Anti-gay group endorses Bell

Jerome lawmaker says her earlier support for petition was a mistake

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, disavowed support for a statewide anti-gay-rights petition drive Friday after she received an endorsement from the Idaho Citizens Alliance.

ICA Chairman Kelly Walton of Burley said Bell received the endorsement because she earlier indicated support for the petition drive when she filled out a questionnaire from the Idaho Family Forum.

"Do you support or oppose the Idaho Citizens Alliance initiative to prohibit special rights to homosexuals?" the candidate survey asked. Friday Bell said her answer on the survey was a mistake.

Calling herself a supporter of "traditional family values," Bell says she opposes the ICA because "the initiative at this point in time is not necessary."

The three-term legislator says the initiative may be unconstitutional, and that it diverts attention from more important issues.

"I'm not going to go into the voting booth and vote for something that could tie up the courts for months, wasting our time and resources. That is not efficient government," Bell said Friday.

Bell is one of 36 Idaho politicians — including four Magic Valley candidates — endorsed by the

ICA makes its choices for Gem primary ballot

RUPERT — The Idaho Citizens Alliance has endorsed its 1994 "Dream Team," a list of 36 conservative Idaho candidates dedicated to defending "common sense values."

Chairman Kelly Walton says the ICA's Stop Special Rights Committee will actively support an "all-star lineup of candidates," including Larry Eastland for governor, Dean Hagenson for lieutenant governor, Wayne Kidwell for Supreme Court justice, and Ralph J. Gimes for state auditor.

The ICA is also backing legislative candidates statewide, and Walton predicts the Alliance's support could make the difference in a number of primary contests.

"This could swing several close races," he said. The ICA endorsement list will grow even longer after the May 24 primary election. In some races, more than one candidate supports

Nixon's book offers tough solutions

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In his last words to the nation, Richard M. Nixon offered tough solutions for dealing with crime and race relations, health care and "radical environmentalists."

And he complained the entertainment industry promotes violence for profit.

"Hollywood is sick," Nixon wrote in his 10th book, completed only weeks before his death on April 22. Random House rushed the book into print and said it will be in stores next week.

"Beyond Peace" urges a new path for America both in foreign affairs and at home. Nixon's observations of the national scene are rooted in conservative beliefs.

"The depiction of violence and explicit sex sells, and Hollywood is in the business of making money," Nixon wrote. "By foregoing its responsibility to observe basic standards of decency, Hollywood has accelerated the decline of these standards in the community at large."

He warned that unless Hollywood cleans up its act, it will inevitably face censoring by government.

The 37th president, whose Watergate scandals eroded trust in government, said the news media "bear a large share of the responsibility for the current loss of faith in American political institutions."

An institutional bias in the press "makes for excessively harsh criticisms of all politicians and public officials," he wrote. "Competitive pressures too often push the media past the limits of responsibility, destructively and unnecessarily undermining the authority and credibility of government."

While the news media would not have physicians certify themselves or politicians investigate themselves, "we are taught to expect that editors, reporters and broadcasters have a unique capacity to ensure that they themselves act responsibly," he said.

Nixon said he started the Environmental Protection Agency to find a balance between economic growth and protecting the environment.

"But as so often happens with government programs, the pendulum has swung too far," he said. "Measures designed to protect endangered species such as bears, wolves, and the bald eagle are now being used to force Idaho farmers off their land for the sake of the thumbnail-size Bruneau Hot Springs snail."

S. Africa starts counting votes today

Los Angeles Times

MAHWELELENG, South Africa — Despite widespread fears of polling violence, this nation's first all-race elections for a post-apartheid government drew to a close Friday amid an atmosphere of calm and initial assessments by political leaders that the long-awaited balloting was substantially free and fair.

Reports from the six remote tribal homelands where polling had been extended an extra day were similar to those here in the former so-called homeland of Lebowa — a massive turnout of first-time black voters, scattered cases of ballots arriving late and a weary sense of satisfaction that the historic week was finally over.

Counting started at 7 a.m. today South Africa time at about 650 sites around the country, with the first unofficial results available by about noon.

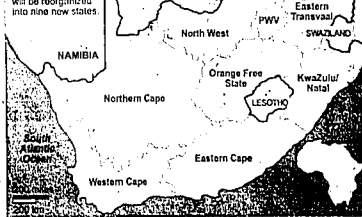

The official winner of the national and provincial races won't be announced before midnight Sunday, Moore said.

The first Parliament elected by the black majority is scheduled to convene on May 6 in Cape Town to choose the new president. The inauguration will be May 10 in Pretoria.

Both Nelson Mandela, who is almost certain to be the first black president, and Frederik W. de Klerk, who is likely to be the last white president, said they were satisfied that the election had been free and fair.

After the election, South Africa's four provinces and 90 black homelands will be reorganized into nine new states.

Thunderstorms, freezing rain and snow hit parts of the Midwest and southern Plains Friday, and showers were scattered from the Gulf Coast to the Northeast.

Sleet and snow fell across parts of the northern Texas panhandle, western Oklahoma and southwestern Kansas, the remnants of a storm system that dumped up to a foot of snow Thursday from South Dakota to Minnesota.

Snow also fell across much of Colorado into southern Wyoming. Four inches fell at South Fork, Colo., and 3 inches at Summitville, Colo. More snow was expected ICA's Stop Special Rights Committee, according to a list provided to The Times-News by Walton.

Also on the ICA's list from the Magic Valley are House District 21A candidate John Koning of Wendell and House District 21B candidate Paul Lederer of Wendell.

Harold Mohlman of Rupert, candidate for Senate District 24, also got ICA's nod.

In the May 24 Republican primary election, Bell faces challenger Randy B. Koning. Koning has no GOP opponent. Lederer is running against Tim Ridinger of Shoshone. Mohlman is challenging Sen. Dean L. Cameron of Rupert.

Initiative supporters say their measure would stop Idaho's gays and lesbians from obtaining "special rights" such as affirmative action and civil rights protections. Opponents say the ICA is trying to legalize discrimination against a small and vulnerable minority. To qualify for the November ballot, the ICA must collect 32,061 valid signatures by July 8.

Walton says the endorsements could give the candidates a real boost. They'll be announced in the May ICA newsletter, which will be mailed to 26,000 households across Idaho. The newsletter urges voters to support the "pro-family candidates" who are "committed to restoring the traditional values that made Idaho great."

ICA's four Magic Valley candidates agree on one thing: They oppose "special rights" for homosexuals. But they take different positions on the initiative.

Thursday night, Harold Mohlman said he'd seen the petition, but he hadn't signed it Friday, after checking with the ICA. Mohlman said he has signed the petition but he's "not real sure" if he'll back it come November.

On Thursday, Mohlman said he wanted to avoid embracing a "loose coalition." Friday, he said he welcomes the ICA's endorsement.

Joining Mohlman in the undecided column is Wendell's Paul Lederer. After telling the Idaho Family Forum that he backs the initiative, Lederer is now uncommitted.

"To be totally honest, at this point in time I don't really know or understand this initiative. I haven't read it or paid attention to it."

One local candidate who isn't back-pedaling is John Koning of Wendell. Koning has backed the ICA and its initiative from the beginning, saying the proposal will protect Idaho's children. Calling the endorsement "wonderful," Koning says Idaho can use a "visionary, common-sense, proactive" pro-family movement.

the ICA agenda. In those contests, the ICA will "let them duke it out in the primaries and we'll support the winner in the general election," he added.

The ICA's warm welcome from some Gem state politicians pleases the ICA chairman.

"In two states that have run similar ballot measures, no mainstream candidates supported those initiatives. I think it bodes really well for our chances in Idaho," Walton said.

Businessman Eastland, in a four-way race for the Republican gubernatorial candidacy, has openly courted ICA support. Hangerman and Kidwell have also welcomed the ICA's backing.

Some of the endorsed candidates may be surprised to see their names on the list. The ICA made its recommendations after reviewing candidate surveys submitted to the Idaho Family Forum. Walton says all of the endorsed candidates except for Supreme Court candidate Kidwell have embraced the ICA anti-gay rights initiative. Kidwell has said he cannot comment on the issue because it may come before the state Supreme Court.

Nixon

He called "all 1,342 impetuous pages" of the Clinton health care plan "a blueprint for the takeover by the federal government of one-seventh of the nation's economy."

The former president maintained that the criminal justice system "has abysmally failed to deliver what should be the first freedom: freedom from fear."

He said most political leaders, in order not to appear racist, shirk the question of race as it affects crime.

"What is truly racist is to avoid addressing the problems of black America for the sake of avoiding offending people's sensibilities," he wrote.

The nation must face up to the fact that the breakdown of the family is worst in the urban underclass, Nixon warned, adding:

"Blacks are not the only members of this underclass, but they are the largest proportion of it. In 1992, half of all murder victims in the United States were black. Ninety percent were killed by other blacks."

It is a copout that is "morally bankrupt and intellectually vacuous" and the solution lies in a resolve that "another lost generation will not take to the streets in the beginning of the next century."

cause it may come before the state Supreme Court.

Early in this campaign, the ICA promised it would not endorse candidates publicly unless asked to do so. Walton says that decision was revised after two polls showed wide support for the anti-gay movement.

"This initiative is so popular that it's not going to hurt anybody. It's going to help them."

Walton thinks May 24 will be a great day for his conservative candidates. "Overall, I think we'll have better than a 50 percent win-loss ratio. I'm confident of that."

Brian Bergquist, co-chairman of Don't Sign On, said Friday that primary day could be a disappointment for the ICA. He predicted the endorsements would "polarize voter's perceptions of the candidates and they'll be perceived as much more extreme."

"There are some far-right conservative fringe folks in the Legislature, but they're definitely in the minority. The majority of legislators are there to do business, and not to get bogged down in things that aren't important or really relevant to Idaho," Bergquist said.

Bad air puts millions at risk

ATLANTA (AP) — Almost 23 million Americans face a "deadly public health threat" because they live in places where pollutants such as soot and acid aerosols exceed federal standards, the American Lung Association said Friday.

Those people — 9.1 percent of the country's population — live in 16 communities, including Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, where pollutants called "particulates" turn the air thick and hazy, especially in the summer, the association said.

The particulates can impair lung function and seriously threaten the health — and possibly the lives — of people with chronic respiratory illnesses, such as asthma, bronchitis and emphysema, the association said.

Lung disease is the nation's third leading cause of death.

"This report shows that both the public and the government face a deadly public health threat in dealing with particulate matter air pollution," association president Dr.

Kootenai County among highest polluters

The 16 U.S. counties that exceed the federal regulations for particulate air pollution, according to the American Lung Association:

- Maricopa, Ariz.
- Jrno, Calif.
- Los Angeles, Calif.
- San Bernardino, Calif.
- Dover
- Kootenai, Idaho
- Cook, Ill.
- Lake, Ind.
- Floathard, Mont.
- Lane, Ore.
- Philadelphia
- El Paso, Texas
- Salt Lake, Utah
- Utah, Utah
- Weber, Utah
- Spokane, Wash.

Alfred Munzer said.

The report looked at counties and cities across the country that fail to meet Environmental Protection Agency regulations, comparing them with communities that meet the federal standards and those that meet California's.

California standards are the nation's strictest for particulate air pollution. The EPA standard for particulates is 150 micrograms per cubic meter of air, while California's is 51 micrograms.

Idaho lawmakers approved a $61,500 program last winter to develop and implement a community-based air quality plan in Kootenai County, the state's only so-called non-attainment area.

Sources of particulate air pollution include diesel bus and truck emissions, factory and utility smokestacks, car exhaust, wood burning, mining and construction.

Among the worst communities were smoggy Denver and Los Angeles counties.

"We can't let our guard down in regard to air quality," said Mary White, an epidemiologist with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, which presented the study in its weekly report. "There's still a great deal that needs to be done so that air quality doesn't pose a health risk."

The survey found that 1.9 million children with asthma, 3.5 million adults with asthma and 6.2 million people with chronic pulmonary disease live in the country's most polluted areas.

Nearly half of all those with asthma live in counties where the particulate air pollution exceeds California limits, the study said.

About 75 percent of Americans, or 115 million, lived in 338 counties and cities that did not meet California standards for air pollutants in 1992, the lung association said. About 36 percent, or 92 million, lived in 322 counties and cities with levels below the federal limit but above the California standard.

Gap in infant mortality between blacks, whites continues to widen

ATLANTA (AP) — By the turn of the century, black babies will be three times more likely to die by their first birthdays as white babies, federal health officials said Friday.

From 1980 to 1991, the most recent year for which data are available, the rate of black infant deaths dropped nearly 21 percent, from 22.2 to 17.6 per 1,000 births, said the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The death rate for white babies fell 33 percent, from 10.9 to 7.3 per 1,000, the CDC said in its weekly report.

Overall, the U.S. infant mortality rate was 8.9 per 1,000 births in 1991, down 29.4 percent from 12.6 in 1980, the CDC said. The report didn't break the figures down into other groups.

Infant mortality rates are important because they offer health officials a window on other health issues, such as changes in lifestyle and the environment.

Just 24 years ago, the ratio of black infant mortality to whites was 2-1, said Dr. Davidatcher, the CDC director. Since then, the disparity has grown, despite the ongoing drop in the overall rate.

"The good news in this report is that we continue to see significant declines in infant mortality in both whites and blacks," Satcher said. "The bad news is that infant mortality is not declining as fast among blacks."

Researchers must examine housing, income, stress and other factors as contributing to very low birth weight, said CDC epidemiologist Dr. Solomon J. Yuss.

Most of the gap results from an increase in the number of very low birth weights among black newborns, Yuss said. A very low birth weight is 3 pounds, 4 ounces or less.

In 1980, the proportion of white babies with very low birth weight was 0.9 percent, compared with 2.5 percent of black newborns. By 1991, the proportion grew to 0.96 percent for whites and 2.95 percent for blacks, Yuss said.

The "director of Emory University's Minority Health Research Laboratory, Stephen Thomas, said the persistent gap between whites and blacks is a travesty."

He said cuts in federal public health programs that provided prenatal visits for people in the black community were to blame.

"Now, too many black women are having their first pre-natal visits in the emergency room," Thomas said.

Federal health officials expect to meet their goal of decreasing the overall infant mortality rate to 7 per 1,000 by the year 2000. But the goal of lowering the black rate to 11 by the same year most likely will not be met, Yuss said.

Redistricting plan goes to legislators

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana's first new majority-black congressional district zigzagged across 600 miles of the state like "the mark of Zorro."

No federal court threw it out. Now, the Legislature has drawn a replacement. It slashes across the state diagonally for 220 miles from Shreveport to Baton Rouge, and the attorney who challenged the first district says the second one isn't much better.

Gov. Edwin Edwards signed the plan Monday. It awaits Justice Department approval, which could take two months. It also was submitted to the panel of three federal judges who rejected the initial plan.

"I think the courts will sign off on the new plan," said state Sen. Dennis Bagnier, a leader of the black caucus who backed the plan. The dispute, like those in North Carolina and Georgia, focuses on how far states can go to boost the chances of electing minority congressional representatives — as required by federal law — without violating voter rights through modern-day gerrymandering.

Louisiana's Legislature met in special session last week to remap the state's seven U.S. House districts. Like the plan rejected in federal court, the latest includes two districts with black majorities, since about 28 percent of the state's registered voters are black.

Louisiana has long had a black-majority district in the New Orleans area, which wasn't challenged.

In December, the federal court ruled that the district approved in 1991 violated the rights of black and white voters because district lines cut back and forth without regard to traditional political boundaries.

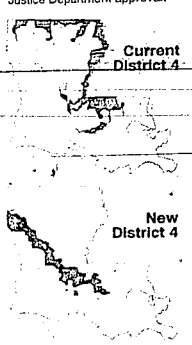

The three-judge panel likened it to Zorro's signature and called the plan unconstitutional.

Attorney Paul Herd, whose lawsuit toppled the 1991 boundary lines, said the new district is only slightly more compact than the old one. The original had a 62 percent black population, while the new one is about 55 percent black.

Creating the second black-majority district was needed to obtain Justice Department approval of the state redistricting plan as required by

Louisiana redistricting

The Louisiana Legislature has redrawn congressional District 4 to eliminate an unconstitutional concentration of black voters. The new district still has a black majority, but cuts a more logical path through the center of the state. The plan must still receive U.S. Justice Department approval.

federal law, backers said.

But Hurd said the court clearly told the Legislature that a widespread district drawn simply for racial makeup would not pass muster.

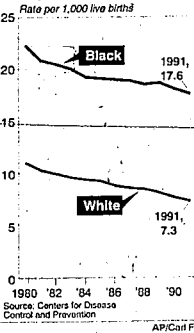

"We're the pingpong ball," he said. "The Legislature had the choice of going with what the court said and what the Justice Department said they wanted. The Legislature went with the Justice Department."

Congressional district plans in two other states are also being attacked.

In Augusta, Ga., a federal court plan refused to delay the fall congressional elections because of a pending challenge to a new black-majority district.

Infant mortality gap

Black babies are more than twice as likely as white babies to die before age 1, and if current trends continue, the black-to-white infant mortality ratio will reach 3-to-1 in the year 2000, health officials say.

Tax delays cause concern for IRS

WASHINGTON — Tax returns have been coming in more slowly so far this year, and the Internal Revenue Service is trying to determine why.

Through April 22, the agency had received 103.6 million returns, down from 104.1 million through the comparable period a year earlier, the IRS said Friday. The number of extensions requested filed fell to 2.6 million from 3.6 million.

At the beginning of this year the IRS was expecting 117.5 million returns by year-end. It has scaled back the projection to 114.9 million and is considering reducing the projection again, according to IRS spokesman Frank Keith. Last year, 113.8 million returns were received.

Streptomycin discoverer honored

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — His name went on the patent, but he never got the prize.

It was 1952, and Albert Schatz was outraged that his professor received the Nobel Prize for discovering nearly 10 years earlier the first antibiotic that successfully treated tuberculosis. After all, it was his discovery, too.

Now, his alma mater, which named a building after the professor, is trying to make it up to Schatz by bestowing its highest award.

Schatz, 74, received the Rutgers University Award on Thursday, an event that coincided with the 50th anniversary of the discovery of streptomycin by Schatz and Professor Selman A. Waksman.

Ex-tycoon ordered to pay $121 million

NEWARK, N.J. — The fallen tycoon behind the Crazy Eddie electronics retail chain was sentenced Friday to 12½ years in prison for defrauding investors and ordered to repay $121 million.

Eddie Antar, who fled the country after the chain collapsed four years ago, apologized to his family but maintained his innocence in what authorities called one of the nation's largest stock swindles.

Social Security spends $32 million on bonuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration spent $32 million on employee bonuses last year at a time it was pressing Congress for millions more to deal with serious problems in its disability programs. The largest single award — $9,256 — went to an executive who had been on the job for less than three months.

Two-thirds of the agency's 65,000 employees got a cash bonus in 1993, according to Social Security spokesman Phil Gambino.

Records obtained under the Freedom of Information Act show that the biggest award went to Lawrence Thompson, who was named the agency's second-ranking executive by Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala on July 19.

His bonus, recommended by Social Security Commissioner Shirley Chater and approved by Shalala, was for the fiscal year that ended 73 days later, on Sept. 30, Gambino said. Thompson's annual salary is $120,594.

Social Security is not unique among federal agencies in awarding employee bonuses.

But the agency's decision to spend $32 million is striking because Social Security lobbied Congress last year for additional money to process a growing backlog of disability claims. Some ill and injured workers have died, lost their homes, or turned to welfare while they waited for their first Social Security check.

Rep. Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania, the senior Republican on a separate Ways and Means subcommittee that oversees a part of Social Security, said an agency that admits to serious problems in its disability programs should not be rewarding "the people in the system."

The money we gave them to clean it up shouldn't be going to bonuses," he said.

Congress gave the agency an extra $200 million to speed up those decisions, and Rep. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., questioned whether Social Security would have been able to finance its bonuses without that money.

Bunning, the senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Social Security subcommittee, called the bonuses outrageous and criticized the agency for giving Thompson such a large sum after such a short time on the job.

"To get $9,256 for 2½ months of service in the Social Security Administration, that is an outrage that we all ought to be made aware of," Bunning said this week.

Disclosure of the awards comes at a time of growing problems for the agency.

A record number of people are applying for disability benefits, severely straining the agency's ability to quickly evaluate their cases. Applicants have waited a year or more to learn if they will receive disability payments.

Callers complain that they cannot get through on the agency's toll-free hot line or that telephone lines unanswered.

Inner-city Philadelphians stir racial row on water

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Anthony Strickland is a strapping 16-year-old with stomach muscles that ripple like the river he stands ready to conquer with a scull and oars. He and other inner-city youths are trying to enter the world of competitive rowing.

It's not the first time poor youths have been knocked at the doors of Boathouse Row — a string of landmark, 100-year-old buildings along the Schuylkill River.

The Vesper Club initiated its outreach program two months ago, before the controversy erupted. It will become part of the larger program the clubs adopted last week.

"It's no matter how we ended up getting here," City Council President John F. Street said during announcement of the program. "We're here now."

Street, who is black, led the charge, shouting in council chambers that the predominantly white rowers duke it out on a level of ridiculous arguments or provide genuine leadership and get it to happen.

Boat club members say that over the years, they've tried to recruit minorities — without city prompting — but have been unable to stir interest. Public schools and recreation centers have no programs to introduce rowing, and it competes with other sports that hold the promise of college scholarships and "big money."

John B. Kelly III, whose father and grandfather won Olympic medals in rowing, believes attracting minorities is not only the right thing to do but will also benefit the sport. He coaches Strickland's team from Benjamin Franklin High School.

Kelly believes rowing, more than any other sport, teaches teamwork and discipline.

"No matter how good one individual is, no one person can win the race," he said.

Kelly's grandfather, an Irish-Catholic brick-layer from Philadelphia, was barred in 1920 from competing in England's Henley Regatta because organizers thought laborers had an advantage over gentlemen.

Kelly, who went on to become a millionaire, swore his son would return to win the Henley one day. The son did.

The eldest Kelly, like Strickland, might never have known about the boathouses if not for club members who reached out to the children of poor immigrant Irish-Catholics in 1910, and that shaped the sport.

"Because of the Catholics getting involved, it's mainly a blue-collar sport, not a blue blood sport," John Kelly III said.

"It's not elitist," he said, "though it is almost exclusively white."

because he knew how to swim.

"I know there were boathouses in Philadelphia, but I didn't know where," said Strickland, who lives in a housing project three miles from the Tudor-style buildings of Boathouse Row.

Canada may defy fishing ban

Seattle Times

SEATTLE — Canada might expand its net fishery in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, an area U.S. officials closed to fishing last month to protect critically depressed salmon runs.

The announcement by a Canadian official that his country is prepared to "move aggressively to protect its fair share" of Pacific salmon escalates tensions between the two nations over the depressed West Coast fishing industry.

C.C. "Bud" Graham, chief of international affairs for Canada's Department of Fisheries and Oceans, described Canada's plans for the Strait at a salmon conference in Seattle Tuesday.

"In the absence of an international agreement, we have no other choice," Graham said. "Canada must protect its fishing interests the only way it can."

U.S. officials closed the Strait to fishing last month to protect critically depressed Puget Sound and Columbia River salmon runs.

Relations between Canada and the United States have never been worse, say some members of the Pacific Salmon Commission.

The commission, with members from Canada, Washington, Alaska and Oregon and Northwest treaty tribes, is responsible for negotiating annual, bilateral harvest agreements provided for under the 1985 U.S.-Canada Salmon Treaty. But talks broke off abruptly last month, and there is no indication negotiators will be returning to the table anytime soon.

Attempting to avert an all-out fish war, Prime Minister Jean Chretien last week asked President Clinton for his help restating the talks.

"We're prepared to make a deal. I have room to negotiate. If I only had someone to negotiate with," Yves Fortier, Canada's lead salmon-treaty negotiator, said in Seattle Wednesday. "But so far, it's been a charade."

Fortier said he believes that for a variety of reasons the Clinton administration has not given this issue the attention it deserves.

The increasingly bitter dispute centers on Canada-spawned salmon caught in waters off Alaska. Canada wants the U.S. to significantly reduce its take of those fish, in return for Canadian fishermen reducing their salmon harvest in the straits.

"The U.S. shares in our abundance, but wants us to share in its ecological disasters," Fortier said. "That is not an equitable arrangement."

Canada's proposal has deeply divided the U.S. commission members: Washington and Oregon are prepared to sign off, but Alaska has rejected it out of hand. Unanimous agreement is required for a deal to be struck.

"Conservation should be its own reward," said Charles Meecham, who represents Alaska on the Pacific Salmon Commission.

"It is ludicrous of Canada to expect the United States to forgo salmon in Southeast Alaska because there's a problem off Vancouver Island," he said, following Graham's remarks to salmon conference participants. "Alaska is not going to initiate a fish war, but neither will it give in to ridiculous demands."

Spy chief pledges probe for lost secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA is free to move "full steam ahead" with an investigation of secrets compromised by admitted Soviet spy Aldrich H. Ames, now that the sensational legal case is settled, CIA Director R. James Woolsey said Friday.

Woolsey also said he intended to punish any CIA officials who are found to share blame for not catching Ames sooner in nearly a decade of his spying for Moscow. As a government team led by the FBI began questioning Ames Friday about the extent and details of his betrayals, Woolsey sought to highlight the importance of the CIA's work and his determination to correct its exposed flaws.

Woolsey said in a speech to an American Bar Association panel that from the time Ames and his wife, Rosario, were arrested in February to their guilty pleas on Thursday, the CIA was obligated to limit its own investigation of what secrets were lost and how Ames avoided detection for so long.

"I know there has been frustration in Congress — I certainly shared it, as have the employees of the CIA," Woolsey said, adding that the Justice Department correctly worried that a full-blown CIA probe could jeopardize the prosecution.

The Ames case, generally considered the most serious intelligence breach in U.S. history, has given new impetus to the post-Cold War pressure for cutting the CIA's budget, changing its focus or even doing away with the agency.

In comments clearly directed at those who question the value of the CIA's work, Woolsey described a wide range of missions that justify keeping a robust CIA. These include detecting the illicit transfer of nuclear arms technologies, combating terrorism and drug trafficking and monitoring economic developments in strategically important nations such as Russia and China.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, said Friday the CIA stood at an important crossroads in the post-Cold War world.

"They're going to have to shape up — I think they will, and the public's going to demand it," Glickman said in a Fox TV interview.

Ames pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit espionage and to evade taxes, and received a life sentence. Mrs. Ames pleaded guilty to a lesser espionage charge; her sentencing was delayed until Aug. 26 to give the government added leverage in compelling Ames to fulfill his pledge to tell all he knows about his spying activities.

With the prosecution complete, "we can now proceed full steam ahead," Woolsey said.

The CIA chief said the agency would accelerate its work on two main fronts: an internal study of the damage to national security caused by Ames' betrayals to Moscow, and a CIA inspector general investigation of how Ames managed to avoid detection for so long and how CIA officials handled the case once they suspected that a Soviet "mole" had burrowed deep into the CIA.

Judge finds 'Aryan beauty' man guilty

CHICAGO (AP) — A Nazi sympathizer was found guilty today of murdering a plastic surgeon he claimed was promoting "fake" Aryan beauty.

Cook County Circuit Judge Earl Strayhorn found Jonathan Haynes guilty of first-degree murder in the non-jury trial and then ruled him eligible for the death penalty.

Haynes, who acted as his own attorney, showed no reaction to the verdict. Though he pleaded innocent, Haynes asserted during his trial this week that he fatally shot Dr. Martin Sullivan in his suburban Winnetka office in 1993 because Sullivan created "fake" Aryan beauty with plastic surgery.

He repeatedly denounced people who "dilute Aryan beauty" with plastic surgery, hair dye and tinted contact lenses.

In his closing argument, Haynes called such behavior hypocritical and said "when people start looking like hypocrites, they start looking like targets."

Yeltsin's foes lambast truce

Russian President Boris Yeltsin's opponents said Friday a political truce was meaningless.

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin's die-hard opponents said Friday a political truce signed with some of his rivals was meaningless and announced plans for huge May Day demonstrations.

The U.S. Embassy warned Americans to stay away from Sunday's demonstrations for fear of violence. Authorities said thousands of police were being brought into the city to control the crowds on the traditional Communist labor day.

A police officer was killed in a clash with protesters on May Day last year, and hundreds of people were injured as marchers armed with stones and metal rods fought truncheon-wielding police.

Yeltsin and his allies signed a political truce with some of his opponents Thursday in a nationally televised ceremony in the Kremlin. The so-called Civic Accord, timed for just before May Day, contained a pledge by all sides not to use violence for political ends.

The 245 signatories ranged from Russia's Choice, the largest pro-Yeltsin coalition in parliament, to such little-known groups as Women of the Navy and the Society of Private Detectives.

Extreme nationalist leader Vladimir Zhirinovskiy signed on behalf of his Liberal Democratic Party, which won nearly 25 percent of the national vote in December's parliamentary elections.

But several of Yeltsin's bitter foes did not join the truce. Former Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, who has announced plans to form a united opposition to Yeltsin, did not attend.

Gennady Zyuganov, chairman of the revived Communist Party, appeared at the ceremony in the regal St. George's Hall but did not sign.

Both Rutskoi and Zyuganov are members of the Accord for the Sake of Russia, a loose coalition of anti-Yeltsin forces that criticized the truce on Friday.

"To join it means to agree to the destruction of our scientific and industrial complex, massive embezzlement of state funds, degradation of the people and destruction of the national culture," the group said in a statement.

"The regime wants to use this accord to protect its current policy," Zyuganov told reporters in the State Duma, the lower house of parliament. "Its aim is to sell our common property, which our people have accumulated for centuries, to those who have accumulated their capital during this thieving privatization."

Zyuganov urged his supporters to gather Sunday on Tverskaya Street, formerly Gorky Street, a busy thoroughfare now lined with stores selling Western cosmetics, fashions and fast food.

At least two other pro-Communist rallies also are planned. Organizers pledged the protests would be non-violent, and the government has authorized them.

Peace seems far off as Bosnian talks continue

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serb and government officials refused to budge in negotiations Friday despite the first united appeal by American, Russian and European envoys to resolve the conflict.

Bosnia's Muslim-led government has threatened to pull out of the talks unless Serb fighters and heavy weapons are well clear of the battered Muslim enclave of Gorazde.

And Bosnian Serbs, whose leader, Radovan Karadzic, met with the envoys in Pale, reiterated their stance that a final territorial settlement hinges on lifting the sanctions against the remaining territory of Yugoslavia.

"The international community has to decide between withholding the sanctions and establishing peace," Jovan Zarnetich, Karadzic's spokesman was quoted as saying by the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug. U.S. envoy Charles Redman and his colleagues were tight-lipped about the day's meeting with the two sides. The mediators are proposing a division of Bosnia that would give 51 percent to a Muslim-Croat federation and 49 percent to the Serbs.

Redman said a major issue was the duration of a future cease-fire between government troops and Serb forces. The government wants it limited to three to four months. The Serbs are seeking a permanent truce.

The government has refused a permanent cease-fire because it fears that would freeze current front lines. Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic said "we will accept only a temporary cease-fire."

Fighting spreads to southern Yemen

SANA'A, Yemen (AP) — Fighting between northern and southern army units has spread to south Yemen, southern officials said Friday, a day after southern soldiers were routed in a clash north of the capital.

The fighting has undermined efforts to salvage the four-year union of the former North and South Yemen and has brought this impoverished Red Sea country closer to civil war.

President Ali Abdullah Saleh of the conservative north and Vice-President Ali Salem al-Beidh, leader of the southern Yemen Socialist Party, signed a reconciliation and reform charter in February to avert a war.

Pope may remain in hospital for 3 weeks

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II may remain in a hospital for up to three weeks following surgery Friday to replace a portion of his thighbone fractured when he slipped in his bathroom.

The pontiff will likely need months of physical therapy before he can walk without a cane or crutches. The head of the surgical team said he may not limp, but will have to give up one of his favorite pastimes—skating.

"But otherwise he should be able to continue a regular life," said Dr. Gianfranco Fineschi.

The pope planned to leave Friday on a weekend trip to Sicily, where he was expected to speak out against the Mafia. Other trips and audiences in the coming weeks were canceled, including a visit to Belgium in May.

The pope, who will turn 74 on May 18, fractured the top of his right thighbone and dislocated the joint when he slipped in his bathroom late Thursday. He underwent surgery at Gemelli Polyclinic in Rome.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said he did not fall because he lost consciousness or was sick, but other details of the accident were not given.

During the 90-minute operation, doctors replaced the top of the pope's thighbone with a metal replacement with a plastic top that fits into the hip joint. He was left with a six-inch scar.

"It didn't go well, it went very well," Fineschi said. "He'll come out of it with the hip God gave him, but with one a bioengineer made."

The pope was not put in traction and rested with his leg slightly elevated in his 10th-floor hospital suite.

Doctors predicted the pope may be able to take his first steps from bed within a week and remain hospitalized for two to three weeks. The rehabilitation regime includes swimming and work on exercise machines.

"The pope will need two crutches, then one crutch, then nothing," said Dr. Alessandro Masini, who assisted in the operation.

Pope fracture

Pope John Paul II was hospitalized Friday after breaking his leg in a fall.

"He's got good bones," said another member of the surgical team, Dr. Cesare Sanguinetti, an orthopedic specialist.

Navarro said the pope will cancel trips and meetings scheduled for the coming weeks. Among them are a May 15 trip to Belgium, a meeting with German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, and plans to preside over closing events of an African bishops synod and lead a conference of cardinals in preparations for celebrations in 2000.

There was no word from the Vatican on whether the pope will keep his scheduled meeting with President Clinton in early June in Rome.

In November, the pope fractured and dislocated his arm after falling down steps at the Vatican at a reception.

South Korean court sentences American

SEOUL, South Korea — The Supreme Court, upholding a lower court ruling, sentenced an American soldier on Friday to 15 years in prison for murdering a South Korean woman.

After the sentence was read for Pvt. Kenneth Markle III of Keyser, W.Va., about 100 students packing the small courtroom chanted "Kick out Americans!"

Neither Markle, his parents nor his lawyers were present at the sentencing. In South Korea, defendants customarily do not attend Supreme Court trials.

Markle's lawyer, Stephen Jory, has said he will appeal in U.S. courts to prevent South Korean authorities from taking custody next week. Markle was held in U.S. custody until the appeals process was completed.

Tijuana's chief of police gunned down

TUJANA, Mexico — Gunmen ambushed and killed Tijuana's chief of police and his bodyguard in the latest attack on a public figure in this border city.

The murders Thursday night of Police Chief Jose Federico Benitez Lopez and his bodyguard, Ramon Alarid Cardenas, were sure to fuel rumors of a conspiracy surrounding the assassination here of Mexico's leading presidential candidate.

The candidate, Luis Donaldo Colosio, was gunned down in Tijuana on March 23 during a campaign rally. His death startled a nation already shaken by an Indian uprising in southern Mexico.

Rwanda refugees flood Tanzania

NAIROBI, Kenya — Hundreds of thousands of refugees fleeing the terror of ethnic massacres in Rwanda have poured into Tanzania within a 24-hour period, the biggest and fastest exodus U.N. officials said they had ever seen.

The United Nations estimated that more than 250,000 people had sought refuge in Tanzania between sundown Thursday and late Friday, when lines at the border stretched for five miles.

"All we could see were rows and rows of people," U.N. emergency officer Maureen Connolly was quoted as saying after flying over the area. "It's a massive crossing and it's continuing. Thousands and thousands of people."

Canadian chief changes mind on issue

TORONTO — One of Liberal Prime Minister Jean Chretien's first actions when he took office last fall was to cancel the previous Conservative government's $3.5 billion contract for new military helicopters.

The move fulfilled a Liberal Party campaign pledge and appeared to end a long debate over the need for sophisticated submarine-hunting helicopters in a post-Cold War era. Chretien said they were too expensive and not necessary.

But the fatal crash Thursday of one of Canada's Sea King helicopters, part of an increasingly decrepit fleet built between 1963 and 1969, has reignited the debate.

U.S. may extend 'safe' zones

TEL AVIV, Israel — Secretary of State Warren Christopher told Bosnia's Serbs the United Nations could extend its protection beyond six "safe areas" if other areas are attacked.

Christopher, here for talks on MidEast peace prospects, said "we are watching the situation very carefully" in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

He said U.S. mediator Charles E. Redman and other emissaries had opened talks with the Serbs and with the Muslim-led Bosnian government, but the time was not ripe to hold a meeting of Western and Russian foreign ministers to promote a settlement of the two-year war.

"We will be looking for an appropriate date," Christopher said at a news conference after two meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Report says many unionists were killed

BRUSSELS, Belgium — At least 92 trade unionists were killed worldwide last year and thousands more were tortured, jailed or fired, a trade union report said Friday.

Latin America continues to be the most dangerous region for union activists, according to the annual report of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions.

Colombia stands out, with 46 trade unionists killed in 1993 and 33 others going into hiding after receiving death threats, according to the report.

Missing Nevada man found near Pillar Falls

JEROME — The body of the young man who disappeared off of Pillar Falls was finally recovered Thursday night.

The body was positively identified as Darren Hunt, 21, of Nevada, the same person seen jumping off the cliff 11 days ago.

After shutting off the flow of water to the falls, a Search and Rescue unit found the body floating at the top about 30 yards south of where the man jumped, according to the Jerome County Sheriff's office.

"I'm sure the change in water flow helped dislodge him," said Jerome County Sheriff George Silver.

Farm managers, appraisers will meet Monday night

TWIN FALLS — State Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, will discuss water issues and provide an update of the 1994 Legislative session 7:30 a.m. Monday at the Depot Grill.

Noh will be speaking to members of the Magic Valley branch of the American Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers' Idaho chapter.

The group is also electing its chairman for 1994-95 season at its monthly meeting on Monday. For more information contact John O'Connor at 543-8022 or 543-8908.

Health, Welfare recruits foster parents during May

TWIN FALLS — The state Department of Health and Welfare is stepping up its efforts to recruit foster parents during May as part of Idaho's Foster Parent Appreciation Month.

"Idaho has a critical shortage of foster homes," said Steven Woodworth, regional director for Blaine, Camas, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties.

Foster care is a protective service provided to children for a planned, temporary period when their own family is unable to care for them. Foster care is not adoption. The program helps children ranging from infancy to 18 years old.

"Most children needing foster care have been physically or sexually abused, neglected or abandoned," Woodworth said. "We need caring homes to help children and their families in a time of crisis. This is especially true for teenagers."

For more information about becoming a foster parent, call the department at 736-3020.

PTO plans open house for incoming 9th graders

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls High School Parent-Teacher Organization has planned an open house for ninth-graders who will be attending high school in the fall.

All ninth-graders and their parents are invited to the event, set for 7:30 to 9 p.m. Monday at the high school. A short talk by Principal Carl Snow will be followed by an opportunity for students and parents to meet the administration, counselors and PTO officers. Those attending will then tour the school to meet teachers in their classrooms and visit tables set up to explain clubs and organizations. Refreshments will be served in the library.

Jerome gives tours of water facilities for residents

JEROME — The city will sponsor an open house and tours of its water facilities to give visitors an opportunity to become familiar with how water is supplied to city residents.

Open-house will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily May 2 through 6, water department Superintendent Robert Culver said.

Visitors will learn how water is tested, the quality of water everywhere, and the duties of the department's staff of six.

During the winter months more than 1 million gallons of water a day are pumped from city wells. More than 6 million gallons every 24 hours is required during the summer months, Culver said.

Visitors also will learn about the 300,000 gallon and 1 million gallon storage tanks, pump houses and wells servicing the city.

For more information call Culver at 324-2631 or City Hall at 324-8189.

Plea for sexual acceptance

Mother speaks out about brutal death of homosexual son

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — When Allen Schindler joined the Navy, his mother worried that her boy would perish in a foreign land at the hands of enemy troops.

She cried when he left for Desert Storm. She asked Jesus to protect her oldest son from Saddam Hussein.

She never dreamed that her son would return to America beaten beyond recognition, murdered by shipmates because of his sexual orientation.

Dorothy Hajdys spoke about her son's murder Friday night in Ketchum. One hundred people gathered to hear her appeal for tolerance and acceptance of gays and lesbians.

Allen Schindler's life was taken by two of his shipmates in October of 1992. They stomped on his body so mercilessly that their boot prints were left behind. They destroyed every internal organ, leaving Allen so disfigured that Hajdys' pastor begged her not to look at her son's remains.

Hajdys spoke of the pain she felt, and feels, 18 months after Allen's death. She spoke of the hole her son's murder has left in her household.

And she spoke of her desire to "fight for all the other Allen's that are in this world" persecuted because of their gay, lesbian, or bisexual.

Hajdys is a mother of four, a social worker from Chicago Heights, and a member of the Salvation Army.

Before her boy's murder, she says she was afraid of gays and lesbians. "When I thought of gays, I thought of Klinger," the cross-dressing character from M*A*S*H.

After Allen's death, she met many of his gay friends, and she says it changed her perspective forever.

"I found out that homosexuals aren't freaks or guys that run around with dresses on. They're very loving, caring people."

They work, pay taxes, wear blue jeans, and some of them "even like country music."

Now, Hajdys is traveling across the United States, encouraging parents to love their gay children, pleading with Americans to love their gay neighbors.

Allen's mother says she's heard horror stories from other homosexuals, stories of anonymous violence and familial rejection.

"There are some parents who'd rather have their child dead than have anyone know their child is gay," she said.

Dorothy Hajdys is trying to change that. As an evangelist for gay civil rights, she plans to continue echoing the words of Jesus: "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and mind and strength ... and your neighbor as yourself."

Her boy's murder captured headlines because it occurred as President Clinton was vowing to lift the ban on gays in the military, but she said hate crimes against gays and lesbians are commonplace in our land.

"Gay people get killed every day. They get beaten and left for dead for no reason at all," Hajdys said.

Hajdys' keynote speech kicks off a two-day conference on "Defending Human Rights in the 1990s." The gathering is sponsored by Your Family Friends and Neighbors, and continues today in Ketchum.

Judge accepts canal company settlement in 10-year-old case

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — The 10-year-old legal dispute dogging the Salmon River Canal Co. took a giant step toward ending Friday when a bankruptcy judge accepted the company's settlement.

Bankruptcy Judge James D. Pappas in Pocatello agreed to a new settlement proposal and confirmed the company's amended plan of getting out of bankruptcy.

But the large settlement payment that would end the 10-year-old case could cost some Salmon Tract farmers their farms, said Dick Parrott, a shareholder in the canal company.

The Hollister Irrigation company filed for bankruptcy protection last year. The company has been fighting a judgement against it from a 1984 flood that damaged property down stream. The "downstream landowners" won a $4.3 million judgement against the canal company, which its shareholders couldn't pay.

and the company filed for bankruptcy.

Earlier this month, most of the company's shareholders came up with a settlement that will pay the "downstream" interests $2.2 million.

The company has until May 10 to pay. The company will raise that money by raising its shareholder fees by seven times. Shareholders can either pay $49.76 a share now or $17.70 a share over five years — with 12 percent interest.

But that may be too much for some farmers, Parrott said.

"We've got to weigh whether the good of the community has been served versus the financial state of those who can't afford to pay," he said.

While many farmers are now arranging short-term bank loans to pay their share of the settlement, Parrott said these loans will jeopardize the financial stability farms.

And Parrott said the judge knows that. In making his decision, the judge said he expected making the settlement payments will cause some "casualties." But Parrott said the judge told the farmers that the bankruptcy court can be used by them as well.

Of the shareholders, 22 of the 174 voted against the settlement.

But the odds for an appeal aren't good now for shareholders who don't like the settlement, Parrott said. Their bankruptcy attorney backed out of the case last week when he discovered a conflict of interest. So Parrott and his "dissident" shareholders had to scramble to get another qualified attorney.

They found Chicago-agriculture attorney Bill Needler, who only joined the case April 22.

The judge told Parrott and his group that he thought an appeal would end up costing them about as much as paying the settlement.

Company officials and attorneys involved in the case couldn't be reached for comment Friday.

Post office joins in stopping hunger fight

By Maria Stafford
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls is not immune to hunger.

Local postal carriers next month will join carriers around the country filling their trucks with non-perishable food items donated by residents along their normal routes.

"Our community has a misconception that hunger happens elsewhere," said Susan Kelley, executive director of the United Way in Twin Falls, one of the organizers of the drive's local effort.

"Hunger happens everywhere."

In a prepared statement Twin Falls Mayor or Gale Kleinkopf proclaimed Saturday, May 14, Twin Falls Food Drive Day, when residents can leave non-perishable foods by their mail boxes, where it will be picked up by postal carriers. The food will be distributed to the city's six food banks.

Rural residents may participate by bringing food items directly to the Post Office.

The food items most needed include proteins, such as canned meat, stew, chili, peanut butter and baby food. Perishables and home-canned foods are unacceptable because of health department regulations.

This will be Twin Falls' first year as a participant in the 50-state food drive that is sponsored by the National Association of Letter Carriers, the U.S. Postal Service and the United Way.

One of the largest food drives in the nation, Food Drive Day collected some 12 million pounds of food from 10 cities in its first year in 1991. In 1993 the drive expanded to hundreds of cities nationwide, including Boise and Nampa.

"I urge all citizens to contribute some food items to their postal carriers ... for this most vital project," Kleinkopf said.

Obituaries

Fergus J. Kilmartin

BURLEY — Fergus John "Forge" Kilmartin, 65, of Burley, died Wednesday, April 27, 1994, at his home of a sudden cardiac arrest.

He was born Jan. 9, 1929, in Dublin, Ireland, the son of Paddy and Florence Red Kilmartin. Fergus attended schools in Dublin, and unknown to many, pursued a career in amateur boxing where he was crowned high middleweight champion of Ireland in 1952. He went on to become European middleweight champion later that same year. During that harrowing career, he met and subsequently married his wife of 37 years, Dolores Mary MacCourt.

Shortly after exchanging vows, Fergus and Dolores emigrated to America and eventually settled in Kimberly, Twin Falls and finally, Burley. Fergus' gift for gab landed him a bartending job which he parlayed into co-ownership of the present Fifth Amendment Lounge. He could often be found behind the bar dispensing simple wisdom, lending a friendly ear and, no doubt, spouting a bit of blarney.

Fergus will be remembered by those of us lucky enough to know him as a man of his word and one whose unassuming generosity touched many. He truly lived the American dream.

He is survived by his wife, Dolores; three daughters and men he thought of as sons, Patricia Kilmartin and Steve Schmidt of Halley; Janet K. and Scott Bressler of Caldwell and Paula K. and Brad Scholer of Portland, Ore.; three brothers, Paddy Kilmartin of Ontario, Canada, and Colm Kilmartin and John Kilmartin, both of Dublin, Ireland; three sisters, Maureen Kilmartin and Eileen McGowan, both of Dublin and Colette McCau of Norwalk, Conn.; and all of those who called him "friend."

A service will be held at noon Monday, May 2, 1994, at the Little Flower Catholic Church in Burley. Father Clary Quirk of Galway, Ireland, will preside over the ceremony. It was at Fergus' request that he was cremated.

"May you be in heaven half an hour before the devil knows you're dead," P.S. Word is to make it... Friends may call from 11 a.m. until time of the service Monday at the church. Arrangements are under the direction of McCulloch's Home Funeral Home in Burley.

Plastic official taken hostage

SEATTLE (AP) — A disgruntled former employee armed with a shotgun returned to a plastics manufacturing plant Friday, set the car on fire and took a co-owner hostage, police said.

The hostage was released unharmed after about three hours.

The hostage is uninjured and in good health, police spokesman Sean O'Donnell said. The hostage was Fred Thompson, 58, of Vaupell Industrial Plastics Inc.

The gunman remained inside the plant, talking with police after the hostage was freed, O'Donnell said.

Thompson told reporters he never felt in that much danger. "I'm fine," he said. "He just wanted to talk."

The 51-year-old gunman drove his car into an open loading bay Friday afternoon at the plant in the Ballard neighborhood north of downtown. About 75 people were at work. O'Donnell confirmed witness reports that the gunman was "obviously intoxicated."

The gunman went first to a molding room and forced about five workers into the plant's office, where he told them "he was going to be the only one that died here today," employee Ben Longley said.

The man then set his car on fire and the workers he had detained ran from the building unharmed. The plant's sprinklers extinguished the flames, O'Donnell said.

The intruder then took his hostage.

O'Donnell described the gunman as "an ex-employee, a disgruntled employee."

The gunman's wife, "or his soon-to-be ex-wife" was brought to the scene, O'Donnell said.

A co-worker, Kathleen Tillet, 36, said the man had worked for the company for about three years before being laid-off about a month ago.

A Seattle Police SWAT team member blacks out the window of the Vaupell Industrial Plastics Inc. Friday.

Several co-workers said the man had driven by the plant regularly since being laid off.

She said the gunman, who was wearing green camouflage pants and a dark T-shirt, looked at her Friday afternoon and told her to "take a lunch." She immediately left the building. She described him as fascinated by martial arts and firearms.

The man arrived at the two-story plant at about 3 p.m.

Purchasing clerk Russell Hem-stock said he was at a fax machine when the gunman entered. He described the man as wearing several handguns in shoulder holsters in addition to carrying a shotgun.

"He was loaded," Hemstock said.

As employees fled the building, Hemstock said. "We saw the car on fire. We ran across the street - the car exploded...boom!"

"You can't imagine how happy I am he didn't shoot me," Hemstock said.

Woman holds newspaper man

EVANSTON, Wyo. (AP) — An Evanston newspaper publisher was held in his office at gunpoint by a woman Friday until he and an editor from a Colorado newspaper could convince her to give up her weapon.

Mike Jensen, publisher of the Uinta County Herald, said he was shaken but unharmed after the incident that began early Friday afternoon.

"If I can get my knees to stop shaking, I'll be OK," he said.

The incident began when the woman, identified by Evanston police as Melody Watson, 26, entered Herald offices at about 1:30 p.m. and ended about 20 minutes later with her arrest after she gave her 22-caliber handgun to Jensen.

Watson was charged Friday with aggravated assault and felonious restraint, said Uinta County Attorney Jim Anderson. He added she would be arraigned in Uinta County Court on Monday.

Newspaper employees said Watson appeared to be calm when she entered the building and asked to see Jensen.

Jensen said his secretary told him he had a visitor and the newspaper's production manager warned him against closing the door to his office while the woman was there.

Watson closed and locked the door, Jensen said, and pulled a handgun out of a brown shopping bag she had been carrying.

"My first reaction was I thought it was a joke," he said. "It didn't take me long to realize it was real. She had the gun pointed between my eyes the whole entire time."

Watson told Jensen that the Wyoming media had "ruined her life" and demanded that he call a major daily newspaper in Colorado so she could speak to a reporter, he said.

During the conversation, Jensen managed to get the attention of some of his staff members, but Watson then ordered the staff members in the office to leave the building.

"So we did (leave)," said Managing Editor Shawn Hubbell. "We didn't want to do anything to get through the upset."

Jensen said Watson did not specify which paper she wanted to speak to, so he got the phone numbers for The Denver Post and Rocky Mountain News. He called the Post, but was unable to get through to Editor Neil Westergaard.

Jensen said he then introduced himself and explained his situation. "So I said ... 'There is a woman here with a gun to my head, is there someone we can talk to?'" he said.

Jensen was put in touch with Post Managing Editor Isabel Spencer, who stayed on the phone 10 to 15 minutes speaking to Watson with Jensen.

"She demanded that ... Spencer come to Evanston and do a story on her and correct things that had been wronged and make everything all right," he said. "At this point, Spencer and I were trying to calm this woman down. She was visibly upset and through the course of the conversation, I kept saying 'Please sit down, please don't do anything stupid, put the gun down.' I repeated that several times."

"Finally, this gal asked 'Will you help me?' and I said yes and Spencer said yes and I put my hand out and she handed me the gun," he added.

Jensen said he was surprised that the incident occurred in Evanston.

"It was an ordeal," he said. "Things like that aren't supposed to happen in small towns."

Police said they would allow Post reporters to interview Watson.

Mystery fumes most likely 'smell of death'

Los Angeles Times

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — Concluding the most sensational medical investigation in local history, the Riverside County coroner's office announced Friday that Gloria Ramirez died from kidney failure as a result of cervical cancer — and the fumes that sickened the emergency room staff tending her probably were simply the smell of death.

Chief Deputy County Coroner Dan Cupido said no "external toxins" were found in her body, after an unprecedented autopsy and follow-up testing and analyses by some of the most prestigious government medical and science laboratories in the country.

The coroner's office itself had speculated earlier that, given the bizarre events surrounding her death, Ramirez died of other than natural causes. But Friday County Coroner Scotty Hill said Ramirez died of natural causes after all.

The specific cause of death, he said, was "cardiac dysrhythmia due to acute renal failure due to cervical carcinoma."

Hill said his investigators did not specifically set out to try to find the source or nature of the fumes that sickened the hospital staff, and he said Friday, "I don't know if we'll ever have that answer."

But he did rule out the possibility that Ramirez, wittingly or otherwise, may have been poisoned by a toxic substance that might then contaminated those who tried to keep her alive.

"Exhaustive toxicological studies have not identified any external toxic substances that would have contributed to her death," Hill said.

Cupido said the so-called "mystery fumes" were most likely the residues of a dying person.

"There are some mechanisms that occur with the disease process that may cause certain odors to be produced," Cupido said. "We feel we have identified a source ... as probably having come from the remains of Gloria Ramirez."

Some of the staff tending Ramirez said the woman's blood, drawn into a syringe, smelled of ammonia. Cupido said that odor was consistent with "the chemical changes that may occur during a person's dying process, in relation to some of the anatomic findings we found."

The fact that such odors could be so strong as to affect so many medical personnel so extensively may be unprecedented, Hill acknowledged.

"This is the first (such incident), possibly throughout the entire United States or the world," Hill said. "We have received numerous calls of possibly similar cases, but none that are specific or identical to the circumstances surrounding this case."

Other agencies have not yet completed their own investigation into the incident.

The labs that assisted the county in the autopsy were Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, the Food and Drug Administration and the California Department of Justice.

David Garcia, the brother-in-law of Gloria Ramirez and spokesman for the family, said he did not believe the coroner's conclusions.

"This serves their purpose, so the county won't be responsible for what ever happened to Gloria," he said. "This is a travesty of justice."

Ron Schwartz, the attorney for the Ramirez family, said he was confused that it took so long — 10 weeks — to determine the cause of the death. "This type of cause of death would normally be identified within a few days of death," he said. "Why it took them 10 weeks to come up with this, I don't know."

The coroner's office promised to notify the family of the cause of Ramirez' death prior to public release of the information, and it did — 10 minutes before the Friday afternoon news conference began.

Schwartz said if the fumes that apparently sickened the six emergency room attendants were nothing more than the organic odors created in the dying process, it did little to explain why some of the hospital staff — most notably Dr. Julie Gorchynski — became so ill.

Six of the people tending Ramirez complained of varying degrees of dizziness after smelling a syringe after it was used to draw blood from Ramirez. Among them, Gorchynski, who has been hospitalized for the loss of blood circulation to her knees and has undergone surgery to try to correct it. She and others have also complained of continuing breathing difficulties.

Rupert wants public comment on tourists

RUPERT — State commerce officials want to hear public comments on how to get tourists to drive into town, spend their money and leave without changing the local quality of life.

In a meeting from 8 a.m. to noon Tuesday at the Rupert Elk's Lodge, Mini-Cassia area residents are invited to discuss how they want to promote their towns, whether it's through more signs, brochures, bike paths, parks or visitor centers, said Peter Fisher, economic development specialist for the Idaho Department of Commerce.

Regional issues also will be discussed. The Magic Valley may need a visitor center built somewhere to supplement the smaller visitor centers in each town, Fisher said. Geological sites could be promoted, he said.

For more information call the Idaho Department of Commerce at 334-2470.

Golden Heritage hosts breakfast, sale

BURLEY — The public is invited to a breakfast and craft sale at Golden Heritage Senior Center from 8 to 10 a.m. today.

Hot cakes, scrambled eggs, hash browns, bacon, ham, orange juice and coffee will be served for $3.50 per plate. The charge is reduced to $3 per person for certain business owners and employees who received a coupon in the mail from the center.

Golden Heritage Senior Center is located at 2421 Overland Ave. in Burley. For more information call 678-4646.

Democrat may sign clean campaign pledge

BOISE (AP) — State Democratic Chairman Bill Mauk says he's willing to sign a clean campaign pledge to stop what he calls "mud-slinging and smear tactics" from the Republicans.

Mauk held a Boise news conference Friday to criticize his GOP counterpart, Randy Smith. A day earlier, Smith held his own news conference to complain that Attorney General Larry EchoHawk, who is running for governor, should have remained in Idaho for the state PTA conference instead of going to Washington to a meeting with President Clinton.

Mauk said Smith had his facts mixed up whether EchoHawk was expected at the PTA meeting and said it was silly for Smith to complain about the attorney general's meeting with the president and top administration officials.

"It is also nonsense to criticize Attorney General EchoHawk for having access to President Clinton," Mauk said. "Does the Idaho Republican Party truly believe and knowing the president of the United States is a liability for a governor? Of course not."

"We suggest that both state parties sign a clean campaign pledge for the governor's race, then this year's campaign can focus on issues," he said.

Late Friday, Smith issued a statement taking up Mauk's suggestion. "I can't think of a better way to finally force Larry EchoHawk to stand Idahoans where he really stands on the issues instead of just posturing," he said.

He said EchoHawk should tell Idaho residents how he supports President Clinton's major proposals.

Tribe asserts fishing rights

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A tribal fish coordinator says the government has penalized Indians by prohibiting them to fish for salmon rather than reward them for trying to conserve troubled runs.

"We have been conserving and conserving for so long with the expectation that the federal and state governments would reward that conservation with improved methods of fish production," said Ted Strong, executive director of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission.

"We haven't seen any reward," he said. "Instead, we have been hit with the greatest penalty — an infringement on our religious practices."

Yakima Indians plan a ceremony Sunday asserting their treaty rights to fish at Willamette Falls on the Willamette River in Oregon City. They want to call attention to the abundant salmon available to sportsmen on the Willamette while the Columbia salmon available to the tribes are at a record low.

Count rulings have given treaty tribes rights to a certain allocation of fish from customary fishing sites. The Yakima Indians consider Willamette Falls such a site, but the state disputes the claim.

Russians working with INEL

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The scientists huddled around a shielded window to watch a test on nuclear waste.

Americans and Russians alike had an equal stake in the results.

"Very good, very good," said one of the Americans, INEL senior scientist Ken Brewer. His Russian counterpart, Vyacheslav M. Eismantovskii, nodded and gave an "OK" sign with his fingers.

After the Cold War, the problems of nuclear waste are universal. The United States and Russia are saddled with handling and storing vast quantities of highly radioactive waste.

Russian scientists visited the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory recently, testing one of their ideas to process the waste. The Department of Energy-funded tour brought five scientists from the V.G. Khlopin Radium Institute in St. Petersburg to the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant.

But the Russians' research could carry a big payoff at the Chem somedy. If their idea works, and the tests were encouraging, their technology could even be used at the INEL and other Energy Department sites.

American and Russian scientists share a common problem: their nations' high-level waste is actually made up of a lot of different wastes.

It contains contaminants such as plutonium, which will remain radioactive for thousands of years. It also contains intensely radioactive cesium and strontium — shorter-lived elements which must nonetheless be stored in thick, lead-lined containers.

Scientists in both countries want to find a way to separate cesium and strontium, because they require such delicate handling. They're using the same idea: chemicals to pull out the dangerous elements.

"They're very similar to some of the technologies we're developing in-house," said Terry Todd, manager of alternative technologies for Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Co., the DOE's contractor at the Chem

Plant. "I think they fit in very well."

The Russian scientists have developed a way to use a solvent to separate cesium and strontium. They've tested it on simulated wastes in their lab in Russia, but came to the Chem Plant to prove the technology on actual waste.

The waste separation could cut significantly into the storage problem. It could cut the Chem Plant's high-level waste inventory by 90 percent. The remaining waste, with the cesium and strontium removed, would be low-level waste, which can be stored more easily.

Since the Chem Plant now has about 1.8 million gallons of high-level waste, it has a big stake in cutting the inventory.

"I think it suffices to say that our nuclear party has produced similar quantities of waste," Valerii N. Romamenskii, head of the institute's radiochemistry department, said through an interpreter.

The tests at the Chem Plant were on a decidedly small scale — a liter of Chem Plant high-level waste processed during three days, Brewer said.

But the technology could be used on a large scale. If moved into a new full-scale processing plant and out of the small shielded "hot cell" used for the experiments, all of the waste could be separated within two years, Todd said.

That's a decision the Energy Department will have to make, as it completes an environmental impact statement on INEL waste policies. In a report due in June, 1995, the agency will decide, among other things, what to do with the liquid waste at the Chem Plant.

Scientists say they've broken down technological and language barriers during the tests, even if the Russian technology isn't used at the Chem Plant. It's an ironic twist, at an INEL facility that until 1992 was the lab's closest link to the arms race.

The last two days of working together have shown that we understand each other completely," Eismantovskii said.

Gang members march for peace Friday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gang members marched over each other's turf on Friday, the second anniversary of the 1992 riots, as they commemorated a two-year truce and urged others to put down their weapons.

The march, attended by about 200 people, was one of several events marking the beginning of the three days of rioting, which represented one of the worst outbreaks of civil unrest in the nation's history.

"I'm with this, I'm with the peace," said a 23-year-old gang member who identified himself only as Asame. He and others marched through some of the most violent neighborhoods of South Central Los Angeles, where the riots began.

The uprising occurred after a state court jury acquitted four white police officers in the beating of black motorist Rodney King. Two of the officers were later convicted in federal court of violating King's civil rights and are each serving 30-month prison sentences.

Fifty-five people died and nearly 2,400 were injured during the riots. Damage was estimated at $1 billion.

"One of the things we are attempting to do is keep alive the awareness of the rebellion nurtured," said the Rev. M. Andrew Robinson-Gaither of the Faith United Methodist Church in South Central Los Angeles.

"Many people call it a riot, but those who live in the areas and have to live with the social ills, we see it as an awakening," he said.

In the city's Koreatown section, where rioting was also widespread, an 8-foot, red metal abstract art sculpture commemorating the suffering of riot victims was unveiled. Longstanding tension between blacks and Korean-American merchants made Korean-owned businesses a favorite target during the riots.

Faith United also cosponsored a three-day open house featuring a collection of memorabilia and videos from the riots.

At the peace march, supporters of the gang truce wound through crime-plagued housing projects where gang members exchanged gunfire with police two years ago.

Truce meetings among the notorious Crips and Bloods gang factions began within weeks of the riots. Late last year, some Hispanic gangs began a separate truce.

There is no record of just how many of the city's 395 gangs have taken part, said Officer Laurie Taylor, a police spokeswoman.

Despite the truce, gang violence is on the rise in areas patrolled by the county Sheriff's Department, said Lt. Chuck Brandt. The 1993 death toll is 57, compared to 46 a year earlier.

California couple arrested for toad juice possession

SONORA, Calif. (AP) — A man and a woman charged with possessing psychedelic toad juice have agreed to attend a drug education program to avoid prison.

Charges against Bob and Connie Shepard will be dropped if they successfully complete the program and stay drug free for two years. They agreed to intervention Thursday in Tulare County Justice Court.

The two were accused of squeezing venom from their Colorado River toads, drying it, then smoking it for an intense psychedelic high.

Shepard's lawyer, James Webster, said his client would have preferred to go to trial to prove that neither possession of the toads nor a time-store cactus that authorities said was a source of mescaline violated the law.

Drug agents seized the Shepards' four toads in January. The couple was charged with five felony counts of drug possession, including possession of the psychedelic amphibian venom bufotenine.

After his arrest, Shepard was fired from his job as a naturalist for the Regional Learning Center, an educational camp in the Sierra Nevada foothills. The couple has since moved to northern Oregon, Webster said.

Eagles pluck Cardinals

CSI overtakes Ricks for Region 18 Northern Division lead

By Vin Cappiello
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Final score: Eagles 22, Cardinals 0.
No, this is not the NFL, but the combined score of Friday night's doubleheader in which College of Southern Idaho routed North Idaho 13-0 and 9-0 at Frontier Field.

The sweep improves CSI to 11-3 in the Region 18 Northern Division and 38-12 overall. The win moves the Eagles into first place, as Treasure Valley swept Ricks 5-1 and 7-6 Friday in Ontario, Ore.

CSI and NIC square off again today at noon.

In Game 1 Friday, CSI jumped out to an 8-0 lead in the first inning behind six walks, four hits and one hit batsmen. Designated hitter Julio Chavez put the first pitch he saw from Cardinal starter and eventual loser Jason Ford for an RBI single. Five batters later, CSI starter Craig Peck, who improved to 6-1, took over.

He faced just 14 batters over the next four innings, allowing a total of two hits in the run-rule-shortened game.

CSI Coach Jim Walker said that, while Peck's pitching was sound, he was more pleased to see his squad going after strikes early in the count.

"We've been trying to hit the first strike," Walker said. "Brian (Keswick) made a comment to me the other day that he's hitting about .800 when he hits the first strike."

The Golden Eagles had help, however, from the NIC pitching staff. Five Cardinal hurlers issued 18 walks and hit two batters in 10 innings of work.

"They hurt themselves a lot," Walker said of North Idaho. "We had some really good at-bats, and it was through the whole lineup. We stayed in the zone and made their pitchers make mistakes."

North Idaho also was hurt by the loss of shortstop Todd Bertram. In the second inning of Game 1, Chavez slid into second base in an attempt to break up a double play. The two collided on the first-base side of the bag, and 40 minutes later, Bertram was being taken to Magic

Kite soars to Houston Open lead

The Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS, Texas — Tom Kite used a five-hole run of four birdies and an eagle en route to a 7-under 65 Friday and a two-shot lead over rookie Mike Heinen after the second round of the Houston Open.

Kite was 1-under through 11 holes when he birdied No. 12, eagled the 13th and birdied the next three holes to reach 11-under 133 after two trips around the Tournament Players Course at The Woodlands.

"All of a sudden the balls started going in," Kite said of his 30 out-the-back pine. "Why? I don't know. But I love it."

His 65 was the best round of the day. Heinen, who opened at 67, shot a 4-under 68 in his second round. The 9-under 135 is his best so far during his first year on the tour.

First-round leader Andrew Magee, who shot 65 Thursday, soared to a 6-over 78 to put him at 1-under 143, 10 shots behind Kite.

Kite, who tour's career earnings leader with $8.8 million, never has won a tournament in his home state of Texas.

"Just winning means as much to me now as it ever has, probably more so because I got myself in a position to do some things that not many players have done," he said. "There's only 25 or 30 guys have won 20 tournaments. I've got 19."

A victory in Texas would also be special, he said.

Golf tourney starts today

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — In what has become the largest tournament in Twin Falls, 400 golfers will take to the links as the Oasis/Star Quality Homes two-person best ball begins today.

Golfers will play at the Canyon Springs golf course and the Jerome Country Club. The action starts today and Sunday at 8 a.m. and the last pair of golfers tees off around 4:30 p.m.

In the men's championship flight, Tracey Frank and Kevin Packard will go off as one of the favorites. The team of Barry Espil and Ted Black should give the two some competition. Both are paired Saturday with an 8:24 a.m. tee time at Canyon Springs.

On the women's side, the favorites include Rosemary McRoberts, who will team with Nikki Barlow, and Wilma Shockey, who joins Maggie Rupert. Like the favorites in the men's championship flight, both are paired together Saturday for a 1:20 p.m. tee time at Jerome.

Speedway roars to life tonight after winter hiatus

By Ron Gates
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Revving engines, colorful cars and anxious fans retake the spotlight when the Magic Valley Speedway opens its ninth season this evening.

First night action — pushed back one week by wet weather — features Pro Stock action, but also includes races in Street and Pony Stocks as well as a new class, Grand American Modified.

"People in this area probably know it better as IMCA modified," explained speedway owner Steve York. "It's a cross between an open wheel and a stock car — inexpensive to build."

York and his wife, Karen, have seen an intended avocation grow into much more over the years.

"We just got into it as kind of a hobby, but it grew," he said. "Last year's crowds were just about double those of nine years ago."

"Growth-wise, auto racing seems to have gotten stronger nationwide," York added. "Like the NASCAR drivers say, everything else is just a game."

A mix of veteran and first-year drivers — some of the former breaking unfamiliar ground, a fan-pleasing schedule and a few less obvious wrinkles suggest the current season will be better than ever.

Realization of York's fondest expectation, however, may still be a year or two away.

"My dream in auto racing is to have someone scalping tickets at the Magic Valley Speedway," he smiled. "Then I'll know that we've arrived in the sport."

This year's regional championship is worth more than

Bulls trample Cavaliers

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Scottie Pippen scored 31 points and Scott Williams had 13 of his 21 in the final quarter Friday night as the Chicago Bulls began their quest for a fourth straight NBA title, beating Cleveland Cavaliers 104-96.

Game 2 of the best-of-5 opening-round playoff series will be Sunday at Chicago Stadium.

The Cavaliers played without the heart of their inside game as John "Hot Rod" Williams, Brad Daugherty and Larry Nance watched from the bench in street clothes because of injuries.

And Mark Price, Cleveland's leading scorer, averaging 17.3, managed just nine points. Gerald Wilkins led Cleveland with 23 points.

Michael Jordan retired and then took up baseball, led a third-quarter surge, and then had two spectacular baskets in the fourth quarter. He also finished with 12 rebounds: His 31 points were one short of his career playoff high.

Luc Longley's dunk, Pippen's assist to Horace Grant for a layup after a length-of-the-floor dribble and Pippen's three-point play highlighted an 11-4 run in the third quarter as the Bulls opened an eight-point lead.

The Bulls finished the quarter with 11 points and Chicago led 76-71 with 12 minutes to play.

Cleveland closed within four in the final period.

Cincinnati hooks Marlins on grass; Cooke helps Pittsburgh scalp Braves

The Associated Press

Major league baseball

MIAMI — Brian Dorsner had a pair of RBI doubles to lead Cincinnati to a 5-5 victory over the Florida Marlins on Friday night in the Reds' first game of the season on natural grass.

Dorsner's first double came in the sixth inning and drove in Tony Fernandez to make it 5-3. After the teams exchanged runs in the seventh, Dorsner again beat Fernandez, home with a two-run hit, making it 7-4 in the eighth.

Reds' starter Tom Browning (3-0) gave up three home runs in five innings — including homers by Rich Renteria and Gary Sheffield on consecutive pitches — but still picked up the win. Jeff Brantley went the final 2-3 innings for his second save of the season.

Florida starter Chris Hammond (1-3) allowed eight hits and five runs in 5-1-3 innings.

Pirates 8, Braves 5

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates continued to torment Atlanta, getting four RBIs from Jeff King and a strong start from previously winless Steve Cooke to beat the Braves 8-5 Friday night.

The Braves are 15-7 but have lost three of four to Pittsburgh, which was coming off a 19-7 loss Thursday to the Reds. The Pirates won two of three in Atlanta last weekend.

Cooke (1-3) withstood Fred McGriff's two-run homer in the fourth inning for his first victory since he beat Florida last Sept. 15. The left-hander, who scattered six hits, lost his final two decisions in 1993 and failed to win in his first four starts this season.

King had a run-scoring single in the first, a two-run double in the fifth and a sacrifice fly in the seventh after driving in only five runs in his first 69 at-bats. The double followed two-out singles by Jay Bell and Al Martin and made it 3-3 as starter Steve Avery (1-1) failed to hold a two-run lead supplied by McGriff's shot in the fourth inning.

Expos 3, Padres 1

MONTREAL — Kirk Rueter became the first major league pitcher since Fernando Valenzuela in 1981 to start his career with a 10-0 record, leading the Montreal Expos past the San Diego Padres 3-1 Friday night.

The 23-year-old left-hander struck out seven and didn't walk a batter in outlasting Padres starter Andy Benes (1-5). Rueter (2-0) lasted 7-1-3 innings and allowed six hits, helping Montreal win its third in a row and eighth in its last nine games.

Brooks Wilson holds the major-league record of 12 wins to start a career, set with the New York Giants in 1904.

Rookie Cliff Floyd was the offensive star for the Expos, tripling home Mike Lansing in the sixth with the tying run, scoring the go-ahead run on Larry Walker's groundout and Expos' third run in the eighth on Marquis Grissom's double.

Rockies 6, Cubs 5

CHICAGO — Just when it looked like the Chicago Cubs might end their 0-for-Wrigley streak, a bases-loaded double played end the game.

Glenallen Hill was the culprit for the Cubs on Friday, ending their ninth-inning rally with his game-ending groundout in Chicago's 6-5 loss to Colorado.

It made the Cubs 0-9 on their home field this season.

"I don't think anyone's pressing," Chicago second baseman Ryne Sandberg said of the futility mark.

"In some of those situations, you want to come through with a big hit and we haven't."

Chicago trailed 6-4 entering the bottom of the ninth, but reliever Darren Holmes walked the first two batters and got a visit from his manager, Don Baylor.

"I told him the players have played two damn hard for you to give this away with bases on balls," Baylor said. "I have no beef with the way they've played. They've played hard. But I was not going to go like it was in the past."

Phillies 6, Giants 3

PHILADELPHIA — Mariano Duncan hit a three-run homer and Ben Rivera pitched seven strong innings as the Philadelphia Phillies ended their five-game losing streak with a 6-3 victory Friday night over the San Francisco Giants.

Rivera (2-1) allowed only three hits, struck out three and walked four. He retired the first 12 batters he faced before Matt Williams walked in the fifth and Larry Lundy followed with his sixth homer to set the season for a 2-1 lead.

The Phillies moved ahead 3-2 in the bottom of the fifth when Lenny Dykstra doubled, Duncan doubled and John Kruk singled.

Mets 6, Dodgers 4

NEW YORK — Cory Snyder, playing out of position at second base, had an error on Jose Vizcaino's eighth-inning grounder, allowing two runs to score as the New York Mets rallied to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-4 Friday night.

Los Angeles manager Tommy Lasorda moved Snyder from right field to the infield on a double-switch, and the move ended up costing the Dodgers the game.

In the eighth, David Segui had a one-out walk off Darren Dreifort, and when Joe Orsulak was announced as a pinch hitter for Ryan Thompson, Lasorda brought in Gary Wayne (1-3) and moved Snyder to second.

Orsulak was hit by a pitch and Todd Haskley followed with an RBI single to tie the game 4-4. After John Cangello walked, Todd Worell replaced Wayne. That brought up Vizcaino, and his grounder went right between Snyder's legs, allowing Orsulak and Haskley to score.

Astros 4, Cardinals 3

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell doubled to the wall in left with two outs in the 10th inning, driving home the winning run in the Houston Astros' 4-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Friday night.

Craig Biggio walked with two outs but he and Bagwell lined a double over the head of Bernard Gilkey. Biggio easily beat the throw home, making a winner of Mike Hampton (1-0).

Rich Rodriguez (1-1) took the loss despite allowing only one hit — Bagwell's game-ending double.

Todd Zelle hit his seventh homer of the season and drove in all three runs for the Cardinals. The homer was his fourth in his last nine at-bats against Houston and his fifth in the last eight games.

Prior to this season, only six of his 51 career home runs were hit in April.

Houston tied the score 3-3 in the bottom of the eighth when Steve Finley hit his sixth home run of the season, a two-run shot.

Indians 5, Rangers 4

CLEVELAND — Kenny Lofton homered with one out in the 12th inning Friday night as the Cleveland Indians beat the Texas Rangers 5-4.

Lofton stood near home plate and watched his drive off Jay Howell (2-1) sail into the right field seats. The home run, his third, improved the Indians to 4-0 in extra innings this year; they were 2-12 in extra-inning games last season.

It was the second time Lofton has won an extra-inning game with a homer this year. He beat California in the 10th inning on April 13.

The Indians, who are 8-3 on the road, are now 5-5 at Jacobs Field. They ended the Rangers' three-game winning streak.

Tigers 4, White Sox 3

DETROIT — Kirk Gibson hit a two-run triple in the sixth inning Friday night, sending the Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Bill Guletsky (1-1) won for the second time in seven decisions against the White Sox, allowing two runs and eight hits in 7-2-3 innings. He walked four and struck out five.

Mike Henneman gave up an RBI single to Robin Ventura in the ninth but struck out Dan Pasqua with two runners on for his fourth save.

Devils get their due, outlast Buffalo

Boston eliminates defending champions from Stanley Cup race

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The New Jersey Devils ended four years of first-round playoff frustration by outlasting the Buffalo Sabres and Dominik Hasek 2-1 Friday night in Game 7 of a marathon Eastern Conference quarterfinal series.

Claude Lemieux, who provided the game-winner for New Jersey in Game 5, came through again by snapping a second-period tie to send the Devils into the best-of-7 conference semifinal against Boston, starting Sunday at East Rutherford.

New Jersey didn't get to the next round until Buffalo's Dale Hawerchuk changed a shot off the goalpost with 16 seconds to play after a fine backhand setup by Alexander Mogilny.

While the Devils won Game 7, the series may very well be remembered for Game 6.

Buffalo won the game 1-0 in four overtimes to force a deciding game but in the process they may have used all their energy.

The Sabres managed just 18 shots on Devils goalie Martin Brodeur and really struggled from the second period on. Only Hasek kept them in the game, stopping one shot after another in finishing with 45 saves.

He had 70 saves on Wednesday night.

Brodeur's best stop after New Jersey took the 2-1 lead with 6:11 left in the second period came on a deflection by Hawerchuk early in the third period. He also made a stop on Jason Dawe on a backhand shot with 9:00 to play and one on a slap shot by Wayne Presley with 7:00 to go.

Lemieux's series winner came just two seconds after the Sabres killed off a hooking penalty announced by Doug Bodger.

Bruins 5, Canadiens 3

BOSTON — Boston scored three times between the pads of a shaky Patrick Roy as the Bruins eliminated the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens with a 5-3 seventh-game playoff victory Friday night.

It was the first time a defending champion was knocked out in the first round since Calgary lost in 1990.

Boston led 4-0 early in the second period and 5-1 in the third before Montreal rallied on goals by Kevin Haller with 6:48 left and Mike Keane with 5:17 to go.

The Bruins begin the second round Sunday against the New Jersey Devils, who beat Buffalo 2-1 in another Game 7 showdown Friday night.

Roy, who missed Montreal's Game 3 loss because of an appendicitis attack, had been sensational in stopping 99 of 102 shots in Montreal's wins in Games 4 and 5.

But he lost Game 6 and allowed four goals on Boston's first 16 shots Friday.

The Bruins, starting more aggressively than Montreal, led 2-0 after the first period on goals by Glen Murray and Ted Donato.

Goals by Adam Oates on a power play and Fred Knipscheer made it 4-0 at 4:22 of the second period.

Edberg falls in Madrid Open

The Associated Press

MADRID, Spain — Peru's Jaime Yzaga beat top-seeded Stefan Edberg 6-4, 6-2 Friday in the quarterfinals of the $800,000 Madrid Open, ending the Swede's string of 15 consecutive set victories over the last two years in the tournament.

Yzaga, 26, is ranked No. 28 in the world but is undefeated at Madrid, while Edberg is the world's No. 3.

In Friday's other quarterfinals, No. 3 Sergi Bruguera of Spain defeated No. 5 Carlos Costa of Spain 2-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Allex Corretja of Spain defeated Jakob Hasek of Switzerland 6-3, 6-2 and No. 4 Thomas Muster of Austria beat No. 6 Ivan Lendl 2-6, 6-3, 6-0.

Bruguera will face Corretja in Saturday's semifinals, while Muster plays Yzaga.

"The important thing was to keep pressure on him, especially with his return of serve," said Yzaga, whose most recent ATP victory came last fall in an indoor tournament in Sydney.

"Nowadays, lots of players are capable of beating the top players," Yzaga added. "The only exception might be (world No. 1 Pete) Sampras."

Edberg, the defending tournament champion, had trouble with Yzaga's quickness.

And though he's not known as a strong clay-court player, Edberg said he had been playing well on the surface this year and admitted this was his worst match.

"I didn't serve well and I didn't return well," Edberg said. "I never did feel the ball. My timing was off — I was trying too much. I knew this would be a tough match, but I didn't expect to play like this."

Citizen Cup

HAMBURG, Germany — Steffi Graf dropped her second set of the year as she struggled to beat Magdalena Maleeva 7-5, 3-6, 6-0 in the quarterfinals of the Citizen Cup on Friday.

Graf ran her winning streak to 35 matches, but the world's top-ranked player appeared in danger of losing her first match in 1994 after being beaten by Maleeva in the second set.

The German charged back in the third set, capturing all but one of the first 12 points against Maleeva, who began to make errors.

"I moved badly for two sets. I was unconcentrated, but thank God I got myself under control for the third set," Graf said.

"I lost my concentration," Maleeva said. "Because I was angry at the way I played there at the start."

As millennium nears, people turn to religion

If you've ever thought of becoming a holy person, such as a nun or a preacher, this appears to be the best time to get into the religion business.

After all, we are approaching the millennium, and whenever another 1,000 years passes, people seem to tune into religion with renewed vigor. And that is exactly what is happening today as people contemplate their fate as the world grows older.

Yes, we have a resurgence of interest in things holy. According to futurist John Naisbitt's Trend Letter, Bible sales are soaring: Bible sales topped the $432-million mark in 1992, double the sales level of 1989. Bible study groups abound, too, with 250,000 study programs sold last year.

The American Bible Society recently put

Clark Morphew
Faith today

Bible stories and other religious information on an interactive CD-ROM. That means you will be able to talk to the computer program and ask it questions for clarification. Isn't that amazing?

A dozen years ago, I didn't know a thing about computers. Now, I will be able to study the Bible on a computer. It's almost as good as talking to God. And getting answers.

Naisbitt says this renewed interest has been fueled by the New Age movement, the fervor of the Evangelical Christian church and the religious awakening of baby boomers as they grow older.

Let's consider the New Age movement. This is an umbrella of religious experiences that has captured the imagination of a lot of people. At least that's what we think. But how does anyone know for sure?

There might be a resurgence of interest in tarot cards, for instance. But does anyone know how many people who buy tarot cards actually go around telling people fortunes? No. So, how are we to know how deep this resurgence in religion goes?

Just just for the argument, let's assume that Naisbitt is correct and people all over the world are looking after holiness. What will be the end result of all this piety?

For one thing, if this resurgence is mostly New Age, you will not notice appreciable differences in the numbers of homeless or hungry people. New Ager's are not into social action. And you probably won't see an improvement in morality because New Ager's seldom talk about that kind of stuff.

But you can bet that if there are more true believers around, lots of them will be trying to control our behavior. There will be campaigns to ban cigarettes and alcohol because they'll want to ban condoms and all birth-control devices and medications. This, of course, will put a damper on sexual activity, and teen-agers will be howling in the streets.

An entire underworld will spring up. There will be black markets selling everything from stogies to bikini underwear. You can't stop people from having fun — you just force them to lie and cheat their way into a good time.

The second thing to happen will be increased violence throughout the world. Yes, though it pains me to write this, when religions are boiling in the same pot during turbulent times, violence becomes the competitive edge.

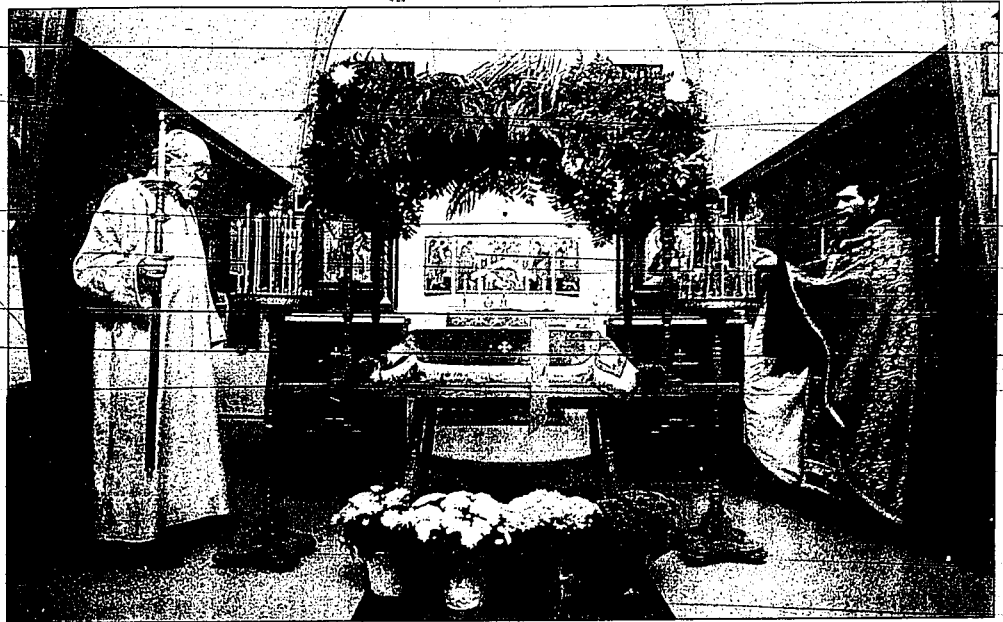

Witness the killing of 40 Muslims while they were praying in a mosque a couple of years ago. Killed by an American Jew who is now being called a hero, perhaps a saint. Make no mistake — this man was a true believer who was certain his terrible act was God's will.

I have said this before: If you want to see the meanest, most determined soldiers, watch those who believe they are fighting because of a mandate from God. You don't have to go to war to experience this principle. Stop in certain churches where conflicts have raged for generations. You'll find people who will stop at nothing to defeat their enemies because they believe it's God's will.

This business with God's will has caused more misery and heartache than any other theological concept. The truth is, no one can know the mind of God. Ah, there will be those who say they know the mind of God because of what they read in the Bible. But the best scholars know it is impossible to discern if any of the Bible is an authentic revelation from the Almighty.

So, as we move into these last six years of the 20th century, beware of the zealots. My guess is that they will swarm around us like killer bees on a doleful. Beware, also, of your own heart. I know from experience how easily and quickly hearts are filled with venom.

An Orthodox Easter

Eastern church celebrates different traditions, date

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's Easter weekend. No, the year didn't go by that fast. This weekend is Orthodox Easter.

The Orthodox celebration of Easter is on a different date than the Roman Catholic and Protestant celebrations. Here's an explanation from Father Philip Nixon, who established an Antiochian Orthodox congregation in Twin Falls three months ago:

"Eastern (Orthodox) people adhere to the Julian, not Gregorian, calendar for setting the date of Easter. They also adhere to a 12th-century provision that Easter must be celebrated after the end of the Jewish Passover."

The services and traditions are different, too.

At the Orthodox church, Lent begins 40 days before Palm Sunday, which was April 24 this year. Members observe a fairly strict fast (no meat, wine, oil or dairy products) during the Lenten season, which culminates in a two-day total fast. During this time, the church celebrates the resurrection of Lazarus as a miracle preceding Jesus' resurrection.

On Great and Holy Thursday, April 28, a divine liturgy with a foot-washing ceremony is held to commemorate Jesus' Last Supper. Also on that day, the passion gospels are read.

Royal Hours of prayer are observed on Holy Friday, April 29. At the ninth hour of the day, the body of Christ, made of carved wood, is removed from a cross. During Friday vespers, church members participate in a procession

Services set today

The Ingnatius Orthodox Mission will hold a divine liturgy and Paschal vigil at 6 p.m. Saturday, with a holy resurrection procession, Paschal matins and divine liturgy to follow at midnight. An agape vesper service will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday.

All services are open to the public. Regular weekly services are Tuesday vespers at 7 p.m., Saturday great vespers with the body.

The body, in the form of a shroud, is then laid in a tomb, topped with a canopy and covered with flowers.

"Someone is at the tomb continually reading psalms throughout Saturday (today) and into Sunday morning," Nixon said. "We take turns." Tonight's midnight service is the main Orthodox Easter service. At the beginning of the service, the church is completely dark — and Christ's body is removed from the tomb.

Father Nixon will read a passage: "Come and take light from the Light that is never overtaken by night. Come and glorify the Christ risen from the dead."

Church members will light candles and participate in a procession outside the church. When they return to the sanctuary, everything will be illuminated in white. The shroud/body will be placed on the church altar, and Eucharist will be served.

"The church participated in these events not just as a memorial," said Nixon. "We are going to the cross with Christ, and we are resurrected with Christ."

He continued, "There is no confusion, because we know that happened once in history, but these are mystical events in which we participate annually and through which we sanctify time."

The Orthodox use the word "Pascha" (meaning Passover/Christ is the Passover lamb) instead of Easter.

"But the term Easter is used in the West," Nixon said, "because people understand it."

Jewish report: Sexually active singles can be holy

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — For Jewish singles unable to wait until marriage, sex can still be a holy experience if religious moral standards are followed, according to a report developing a contemporary sexual ethic for the nation's largest branch of Judaism.

"Committed, loving relationships between mature people who strive to conduct their sexual lives according to the concepts and values described above can embody a measure of holiness, even if not the full portion available in marriage," says the report. "This is My Beloved, This is My Friend."

Marriage is still the "appropriate place" for sexual relations, but the report released Wednesday encourages Jewish leaders to reconsider whether even homosexual relations can be part of God's gift of sexuality if other moral standards are obeyed.

The pastoral letter from a commission of Conservative rabbis is called the first modern attempt to draft a sexual ethic by any branch of Judaism. Among its recommendations: Jews have a particular responsibility to avoid AIDS by disclosing their sexual history to their partner, by undergoing HIV testing and by abstaining if either partner is infected.

The report from the Rabbinical Assembly's Commission on Human Sexuality will be presented Tuesday to the group's Committee on Jewish Law and Standards. The law committee, which sets official policy for the assembly, is expected to begin deliberations on the recommendations in the fall.

The assembly represents 1,500 Conservative rabbis who serve 1.5 million congregational members. The Union of American Hebrew Congregations, representing Reform Judaism, has approximately 1.3 million members in North America. An estimated 1 million American Jews are affiliated with Orthodox organizations.

Rabbi Gerald L. Zelizer, president of the Rabbinical Assembly, said the report represents the "first time that a major rabbinic group in the United States has crafted the beginnings of a sexual ethic for the Jewish community."

Zelizer, a rabbi from Metuchen, N.J., said the committee attempted to apply a kind of moral hierarchy to the many kinds of sexual relationships today, with marriage as the ideal. Among its traditional teachings, the report not only upholds the importance of marriage, but condemns adultery as a gross violation of Jewish law. The report also condemns casual and promiscuous sex and encourages adherence to the Jewish law forbidding sex during a woman's menstrual period.

But in recognition of changing sexual practices, the report offers guidelines for sex outside of marriage.

The values the commission upholds include avoiding coercive sex and advocating modesty in speech, dress and sexual activities, honesty about each partner's commitment to the other, and fidelity.

"When people are not married, these norms are still valid," said Arnold Goodman, an Atlanta rabbi and the commission's chairman.

The commission did not take a definitive stand on homosexuality, but is asking the law committee to examine the tension between the traditional teaching that considers same-sex relations an abomination and Conservative Judaism's commitment to civil rights for homosexuals.

Idaho's 1st permanent Rabbi arrives in Boise

The Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho — Daniel Fink's speech is quiet. His words are not.

Fink held his first service as rabbi of Congregation Ahavath Beth Israel on Saturday in Boise. He is the first permanent rabbi in Idaho's history. He will return to his home in Omaha, Neb., next week and will be back in Idaho full-time in July.

Fink's arrival will bring changes beyond helping the congregation. Most notable may be a strong moral voice in Boise from a Jewish perspective.

Following in the tradition of Judaism, Fink doesn't remain silent at the sight of injustice.

"From the beginning of Jewish history it has always been an imperative to create a more just society," Fink said. "To sit and do nothing is to be in complicity with evil. We've learned that most recently from the Holocaust. You can expect to hear from us."

On the anti-gay initiative, Fink wastes little time in choosing sides.

"I expect to be part of the community working against it," he said. Remembering how Jews have been singled out for their differences in the past, he says, "We've been there."

On the beginnings of gang activity in Boise, Fink says the city must look to root causes and not be put off by publicized acts of violence. He's worked with groups that are attacking a full-blown gang problem in Omaha where he's been a rabbi.

Nothing in Fink's appearance indicates that he's a person who jumps into controversy just for the sake of it.

He is of average build, articulate, but gentle when he talks. And he knows that public involvement can have drawbacks.

"It's not always the most popular," he said. "You have to do what is the right thing to do. But it's not a virtue to draw ire just to draw ire."

Fink has stood up in the past offering his voice on issues of racial justice. Once, a Ku Klux Klan rally was planned in Staunton, Va., a town of 25,000 where Fink was a rabbi.

Concerned citizens and clergy gathered and talked about staging a counter demonstration, as they had when the Klan came two years before.

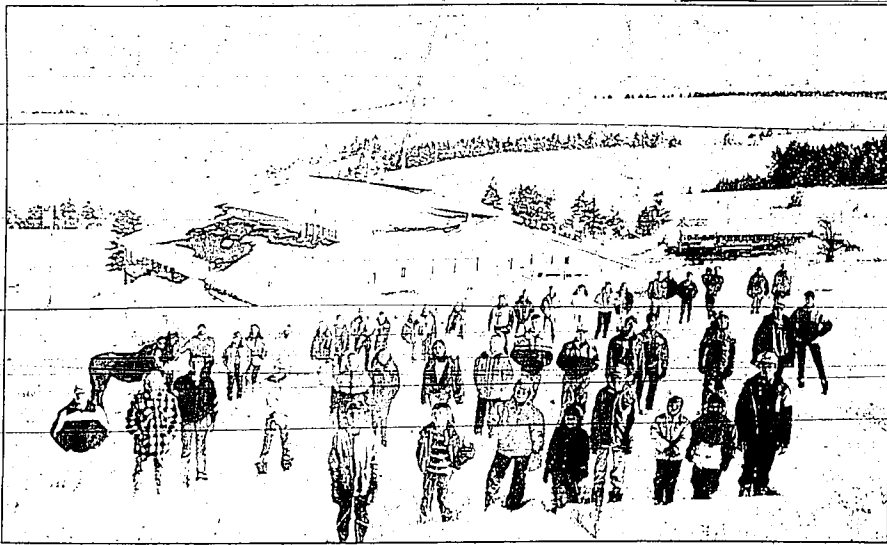

"Rather than respond with a counter demonstration," Fink suggested, "use the rally to address issues of discrimination during the 99.9 percent of the time the Klan is not in town."

Out of the clergy's concerns came a community relations council that worked with schools and held events celebrating Staunton's diversity.

Tough love

Christian ranch bases life on big family, work

By Tom Lacey
The Associated Press

ST. IGNATIUS, Mont. — Swarms of teenage boys racketed back and forth in the gymnasium like an exuberant surf, crashing around the basketball goals and spraying the balls toward the nets.

Along the sidelines, Bob Larsson singled one out for a visitor.

"The tall boy in black was a drug pusher," Larsson confided. "He's planning to go to Bible college in the fall."

Welcome to Pine Haven Christian Children's Ranch.

Pine Haven is a tough-love place for troubled children, founded 16 years ago by Larsson and his small, nondenominational, unaffiliated First Christian Church in nearby St. Ignatius.

In an era of child psychologists and growing bureaucracy, Pine Haven is a throwback. It accepts no government regulation, follows no government guidelines, takes little government money and pays its own way — always in cash. It disdains psychologists and credentialed staff and offers no formal treatment or counseling.

Instead, it adopts its kids as members of a big, strict Christian family, schools them, puts them to work, and loves them.

"This is a very strong Christian-based program," said Andy Larsson, Bob's son, who succeeded his father as pastor at the church. "We share Christ with them and let Him change their lives."

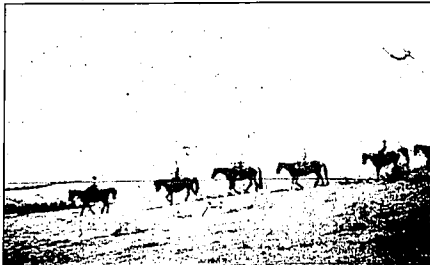

But it's tough love, by necessity. Bob Larsson cautioned a visitor to look his ear. "Our kids are not here because of their virtues."

"These kids know where the buck stops, and it stops real quick," added Andy Larsson. "They find out exactly where the limits are. Kids are always pushing out to find where the limits are, and ours don't go out very far."

Business is booming. More than 40 girls and boys from age 12 to 18 are on hand now. They come from all over the country, a few through courts or juvenile officials, but most through a network of like-minded churches in the Midwest.

The ranch got almost all of its $600,000 operating budget last year from 6,000 to 7,000 regular contributors around the country, Bob Larsson said. Parents pay only what they can; their payments covered only 4.7 percent of the budget last year.

Although it accepts some court placements and their fees, Pine Haven shuns all government regulation. No state agency licenses the ranch or its

What is heard at Pinehaven Children's ranch

The Associated Press

Some quotes from Pinehaven Christian Children's Ranch:

"Everything is pay-as-we-go. We believe what God's people have given sacrificially as support should not be borrowed against so it could be lost to creditors," Andy Larsson, pastor of the First Christian Church in St. Ignatius.

"We looked around and saw so many kids falling through the cracks — I call them the cracks of a broken society — kids who aren't sure who they are or why. We try to give them hope, teach them to care for themselves," Andy Larsson.

"This ranch would barely support the family that had it before we got it. The farm is a vehicle to reach the kids, not a business that's real productive. Certainly not enough to support 40 kids and a dozen staff," Andy Larsson.

new home for unwed mothers in St. Ignatius, and even local officials are only vaguely aware of its existence. It accepts no Medicare payments, because that would require licensing.

"If we took the government finances there'd be so many strings the program wouldn't be a family thing," Bob Larsson said.

He declined to release a copy of the budget or an annual audit.

Pinehaven is a working ranch, 1,120 acres set in the midst of spectacular mountain beauty. Located five miles outside St. Ignatius (population 877), it looks down on the National Bison Range and the Mission Valley, with snow-capped peaks in Canada and Glacier National Park visible on a clear day.

"The farm is a vehicle to reach the kids, not a business that's real productive. Certainly not enough to support 40 kids and a dozen staff," said Andy Larsson.

Only about 100 people attend the sponsoring First Christian Church on a typical Sunday. But Pinehaven is a far larger operation than that suggests. It has a staff of 17; dozens of vehicles ranging from a combine to snowmobiles; 150 beef and dairy cattle; four dormitories, a three-story school building, a storage building and a wood and metal shop. A dairy barn is under construction.

The ranch's newest venture is Life House, a former nursing home in St. Ignatius that gives pregnant girls and women — three so far — an alternative to abortion. As with all its business, Pinehaven paid the $65,000 price in cash. The house is staffed by a registered nurse and her husband, parents of a boy at Pinehaven.

The ranch's 10 house parents, who have the major say whether a youngster is ready to be sent home, are chosen for their solid marriages, church involvement and financial savvy.

Kids typically stay two to three years, some much longer. The ranch will accept children up to age 18, but not if they are suicidal or considered dangerous to other children.

"We don't use the psychological approach," Andy Larsson said. "Our kids have been through that almost without exception. We just use a common-sense, how-we-were-raised approach."

What Pine Haven offers is a wholesome, family-oriented lifestyle in a strict Christian atmosphere and plenty of much work. The kids feed the cattle, milk the cows, tend the gardens, muck out the corals and help build the dorms, all on top of attending school six hours a day, chapel three times a week and church every Sunday.

No radio or television. The TV set in each dorm is reserved for family-oriented videos, and the kids' portable tape players are restricted to Christian music.

But for many troubled kids, it seems to work.

"They've had good success with those youngsters we placed out there," said Patrick Warnecke, chief juvenile probation officer for Flathead County. "Each one of them made it through to adulthood without getting more deeply enmeshed in the court system."

A newcomer of one week, pale, thin and unsure, it's a sharp contrast to the robust, cheerful youngsters around her.

Signs of affection are everywhere. Bob and Andy Larsson seem to know every kid by name, and hugs and teasing are frequent.

"He's the father I never had," April, 15, said of Bob Larsson.

"It has changed my life. I became a Christian," said Eric, 17, peering around the rump of a cow he was milking. "It's magic, I guess. I don't know how to explain it."

Watch out for spiritual disconnection notices

I must admit that I am among those who, at some time, have had a service or utility disconnected because I had failed in my responsibility to pay my bill. Many of us have felt the accompanying frustration and embarrassment of being disconnected. Our utilities and services have become nearly indispensable in today's society. Most Americans aspire to having and retaining these services as a basic part of life.

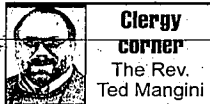

Yet every day, countless numbers of people fail to respond to the disconnect notices delivered all around them. Home after home suffers the ravages of divorce, family dysfunction, chemical dependency, physical and emotional abuse. Communities of every size are being notified daily of the cultural, social and moral disconnection. All of us, church or unchurched, feel the effects of this disconnection in every area of society. And yet, disconnect notices keep coming — sexual abuse, violence, political corruption and world unrest.

The world cries for peace; societies call out for relief; individuals yearn for hope, and churches pray for revival. The answer is not having faith in some brighter future. We cannot juggle our responsibilities as we might juggle the bills and pretend that it will all work out somewhere down the line. We must realize from what and whom we have become disconnected.

I personally pray for revival, and I encourage every Christian to do the same. But without personal obedience to the word of God, prayer for revival is as effective as prayer over the bills without taking the responsibility to pay them. Now I'm not suggesting that Christians seek some payoff for revival. But I am insisting that the Christian must embrace every responsibility and duty that is his or hers. We must embrace the full Christian life.

Christians either have Christ or we don't. Either I am a temple of the Holy Spirit or he does not dwell in me. And, if indeed, I have Christ Jesus (or, more aptly, he has me) and the Spirit of God dwells in me, then to what else or whom else am I looking for or waiting upon so that I might live a "revived" vital, on-fire, Christian life? Indeed, Christ Jesus and his kingdom are all that individual or church need. God has never been impressed by human altars. Sacrificial offerings, even prayers, take a back seat to unwavering love and obedience.

What I am suggesting is that nations, cultures, societies, families, individuals and, yes, even churches have become disconnected for the person and work of Christ through disbelief and disobedience. Every Christian needs to rise up as a defender of the faith — fully alive in Christ, filled with the love he has richly provided, dead to our own selfish ambitions and unforgiveness and alive to the destiny that exists for every believer, victorious over sin and living the revival for which we pray.

I would encourage you to take personal inventory. Take responsibility for your spiritual condition. Together, as we make up the Church of Magic Valley, let us dedicate ourselves to obedience, surrendering our will and pride, casting off unbelief and living revival — fully connected to our source, Christ Jesus.

Methodists plan to recruit Hispanics

BOISE (AP) — The United Methodist Church — an overwhelmingly white denomination in Idaho — is drafting strategies to bring more Hispanics into the faith.

"Up until now, we have been exclusive," said Debbie Pitney, who is in charge of the conference's Idaho area. "We, as a dominant white culture, are missing something if we don't look out and see the body of Christ is broken if it is all white."

The Hispanic population is expected to more than double to 350,000 by 2010 in Oregon and southern Idaho.

The church must meet the challenge by incorporating more Hispanics, United Methodist officials say.

In Idaho, the church is requesting that a missionary pastor be assigned to Canyon County, home of 11,838 Hispanics. The pastor would help establish faith communities — groups of 10 to 15 people who would meet for Bible study.

"Hopefully, they would come together as a worship congregation," Pitney said.

Canyon County, Idaho's second most populous, has 1,794 Methodists.

The move in Idaho is part of a national United Methodist plan to field 2,000 missionaries in the next four years to work with Hispanics.

"The presence and distribution of Hispanics throughout the land have led to a commitment that deals beyond a regional approach," said Arturo Fernandez, superintendent of the conference's Hispanic portion.

"We need a national plan to move the denomination into real engagement with Hispanics," he said.

Most church denominations' lack of contact with Hispanics means taking a careful approach.

"We're in a church that is classist and racist," Fernandez said. "Because it's that way, it will be difficult for Hispanics to break through."

"I'm sure there is going to be resistance from some congregations," Pitney agreed.

"As we try to raise consciousness, we're in for the long haul," Fernandez said. "It takes years for us to change an attitude about something that bugs us."

Sports, religion interest doesn't add up to media coverage

By George W. Coriell
The Associated Press

The facts don't seem to fit. They appear incompatible. As measured by attendance and money, Americans show much greater interest in religion than sports, but it receives far less attention from the news media.

This curious tilt has been borne out statistically.

"It's a strange disparity considering the importance religion has in American life," said noted sociologist Robert N. Bellah of the University of California in Berkeley, Calif.

He said the media seem to assume that religion, except in cases of scandal, is largely a private matter. "This is a very bizarre idea, but it's part of the ideology," he said, noting religion's persistent social impact.

Nevertheless, newly gathered comparative statistics in the 1990's on two key yardsticks of human interest — financial and personal involvement — show religion ahead of sports.

Yet religion gets only a tiny fraction of media notice compared to the huge volume of attention lavished on sports.

The latest comparative figures collected on religion and sports finds that money contributed to religion totaled $56.7 billion in 1992, according to the American Association of Fund-Raising Council. That is about 14 times the $4 billion spent on the three biggest sports — major league baseball, football and basketball.

The major sports leagues don't disclose game receipts, but totals were obtained through league public relations sources who asked not to be named. Financial World magazine reported similar figures for 1992.

Major religious organizations make public annual financial reports. In attendance, religion totaled 5.6

billion in 1993, based on annual Gallup Polls. That is about 55 times greater than the 103-million total attendance reported by the three main professional sports leagues.

The latest tally of overall attendance in all U.S. sporting events, gathered in 1990 by the Daily Racing Form, totaled 388 million, including both professional and college football, baseball, basketball and hockey, and also boxing, tennis, soccer, wrestling, harness, automobile and dog racing.

In comparison, religion attendance of 5.2 billion in 1990 was about 13 times the overall sports total.

Religion vs. sports

It is an unlikely comparison, but statistics on money and attendance show that Americans have a greater interest in religion than sports.

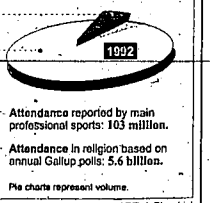

Money spent on professional baseball, football and basketball: $4 billion.

Money contributed to religion according to the American Association of Fund-Raising Council: $56.7 billion.

Attendance reported by main professional sports: 103 million.

Attendance in religion based on annual Gallup polls: 5.6 billion.

Pie charts represent volume.

Briefly

Christian network sues Romanian TV

BUCHAREST, Romania - The U.S.-based Christian Broadcasting Network said it would sue Romanian television for refusing to broadcast Easter programs that Romanian TV executives claimed were fundamentalist proselytizing.

A top CBN executive said Thursday his company would seek an unspecified financial payment from Romanian television because it reneged on an agreement to broadcast the four programs.

"They were inspiring, uplifting and family-oriented" programs, Dick Thomas, CBN's marketing director, said at a news conference.

But their content was unacceptable to state TV executives. "The programs were just a pretext for a large campaign to promote Baptist, Pentecostal and Evangelical churches," said George Serafin, deputy state TV director.

Nearly 90 percent of Romania's population is Christian Orthodox, which celebrates Easter this week.

CBN, based in Virginia Beach, Va., was founded by the Rev. Pat Robertson.

Group seeks environment, religion tie

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - A group of religious leaders are trying to inject some spiritual fervor into the environmental movement. Paul Gorman, executive director of the National Religious Partnership for the Environment, said recently that the religious, faithful are the key to guiding the sometimes too-political environmental movement.

"We have planted a seed which cannot help but sprout," Gorman said at the "Caring for Creation" conference, a nondenominational event sponsored by the U.S. Episcopal Church. "The real power of this awakening must come from the people in the pews."

Another speaker, California state Sen. Tom Hayden, said environmental concerns must become a moral issue.

"The environment is not treated with enough seriousness by religion in our society," Hayden said.

"This is an enormous question of ethics. There is a missing institutional link here."

Roman Catholics crack down on alcohol

CINCINNATI - Officials of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Cincinnati are urging churches to take the booze out of parish festivals.

Archbishop Daniel Pileary, leader of the 19-county archdiocese, has told pastors in a letter that churches could be held liable for accidents involving alcohol.

"I would be very happy if all our parishes and institutions simply decided that there would be no selling of alcohol at all in the context of social or athletic activities," he wrote.

The archbishop's April 14 letter did not order a ban on alcohol sales.

St. Rita School for the Deaf, affiliated with the archdiocese, holds a summer festival that generates at least $100,000 for school operations. Alcohol sales account for 15 percent of the profits, spokeswoman Becky Fickenworth said.

"We are still going to serve beer, but there may be some changes, like in the size of our servings," she said.

Navigators encourage spiritual maturity

By Steve Rabey
Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - In a quiet canyon next to the Garden of the Gods is the headquarters of The Navigators, a religious organization better known around the world than in the city it's called home for 39 years.

Evangelist Billy Graham and other national religious leaders have praised it, and its 3,327 employees work in 89 countries to promote Christian living.

Even with 450 employees in Colorado Springs and an annual budget of $80 million, the organization is a mystery to many.

"Most people do not know what we do," admits Jerry White, international president of the organization, which is quietly celebrating its 60th anniversary.

The ministry, which got its start with U.S. Navy men, helps churches, college students and military employees conduct Bible studies designed to introduce the unchurched to Christianity and encourage Christians to mature spiritually.

The Navigators came to Colorado Springs in 1954 after spending $340,000 at Glen Eyrie, the picturesque former estate of city founder William Jackson Palmer. The property includes more than 20 buildings on nearly 1,100 rugged acres.

The ministry also owns an office building, which houses NavPress, publisher of Christian books and videos with $10-million-in annual sales.

An article in the Gazette Telegraph on June 13, 1954, reflected some residents' confusion about The Navigators, which had just relocated from Los Angeles: "You hear that the forbidding grounds of the great estate will protect a secret cult cloaked in mystery."

The group is low-key and avoids self-promotion like the plague. But there's nothing mysterious about its mission, which is simple and straightforward: "To know Christ and make him known."

To Navigators, that's "discipleship."

"For us, that means helping people move from being simple affiliates with Christianity to being committed followers of Christ," White says. "Our primary calling is to communicate how a meaningful relationship with Jesus Christ plays out in everyday life."

White and other Navigators say faith in Christ should involve more than the brain. It's a matter of the heart and a day-to-day connection with God.

They teach that such a connection is made by prayer, discipline and reading, meditating and memorizing the Bible. And they say that Christians who do these things will naturally share their faith with others.

"Our real goal is to help the ordinary believer in Christ be really competent in expressing his faith in his own life circumstances," says White, a lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Air Force Reserve. White, who holds a doctorate in astronautics, presides over the Air Force Academy.

"One does not become competent at anything without giving it time, energy and effort," White says. "Today, many people call themselves 'born again,' but it doesn't seem to change their lives. We help people get into the Bible on their own and discover God for themselves."

The Navigators was founded by Dawson Trotman, a California nee-to-well. One evening in 1926, as a policeman hauled him off to jail, the 20-year-old Trotman began a desperate prayer, according to Navigators literature.

But unlike previous crisis-driven prayers, this one brought true change. Two days later, Trotman bypassed a nearby pool hall and went to a church youth meeting. There, he agreed to memorize some Bible verses.

Three weeks later, as Trotman walked to his job at a lumberyard, the memorized verses came alive in his mind. Soon, he had accepted Christ as his savior and dedicated his life to serving God.

Trotman began to share his newfound faith with coworkers, Sunday school groups, churches, and strangers on the street. He promised God that he would share the faith with at least one person a day. One night, when he realized he had forgotten to fulfill that pledge, Trotman jumped out of bed, got dressed and cruised nearby streets looking for a potential convert, according to two Trotman biographies.

He also continued to memorize the Bible. Within three years, he had memorized 1,000 verses, quoting them to anyone who would listen. From this near-obsessive zeal, the Navigators was born.

Trotman died in 1956. His widow, Lila, and three of his four children still live in Colorado Springs.

Dawson Trotman's death in 1956 was as dramatic as his life.

He and another passenger, a woman, were thrown from a powerboat during a visit to a Christian camp in New York.

Trotman hit the woman's head above water until the boat could circle around and rescue her. But the 50-year-old Trotman drowned, his health weakened by years of travel, hard work and little sleep.

Time magazine devoted a page to his death, calling him a "light and power of a movement that today the words of the Scriptures around the world." The caption under Trotman's photo read, "Always holding someone up."

Billy Graham left his crusade in Oklahoma City to preach at Trotman's funeral at Glen Eyrie. He was "one of my best friends and advisors," Graham said.

'Picket Fences' star can cook off-screen

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Before her "Picket Fences" days, Kathy Baker earned an advanced degree from the Cordon Bleu school of cuisine.

Unfortunately, her children are more likely to get fast food than French food.

"I get them fed," the actress says in Sunday's Parade magazine. "That's enough!"

A French major at the University of California, Berkeley, Baker studied pastry cooking at the Cordon Bleu in Paris for two years. She earned a Grande Diplôme.

As star of the CBS-TV series, Baker has little time for fancy cooking these days, with two active children and an equally active career.

"I always say I have to go to work to get some rest," she said.

ATLANTA — Not to be outdone by his wife, Atlanta Braves outfielder David Justice made People magazine's "most beautiful" list.

When actress Halle Berry made the list last year, she talked about her 6-foot-3, 200-pound husband. "When I saw him I had cardiac arrest, he was so gorgeous," she said.

The latest "most beautiful" issue was due on newsstands this weekend. Berry said Justice's most notable feature is his legs, especially when he's wearing Mickey Mouse boxer shorts.

Justice told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution he was a skinny kid, "but I always had legs."

KELSO, Wash. — When it comes to excuses for missing a court date, Judge Robert Altenhof thought he'd seen them all. Until the guy who brought in his mother's remains.

Rodney Williams, 21, brought his mother's ashes into Cowlitz County District Court in a plastic bag as his mother's remains. Williams said he wanted to prove her illness and death were the reason he missed an earlier court date and hadn't paid his fines for an assault charge.

"They bring engine parts, rugs that are urine stained," Altenhof said after Williams' appearance Wednesday. "This is the first time they've brought in human remains." He's been a judge for 12 years.

Williams said he wanted to come clean and take care of his fines. Altenhof accepted Williams' excuse. "You think you've heard it all, but somebody always comes up with something new," the judge said.

Former Cook County GOP head sentenced to prison

CHICAGO — A former chairman of the Cook County Republican Party convicted on bribery and tax evasion charges was sentenced to nearly 3½ years in federal prison.

James Dvorak, 49, pleaded guilty in August to tax evasion and taking bribes while he served as a Cook County undersheriff in the late 1980s. He was ordered Thursday to serve 41 months behind bars.

He admitted failing to report legal gambling winnings and other earnings on income tax returns, and conspiring to hide his gambling income. Dvorak also admitted accepting a Rolex watch from a businessman and using five cars provided by two others, who own a auto rental agency.

Dvorak said he gave the businessmen nothing in return.

Suspect slips up, uses real name on form, police say

NEW YORK — A man allegedly held up 18 businesses after closing the places while filling out job or rental applications. The spree ended after he accidentally signed his real name on one of the forms, police said.

Javar Torres, 26, was arrested and charged with robbery Wednesday. He is accused of robbing 18 beauty parlors, travel agencies and real estate offices between March 16 and April 24.

Sgt. William Nevins said Torres asked for job applications in beauty shops and travel agencies, in real-estate offices, he requested rental applications. Then he would "scope the place out," Nevins said.

He would leave and then return a few minutes later, draw a gun and demand money, Nevins said.

At one location, he asked for a haircut "and when they pulled off the sheet he was holding a gun," Nevins said. "He didn't pay for the haircut, either."

Torres used various aliases when filling out applications, but at a beauty parlor on April 15, he printed a phony name, then slipped up and signed his real name at the bottom, Nevins said.

Amy Fisher letter outsells card signed by Nixon

NEW YORK — A letter from Amy Fisher brought in more than a business card autographed by Richard Nixon, while a document signed by President Lincoln fetched the highest price of all at an auction.

The sale was held Thursday by Herman L. Vick Auctioneer Auctions. Fisher's letter, which Doreen described as "a love letter," was written to a woman with whom the teen-ager was imprisoned after being arrested for shooting Mary Jo Buttafuoco, her lover's wife. It sold for $550.

A Nixon card with the address of the New York City office he used in the early 1980s sold for $480. The auction catalog, issued a week before the former president suffered a fatal stroke, estimated the signature would fetch only $200.

A Civil War shipping document signed by Lincoln went for $11,000.

The buyers' identities were not disclosed.

Police uncover crack lab in daycare basement

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Police found a crack lab in the basement of a day care center.

Deb Westbury, a 40-year-old woman who runs the center and pleaded guilty to cocaine possession in 1988, was not arrested, but state officials suspended her day-care license.

Between $2,000 and $3,000 worth of cocaine was confiscated in the raid Tuesday, along with plastic bags and scales.

Police raided the day care center and a nearby apartment after receiving tips in recent days about drug activity.

Three people were arrested in the apartment raid, and all were expected to be charged with drug-related offenses.

One of those arrested, Stacey Miller, 21, rented a basement room in the house where the day care center is situated. Most of the drug-related materials were found in that room, police said.

Westbury was placed on a year's probation for the cocaine offense. In 1990, she received a state license to care for up to eight children in her home.

Applicants are required to fill out background forms, but the information is not routinely checked, said Patty Hammes, director of registration and licensing for the state Department of Health and Social Services.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE ROBBY WOLFF

"In the battle of existence, talent is the punch; tact is the clever footwork."

— Wilson Mizner.

East was clever enough to direct the best opening lead against today's slam, but he gave back the advantage with his misguided return at trick two.

Afraid East might have doubled with the ace and king of spades, South bid the slam in clubs instead of contracting for the safer slam in no-trump. It was, North who dropped the ball; he should have corrected to six no-trump. He was looking at the spade king, and if South could make six clubs, North certainly should have been able to take 12 tricks at no-trump.

West dutifully led a spade to the jack and queen, and East's next play was in contention for the Declarer's Friend of the Year Award. After telling everyone that he had the ace and queen of spades, he returned a low spade, sounding the warning bell for South. No fool, South ruffed with his ace, and when trumps were not 4-0, he was able to claim the Slam.

What would have happened had East played his spade ace at trick two? There was no guarantee of course, but South might well have ruffed with a low club. West's overruff would have come as a shock, and an unwarned South would have been left muttering about North's failure to bid six no-trump, and his own overconfident play.

East's spade ace was a worthless card when he held on to it. It might have served as a bedtime tranquilizer for South had East played it at trick two.

IT'S CALLED JUNK MAIL FOR A REASON

First the wad of bothersome paper must be extracted from the mailbox. Then it gets unceremoniously dumped in the trashcan, often without even a second glance.

It's called junk mail and nobody ever reads it.

That's too bad. Because the same message in a newspaper could have tickled the imagination. Stimulated a response. And prompted a purchase. Newspaper readers actually look forward to advertising, that's why they're willing to pay for it.

Your ad dollars can work harder and go farther. Call us at (208) 733-0931 and we'll make your message part of a medium that's actually welcome in people's homes.
