Nixon, 81, succumbs to stroke

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Richard Nixon died Friday, four days after suffering a stroke that had left him in a deep coma. He was 81.

The former president died at 7:08 p.m. MDT at New York Hospital, said spokeswoman Myrna Manners. "His family was with him," she said.

Reporters gathered outside the Manhattan hospital learned the news about 1½ hours after his death in a two-sentence news release. Soon after the news was announced, the flag was lowered to half-staff over the White House.

The body had been removed from the hospital by the time the death was announced.

All three television networks interrupted regular programming to announce the death and present highlights of his career. The news drew expressions of sorrow from political friends and foes.

President Clinton called a news conference in the Rose Garden to make the formal announcement.

"I was deeply grateful to President Nixon for his wise counsel on many occasions," Clinton said. "Our relationship continued to be warm and constructive ... He went out of Nixon was brought to the hospital after suffering the stroke Monday night at his Park Ridge, N.J., home.

His daughters, Julie Eisenhower and Tricia Cox, were at his side as his condition deteriorated.

He was partly paralyzed on the right side and unable to speak even before he slipped into the coma Thursday.

In the hours after the stroke, doctors said Nixon was out of grave danger, alert and in good spirits. He was moved out of intensive care briefly Tuesday, but returned two hours later when doctors discovered a swelling of the brain.

Friends, foes speak kindly of Nixon

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton praised former President Nixon on Friday night as "a statesman who sought to build a lasting structure of peace."

He said his relationship with Nixon had been warm, and that he had been "deeply grateful ... for his wise counsel on many occasions."

It is traditional for a sitting president to make the formal announcement of the death of one of his predecessors, and Clinton did so in somber and generous remarks from the Rose Garden.

He said Nixon had "the wisdom to know when the time was right to reach out to the Soviet Union and China."

"He experienced his fair share of adversity," Clinton said of Nixon, the only president to have resigned his office. Clinton said he had spoken to Nixon's daughters and that he planned to attend Nixon's funeral in California.

"It's impossible to be in this job without feeling a special bond with the people who have gone before," Clinton said. "And I was deeply grateful to President Nixon for his wise counsel on so many occasions on many issues over the last year."

"His service to me and to our country during this period was like the rest of his service to the nation for nearly a half-century. He gave of himself with intelligence and devotion to duty and his country owes him a debt of gratitude for that service."

Clinton began his statement by saying, "It is my sad duty to report to the people of the United States that Richard M. Nixon, who served as our 37th president, died this evening in New York City at 9:08 p.m. with his family at his side."

Clinton said he spoke often with Nixon during the 15 months of his presidency, including recent conversations concerning Nixon's trip last month to Moscow.

"Our relationship continued to be warm and constructive," Clinton said.

"He went out of his way to give me his best advice."

Woman's long walk saves friend 68-year-old sings Christian songs on journey

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

FAIRFIELD — Betty Jo Carpenter says she is an "ol' farm girl," but her feet still ache after a recent chore.

The 68-year-old woman walked almost 27 miles through the Soldier Mountains to save the life of her friend.

Lewis Parish, 73, of Gooding, was driving his 1986 Chevrolet pickup from Feather River to the south fork canyon of the Boise River toward Fairfield Sunday afternoon. Parish was driving with his friend, Carpenter, who lives in Buhl.

He had driven the gravel road many times before with no problems.

But this time the Forest Service hadn't opened the road yet because snow remained on the mountains. Still, Sunday was sunny with the temperature in the mid 70s, so they tried to drive on.

Climbing out of the canyon, they saw snow but kept going. At Couch Summit — elevation more than 7,000 feet — they found more snow. Parish said he decided to turn his two-wheel drive truck around, but the truck got stuck in a ditch.

Parish was feeling ill and had had heart problems.

So Carpenter got out and started walking.

Instead of heading south to cross the snowy summit 17 miles north of Fairfield, she started walking back along the dirt road.

She started walking at 2:30 in the afternoon.

Fumes clear Spokane area

The Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. — Fumes apparently leaking from a rail tanker car forced evacuation of several apartment buildings and downtown businesses Friday.

The Burlington Northern freight train was later moved to a remote siding about five miles southwest of town, where it was inspected and later released, said Burlington Northern spokesman Gus Melanos in Seattle.

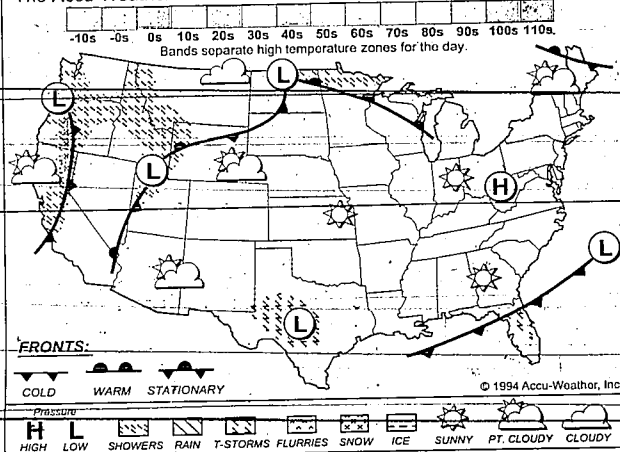

The tank car contained ammonium sulfide, a liquefied gas that is a corrosive lung and skin irritant that can be explosive in certain situations, assistant city manager Bill Pupo said.

An odor was detected by the train crew and residents, but Spokane emergency response crews determined there had been no spill.

Weather summary

After a week of much-above-normal temperatures for much of Idaho, a return to normal or cool temperatures spilled over the southeast on Friday due to an eastern Pacific low pressure system.

The low generated close to a half-inch of precipitation in the north central mountains, with lesser amounts in the north and southwest portions of Idaho by Friday morning. At midafternoon Pocatello and Idaho Falls were nearly 20 degrees cooler than the day before. Pocatello had 67 degrees and Idaho Falls 68 degrees. The warm spot was Malad with 74 degrees, while Mullan Pass had 48 degrees. There was precipitation only in the afternoon in parts of the southeast highlands and east central mountains.

In the Salmon area, a thunderstorm dropped quarter-inch hail for a few minutes.

Winds were mostly light except in the Upper Snake River Plains where speeds of 15 to 20 mph with gusts of 25 to 35 mph were reported at 3 p.m.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 77 degrees at Malad. Stanley reported the lowest at 37.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 107 degrees at Coolidge, Ariz. Manistee and Marquette, Mich., reported the lowest at 21 degrees.

Colder and unsettled weather was forecast for the West, with heavy snow possible across some of California's mountain ranges, the National Weather Service said.

Winter storm watches were posted for today in the Mount Shasta and Siskiyou areas. The Sierra north of Yosemite and the Lake Tahoe vicinity.

Clinton said members of the Nixon family "know that the wishes of all Americans are with them during their moment of sorrow."

Of Nixon, Clinton said, "He gave of himself with devotion," and that "his country owes him a debt." Clinton said Nixon had the wisdom to know when the time was right to reach out to the Soviet Union and China.

"He was a statesman who sought to build a lasting structure of peace," Clinton said.

As a student during the years of Nixon's presidency, Clinton actively opposed the U.S. policy of war in Vietnam. Friday night, in remarks after 11 p.m., he praised Nixon for "his resiliency" and his "desire to give something back to this world."

"Indeed, no less than a month before his passing, he was still in touch with me about the great issues of the day," Clinton said.

"We face today a world of increasing uncertainty and difficult challenges," he said. "But it is a world of great opportunity in no small part because of the vision of Richard Nixon during a particularly difficult period of the Cold War."

The president said, "Hillary and I send our deepest condolences to the family and friends. We hope that Tricia and Edward Cox, and their son, Christopher; Julie and David Eisenhower and their children, Jenny, Alex and Melanie, know that the best wishes of all their fellow Americans are with them during their moment of sorrow."

The former president was remembered Friday with kind words from old friends and foes alike.

"Past differences are now history. I wish him God's care and peace," said Connecticut Gov. Lowell Weicker, who as a Republican member of the Senate Watergate Committee often took sides against the GOP president.

Former President Reagan said: "The world mourns the loss of a great champion of democratic ideals who dedicated his life to the cause of world peace. For millions, Richard Nixon was truly one of the finest statesmen this world has ever seen."

Former Michigan Gov. George Romney, who campaigned against Nixon in the 1968 GOP nomination race, said, "Nixon was a man of health, education and welfare, called Nixon 'the ablest man to hold the presidency since World War II.'"

And former Sen. Howard Baker, the Tennessee Republican who was ranking minority member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said: "His contribution to the ending years of the cold war and the pursuit of peace will be recognized and remarked on for generations to come."

"I think I admire most his strength of character that permitted him to recover from his resignation from the presidency and to become a respected senior statesman," Baker said. "That was truly remarkable."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., was one of many people who said Nixon's other achievements would eventually outweigh the Watergate scandal that clouded his reputation during his lifetime.

"All in all, people are going to look back and say Watergate, the resignation, a lot of these things were bad and bad, but I have hope," Dole said. "I think history will, with a few exceptions, say that this man made a difference. You add all that up and he comes out ahead."

Earl Butz, agriculture secretary under Nixon and Gerald R. Ford, remembered Nixon as a man who prized loyalty and returned it.

"Some of these days when Watergate becomes a footnote in history ... and when the Nixon haters in the press are all gone ... Richard Nixon will go down as one of the great presidents in history," said Butz, dean emeritus of agriculture at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind.

Judy Agnew, wife of Nixon's vice president Spiro T. Agnew, expressed sympathy for Nixon's family but said her husband had no immediate comment.

Carl Albert, the Oklahoma Democrat who was U.S. House speaker during Nixon's presidency, had these thoughts:

"He was sort of weird but to me he was a friendly sort of person," Albert said from McAlester, Okla. "I never had any trouble with him."

Nixon

on a respirator. He had left a living will, and several news organizations reported that it included instructions that he not be resuscitated.

Nixon's stroke apparently was the result of a blood clot that formed in his heart and moved to the brain's middle cerebral artery. The blockage deprived this crucial cranial region of oxygen, damaging some brain tissue and causing the swelling.

Nixon had been working on his latest book when he was stricken.

During his hospitalization the Rev. Billy Graham, an old friend, stopped by to visit his daughters.

Foreign leaders sent letters of encouragement, including Russian President Boris Yeltsin whose telegram said, "I hope you recover and return to the rough and tumble of political life."

People lined up during the week at the Nixon Library in California to write down their wishes for his recovery.

"Nixon was defeated by John F. Kennedy in the 1960 presidential election after serving as a Republican congressman and senator from California."

In 1950 and again in 1956 Nixon was elected vice president on the Republican ticket with Dwight D. Eisenhower. He was elected the 37th president in 1968.

Nixon also ran unsuccessfully for governor of California in the 1960s.

Under the cloud of the Watergate scandal, he became the first president to resign.

Nixon was born in Yorba Linda, Calif., and was educated at Whittier College and Duke University.

"One entry last year was written on toilet paper because the person couldn't find any paper," said Kanarek, who runs "Everything Organized" and wrote a new book called "Organizing Your Home Office for Success."

Another broke a rib after slipping on some papers on the floor.

Yet none topped photographer Art Shay of Chicago.

"I was in the office, completely blind by papers," Kanarek said, and a slide he took of John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon during the 1960 presidential debates.

"When I found it, he said: 'That's so valuable. I've been looking for that.'"

Shay, who says he is a reformed slob; will help judge this year's crop of office disasters.

Kanarek urged contestants to be creative. But compulsives need not apply.

"Last year we got several people who wrote saying, 'Please excuse the mess' — and the office was perfectly organized," Kanarek said.

"There was nothing wrong with the office, just with the person."

Those who wish to enter may use an entry form in the May issue of Home Office Computing; a free copy may be obtained by calling 1-800-866-5821. The deadline for entering is July 15. The winner will be announced in the magazine's December issue.

She had walked for more than 16 hours.

Deputies later measured her trek in their trucks and found she had walked 26.6 miles — more than the distance of a marathon.

Gore defends Clinton record on environment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marking Earth Day, Vice President Al Gore defended the Clinton administration's environmental record Friday and announced a program recruiting students worldwide to monitor nature and pollution.

Under fire by environmentalists for not being aggressive enough, Gore said the administration has taken "dramatic" steps. Among them, he said, were financing for ecological programs, signing a treaty to protect endangered species, encouraging energy conservation and pushing legislation to aid water and toxic waste cleanups.

"We have turned environmental policy around and headed it in the right direction," Gore told reporters. "Nobody said it would be easy, but we are making tremendous progress."

However, "We'll take our share of the blame" in failing to persuade Congress last year to enact a new tax on energy use as an incentive for increasing conservation, Gore said.

Instead of a broad tax, Congress changed the levy to a higher tax on gasoline.

"I'm not sure that it's fair to say that, having proposed it and fought for it, that we ought to be blamed for the fact that there wasn't sufficient political support to adopt it," Gore said.

Gore had championed environmental causes as both a member of the House and Senate.

At an earlier video conference with young people on six continents plus scientists in Antarctica, Gore announced a program in which students around the globe will collect data on the environment.

The information — initially on rainfall and temperature, eventually more complicated data like bird counts — will be fed into a central computer and used for research and to stimulate interest in ecology at participating schools.

More than 20 countries have expressed interest in participating in the program, which will begin with 500 schools and expand to 1,000 and more. The administration will spend $1.2 million for the initiative this year and is seeking $13 million for 1995.

"This initiative is going to start small and expand, and I think in the future will make a tremendous difference," Gore said.

The vice president anchored the 45-minute video session from the United States Information Agency in downtown Washington. The studio was festooned with plastic pine trees and artificial turf, and Gore was positioned in front of a painted backdrop of blue sky and clouds.

Using satellite hookups, Gore answered questions from students in Tokyo, Japan; Stuttgart, Germany; Sydney, Australia; Dakar, Senegal; Quito, Ecuador; and the United States.

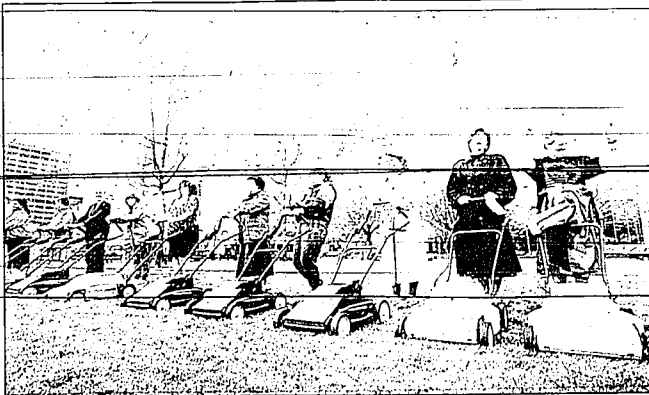

Included in the linkup were scientists at the Amundsen-Scott Science Research Station at the South Pole.

Meanwhile, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Carol Browner urged environmental activists to work for tougher laws.

"Let's all of us rededicate ourselves to deepening the environmental movement and building a new generation of environmental protection," she told the League of Conservation Voters.

She praised environmentalists for working hard to create laws that didn't exist 20 years ago, but said more needs to be done.

"At best, we can only say that we've done the easy things," she said. "We must move from environmental regulation to true environmental protection."

U.S. limits Canadian grain flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States moved to limit imports of Canadian wheat and barley Friday, with quotas expected to be imposed July 1 unless the two countries resolve their farm trade dispute.

The administration did not announce the quota levels, nor the amount of proposed tariffs to discourage Canadian imports of wheat and barley above those quotas.

The 90-day schedule for implementation will allow the two sides — the world's largest trading partners — time to settle the dispute, which also involves dairy, eggs, poultry and other commodities. But no new talks have been announced.

The United States is "still fully prepared to negotiate a solution to the agricultural problems of both countries in a way that recognizes the needs of each side," said U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor.

U.S. lawmakers from the Northern Plains states charged the proposed quotas. Canadian officials promised retaliation.

Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy, briefing reporters, noted that wheat is only a small share of U.S.-Canadian trade. Trade between the two countries totaled $2.4 billion last year, including $10 billion in farm goods.

Wheat accounts for less than half of 1 percent of Canadian exports to the United States, but the volume has been growing in the last five years.

"It's a serious discussion, but I would like to keep it in the proper context," Espy said. He referred to a desire to keep Canadian products flowing into the United States and urged keeping the dispute "civil."

Several commodity groups have complained about Canadian trade practices. But the wheat growers and lawmakers from the Northern Plains states have been the most vocal and persistent.

They claim that the quasi-governmental Canadian Wheat Board, the wheat-buying monopoly, can price wheat selectively, undercutting world prices and the amount U.S. farmers can receive. They also complain about transportation subsidies for Canadian wheat.

Canada argues that U.S. commodity and export programs have priced U.S. farmers out of their own market. The key commodity at stake is durum wheat, the kind used to make noodles.

Canada's international trade minister, Roy MacLaren, accused the United States of "imposing tariffs on us in what we consider an unfair way."

"We are not subsidizing our exports to the United States," MacLaren said.

Congress probes 'secret' agreement with Venezuela

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's environmental committee chairman accused the Clinton administration Friday of improperly allowing Venezuela to export dirty gasoline to the United States.

Taking sworn testimony from government witnesses, Sen. Max Baucus said rule changes affecting the amount of nitrogen oxides and other polluting chemicals in imported gas undermine the Clean Air Act and endanger Americans' health.

"I believe the committee has uncovered evidence that the administration made a secret, environmentally unsound agreement with Venezuela, and is attempting to minimize the public health consequences of the deal," Baucus said at a hearing. Baucus, D-Mont., chairs the Environment and Public Works Committee.

Administration officials defended a recent Environmental Protection Agency rule change as necessary under international trade agreements that require equal treatment of foreign and domestic corporations.

The complex issue involves requirements that gasoline sold in the nine U.S. cities with the worst levels of ozone pollution and 11 states that have elected to adopt the requirements be reformulated to reduce pollutants by next year.

Under the December rule, compliance for domestic producers was based on their individual 1990 levels for several pollutants, while foreign suppliers had to meet a more-stringent average baseline.

The EPA estimates that one-third of all U.S. gasoline will use new, cleaner formulas by Jan. 1.

FBI releases more Kennedy documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI has sent an additional 146,778 pages of investigative files on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy to the National Archives for public release.

The transfer included 92,245 pages of files from FBI headquarters on the investigation of Kennedy's death, 54,001 pages from the FBI's Dallas office on the investigation of assassin Lee Harvey Oswald and 532 pages from field offices on related subjects like Oswald's wife, Marina, the FBI said Friday.

The Archives plans to let the public see the new material in May. The exact date has yet to be set, said Archives spokeswoman Susan Cooper.

The bureau earlier gave the Archives 184,000 pages of headquarters files on Oswald, on the investigation of Oswald's killer, Jack Ruby, and on the investigation requested by the Warren Commission, which studies the 1963 assassination.

The latest transfer, completed Thursday, included 2,618 pages with some portions blacked out to maintain secrecy or privacy. Another 250 pages were blacked out in full.

In addition, 555 pages were withheld until another federal agency or foreign government agrees to their release. And, 53 pages were withheld because they contain Internal Revenue Service information which the act prohibits releasing.

The next planned transfer will cover Dallas field office assassination files and the remainder of the Oswald files in field offices. All of the documents are being released under the President John F. Kennedy Assassination Records Collection Act of 1992.

The FBI has assigned 90 people to process more than one million pages on the Kennedy assassination for public release. Since they began in April 1992, they have released 331,085 pages and spent more than $3 million.

Mrs. Clinton defends Whitewater actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton said Friday she had no knowledge of any money from an Arkansas savings and loan being transferred into her husband's 1994 gubernatorial campaign.

She acknowledged resisting appointment of a special counsel to investigate the first family's financial dealings.

In an extraordinary, news conference that went on for little more than an hour and was carried on the major commercial television networks, Mrs. Clinton also defended her lucrative trading in commodities futures.

Seated in a chair in the State Dining Room, Mrs. Clinton calmly fielded questions about the intricacies of her financial dealings — in both Whitewater and her commodities trading — as well as the political fallout the controversy has brought on her husband's administration.

"It has been a learning experience, sometimes a difficult one," she said. Asked if the controversy had eroded her credibility, she said, "I hope not. That would be something I would regret very much."

While patient with the questions, she said she was mystified at all the questions over a land investment that turned out to be a money loser. "We went into Whitewater to make money not to lose it," she said. "... It keeps getting beat like the dearest horse it is, over and over again."

The Whitewater investment and its relationship with the failed Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan is at the center of special counsel Robert Fiske's investigation into the Clintons' financial dealings back in Arkansas.

Fiske is investigating whether depositor funds at Madison were illegally diverted to Clinton's gubernatorial campaign or Whitewater. He was appointed in January, after weeks of White House resistance.

At the time, Mrs. Clinton was said to be among those arguing against a special counsel investigation, and Friday she acknowledged that publicly for the first time.

"But the president made the deci-

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton explains that she had no knowledge of any money from an Arkansas savings and loan being transferred into her husband's 1994 gubernatorial campaign.

sion that we had to get on with the important business that we came to Washington to do," she said. "This is not a long-term issue or a problem in any way."

The first lady conceded the White House and the Clintons' personal attorney have provided incomplete accounts of her financial dealings in the past. She attributed that to confusion and missing records, not any attempt to mislead.

"There wasn't any one person in charge of trying to get everything together," Mrs. Clinton said. "We did the best job we could trying to remember things."

Mrs. Clinton took several questions about the suicide of deputy White House counsel Vincent Foster, who had worked with her at the Rose Law Firm in Arkansas. She said she could not comment in detail on the White House handling of documents found in Foster's office because that was among the subjects of the special counsel's investigation.

But she said she was not aware that there were Whitewater and other Clinton family financial records in Foster's office "until after his death." Since then, she said she found out that Foster was helping the family's personal lawyer set up a blind trust and answer questions from the Office of Government Ethics, which handles the financial disclosure forms required of public officials.

She also said she did not believe there was any conflict in any of her legal work for companies that did business with the state while her husband was governor. And of a published report several weeks ago that she shredded Rose firm records at the Arkansas governor's mansion before moving to Washington, she said sternly: "That didn't happen."

Repeatedly, she said she did not believe she or her husband received any special treatment, either in the Whitewater investment or in her lucrative commodities trading. And she also frequently responded to questions by saying, "I'm glad you asked that," and said she was eager to clear the air, after weeks of resisting doing just that.

"There's really no evidence of that," she said when asked if she believed she got special treatment or favors from her commodities trader because her husband was Arkansas governor.

Mrs. Clinton said she quit trading in one commodities account in July 1979, not long after she learned she was pregnant because she was responsible for most of her trading decisions in that account and found it too nerve-racking.

But she said she kept a second account open at a different brokerage firm, differentiating it because she said her broker had broad discretion for those trades so it was not as stressful.

She said she did not remember her profit from that second account until recently. The White House acknowledged that profit earlier this month and the Clintons' paid back federal and state taxes, plus interest.

Mrs. Clinton made a $1,000 initial investment in the first commodities account and ultimately turned that into a nearly $100,000 profit. She acknowledged that some of her trades were ordered by James Blair, a top attorney for a poultry producer who was regulated by the Arkansas government.

Rostenkowski says universal health care will be costly

BOSTON (AP) — It will take higher taxes affecting virtually every American to raise the tens of billions of dollars a year needed for pay for universal health coverage, U.S. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski said Friday.

"Obviously, we'll try to keep this amount to an absolute minimum," the chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee said in an address at the Harvard School of Public Health.

But "we still haven't found the health fairy. And we're not terribly optimistic that we will ..."

"Everyone may have to make a tangible contribution to finance this program," the Illinois Democrat said.

He did not spell out what broad-based taxes he had in mind, but made clear he doesn't believe a cigarette tax hike alone will be enough. President Clinton has insisted that reforms could be paid for with no broad-based tax hike except a 75-cent increase in cigarette taxes.

"The American people are sophisticated enough to realize that you only get what you pay for, and if you want to get more you have to pay more," Rostenkowski told the forum.

Rostenkowski defended the idea of making employers help pay for their workers' insurance, although he promised to "do what we can to moderate the impact on smaller employers."

"They won't be totally happy with the solution we ultimately embrace," he predicted. "They may temporarily feel some pain, but they will adjust, survive and thrive."

Rostenkowski said he likes the plan adopted by a Ways and Means health subcommittee last month to expand Medicare to cover the poor, the unemployed and the underemployed. He also praised that bill's cost-containment mechanism for both the public and private sectors. That bill, fashioned by Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif., would raise the cigarette tax to $1.25 a pack.

In Washington, Clinton defended his administration's cost estimates.

"I think Mr. Rostenkowski is trying to achieve our common objectives, which he defined as universal coverage, cost control and 218 votes" for passage, Clinton said.

"I believe that our savings are good," the president said. "We always know we'd have to make some modifications once the Congressional Budget Office cost estimates came out. We are prepared to do that."

But Rostenkowski said "tweaking our tax laws and making adjustments" won't do the trick.

"It is hard to see how we can raise the needed money by simply amassing a large enough collection of cats and dogs," he said.

While the powerful chairman's ideas of health care reform still differ from Clinton's, Rostenkowski said there was a sense of urgency on Capitol Hill that assured passage of some sort of reform this year.

Stark's package has an array of concerns about Clinton's 1,342-page plan — questions about expanding the government bureaucracy, interfering with a person's right to select a doctor, and forcing employers to cover their workers.

Clinton has said he is willing to compromise as long as his basic concepts — universal care foremost — are included in the final bill. Several proposals are circulating in Washington, but a plan put forward by Rostenkowski's committee would be considered a front runner.

Kevorkian strategy called brilliant

DETROIT (AP) — A startling legal maneuver to get Dr. Jack Kevorkian acquitted on a technicality is a sham to one lawyer.

To another, it's a brilliant effort to "make the state look as foolish as possible."

Whether the strategy helps Kevorkian win his first trial for an assisted suicide has yet to be seen.

"This is a political struggle. This is not an ordinary criminal case," said Neil Fink, a Detroit lawyer.

In his opening statement Thursday, Kevorkian lawyer Geoffrey Fieger told Wayne County jurors that gravely ill Thomas Hyde didn't die on Belle Isle in Wayne County, where Kevorkian surrendered in a van carrying the body. Instead, he claimed Hyde died in neighboring Oakland County.

If true, Wayne County apparently would have no jurisdiction and Kevorkian would be acquitted or see the charge dismissed. And it appears Oakland County couldn't prosecute because that would be trying Kevorkian twice for the same crime, which is unconstitutional.

"I think the overall strategy is to make the state look as foolish as possible and so far they have succeeded," Fink said.

But Stephen Safranek, a constitutional law professor at the University of Detroit Mercy, said Fieger should be held in contempt of court.

"I think it's incredibly disingenuous for Geoffrey Fieger and Jack Kevorkian to pull this at the 11th hour," he said.

Kevorkian is accused of helping Hyde commit suicide Aug. 4 in Kevorkian's 1968 Volkswagen van on Detroit's scenic Belle Isle park. Hyde, 30, suffered from the debilitating nerve disorder Lou Gehrig's disease.

During opening statements Thursday, Fieger said Hyde actually died in the van outside Kevorkian's former apartment in Oakland County's Royal Oak. Kevorkian then drove 18 miles to Belle Isle and surrendered, Fieger said, to avoid being "beaten up by deputies in Royal Oak."

Richard M. Nixon: A man full of contradictions

By Robert S. Boyd
Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — There was nothing pastel about Richard Milhous Nixon. His life was a study in black and white, like the dark suits and crisp shirts he wore even on the sunny beaches of Key Biscayne and San Clemente.

Analysis

One of the most remarkable and controversial figures in his nation's history, the 37th president of the United States died Friday evening at New York Hospital after suffering a massive stroke on Monday He was 81.

Like the double helix of DNA in a living cell, twin strands of good and evil wound through Nixon's long career.

He rose and fell and rose again — from ambitious young congressman to the first president to be forced from office in disgrace to older statesman battling to recapture the respect of history.

On a given day, Nixon could be the foul-mouthed, manipulative, vindictive plottier revealed in the secret Watergate tapes.

Another day, he was the cool, canny master of realpolitik, who reopened the gates of China, ended the war in Vietnam and maintained an uneasy "detente" with Moscow.

His counsel was sought by later presidents, from Ronald Reagan to Bill Clinton.

Through 48 years in politics, Nixon always played hardball. His goal was to win no matter what it took — from Red-baiting in the '40s and '50s to the thinly disguised racism of the "Southern strategy" that won him the White House in 1968.

There were many victories, defeats, whiffs of impropriety and harrowing escapes along the way.

A secret fund scandal almost knocked Nixon, Dwight D. Eisenhower's choice for vice president, off the Republican ticket in 1952. But he saved himself with a mauling television speech about his wife's "Republican cloth coat" and his "little dog, Checkers."

Television was Nixon's downfall, however, in his narrow loss to John F. Kennedy in the 1960 presidential race. Kennedy's easy grace on the tube during their first TV debate was widely credited with giving the Democrat a vital boost over the haggard-looking Republican.

Trying for a comeback in 1962, Nixon lost a race for governor of California. He bitterly told reporters: "You won't have Nixon to kick around anymore, because gentlemen, this is my last press conference."

That statement turned out to be "inoperative" — like many others made later during Watergate, the disastrous attempt to cover up the White House's role in the bugging of Democratic Party headquarters during the 1972 re-election campaign.

After Kennedy's assassination and Barry Goldwater's crushing loss to Lyndon B. Johnson in 1964, Nixon re-emerged as the country's top Republican, easily displacing his arch-rival, New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, to capture the 1968 presidential nomination. He beat the Democratic candidate, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, in a savage campaign marred by racial and anti-war violence.

Once in the Oval Office, Nixon turned out to be a big-government Republican activist. He adopted price controls, created the Environmental Protection Agency, and proposed a guaranteed annual income for the poor and a universal health-care plan.

At the end of his first term, he spoke proudly about his domestic accomplishments, launching a "war on cancer," sharing federal revenues with states and cities, raising Social Security benefits by more than 50 percent, and boosting spending for mass transit, parks and the arts.

The federal budget grew by 40 percent during Nixon's 5½ years as chief executive.

"Our administration had completely changed America's spending priorities," he wrote in his memoirs. When Johnson, a Democrat, left office, defense outlays far exceeded social programs; by 1973, Nixon wrote, the opposite was true.

Nixon, a man of striking contrasts, ate wheat germ for breakfast because he thought it was good for him, but he confided in his diary that it was "such a drab and uninteresting diet."

His Supreme Court appointments included William H. Rehnquist, an arch-conservative, and Harry A. Blackmun, author of the Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion nationwide.

As a good Republican, Nixon said he was philosophically opposed to interfering with private industry by freezing wages and prices, but he decided to do it anyway during an inflationary spurt in 1971. The move was "politically necessary and immensely popular in the short run," he said. "But in the long run I believe that it was wrong."

Nixon could be sentimental, especially about his mother, his wife and his daughters. Before he fired his top White House aides, H.R. "Bob" Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, the beleaguered president said he "hoped and almost prayed that I wouldn't wake up this morning."

But he could also be coldly cynical. His initial reaction to the Watergate break-in, he wrote, was "completely pragmatic. If it was also cynical, it was a cynicism born of experience. I had been in politics too long, and seen everything from dirty tricks to vote fraud. I could not muster much moral outrage over a political bugging."

Later, however, after his pardon by President Gerald R. Ford, Nixon said Watergate "is a burden I shall bear for every day of the life that is left to me."

Although Nixon's name is doomed to be linked forever with Watergate, he was widely praised for his foreign policy achievements.

With the aid of his shrewd national security adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, Nixon tossed overboard a generation of Republican rhetoric about "Red China" and made history with his surprise visit to Beijing in February, 1972.

"We have at times in the past been enemies," Nixon toasted Mao Tse Tung at a glittering banquet in the Great Hall of the People. "This is the hour, this is the day, for our two people to rise to the heights of greatness which can build a new and better world."

Nixon also deftly handled relations with America's principal enemy, the Soviet Union. As vice president, he once had an angry "kitchen debate" with Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev, but he got along smoothly with Khrushchev's successor, Leonid I. Brezhnev.

A photo printed in Nixon's book of memoirs shows him and Brezhnev, both in shirt sleeves, chatting casually in the study of his vacation home in San Clemente, Calif. Another depicts the two world leaders smiling on a boat in the Black Sea in June 1974, six weeks before Nixon's resignation.

Along with the China trip, Nixon regarded the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT) that he negotiated with Brezhnev as his major accomplishment.

His record in Vietnam was mixed. Although he ran for president on a

'This is the hour, this is the day, for our two people to rise to the heights of greatness which can build a new and better world.'

— Richard M. Nixon, toasting Mao Tse Tung

pledge to end the war, it took him five years and reputed bombing campaigns to bring about a peace treaty. Less than a year after he left office, the treaty was broken, and the North overran the South.

Opposition to the war permeated Nixon's presidency and contributed to his downfall. A secret White House investigative team — nicknamed "the Plumbers," because they were supposed to stop leaks — was the predecessor of the ill-fated Watergate busters.

After his landslide 49-state re-election in 1972, Nixon pondered what people voted for him in such overwhelming numbers but didn't seem to like him personally.

"It is obvious that we have to get across more of what (presidential scholar) Clinton Rossiter has called 'affability,'" he told his diary. "The staff just hasn't been able to get it across."

Nixon admired toughness. Early in the Watergate affair, he praised White House counsel John Dean, who later betrayed him, for having "the kind of steel and really mean instinct that we needed."

And he was tough himself, rising repeatedly from defeat to re-enter what he called, in his most recent book of reminiscences, "the arena."

"I have never been a quitter," Nixon said the night he announced his resignation.

Indeed, after five years of brooding exile in San Clemente, the battered old fighter returned to the East Coast in 1980 and launched the latest in his long series of comebacks. He wrote books, gave speeches, traveled abroad and gradually won back a measure of the respect he had lost.

But in later years he seemed stoic about his mixed place in history, saying it was his philosophy never to look back.

"I came to accept Watergate and the resignation simply as one major defeat in a career that involved both victories and losses, both peaks and valleys," he said.

Nixon was born on Jan. 9, 1913, in Yorba Linda, Calif. He is survived by two daughters, Julie Eisenhower and Tricia Cux. His wife, Thelma Catherine Ryan Nixon, nicknamed Pat, died of cancer last year.

Robert S. Boyd, senior correspondent in Knight-Ridder News Service Washington bureau, covered Nixon's career as president, including his trip to China and his final departure from the South Lawn of the White House.

Serbs' ceasefire on Gorazde set to take effect today

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serbs agreed to a ceasefire around the embattled town of Gorazde on Friday, hours after NATO warned them to stop shooting at force air strikes.

Yasushi Akashi, the senior U.N. official in former Yugoslavia, said the ceasefire would take effect at noon (4 a.m. MDT) Saturday.

Serb gunners earlier in the day persisted in their three-week offensive against the U.N.-declared "safe haven." More than 500 people have died in the attack.

It was not immediately known whether the ceasefire had been fully implemented following the truce accord.

Under the accord reached in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Bosnian Serbs also agreed to withdraw their heavy weapons to a range that runs through the town, and to allow for immediate medical evacuations and free movement of U.N. soldiers in the enclave.

Although countless cease-fires have been quickly broken in Bosnia's two-year war, there was some hope that this truce would last.

The terms of the cease-fire seemed to meet most of the demands issued by NATO. As well, a similar NATO threat in February concerning Sarajevo led to a cease-fire agreement that was generally held in the capital.

The NATO ultimatum, issued at a meeting in Brussels, Belgium, demanded an immediate cease-fire and then gave the Serbs until 8 p.m. EDT Saturday to withdraw their forces 1.9 miles from the center of the town and allow U.N. peacekeepers and medical personnel into the enclave. By early Wednesday, the Serbs were to have moved back 12.5 miles.

The agreement was reached in hours of talks in the Yugoslav capital with Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and his military commander Gen. Ratko Mladic.

"We have positively responded to the initiatives of full accession of hostilities," Karadzic said. He said

Bosnian Serbs and the United Nations were "back on the track of full understanding."

Akashi said that the Serbs had also agreed to fully restore normal relations with the United Nations. The Serbs had broken off contacts with the United Nations, and restricted movements of some of its troops after NATO planes bombed Bosnian Serb positions around Gorazde to protect peacekeepers April 10-11.

The Serbs have been pounding the town relentlessly, moving their tanks into Gorazde and shelling day after day. Aid workers, doctors and local officials have told of terror, death and destruction in the town.

Reports from Gorazde remained grim Friday evening, with heavy shelling reported even several hours after NATO's ultimatum was issued.

Cmdr. Eric Chapron, a U.N. peacekeeping spokesman, said in Sarajevo that a building used by the small U.N. staff in Gorazde was hit by three tank rounds. Kris Janowski, a U.N. aid spokesman, said three people were killed and three wounded close to the U.N. building.

He reported that 59 people were

A convoy of United Nations trucks carrying humanitarian aid waits on the Bosnian government side of Sarajevo to cross to the Serb side with aid for them. Above, NATO Supreme Allied Commander Gen. George Joulwan, right, and Field Marshall Sir Richard Vincent take part in NATO meeting Friday in Brussels, Belgium.

143 and 143 wounded in Gorazde between 8 a.m. and 8:45 p.m. Friday.

"Greetings from a city where only the dead are lucky," said a report from U.N. aid workers in Gorazde.

"This city is definitely disappearing in the ruins, together with all citizens," amateur radio reporter Enes Musovic told Bosnian government radio.

A day earlier, a hospital building was hit, killing 28 people. Scores more were killed elsewhere in town.

Reports suggested that Serbs were moving deeper into the town. When Bosnian Premier Haris Silajdzic informed his citizens about the new NATO ultimatum over Bosnian radio, he was asked if it came too late: "For the dead, it was too late. For those who are still alive, it is still not too late. I share this decision and I hope it will be fulfilled."

But in Washington, President Clinton applauded the NATO move, saying: "The Bosnian Serbs should not doubt NATO's willingness to act."

In related developments, a convoy of 100 U.N. peacekeepers and 41 medics en route to Gorazde was ordered back to Sarajevo.

However, Serbs at first refused to allow it to return but then gave clearance, said Chapron. The U.N. peacekeeping spokesman.

The convoy set out Thursday from Sarajevo but was blocked overnight north of the city by about 60 Serb women protesting the detention of Serb prisoners of war in Gorazde.

Despite the tension over Gorazde, U.N. officials resumed the humanitarian air lift to Sarajevo, where planes began landing Friday morning.

Flights had been suspended early last week for security reasons after NATO jets launched limited strikes against Serbs around Gorazde.

Bosnia's minority Serbs, armed by the federal Yugoslav army, launched the war two years ago when they rebelled against a Muslim-Croat vote for independence from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia. More than 200,000 people have been killed or are missing.

As election nears, Mandela tells businesses ANC wants stability

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Trading on the stock exchange stopped for 15 minutes Friday while Nelson Mandela assured shirt-sleeved stockbrokers that an African National Congress government would seek economic stability.

Mandela's message came three days before an election expected to make him South Africa's first black president and propel the ANC, a liberation movement allied with the South African Communist Party, into government.

As Mandela spoke, the big board behind him displayed a rand price of $3.60. The South African currency has held steady in recent days, in part because of growing confidence the transition from apartheid to democracy will be peaceful.

"I am interested in economic stability in this country," Mandela said in a speech on the exchange floor, filled with about 200 stockbrokers, most of them white.

He assured his subdued audience that the days of ANC-led strikes and boycotts — part of its struggle against apartheid — were ending. "Mass action was the weapon of people who had no vote," he said.

Shouts of "Viva Mandela!" drifted onto the floor from the lobby, where hundreds of ANC supporters had gathered as word spread that Mandela was inside.

"We believe there is a future for South Africa," said Francois Tolken, chairman of the stock exchange.

Tolken said the recent entry into the election of the Inkatha Freedom Party had raised hopes for a peaceful vote. The Zulu nationalist party has been locked in a bloody rivalry with the ANC, but security officials say the violence began to decrease soon after the boycott ended.

The run-up to next week's election has been marked by strikes by civil servants worried they will lose their pensions when the government changes — a concern the ANC has said is unfounded.

The ANC is the heavy favorite to win the election that begins Tuesday, the first to include South Africa's black majority.

"There are prophets of doom who say that after the results of the election are announced, Africans in particular will destroy property, attack

South African President F. W. de Klerk campaigns in central Cape Town Friday. Voters go to the polls Tuesday in the country's first all-race election.

human beings," Mandela said. "Those who have followed our policy generally ... will dismiss those rumors without hesitation."

Mandela defended the ANC's reconstruction and development plan, which some business leaders contend calls for too much government intervention and says too little about how to pay-for-promised new homes, schools and roads.

The plan is "based on common sense, and the only criteria is whether it can address the needs of South Africans," Mandela said. "Government ... has an important role: to create an environment in which business can thrive."

Elsewhere, Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi began an ambitious tour to cover as much of South Africa as possible in the few days he has to campaign. He announced Tuesday that Inkatha would participate in the election.

Buthelezi was three hours late for an appearance in Thandukhanya, a squallid black community about 190 miles southwest of Johannesburg.

He spoke in English, which virtually none of his 1,200 listeners understood. But they jubilantly waved clubs, spears and other traditional Zulu weapons anyway.

Agencies blast U.N. pullout

NAIROBI—Kenya—(AP)—Private aid groups reacted bitterly Friday to the U.N. decision to pull out nearly all its peacekeepers from Rwanda, saying the retreat is sure to cause even worse suffering.

The Organization of African Unity, meanwhile, said the decision could be taken as "a sign of indifference or lack of sufficient concern" for Africans.

"We are appalled at the hypocrisy of the international community," said Abiy Hailu of Christian Aid, a London charity. "They have pledged humanitarian assistance to the victims of the fighting in Rwanda and then taken a step which ensures that none of this emergency aid will reach those who need it."

Hailu and others strongly criticized the unanimous decision by the U.N. Security Council late Thursday to cut the number of peacekeepers in the Central African nation from 1,700 to 270, a tenth of the force's former size of 2,500.

The decision came after repeated failures by the U.N. force to mediate a halt to ethnic fighting and massacres that may have killed 100,000 people and sent hundreds of thousands more fleeing for their lives the past two weeks.

"We are outraged at this short-sighted, callous decision," said David Bryer, a director of Oxfam, a British-Irish humanitarian agency.

He said the withdrawal of the U.N. troops from Rwanda's capital, Kigali, would rob thousands of civilians of what little security they have from the bloodletting between the Hutu and Tutsi ethnic groups.

"It was bitterly ironic that the Rwanda decision was made on the same day that the Security Council voted to do much more to try to protect the citizens of Goradze" from attacks by Bosnian Serb forces, Bryer said.

In New York, U.N. spokesman Joe Sills said about 1,000 of the peacekeepers were expected to be flown out by Saturday.

Officials of private and U.N. aid agencies met in Nairobi on Friday to decide how — and if — they could get relief supplies into Rwanda without protection. But it was clear any large-scale humanitarian effort would have to be put on hold until a semblance of peace returned.

"We'll continue to prepare for the point at which there is a respite," said Steve Wallace of CARE International. "The Rwandan people at some point just have to throw in the towel."

Wallace noted that since the capital erupted in bloodshed two weeks ago, very little emergency aid had reached Kigali — a small truck convoy and a single plane load of medical supplies and food provided by the Red Cross, Doctors Without Borders and the U.N. Children's Fund.

Later Friday, the International Red Cross in Geneva said another convoy carrying Red Cross doctors and medicine had reached Kigali.

Mogadishu fighting rages over 7th day

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — The bodies of seven Somalis were found in a public square Friday morning as fighting between two sub-clans surged for the seventh day around Mogadishu's airport.

The United Nations, which has had two peacekeepers killed and two wounded in crossfire from the battles, said at least eight Somalis have been killed and nearly 90 wounded.

Somali sources put the death toll at more than 20. It was not clear whether the seven bodies found Friday at 21 October Square in southern Mogadishu were connected to the fighting between the Habre Gedir and Hawadle sub-clans.

The fighting closed Mogadishu's airport to all traffic Thursday after a mortar round and a grenade landed on one of its aircraft parking ramps.

Maj. Asif Iqbal, a U.N. military spokesman, said the explosions caused no injuries or damage. The United Nations controls the airport, a major logistics base for its 19,000 peacekeepers in Somalia.

Both sides in the conflict have been seen using "technical," civilian vehicles mounted with machine guns and other heavy weapons that used to be prohibited by the United Nations.

Before their withdrawal in March, American and other Western soldiers in the peacekeeping force fired on such vehicles on sight, even if they were not immediately threatened.

Russian investigators say Chernobyl plant should be closed

MOSCOW (AP) — An investigation into the 1986 Chernobyl disaster has uncovered new evidence of faulty reactor design and construction and the Ukrainian plant should be shut down, a Russian investigator said Friday.

Boris Uvarov, a senior investigator of the Prosecutor General's office, said Russia cannot tell Ukraine what to do, but that the latest evidence showing the plant should be closed had been sent to officials in Kiev.

Chernobyl's reactor No. 4 exploded on April 26, 1986, releasing a cloud of radioactive particles. The explosion killed at least 32 people and thousands more may have died from radiation exposure. The accident contaminated a huge area and forced the evacuation of tens of thousands of people.

In the northern Russian city of Vologda, residents who took part in the cleanup after the explosion announced a hunger strike beginning Monday, the eighth anniversary of the disaster, to press for larger pensions.

Uvarov has been investigating the aftermath of the disaster since 1991.

'Scud-buster' missile units begin Korea mission

OSAN AIR BASE, Korea (AP) — U.S. Patriot missiles arriving in South Korea will be ready for firing within a week, Defense Secretary William Perry said Thursday.

He also said North Korea could be ready soon to remove enough plutonium from a reactor to build four or five nuclear bombs.

Perry said "there is no imminent danger" of war but it is vital that North Korea permit international inspection of its nuclear activities.

U.S. views latest nuclear drama as modest gain

ELMENDORF AFB, Alaska (AP) — The Clinton administration sees no sign that North Korea is ready to abandon its nuclear program but is encouraged by new signs of progress in settling a standoff over inspections.

Defense Secretary William Perry said he was pleased that North Korea will allow inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency to be present when it unloads fuel rods from its small nuclear reactor at Yongbyon.

But he called North Korea's indication that it would allow IAEA inspectors to enter the reactor area when the defueling takes place.

The United States and South Korea want the North to abandon its nuclear program in accordance with a 1991 North-South agreement to denuclearize the Korean peninsula. The North Koreans maintain their nuclear reactor is strictly for power generation and research, and that they are not using it to make bombs.

Perry said he expected North Korea to unload the spent fuel in its reactor in a couple of weeks. That is a key event because without full IAEA supervision of the fuel unloading process, vital information about the disputed history of North Korea's nuclear program will be lost.

The IAEA suspects North Korea gained more plutonium from fuel rods in the past than it has admitted. Plutonium is a key ingredient in the manufacture of nuclear warheads.

Senior U.S. officials traveling with Perry, speaking on condition they not be identified, said it seemed likely that Washington and Pyongyang would resume direct contacts — but not negotiations — on nuclear issues in New York soon.

In a speech in Tokyo to the Foreign Correspondents Club of Japan, Perry said the dangers of a nuclear-armed North Korea went beyond the question of whether it would actually use a nuclear bomb.

Perry noted that North Korean leader Kim Il Sung recently denied he intended to build any nuclear weapons.

Perry spent two days in Korea with South Korean and American officials — and then with troops.

One of the U.S. soldiers here, Capt. David Cole, was sent to the Persian Gulf when the Army's Patriot air defense system made its combat debut but says he's sure it would perform well in Korea.

Cole, of Jefferson City, Tenn., is commander of C-Battery, 2nd Battalion of the 7th Air Defense Artillery, which — along with five other Patriot batteries — arrived in South Korea this week and began setting up for operations.

"I'm confident in the system, that it works," Cole told reporters who watched Thursday as the unit oriented the Patriot's radar in its new position about 50 miles south of Seoul.

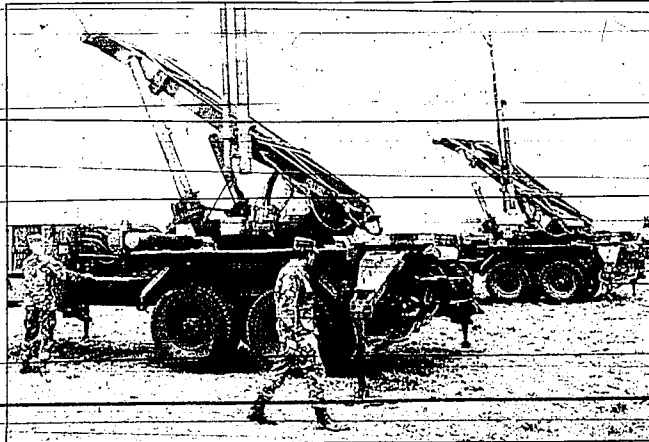

Perry told reporters after visiting a Patriot unit at Suwon Air Base, near here, that the system would be ready for use within a week.

Later, aboard the plane en route to Tokyo, Perry said he had been briefed by Patriot commanders on their preparations to defend Osan and two other sites in South Korea in the event North Korea fired Scud missiles at the South.

At an earlier news conference, Perry rejected suggestions that sending Patriots to South Korea had worsened tensions with the North.

"It is a purely defensive system," Perry said. "It is a system that has no offensive capability at all and it is a part of a regular modernization program. It has been planned, actually, for several years and there's no reason to withdraw it. It's not here because of the (North's) nuclear weapon program."

U.S. Army Gen. Gary Luck, commander of U.S. forces in

Two Patriot missile launchers at Osan Air Base wait for deployment as the first shipment for South Korean defense.

South Korea, had requested Patriots last December and the Clinton administration was ready to send them. But South Korea balked out of concern that it might upset U.S. talks with North Korea on nuclear inspections.

After an agreed-upon inspection of nuclear facilities was cut short by North Korea in March, the South agreed to go ahead with the Patriot deployment.

The Patriot battalion setting up in South Korea saw action in Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War, although Cole and many other members of his unit were not there.

The Army has defended the Patriots against criticism that they were far less successful in destroying Iraqi Scud missile warheads than the U.S. military initially claimed. Some who have studied available evidence of Patriot firings contend they probably destroyed no Scud warheads, although they gave at least the impression of a viable missile defense.

Cole, when asked about the Patriot's Gulf War performance, noted that it was originally designed to shoot down hostile aircraft, not missiles. "Its antismissile capability is just one more capability that's been developed," Cole said, adding that no one considers it foolproof.

North Korea's Scud missiles have enough range to hit almost anywhere in South Korea.

Israeli troops arrest Islamic activists

JERUSALEM — Israeli troops arrested Islamic activists in the West Bank town of Hebron Friday, even as Palestinian exiles belonging to the PLO returned in triumph to the occupied Gaza Strip.

Armed underground cells loyal to the militant Hamas movement and the PLO announced a truce in Gaza. The two groups renounced "disputes and bloody conflicts" that have plagued their relations and agreed to put the killing of Arab collaborators on hold for a month.

The two groups issued their joint leaflet in defiance of Israel's threat earlier this week not to implement autonomy if the PLO cooperates with Hamas or other groups that are killing Israelis. The Fatah Hawks, armed units of the mainstream PLO group, have been increasingly at odds with the PLO's political leaders because Israeli troops have killed some of their members.

Russia, Ukraine agree to fleet release

KIEV, Ukraine — Russia and Ukraine tentatively agreed Friday to turn over 80 percent of the prized Black Sea Fleet to Russia, but they remained at odds over where the navies should be based.

The future of the fleet, the crown jewel of the former Soviet navy, has been one of the main sources of tension between the two countries since the Soviet collapse in December 1991.

Under an accord signed April 15 by Presidents Boris Yeltsin of Russia and Leonid Kravchuk of Ukraine, details of the fleet division are to be worked out by Monday. The pact then must be ratified by the two nations' parliaments — a step that has derailed three previous agreements.

Friday's tentative agreement was reached between Russian and Ukrainian defense ministers after two days of talks in Sevastopol, the fleet's current headquarters.

Cuba promises better ties with exiles

HAVANA, Cuba — Cuba began a historic dialogue Friday with the exiles it once scorned, opening a conference with promises to improve ties between the Communist state and Cubans abroad.

Foreign Minister Roberto Robaina praised the 204 Cuban exiles who decided to attend the meeting for their "maturity, strength, independence."

The conference brought together top government officials, Cubans who once took up arms against Fidel Castro's government and other exiles who have long favored a less hostile stance toward the socialist state.

Castro's government hopes overtures to the exiles will help end the U.S. embargo of the island. Opposition to the embargo was the only political requirement Cuba placed on participation in the meeting.

Clinton seeks backing for Haiti embargo

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration, shifting direction on Haiti, will seek U.N. backing for a strangulation embargo but will continue to turn back Haitian refugees who try to reach U.S. shores by boat, officials said Friday.

Although the Coast Guard on Friday brought ashore a boatload of Haitians intercepted off the Florida coast, President Clinton insisted that does not represent a change in the repatriation policy.

"The whole purpose of the return policy is primarily to deter people from risking their lives," he said, endorsing the policy inherited from the Bush administration.

After several weeks of reviewing what he has acknowledged was an unsuccessful strategy toward Haiti, Clinton decided to push for a United Nations resolution for a full embargo. The White House said it would cover everything except food and humanitarian aid.

Candidate plans to meet guerrillas

MEXICO CITY — The opposition's top presidential candidate, Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, says he will travel to southern Mexico to talk with the leader of an armed rebellion, a published report said Friday.

"I'm hoping to go in mid-May," Cardenas was quoted as telling the Mexico City newspaper Reforma, although no exact date was given for an encounter with the guerrilla leader Subcomandante Marcos.

Carlos Salinas de Gortari barely won a majority in 1988 to capture the presidency and defeat Cardenas, who is running again, as candidate of the left-leaning Democratic Revolution Party.

Japanese group backs Hata for next prime minister

TOKYO (AP) — Even as Japan's ruling coalition announced its decision to back Tsutomu Hata as Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa's successor, the question was being raised: Can he last?

Putting aside two weeks of bickering, the coalition's seven blocs agreed Friday to throw their votes behind Hata when Parliament chooses a new prime minister Monday. Hata currently serves as foreign minister and deputy prime minister.

Because the coalition controls a narrow majority of seats in Parliament's lower house, its support will assure Hata of the post. He is expected to form a new Cabinet soon afterward.

Hata, who is also head of the coalition's second-largest party and has been a member of Parliament since 1969, took the nomination with characteristic humility.

"I am a truly inexperienced person, and I tell you frankly that I have hesitated about taking a whole country on my shoulders," he said. "I accept this nomination with trepidation."

Understandably so.

Since Hosokawa's sudden resignation April 8, Japan's political world has been in near chaos and its ruling coalition more fractious than ever. Hosokawa, who resigned because of a scandal over his personal finances, was in office less than nine months.

Although Hata emerged almost immediately as the leading candidate to replace Hosokawa, the coalition nearly fell apart as its leaders haggled through 27 meetings.

The leaders of the coalition parties said they will cooperate in helping Hata get this year's national budget through Parliament quickly. The fiscal year began three weeks ago.

After that, Hata faces a June deadline on two issues that stymied Hosokawa — deciding on a new tax system and fending off U.S. trade sanctions with some kind of market-opening package.

Can anyone spare $1.50?

Dancer Baryshnikov boosts Detroit theatre

DETROIT (AP) — The cash-strapped Metropolitan Ballet Theatre is getting a boost from Mikhail Baryshnikov.

Profits from two upcoming performances by Baryshnikov's contemporary dance company will go to the Detroit-area's only professional ballet company.

"This is an effort on the dance world's part to make this company succeed," said company co-founder Brad Stroud, who went to New York to ask Baryshnikov for his help.

Despite two well-received fall productions, money problems forced the company to cancel two shows, including an April performance of "Giselle." The company's 26 dancers were laid off and its artistic director resigned.

Baryshnikov's White Oak Project troupe performs July 8-9.

Jordan's short-changed while shooting commercial BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Multimillionaire Michael Jordan had to burn $1.50 when it came time to buy a hot dog.

The empty pockets embarrassed him Thursday while Jordan was filming a TV ad. The script called for him to buy a wiener from a vendor, but when cameras were ready to roll, Jordan was out of cash.

"We were scurrying around. 'Anybody have change here?'" said actor Sam Coppola, who played the vendor. "We got a dollar-fifty, and it wasn't easy."

The retired basketball star spent the day shooting the Ball Park Franks commercial before playing a game with the minor league baseball Birmingham Barons.

Former president Carter vacations with Ted Turner

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter headed west for a fishing weekend with Ted Turner and his wife, Jane Fonda.

Carter arrived in town Thursday wearing cowboy boots and blue jeans, accompanied by his wife, Rosalynn. He said he was ready for some serious relaxation.

"We're here to visit and do a little fly-fishing and maybe look at some birds," Carter said.

The Carters planned to visit Turner and Fonda at their ranch near Truth or Consequences.

Actress Tilly writes novel as well as performing

NEW YORK (AP) — Meg Tilly, star of the TV series "Winnetka Road," also has more than act.

Tilly, whose film credits include "Tex," "The Big Chill" and "Agnes of God," also has a book due out soon titled "Singing Songs."

"The reason I wrote the novel is I was reading about child abuse, and it was from an adult's point of view," she told Parade Magazine for this Sunday's issue. "I wanted to do something from a child's point of view."

Tilly, 34, is the mother of three children, ages 3 to 9.

Los Angeles lawyer holding on to television license plate

FOUNTAIN VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — NBC is taking "L.A. Law" off the air, but no one's taking the LA LAW license plate off Michael Wright's red Camaro.

"It's riveted, actually," Wright said. "It takes about 5,000 pounds of torque to take it off."

Wright, who practices law in this Los Angeles suburb without famous clients or a skyscraper view, owns the real version of the LA LAW plate made famous in the opening sequence of the TV show.

Los Angeles lawyer Richard

Niederberg had the plate on his motor home before the show's 1986 debut but sold it to Wright in 1989 for $500 because it kept getting stolen.

Craig Binkley, the "L.A. Law" property master, was less concerned about the plate's whereabouts.

"Can't worry about those kind of things now," he said. "It's all over." The last new episode of "L.A. Law" will run on May 19. Low ratings led the cancellation of the Emmy-winning show after eight seasons.

Nude shower dancing ruled discriminatory for disabled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — No more nude shower dancing at the Odd Ball Cabaret. Not because it's lewd — because it discriminates against women in wheelchairs.

The city's disabled access commission ruled 4-0 Thursday that the Odd Ball must close its shower dancing stall. The strip club had argued that the shower was a prop, not a stage.

"If an able-bodied person could have been up there doing it, a disabled person should have been able to, also," said Ron Shingeta, chief of the Department of Building and Safety's disabled access division. "That's what it comes down to — you're denying people the opportunity."

Odd Ball owner Alfred Reebich wouldn't comment on the order. But some of his customers said the city was stretching the rule to crack down on strip clubs.

Heughins' parole in doubt

The Associated Press

BOISE - Amid public outcry, the state parole commission announced Friday that it will reconsider releasing a man who in 1974 killed his estranged wife and two in-laws in Jerome.

Pardons and Parole Director Olivia Cravens said the tentative October parole date for Charles Heughins, 67, will be formally reviewed at the commission's July session.

That decision came after a state senator said the parole should be denied, calling it "outrageous and dangerous."

A former guard at the prison also said Heughins stabbed him with a ballpoint pen in 1990, a claim that would counter the commission's understanding that Heughins had a good prison record over the past four or five years.

"If there was recent violence, the commission was not aware of it," Cravens said. "That is something else we're going to investigate."

The commission had intended to give Heughins the next six months to adjust to being released in the Boise area, where his children live. He has served 20 years behind bars for murdering his ex-wife, her sister and their father in 1974.

But Republican state Sen. Roger Madsen of Boise petitioned the Gov. Cecil Andrus, Attorney General Larry Echols, Board of Corrections and the commission to block the parole. He personally talked to commissioners during their Friday session at the main state prison south of Boise.

"A true murderer, model prisoner or not, should stay in prison forever," Madsen said. "Unleashing a 67-year-old family killer onto an unsuspecting community is an incomprehensible travesty of justice."

Because of the nature of the crime, Heughins should have been sentenced to death, Madsen said. He escaped that penalty by agreeing to plead guilty to lesser murder charges.

Valley celebrates Earth Day

ANTELOPE SPRING - John Biar led a troop of fourth-graders clad in knee-high rubber boots along the soggy, muddy banks of a spring Friday, showing the youngsters how to plant sprigs of cottonwoods, dogwoods and coyote willows.

"Ready to get all muddy?" asked Biar, range conservationist for the Bureau of Land Management. "We're going to plant stuff that used to be here and let it grow again."

As part of their Earth Day celebration, Castleford Elementary School students were invited to plant new trees around Antelope Spring, an archeological site and the primary water source for a nearby ranch about 1/2 miles west of the Salmon Falls Creek Dam near Rogerson on public land.

"We're doing this and studying Idaho history," said Susan Ambrose, a fourth-grade teacher at Castleford Elementary School. "It all goes together."

The tree-planting project was the idea of rancher Chet Brackett, of Brackett Cattle Co., who wanted to include children in his effort at rehabilitating the over-grazed land that borders part of the spring.

"It's a lot more relevant to get kids involved locally than in something thousands of miles away," Brackett said.

Last summer, Brackett and the BLM drew a contract to fence off 10 to 15 acres around the spring to repair the negative effects of over-grazing. BLM supplied the fencing; Brackett supplied the manpower.

Brackett said he noticed the "problem area" when in 1989 he became the grazing permittee of the 50,000 or so acres that include the spring, but he didn't immediately correct it because it was the only source of water for his cattle.

"Looked like a cattle feed yard - stubs of green and a muddy stream," Brackett said.

The Antelope Spring project was made possible by a 25-mile network of underground water pipes that reaches north to other grazing ranges.

"The idea is to get water to places where there's forage," Biar said. Last year the BLM and Brackett developed a grazing plan that allows cattle to drink out of troughs miles away from the source and rest pastures for a year or more.

Wendell students plant wetlands sedges

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - In the hot sun, with mud between their toes and water to their knees, students from Wendell were having a great day away from school Thursday.

"They've done a lot of work for us," said Cindy Lunte of The Nature Conservancy as she watched about 150 fourth and fifth grade students shovel mud and plant flats of fat blade Nebraska sedge grasses.

"We couldn't have gotten all these planted without the kids' help," she said.

The students were helping with a water quality improvement project that is a joint effort of The Nature Conservancy, The Northside Canal Company, The Soil Conservation Service and the Gooding Soil Conservation District.

The University of Idaho will monitor water quality and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service provided $18,000 to pay for the plants and other expenses.

Lunte said the conservancy bought the 12 acres above the canyon just east of the Thousand Springs Preserve. This winter, the canal company used dug some filter strip channels and a

Commission rules in coke burning plant's favor

By William Brock
Times-News writer

MOUNTAIN HOME - A coke-burning power plant proposed upwind of Twin Falls and the Magic Valley has received a favorable ruling from the state Public Utilities Commission.

The commission has ordered Idaho Power Co. to follow current rules when negotiating with the company building the plant near Mountain Home.

In 1992, Rosebud Enterprises complained that Idaho Power wasn't negotiating in good faith to buy power from the proposed 40-megawatt power plant, according to a news release from the PUC.

If approved, the Rosebud plant would burn a sulphurous by-product from oil refineries in Montana. Prevailing westerly winds would blow emissions from the plant into the Magic Valley; sulphur dioxide is a primary by-product of petroleum-coke combustion.

The Rosebud facility would be recognized as a small power production facility, and Idaho Power would be obligated to buy the smaller firm's power at "avoided cost" rates, the PUC said. Avoided costs are expenses and investments that a company avoids by not building new facilities.

There are several ways to calculate avoided costs rates, and the method used by Idaho Power was not approved by the PUC, the agency said.

PUC Commissioner Ralph Nelson dissented from the majority decision - and chided both power companies, for their actions.

"I agree with the majority that Idaho Power's negotiating technique in this case has been far from exemplary," Nelson said. "Unlike the majority, however, I am equally convinced that the same observation applies to Rosebud ..."

Nelson maintained that Rosebud "was"

Twin Falls Sheriff keep looking into burglaries

TWIN FALLS - Sheriff's investigators expect to arrest three more people in two burglaries that occurred April 13, and investigators say the burglaries might be related to other burglaries in the county, Twin Falls and Filer.

A 14-year-old was arrested in the two burglaries and then released to his mother on April 15. The burglaries took place in the neighborhood of 2700 East and 3600 North in Twin Falls County.

Twin Falls County sheriff's Sgt. Bob Gauthier said the burglaries showed a "direct indication of local gang member" involvement. Graffiti was painted on one of two houses in the burglaries.

Within nine days of these burglaries, two others were committed in the same area along with property destruction that amounts to a felony, Gauthier said.

The investigation is continuing.

Man pleads guilty to rape

TWIN FALLS — Leland Ertay Dunnagan pleaded guilty Friday to raping a 16-year-old girl in June 1991.

Dunnagan, 35, had faced three counts of lewd and lascivious conduct.

The girl said Dunnagan had impregnated her and that she bore the child. DNA tests showed a 99 percent probability that he was the father, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor G. Richard Bevan.

But Dunnagan still will not admit the child is his, Bevan said.

Dunnagan had been living in Colorado since the charges were filed, but was brought back to Idaho in early January when Colorado authorities learned he was wanted in Idaho.

Beitelspacher, EchoHawk criss-cross Eastern Idaho

The Associated Press

The two top Democrats running for the Idaho governor nomination in the May 24 primary both campaigned in eastern Idaho Thursday night — separately.

At Pocatello, a feisty Ron Beitelspacher continued to hammer on Attorney General Larry EchoHawk for failing to show up at a debate last month.

At Idaho Falls, a fund-raising event featuring Brigham Young football coach LaVell Edwards.

"My opponent is at a fundraiser," Beitelspacher told about 30 people at a forum sponsored by the Eastern Idaho Press Club and Idaho State University Issues and Speakers.

"I'm here. That ought to send some kind of clear message to the people of southeastern Idaho."

Edwards' campaign officials had originally said the attorney general would meet Beitelspacher at the forum. They canceled due to the scheduling conflict.

The third Democratic-looking nomination is perennial candidate David Stephens of Lewiston.

"Larry has been in Bannock County and talked with the people there about the issues on numerous occasions," said campaign manager Stan Kress. "Any indication that he hasn't been there and doesn't care about the people of Bannock County is extremely false."

Beitelspacher reiterated his opposition to expanding an Air Force training range near Mountain Home and the $150 million property tax relief bill approved by the Legislature but vetoed by the governor.

To give property tax relief, he proposes expanding the sales tax to unprocessed services.

At Idaho Falls, the fund-raiser sponsored by Melaleuca Chief Frank Vanderloot, was long on resources, including a cavernous ballroom with seating for hundreds and an eight-piece band.

Dozens of rows of empty seats magnified a shortage of budies.

Kress estimated the event would generate at least a couple thousand dollars, based on reports that 150 people took part. A firm count won't be known until Monday, Kress said.

"It wasn't as much as we hoped," he said.

No more than 80 people attended at any one time, although Vanderloot suggested up to 270.

"About a third were Republicans, Vanderloot said.

"Our intent was not to fill any rooms but to let people meet Larry personally and we feel that was a tremendous success," Vanderloot said.

Edwards made the most of it. "It looks like the county convention of Democrats in Utah County," he quipped.

The veteran coach talked about winning past BYU players and anecdotes about EchoHawk's prowess as a Cougar defensive back from 1966-1970. Edwards was defensive coach at the time.

He said he has resisted requests to help in political campaigns, but was "more than pleased" to support EchoHawk.

"No question in my mind Larry EchoHawk will become the next governor of the state of Idaho and he will do a great job," said Edwards.

Edwards said what he learned under Edwards was critical in his success. The lesson was that success depended not solely on desire to win, but the will to prepare.

"I'm here tonight because of the imprint he had on me," EchoHawk said.

The Pocatello forum also featured exchanges between state Sen. Mary Lloyd, DePocchetto, and the man she is trying to replace as Bannock County clerk, Larry Ghan.

Ghan said the clerk's office was a mess when he took over in 1983, and he's brought it a long way toward respectability. Lloyd said he promised to install a records management system then but people are still waiting for it.

"Most certainly, we're always looking at the addition of officers," said Boise Police Chief Larry Paulson. "In the past, though, attention to police has been given to those departments that have significant problems with crime, like an established gang situation."

"But we're proactive as a community, and there doesn't seem to be a lot of money for productivity."

The passed Thursday would provide for 50,000 more community police officers nationwide.

It also would demand life imprisonment of three-time violent and drug offenders, and allow defendants facing the death penalty to use racial statistics on capital punishment as evidence of discrimination.

"I believe that this measure is the best-thing bill to come out of the House of Representatives in many years," LaRocco said. "It is a tough, tough bill."

LaRocco said he liked some parts of the bill.

"But in the final analysis, I believed this bill will virtually eliminate the imposition of capital punishment," he said in a statement Friday.

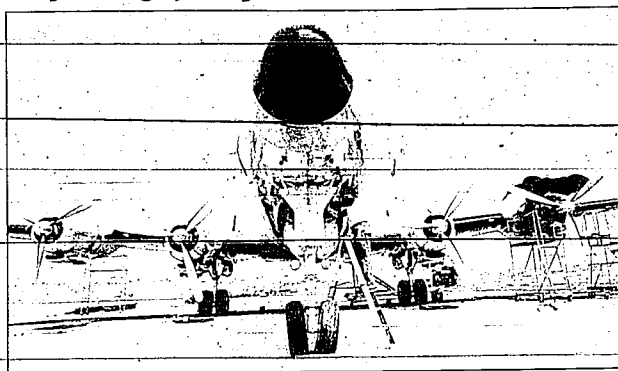

He disliked the racial quota provision.

"Instead of focusing on the particular facts of the case and whether the individual defendant committed the charged offense, the sentence outcome will turn on statistics collected in other, unrelated capital cases," he said. That runs against the constitutional requirement that each defendant be sentenced on the specific facts of his or her crime.

Crapo said it could require re-opening most Death Row cases.

Crime legislation could have big effect on police officer numbers

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's congressmen have divided over the $28 billion crime bill passed by the House Thursday night, with Republican Michael Crapo voting against it and Democrat Larry LaRocco supporting it.

Idaho authorities said it's too early to predict the impact it will have in the state.

"Most certainly, we're always looking at the addition of officers," said Boise Police Chief Larry Paulson. "In the past, though, attention to police has been given to those departments that have significant problems with crime, like an established gang situation."

Drawdown impact statement favors gatewell system on dam

The Associated Press

A draft environmental assessment of a proposed 1996 drawdown of Lower Granite Reservoir on the Snake River favors installation of a new tank system to gauge the effect of the drawdown on salmon survival.

The draft statement will be sent to federal, state and local agencies, as well as tribes and other interested parties, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said.

It examines options for lowering Lower Granite Reservoir below Lewiston to create a natural current the young salmon smolts can follow through the slackwater to the ocean.

The proposed drawdown would test the biological impact on salmon of the faster flow. The Corps drew down Lower Granite two years ago to test the effect on the dam, roads, marinas and other structures adjacent to the river. Damage and loss estimates ran into the millions of dollars.

The National Marine Fisheries Service has designated the Snake River sockeye as an endangered species and Idaho's chinook runs are listed as threatened.

The Corps and fisheries service said they preferred modifying the dam's fish ladder and installing a tank system at the gatewells to allow the juvenile fish could most easily bypass the dam during the drawdown to over 40 feet below the reservoir's minimum operating level.

"It would allow juvenile fish to be removed from gatewells in varying elevations, minimize risks to juvenile and adult salmon and steelhead, require relatively minor structural modifications and could be put into place within two years," said Peter Poolman, Corps impact statement coordinator.

A two-month test in the spring of 1996 would minimize environmental and economic effects, Poolman said, as well as offer the best information on survival of the salmon and their migration time.

Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus has been pressing for drawdowns, contending they are the only real way to increase the survival rate of migrating salmon and steelhead.

The Corps and fisheries service had considered four alternatives, including keeping Lower Granite at one foot above the minimum operating level of 732 feet.

Public comments may be made on the draft impact statement for 45 days after publication in the Federal Register, scheduled for April 29.

The Corps plans public meetings on the draft: May 16, Boise; May 17, Lewiston; May 18, Kennewick, Wash.; May 19, Portland, Ore. The meetings are in conjunction with the System Configuration Study, evaluating drawdowns on the Lower Snake for improving salmon migrations.

Energy officials check for contamination

POCATELLO (AP) — The Pocatello home of an employee at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory was checked for possible radioactive contamination after the worker went home wearing clothing showing contamination.

The Department of Energy said in a news release the worker, who was not identified, was not harmed and there was no threat to the public, but the worker's home was being checked Friday as a precaution.

The contamination was cobalt-60 and cesium-137, and measured 1,600 counts per minute, the government said. A Coleman lantern mantle produces about 20,000 counts per minute, INEL spokesman John Walsh said.

when a monitor alarm went off as the worker was leaving the Test Reactor Area about 12:30 a.m., radiation control technicians found a particle of contamination on the person's shoe.

A full survey of all his clothing was not conducted as required by safety procedures.

About an hour later when it was determined that a full survey had not been performed, the worker was notified to return with his work clothing. He made it back in three hours and another check showed additional contamination on the clothing.

"The employee did not visit any public establishment after arriving home, so there is no chance of contamination being spread," Walsh said.

Police look into death in Boise

BOISE (AP) — Police continued their investigation Friday into the death of a 49-year-old woman in Boise's North End.

Lt. Tim Rossenvald said the woman's body was found at 10:20 p.m. Thursday in an apartment on North Sixth.

The Ada County coroner's office identified the victim today as Cheryl D. Barratt.

Police said in a statement investigators believe the death may have been drug related.

Fed picks could shift interest rate policy

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton picked two new members for the Federal Reserve on Friday, choosing economists that analysts say may help shift the board away from a hard-line policy of higher interest rates.

In the first Democratic nominations to the Fed in 14 years, Clinton chose White House adviser Alan Blinder and Berkeley professor Janet Yellen.

The designated Blinder, a former Princeton economics professor, to be vice chairman — possibly putting him in line to be made chairman when Alan Greenspan's term as chairman expires in March 1996.

The appointments, which are subject to Senate confirmation, would fill two vacancies on the seven-member Federal Reserve Board of Governors.

Although the White House has avoided criticizing recent moves by Greenspan's Fed to raise short-term interest rates, administration officials are hopeful that the two new members would be a moderating influence on the board.

Blinder

The current board has used interest rate increases to guard against a resurgence of inflation. It has increased short-term rates three times since February. The administration contends that inflation is still rising.

Blinder and Yellen are viewed as pragmatists rather than strict inflation-fighters.

Blinder, 48, is a member of the White House Council of Economic Advisers and has written extensively on economics. He is considered a big-picture economist and not one who has focused on the past. He was a chief economist for an informal 1992 campaign adviser to Clinton.

Yellen, 47, is a former colleague of Laura D'Andrea Tyson, who chairs Clinton's Council of Economic Advisers and also taught economics at the University of California at Berkeley.

The two nominees were introduced in the White House briefing room by Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen. Neither would characterize their views on interest rate policy.

Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., a leading critic of the recent Fed interest rate increases, welcomed the appointments and said they would bring "a more balanced view" to the central bank. "The recent rate increases were ill-advised. There is no evidence that inflation is a problem," he said.

David Wyss, chief financial economist at DRI-McGraw Hill, said both nominees are "softer" money people clearly than the ones they are replacing.

"But on the other hand, we still have Chairman Greenspan there. I don't think it means an immediate shift in policy," he added.

Boise Cascade CEO tells stockholders he's retiring

The Associated Press

BOISE — The man who has run Boise Cascade Corp. for the past 22 years announced Friday that he will step down as chief executive officer in July and retire as chairman in a year.

John Fery's announcement to a room packed with hundreds of stockholders and employees came after 13 straight unprofitable quarters. The red ink has totaled more than $420 million since the beginning of 1991 when recession in the United States and then Europe and Japan dramatically undermined the timber-based company's primary business — paper products.

"I have no admission to you it is somewhat frustrating to me to be completing my career at the end of a very difficult cycle," Fery, 64, said during the annual stockholders meeting.

Replacing Fery on July 29 as chief executive officer will be George Hymel, 49-year-old timber-bus owner company's chief operating officer for the past three years. Hymel has been with Boise Cascade since 1971.

Malone brings Jazz back in Denver

DENVER (AP) — Karl Malone scored a season-high 38 points, including six in the second half, as Utah clinched the fifth playoff spot in the Western Conference with a 113-106 victory over the Denver Nuggets on Friday night.

Utah, which trailed most of the game, took the lead for good at 9:42 on Malone's basket with 7:46 remaining. Jeff Hornacek, who scored 19 points, sealed the victory with a shot that gave Utah a 106-107 lead with 3:30 to play.

Denver was led by Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf with 34 points and Bryant Stui with 21. Abdul-Rauf was 2-for-2 at the free-throw line, making him 21st of 227 this season for a .960 percentage.

The NBA record is .958 by Houston's Calvin Murphy in the 1980-81 season, and the Nuggets have just one game remaining.

Mavericks 107, Rockets 95
DALLAS (AP) — Jamal Mashburn scored 28 points and Jim Jackson 22 as Dallas defeated injury-depleted Houston.

The Rockets were without center Hakeem Olajuwon and forward Vernon Maxwell, each of whom played in Houston's 126-100 victory over Dallas Friday at Houston.

Olajuwon didn't make the trip because of a bruised right hip and Maxwell stayed on the bench due to a sprained right ankle. Both are expected to be ready for the playoffs.

The Mavericks (12-29) are trying to avoid becoming the first team to suffer consecutive 70-loss seasons, complete the season Sunday night at home against Minnesota.

Pacers 133, Sixers 88
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Smith scored a career-high 40 points as Indiana won its seventh straight game, a rout of Philadelphia.

The Pacers, tied for fifth place with Cleveland in the Eastern Conference, continued to prep for the playoffs with some of their best play of the season, while the Sixers lost for the 27th time in 31 games.

Pro basketball
—Just 24 hours after losing by 48 points to New York, the Sixers fell by 45 points to the Pacers, who matched their own NBA mark for margin of victory, a 131-86 win over the Knicks in 1980.

Indiana, an addition to matching its NBA club-record of seven straight wins, also notched its team-record 46th victory.

Greg Graham, topped Philadelphia with 15 points.

Trail Blazers 118, Timberwolves 103
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Cliff Robinson scored 23 of his 28 points in the second half for Portland in what might have been the final NBA game in Minnesota.

Isiah Rider scored 25 points for the Timberwolves, whose owners are threatening to sell to a group that would move the team to Nashville, Tenn., unless there is a public takeover of money-losing Target Center.

Portland, which takes a nine-game losing streak into Sunday's finale at Dallas, has the NBA's worst home record (1-17-28).

The Timberwolves had 24 turnovers in losing for the 14th time in 15 games.

Jerry Dyche also scored 28 points for Portland, which closes Sunday against Seattle. The Blazers won for only the second time in six games as they prepare for their 11th straight playoff appearance.

Cavaliers 117, Bulls 96
RICHMOND, Ohio (AP) — Tyrone Hill scored 20 points on 8-for-10 shooting and seven of his Cleveland teammates also reached double figures against Washington.

The Cavaliers are in a race with Indiana for the fifth seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs, although the Pacers would win a tiebreaker. The Bulls would play fourth-seeded Orlando in the first round.

The Bulls have lost three straight overall and seven in a row at Richmond Coliseum, which closes after this season.

Tom Gugliotta led Washington with 25 points and 12 rebounds.

Cleveland scored the first nine points of the game and built leads as big as 18 points in the first quarter. Washington shot 27 percent in the period and never recovered.

Knicks 125, Bucks 85
MILWAUKEE (AP) — The New York Knicks enhanced their playoff chances and coach Pat Riley led his 70thth game as an NBA coach Friday night with their second straight blowout victory, 125-85 over Milwaukee.

Patrick Ewing scored 22 points for the Knicks, who defeated Philadelphia 135-83 Thursday in New York.

The Bucks, now 56-25, pulled into a tie for the first place in the Eastern Conference with the Atlanta Hawks. They close out the season Sunday in Chicago.

But if Atlanta and the Knicks finish in a two-way tie, the Hawks would win the top seeding position because of a better conference record.

Celtics 104, Bulls 94
CHICAGO (AP) — Robert Parish, playing in perhaps his last NBA game, scored nine points in the second overtime Friday night as the Boston Celtics beat Chicago 104-94, damaging the Bulls' chances for the top seed in the Eastern Conference.

The 40-year-old center hit three straight baskets to seal the second overtime, putting the Celtics ahead 96-90. He also had three free throws.

Doc Brown scored a career-high 40 points for Boston, which will miss the playoffs for the first time since 1978-79.

The Bulls, coached by Scottie Pippen's 30 points, fell against the third and fourth Bulls, which will play Milwaukee 125-85 Friday night. The Knicks and Bulls meet in the season finale Sunday while Atlanta plays Orlando on Saturday.

Suns 127, Clippers 121
PHOENIX (AP) — Dan Majerle end-to-end-for-a layup after a steal to complete a 10-0 run at the start of the third quarter that led Phoenix to a 127-121 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers.

The Suns, who led 73-64 at halftime, held their biggest lead, 93-61, in the third quarter.

The Clippers were stubborn all night and got back within eight points, 95-87, on a dunk by Loy Vaught with 3:52 to go, but Phoenix managed to lead 104-90 after three quarters.

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls girls frittered away early leads in both games in dropping a doubleheader to Boise Friday night.

Laura Robertson and Ali McFarlane hit homers in the first two innings when Twin Falls jumped into an 8-1 lead. But the Bruin defense held for eight innings after that and Boise rallied into a 14-11 lead.

In the second game, Twin Falls managed a 3-1 lead after three but didn't score again in falling 9-3.

The Bruins have three dates on the road next week, firstpitch at Centennial Tuesday, sloppish at Jerome Thursday and firstpitch against Friday at Mountain Home.

Boise swept the Bruins in a 14-11 lead.

IBF champ defends title

Knight-Rider News Service
LAS VEGAS — IBF junior lightweight champion John John Molina — considered by many boxing observers to be one of the best fighters in the world — lived up to that reputation Friday night in dominating challenger Gregorio Vargas in their title fight at Caesar's Palace.

Molina, of Pajardo, Puerto Rico, took control early and didn't let up against the outmatched Vargas, from Mexico City.

Molina, who displayed quicker hands and more power in his punches, kept Vargas on the ropes for most of the bout. He peppered Vargas — 8th-ranked challenger in the IBF and No. 2 in the WBC — with solid combinations and showed little respect for his opponent's counter punches, which didn't faze Molina.

Molina won virtually every round on all three judges' cards.

Nelson Vasquez of Puerto Rico scored it 118-110; Hector Velez of Mexico had it 117-112; and Bill Graham of Las Vegas' card read 118-110.

"(Vargas) was good, but I was just a little better," Molina said. "He fought a good fight, but I can beat anybody out there."

WAC

Bliss, meanwhile, said the basketball team doesn't need recruiting help.

"We already get the best players out of Texas," he said, referring to Charles Smith of Fort Worth, who averaged 10.1 points per game as a Lone Star freshman last season.

This recruiting season, New Mexico coach Clayton Shields, a highly touted forward from Baytown, Texas.

Television marketability was another major consideration in the move, WAC officials said. And with ratings-grabbing UNLV gone from the Big West, ESPN may have placed that conference with the WAC for the late game of its "Big Man" tripleheader package.

Newly named WAC Commissioner Karl Benson said he'll pursue a deal with ESPN, but Bliss said that is a reason enough to justify expansion.

"It would have to be 'Real Big Monday' for them to get all 16 teams on in a season," Bliss said. "The way I understand the whole thing, it's a conference for money and TV contracts. If that's true, I never felt it was the greatest reason to do this."

Bliss, who also coached at Oklahoma from 1975-1979, said he has nothing against the new schools. He said he would like to see the place that conference with the WAC for the late game of its "Big Man" tripleheader package.

Slumping Larkin lifts Reds; Bucs beat Braves

CINCINNATI (AP) — If the Cincinnati Reds' 4-2 win over the Florida Marlins on Friday night was the turnaround game for Barry Larkin, credit Charlie Hough.

National League

Larkin, mired in the worst batting slump of his career, was 1-for-2 at the plate, walked twice and scored twice. "I think Charlie Hough probably brought Barry out of his slump," said Reds manager Davey Johnson. "Charlie usually puts people in them."

Larkin went into the game batting .122. He doubled and stole home in the third, shoving a tag by Marlins catcher Benito Santos.

"Barry gave him a great move at the plate and slid under the tag," Johnson said.

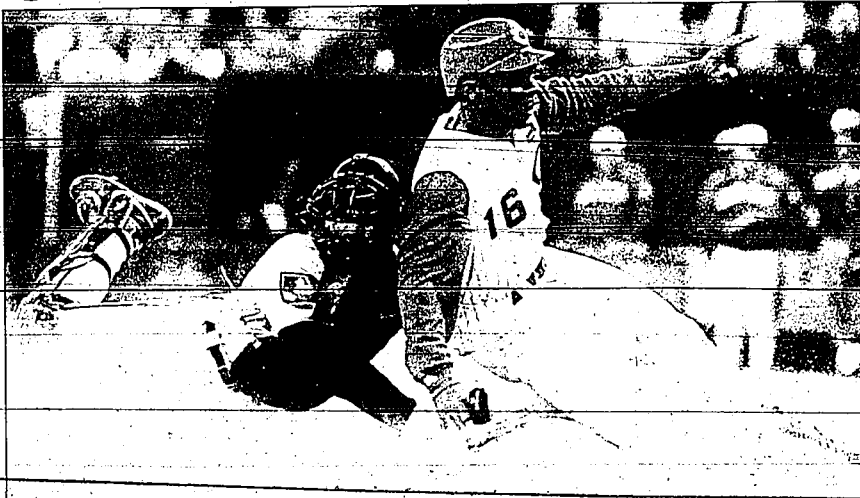

The Reds won on two unearned runs in the seventh after Marlins left fielder Jeff Conine dropped left fielder's pop up.

Conine homered earlier, but struck out in the eighth with the bases loaded.

Jeff Brantley, getting his first save since July 1992, pitched the Reds out of a no-out, bases-loaded jam by striking out Conine and getting San Diego to ground into a double play.

He struck out two more in a perfect ninth, and was ready to go another inning.

"I saw guys coming out of the dugout and had to look at the scoreboard to figure out what was going on," Brantley said. "I thought I had gone in the seventh inning. I was too drove in three runs with a homer and single, as the Pittsburgh Pirates won their first road game this season.

Pirates 5, Braves 2

ATLANTA (AP) — Al Martin

Pittsburgh, which snapped a three-game losing streak, entered the game as the only team in the majors without a road win at 0-5.

It was the third loss in a row for the Braves, who hadn't lost three in a row since last Aug. 5-7.

Martin, who was "once in the Braves organization, hit a two-run home in the second off John Smoltz (2-2).

Zane Smith (2-1) allowed five hits in six innings, and rookie Rick White picked up the win in the eighth and pitched the ninth for his third save.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Todd Zile's second-inning home run in the winning run to cap a wild ninth inning.

The Astros led 5-4 in the ninth when reliever Mickey Williams (0-1) struck out pinch-hitter Geronimo Pena for the first out but then issued consecutive walks to Ray Lankford, Ozzie Smith and Greg Jefferies to load the bases.

Todd Zile came in and hit David Gilespie, with a pitch in the head, forcing in the tying run. Gilkey had words with Jones and both benches cleared briefly but no punches were thrown. Jones then struck out Brian Jordan before Zile singled past diving shortstop Andy Stankiewicz into center.

Cubs 9, Rockies 2

DENVER (AP) — Derrick May drove in three runs with a pair of doubles, and Willie Banks handrefted Colorado through eight innings as the Cubs snapped a six-game losing streak.

Banks (2-2) held the Rockies off for his fourth eight-inning no-run inning, allowing more than one runner in any inning.

Banks pitched 8 1-3 innings — the longest outing of his career — allowing seven hits and striking out seven.

Brewers rally past Royals; BoSox keep pace with Jays

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dave Nilsson hit a two-run double in the ninth inning as the Milwaukee Brewers rallied past Kansas City 9-8 Friday night and ended the Royals' 151-game streak of holding leads after eight innings.

The Royals' streak was the longest of that type in 50 years. The last time Kansas City wasted a lead after eight was Aug. 25, 1991, when Kansas City led Texas 4-3 in the ninth and lost in 11 innings.

Milwaukee, which trailed 6-1 in the third, was behind 8-7 in the ninth. Bill Spillers singled with one out off Jeff Montgomery (0-1), took second on a wild pitch and Turner Ward walked. One out later, Nilsson drove a 3-2 pitch to left-center.

Jesse Orosco (1-0) allowed two hits in 2-3 innings.

American League

Orioles 6, Mariners 4

BALTIMORE (AP) — Lee Smith got his eighth save quicker than anyone else, and Ben McDonald (4-0) became the first American League's first four-game winner, allowing eight hits and three earned runs in 7 1-3 innings.

Smith, who pitched a perfect ninth, has eight saves in the Orioles' first 15 games, breaking the previous record of 17 games set by Mark Davis of San Diego in 1989.

Baltimore took command in the first with four unearned runs off Dave Fleming (2-2).

Blue Jays 8, Twins 2

TORONTO (AP) — Pat Hentgen pitched a five-hit, and Joe Carter went 3-for-5 with a home run as Toronto extended its winning streak to five.

Hentgen (3-1) struck out four, walked none and allowed only one earned run in his second straight complete game. Hentgen, who had three complete games last season, beat the California Angels 4-3 last Saturday.

Carter homered in his first at-bat against Scott Erickson (1-3) since the Twins starter broke Carter's thumb with a pitch during spring training. Carter ran the bases slowly and stared over at Erickson after rounding third.

White Sox 7, Tigers 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Robin Ventura hit a three-run homer and Frank Thomas hit his seventh homer in 10 games. Chicago has 31 homers in 16 games, the most for the White Sox in April since at least 1959.

Scott Sanderson (2-0) gave up both runs and four hits in seven innings. Tim Lincecum (0-3) allowed six runs and six hits in 2-3 innings with four walks.

Red Sox 6, Angels 5

BOSTON (AP) — Mo Vaughn singled with bases loaded in the ninth inning, and Boston won its seventh straight against California in Fenway Park.

Otis Nixon led off the ninth with a walk off Bill Saipan (0-1). Billy Hatcher sacrificed, and Mike Greenwell singled off Craig Lefferts, with the ball glancing off the glove of second baseman Harold Reynolds.

Tim Lincecum was intentionally walked, leading the bases.

Yankees 8, Athletics 6

NEW YORK (AP) — Luis Polonia doubled in

Bernie Williams with the go-ahead run in the sixth.

Williams returned to the Yankees lineup after missing two games while in Puerto Rico for the birth of his daughter.

He drew a walk from Carlos Reyes (0-1) to start the sixth, was sacrificed to for a tiebreaking two-run single Friday night as the Texas Rangers beat the Cleveland Indians 7-3 and stopped a four-game losing streak.

Scott Kamieniecki, (1-0), the second of four Yankees pitchers, allowed two runs and five hits in 3 2-3 innings in relief of Bob Ojeda, who made his first at Yankee Stadium since signing with New York on Jan. 28.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Juan Gonzalez hit a bases-loaded home run that dropped for a tiebreaking two-run single Friday night as the Texas Rangers beat the Cleveland Indians 7-3 and stopped a four-game losing streak.

Hard Luck Mining Co. strikes hot

Four weeks into the 47th Annual Idaho State Men's Championship at Sunset Bowling Center in Coeur d'Alene, Hard Luck Mining Co. of Twin Falls leads the scratch scoring.

Thelma Tucker Bowling

The Hard Luck team, with the exception of one member, decided that flying was the way to go to the event. They left Twin Falls on Friday, flew to Salt Lake, then Pasco, Wash., ending the flight in Spokane (the direct route).

In Spokane they rented a car and drove to Coeur d'Alene. It was a smooth flight according to Bob, first time ever to fly, Leazer.

Howie Hinnon was the team member who likes driving. The rest of the team was waiting to be in Coeur d'Alene, where the possibility of their bowling equipment being in Denver, Chicago or wherever loaded Hinnon's car with all their equipment.

At 8:30 a.m. Saturday the team members were reunited with their bowling equipment. The lineup was Mark Miller, Eddie Chappell, Leazer, Cliff Hinkle and Hinnon. Their team total for game one was 1,077, an average of 215 per bowler. They fell off a little on game two with only 1,049 — average 209. On game three, they scored a 1,098 for a 3,224 series averaging 217 per bowler on the series.

High games and series by each member were Miller 242/598, Chappell 244/656, Leazer 209/644, Hinkle 258/672, and Hinnon 266/744.

What do the guys have to say about their success?

"We bowled as a team," Miller said. "Everybody was supportive of each other and when one was down the others lifted him up."

According to Leazer, "It was five guys pulling together like they had bowled together for a long time."

"Thanks, Howie!" added Chappell.

"Mine was the lucky one and they all did well," Hinnon said.

Hinnon is currently holding the honors for high series in the tournament. Besides the 266 he bowled 224 and 254 for his 744 series.

Miller is leading the A division Handicap All Events with a 598 in team, 708 in doubles and 666 in singles — add his handicap and he is 2,179.

Just a final note about their weekend — Hinkle and Hinnon will not get "Guests of the Week" at Super 8 after confronting the desk clerk about their bill.

Hard Luck winners for March are Roger Greenup 270, Michael Houser 244, Leazer 242, and Lorraine Goss 244. They will be on the road for the April 20. One man and one woman will win an all-expense paid trip to Hawaii for two, champions of the Division.

Beathard seeks key receiver for Chargers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Chargers general manager Bobby Beathard never has been afraid to take a chance, a reputation he could enhance in Sunday's NFL draft.

Thanks to a draft-day deal last year, the Chargers won't make their first selection this year until the 43rd pick overall, mid-way through the second round. They haven't been shut out of the first round since 1982, when Beathard was with Washington and establishing a penchant for trading No. 1 picks.

Beathard might feel the urge to move up in order to pick a wide receiver, but he'll make an attempt, Beathard said. "I don't know how successful we're going to be because it's a new system and I don't know how willing teams will be to do something like that."

"You always think of (trading) next year's No. 1 pick, and I think that next year's No. 1 would be valuable to somebody because it doesn't add to their salary cap right now."

Because of the new salary cap, Beathard was unwilling to match the four-year, $10.5 million offer that four-time Pro Bowl wide receiver Anthony Miller got from the Denver Broncos. He figured the

'We think we have a good group of wide receivers. We're still going to look for one that can give us that big-play ability, but I think this group is much better than it's being given credit for.'

— Bobby Beathard, Chargers' general manager money saved could be used to retain as many as four other veterans.

"In the case of a good wide receiver, you're almost more willing to take their chances of getting one in the draft than taking on a $2 million salary," Beathard said.

The last time San Diego used its first pick for an offensive player was 1988, when it took Miller out of Tennessee with the 15th choice overall.

Beathard said the Chargers, 8-8 last year, would even explore their options of moving up in the second round.

Their current pick is so low that they don't know who will be left.

"We don't have a clue with it being that far away," said Billy Devaney, director of player personnel.

The Chargers like San Diego State receiver Darnay Scott, but he's being projected by some as a first-round pick. Southern Cal's Johnnie Morton is another option if he's available, which isn't likely.

Beathard had enough faith in backups Shawn Jefferson and Johnnie Barnes that he traded the team's other starting receiver, Nate Lewis, to the Los Angeles Rams. He also acquired Vance Johnson from the Broncos and Tony Martin from the Miami Dolphins.

"We think we have a good group of wide receivers," Beathard said. "We're still going to look for one that can give us that big-play ability, but I think this group is much better than it's being given credit for."

The Chargers also need depth on the offensive line, at cornerback and at defensive tackle.

Beathard said the Chargers are looking for an offensive tackle. One possibility is Vaughn Parker of UCLA.

"If you take a tackle, you're usually getting a guy that can play both (tackle and guard)," he said. "Most times, guards can't play tackle."

The Chargers were given three compensatory picks for players lost during the 1993 free agency period, giving them two picks in the "second," third- and fifth-rounds, plus one each in the fourth and seventh rounds.

Beathard made first-round deals in nine of his 12 seasons with the Redskins, and made second-round trades with the Chargers in 1991 and last year.

During the second round last year, Beathard sent the Chargers' 1994 first- and sixth-round picks to the San Francisco 49ers to move up and take running back Natrone Means.

"I can't look far enough ahead," Beathard said.

"There's always a temptation to make that trade and get that player. It's not that I like giving away No. 1's. If we're all in agreement about it and everybody thinks it will help the team, then we'll do it."

Following 2 strong drafts, Steelers could use another

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers have had two good drafts under coach Bill Cowher. With several pressing needs and no big-ticket free agents under contract, they are desperately in need of another.

The Steelers drafted four starters in 1992 — tackle Leon Seary, linebacker Levon Kirkland, nose tackle Joe Streed and safety Darren Perry — and two more projected 1994 starters last year: cornerback Deon Figures and linebacker Chad Brown.

After years of high-priced busts such as Huey Richardson, Darrell Sims and Aaron Jones, the Steelers seem to finally have hit a groove in the draft.

"I know (sports writers) have a hard time not talking about Darrell Sims, but at some point you have to get into the 1990s," director of football operations Tom Donohoe said. "I'd put our drafts of the last two years up against anybody's."

Unless they trade their first-round — and they haven't done that since 1967 — the Steelers probably will use that pick on a wide receiver, fullback or defensive lineman.

Last year, Cowher watched his receivers — mostly Jeff Graham, Dwight Stone and Ernest Mills — make only three touchdown catches, repeatedly drop passes and consistently run imprecise routes. He promised changes.

The first step toward improvement could come in the draft, when the Steelers might be tempted to take Southern Cal's Johnnie Morton with the 17th overall pick.

The 190-pound Morton has been called a Lynn Swann-type receiver. The Steelers have lacked a productive, breakaway receiver since Swann and John Swallow retired.

Morton had 12 touchdowns when he was a wide receiver last season, and had big games against Notre Dame and Penn State.

The Steelers still could swing a late trade for the wide receivers they have pursued for weeks — Dallas' Alvin Harper or Atlanta's Mike Pritchard — but that's not likely.

Only last year, the Steelers thought they got a steal in third-round Andre Hastings, a Georgia junior who was projected as a first-rounder but he remained in college.

But they found Hastings to be under-sized, unskilled in a pro-style offense and apt to drop passes in traffic. He still needs more work.

"The transition for a college football player is tough," Cowher said.

The only way the Steelers probably can get Colorado's Charles Johnson, considered the top receiver in the draft, would be to trade up.

Seahawks face aging defense as draft nears

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — The Seattle Seahawks know "Big Daddy" won't be there when their turn comes up in the draft. Younger players like Bryant Young or Sam Adams — if they're still there — with the eighth overall pick in Sunday's NFL draft.

Cincinnati will select first. If the Bengals aren't talked into trading that selection, they'll use it to grab Dan "Big Daddy" Wilkinson, the 313-pound defensive tackle from Ohio State who is considered the top player in the draft.

Young and Adams aren't 313 pounds. And they're considered outstanding.

Besides, the Seahawks have a "Big Daddy" of their own in 300-pound Cortez Kennedy, the 1992 NFL Defensive Player of the Year and a three-time Pro Bowler. But Kennedy's supporting cast needs an infusion of youth and talent. That's what the Seahawks will be looking for in the draft.

"There are some good defensive linemen in this draft," Mike Allman, Seattle's player personnel director, said.

Young, from Notre Dame, is 6-foot, 245-pounds, 285 pounds. Adams, from Texas A&M, is 6-4, 285.

The Seahawks have a history of going for defensive tackles and defensive ends in the draft. In fact, the first player they chose in their first draft was 1976 defensive tackle, Steve Niehaus.

Niehaus didn't pan out. Neither did Manu Tuiaosopo (1979). But Jacob Green (1980), Jeff Bryant (1982) and Kennedy (1990) did. Green and Bryant are the club's all-time sack leaders. Bryant, a 12-year veteran, is still playing for the Seahawks.

The Seahawks are thought to like Young over Adams because of Young's superior work ethic. If that happens, Young would become the third Notre Dame player chosen by Seattle in the first round. Besides Niehaus, the others were offensive tackle Andy Heck (1989) and quarterback Rick Mirer last year.

Mirer was the second player chosen after New England picked Drew Bledsoe and he helped the Seahawks to a four-victory improvement from their franchise-worst 2-14 record in 1992.

The Seahawks have emphasized offense in the last three drafts and that's why they're looking for defensive help now. In 1991, they made San Diego State quarterback Dan McGwire their first pick. McGwire is now Mirer's backup. In 1992, they picked offensive tackle Ray Roberts of Virginia first.

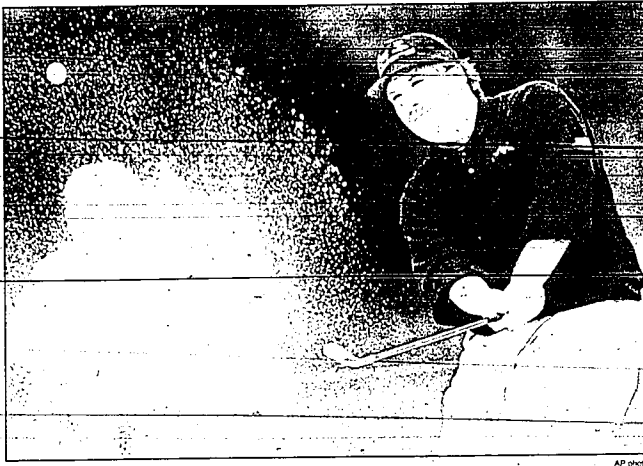

Springer maintains lead at windy Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Mike Springer found the birdies a little harder to come by on Friday in the Greater Greensboro Open, but three of them were just enough to give him a comfortable lead.

Springer shot a 3-under-par 69 in conditions reminiscent of past GGOs for an 11-under-par 133 and a four-stroke lead. It was 49 degrees with 'Today was tough because it was hard to find out exactly where the wind was coming from and to get the right club in your hand.'

John Daly of Memphis, Tenn., reveals his new look before starting play Friday at the Greensboro, N.C.

Daly shaves head for luck, then misses cut

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Was it for luck or just because he's a maverick? Only John Daly and his ex-hairdresser know for sure.

When Daly came out to the practice green before the start of the second round of the Greater Greensboro Open, it was obvious that his long blond hair was not hanging from beneath his red-and-white cap. Finally, he took off the cap and the mystery was gone.

Daly's head was shaved bare, and considering that temperatures barely reached the 50s Friday, he obviously didn't do it for comfort. If he did it for attention, it worked. Joey Sindelar came up, convinced Daly to take off the cap and rubbed Daly's scalp.

The crowd at the first tee cheered when he took his hat off again, and he even took the cap off for the television cameras.

The mystery will continue. Daly wouldn't talk to reporters before the tournament, and he certainly didn't talk to them when he finished the day with an 84. That gave him a 162 total, 18-over-par and next to last in the field of 154.

As he emerged from the scorer's tent at the 18th hole, Daly sauntered past reporters and autograph seekers alike. He said nothing, signed a few pairing sheets for those keeping up and walked to a black, four-wheel drive truck. A woman who obviously hadn't followed Daly's lead was in the passenger seat, and after two more people got in the back seat, he drove away without his hat, without an explanation — and without more golf.

Ed Humenik of Hobe Sound, Fla., blasts from a trap onto the eighth green Friday at the Greater Greensboro Open at Greensboro, N.C. Humenik is four shots behind leader Mike Springer.

coming from and to get the right club in your hand," Springer said. "If you can make some birdie puts when you do hit them in kind of close, that's kind of nice. You need some birdies on a day like today to offset the bogeys."

Ed Humenik, a Michigan native who got the weather he was expecting Friday, shot a 65 for a 137 total. Four of the seven birdies resulted from puts of 15 feet or more.

"It was one of those days where everything felt good," Humenik said.

Joel Edwards matched his first-round 69 for a 138 total and was joined by John Huston, who had a 65, and Hale Irvin, who after burning the course for a 65 on Thursday, jumped to a 73.

"My game today was like the weather — lousy," Irvin said.

He said his game is much better when the weather is warmer, which might have explained his 7-under-par opening round, achieved as the temperature in the Greensboro area approached 90 degrees.

In addition, he said the course was awfully dry, which didn't allow the greens to catch approach shots. Rain had been predicted to accompany the cool weather, but only a trace of rain had fallen by late afternoon. If you missed the green, it was quite hard to pitch the ball onto the greens," he said. "In fact, you were better off probably missing it into the bunkers if you had a choice."

Brad Bryant couldn't get any consistency and finished tied with Gil Morgan at 5-under-par 139. Bryant was 3-under at the turn, but started the back nine par-bogey-double bogey. He had two more birdies and another bogey to finish the day at 71, as did Morgan.

Lenny Clements, John Morse and Craig Parry were among seven golfers at 4-under-par 140.

Vaults spring Miller to all-around title

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — When Shannon Miller needed to perform, she performed brilliantly.

The 17-year-old from Edmond, Okla., completed two spectacular vaults Friday night to win the women's all-around title at the World Gymnastics Championships for the second straight year.

Miller needed to score 9.775 with her two vaults to win — and she scored 9.812.

She totaled 39.274 points for the four disciplines in retaining the title she won last year at Birmingham, England.

It was a remarkable performance considering she was stricken with a stomach muscle injury last month and missed two weeks of training.

"It meant a lot to win last year because it was my first time, but this time it was even better because I had to come back from injuries," Miller said.

Lavinia Milosiovi of Romania won the silver medal with a score of 39.236 — only 0.038 behind. Dina Koechetkova of Russia was third with a total of 39.125.

Miller scored 9.850 on the uneven bars, 9.862 on the balance beam and 9.750 for her floor exercise.

The last woman to win consecutive all-around world titles was Ludmilla Tourischeva of the Soviet Union in 1970 and 1974, when the championships were held every four years. Only four women ever have achieved the feat.

Miller's victory did not surprise coach Steve Nunn, who was confident despite the gymnast's inconsistent training form.

"I've seen this movie before," Nunn said.

A lot of people counted Shannon out, but I know what makes her tick, and I knew she was going to give 100 percent and a valiant effort, if not a gold medal. We look at pressure as a challenge."

Miller said she was unaware of what she needed to score with her final vaults.

"I don't look at the board," she said. "I'm focused on my routines. I just knew I had to do the two best vaults I could and leave the rest to the judges."

Gina Gogean of Romania finished fourth with 39.061 points, and Dominique Dawes, 17, of Silver Spring, Md., was fifth with 38.968. Dawes was the co-leader after three routines but stumbled on the first of her two vaults, scoring only 9.250. She improved with her second vault for an average of 9.506, but had lost her chance.

Dawes was in tears after her vaults and had to be comforted by coach Kelli Hill. Dawes also led at last year's World Championships before miscalculating a vault and finishing fourth.

"I felt OK on all the events except vault," Dawes said. "I just pulled it too hard."

Hill said the vault had been Dawes' weakness going into the event.

"Dominique has struggled with this vault all week," Hill said. "It was a very technical vault. She had problems with it in training and overcompensated."

Mo Huihan of China scored a 9.9 — the highest score in women's competition at the championships — on the uneven bars, but the rest of her routines were less successful and she finished seventh overall.

Two competitors were injured Friday night.

Leticia Ishii of Brazil dislocated both elbows in a fall from the uneven bars, and Australian Joanna Hughes suffered a badly sprained ankle while falling during a warmup for the floor exercises.

Nearly 300 competitors from 53 countries are competing in the six-day championships, which end Sunday.

Individual apparatus finals will be held Saturday and Sunday, with Vitaly Scherbo of Belarus, winner of six gold medals at the 1992 Olympics, competing in four men's finals.

Heat seeks better playoff record this year

MIAMI (AP) — The next hurdle for the Miami Heat is to win a playoff game, something they've never done.

The Heat's first-round opponent, in descending order of likelihood, will be Chicago, Atlanta or New York. Miami takes to the road for the first two games of the best-of-5 series, which begins Thursday or Friday.

In their only previous playoff appearance two years ago, the Heat lost three straight to the Bulls in the first round. This series will be different, guard Steve Smith predicted.

Why? "We're not playing Michael Jordan," Smith said. "At that time, Chicago was playing its best basketball. Now, we're going in with a lot of confidence."

After a month-long slump that almost cost the Heat a playoff berth, they clinched it with consecutive victories this week over Minnesota and Atlanta.

Both victories were impressive in their own way. Miami raced to a 33-point first-half lead and blitzed Minnesota, then showed uncharacteristic poise in the fourth quarter to hold off Atlanta.

"Our confidence level is high," said Glen Rice, who scored 53 points in the two games. "We want to go into the playoffs and do some damage."

Although the Heat enter the playoffs as the No. 3 seed in the Eastern Conference, they're capable of beating the NBA's best teams. Miami has defeated the Bulls, Knicks and Orlando twice each. With a record of 20-20 away from Miami Arena, the Heat also have shown resolve on the road.

Miami's Steve Smith, right, and Bimbo Coles celebrate Thursday's win over Atlanta Thursday, assuring themselves a spot in the playoffs.

"Whether we face Atlanta or New York or Chicago, we're going in with confidence that we can win," center Rony Seikaly said.

Seikaly is one of seven Heat players who were with Miami's previous playoff team. That club was much younger and sneaked into the postseason with a 38-44 record.

"For all the guys that have been there before, we are less in awe of the playoffs now," forward Grant Long said. "We're older and wiser. We know what the playoffs are all about."

"Before, we barely made it, and it was a feeling of just being happy to be there."

This year's team is deeper and, with the addition of John Salley, stronger up front. The Heat were 10 games above .500 before slumping and are 42-39 — the best record in franchise history — going into Saturday's regular-season finale at Indiana.

Inconsistent all season, the Heat's performance in the playoffs is difficult to predict. But they appear to be peaking at the right time.

"I don't plan to take a vacation," Salley said, "until late June."

NBA to decide on international title format

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The NBA's Board of Governors will decide next week whether the league champion will take part in the McDonald's Open under its new format as an international club championship.

The tournament will be held in October 1995 at a site to be determined, bringing together what the promoters hope will be eight top teams from around the world.

The six previous McDonald's Opens all featured NBA teams playing foreign clubs.

The Phoenix Suns won last year in Munich, Germany.

NBA commissioner David Stern and Borislav Stankovic, head of the International Basketball Association, have said they would like to turn the event into an official world championship for clubs with the hope of ensuring the participation of the reigning NBA champions.

"Next week, the NBA Board of Governors will vote whether the NBA champions will play," Stern said.

"This is a symbol of cooperation between FIBA and the NBA."

Soccer officials slap team for bribing players

PARIS (AP) — European soccer champion Olympique Marseille on Friday was demoted to the second division of the French League next season for bribing three players on a rival to throw a game last May.

The French Football Federation's 26-member board made the decision following daylong hearings and 34 hours of deliberations.

The sanctions culminated the 11-month-old scandal, which already had resulted in European soccer officials preventing the club from defending its 1993 European Champions Cup title and French soccer officials stripping the team of what had been its fifth consecutive French League title.

Olympique Marseille is second in the French League at 17-6-11, six points behind Paris-St. Germain, and has advanced to the quarterfinals of the French Cup.

Olympique Marseille has not been in the second division since the 1983-84 season.

Traditions stick because they work

It was going to be the prom dinner to end all prom dinners. And to tell you the truth, we were pretty proud of ourselves for coming up with the idea.

"Who wants to go to the same boring old restaurants everyone else is going to?" I asked. "We want to come up with something new. Innovative. Creative. Different."

"Well," Danny joked, "we could always get Kentucky Fried Chicken."

"Yeah, right," I said. "Like we're really going to walk into the Colonel's wearing our tuxes and formals to pick up a bucket of chicken. The girls would never talk to us again."

"What if we didn't eat there?" Jim wondered. "What if we took it somewhere fancy?"

"Come on, Jim," I said. "Fancy restaurants won't let you bring your own food in."

"Then what if we set up a table somewhere else—like a park or something?"

"That's be great!" Ernie proclaimed. "That way, the girls would be so impressed with our creativity that they wouldn't notice how cheap we are!"

The next few minutes got a little crazy with all of the wild, off-the-wall, non-boring ideas flying around. Eventually, we decided to rent a U-Haul truck, set up an elaborate dinner table in the back and spend a romantic evening motoring around town while we ate. The way we saw it, it would be like having a picnic in a gondola while floating through Venice. Only without the water. Or the boat. Or the scenery.

On prom night, we brought our dates to the parking lot where the truck was set up. The girls were perplexed until we enthusiastically opened the back door. It was an incredible sight, if I do say so myself. Our hefty table was covered with a linen table cloth, and the china, crystal and silver were arranged perfectly. It was as nice as any restaurant, and the girls were properly appreciative of our originality as we escorted them to their places.

If only we could have stopped right there. But no, Jim had to go and close the door. "Real funny, guys," Linda said, giggling in the dark. "Now, somebody turn on a light."

A light? What a great idea! Too bad none of us thought of it earlier—much earlier.

"Please, Joe," Colleen said. "I don't care if lights are boring. It's too dark in here!"

"Kurt," I said hopefully, "did you see where the light switch is in here?"

There was only silence. A very long, painful silence.

"Come on, Linda said, the giggles gone. "You guys aren't that dumb, are you?"

I wanted to smack Linda for calling us dumb. But I couldn't see her in the dark.

"Wait," Danny said. "Jim has a flashlight."

His voice was overwhelmed by the sound of the truck engine starting. He tried the door, but it was locked. He made his way to the front and pounded on the wall. Jim shifted into gear and the truck lurched forward.

"Let me guess," Colleen said coolly. "You can't communicate with Jim, can you?"

It was at about this time that Jim hit the first speed bump. A couple of crystal goblets shattered on the floor of the truck. One of the girls screamed. Then Jim took the first corner. The whole table started sliding. Everyone else screamed. I could just see tomorrow's headline: "Eight students crushed to death in fried chicken fiasco!"

An hour later, Jim finally opened the door on what looked like a war zone. Seven goblets were in pieces on the floor, mingling shards with 12 china plates of various sizes. One chair leg was broken, and one female ankle was sprained (an ugly incident with mashed potatoes and gravy). My date's dress had been smeared by a flying bucket of fried chicken.

"Mmm-mmm," I joked feebly. "That perfume you're wearing is finger-lickin' good!"

It didn't help. The dress was ruined. And so was the evening.

A few weeks later, when we were finally able to laugh at ourselves again, Jim voice a suspicion that we had all been considering. "Maybe," he said, "it's sort of a value to doing things has been around so long because... well, because boring works."

I've been thinking about that lately as I've tried to keep pace with all of the creative solutions being offered for age-old problems. And while I'm all for creativity, it seems to me that those who are suggesting that traditional moral standards have become outdated are forgetting one important fact: They are traditional because they work. There may be more innovative ways of doing business or developing relationships, but none are more effective than the tried and true. Honesty is still the best policy. A penny saved is still a penny earned. Integrity is still better than vice.

And not because it's boring, but because it works.

Mormons want to baptize everyone who ever lived

By Vern Anderson
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Saints and sinners, popes and pillagers, martyrs and mass murderers — everyone who ever lived, in fact — eventually will get the chance to be a Mormon. Alive or dead.

At least, that is a central tenet of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which has 50,000 full-time missionaries proselyting the living, and many times more members performing baptisms and other rituals for the dead.

To Mormons, the idea is a deeply spiritual, divinely inspired undertaking, staggering in its scope: to give every post-mortal spirit a chance to accept or reject baptism in the "true Church of Jesus Christ."

"If they do not accept the baptism, it is of no effect," according to the church-sanctioned "Encyclopedia of Mormonism."

To some non-Mormons, however, the practice is appallingly presumptuous, a sort of theological hijacking.

For example, Mormon genealogical records show baptisms performed in church temples for dozens of Roman Catholic saints, including Augustine, Thomas Aquinas, Francis of Assisi, Ignatius Loyola, Thomas More and Thomas Becket.

"You can guess how we feel about it," said Julie Anderson, spokeswoman for the Catholic Diocese of Salt Lake, although Catholic authorities will say differently about the Mormon practice.

Helen Radkey, a former Catholic and former Mormon, is blunt, calling it "religious bigotry" and "a basic issue of respect and arrogance."

Radkey, whose two sons attend Jesuit-run Gonzaga University, visited the Martyrs' Shrine in Ontario, Canada, last summer and was deeply moved by the martyrdoms of French Jesuits Jean de Brebeuf and Gabriel Lalemant.

The two missionaries were grotesquely mutilated over several hours and then killed by Iroquois warriors in 1649, some 181 years before Joseph Smith founded the Mormon Church.

Upon her return to Salt Lake City, Radkey went to the Mormon Family History Library to look up more information on Lalemant. She said she "freaked" when she discovered he had been baptized — twice — by Mormon stand-ins.

"These men died for what they believed in, and it's disgusting to have someone come in and baptize them after they'd given everything," she said.

In a December letter to Radkey, Father John J. Faret, director of the Shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs in upstate New York, offered another perspective.

"I don't know just what to say about these strange activities of the Mormons, except that it does not seem that they will hurt us in any way," Faret wrote. "Indeed, it would seem to be a tribute to the (Catholic) Church and to the Jesuits that the Mormons should seek to make these great men their own in some way."

Mormon officials are well aware of the criticism. They seek to defuse it by stressing that baptisms and other, uniquely Mormon rituals performed for businesses sponsor segments of air time, with some programs paying their way.

KCIR's most popular programs, according to Luchsinger, are Jim Dobson's "Focus on the Family" and Chuck Swindoll's "Insight for Living," which air back to back weekdays from 10 to 11 a.m.

In addition to its network programs, the station has a 15-minute community focus, a 15-minute prayer chapel and an hour-long local music/news/weather segment, which airs from 6 to 7 a.m. weekdays. Luchsinger, who attends Heritage Alliance Church, produces a Sunday praise program.

The prayer chapel, on air at 11 a.m. Monday through Friday, is led by local, mostly Protestant evangelical pastors who receive prayer requests during the program.

The KAWZ format is about 80 percent adult teaching. The music is reviewed to make sure it glorifies God, Hatch said. Teachers on tape include Chuck Smith and Billy Graham.

A children's program, "Puppet Factory," is scheduled on weekends, and Calvary Chapel's Sunday service is taped for rebroadcast at 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. weekdays.

People have been telling Calvary Chapel pastor Mike Kestler they would like more teaching programs, Hatch said, so the station may expand that area of programming someday soon.

KAWZ has a translator in Boise (106.7 FM), which allows it to reach the Boise/Nampa/Caldwell area in addition to the Magic Valley.

Luchsinger said KCIR reaches most of southeastern Idaho, but he characterized the competition as formidable.

"The media is interesting with cable," he said, "and the superhighway is just around the corner."

No matter, God's word continues to pound the airwaves loud and clear.

"We are evangelical Christians who believe in a literal interpretation of the Bible as God's word," said Luchsinger of his station. "The purpose of Christian radio is to tell the message of Christ."

Christian radio may be the only place where some people hear that message.

"I know that some people listen to our Sunday morning message instead of going to church," Luchsinger said, "because they have had too many negative experiences in churches."

The dead have no validity by themselves. The dead in "the spirit world" awaiting God's final judgment must accept the true gospel of Jesus Christ before the ordinances done by proxies can apply, said Thomas E. Daniels, spokesman for the church's Family History Department.

"So it is a labor of love," Daniels said, "since the ordinances are believed essential to salvation in the presence of God. 'We are doing for them what they can't do for themselves.'"

However the project is viewed, it is accelerating as the church approaches 9 million members and plans to build many more than its current 45 temples. The church's registry of names — an extraordinary boon to genealogists and other researchers of all faiths — exceeds 2 billion. Millions more are added each year as teams of Mormon specialists pore over public records throughout the world, offering free microfilm copies in exchange for access.

Since the first baptisms for the dead were performed in 1842, Mormons have logged some 200 million such ordinances. But several million have been inadvertent duplications owing to a multiplicity of records, spelling errors and, perhaps, the allure of celebrity.

Radkey's research shows that Joan of Arc has had 14 proxy baptisms. Judy

Catholic girls take long-awaited step up to altar

Altar girl Adrienne Muto, 10, poses with her altar boy brothers, Anthony, 12, left, and Victor, 15, at St. Catherine of Siena Church in Pittsburgh, Pa.

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

She had watched her brothers automatically become altar servers when they reached the fourth grade of their parochial school. This year, Adrienne Muto entered the fourth grade at the same school and felt it was her turn.

But to her disappointment, and the teasing of her brothers, she was told because of her sex she could not assist the priest at Mass. The 10-year-old girl could not understand it, nor could her mother explain why girls were not allowed to pour the wine and water and help priests wash their hands as part of celebrating the Eucharist.

So when the Vatican announced last week that the Roman Catholic Church had given its blessing to altar girls, Adrienne was thrilled and a little nervous, but also confident that she belonged with her brothers at the front of the church in suburban Pittsburgh. "I just feel it was right that I should be up on the altar," Adrienne said. "I just feel like I'm more a part of the church."

St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls issued a news release on Thursday.

The approval of female altar servers does not mean official in the United States until the National Council of Catholic Bishops has been formally notified, according to the release. This is expected to happen soon.

"St. Edward's has been advised that Bishop Tod Brown of the Diocese of Boise will issue an official policy after he has received and reviewed the official notification," the release said.

Similar to the church's decision to empower laypeople to distribute Communion, official approval of altar girls is one of those visible milestones that have created rumblings throughout the 59 million-member church in the United States.

Some Catholic priests who had already allowed female altar servers were relieved. Traditionalists condemned the change, while some liberals said the Vatican action was merely a face-saving gesture to avoid the embarrassment of its rule being openly broken.

But for many girls and women, especially those who had felt the pain of exclusion in the past, the church's decision held special meaning.

Ruth Fitzpatrick, coordinator of the Fairfax, Va.-based Women's Ordination Conference, remembers even as a young child playing at celebrating Mass, the boys would never let her be the one to distribute the Necco-Wafers. When her daughter was 10, she was one of seven girls and two boys to respond to a call for altar servers. All the girls were turned down.

So let others ridicule the latest decision as being too little, too late, she said.

"We're celebrating it," she said. "We're saying on the one hand, it's crumbs from the table. On the other hand, we're delighted to get some very important message to young women in the church."

Susan Muto, Adrienne's aunt and the principal writer of a proposed U.S. bishops' pastoral on women that was abandoned in 1992 over disagreements on how to handle women's ordination questions, said the ban on altar girls was a major concern of women.

"If their mother is up there serving Communion, why can't their daughters be altar servers. The sense was: What's the problem here?" said Muto of the Institute of Formative Spirituality at Duquesne University.

The decision is not going down as easily in more conservative corners of the church.

James Likoudis, president of Catholics United for the Faith, said his phone has been ringing off the hook with people expressing "outrage, incomprehensibility, shock" that the church would abandon what he called a 2,000-year-old tradition.

"Those who are disobedient to the law have been rewarded. Those who have been faithful to the law are being punished," he said.

Even some who support altar girls were skeptical of the significance of the Vatican's decision since many parishes had already decided on their own to allow altar girls.

"The only thing different today from yesterday is that the Catholic Church has one less embarrassment to explain.

It was a dumb, stupid rule," said the Rev. Richard McBerger, rector of the University of Notre Dame.

Still, many observers expect the number of girl altar servers to increase dramatically with official approval. Prominent prelates such as Archbishop William Keeler, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, have already welcomed the decision and U.S. bishops are expected to consider the practice at their June meeting. The decision to permit altar girls is left up to individual bishops after hearing the opinion of the national conference, according to the Vatican document.

Letter

God needs us to help ourselves

To Pastor Mark Browne: Another representative of the several hundred different Christian denominations has again spoken on his personal interpretation of "Mormon doctrine." By "God (alone) are ye saved" theory holds only a certain amount of water.

Consider James 2:17, 24: "Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone ... Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only."

Yes, after all that we can do, the grace of God and the atonement of Jesus Christ must "step in" and take over because we are imperfect human beings.

But to do nothing on our own to prove our worthiness through good works is like expecting a high school diploma or a college degree without any personal preparations required. I would hate to go before St. Peter's pearly gates and find I was lacking and had relied solely on what the Lord had done for me without any effort on my part, or that perhaps I had initiated a "death-bed repentance" — just to "make sure." As for your sarcasm about "Mormon" doctrines and the Holy Bible being translated correctly, consider the fact that there are books mentioned in the Bible which are non-existent now. Someone had to take them out. And though I do not claim to be a scholar of languages, I can tell you, through personal experience, that expressions and meanings can be lost through translation when converted from one language to another. Couple that with Bible scholars of the past who might have felt certain passages were non-essential, so they dropped them from the translation. One can readily see the problems involved and the loss of meaning.

As for me, Pastor Browne, I'll settle for the whole truth, not just half of it!

Garland, Charlie Chaplin, Jack Benny and W.C. Fields had had five each; Humphrey Bogart, Lucille Ball, Fred Astaire, Boris Karloff, Marilyn Monroe and Walt Disney four each; and Vivien Leigh, Alfred Hitchcock and Mae West three apiece. Duplications currently run about 3-4 percent a year, but are expected to decline. Last year the church adopted a policy that rank-and-file members could submit for baptism only the names of their own ancestors.

So where do the Mormons stand with their herculean labor? Daniels said some demographers estimate 69-70 billion people have inhabited the globe at one time, and church experts estimate there are identifying records extant for only 10 percent of that total.

"We don't have any way to determine who those other people are," Daniels said, but Mormons believe the bulk of their work on behalf of humankind will come after Jesus Christ returns and peace reigns for 1,000 years.

"The idea is that during the Millennium, any mistake that we've made in mortality, in record-keeping and recording and temple work will be corrected."

It is understood, he said, that the Creator has the master list.

It's easy to confuse religions

Have you ever had someone mistake you for somebody else? Or an Albertson's someone approached me and talked for 10 minutes before realizing I wasn't who the person thought I was!

Today, with so many churches, it is difficult to remember what each denomination believes. Some years back, I read a survey about what different churches were best known for. This article indicated the Seventh-day Adventists were notorious for their choir in Salt Lake City. Although we'd love to claim the beautiful voices of Salt Lake, I realized there is some confusion about who we are as a church. Many times, because we worship on Saturday instead of Sunday, people have associated anything slightly different with our church. When there is a lack of knowledge about a subject or group, sometimes a prejudice develops.

Today, I hope to dispel any misunderstanding about Seventh-day Adventists. Our beliefs come from the scriptures of both the Old and New Testaments. We believe that a personal relationship with Jesus Christ is essential to salvation, which is "grace through faith and not of works." We also believe in the Trinity and Saturday as the sabbath.

Let me explain briefly why we worship on Saturday instead of Sunday. I would like to state from the beginning that my purpose in doing this is not to judge any other denomination or person who does not worship on this day but to clarify our understanding of scriptures.

In Genesis, we find at creation God set aside the seventh day; it says God "blessed and sanctified" the seventh day. Later, when the Israelites left Egypt, God encountered them in the Sinai Desert and with his own finger wrote in stone the Ten Commandments.

The fourth commandment states, "Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy; six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord your God ..." (Exodus 20:1-2)

Luke 4:16 says while Christ was on this earth, it was his practice to go to church on the sabbath day.

In Revelation 14:12, it tells us that God's people, just before his return, will have these things in common: They will (1) "keep the commandments of God" and (2) "have the faith of Jesus." This scripture does not indicate selected commandments but all, which would include the sabbath.

Some Christians have said the law was nailed to the cross. This is true, but it was the ceremonial law and not the moral law. Others wonder how we can be certain this is the right day. We only have to study Luke 23:50-56 and Luke 24:1-3 to know that Christians can trace time back to the cross and know when Good Friday or Easter Sunday is to realize that time is still the same.

Another frequent question is, "Does it really matter which day one worships on?"

As we look at the story of Cain and Abel, we recognize that God is particular in how we worship him. However, the greatest benefit of the sabbath is its relationship to our salvation. We are not saved because we keep the Religious upbringing breeds better sex

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

A religious upbringing can lead to an excellent sex life, especially when a passionate marriage bed is no longer considered one of life's guilty pleasures, new research indicates.

Drawing from his experience of more than 25 years of in-depth interviews as a psychologist and other studies, the dean of the School of Psychology at Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif., says in a new book that religion has a generally positive effect on sexual health. In his own study of 600 men who describe themselves as religious, large majorities said their religious views increased their sexual self-control, respect for women and understanding of the role sex plays in human life, while relatively few respondents said it produced a lot of guilt, Dr. Archibald Hart reported in "The Sexual Man," due out next month from Word Publishing.

"It is very possible that the other values communicated in a deeply Christian home such as love, respect for women, care for the whole family and an essentially high standard of morality have positive effects on a man's adult sexuality," Hart said.

In addition to his own work as a psychologist, Hart said in his 16 years of teaching at the seminary, students were required to read a confidential paper addressing personal issues including their struggles with sexuality.

'It is very possible that the other values communicated in a deeply Christian home such as love, respect for women, care for the whole family and an essentially high standard of morality have positive effects on a man's adult sexuality.'

— Dr. Archibald Hart, author of "The Sexual Man"

For the book, Hart also conducted his own study by distributing questionnaires at two conferences and mailing them to 1,000 men on a semi-annual mailing list. One hundred fifty men returned surveys at conferences and 450 responded to the mailed questionnaires. The respondents, many of them Protestant clergy, ranged in age from 17 to 72.

He said the sample he studied does not in any way represent the national male population, but does offer a glimpse into how men who consider themselves to be religious and of high moral standards experience sex.

The results were encouraging, he said. Most respondents, including an especially high number of people brought up in religious households, described their sex lives as excellent or good. Only a handful of respondents said their current religious views distorted their sexuality, Hart reported.

"I expected more men to blame their religious upbringing for sexual problems," Hart said. "But most report they're healthier sexually because of a religious upbringing."

The Rev. Andrew Greeley, a Catholic sociologist from the University of Chicago, said because the study was not made of a random sample, no scientific conclusions can be drawn.

"I don't think he's wrong, but I don't think he's made the case either," Greeley said.

Lawrence Young, a sociologist at Brigham Young University, said as long as it is understood the survey was done among a "fairly biased sample," the research is revealing of the sexual fulfillment reported by conservative Protestants.

"Their world view is monogamous, it is certainly not sexually repressed in a Victorian sense," Young said.

In addition to the values of respect and self-control noted by Hart, Young said other characteristics of conservative Protestants that would lead to a better sex life include a shared understanding "of the rules of the game" that reduce uncertainty and promote confidence between partners.

Motorcycles and Bibles mix

FORT WAYNE, Ind. — Scripture, black leather and motorcycles are not often mentioned in the same breath.

But once a year the "Blessing of the Bikes" attracts leather-clad bikers to an Archa Church for a little extra help from a higher source.

"Motorcycles are a little dangerous out there, and I feel any little bit helps," said Deb Gordon, an organizer of the blessing. "You never know what kind of a situation you're going to get into." So, five years ago, she teamed up with Jerry, and Joe and Rose Weber organized the first blessing at St. Patrick's Catholic Church. All four are members of the church, and they are all devoted motorcyclists.

The first year's blessing was an intimate ceremony — just 16 riders showed up. But it's grown every year since. The turnout Saturday set another record with 111 motorcyclists attending the service in the country church's parking lot.

Missouri LDS church dedicated

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. — About 15,000 people attended the final dedication ceremony for a $35 million Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints Temple, capping the church's nine-day work conference.

Since the Temple sanctuary holds only 1,600 people, thousands viewed the Sunday service on closed circuit television across the street in the R LDS Auditorium, the Stone Church and five other churches.

At one point, 350 homing pigeons were released. They circled the crowd outside the Temple, which is known for its stainless steel spiral, and then split off in several directions.

"Just in the four years since we broke ground for this sanctuary, we have seen our hopes for peace with greater justice and freedom ... be dashed ... then rise feebly in the Holy Land, only to be threatened once again by extremists on both sides of that terrible conflict," President Wallace B. Smith said in his dedication speech.

He said the quest for peace begins "with our own hearts and wills and is based on our relationship with the God to whom we dedicate this place of worship and prayer."

The RLDS church emerged during the 19th century from a schism over leadership of the Mormon Church. It has some 240,000 members.

LDS plans satellite broadcast

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has planned a satellite broadcast for 6 p.m. Sunday.

The approximately 30-minute broadcast is intended to instruct anyone interested in the International Year of the Family. Elder Russell M. Nelson, surgeon and medical researcher and a member of the church's Council of Twelve Apostles, will discuss strengthening the family.

"Facilities to receive the broadcast are set up at LDS Stake centers throughout the Magic Valley. Each location has been instructed to set up displays explaining ideas that help families. Information will also be available for families experiencing difficulties. Questions are welcome."

President Brent H. Nielsen of the Twin Falls West Stake suggested that this is an excellent way for people of any religious denomination to learn what is available and to find concepts that may work for their families.

The public is invited, and admission is free. Stake centers can be found in Kimberly, Filer, Jerome, Wendell, Carey, Oakley, Paul, Declo and at two locations in Twin Falls, Burley and Rupert. Contact a member of the LDS Church for location information.

Eidsmoe to speak on Clinton

TWIN FALLS — John Eidsmoe will speak on "Loyal Opposition: A Christian Response to the Clinton Administration" at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Christian Center, 181 Morrison St.

Eidsmoe is an ordained minister, constitutional lawyer, lieutenant colonel in the Air Force Reserve and professor from Goode Jones School of Law at Faulkner University, where he received the Outstanding Professor Award recently. He has authored several books, including "Christianity and the Constitution," "Basic Legal Axioms," "God and Caesar," "Gays and God," "The Case Against Homosexuals in the Military" and others.

The public is invited, and admission is free.

German Sausage Supper set

BURLEY — The Burley Presbyterian Men's German Sausage Supper is planned for 5:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at the United Methodist Church, 2100 Burton Ave.

The menu includes homemade German sausage, scrambled eggs, hashbrowns, biscuits and gravy and homemade German coffee cake. Supper is all-you-can-eat for a freewill offering.

The First Christian Church spent $1,750 on four-color mass mailings to every resident in the area's ZIP code before both Christmas and Easter. The church also advertises in a local newspaper, subscribes to a monthly listing of new homeowners and sends personal letters and information about the church.

The result? Carpenter said 462 first-time worshippers came to the church last year, the first time the church tried direct marketing. That's an average of almost 10 new worshippers each Sunday.

"It's (the mailings) one of the largest single items in our budget," said Carpenter, the church's senior pastor. "We feel like it's money well-spent. Like they say in business, you have to spend money to make money, and it's like that in church too."

The Fishers Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) turned to "The Phone's for You," a church development company, and door-to-door visits to fill the seats at its newly formed church north of Indianapolis, the Rev. Terri Gomez said.

"About 100 callers spent four nights a week for five weeks trying to drum up interest after being trained by the development company, which provides information on where to obtain phone numbers and supplies scripts," said Gomez, the church's pastor.

Jehovah's Witness attend assembly

TWIN FALLS — Several people from Magic Valley area Jehovah's Witness congregations were in attendance at a Special Assembly Day program held in Idaho Falls on April 10.

Speakers used the theme, "Closely Following Our Great Exemplar," to encourage approximately 700 Jehovah's Witnesses and others to be more Christlike.

Part of the program featured counsel especially for youths and provided information to help them face challenges in connection with education, entertainment and materialism.

Major said the principal task explained how there can be no greater or more rewarding course than following Jesus Christ's example.

Anyone interested in a free home Bible study are encouraged to contact Jehovah's Witnesses locally by calling 734-0390.

Soup kitchen reports more meals

TWIN FALLS — The soup kitchen at St. Edward's Catholic Church recently presented its 1993 Service Report to the parish.

Following are the statistics for the past year: Cash donations, $4,991; value of donated commodities, $20,278; value of meals served, $23,739; number of meals served, 16,333; number of volunteers, 1,234; volunteer hours, 7,567.

Deacon Lloyd LeClair reported that the number of new served since far in 1994 is considerably higher than this time in 1993.

The soup kitchen was established in 1987 by Father William Gould. It has operated under the leadership of LeClair and his wife, Evelyn. St. Edward's provides the facility and direction of the kitchen, and a number of other organizations and churches, including the Church of the Nazarene and several LDS wards coordinated by the Hansen Ward, have helped cook, serve and clean up the meals.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thompson, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.
