was raised a Methodist.

"We have Easter at grandma's house, and we celebrate Passover here at home."

She's not alone in her holiday hop.

While rabbis and many older Jews see interfaith marriage as an alarming trend that could wipe out America's 5.5 million Jewish population within decades, younger generations have tossed tradition aside. Fifty-two percent of American Jews now marry out of the faith — usually to Christians.

This week an estimated 700,000 intermarried families across the nation face holy seasons in both religions — Passover, which begins Saturday night, and Easter week, beginning Sunday. Unlike Christmas and Hanukkah, which have little in common except secularized, gaudy gift-giving, Passover and Easter are deeply religious and theologically irreconcilable.

How do families handle it?

Gingerly.

The Sadlers decided before they got married to raise their children Jewish; still, they visit James Sadler's relatives on Easter Sunday.

"We have a Jewish home," says Wendy Sadler. "My husband is not religious, and it was more important to me. But here's my feeling: For the children's sake, you have to be consistent, and you have to respect your spouse. If your spouse chooses to go to church, respect that."

Cheri and Jerry Kaplan of Canton do Easter at her relatives' house and Passover at his relatives' house. She's a committed Lutheran and her husband of nine years is a committed Jew. They have two children.

"We're basically exposing our children to both religions," he says.

"It's caused some conflict," she says. Judaism is "more than just a religion. It's a whole different culture. I wasn't aware of that when we got married."

Marriage of American Jews to people of other faiths, a 9-percent trickle in 1965, has become a flood, according to the 1990 National Jewish Population Study. Today, more than half of Jews marry outside the faith, and only 28 percent of them raise their children Jewish. Of those children, it's estimated only 10 percent will marry a Jew.

Ironically, many Jews believe, assimilation in America may accomplish what thousands of years of persecution couldn't — wipe out the traditional Jewish community.

"It's always in the back of the Jewish mind, the threat of dissolution of the Jewish way of life," says Rita Abramson, director of an intermarried families group, Stepping Stones, at Temple Emanuel in Oak Park, Mich.

To halt the trouble, temples are scrambling to educate these non-traditional families in Jewish religious traditions, including Passover, with the hope that they will ultimately affiliate with a temple or synagogue. For example, this week Stepping Stones hosted a sample Passover seder meal to show interfaith couples how it's done.

Should interfaith families mix Passover traditions with Easter traditions? Is Hoorah! compatible with colored eggs? Can you combine both the text for the Passover seder, the Haggadah, and the Christian Gospels?

No, argues Rabbi Elliot Pacher of Congregation B'nai Moshe in West Bloomfield. Celebrating both holidays shows a flagrant disrespect for the deep holiness of each, he says.

But Judy Petsonk, author of "The Interfaith Handbook" (Arlor

Advice from experts, those who've been there

By Ellen Cragger
Knight-Ridder News Service

Here's advice from the experts on interfaith marriages — and from those who've been there:

On getting married

Have a long engagement, at least one year.

Don't introduce your fiancé to your family on a holiday.

Before you get married, decide in what religion, if any, you would raise children. Be specific. Better to confront conflicts early.

Decide how you will celebrate holidays.

Spent extended time with your partner's family. You'll get an idea of what your partner will be like in 20 years.

If relatives are upset about your marriage, give them time, not ultimatums. Think carefully about your beliefs, and how important religion is to you. Are you ready to give up your religion, defer to your spouse's religion, or raise your children in a different faith?

On having children

Be clear with children about your family's beliefs and traditions. Whether you raise your child in one religion, two religions or no religion has little or no impact on his or her mental health, experts say. But both parents must agree on the approach.

Agree ahead of time on how to mark certain important events, such as baptism, confirmation, bar or bat mitzvah, Sunday school. Agree how to mark important religious holidays. Look for programs supporting interfaith families, such as Stepping Stones.

On Grandchildren

If your grandchildren are being raised in an interfaith home:

Open your heart and your heart. Your home may be the place your grandchild best learns about your religion.

Respect the wishes of your "grandchild's" parents about religious upbringing.

Don't think you've failed if your child marries out of your faith, or if your grandchildren don't follow your religion. If you feel personal grief, talk to a rabbi or minister.

House, $19,95). says interfaith families must agree on some kind of middle ground, shallow or otherwise.

Petsonk says at basic levels, both Passover and Easter represent renewal. Families looking for bridges can latch onto that.

Passover is an eight-day celebration that marks the emergence of the Jews from slavery in Egypt more than 3,200 years ago. It is marked with a special feast called the seder. Unleavened bread called matzo is used as a reminder of the bitterness of slavery.

The Christian Easter week marks Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection from the dead. Beginning with Palm Sunday, is Christianity's most holy week and involves services of sorrow, followed by services of joy on Easter Sunday. Symbols of spring, such as lilies, represent new life.

"The whole essence of what Christianity is about is resurrection. What is in common with Passover is liberation from slavery. They're both about renewal, about leaving behind what you tied up in knots and beginning a new life," says Petsonk.

Opposition leads to withdrawal of plan to cut churches' activities

The Associated Press

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — A plan to restrict the activities of houses of worship was withdrawn after public opposition.

Aldermanic Minority Leader Sandra Astarita said the idea was to make churches "better neighbors" by requiring them to increase parking, limit church-sponsored events, restrict noise from bells and regulate rental of church buildings to outside groups.

Astarita said last week she withdrew the plan because it would have had to be rewritten to get aldermanic approval and survive a legal challenge.

"Instead of going through all that agony, it makes much more sense to withdraw it," she said.

When the proposal first became known, clergy and residents flooded Mayor John DeStefano Jr.'s office with calls, and 140 people packed a public hearing in downtown.

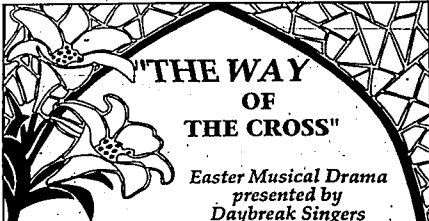

Many at the public hearing argued that it was unconstitutional because it would let local government entangled in religious affairs.

Thai monk charged with violating celibacy

By William Brannin
The Washington Post

BANGKOK, Thailand — In a country that had its first election in 1990, the Buddhist monks, who are usually quiet, took to the streets to take "minor wives," and where politicians offer prostitutes like party favors at their celebrations, it takes a pretty good sex scandal to hold people's attention.

The case of Phra Yantra Amaro Bhikkhu has certainly done that. Two months after the charismatic Buddhist monk was first publicly accused of various sexual transgressions and other un-monklike behavior, he is still avidly following a story that sounds more like a soap opera about an international jet-setter than the tale of a Buddhist priest.

The controversy has raised questions about monks' relationships with women and about religious practices. The monks' behavior is described as sexist. It has led to some unusually candid admissions from monks about how they deal with lust in a permissive society where temptations are everywhere.

In Thailand's male-dominated culture, the practice of taking mistresses, known as "minor wives," has been all but institutionalized and reaches into the highest levels of society. So, too, does the practice of frequenting prostitutes.

At a celebration last year titled "Parliament Closure: The Bachelors' Style," a political party in the governing coalition gave away about 20 call girls to its members of Parliament after a sumptuous Chinese dinner at a Bangkok hotel, Thai newspapers reported.

Feminists strongly denounced the legislators' behavior in what came to be known as the "Party Girls' Affair," but their criticism appeared to have no lasting effect.

Sometimes, however, men's philandering has pushed Thai women over the edge. There were numerous penis-lodging incidents here long before "Bobbitt" became a household word. Thai women have thus had ample reason in reattachment surgery and have achieved some successes.

In some cases, these medical triumphs seemed to make outraged women even more determined to "ensure that their own surgical alterations were permanent. In one celebrated case in the 1970s, newspapers reported that a spurned spouse tied her husband's severed member to a helium balloon and watched with grim satisfaction as it floated away. Another wrapped it in paper and got on a bus to a distant province.

The Phra Yantra case, on the other hand, has offered aficionados a steady diet of steamy revelations and an open feud between him and his chief accuser, rival monk Phra Phayom Kaitanyano.

Yantra, 43, aroused controversy initially for traveling abroad with large entourages of devotees, some of them women, staying in hotels instead of Buddhist temples and possessing two credit cards.

But the most serious charges are that he violated his vow of celibacy with at least four women, including a Thai who allegedly bore him a daughter in Belgrade six years ago. Yantra, who has been a monk for 20 years, denies the charges, but so far he has resisted undergoing a DNA test to resolve the paternity question.

A Cambodian-born Buddhist nun, who is now a U.S. citizen, has said that Yantra seduced her on the deck of a Scandinavian cruise ship last year after telling her that they had been married in a previous life. A German female devotee has written that he made improper sexual advances, and a Danish harpist who performed for him at a monastery in Copenhagen has said that they twice had sex in her van.

Three investigative committees, including one from the Education Ministry's Religious Affairs Division, have ruled that there is insufficient evidence of sexual misconduct. But critics led by Phayom have kept the issue alive.

Last month, as the controversy intensified, Yantra checked into a hospital after apparently suffering a mild stroke that temporarily paralyzed his left side. He left the hospital March 10 to convalesce at a Buddhist temple.

Now Thailand's chief Buddhist monk, the Supreme Patriarch, is setting up a new investigative committee, including psychologists to assess Yantra's mental health. Yantra's followers have called for demonstrations to show their support.

Earlier, Yantra and Phayom engaged in a sometimes acrimonious debate by telephone on a radio talk show. At one point Yantra called his accuser "a dog that barks too much" and warned him, "You'd better watch out."

Tilton's star falls

By James D. Davis
Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

Robert Tilton did not have a good year in 1993. Last fall, his "Success-N-Life" — once the most-broadcast religious show in the United States — failed. In October, his wife divorced him, and his Fort Lauderdale waterfront home went up for sale as part of the settlement. And attendance has plummeted at his Word of Faith Church in Farmers Branch, Texas, near Dallas.

But he's still in there pitching. He conducted revivals March 16 and 17 at the Don Shula Hotel in Miami Lakes, Fla. He may yet regain his title, "The Prophet of Prosperity." Just ahead of his court dates.

"He is in deep, deep doo-doo," says Dallas minister Ole Anthony, who helped ABC's "PrimeTime Live" investigate Tilton in 1991 for allegedly soliciting donations in exchange for prayers or promises that were never delivered. "He has trials coming up. (Now) he's about to start a campaign to make it appear that he's still important."

Tilton is accused in lawsuits of coaxing the sick and lonely to give money by promising them health and wealth through "agreeing in prayer" with them — blessings and prayers that they say never came. Thus far he hasn't lost a case, but he will face his next accusers in a Dallas court next month.

But while the plaintiffs call him a sham and worse, to others Tilton remains the herald and example of how to overcome life's difficulties.

"He is a man of God who has been in the fire and still is," says the Rev. Elmer Cobbs, Tilton's co-host at the revival with his husband, the Rev. Ernest Cobbs. "I think that even agreeing to come and minister under pressure shows the character of the man."

The husband-and-wife team are co-pastors of The's Ministries, a charismatic church that meets at the Shula hotel. It was she who invited Tilton after attending a conference at Word of Faith, with as a small-group meeting with Tilton.

He combined his gospel-tent style with the branch of American Christianity known as the charismatic or neo-Pentecostal movement. Charismatics believe each Christian can be "filled" or empowered by the Holy Spirit of God, receiving "gifts" or talents such as healing, prophecy, wisdom or "speaking in tongues."

But Tilton went further, joining the subgroup of charismatics in the "Word-Faith" or "Prosperity Gospel" camp. Members of this movement — which includes Oral Roberts, Ken Copeland, Fred Price, Paul Crouch and other TV ministers — teach that believers can use faith as a kind of force through the spoken word to perform miracles. Furthermore, they say, Christians can "name and claim" money and health through the same method.

For Tilton, the message yielded a 3,900-seat church auditorium, which overflowed with attendance of up to 8,000 in 1990. He also founded a grade school, Lexington Academy, next to the church, which eventually drew 350 students. And he spread his message through 28 books and a mailing list of 300,000.

His main instrument, though, was the weekly one-hour "Success-N-Life" telecast, which mixed appeals for money with testimonials from people who said they enjoyed their well-being to God and to their giving to Robert Tilton.

The giving usually took the form of a "vow of faith," by which Tilton urged listeners to send him money — $1,000 is the most commonly mentioned sum — as sort of evidence to show their sincerity. Then, according to Tilton's bargain, he would "pray in agreement" on the requests.

The approach often included sending out "points of contact," such as plastic angels, "miracle coins," Jerusalem sand and Jordan River water. Tilton sometimes has sent cloths with an outline of his hand, urging people to place their own hands on it and send it back. He even has sent full-size posters of himself praying, so a recipient could pray "alone" with him.

Ole Anthony, who says his Dallas-based Trinity Foundation has conducted studies on the question, says televangelists in general have a "donor pool" of about 5 million Americans. "More than half are women whose husbands show no interest in them. Thirty percent are desperate people, who have things like cancer and AIDS."

The rest, he says, "are in the upper middle class, looking for spiritual justification for greed."

By 1991, the Tilton empire was taking in $121 million a year. He was buying air time in all 235 U.S. television markets, and networks such as Black Entertainment Television, amounting to 5,000 hours a month, making him the largest single religious broadcaster in the nation.

He used some of his income in April 1991 to buy a waterfront house in the well-to-do Rio Vista area of Fort Lauderdale, for a $500,000. Docked at the seawall was a 38-foot, $132,000 pleasure boat.

The purchase may have been his last hurrah; in November of that year, "PrimeTime Live" aired its report. With Anthony's cooperation, the TV crew says it found 200,000 prayer requests in a trash container behind a Tulsa bank — with only the money removed.

On earth, I am the very core of your life," Tilton told me, hear me, reflect on me, and I will lead you by the eternal hand of God, your creator. Mankind has been far too eager to say what they thought down through the ages instead of seeking a holy and righteous relationship of divine truth.

Your letters are more than welcome and will be answered when time permits. A servant for my Lord Jesus Christ of 10 years.

God created all things

As I pray and meditate this morning and read my devotional, "God Calling," I am reading what Jesus tells us in John 1:1-5: "Before the world was created, I already existed; and I was with God, and I was the same as God."

Through Jesus, God made all things. Not one thing in all creation was made without him.

The word of God is and was the source of life in and through his only begotten son, our Lord Jesus Christ. This life brought God's light to all mankind. This light shines in the darkness of the world, and the darkness will never put it out.

In the devotional, "I the Lord your God walk in mercy a heart and soul, but few ever retire of this world of sin and evil to find that quiet meeting place above me in their inner soul! I am your God, your creator and I live deep within every living creature and being

Evangelical ministries moving to Orlando, Fla.

By Ike Flores
The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — The sun-blessed home of Mickey Mouse, defense industries and thousands of military retirees has found teltell.

The tourist-rich Orlando area is fast becoming a magnet for Christian evangelical ministries that like its airport, climate, living costs and their neighbors' receptiveness, all within a bustling urban atmosphere.

Among the newcomers are Campus Crusade for Christ, the Reformed Theological Seminary and Pioneers. They join similar religious organizations that quietly moved in earlier.

Many have bypassed Colorado Springs, Colo., and Wheaton, Ill., the nation's leading headquarters sites for evangelical groups.

"We welcome these ministries. They've discovered what we did in 1978 — that it's the place to be," says Mel Wyma, foreign secretary of the New Tribes Mission in near-by Sanford.

New Tribes has more than 3,000 missionaries in remote locations around the world and has been in the news because of the kidnapping of five of its missionaries by anti-government guerrillas in the Colombian jungle.

Some of the religious leaders attribute their relocations to Campus Crusade, the megaministry that moved to Orlando from Southern California in 1991. It is completing plans to build an international headquarters campus that will cost up to $100 million and employ as many as 1,000 people.

Campus Crusade's worldwide staff totals 44,000 in 150 countries.

The ministry spent two years researching the best location for a new home and its work has been used by several other ministry leaders. It used 56 criteria in examining 37 cities, and finally chose Orlando, said its relocation director, Marshall Rice.

Campus Crusade's decision also was influenced by Luder G. Whitlock Jr., who informed Campus Crusade founder and President Bill Bright five years ago that Whitlock's Reformed Theological Seminary had decided to move its main campus from Jackson, Miss., to Orlando.

Reformed Theological Seminary was trying to boost its national profile and also considered Nashville, Tenn., Charlotte, N.C., and Atlanta. "For us, the easy decision was Orlando," Whitlock said.

The seminary now has almost 600 students at its suburban Maitland campus, about 500 in Jackson and 150 at a new school in Charlotte, making it among the 10 largest institutions of theological education in North America, Whitlock said.

Pioneers, which has 500 missionaries working with the poor in 31 countries, moved to a location at the doorstep of Orlando International Airport two years ago.

PROTECT CHILDREN WHEN THEY RIDE WITH YOU

Some Stat Statistics

- Auto crashes claim the lives of over 700 children four and under each year
- Auto crashes injure more than 48,400 children four and under each year
- More children are killed as the result of injuries incurred in auto crashes than from any other type of injury

You can protect children in your car by making sure they are buckled up before you start the car. Child safety seats and safety belts save lives and prevent injuries...if you use them correctly.

National
KIDS Campaign.

The good news. Safety seats, when properly installed and used, can reduce:

- The risk of death by 71 percent
- Hospitalization by 67 percent
- Minor injuries by 50 percent

The bad news. As many as nine out of every ten child safety seats are not properly used.

Of all the excuses for not buckling up kids in cars, not one is any good
