Judge orders Gem river cleanup

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A federal judge ruled this week that state and federal environmental officials have "failed to protect Idaho's rivers, streams and lakes from harmful pollution."

Judge William Dwyer gave the state Division of Environmental Quality and the federal Environmental Protection Agency 30 days to begin cleaning up heavily polluted waters around the state.

The ruling came in a lawsuit filed last

July by the Idaho Conservation League and the Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition, which charged the state has not properly identified streams and lakes that do not meet state water quality standards.

Those standards are meant to keep water safe for fishing, swimming, drinking and other uses.

State environmental officials Friday could not say just what effect the ruling will have on south central Idaho.

"Our lawyers haven't had a chance to look at it yet," said Larry Koenig, chief of DEQ's monitoring and technical support, in a telephone interview Friday afternoon.

One of the streams that doesn't meet those standards is the middle Snake River through the Magic Valley. Pollution from fish hatcheries, farms, grazing land, dairies, feedlots, food processing plants and cities have combined to foul the river.

Local officials, farmers and businesses are at work on a plan to curb the pollution and clean up the river.

Across the rest of the state, rather than the 36 streams identified by the state and EPA as exceeding standards, the judge ruled that hundreds of streams and lakes violate standards.

The EPA's failure to recognize the magnitude of the problem "ran counter to the evidence before (the agency) ... and ... the agency's own guidelines and policies," the judge said.

"We hope that this is the first step in restoring Idaho's fisheries to their once pristine condition," said Ron Mitchell, director of the sportsmen's coalition, in a news release.

Something to bark about

Bob and Shirley Pitcher of Ketchum leave 'Neiman Barkus' after a visit to the new thrift store in Halley Friday afternoon.

Texas retailing giant howls at name chosen for Hailey benefit shop

By Barbara Nelwert
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Even before opening day, who would expect legal trouble to cloud a thrift store whose only goal was to benefit the local animal shelter?

But for threatened legal action, "Neiman Barkus," as the new venture has been called, would have opened its doors in relative obscurity last week.

The store's staff of volunteers worked to get the shop up and running. The only sign is a hand-drawn poster, which hangs in the front window.

But an advertisement in a local weekly newspaper, announcing the opening, raised its way to offices of Neiman Marcus, raising the ire of the Dallas, Texas-based retail department store giant.

"It is obvious that you intend to trade on the Neiman Marcus name and encourage your customers to associate and thereby confuse our name with your business," said an April 5 letter from Neiman Marcus' assistant general counsel Deborah Posin.

Posin said the thrift shop's use of the name Neiman Barkus constituted an "infringement" on the company's service mark rights and accused the shop of unlawfully conducting business based on Neiman Marcus' good will.

Neiman Marcus, which reportedly did $2.1 billion worth of business last year, made six demands on the Wood River Valley's underdog. It also threatened to take immediate legal action against the animal shelter if its demands were not met.

Those demands included the discontinuation of the use of the Neiman Barkus name in any form, the removal and destruction of any signs bearing the name

Pessimism can be fatal when heart afflicted

The Associated Press

BOSTON — A healthy outlook helps heal the heart, scientists say in a major study that found pessimism can be a killer.

The study released Friday identified optimism as a powerful predictor of who will live and who will die after the diagnosis of heart disease. It is the latest in a series of reports showing that people's emotions and friendships play a critical role in recovery.

"Optimism is a good thing," Dr. Daniel Mark said. "When people give up and feel they are not going to make it, it's usually a self-fulfilling prophecy."

Mark, a heart specialist at Duke University, based his findings on a follow-up on 1,719 men and women who had undergone heart catheterization, a common procedure used to check the arteries for clogging. He outlined the results at a meeting of the Society of Behavioral Medicine.

The patients typically underwent the test because of chest pain, and all had heart disease. When interviewed, 14 percent said they doubted they would recover enough to resume their daily routines.

After one year, 12 percent of these pessimists had died, compared with 5 percent of those optimistic about getting better.

Even when the severity of people's conditions was taken into account, outlook was a crucial factor in survival. In fact, optimism often seemed to have little bearing on how sick people were. Some of those with mild heart disease had the grimmest views of their prospects.

"The mind is a tremendous tool or weapon, depending on your point of view," Mark said.

In his study, pessimism appeared to be even more damaging to recovery than depression, which is also shown to be bad for heart patients.

Court lets confessed King slayer offer his evidence

The Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — After 25 years, the confessed killer of Martin Luther King Jr. won a judge's permission Friday to call witnesses and put on evidence in court to try to prove his innocence.

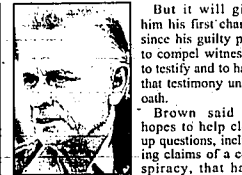

James Earl Ray has been trying unsuccessfully to take back his guilty plea and go to trial since shortly after he confessed in 1969 to murdering the civil rights leader April 4, 1968.

Criminal Court Judge Joseph Brown rejected Ray's latest plea for a trial but agreed to let his lawyers question witnesses and put on other courtroom evidence to prepare an appeal of that rejection.

"What's it been going on? A quarter of a century so far? A few more months won't

Brown said he was bound by state law to uphold Ray's conviction and reject his plea for a trial. There was no evidence that Ray's confession was other than freely given, Brown said.

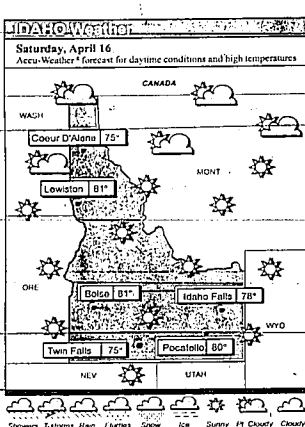

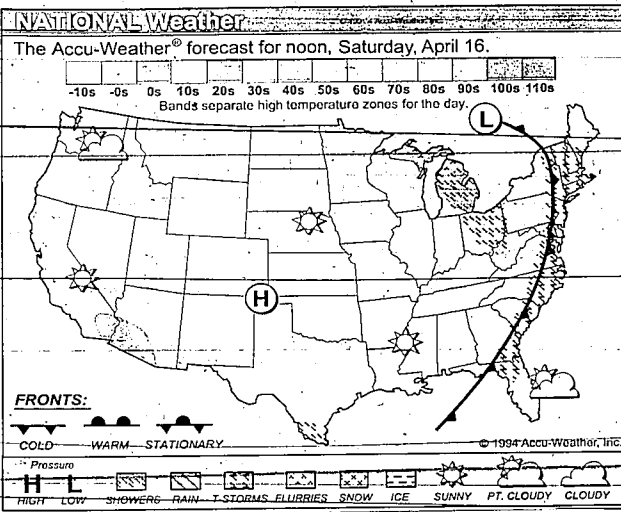

Defense lawyer William Pepper said he planned to call up to 40 witnesses but doubted that the 66-year-old Ray would be one of them.

"Considering all the controversy of this matter, the history of it, to be given the opportunity in a state criminal court in Tennessee to have witnesses put on the stand is extraordinary," Pepper said.

Cold air sweeping across the Midwest and South fed thunderstorms and tornadoes Friday. At least two deaths were blamed on the storms, one in Kentucky and one in Tennessee.

Rain fell from northern Mississippi through Florida to the Atlantic. In Florida, golfball-sized hail was reported in Jacksonville.

Showers were scattered from Colorado through Nebraska and into Minnesota as high winds pushing the cold front along gusts above 55 mph in Wyoming.

The much wettest was forecast to reach New England by the weekend.

The most severe damage in Kentucky was at Bowling Green, where a thunderstorm spawned a series of small tornadoes, the National Weather Service reported.

Weather summary

An area of high pressure kept Idaho sunny, dry and warm Friday.

There were some high thin clouds mainly in the southern and eastern parts of the state but sunny weather will continue through today.

By Sunday, however, a storm system will begin to move toward the Pacific Northwest, bringing clouds and a slight change of showers to much of the state.

Temperatures at mid-afternoon Friday ranged from the mid-50s to almost 70 degrees. Winds were generally light throughout the state.

Over the Magic Valley, a few scattered, thin clouds appeared Friday, but sunshine prevailed throughout the day. Winds were light, in sharp comparison to Thursday's blustery conditions.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 79 degrees at Riggs. Stanley reported the lowest at 15 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 98 degrees at Coolidge, Ariz. Wisdom, Mont., reported the lowest temperature at 12 degrees.

Next, the department will confer with the National Governors' Association, which is representing state governments in determining how to dispose of more low-level waste.

"We are doing this in cooperation with the states," Bugger said. "This isn't just a DOE attempt to find a disposal site."

The governors' group and the federal government have not yet determined how many sites will be needed to dispose permanently of more than 2 million pounds of low-level mixed waste generated each year by the Energy Department.

However, Bugger said the governors and the department are working toward a December 1995 goal for proposing "a final disposal strategy."

"It could be a regional approach, it could be several sites; it could be just one," he said.

In the meantime, the department has agreed to spend up to $23 million this year to dispose of some of the low-level mixed waste from weapons plant cleanups. Envirocare of Utah Inc. will store the wastes under a contract that could be extended to as much as five years and $350 million.

Bugger said he did not know how the Utah disposal capacity might influence decisions about new waste disposal sites.

Because of limits on the amount of radioactivity of the waste shipped under the new contract, "We're uncertain how much of DOE's mixed waste will be disposed of by Envirocare," he said.

and the destruction or deliverance to Neiman Marcus of any printed materials bearing the Barkus name.

Posin said the retailer intends to defend its trademark rights "vigorously" and has done so against several other users of the name Neiman Marcus.

When contacted by phone, Posin said she was "not permitted to comment" on these issues, and personally from public relations did not return telephone calls.

"We weren't looking to incur the wrath of anyone," said Art Lusse, an attorney and board member of the animal shelter.

Lusse said his wife came up with the name and the board members thought it was a "cute" name for the shop.

"Our litigation budget is the same as last year — zip," Lusse said of the threats to sue the animal shelter, which has a policy of keeping animals alive as long as possible — sometimes up to a year if no one adopts them.

In a letter which was to be sent to Neiman Marcus Friday, Lusse explained the history of the nonprofit shelter which operates without tax money or government funds. Lusse said he will see its way to letting the name stand.

"We have no doubt that, given your resources, you could make us come, sit, stay and even roll over, but we won't play dead," Lusse's letter said.

"We don't think there has been any legal infringement," Lusse said. "If the name caused injury to the company's reputation or business operations, a court might find an infringement, but it was not our purpose to dilute the fame or integrity of the company, he said."

Lusse said the thrift shop, which opened last Friday, was off to a "howling" start after this commotion.

If Neiman Marcus doesn't back off from its demands, Lusse said the Barkus name will be abandoned and the shelter will hold a contest to come up with another, more appropriate name.

Alternatives have been suggested including the "Bone Marche" or "Saks Fete Avenue."

part in the assassination. He has argued for years that he was set up by a shadowy figure he knew only as Raoul. He admitted buying the weapon authorities identify as the one used to kill King, but says he bought it for Raoul.

Prosecutor John Pierotti said his investigators have found no evidence to support Ray's claim of new evidence proving his innocence.

"It's garbage. It's all garbage," Pierotti said.

Pepper and Pierotti are to tell Brown on June 6 when they will begin the trial of calling witnesses to begin. Neither could say how long it might last.

Pierotti said he will cross-examine Ray's witnesses but does not expect to call any of his own or put on evidence on the state's behalf.

Ray's latest petition rests heavily on allegations that a former Memphis businessman, Lloyd Jowers, was involved in King's slaying.

At the time, Jowers owned a small restaurant called Jim's Grill near the Lorraine Motel.

Jowers appeared on ABC's "Prime Time Live" last December claiming he was paid by a former associate, now deceased, to hire a hit man to kill King, and it was not Ray.

Pierotti rejected Jowers' request for immunity from prosecution in exchange for his testimony. Lewis Garrison, Jowers' lawyer, said his client has moved out of state and will not talk further about his claims unless given immunity.

Pepper said he plans to subpoena Jowers as one of his witnesses.

Ray is due for a parole hearing May 25 in Nashville, where he is imprisoned.

Onassis enters hospital for treatment

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, who is suffering from cancer of the lymph system, was hospitalized for treatment.

"She is expected to be here for several days," said Myrna Manners, a spokeswoman for New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Manners would not say what kind of treatment the former first lady was receiving nor when she was admitted. Kennedy family spokeswoman Nancy Tuckerman did not immediately return telephone calls.

Onassis, 64, announced in February that she was suffering from non-Hodgkins lymphoma. Tuckerman said then that doctors thought they had caught the cancer in its early stages when it was diagnosed in January.

and salmon would be in much better shape that they are today, he said.

The judge gave the EPA 30 days to identify all streams and lakes that violate water quality standards and develop restrictions on pollutants discharged into the water.

The Clean Water Act required the state and EPA to identify such polluted waters and have pollution restrictions in place by 1973. It also required the state to report on the streams every two years to the EPA.

Idaho did not send a report to the EPA until 1989, and it did not have a final list until 1993. Restrictions have been developed only on two streams.

"EPA and DEQ are supposed to protect our water," said Glenn Stewart, director of the Idaho Conservation League. "Instead, they've stood by and watched as our lakes become unsavable, and our rivers unfishable."

"Look at Cascade Reservoir — the state's second largest popular recreational lake and people get sick and cows die from drinking the water," Stewart said. "It's time to start cleaning things up."

Clinton's join last-minute taxpayers

WASHINGTON — President and Mrs. Clinton paid $62,670 in federal taxes on an adjusted gross income of $293,757 during his first year in the White House, according to tax returns released today.

The Clintons joined millions of other Americans in filing their taxes at the last minute.

The 1993 tax year marked the first time that Clinton's income exceeded that of his wife, a corporate lawyer who had long been the family's main breadwinner.

Because of overpayments, the Clintons are entitled to a refund of $7,982 for 1993, their returns showed.

A year ago, the Clintons paid $70,228 on income of $290,697.

Most of that was Mrs. Clinton's salary as an attorney at the Rose Law Firm in Little Rock. The firm, which she left after the presidential election, paid her $203,172 in 1992.

By contrast, Clinton earned $34,527 in 1992 as governor of Arkansas. The presidential salary of $200,000 has been unchanged for 20 years.

Former housing aide pleads guilty

WASHINGTON — A former aide to ex-Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce pleaded guilty Friday to concealing a $50,000 payment from a developer after helping arrange federal financing for a low-income housing project.

Joseph A. Strauss, who was special assistant to Pierce from 1981 to 1983, pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to hide information and one count of concealing a material fact.

Asked by U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene if he conspired to hide the payment, Strauss said, "Yes, your honor, I did that."

Strauss agreed to cooperate with Independent Counsel Arlin M. Adams' investigation of the influence-peddling scandal at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Adams has won 15 convictions or guilty pleas in his four-year investigation.

Pierce, who headed the agency during all eight years of the Reagan administration, has not been charged with any wrongdoing.

Alaska politicians become opponents

JUNEAU, Alaska — The quickie political marriage between Gov. Walter J. Hickel and his running mate is over.

Just days after Hickel switched back to the Republican Party from the Alaskan Independence Party, his lieutenant governor announced he will seek the governor's job on the third party ticket.

Li. Gov. Jack Coghill's candidacy sets up the prospect of a race pitting him against Hickel, his Alaskan Independence Party running mate in 1990. Hickel changed his party affiliation Tuesday.

Coghill announced his plans in Fairbanks Friday. Hickel says he will announce next month whether he will seek re-election.

Durenberger to face charges on Aug. 16

WASHINGTON — Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., will go on trial Aug. 16 on charges that he abused his Senate expense account.

U.S. District Judge Stanley Harris set the date Friday and scheduled two weeks for the trial. Congress is scheduled to be in a month-long recess at the time.

Durenberger is accused of hiding his ownership in a Minneapolis condominium to collect $3,825 in Senate reimbursements for nights he spent there.

He is charged with making false claims to the Senate and with conspiring to make false claims. If convicted on both felony counts, he could face up to 10 years in prison and a $500,000 fine.

The judge refused Durenberger's request to move the trial to Minnesota.

Judge urges Menendez plea agreement

LOS ANGELES — A judge urged prosecutors and attorneys for the Menendez brothers Friday to reach a plea agreement rather than have them retried on murder charges in the slaying of their wealthy parents.

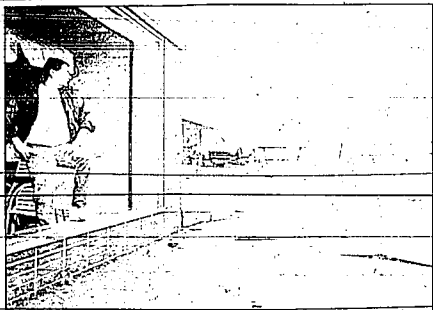

Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg told both sides to make a deal before a hearing scheduled for June 27.

After that hearing, the judge will decide if the brothers get separate juries in the second trial, as they did in the first.

Both juries deadlocked after the first trial.

Erik, 23, and Lyle, 26, say they killed their parents in 1989 after years of abuse. Prosecutors say they were driven by greed for their parents' $14 million estate.

Storms smash Ohio, Tennessee valleys

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. (AP) — Thunderstorms packing tornadoes hit across parts of the South and Midwest on Friday, smashing the glass dome of a Bowling Green shopping mall and damaging residential neighborhoods in the city.

Three deaths were blamed on the storms, one elsewhere in Kentucky and two in Tennessee.

The most severe damage in Kentucky was in Bowling Green, where a thunderstorm spawned a series of small tornadoes, the National Weather Service reported. The weather service could not confirm whether the tornadoes touched down.

"The storm shattered a glass dome at Greenwood Mall, the city's largest. The mall had just opened when the storm struck."

"I was just coming in the door and I heard glass crash, and the wind started blowing and I just hit the floor," said Frances Graham, who works at the mall.

"It broke all the car windows out of our cars out front, and I really don't know what the extent of the damage is."

The mall was evacuated because of a gas leak.

The storm caused damage in other business and residential areas of Bowling Green, overturning cars and mobile homes.

Elsewhere across Kentucky, thunderstorms downed trees and power lines and damaged homes and farm buildings in several counties.

High wind overturned a mobile home and killed a woman in Hardin County, authorities said.

One man was found dead underneath his home after a string of tornadoes swept across southeastern Tennessee.

Fugitive indicted on fraud charges

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A businessman arrested after being on the lam for three years has been indicted on 20 federal counts charging him with masterminding a multimillion-dollar fraud scheme.

Malcolm Cheek, former head of the now-defunct Y&A Group engineering company, disappeared in March 1991. He was charged four months later with bank fraud for allegedly pledging about $1 million in false collateral to St. Louis banks for loans.

He and his wife were arrested by FBI agents April 2 in Georgetown, S.C.

Charges against Cheek in Thursday's indictment ranged from bank and bankruptcy fraud to embezzlement of about $250,000 from employee pension funds. His wife, Stephanie, was named in 11 counts. Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Reap said arraignment is expected next week.

Man throws chair at sentencing judge

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP) — Will a judge throw the book at Adcock Stewart? It's possible. Stewart threw a chair at the judge.

Police say Stewart, 45, has appeared in Municipal Court over 600 times, mostly on public drunkenness charges. He usually spends a few days in jail and then is sentenced to time served.

But on Wednesday, City Judge Bobby Fisher sentenced Stewart to eight months in jail. The defendant began shouting at Fisher and "then he threw the chair at him. He just went wild," said police officer Chris Martin.

No hearing was scheduled and Stewart remained in jail Friday.

Helicopter pilots did not respond to jets, general says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. fighter pilots who mistakenly shot down two U.S. helicopters in Iraq used an electronic signaling system to check whether the choppers were friend or foe, but got "no friendly response," officials said Friday.

That disclosure did not necessarily exonerate the pilots of the tragedy, in which all 26 men, and women aboard the choppers were killed. Defense Secretary William Perry pledged to discipline anyone found to be negligent; he said it could take weeks to determine exactly what happened.

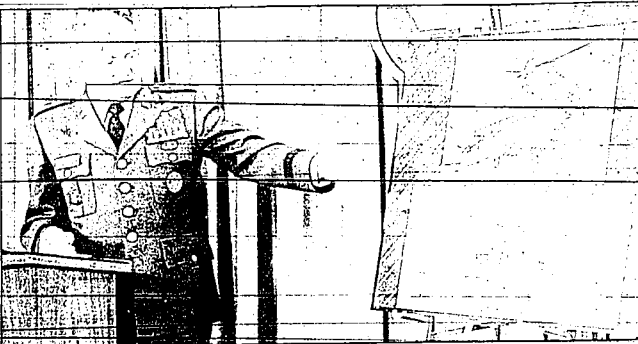

Perry said all U.S. and allied fighter patrols of the "no-fly" zone in northern Iraq — established three years ago to protect Kurds from attacks by Iraqi government forces — were suspended Friday to review safety procedures.

AWACS radar control planes continued to fly, keeping a lookout for possible Iraqi violators of the zone, officials said. They could call on allied fighters in the area in the event of spotted suspicious flights, the officials said.

Perry said F-15 patrol flights were scheduled to resume Saturday.

The victims' remains were being flown Friday from an air base in Turkey to Rhein Main Air Force Base in Germany for formal identification and eventual return to their respective nations. They include 15 Americans, three Turkish officers, two British officers and one French officer, plus five Kurds.

As an Air Force investigation got under way Friday, Gen. John Joint Chiefs Chairman Gen. John Shalikashvili discusses how the Iraqi Hinds helicopter, top, and the American Blackhawk helicopter where confused when fighter jets shot down two American helicopters over northern Iraq Thursday.

Shalikashvili told reporters at the Pentagon the F-15 pilots who fired the deadly missiles had used their "identification friend or foe" systems as required.

RFI interrogation was conducted and a friendly response was received," said Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He said it was not yet known whether the pilots received a nonstandard response from the choppers, or none at all.

The "friend or foe" identification system normally works automatically if activated. That is, once the F-15 pilots had used their system to "interrogate" the choppers below them, the choppers should have automatically sent back a coded signal saying, in effect, "We're friendlies."

Shalikashvili said one of the aims of the investigation was to determine why no proper reply was received by the F-15s.

Officials have said the pilots reported that from visual inspection of the choppers they believed they were Iraqi Hind aircraft. It was not clear Friday whether the F-15 pilots asked the AWACS for confirmation or for permission to fire.

Shalikashvili said procedures used in allied operations over northern Iraq did not require the F-15 pilots to ask the AWACS for permission to fire, once they had established visual identification and used the "friend or foe" electronic systems.

Also, Perry said the F15 pilots did not try to establish radio contact with their targets before firing, and that this was not required by procedure.

Even so, it remains a mystery why the F-15 pilots took no additional steps to confirm the choppers' identity, especially since the choppers' flight plan had been briefed in detail the day before to all concerned, including the F-15 pilots, and the helicopters posed no apparent security threat to the fighters.

Also, no Iraqi helicopters had ever been seen flying that far north.

Perry said many questions remain to be answered about the incident, and that "if individuals are found culpable, we will discipline them."

Perry stressed that the F-15 and AWACS crews' rights would be protected during the investigation.

"We will not rush to judgment," he said.

The on-site investigation is being headed by U.S. Maj. Gen. James G. Andrews, commander of the Third Air Force, based at RAF Mildenhall in Britain, officials said. The team will include F-15 and AWACS aircraft experts, Army aviation experts, Army and Air Force legal specialists and "associate members" from Britain, France and Turkey, Perry said.

Perry said he was waiting for an answer to the question, "How could this possibly have happened?"

"We do not yet have the answer to that question," he said.

Perry said a half-dozen procedures should have been in place to prevent the tragedy.

"They didn't all have to work," he said. "Instantly, of them had to operate and this accident wouldn't have happened."

President Clinton and Perry, both said they believe the allied peace-keeping mission in Iraq was valuable and should continue.

"It's performed a very valuable function" in protecting Kurds from Iraqi persecution, the president said.

Clinton said he had phoned British Prime Minister John Major and French President Francois Mitterrand to express his condolences.

"We're going to stay on top of this, work through it, and make a full report to the American people," Clinton said.

Park system loses money from poor fee collection

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the Clinton administration is proposing new park fees, the government is losing up to $105 million a year by failing to collect charges already authorized by Congress, an Interior Department audit shows.

Last year, according to the audit, $68 million in fees were collected from 273 million visitors to the 367 national parks, monuments and recreation areas, an average of less than 25 cents per person.

Although Park Service officials would like to take in more fees, they say that's often impossible because there's little money to begin or expand fee collection programs. These officials also say the audits by the inspector general's office of the parent Interior Department overstate the problem.

They did acknowledge in interviews that poor fee-collection efforts cost the Treasury at least $40 million a year in lost revenue.

Park rangers and other officials at many of the facilities conceded that collection statistics often are left unstated because there is no authority — or funds — to hire fee collectors.

12 NYC cops charged in scandal

NEW YORK (AP) — This time, the bad cops were so bad that the police commissioner wants to retire their badge numbers.

One cop was caught on videotape stuffing money into his pants. Three others allegedly split $100,000 they found in a bag during an apartment search.

In all, a dozen officers from the 30th Precinct in Harlem are accused of federal and state crimes in the latest disclosures in the Police Department corruption scandal.

The bad apples used their badges "not for protection but as weapons," Commissioner William Bratton said, "to punish, to brutalize, to steal, to rob and to cheat."

Nine of the officers were arrested during overnight raids. Three others already had pleaded guilty. Bratton said Friday, Police also arrested eight civilians who allegedly were involved with officers in drug activities.

It was the latest in a string of corruption cases that may affect as many as 10 of the 75 precincts in the nation's largest police department.

The officers are accused of shaking down drug dealers for protection money; stealing drugs and money; making illegal searches; taking bribes; ignoring crime; tampering with evidence; lying; and, in one case, shooting a man while

"We have not had the staffing to collect as much money as could have been collected," conceded Dick Martin, chief of resource and visitor protection at the Park Service. "It's just a matter of all the competing demands."

At scores of other parks, where fees would be economically feasible, Congress has directed that no fees be charged. Interior Department audits examined by The Associated Press estimated that as much as $123 million a year may be lost to the Park Service because of the congressional restrictions. Lawmakers have forbidden the Park Service to charge entrance fees to more than a hundred attractions, including the Statue of Liberty.

In many cases, parks facing a tight budget crunch don't have enough money to operate fee collection stations except on the busiest days, or have no fee collection program at all because there's no money to start one.

For example, Olympic National Park in Washington state reported 3.5 million visitors last year, but it collected only $308,501 at the gates even though entrance fees were $2 for individuals and $4 for a carload. The park collected an additional $478,350 in campground fees, but auditors estimate it is losing more than $1.2 million a year in entrance fees that could easily be collected.

Interior Department investigators have estimated that as much as $8.2 million could be collected in fees at Lake Mead Recreation Area on the Colorado River where hundreds of thousands of visitors visit each summer. Fee collection was estimated to cost $1.2 million a year. But today there still are no entrance fees and visitors get in for free.

If park entrance fees were imposed at the Statue of Liberty it could bring in nearly $6 million, according to an Interior Department report last year, but in 1987 Congress specifically prohibited fees there and in dozens of other parks.

At Glen Canyon Recreation Area, also along the Colorado River, 3.6 million people visit each year, mostly on their camping four or five days. But last year only about 4,000 visitors paid camping fees, says Larry May, assistant superintendent at Glen Canyon.

trying to get drugs from him. Some were arrested on federal and state narcotics, civil rights and evidence tampering laws. Others were charged with state robbery, assault and witness intimidation.

All appeared in federal court Friday and bonds up to $250,000 were set in all but one case.

If convicted, two of the officers would face a maximum of life in prison on drug charges. The others would face maximum sentences ranging from seven to 82 years.

Authorities said the largest single theft involved two officers splitting $100,000 they found in a bag during an apartment search four years ago.

Memo shows Ford knew about defect

PARAMUS, N.J. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. knew 16 months ago about a steering defect in its 1992 and 1993 Crown Victoria models that contributed to the death of a police officer in November, a prosecutor said Thursday.

Until last week, Ford denied knowing of any problems with the 1992 and 1993 Crown Victoria. The company continues to deny that the car's steering problem contributed to the officer's death.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is investigating.

Bergen County Prosecutor John Faby released a Dec. 19, 1992, computer notice from Ford to its dealerships warning of "a complaint of reduced steering assist" in those models.

Ill Mancini comes composing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cancer has slowed Henry Mancini. It has not silenced him.

Two months after being told he has inoperable cancer, the award-winning composer still plans to finish the score for a Broadway musical and to appear at a gala birthday tribute.

He says work is the best therapy he knows.

"It's a strange thing," Mancini said. "When I write, I don't think of anything but what I'm doing. I don't feel any different when I'm writing. I just go."

Mancini's 70th birthday was Friday.

Next Tuesday, he will be celebrated by Julie Andrews, Dudley Moore, Quincy Jones, Andy Williams, John Williams and Luciano Pavarotti.

The affair has already raised $2 million for the UCLA Center for the Performing Arts and the Los Angeles County High School for the Arts.

"It's truly amazing," said Mancini, who promised to limit himself to closing remarks.

Speaking by telephone from his Beverly Hills home, the four-time Oscar winner said his illness was discovered when blood clots moved from his legs to his lungs, making it difficult to breathe. He was in the hospital for a

Japan student shot in Denver

DENVER (AP) — A Japanese college student was shot in the chest early Friday in what police said was a car-jacking.

Kouichi Takamoto, 26, had pulled into his apartment parking lot and was sitting in his car about 1 a.m. when he was confronted by two masked men, police said.

Takamoto turned over his money and was getting out of the car when he apparently yelled for help and was shot, police said.

Takamoto, a student at National College in Denver, was listed in serious condition at Denver General Hospital with a bullet wound just below his shoulder, said police Detective David Metzler.

Takamoto's white 1987 Toyota Supra sports coupe was found abandoned in suburban Aurora late Friday morning. No arrests had been made by midday.

"We were just going to bed and we heard four gunshots and we heard someone hollering for help and we went outside," said neighbor Robert Clite.

Rwanda unrest

Developments In Rwanda:

- 1 Government troops and rebels duel with rockets and mortars for control of the capital. U.N. officials are protecting more than 12,000 people seeking shelter at Kigali's main King Faisal Hospital, however, many refugees are still in danger. At least a third of Kigali's 300,000 residents are thought to have fled on foot.
- 2 Rebels launch rocket attacks on Kigali's airport. Fewer than 50 foreigners, including 15 Western journalists, a group of Ugandan orphans and two Spanish nuns, were evacuated Thursday.
- 3 Belgian news media said nearly 1,200 Tutsis, more than half of them children, were massacred Wednesday morning at a church in Mushu. The Hutu-dominated presidential guard is being blamed.

Rwanda slaughter continues

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Marauding gangs of youths armed with machetes roamed the busy streets of the Rwandan capital again Friday, adding new bodies to the piles of decaying corpses already fouling the air.

U.N. spokesman Moxtar Gueye said Rwanda's Hutu-dominated government and predominantly Tutsi rebels agreed to direct talks that U.N. officials hoped would lead to a cease-fire. But the two sides continued to duel for control of Kigali with mortars and rockets.

New reports of massacres emerged from the Rwandan bloodbath, including an account of more than 1,000 men, women and children shot and hacked to death in a church where they sought refuge.

Thousands of people were still trying to flee Kigali, forming an 8-mile-long column of refugees, and thousands more remained huddled in hiding with little or no food.

"There are hundreds of thousands of people cut off from anything decent or human. People are starving to death in their own houses. Babies have starved to death in their own homes. People are in hiding and cannot find food. Hospitals are not functioning," Gueye said by telephone from Kigali.

Tens of thousands of people are estimated to have died in a week of fighting rooted in the decades-old feud between Rwanda's majority Hutu and minority Tutsi ethnic groups. Many have been hacked to death by gangs with machetes, knives and spears.

At least 120 people were under U.N. protection at Kigali's national stadium and at the main King Faisal Hospital. But Gueye said the lightly armed U.N. peacekeepers did not have the resources to cope with the refugees.

There was no safe refuge for people fleeing the ethnic slaughter.

Belgian news media reported that nearly 1,200 Tutsis, more than half of them children, were massacred Wednesday at a church in Mushu, 25 miles east of Kigali. It was the largest reported massacre so far in the fighting.

Gueye said the United Nations received reports of the massacre but had not been able to confirm it. "We have received many, many reports of that nature, but our forces are stretched to the maximum," he said.

Radio Vlaanderen International in Belgium and reporters in Kigali for the Belgian newspapers Het Volk and De Morgen said the Hutu-dominated presidential guard was being blamed for the massacre.

Gueye said that after the withdrawal of 428 Belgian soldiers protecting Kigali's airport, there would be about 2,000 foreign soldiers left in the country. Gilbert Hertoghe said in Brussels it would take most of the day to complete the evacuation of foreign civilians.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said the Belgian U.N. peacekeepers were to pull out of Rwanda within two or three days but would "leave a good bit of their equipment behind for remaining U.N. soldiers."

Dr. Kevorkian paints death, dying images

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian has returned to an old hobby while waiting to go on trial, painting stark, surrealistic works in oil. In "War," Kevorkian created a human head oozing on a table platter, a wormy apple jammed in its mouth. The decapitated torso sits rained straight — fork and knife in hand. Mars, the god of War, peers over his bare shoulder.

"It's symbolic of humanity: it's self-destructive," said Kevorkian, the self-called suicide doctor who goes on trial Tuesday in Detroit.

His "Fever" depicts the naked torso of a man. Bones red hot from fever show through his skin like an X-ray. Heat emanates from his body.

"When you look at this painting, I want you to feel fever," Kevorkian said in an interview.

He is charged with breaking Michigan's law banning assisted suicide and a $2,000 fine if convicted. The retired pathologist has been present at the deaths of 20 people.

Kevorkian plans to auction off both paintings. He wants to raise money for his campaign to legalize assisted suicide in Michigan. Volunteers are gathering signatures to place a constitutional amendment on the November ballot.

The two paintings mark Kevorkian's return to the easel after a 30-year hiatus.

He began painting when he was a young pathologist in his hometown of Pontiac. He took a night school art class, with mostly housewives and

Officials hope name change will save signs

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Transportation officials hope a less racy name for state Route 69 will prevent pillaging of the signpost.

The name was changed to Route 38 after an average 35 signs were stolen each year from the 30-mile stretch that runs parallel to Brigham City north through Collinston.

The problem with the old name is the sexual connotation associated with the numeral 69, said Utah Department of Transportation spokesman Kim Morris.

"If you know any 15-year-olds, you'll understand," said Morris, who predicts most of the signs are hanging on dormitory-room walls. Sixty-nine is slang referring to oral sex.

The signs cost the state between $50 to $100, plus time to replace. The route is not the first in Utah to be topic of controversy. An Indiana man hopes to change the name of U.S. Highway 666, which runs from Gallup, N.M., through Monticello, Utah, because of the number's satanic reference made in the Bible's Book of Revelation.

Phoenix woman searches for her true identity

Arizona Republic

PHOENIX — The sky was red in Woodward, Okla., that April 9, 1943. The wind blew first into sassy gusts, then gentled into soft breezes.

By 8:43 p.m., the wind had become an angry tornado, roaring through the oil town of Woodward, toppling trees and telephone poles, injuring dozens of people, and, in a way, carrying off 4-year-old Joan Gay Croft.

Fifty-one years later, Jean Smith, a woman who may be Joan Gay, was found living in Phoenix after an airing of the NBC-TV show "Unsolved Mysteries."

"I know in my heart that it is her," said Joan Gay's aunt, Ruth Bohn, 79, of Woodward.

Repeated efforts to reach Smith on Thursday were unsuccessful. But The Associated Press quotes her as saying that she believes she may be Joan Gay.

"Any time I say my name, or write my name I have been using, it always felt wrong," she said. "When I use 'Joan Gay Croft,' it feels good."

The story of Joan Gay's disappearance is as dramatic and frightening as the tornado itself.

"The wind drove straws through telephones poles, plucked the feathers off of chickens," remembered Marvella Parks, 61, Joan Gay's cousin in Woodward.

Joan Gay was in her pajamas when the tornado struck at night. The wind killed her mother, and it drove a pencil-size splinter through the child's leg.

Neighbors carried Joan Gay through the wreckage of Woodward to the hospital and laid her on the basement floor next to a furnace. Nurses covered her with an army blanket.

"The whole town was in shock," Parks said. "There was standing room only at the hospital."

Officials were racing through the corridors, sending patients to hospitals in Wichita, Oklahoma City, anywhere they could find a bed and doctors.

About midnight, two people dressed in khaki clothes picked up Joan Gay and left. They told nurses they were taking the child to Oklahoma City.

In the confusion, no one questioned them.

The child was never seen again, and an FBI investigation into the kidnapping turned up nothing.

But in September, 1993, Joan

Smith said she had memories of the child. She said she had memories of the child. She said she had memories of the child.

Smith is trying to raise the $800 for a blood test that will determine whether she is related to other members of Joan Gay's family.

"But blood test or no blood test, I know it is Joan Gay," Bohn said. "I will always claim her."

she had undergone hypnosis to recapture the forgotten first six years of her life. While asleep, she saw a woman she called "Aunt Joan," and a man who fit the description of an uncle.

Smith also has said that the man and woman who reared her often wore khaki clothes, and that her "mother" was tall and dark-skinned and could have been mistaken for a man.

And there was other evidence that Smith could be Joan Gay.

Ruth Bohn, who visited Smith in Phoenix recently, said Smith has a scar on her leg that could have been left by the splinter. Smith, like Joan Gay, "also tenses when she gets excited," Parks said.

Bohn swears that pictures of Smith at 19 look like her mother, Clara, at the same age.

"I couldn't tell them apart," Bohn said.

Smith is trying to raise the $800 for a blood test that will determine whether she is related to other members of Joan Gay's family.

"But blood test or no blood test, I know it is Joan Gay," Bohn said. "I will always claim her."

Father, son race for Mississippi senate seat

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) —

Richard O'Hara is giving his son few tips on how to be elected to one of Mississippi's U.S. Senate seats. They're both after the same job.

But the two have no hard feelings. They announced their candidacies Thursday at a joint news conference. And they share a common opponent: Sen. Trent Lott.

"Competition is what makes the world go around," said the father, a Republican.

"He's a fine man. I'm going to do my best to beat him," said his son, Shawn, a Democrat. "We've already said we're going to remain best friends."

Shawn O'Hara, a 36-year-old Southern Baptist evangelist, has run unsuccessfully for governor, Congress, and Hattiesburg mayor.

It's the first campaign for the father, who turns 77 Friday. He said crime and corruption inspired him to take on Lott in the Republican primary.

"You think things are going to work out and all of a sudden all hell breaks loose," said the retired 30-year employee of Ford Motor Co. "Every guy and his brother want to go out and pull a trigger on someone."

Shawn O'Hara's campaign sounds similar to his father's. He wants violent criminals in prisons without all conditions. Inmates should also be denied television, cigarettes and magazines featuring nude women, he said.

The son hovered protectively as reporters questioned his father, who sat calmly in a wheelchair as he spoke against abortion, scams on senior citizens and foreign competition.

The biggest question may be whom family members will vote for.

"To ask him to choose his father, who is going to think of his choice is," Shawn O'Hara said.

He faces four candidates in the June 7 primary: Hiram Eastland, a lawyer, Ron Harper, a former state senator, James Hunt, a retired factory worker, and a former state general election. Lott is favored to win his second term in the Senate.

Bourland, a construction worker. The winners meet in the Nov. 8 general election. Lott is favored to win his second term in the Senate.

Idaho timber firm records another loss

BOISE — Boise Cascade Corp. continues to swim in a sea of red ink, announcing this week that first-quarter operations resulted in another $37.6 million loss. It was the 13th straight quarterly loss for the Idaho-based wood products company, and contradicted predictions in January by Chairman John Fery that the worst of the cyclical downturn in the paper products industry was past.

"Contrary to generally held expectations, paper prices fell in the first quarter of 1994, particularly in grades most important to Boise Cascade," the company said in a statement.

Aggravating the price decline were increased manufacturing costs due to the severe winter, maintenance and what the company labeled as "related operating difficulties at some facilities."

The loss, up dramatically from the $12.1 million recorded during the January-March quarter of 1993, translated into a loss of $1.35 per share of common stock.

Stocks end narrowly mixed after good news on inflation

NEW YORK — Stocks ended narrowly mixed Friday, as bonds held steady after a Federal Reserve report on industrial activity eased fears about inflation.

A "double witching" expiration of stock futures and options added some volatility late in the session, but the market hovered close to unchanged for most of the day.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed at 3,661.47, down 1.78. The Dow average lost 12.79 points for the week.

East Coast burger chain decides to move upscale

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — The Big Boy needs to grow up, says a New England restaurant chain that's replacing the burger-eating kid in red-checked overalls with a less fatty cuisine.

Alfred Corp., the region's last Big Boy franchise holder, has dropped its affiliation with the Michigan-based Elias Bros. chain that now holds the rights to the chubby-cheeked mascot. The fiberglass figure has been removed from 18 Alford restaurants in Massachusetts and Connecticut. The break stemmed in part from a decision to move further into family-style dining with menus featuring more home-style New England favorites and broiled foods with less fat, said George and Ronald Alford.

MARRAKESH, Morocco — More than 200 nations ended seven years of bargaining and arguing Friday by adopting a 26,000-page agreement that reforms international trade and could mean a $200 billion boost to the world economy.

Thunderous applause erupted as Foreign Minister Sergio Abreu Bonilla of Uruguay banged the gavel to signify approval of the "Uruguay Round" accords, which were reached in Geneva in December.

"Ministers salute the historic achievement ... which they believe will strengthen the world economy and lead to more trade, investment, employment and income growth," said the declaration, which closed the round of trade talks.

The agreement was signed by ministers from 109 countries in a chandeliered chamber fringed with ornamental palm trees in this lush oasis city. Fifteen more countries are expected to sign the accord later in Geneva.

The package is expected to increase global income by more than $200 billion in 10 years. It will cut barriers to trade in everything from computer chips to polar ships, phase out agricultural subsidies that affect international competition, and open up services like tourism and transportation to foreign companies.

Despite the celebrations, not all trade disputes were resolved. An accompanying statement set out a shopping list of problems that must be tackled, including labor policy, immigration and trade sanctions.

Ministers also had the chance to sign up for membership in the World Trade Organization, which is to begin Jan. 1 as a replacement for the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The United States and Japan were among the nations that said they would not sign the WTO agreement until after their national legislatures ratified the entire package.

Vice President Al Gore and Japanese Foreign Minister Tsutomu Hata, in speeches to the conference Thursday, both stressed they would strive for ratification before the end of the year.

If Congress is unable — or unwilling — to ratify the package promptly, this would delay implementation of the international accords.

The final documentation spread out on the table during the signing ceremony totaled more than 26,000 pages — including a mind-boggling list of hundreds of thousands of new, lesser customs duties.

The Uruguay Round agreement, named after the country in which it was launched in 1986, was clinched in December. It was three years late because of a fight between the United States and Europe over farm subsidy reform.

Tariffs and Trade, Peter Sutherland, a former Irish attorney general who steered through the accords, was jubilant. "I'm tempted to answer that by doing an Irish jig on the WASHINGTON — Industrial production in March rose for the 10th straight month, pushing factories closer to their operating limits than they've been in nearly five years, the government said Friday.

That could lead to higher prices. But analysts said they saw no justification for the "inflation mania" that has convulsed financial markets or for any sudden increase in interest rates.

The Clinton administration agreed, predicting moderate growth for the economy this year.

Production climbed 0.5 percent last month, the Federal Reserve said, despite cutbacks by the booming auto industry and a decline in electricity output with the end of the frigid weather. Production has risen every month since May 1993.

The Federal Reserve also reported that the operating rate at industrial companies — which measures capacity use — increased 0.2 percentage points, to 83.6 percent, the highest rate since it was 83.9 percent in June 1989.

The financial markets appeared reassured by the latest figures, as stocks rose and bond prices firmed.

Analysts said factories are operating well below capacity and shrugged off the inflation worries that have spooked Wall Street.

The fear is that manufacturers could be reaching their production limits, which could drive prices higher and fuel inflation.

But the Clinton administration said it is sticking to its opinion that inflation is under control.

"We still continue to predict moderate growth, sustained moderate growth without inflation, in fact," said White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers.

The government's this-weekend consumer prices for the first three months of 1994 advanced 2.5 percent at an annual rate.

The Federal Reserve said Friday many industries rebounded last month from slowdowns caused by winter storms and frigid temperatures.

But it also revised its production figure for February, reporting a 0.6 percent gain — up from the estimate a month ago of 0.4 percent.

Trouble-ahead? — A8

Sutherland said when asked how he felt. But both he and the Uruguayan chairman, Abreu, stressed the future challenges. Abreu said to delegates a list of issues that governments want to put on the agenda of the World Trade Organization, which is to be a stronger version of GATT in monitoring global trade.

These include the relationship between the trading system and internationally recognized labor standards, immigration policies, political stability and the alleviation of poverty, and unilateral measures like U.S. legislation that imposes sanctions on countries it deems unfair traders.

Business

Environmental rules, others threaten pact

Journal of Commerce

WASHINGTON Before the ink on a new world trade pact has had time to dry, a controversy over raising international labor and environmental standards is endangering the ability of the Clinton administration to pursue new trade agreements.

In a letter addressed to U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor Friday, Republican House leaders threatened to oppose a new grant of special trade negotiating authority if the administration plans to use the leverage of trade to force environmental and labor reforms abroad.

Liberal House Democrats also oppose an extension of that authority this year because they want a guarantee that new trade negotiations will cover labor and the environment. The Democratic letter is expected to be sent to the administration this week.

The partisan conflict on this issue is probably even more polarized in the Senate, where similar threats to Clinton's negotiating authority are expected to be delivered in the next few days.

The controversy has turned what was expected to be a cake walk in Congress for the popular new world trade agreement into a tightrope walk between the two sides.

This idea was expounded in Morocco last week by Vice President Al Gore, who said that "economic growth pursued without vision or compassion for the way it may affect working men and women... contains the seeds of its own destruction."

The Republicans questioned the idea of linking trade reform to such social objectives.

"What social objectives?" they asked. "Whose? Is the U.S. willing to set aside its sovereignty for the new World Trade Organization to define these unnamed social objectives?"

over-negotiating authority as just another negotiation, but it is not clear that there is any middle ground on which to form a consensus in Congress.

A similar balancing act last year failed when most Democrats voted against the North American Free Trade Agreement after rejecting as inadequate two side agreements on labor and the environment that were supposed to earn their support.

In this case, Republicans are piqued that the administration slipped a reference to trade and environmental standards into the new trade pact negotiated by the 121 nations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The GOP letter was written by Rep. Bill Archer of Texas, ranking member of the House Ways and Means Committee, and was signed by top two Republican leaders in the House, Reps. Robert Michel of Michigan and Newt Gingrich of Georgia.

The leaders accused Kantor of violating the terms of fast track by providing no notice to Congress for the last-minute addition of the labor rights provisions. They then questioned the suggestion by U.S. officials that free-trade rules without a link to labor standards can actually end up hurting workers.

Scam artist attempts to solicit burial insurance

TWIN FALLS — Someone apparently is selling burial insurance door-to-door.

A Buhi resident told the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department that a man in his 40s, driving a small black car, knocked on his door this week and tried to sell the insurance. The man said he worked for the J.C. Penney Life Insurance Co., said sheriff's Sgt. B.H. McDaniel.

But J.C. Penney says it has no affiliation with an insurance company and does not solicit door-to-door, McDaniel said. Other suspected scams are turning up in the area, he said.

With the weather warming, home-improvement scams — such as roofing and asphalt work — might be expected in the area, McDaniel's warned residents to be wary of people selling these services door-to-door.

Last year someone paid to have linseed oil put on their roof, but wound up with used motor oil, McDaniel said.

Anyone with questions, or who wants to report a possible scam, can call McDaniel at 736-4089.

North Dakota man stands trial for failing to register

TWIN FALLS — A 28-year-old man on probation from North Dakota will stand trial in 5th District Court on charges of failing to register as a sex offender.

Steven Keith Shoup was ordered to trial on the felony charge after appearing in magistrate court Friday morning. Shoup was arrested in March after Twin Falls County sheriff officials and state Probation and Parole workers said he had not registered as a sex offender under a 1993 Idaho law.

Shoup was convicted in 1987 of having sex with two girls under the age of 15 in North Dakota and was sentenced to 15 years in prison, according to probation officials.

He spent five years in prison and was then given 10 years' probation. He has been living in Twin Falls on unsupervised probation since January.

Officials will set Malad Gorge State Park aside

HAGERMAN — If it looks like the Malad Gorge State Park is on fire Monday, rest assured — it will be on fire.

Park employees, in conjunction with the Bureau of Land Management, will be burning about 40 acres in an effort to restore native plants, according to the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation.

Next spring, park employees plan to plant native grasses and shrubs. Once the flora takes root, the area should resemble southern Idaho as it was before the arrival of European settlers. Also, the new plants will afford better habitat for the area's wildlife and reduce chance of wildfire.

14-year-old juvenile arrested again

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 14-year-old boy arrested Tuesday on charges of car theft walked back through the juvenile justice system's revolving door Friday — this time on burglary charges.

The Twin Falls boy was booked into custody and then released to his mother Friday afternoon, said Sgt. Bob Gauthier of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

Other arrests are expected in the burglaries, Gauthier said.

The 14-year-old was released Tuesday morning after being arrested on charges of car theft. Around noon Wednesday, burglaries took place at residences at 3654 N. 2700 E.

and 3652 N. 2700 E. in Twin Falls County.

Gang graffiti was scrawled on buildings at one of the residences, Gauthier said. The messages identified a Crip gang from South Park, he said.

About half the stolen goods were recovered from a trailer home on one of the properties. The burglars evidently hid the goods intending to go back to get them, Gauthier said.

Other goods were found in a plastic sack at one of the residences Friday morning. Detectives also searched the home of one of the burglary suspects and found stolen goods, Gauthier said.

But some expensive items taken in the burglaries still are missing, he said.

The youth was arrested early Tuesday after police said he and two other teens stole two trucks and a van early that morning from two downtown car dealers. After leading a Twin Falls police officer out to chase in a stolen truck, two of the youths were arrested, but a third one got away.

Police officials said the three, plus one other youth, were suspected in a string of car thefts and burglaries the past month. They are suspected of stealing a Filer Mutual Telephone Co. van last week.

They are suspected in other burglaries as well.

The youths arrested Tuesday were released after prosecutors said car theft did not warrant holding them in detention. County Prosecutor G. Richard Bevan met with Twin Falls police and sheriff investigators Friday, however.

Late Friday afternoon, Bevan said he would file charges and seek detaining orders for three of the youths. A judge would have to order the detention.

Rollin' along

Elghth-graders at O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls have a barrel of fun during a log rolling game that was part of a day-long celebration of Native Americans. Some 160 students participated in the day of hands-on learning of native crafts, culture and history. Particular emphasis was placed on the ancient Anasazi tribe which once lived in the American southwest.

City pursues Rock Creek deals

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In a special joint meeting of the City Council and the city's urban renewal agency, the council decided Friday to pursue purchase agreements on two pieces of property along and in Rock Creek Canyon.

The Graybill building and adjoining property at 725 Shoshone St., S., and 18 acres owned by June Briggs inside Rock Creek Canyon may be purchased by the city if:

- An "approvable" appraisal is done on the properties.
- The purchase agreements receive City Council approval.
- The properties are evaluated for their environmental impacts.
- Water rights (if applicable) are included in the sale.
- And if the city can use money from its reserves to fund the purchases.

These purchases are vital to making the redevelopment of Old Town a reality, city officials say.

"That really is the gateway of the whole project," said Donna Brizee of the urban renewal agency.

But City Manager Tom Courtney and City Economic Development Director Dave McAlindin said that the city needs to understand that Old Town is a longer-term project.

"This is going to be a slow process," McAlindin said Friday.

Councilmen questioned whether the city may still be acting hastily enough to liquidate the long-term success of the Old Town project.

"There's clearly an uncertainty as to how fast this development will occur," said Mayor Gale Klitzkopf.

Councilman Chris Talkington warned that blunt talk by the city about possible land acquisitions will place "a feeding frenzy" among local speculators and real estate agents.

Scott McClure, president of the urban renewal agency, agreed that the city should not lock itself into any specific plan.

"We don't want to jump into a barrel when we don't know where the bottom is," McClure said.

Regardless, the city should act on properties when they become available for purchase because the overall plan for Old Town calls for most of Rock Creek Canyon to be public open space, McAlindin said.

"It's not going to become less expensive in this area," he said.

The purchase agreements can be negotiated while the city's urban renewal plan is amended to allow more tax revenues to be shifted to Old Town projects, McAlindin said.

Amending the urban renewal plan should take about three to four months, he said.

In the long-term, the city may be able to apply for Idaho Community Development Block Grants to supplement local investments in Old Town, he said.

But any state aid will have to wait until a Seastrom Manufacturing, a California company moving to Twin Falls, is approved for its block grant, McAlindin said.

"We can't have more than one (grant) in the hopper," he said.

Idaho's high court upholds sentence for deadly DUI

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court has unanimously upheld the three-year prison sentence ordered for a woman who admitted causing the death of a 15-year-old girl while drunken driving in Gooding County.

The court on Friday unanimously upheld the sentence of three to five years in prison ordered by acting district judge John Varin for Shirley Wersland. She pleaded guilty to vehicular manslaughter in the June 20, 1991, traffic death of Angela Jackson, killed in a head-on traffic crash.

Court records said Wersland played in a golf tournament in Twin Falls, consumed alcoholic beverages and was involved in a fatal crash in Gooding County while returning to her Mountain Home residence.

Two passengers in the Jackson car, Michelle Revels and Lori Sexton, were injured.

Wersland's appeal contended the judge should not have allowed "victim" impact statements from Revels, a stepfather and Sexton and her parents. The appeal argued that the "victim" listed the "victim" as Jackson, the person killed, barring victim impact statements from the others.

Justice Cathy Silak wrote an opinion rejecting the argument.

"Wersland's argument that the girls riding in Jackson's car were not victims is without merit," the court said. "They were injured and hospitalized as a result of Wersland's criminal conduct (driving under the influence of alcohol) and were also witnesses to the death of their friend."

An accompanying appeal asked for a sentence reduction because the three-year prison term was hard on Wersland's husband. He has a 100 percent disability from the Air Force because of cardiac problems and past open heart surgery. But the Supreme Court said the sentence, although "emotionally painful" for both, was fair and the judge properly considered the need for deterrence and retribution.

Split county planning commission postpones land vote

By Maria Stafford
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A divided county planning commission decided not to vote Thursday night on a proposal that would turn agricultural land south of Curry Crossing into Twin Falls County's newest community.

"I think our time would be better spent if we take our time," concluded commission member Terry Kemmer of Castleford. "It's obvious there are still a lot of questions that need to be answered."

The commission tabled the proposal after hearing opposition from members of the public at Thursday night's planning and zoning meeting.

Many questions were raised over a commission-proposed plan to rezone a 3-square-mile strip of agricultural land three miles south and one mile east of Curry Crossing. A residential-agricultural zoning would enable landowners to divide land into acre lots for housing development, while still allowing farming in the area.

The plan is a scaled-down version of a proposal the commission rejected covering 10 square miles in the same area.

"We need a place where people can live on 1 acre," said Lee Taylor, administrator for the commission and proponent of the plan. "I get requests from people all the time who want a parcel of land of an acre or more."

According to the commission, the targeted area was chosen because of subdivisions (about 130 homes) already in place in some sections.

"We pinpoint areas we think we can say will be easy to develop," Kramer said.

But the plan ran into several major objections from speakers at the meeting. Speakers said the plan failed to provide adequate infrastructure for the new community and failed to consider groundwater quality and quantity, transportation, sanitation and sewerage.

"From the city standpoint and the city residents I stand in opposition to this rezoning," said Gary Young, city engineer for Twin Falls.

Young suggested the need for better communication between the city and the county.

"Once you pass a plan to rezone, it falls to other agencies," Young said. "You have a responsibility to examine the impact that will go to other agencies — it's a big concern with me."

Bill Chisholm of Buht agreed.

"I have questions whether this is a truly comprehensive plan," Chisholm said. "There are all sorts of things that need to go into it."

Most people in such a planned community would be traveling to Twin Falls to work or shop and traffic flow would need to be coordinated with the city and county, he said.

A dairymen expressed concern over the amount of land that would be rezoned with no government capable of handling the new "village."

"It seems to me that there is no government that you can transfer certain decisions to," said Mike Quessnell. "That mean Twin

Andrus renews objections to INEL

The Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus has renewed his objections to using the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory as a temporary storage site for high-level commercial nuclear waste.

In a letter to Congressman Richard Lehman, the California Democrat who chairs the House subcommittee on energy and mineral resources, Andrus urged Congress to consider waste storage at reactor sites or in regional dumps near groups of reactors before it seriously contemplates forcing states like Idaho to take it just because they already have Energy Department facilities.

"It makes no sense from a health, safety, environmental or economic perspective to ship all of the commercial spent fuel from around the nation to one or two places, most likely some distance from the reactors, when safe, sufficient on-site storage is or can be made available," Andrus wrote.

The governor's letter was prompted by the suggestion from the nation's state utility regulators earlier this year that the federal government adopt a procedure for siting a temporary nuclear waste dump similar to the one it uses to close military bases. Since 1990, the federal government has spent millions of dollars on a so-far unsuccessful search for a dump site that would be voluntarily accepted by the state where it is located.

Contending that issue was considered and rejected by Congress in 1987, Andrus maintained there was a major difference between closing military bases in a state and forcing a nuclear waste dump on one, probably one that already has an Energy Department installation like the INEL.

"Justifying the siting of defense facilities with the need to share the burden of common defense is one thing," Andrus wrote. "But to require states without civilian nuclear reactors to support the interim storage activities of public utilities is not equitable."

Andrus drew national attention in 1988 when he stood up to the federal government and refused to allow any more nuclear waste produced by defense plants in other states to be stored at INEL.

He then won a court decision blocking the government from storing the highly radioactive waste from a Colorado utility at the INEL. The judge ruled in the state's favor after discovering that throughout much of the legal wrangling over whether Idaho should accept the waste, the utility had adequate storage at the site of its reactor.

City misses EPA pipeline deadline

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city Friday missed a federal deadline to build a new water diversion and pipeline.

The real deadline arrives June 1 deadline, however, when the city must have its drinking water system hooked up to the pipeline from Blue Lakes.

"At this point, I'm not even sure if we're going to be able to meet the June date," said City Manager Tom Courtney.

Courtney said Friday that he has had positive negotiations with the federal Environmental Protection Agency toward a time extension for the city to complete the water project.

The city is in the process of locating its drinking water supply source from Springs Creek upstream to a spring east of Blue Lakes to meet treatment and disinfection requirements of the federal Safe Water Drinking Act.

According to Courtney, the city is concerned with the Friday deadline than it is with the June 1 deadline.

Shannon Cooper from the EPA's Seattle office — who has been working with the city on complying with the new drinking water standards — could not be reached for comment Friday.

In a Wednesday letter to Cooper, Courtney wrote that the city could not make Friday's construction deadline because of "unprecedented circumstances."

"First, Jerome County questioned the zoning for the facility," Courtney wrote.

"More importantly," he wrote, "the U.S. (Bureau of Land Management) required an environmental assessment to ensure that the project would not negatively impact endangered species of mollusks. This requirement was overlooked by the BLM during the original review of the project."

No comment was available from the BLM late Friday.

Two-time world decathlon champion Dan O'Brien will open his Moscow home, including the dining room, for a benefit home show sponsored by the Palouse Habitat for Humanity.

Decathlete O'Brien displays Idaho home

MOSCOW (AP) — Champion decathlete Dan O'Brien plans to throw open the doors of his new digs Sunday for the benefit of those less fortunate.

The new home of O'Brien, current world record holder in the event, is one of six homes on the 1994 Springtime Home Tour sponsored by Palouse Habitat for Humanity. O'Brien moved into the house a couple of weeks ago. Proceeds will help provide affordable housing for working families.

"(The tour) appears to be nicely put together," said O'Brien, the only person ever to win world decathlon championships back-to-back.

O'Brien's custom-built home was designed by architect John Berg and constructed by Dahmen Builders. The owner estimates the project will cost about $300,000.

"My mission was to build a house and live by myself," said O'Brien, 27. He moved into the hilltop house from an apartment.

The house's high-vaunted windows bring in plenty of Palouse sunshine and unique angles to exterior walls. The main floor level is organized for formal business entertaining and family living.

O'Brien also wanted a big room downstairs for a pool table. "And even though he doesn't have a green thumb, he specifically requested a plant room on the main level."

Jan Stiles, Portland, Ore., interior decorator and longtime friend, is helping O'Brien with interior furnishings he laughingly describes as "nonclassical."

Plan to drop Dworshak Reservoir irks public

OROFINO (AP) — Fisheries biologist David Statter has a radical counterproposal for federal officials who plan to draw down Dworshak Reservoir 80 feet this summer to revive salmon runs.

The agencies could accomplish the same thing if they kept Dworshak full all year and let the flow follow a more natural pattern, the Orofino resident told a Thursday public meeting sponsored by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, National Marine Fisheries Service and Bonneville Power Administration.

"We could have a stable ecosystem in Dworshak Reservoir and if we established a stable pool at Lower Granite Reservoir at 30 feet below full, we could have a stable ecosystem there, too," Statter said. Lower Granite is below Lewiston on the Snake River.

The Corps predicts Dworshak will drop to 80 feet below full by mid-July. The snowpack is expected to yield only 52 percent of the normal water flow into the reservoir on the Clearwater River.

The 80-foot drawdown was outlined in a National Marine Fisheries

Election warchests show full

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's incumbent congressional men, Republican Michael Crapo and Democrat Larry LaRocco, have healthy balances in their campaign funds heading into the final weeks of the 1994 primary election.

LaRocco, 1st District congressman running for his third term, reported $188,000 cash on hand as of the end of March, with no debts. He has raised more than $331,000 since the last election.

Crapo, seeking a second term in the 2nd District, listed a balance of $116,842 and a prepaid bill of $2,853 to an accounting company.

Neither incumbent has a challenger in the May 24 primary election.

Crapo is opposed by Penny Fletcher of Boise, who filed for Democratic nomination. Fletcher didn't file until the April 1 deadline and had no spending or contributions as of the closing March 31 date for the federal report.

Four Republicans are running for the nomination against LaRocco, including "Sonny" Kinsey of Rathbun, Ron McMurray of Lewiston and Helen Chenoweth and David Leroy of Boise.

Leroy's report was received at the secretary of state's office Friday afternoon and showed he raised $62,615 since getting into the race in January, spending of $39,067 and a balance of $23,548.

Leroy's spending and contributions included a telephone system, he donated to the campaign, valued at $3,000. Leroy reported a credit card balance of $1,150 as of April 1.

LaRocco reported raising almost half of his 1994 donations from individuals, $39,630, and just over $40,000 from special interest groups and committees. He said he had 432 individual contributions, with half the money coming from donations under $200.

The incumbent Democrat spent nearly $40,000 in the first three months with the largest amount, $12,526, going to Fenn, King and Murphy Communications, Washington, D.C., for media services. LaRocco also paid $4,200 to a Virginia company for computer programs.

Crapo spent about the same amount, $39,183. The largest expenditure was $8,868 to Ziebart Associates, Arlington, Va., for a Denver fundraiser and other expenses. Crapo raised $23,049 from individuals and $40,350 from special interest groups and political action committees.

Leroy reported a single $11,000 contribution from an insurance political action committee. He raised $58,269 from individuals, nearly as much as Crapo and LaRocco combined.

Joe Parkinson, chief executive officer for the Boise microchip manufacturer, Micron Technology, donated $11,000 each to Leroy and LaRocco.

Gas leak forces INEL evacuation

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A chlorine gas leak at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory Friday forced the evacuation of 600 workers.

Officials said the leak that started late in the morning was stopped by early afternoon. There was no immediate report of any injuries in connection with the release.

But, officials said in statement, "the situation poses no health or safety hazard to the public."

About 600 employees were evacuated from the square-mile Argonne National Laboratory-West complex on the southeast part of the INEL installation.

The leak occurred in a potable water pump house. Officials had not determined the cause of the release or how much chlorine gas escaped.

Federal watchdog still looking at validity of Leroy's pay

BOISE (AP) — Nearly a year after he resigned as the nation's nuclear waste negotiator, former Idaho Lt. Gov. David Leroy remains under federal scrutiny for drawing pay from his job and his law practice.

"It's still pending," Don Campbell, deputy director of the Office of Government Ethics, said Friday. "Our agency is a policy agency. We do not have any type of investigative means so we always have to write to the other agencies and so forth to clarify anything. It's just hard to gauge how long it will take."

Leroy, now seeking the Republican congressional nomination in Idaho's 1st District, asked for guidance on the income question as early as February 1992 when he became aware of a potential problem, and again 11 months later after political control of the White House changed.

But he received nothing from government officials until June 28, 1993, letter in the ethics office asked for an explanation of why Leroy's law practice income in 1992 did not violate federal income limitations.

Leroy, appointed waste negotiator by former President George Bush, resigned at the request of President Clinton on June 12, 1993.

The inquiry by the Office of Government Ethics was disclosed in Friday's special edition of Idaho Politics Today, a Boise-based semi-monthly political newsletter.

Leroy defended his actions, declaring that "At all times, I have completely complied with and fully disclosed all of my circumstances and arrangements with both the White House and the United States Senate. I initiated the inquiry for clarification."

Campbell said he had no idea how much longer it would take to resolve the issue. He did not know why it was not even raised by the ethics office until 16 days after Leroy resigned. But he said it had nothing to do with Leroy's bid to win a four-way congressional primary in May and unveil Democratic Congressman Larry LaRocco in November. "I had no idea he was running for public office until we learned it from the press," Campbell said.

At issue are federal ethics regulations restricting the government salary and the outside income capacity of officials filling jobs like the one Leroy had to find a temporary dump for high-level radioactive waste.

When Leroy was named nuclear waste negotiator in 1990, he accepted what everyone believed would be only a part-time job on the condition that he would continue his law practice.

Both the White House and the Senate agreed and those conditions were part of his confirmation record.

But because interest at least in the initial stages of the dump search, was greater than expected, Leroy said the job required his fulltime attention.

That technically changed his status with the beginning of 1992, the first full calendar year after it became apparent it was not a part-time job.

According to the Office of Government Ethics, as a fulltime employee being paid nearly $120,000 a year, Leroy was making $42,000 more than the maximum allowed for special government employees allowed to keep their outside jobs.

Leroy maintains that the agreement made at the time he took the job should have resolved the problem, but Stephen Potts, who runs the ethics office, indicated that agreement should have been reaffirmed annually to head off a possible violation. It was not.

WASHINGTON — The Washington Redskins, who released their starting quarterback earlier this week, are seriously negotiating with San Diego Chargers free agent John Friesz, the quarterback's agent said Friday.

Agent Leigh Steinberg said the two sides are discussing a one-year deal worth between $900,000 and $1 million. “We’re hoping to have it wrapped up today,” Steinberg said.

Friesz, 26, became San Diego's starter in 1991, but injured a knee the next season and lost the job to Stan Humphries. Friesz was a backup again last season.

Mountain Home's Jon Bussell reaches home Twin Falls catcher Travis Hamilton waits for the ball during the Tigers' 11-1 victory Friday in Twin Falls.

Bruins commit 8 errors in losing to Mountain Home

By Mike Maller
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — Mountain Home made the plays. Twin Falls didn't. Mountain Home won the game. Twin Falls didn't.

Committing eight errors among other mistakes, the Bruins dropped an 11-1 five-inning nonconference baseball decision to Mountain Home Friday afternoon.

Twin Falls put the first three Tiger batters on base in each of the first three innings and quickly fell behind 7-0.

“We just didn't play good defense,” said Twin Falls Coach Bill Ingram.

“They just flat beat us. We haven't learned how to be aggressive yet.”

The Tigers took advantage of three hit batsmen and three errors to total four runs on only one hit in the first. Three more scored on two hits and two errors in the third. After two errors and a walk in the fourth, four hits pushed the last four runs across the plate. Only two overzealous baserunning plays kept Mountain Home from running the tally higher.

Meanwhile, left-handed junkballer Scott Markham had the Bruins off balance at the plate and just missed a shutout.

Markham held Twin Falls to four hits, two by first baseman Andy Heyer.

The Bruins' lone run came thanks to the Tigers' only defensive lapses. Heyer singled in the bottom of the fifth, took second on Markham's errant pickoff and scored on Travis Hamilton's single.

Otherwise, Markham's slow breaking balls were enough to induce Twin Falls hitters into bouncers to the infield and soft flyballs.

“He's just one of those kids who makes you look bad sometimes,” Ingram said.

Twin Falls travels to Bonah for a doubleheader at noon today.

Rangers hope total equals individual skills

The Associated Press

It's not like these New York Rangers have never won a Stanley Cup. Individually, up and down their roster, there are seven players sporting NHL championship rings. All that jewelry, however, was capped by the Rangers, who finished with the best record in the NHL for the second time in three years, try to end a 54-year dry spell when they set out on another playoff quest on Sunday. For openers, they face their New York neighbors, the Islanders, who sneaked into the playoffs the day before the end of the regular season.

Other Eastern Conference first-round pairings have Washington against Pittsburgh, Buffalo against New Jersey and defending Cup champion Montreal against Boston. In the Western Conference, it will be San Jose against Detroit, Vancouver against Calgary, Chicago against Toronto and St. Louis against Dallas.

Boston and Montreal will meet for the 10th time in 11 years with the Bruins winning four of the last five series against the Canadiens. They missed connections last year when Montreal won its 24th Stanley Cup.

Star goalie credits teammates

The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Buffalo Sabres goalie Dominik Hasek recognized the significance of his achievement, even if he did tend to over-simplify the difficulty of breaking the 2-goals-per-game barrier. “To be under two, it's not easy at all. It's really big pressure for a goalie,” Hasek said Friday. “You give up three goals, it's too much.”

His average of 1.95 goals per game is the league's best since Bernie Parent's 1.89 for Philadelphia in 1973-74. Only three others since 1967-68 have allowed fewer than two goals a game.

“There's no human in the world who can be under two if the team doesn't help him,” Hasek said. “And I think that the Sabres guys helped me often.”

For that contribution, Buffalo's skaters will share the Jennings Trophy, awarded first-round series against the team with the best record in the league.

Please see GOALIES/B6

This will be the eighth time the two New York teams have met in the playoffs with the Islanders winning five of the series. Three of those triumphs came in their Cup seasons, making the pain even worse for the Rangers.

This season, despite the best record in the league, the Rangers won just one of five games from the Isles, with two games ending in ties.

Islanders coach Al Arbour, who's been through all the wars between these two, knows his team's past success means little now. “We realize who we're playing. We're playing the best team in hockey and that's no picnic. We know what we're facing and we've got to go out there and win it.”

Six of the Ranger Cup winners — Mark Messier, Kevin Lowe, Esa Tikkanen, Craig MacTavish, Jeff Beukeboom and Glenn Anderson — earned their rings in Edmonton. The seventh, Greg Gilbert, got his with — of all people — the Islanders.

The Rangers led the league almost the entire season until New Jersey caught them with less than 10 games to play. But New York pulled away again, leaving the Devils to finish second in the Atlantic Division.

Stockton survives disaster, stays in hunt

Knight-Ridder News Service

MIAMI — The casualties were piling up everywhere Friday, with such frequency that hearts were numbed to it as the day's round neared completion. But the Champion Course at PGA National was not done, and its last victim was the man at the top.

With two swift strokes, Dave Stockton — cruising with uncommon ease through the ferocious back nine — saw his two-stroke lead in the 55th PGA Seniors' Championship evaporate with a brutal, twice-over quadruple-bogey 8 on No. 16.

Larry Mowry and Indian Creek's Raymond Floyd led the tournament at 6-under-par 138 after two rounds.

Stockton came back valiantly after his crash at No. 16, making birdie at the difficult par-3 No. 17 to get one of the strokes back and move to 5-under. He is tied with Lee Trevino and Jim Colbert a stroke off the pace.

That Stockton was able to post a 69 — even with a snafu at 16 — is testimony to the way he played the other 17 holes. He chipped in for eagle on No. 6, posted seven birdies, and was on his way to the best round of the tournament until his 5-iron got other ideas.

“Just a very boring, consistent round — seven birdies, an eagle, two bogeys and an eight.”

— Dave Stockton

“Just a very boring, consistent round — seven birdies, an eagle, two bogeys and an eight,” joked Stockton.

Stockton had hit a decent drive down the right side of the No. 16 fairway and stood 170 yards away from the pin — “Exactly my 5-iron yardage,” he said.

But he got greedy and went for the flag, trying to avoid the gully in the middle of the green, and he pushed it 20 yards right of his target and into the lake. After dropping in the same spot, he turned around and did it again.

On his third try, thankfully, he tried a 4-iron.

“I was going to try to hit another 5-iron,” he said. “But I said, ‘This is stupid. You've got to get one on land.’” He did, but missed the 18-footer for triple-bogey.

“I wasn't in shock,” Stockton said. “My caddy and I were laughing about it.”

Stockton's snafu at No. 16 was merely the ugliest on a day full of ugly, watery collapses.

Floyd took double-bogey on the par-3 15th hole, the toughest on the course, cutting a 6-iron into the water and missing a six-footer for bogey.

Trevino double-bogeyed 11, finding water with a 6-iron from the fairway on his second shot. “I do that every year,” Trevino said.

Colbert moved to nine-under with consecutive birdies on 9 and 10, but posted four bogeys on the back nine to fall from the lead. “I've got plenty of energy,” Colbert said. “But sometimes I just run out of ability.”

Emery heats up track

By Tiffany Hartgen
Times-News sports writer

TWIN FALLS — The sun was not the only thing that heated up the track at Twin Falls High School on Friday.

Bruin Senior Nancy Emery blistered the competition on her way to three individual firsts and one relay first at the Twin Falls triangular with Centennial and Meridian.

The Twin Falls girls placed first at 67, Centennial was second with 56 and Meridian was third at 51. This was their first win for the season.

Emery, who plans to run track for Brown University in Providence, R.I., is right on course towards beating her personal record of 57.3 last year. As of Thursday, she was seeded first in the state for the 400.

“The 400 is what I consider ‘my race,’” said Emery. “I run the 400 better than any other races.”

Emery said there was less competition with only three schools at the meet. “The meet goes a lot faster with more runners. I always run better when I'm pushed.”

Emery said her fellow teammate sophomore Melissa O'Loft usually runs with her in the 400, but she did not run in Friday's race.

“I ran slower than I would have liked. Melissa always pushes me mentally and physically.”

Emery's first in the 100 was also a personal best at 12.76.

Emery said this time of the season can be very stressful for her because her time is not where she would like it to be. However, she said at regionals she peaks and takes seconds off her time.

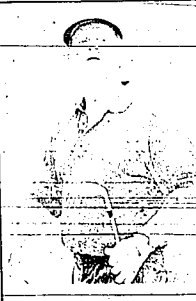

Junior distance runner Jamie Windsor took two firsts in the 160 and 3200 for the Bruins and a first in the 4x400 relay.

Windsor says her running has improved. “My times are where they were at state last year,” she said.

Senior Josh Admundo was a triple-winner for Twin Falls boys in the triple jump, 100, and 200. Although Admundo and the girls sizzled on the track, the Bruin boys came in third at 40.5.

Centennial finished first with 85 and Meridian was second at 59.5.

Top skater Curry dies from AIDS

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON, England (AP) — AIDS has claimed the life of former Olympic and world champion figure skater John Curry, the man who brought artistry to the sport.

Curry, 44, died Friday at his home near Stratford-upon-Avon from a heart attack brought on by his AIDS condition, agent Jean Diamond said.

The English skater, who won the gold medal at the 1976 Olympics in Innsbruck and the World Championship title the same year, was diagnosed as having the HIV virus in 1987.

Curry returned home in 1991 from New York after being told he had contracted full-blown AIDS. In the last years of his life, he spoke openly about his disease and acknowledged that he was homosexual.

Dubbed "Nureyev on Ice," Curry was renowned for his artistry on skates, mixing classical ballet with acrobatics. His gold-medal performance in 1976 revolutionized the sport and captivated fans around the world.

"He represented a milestone in skating," said Curry's former coach, Carlo Fassi of Italy. "He completely changed skating, turning it into a real art. This is a painful loss for the skating world."

Former Olympic ice dance champions Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean paid tribute to Curry as "the man who changed the face of ice skating."

Curry is the most prominent figure skater known to have died from AIDS. Previous fatalities include three-time Canadian champion Brian Pockar and 1988 Olympic dance bronze medalist Rob McCall, also a Canadian.

A Canadian newspaper reported in 1992 that at least 40 skaters and coaches in North America had died of AIDS-related diseases — a story branded "ridiculous" by former U.S. Olympic champion Brian Boitano.

In a first-person account published in 1992 in the Daily Mail, Curry said he first kept secret the news that he was HIV-positive. "I was ashamed of having contracted a sexually transmitted disease," he said. "I thought people would wonder what I was doing."

Curry, who was living and working in New York in the 1980s, said AIDS had decimated his friends. "They were dark days," he said. "I had fewer and fewer friends because they had died from AIDS. My whole circle of friends died. I'm not just mean lovers, but I'm talking about pals and people you go to the theater or to dinner with. They are all dead."

Giants 6, Marlins 0

MIAMI (AP) — Bill Swift allowed six hits in 8 2-3 innings as San Francisco blanked Florida.

Swift (2-1) retired 16 straight batters after Chuck Carr led off the Florida first with an infield hit.

Carr was erased on a double play, and Swift didn't give up another hit until pinch-hitter Kurt Abbott's infield single with two out in the sixth.

Swift was charged with a 4-0-0 record, and didn't walk a batter before leaving with two men on in the ninth.

Dave Burba retired Benito Santiago on a fly to center to end the game. Loser Pat Rapp (1-1) allowed four runs and eight hits in six innings.

Astros 8, Mets 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeff Bagwell drove in four runs and Ken Caminiti hit a two-run homer for Houston.

Bagwell and Steve Finley each hit solo homers to support a strong pitching performance by Doug Drabek, who held the Mets to three hits in eight innings.

Drabek (2-1), who beat the Mets for the second time in five days, had a shutout until Jeff Kent homered in the seventh. It was Kent's third homer in his last two games and increased his RBI total to 15.

Pete Smith (1-2) lasted 5 2-3 innings, allowing five runs in five hits.

Cardinals 10, Padres 6

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Score-writer Gregg Jefferies had two home runs and five RBIs and Holt Lusk won his third straight start.

The Cardinals have won three in a row, to tie Cincinnati for the NL Central lead. The Padres have lost six straight and are 1-10 overall, the worst record in the major leagues.

Jefferies, who took Thursday off after being hit by a pitch on his right wrist Wednesday, said before the game that it was still bothering him.

But he didn't look like an ailing hitter against the Padres. Jefferies hit a two-run homer in the third off Scott Sanders, doubled in the fourth and hit a three-run homer off A.J. Sager in the sixth.

Mormonism book leads author anew

When Deborah Laake was a 19-year-old student at Brigham Young University, a male friend approached her and said that God had told him she was the person divinely chosen to be his wife.

As befits the model of Mormon women everywhere, Laake accepted his statement as divine truth and decided that marriage to this man, whom she did not love, was the path God had chosen for her.

During the next decade, as one might expect, the marriage went sour. Laake and her husband divorced, and she was thrown into a spiral of male-dominated punishments that brought her to the brink of insanity.

For years, Laake, 40, tried to reconcile the strict Mormonism in which she was raised with her own developing understanding of life, and she always came up feeling accused of pride, selfishness, insanity and disobedience.

But then in spring 1993, Laake published a book about her experiences within Mormonism, "Secret Ceremonies: A Mormon Woman's Intimate Diary of Marriage and Beyond" (Island Books/Dell Publishing, $5.99). That experience, with its subsequent publicity, has set her on a new path.

It has also resulted in her expulsion from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. A few days after the book was published, the Mormon church excommunicated Laake.

Now Laake, single and recovering from radiation treatments for cancer, is enjoying having her book on The New York Times paperback best-seller list. She says her life within Mormonism, especially in the isolation of a small Latter Day Saints community in central Florida, was a tragedy she never could have predicted.

"Mormonism was all I knew," she said during a telephone interview. "The few Mormons who lived in central Florida changed my world. Our world was around 300 people. I went away to Brigham Young college.

"At that time, Mormons believed there was one person whom God had chosen for you, and the task was to find him. So when someone came to me saying that God had revealed to him who my husband was, it was hard for me to turn down that kind of spirituality. I married him even though I didn't want the man. And that was not an uncommon story among Mormon women."

Laake says the problems that some women have as they live within Mormonism can be attributed to the system that invests men to a state of unusual spiritual power.

"When males are 12, they are ordained with the power to act for God on Earth," Laake says. "When they are 19, they can perform healings and exorcisms, and they have a direct pipeline to God. That's a pretty irresistible power."

Laake, who is now executive managing editor of New Times, a syndicate of weekly alternative newspapers, says her book was rejected by 12 publishers before Island Books accepted it. No one, she says, expected it to be a best seller.

"I wrote it for men and women who had struggled with some kind of dogma that told them there was only one way to believe," Laake says. "I wasn't trying to humiliate the church, but also I was not holding back."

But the biggest reaction came from Laake's account of the torment the church put her through after she was divorced from her first husband, a Mormon, who believed she was the one woman divinely chosen to be his wife.

Laake wrote about having to appear before male church officials in one-on-one meetings where she was questioned about her sex life before, during and after her marriage. When that resistance — which only females had to suffer — did not satisfy church leaders, she was ordered to write detailed accounts of her sexual activities.

After the book hit the bookstores and Laake began appearing on TV talk shows, the church's first reaction was to get tough with dissent members. In the first months after the book's publication, two feminist members of the faculty at Brigham Young were denied tenure.

Then last fall, the church male hierarchy excommunicated four well-known feminists and two other activists. And the leadership declared that several activist groups were the major dangers to the church.

But months later, the church made a new declaration — that men, too, would have to go through the church divorce process when a marriage fails.

The full interpretation of that doctrine is still being worked out, Laake says, but at least the church divorce process now includes both men and women.

That, she knows, is a victory of vast proportions.

Chaplain rides with Twin Falls police

Twin Falls Church of Christ minister helps with loss

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's the knock at the door in the middle of the night that everyone dreads.

"I'm sorry to have to tell you this," the police officer begins.

But this time, standing beside the officer is a chaplain, someone trained to counsel people in crisis. It's been that way since 1990, when Police Chief Paul Du Fresno and Sgt. Steve Ryan organized the Twin Falls Police Chaplaincy program.

"Our primary purpose is to assist the police officers and their families and then to assist the community," said Wayland McClellan, minister at the Twin Falls Church of Christ and the chaplaincy's current president. "We've performed marriages for the police officers, and we've helped them cope with deaths in their families."

What the Twin Falls police chaplains haven't done is flirt with danger or chart spine-tingling adventures. There is no crowding behind police cars or dodging TV-style shoot-outs.

Not so far, anyway.

The doughnuts are real, though, and so are the conversations around the coffeepot.

"We act as a sounding board for the officers," McClellan said. "They are in high-stress jobs and, sometimes, they just need to talk."

When the group first organized, the police officers were not sure what to expect.

"Some were afraid we would get in the cars and start preaching," McClellan said, "but it's not our objective to use this as a pulpit."

Patrolman Jeff Bobb, an officer who "had my doubts at first," has become a staunch believer.

"The chaplains have been helpful in lots of family tragedies," he said. "I'll let Wayland go anywhere with me."

"Anywhere" can mean a domestic dispute or a routine traffic stop. One Twin Falls chaplain talked a man off the Perrine Bridge, and another counseled with the family of a suicide victim.

100 Methodists press to avoid split in church

ATLANTA — An ad hoc group of nearly 100 self-described "traditionalist" and "moderate" United Methodists mounted an aggressive movement here April 5-6 to halt what they said they feel is a liberal trend they fear could split the denomination.

"We're calling the church to renew itself through adherence to the standard teachings of Christianity and the basic doctrines of the United Methodist Church," said retired Bishop William R. Cannon of Atlanta, one of three conveners of the meeting.

The other conveners were the Rev. Maxie Dunnam, pastor of the Christ United Methodist Church in Memphis and president-elect of Asbury Theology in Wilmore, Ky., and the Rev. Thomas C. Oden, professor of theology at Drew Theological School in Madison, N.J.

The 92 participants, who came on an invitation-only basis, included bishops, seminary professors, pastors, some members of the World Methodist Council and prominent laity from all five U.S. jurisdictions of the church.

They issued a statement called "An Invitation to the Church," which says, in part, that by recovering a biblically based historic faith that emphasizes the centrality of Christ can the church "avoid schism and prevent mass exodus."

Planners say they plan to go beyond written documents to planning and implementing a grassroots strategy to affect the church directly.

Decrying what he termed "already a profound division" in the church, Oden said members of the Atlanta gathering want to "go beyond divisions."

The group wants to develop a broad coalition of "traditionalists and centrists who are unwilling to see the confession of Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior being neglected in our Christian teaching," Oden said during a press conference after the meeting.

The statement contains strong language about what the group perceives as a crisis in the United Methodist Church and the "peril of abandoning the Christian faith." Although the document does not refer to a specific example, both Dunnam and Oden referred in the press conference to recent controversy surrounding a "re-imagining" conference.

That November 1993 event on women and theology held in Minnesota, where prayers were offered to "Sophia" (translated in biblical Greek as "wisdom") touched off wide debate about feminist Christian theology.

Another concern of the Atlanta group, said Bishop Richard C. Loeoney of Madison, Wis., was that the church be accountable for what we've already decided in the "Discipline" (United Methodist law). We work hard at coming to positions we feel good about, and then people go their own route."

One example, he said, is the homosexuality issue in the church. Although the "Discipline" prohibits ordination of "self-avowed practicing homosexuals," the ban and its implementation are widely debated, Loeoney pointed out. Loeoney also cited as problematic a belief among some United Methodists that "one religion is as good as another, that we need to be understanding of others." While interfaith exchanges may have some value, he said, it "can be carried to an extreme."

Organizers of the conference called on the United Methodist Worldwide Council of Bishops to exert more strongly its "teaching authority" in the areas of faith and theological issues.

'Nirvana,' a Buddhist term for state of peace

Calmness can't be found at the end of a gun barrel

By Joy Thompson
Knight-Ridder News Service

When I found out that singer-guitarist Kurt Cobain had killed himself, I cried. I was crying for my generation.

You may wonder why I — a devoted Christian — would care about a stringy-haired youth from Seattle who wrote songs for his band, Nirvana, that touched on such themes as guns, drug use and rebellion.

Well, I care because I do enjoy some alternative rock music. And I believe Cobain's songs were about much more than guns, drug use and rebellion. They were about disillusionment, hypocrisy and alienation — themes relevant to the generation popularly known as "X."

Themes that I have had to deal with in my own life through my relationship with God.

The band's album "Nevermind" is credited with shaking up the music world and pushing alternative music into the mainstream. Cobain, 27, was hailed as a poet, much like Bob Dylan or John Lennon. He was seen as a spokesman for Generation X. The surprise success of the band's first two albums showed that the whole world wanted to hear what Cobain had to say. But no one expected him to say it with a single gunshot wound to the head.

Commentary

According to interviews and news reports, the talented Cobain was in a constant battle with the demons of his youth. He came from a broken home. He had a history of drug use. He was given to bouts of depression.

Then came material success, marriage and the birth of his first child. Fans saw a rock hero. Cobain saw his old self. Things had changed; the demons remained. Only this time, they were unveiled for the whole world to see — the moodiness, the drug use, the insecurity — naked before a sellout crowd.

Cobain knew he was no hero. And he proved it by taking a cowardly and selfish route. He committed suicide.

Which brings me to a statement made by MTV news anchor Tabitha Soren:

"It makes you wonder how someone who enjoyed so much popular success could still struggle with so many personal problems." Once again, I thought to myself, "The Big Lie." Even members of my generation have bought into it. Haven't we learned yet that material success does not equal inner peace?

What attracted me and thousands of others to Cobain's music is that to varying degrees we could relate. We all have our demons.

I was "a mistake" born to a single mother. And although my grandparents provided a good home for me, I was constantly reminded as a little girl that I was ugly, that my mother didn't want me, and that I wouldn't amount to much in life.

Kurt Cobain, former lead singer of Nirvana, told Generation X the realism of life through his songs. Cobain killed himself last week.

All that had a negative effect on my self-esteem.

With each material success — writing awards, scholarships, honors, etc. — I was haunted by those negative voices. And if I weren't for someone to bring me about Jesus and the message of hope in the Bible, I, too, might have given up.

But according to recent polls, too few members of my generation — people age 18-29 — see any answers in religion.

Because of the hypocrisy and staleness of many churches, I can understand why. I've heard it from several of my peers: A sincere congregation is hard to find. But they're out there. You just have to keep searching.

"Nirvana," a Buddhist term for state of peace, won't be found in a multimillion-dollar album. It won't be found at the end of a gun barrel. It's found in a right relationship with God.

Interested in becoming a volunteer?

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer police chaplain may call Sgt. Steve Ryan at 736-2200 or Wayland McClellan at 733-7805. Chaplains must be ordained ministers with five years experience in pastoral type work. They must also be presently active with a religious group.

"I've been on one felony stop where the officer had to pull his weapon," McClellan said, "but no shots were fired."

Such is the life of a Twin Falls police chaplain. The city provides him with a shirt, badge and jacket. He's issued some Mace, too, and a bulletproof vest. He's trained in firearms, but he doesn't carry a gun. He's covered by city liability insurance, but the police officers are instructed not to place him in jeopardy.

McClellan was attracted to the program because his youngest son is a police officer in Nashville.

"I thought maybe I could understand what he was going through," McClellan said. "Once I became involved, it got into my blood and now I generally ride (with a police officer) about 10 hours a week."

Chaplains are only required to ride 10 hours a month to retain active status. While they are being trained, they must ride 50 hours during a three-month period.

When the program began, 12 ministers signed up. Only three remain in active status.

Jim Sommer (Christian Center) and Wayne Nigh (Calvary United Pentecostal), along with McClellan, comprise the active trio. Leovar Thornock (LDS Church), an original member of the group, is now an auxiliary (on-call) chaplain. Anne Weld-Martin (First United Methodist), the only woman on board, will be moving away this summer. Many of the other original 12 have also left the area.

"We need more chaplains," said McClellan.

That need is great, he added, noting that police chaplaincy programs are becoming increasingly common across the country.

In some cities, they even carry guns.

Christian comics try to recapture the joyful world of past days

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

Nearly a decade ago, when Lutheran comic Merrill Belgum performed at a nursing home chapel, the altar was stripped bare of religious symbols. The unspoken message: "Now we're going to have some fun and humor, but it has nothing to do with the church."

But today, when the "Queen Mother of Comedy" arrives with her trademark feathered boas, sequined dresses and oversized glasses, no one removes the cross and other trappings of faith.

In 1994, laughter is welcome on the pulpit and in the pews. Belgium is part of a new generation of clergy, theologians and, yes, comics, who seek converts to a faith that celebrates rather than endures life.

Their mission: to recapture what they envision as the joyful world of the early Christians.

Already, there are a number of signs that serious Christians no longer—as 17th-century men once wrote of Puritans—worry that someone, somewhere, is having a good time.

Jokes and cartoons have become common in religious bulletins, and an increasing number of clergy loosen up their congregations with funny stories.

"How do you dispense a threatening crowd?" asks the Joyful Noiseletter. "Take up a collection." And according to The Parish Chute, "Anybody who has ever used the expression, 'It was no Sunday school picnic' has obviously never been to a Sunday school picnic."

The Fellowship of Merry Christians, founded in 1986 with 250 members, now has 10,000. And another new group, the to approach the Bible and some biblical scholars say you can see Jesus had a sense of humor. In first-century Palestine, his disciples probably would have gotten a chuckle out of his one-liner aimed at religious hypocrites: "Why do you see the speck that is in your brother's eye, but do not notice the log that is in your own eye?"

The Messiah whose message was "Be of good cheer" often is depicted as a "tormented depressive," according to Cal Samra, editor of The Joyful Noiseletter. People will intone the Eucharistic prayer celebrating the most hopeful belief of their faith—Christ is risen. Christ will come again in a twinkling with great solemnity to receive the Host.

The flip side of this: take 60-four-faced Presbyterians, then have them touch their knees and toes together, stick their tongues out and sway back-and-forth—all the while warbling "Singing in the Rain."

It's all in a day's fun—er, work—for Sister Mary Christelle McAluso, who last month inducted 4,000 people into the so-called Order of the Fun Nun at a national conference of religious educators.

Their initiation was to recite "Mary Had A Little Lamb" with their right index fingers on the nose and their left index fingers on the nose of the person on the other side.

Religious comedy is not her job: It is a vocation.

In McAluso's theological world view, God is unfathomable love. When she helps another person feel better, she says, she receives a joy beyond human understanding.

Liz Curtis Higgs slept with more men than she could count, and used alcohol and drugs with abandon during her "lost decade," starting at age 17, before she made a commitment to Christianity.

Since that day in 1982, coffee has been her strongest stimulant and she is happily married with two children.

That she changed her life around wasn't the surprising part. What she didn't realize, she says, is that being religious could be so much fun.

"I think the Lord gave me a sense of joy again, and a purpose, and that helped me laugh more."

She Higgs, a comic writer and speaker based in Louisville, Ky. "When you clean out a lot of areas of your life, you realize there is a lot more genuine, and not a cover-up."

In her frank book "One Size Fits All" and Other Fables, Higgs holds little back as she talks about the dieting roller coaster she climbed onto at age 10 and the related problems of self-esteem that led her to seek affirmation in casual sex and alcohol abuse.

"I really felt like I lost my sense of humor."

Sister Mary Christelle McAluso, "The Fun Nun's," view is that God is unfathomable love.

Life wasn't fun for me. I really began to get depressed," she says.

Today, the comedian from the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) is an unapologetic size 22 who bills herself as "a big, beautiful woman in a narrow, nervous world."

In her act, she tosses off one-liners such as: "My body is a temple of the Holy Spirit, and he just started a building program that got out of hand."

Unitarian Universalist Fellowship: What do you believe?

As members of a religious group new to the Magic Valley, participants in the Twin Falls Unitarian Universalist Fellowship are often asked: What do you believe?

Clergy corner
Julie Fanselow

It is possible to get true spiritual satisfaction from a religion that doesn't dictate what adherents must believe? Is it possible to be a Unitarian Universalist and still be a Christian... or Jewish or Buddhist or agnostic? Is Unitarian Universalism itself a religion at all?

People often have difficulty getting a handle on the UU's, not surprising since our members hail from diverse backgrounds and hold a wide variety of views. But just because we're free to disagree doesn't mean we don't take our spiritual quests very seriously, nor does it mean there is nothing upon which UU's agree. In fact, we cherish a set of guiding principles that read as follows:

"We affirm with the member congregation of the Unitarian Universalist Association: The inherent worth of every person; justice, equity and compassion in human relations; acceptance of one another and encouragement to spiritual growth in our congregations; a free and responsible search for truth and meaning; the rights of conscience and the use of democratic process within our congregations and in society at large; the goal of world community with peace, liberty and justice for all; respect for the interdependent web of all existence of which we are a part."

These principles speak for themselves, but you probably see several common threads running throughout. We believe in social justice and the dignity of all human beings. We believe deeds are more important than dogma and try to conduct our daily lives with that in mind. And we recognize the need to treat our environment as an

People will intone the Eucharistic prayer celebrating the most hopeful belief of their faith — Christ is risen, Christ will come again — then flip up with great solemnity to receive the Host.

The flip side of this: take 60 four-faced Presbyterians, then have them touch their knees and toes together, stick their tongues out and sway back and forth, all the while warbling "Singing in the Rain."

It's all in a day's fun — or, work — for Sister Mary Christelle McAluso, who last month inducted 4,000 people into the so-called Order of the Fun Nun at a national conference of religious educators.

Their initiation was to recite: "Mary Had A Little Lamb" with their right index fingers on the nose of the person to their right and their left index fingers on the nose of the person on the other side.

Religious comedy is not her job. It is a vocation.

In McAluso's theological world view, God is unfathomable love. When she helps another person feel better, she says, she receives a joy beyond human understanding.

Liz Curtis Higgs slept with more men than she could count, and used alcohol and drugs with abandon during her "lost decade," starting at age 17, before she made a commitment to Christianity.

Since that day in 1982, coffee has been her strongest stimulant and she is happily married with two children.

That she changed her life around wasn't the surprising part. What she didn't realize, she says, is that being religious could be so much fun.

"I think the Lord gave me a sense of joy again, and a purpose, and that helped me laugh more," says Higgs, a comic writer and speaker based in Louisville, Ky. "When you clean out a lot of areas of your life, your laughter can be a lot more genuine, and not a cover-up."

In her frank book "One Size Fits All and Other Fables," Higgs holds little back as she talks about the dieting roller coaster she climbed onto at age 10 and the related problems of self-esteem that led her to seek affirmation in casual sex and alcohol abuse.

"I really felt like I lost my sense of humor,

Sister Mary Christelle McAluso, 'The Fun Nun,' vows is that God is unfathomable love.

Life wasn't fun for me. I really began to get depressed," she says.

Today, the comedian from the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) is an unapologetic size 22 who bills herself as "a big, beautiful woman in a narrow, nervous world."

In her act, she tosses off one-liners such as: "My body is a temple of the Holy Spirit, and he just started a building program that got out of hand."

Unitarian Universalist Fellowship: What do you believe?

As members of a religious group new to the Magic Valley, participants in the Twin Falls Unitarian Universalist Fellowship are often asked: What do you believe?

It is possible to get true spiritual satisfaction from a religion that doesn't dictate what adherents must believe? Is it possible to be a Unitarian Universalist and still be a Christian...or Jew...or Buddhist...or Muslim? Is Unitarian Universalism really really a religion at all?

People often have difficulty getting a handle on the UUs, not surprising since our members hail from diverse backgrounds and hold a wide variety of views. But just because we're free to disagree doesn't mean we don't take our spiritual quests very seriously, nor does it mean there is nothing upon which UUs agree. In fact, we cherish a set of guiding principles that read as follows:

"We affirm as the member congregations of the Unitarian Universalist Association: The inherent worth of every person; justice, equity and compassion in human relations; acceptance of one another and encouragement to spiritual growth in our congregations; a free and responsible search for truth and meaning; the rights of conscience and the use of democratic process within our congregations and in society at large; the goal of world community with peace, liberty and justice for all; respect for the interdependent web of all existence of which we are a part."

These principles speak for themselves, but you probably see several common threads running throughout. We believe in social justice and the dignity of all human beings. We believe deeds are more important than dogma and try to conduct our daily lives with that in mind. And we recognize the need to treat our environment as an organic whole, since we are dependent on its health.

But perhaps most important, we know our religion has something to offer. I may not agree with everything my Southern Baptist aunt believes, but I know her faith has helped her over many obstacles. I may not concur with Mormon views on women, but I respect my LDS friends' emphasis on family and charity.

Most people look to religion for answers. As Unitarian Universalists, we believe some answers are possible — but that many questions are always inevitable, too. So we welcome the questions and challenges and know that together, guided by our principles, we will find understanding, communion and peace.

Boomers' religious quest, church integrity not always perfect match

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Four years ago, when the Rev. Barbara Blaisdell came to Central Christian Church in Indianapolis, the average age of the 60 worshippers on any Sunday was 75.

Since then, she has performed 47 funerals, but has attracted 150 new members and others who participate but have not joined. The church's 200 people in church on Sunday, nearly two-thirds of them baby boomers.

Many of the baby boomers are open, interesting people who are great at cocktail parties and more than willing to pitch in for community service projects, Blaisdell said. But amid all the success, there are lingering doubts about the substance of their faith commitments.

"It's me and my Jesus, or you and your Jesus or Buddha or whatever works for you," she told a recent conference of sociologists, pastors and theologians who gathered to discuss "Baby Boomers and the Changing Shape of American Religion."

The pious news from the conference sponsored by the Louisville Institute for the Study of Protestantism and American Culture is that the nearly one-third of Americans who are baby boomers are interested in spirituality.

The more disturbing news is that the spiritual quest of many of the 76 million people aged 40 to 49 are startlingly personal, and the claims of past generations of church tradition and sources such as the Bible are far less compelling to them than past generations.

Many researchers saw a gloomy short-term prognosis for traditional religions, particularly for mainline Protestant churches such as the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

In a study for their book, "Vanishing Boundaries: The Religion of Mainline Protestants in the 1990s," sociologists Dean Hoge, Benton Johnson and Donald Lindberg surveyed 500 people ages 33 to 42 who were confirmed in Presbyterian churches in the 1950s and 1960s. Half were now classified as "unanchored," while only 29 percent remained active.

Sociologist Penny Long Miller of Samford University said many young adults have so little denominational identity and their biblical knowledge is so vague, "I think it's going to have to be something tantamount to a conversion experience" to bring them actively back into the religious fold in large numbers.

If the research on baby boomers is not discouraging enough, there are signs the baby boomer generation has even looser ties to organized religion, researchers said.

In Canada, only 14 percent of people under age 35 reported attending church weekly in a national survey, compared with 37 percent of people age 55 and older, said Reginald Bibby, a sociology professor at the University of Lethbridge.

"The farm systems are in trouble," he said. But there remains widespread spiritual interest, many researchers said.

For example, 88 percent of Canadians in a 1991 census reported a religious affiliation, and 90 percent still turn to religious institutions for funerals, Bibby said.

"The churches are going broke at a time when the population is going hungry," he concluded.

"The problem might be lying with the churches." Wade Clark Roof, author of "A Generation of Seekers: The Spiritual Journeys of the Baby Boom Generation," said baby boomers have shown by their interest in the environment and cultivating relationships that they are open to new kinds of spiritual searches, and ultimately "new ways of being church."

"American religion has always been individualistic," said Roof, professor of religion and society at the University of California, Santa Barbara. "I'm more hopeful that out of this individualism will emerge new forms of community."

To balance the spiritual needs and spiritual gifts of the boomers at Central Christian in Indianapolis, Blaisdell said the church is considering requiring people to take some sort of religious education program before allowing them to sign on as volunteers in community service projects.

Vatican gives its blessing to altar girls

VATICAN CITY — Both girls and boys will be officially allowed to act as altar servers at Roman Catholic Masses, the Vatican said Wednesday.

"It will be up to individual bishops to decide whether girls can serve in their jurisdictions," papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro said.

Altar servers, generally aged 8 to 14, assist the priest while he is celebrating Mass, lighting candles, preparing the altar or handing him water or wine. In many American parishes, girls have been altar servers for years.

Prelates from the United States and other countries suggested in 1982 formally opening up the post of altar server as part of their urging to the church to give women a greater role. The Vatican began studying the possibility a year ago. Some Roman Catholics were elated by the decision.

"Holy money. You mean I'm going to see this in my own time? Fantastic. Great," said Suzanne Benier of Toronto, whose 11-year-old daughter Sandra stirred up a commotion when she wasn't allowed to serve as an altar girl at a special Mass in 1987.

In Cheyenne, Wyo., Father Carl Beavers, rector of St. Mary's Cathedral, said, "I'm sure that this is something of which the vast majority of Catholics would approve."

Religious studies different

When a person studies mathematics, it doesn't matter what college he attends — two plus two equals four. The same applies to English in any school — a noun is a noun, a verb is a verb. This applies to many subjects except when you study religion. Most church-related schools use the same Bible to study various subjects related to the Bible, and various Bible doctrine teachings, but these different schools vary in their understanding of these subjects, almost as light differs from darkness.

The media carried accounts of the Holy Week leading up to the crucifixion and resurrection of our Savior Jesus Christ. This account is taken from the Bible, and all churches in mainstream Christianity translate it the same way. It is a story that can be read by anyone, including young children, and understood. It is a story involving the Christian's Savior and touches the heart of all.

In the accounts of Holy Week, there are some things that aren't emphasized or even mentioned. Instead of stating them here, which could be taken as only an opinion, I will ask four questions. Who is interested can find the answers in their own Bibles.

What example was given to the disciples that was to be practiced until Jesus returns again and why? This example took place on what is referred to as "Maundy Thursday." According to Leo Rice's book, "Religions in America," there are only two churches that practice this example today.

What happened in the sanctuary in Jerusalem at the exact second that Jesus died on the cross?

What were the Jews watching in addition to the crucifixion and why?

After the resurrection, why did Jesus tell a certain person people touch him, then some other people he told to touch him?

These questions make the story more complete and more personal. If we take this story to heart, we will celebrate the true meaning of Easter all year and will generate true Christian love for our fellow man.

Good, evil separated

I must write a note to point out what I noticed in a recent Religion section — a perfect example of good and evil on the same pages of The Times-News. Very well arranged. Good for you, the message was very clear.

As for the article on "American churches see slower growth," that is true. However, worldwide our mainline churches are having huge success. The list of church growth centers and sketch represents 10 mainline denominations, maybe half of all Christian churches in America. I added up the figures for the Christian churches; 52,630,164 — not bad for only the top 10. I know of at least 10 denominations not listed that could easily represent that many again.

I am a member of the Christian Coalition, which represents 1 million Christians. I joined Promise Keepers last year with 54,000 members, and we are praying for 100,000 members by the end of 1994. That is the size of my family of believers, and we meet once a year to raise up Jesus Christ in all his glory and to pray for all the ills of this nation.

praying leaders of this nation. Our families, our churches, our communities, our states and the unsaved are being prayed over.

Shedding a little light

I'd love to "shed" a little light on the subject of separation of church and state.

When Christians pray "The Lord's Prayer," they ask for "his" kingdom to come to earth and "his" will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

A very intelligent, gifted, wonderful minister, Dr. Wesley A. Swift, who has passed away but his tape ministry is available, explained it this way:

"A Kingdom is made up of three essences: creation; nations, church and the throne — nations being the household and the peoples of faith of which the kingdom is made; the throne is the seat of the administration; church is the spiritual center that kingdom, keeping the people in contact with the word of God and under the pattern of its instruction."

I feel that the kingdom on earth will include all the states within our Christian nation, so let's be about the Lord's business of saving this great country from all the evils that are besetting the people.

God bless America.

Grace is freely given gift

According to the Bible, grace is the attitude of God toward people. It is seen as love and acceptance because of what Christ did for believers. Grace is getting what we don't deserve.

Let's first look at what the Bible says. In Ephesians 2:8-9, we read,

Bestsellers answer spiritual yearning

By Peggy Landers
Knight-Ridder News Service

So there's this guy, roaming through the rain forests of Peru in search of a manuscript that contains the secrets of humankind's destiny. Gun-toting soldiers, spurred on by high-ranking clergymen from an unnamed "church," dog his every move. Along this rocky road to Enlightenment, the man stumbles into one eerie coincidence after another — by gosh — he obtains all nine insights into the meaning of life!

But wait. On his way out of the country in the last chapter of "The Celestine Prophecy," our hero discovers there is yet another insight hidden out there in the ancient ruins — and maybe even more! You don't have to read auras or connect with the universal flow of energy to figure out what THAT means, sequel!

James Redfield's "The Celestine Prophecy," No. 1 on The New York Times bestseller hard-cover fiction list, a kind of "Romancing the Stone" spiritual adventure story, has hit a raw nerve in the secular book-reading world. Self-published two years ago, it sold more than 100,000 copies, mostly by word of mouth, before Warner Books paid $850,000 for the rights to publish it in hard cover. The new edition landed in bookstores March 1.

"It is flying off the shelf. We cannot keep enough of it in the store. People are just gobbling it up," said Kris Nastiaka, community relations coordinator for Borders Book Shop in Miami. "We sell four to six copies a day and on weekends as many as 12 a day. During the 2½-week period it was being reprinted by Warner, we were special-ordering and special-ordering until we really wiped out the distributors' stock."

Meredith Porter, a producer for WLRN-Channel 17 in Miami and a fan of "Celestine," said Redfield's writing "is not that fabulous" but the book "speaks to a shift in consciousness. In one way or another, we're all experiencing. There's a growing understanding that there is something more to us than just our bodies. And once we start tuning into that other part, we realize a lot of our problems are due to the fact that we are too based in the material and physical world."

This much is true: The success of "Celestine" is not a one-time phenomenon. It is one of several books about spiritual life that have been bestsellers in recent months. Betty J. Eadie's "Embraced by the Light," the retelling of a near-death experience that describes the spiritual after-death realm in gripping detail, is the No. 1 nonfiction bestseller. "The Book of Virgil" by William J. Bennett, a compilation of moral essays adapted from the Greeks, the Bible and American folklore, is No. 3.

"For by grace you have been saved through faith—and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God, not of works, lest anyone should boast."

This is in sharp contrast to the Book of Mormon and other official LDS documents. In 2 Nephi 25:23, it says this: "For we know that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do." The LDS Bible Dictionary, Page 697, says of grace: "This grace is an enabling power that allows men and women to lay hold on eternal life and exaltation after they have expended their own best efforts."

Spencer W. Kimball is quoted in the Book of Mormon Student Manual, Page 36, like this: "One of the most fallacious doctrines originated by Satan and propounded by man is that man is saved alone by the grace of God; that belief in Jesus Christ alone is all that is needed for salvation."

It is obvious to me that the Bible and Mormon doctrine say something different when compared. What are we to believe? I believe the Bible. I understand that Mormons believe the Bible only when "properly translated." Is this a place where it is not properly translated, or is this a place where Mormon doctrine departs from the plain teaching of the Bible?

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Prosperity doth best discover vice; but adversity doth best discover virtue."
— Francis Bacon.

After North's positive response, South had good reason to expect North to hold the Q-J of trumps, or the queen and three others. So he took a shot at seven spades. Had North held four trumps, the grand slam would have been easy. As it was, South could succeed only through imaginative play.

With four trumps in dummy, South could have afforded to draw trumps and establish his diamond suit. Two of dummy's hearts would have gone on South's diamonds and South would have had an easy claim. How does South ruff his heart loser with only three trumps in dummy?

To start, he must find some good luck in diamonds, but not the kind of luck one usually seeks. If diamonds are 3-3, South cannot succeed after drawing two rounds of trumps, he can discard one heart loser but not two. Therefore, his only hope is for East to hold four diamonds headed by the Jack, plus the third trump.

After two rounds of trumps, dummy's diamond ace is cashed and a low diamond is led to South's 10. When the diamond king brings it down from West, South collects the discard. He discards hearts on the king and queen of diamonds and safely ruffs his losing heart. A club back to the ace allows South to draw the last trump and the lucky slam is scored.

"Nothing to it," jokes South. "My suits never break evenly so I knew the slam was cold from the start."
