Historic testament

Pastor Greg Amo of the Jerome Bible Baptist Church holds a Bible printed in 1611. The Bible and other ancient manuscripts are part of the collection of Jewell Smith.

Old Bibles on display at Jerome church

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

JEROME — Almost everyone owns a Bible, but Jewell Smith has the proof pages.

Smith is a collector of biblical antiques, original scrolls, manuscripts and Bibles. He owns everything from cuneiform writings on clay tablets dating from 2000 B.C. to a complete, first edition copy of the 1611 King James Bible. As he travels the country, lecturing at churches and Bible colleges, he tells some old, old stories.

"How much did your Bible cost?" Smith asks his audiences.

"$59.95 (mine's bigger)."

"Your Bible cost the blood of literally thousands of people," Smith continues. It survived a lot of history, too. Here's

Smith will relate history of items

Jewell Smith will recount the history of various items from his biblical collection at 7 p.m. today and Thursday at the Bible Baptist Church, 132 Second Ave. E., in Jerome.

Those who attend the meeting will have opportunity to view each piece on display. Smith also has framed pages from early biblical manuscripts for sale.

Actor fires at gun foes

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The debate over assault-style weapons intensified Tuesday on Capitol Hill and featured actor Charlton Heston, who accused those who want to ban 19 types of firearms of lying.

Meanwhile, an aide to the chief sponsor, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said the legislation was within 12 votes of passage. Last week, Schumer said 15 to 20 votes were needed.

"I'm amazed at... how much deception, how much deliberate misinformation, how much lying is taking place in this debate," Heston told reporters at a news conference arranged by the National Rifle Association.

"None of the lead people" pushing passage of the assault-style weapons ban, including President Clinton, "are speaking the truth," said Heston. "I think the degree of misinformation is more than simple ignorance," he said. "It has to be deliberate obscuration."

On the other side, a bipartisan group of 20 female members of Congress and actress Mercedes Baxter urged passage of the bill. "It's time to call the NRA's bluff," said Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y.

Tumor researchers on way to Idaho

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Energy Department officials acknowledged Tuesday that for years they hampered a promising treatment for a usually fatal brain tumor, but say they're now on track — turning idle nuclear reactors into cancer killers.

"We got off to a slow start," Martha Krebs, research director for the Department of Energy, told a Senate hearing. "We are definitely trying to change that."

President rejects 'flip-flop' charge

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Bristling over criticism of his foreign policy from one continent to the next, President Clinton said Tuesday night, "It's not fair to say we've been unprincipled or vacillating" but that global problems are more difficult than he had imagined.

At a televised forum on foreign policy, Clinton went on the offensive against persistent criticism that he's been an indecisive world leader, telling a questioner in Sarajevo: "There have been no constant flip-flops, madam."

Clinton used the occasion to warn Haiti's military leaders that he has not ruled out the use of force to restore democracy. He told North Korea it must permit international inspection of suspected nuclear weapons sites. And he said he wants to avoid revoking China's most-favored trade status but that the loss of those benefits is "clearly an option on the table."

Clinton's appearance was televised live around the world by CNN.

"We've had a lot of successes that perhaps have not been as noticed as they should have been," the president said in defense of his policies.

He said the two-year civil war in Bosnia and the defiance of the military in Haiti were two areas that defied easy solutions. "At least on the international front, I would say the problems are more difficult than I imagined them to be" as a candidate, Clinton said.

"I have been willing to risk error and when you do that you get criticism," the president said.

Rejecting any suggestion that he fire his foreign policy team, Clinton said, "I think they're up to the job. It's just that they're plowing new ground" in the aftermath of the Cold War.

Clinton decried the ethnic bloodshed that has killed upwards of 200,000 people in Rwanda. He said the United States must provide more humanitarian aid, help deal with the flood of refugees and "get the political process going again."

As for Haiti, Clinton said the United States "cannot afford to discount the prospect of a military option" to restore democracy and return ousted Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to power.

"We have not decided to use force," Clinton said. "All I've said is that we cannot rule it out any more."

Clinton called on North Korea to honor its obligations to forswear development of nuclear weapons. If it fails to do so, he said, "North Korea will be much more isolated... and in a much more tenuous position."

Clinton also made these points:

- Expressed hope that progress in talks between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization would be followed by a peace agreement between Israel and Syria. Asked about additional U.S. aid to the Palestinians, Clinton predicted an infusion of capital from private sources, Arab and Jewish.

Said he was determined to "simply continue to make progress" toward negotiating expanded trade with Japan. He rejected suggestions that numerical targets represented "managed trade," saying, "We have to know: are we making progress or not."

Watchers hope 'missing' wolves now live in Idaho

By William Brock
Times-News writer

BOISE — At least 17 radio-collared wolves have "gone missing" from Montana and southern Canada — and wildlife authorities are hopeful that some have taken up residence in Idaho.

If they have, it could dramatically alter a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service program for wolf re-introduction scheduled for this October. Wolves arriving under their own power would avert a forced re-introduction program, which is permitted by the Endangered Species Act.

At least one of the radio-collared wolves is known to be in Idaho, and wolf watchers will begin searching for others by airplane next week. Money to pay for the flights is coming from a variety of sources — most notably, the non-profit Wolf Education and Research Center in Ketchikan.

"If we find any of these radio-collared wolves in Idaho, it will give us a lot of good information," said Ted Koch, Idaho coordinator for the Fish and Wildlife Service's wolf recovery program.

"We feel the odds are pretty good," Koch said, "but there are still a lot of questions and the time to answer them is now."

Wolves were trapped and hunted to near extinction in the Lower 48 states after a $1-a-pelt bounty was established more than a century ago. They have been a federally protected species since the Endangered Species Act became law in 1973, but active wolf recovery efforts didn't get under way until 1987.

The endangered status could be lifted if at least 10 breeding pairs are documented for three consecutive years in each of three target areas: central Idaho, Yellowstone and western Montana. So far, western Montana is the only target area that has enjoyed any success, and the area is halfway to the goal of 10 breeding pairs.

As Montana wolf populations have swelled, at least three lone wolves have made forays into Idaho over the past five years, according to David Langhous, executive director of the Wolf Education and Research Center.

"Wolf sightings" have doubled in Idaho over the past 10 years, Koch added, but their true status remains a mystery.

Air Traffic Inc. would control U.S. skies

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration, hoping to strip away the tangle of federal rules that critics say have stifled modernization, launched an effort Tuesday to switch the nation's air traffic control system to a corporation.

"Today's announcement is good news for the traveling public, for the airlines, and for the controllers and technicians who keep the air traffic control system running," said Transportation Secretary Federico Peña.

He said a federal corporation would be able to purchase technology more flexibly, borrow for long-term capital investments, "and deploy and reward its workers more effectively."

He said the current system, operated by the Federal Aviation Administration, is hampered by an out-of-date personnel system, antiquated equipment and a complex process for replacing it, and the need for long-term funding.

The plan announced Tuesday calls for establishing a government-run corporation, funded by fees paid by airlines, to manage the system that controls movement of an estimated 22,000 commercial airline flights daily.

Currently, government corporations run the Post Office, Tennessee Valley Authority, Amtrak and some other activities. The idea of adding air traffic control has been kicking around industry and government for years.

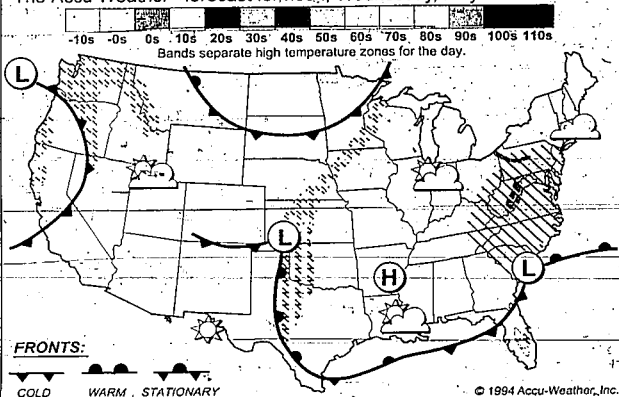

Air traffic controller handles traffic at Washington's National Airport. His job would be affected by changes proposed Tuesday.

from a virulent brain tumor called glioblastoma multiforme, known for killing such people as Republican political strategist Lee Atwater and entertainer Elmer Farnham.

Only about 3 percent of patients survive if large portions of the brain are cut out to get all the tumor. Drugs and radiation typically don't work.

In BNCT, tumors are injected with a form of boron, a common element, and bombarded with neutrons that cause a small, short-lived radioactive reaction in the boron — just enough to kill the tumor without damaging the entire brain.

U.S. doctors developed BNCT, but abandoned it when clinical trials in the 1950s failed. A Japanese doctor trained here took the idea to Tokyo, where doctors improved the method and now report a 50 percent survival rate. Americans who can afford the $60,000 up-front fee go there for treatment.

"Why did I go to Japan? Because it was the only show in town," Dr. Michael Werner of Rock Springs, Wyo., testified.

Six months after he was told he was dying, brain scans show no sign of cancer. "I am here, I think, because of BNCT."

"BNCT's program has been miserable," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho. "Boron Neutron Capture Therapy is one of the few... treatments that offer the hope that patients with non-fatal brain tumors could be treated and cured."

Craig and other Idahoans say the old Power Burst Facility at INEL could be converted into a BNCT facility.

Perry warns of growing Korean bomb potential

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Korea has reached a critical juncture in its nuclear weapons program and will be capable soon of making enough nuclear materials to build 10 to 12 bombs a year, Defense Secretary William Perry said Tuesday.
Perry told a meeting of the private Asia Society that the administration remains committed to seeking a diplomatic settlement of the North Korean nuclear issue. His comments suggested a concern that while the drag on North Korea's nuclear potential is growing, Perry said the full scope of the North Korean nuclear program is unknown to outsiders, but two known elements are a 25-megawatt research reactor that has operated for several years and a 200-megawatt reactor under construction at the Yongbyon nuclear center north of the capital.

"When this 200-megawatt reactor is completed... it will have the potential to produce enough material for 10 to 12 nuclear bombs a year," Perry said.
He said "the most reasonable explanation" for North Korea's interest in building the bigger reactor, expanding its spent fuel reprocessing facility, and refueling the smaller reactor is its desire to manufacture nuclear arms.

Panel rejects GOP proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel considering a modified version of the Clinton health plan voted down a narrower Republican approach Tuesday that would not require or provide health insurance for all.
The House Education and Labor Committee's labor-management relations subcommittee is considering one of the more liberal House panels. The health bill drafted by its chairman, Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., drops the Clinton plan's mandatory alliances but expands the basic benefits package.

Wolf

"We need the best information we can get on possible recent migrations," Langhorst said in a news release. "If the Fish and Wildlife Service finds a wolf pair or two, it could change the entire direction of wolf recovery in Idaho."

If wolves are making a comeback without help from humans; there won't be a need to trap them in Canada and bring them to Idaho, Langhorst said. "It's not to be expensive, re-introduced wolves would be deemed 'non-essential' — and wouldn't get as much protection as those arriving under their own power."

Langhorst's organization put up some of the money for the flights, and Western Air Research of Driggs is donating some flight time; the Fish and Wildlife Service is also contributing money to the project.

"We couldn't foot the bill ourselves," Koch said, noting that about $2,000 has been dedicated to aerial reconnaissance. The flights, which should conclude by the end of the month, will range from the Panhandle to the Sawtooth Valley and Lost Trail Pass to the Centennial Mountains.

Radio collars have a maximum transmission range of about 30 miles, Koch said, but the signals are often dulled in rough, mountainous country. If a signal is detected from the air, Fish and Wildlife Service employees will be dispatched on the ground to search for the animal.

From Koch's perspective, the best possible result would be firsthand observation of the radio-collared wolf "carving with a wolf of the opposite sex — accompanied by a litter of pups."

Koch encourages anyone who has seen a wolf in Idaho to call him and report the sighting. The telephone number is 1-800-793-WOLF, or 334-1931.

Clinton may delay base closings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is considering delaying some military base closure decisions until after the 1996 election.

A senior Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a 1997 base closure round could be added, softening the impact of next year's scheduled round. And Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., chairman of a House Armed Services subcommittee overseeing base closings, confirmed Tuesday that Pentagon officials have privately discussed the proposal.

"On the political level, it probably would be very popular to delay," said McCurdy. "Any time we can delay, whether it's going to the dentist or cutting the budget, we will do that."

The uniformed military, hoping to free funds for new weapons programs, opposes any delay in base closings and is arguing within the administration against the proposal.

If the president decides to seek an additional round in 1997, it will need congressional approval. A key factor driving the administration is the expectation that next year's closure list would deliver a major blow to the nation's bases and the communities that depend on them.

Based on Pentagon estimates, the 1995 base closings, coming a year before Clinton is up for re-election, could equal the combined impact of base closure rounds in 1988, 1991 and 1993. They resulted in orders to close 103 major bases.

The senior Pentagon official described an atmosphere of apprehension in military communities.

— Dave McCurdy, Representative from Oklahoma awaiting the Pentagon recommendations early next year. Those recommendations go before the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission for review and a revised list then goes to the Congress and the president for final approval.

"People are really scared and it's creating an atmosphere we really don't want," the official said. McCurdy and congressional staffers cited a political ingredient to the proposal.

Rep. James Hansen, R-Utah, said Clinton would be committing political suicide to cut bases and slash defense jobs across the country before his 1996 re-election bid. Hansen takes the question a step further with his bill to put off the 1995 round entirely until 1997. He has 30 cosponsors for his bill.

Base closings ordered to date will eventually eliminate about 150,000 military and civilian positions, according to the most recent Pentagon estimate.

The debate going on within the Clinton administration pits these political and economic concerns against the firmly sided views of the military: they want to go ahead with base closures so they can afford to modernize their forces.

Adm. Jeremy Boorda, the chief of naval operations, said Tuesday in an interview with reporters that he wants base closures to proceed fairly, "and hopefully, quickly." "We have a fixed income, and we know what it is, and we can't afford to pay for things we don't need."

One strong argument in favor of reducing the size of the 1995 base closure round, McCurdy said, is the high cost of closing bases and the slow progress to date in shutting down bases fiddled closed in previous rounds. So far, 24 of the 103 major bases have been closed.

President won't rule out Haiti military action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is reviving the idea of dispatching military trainers to Haiti as part of a plan to professionalize the Haitian military, U.S. officials said Tuesday.

A previous such attempt ended in failure last October when President Clinton ordered the vessel carrying military personnel to retreat after a gang of armed, pro-military demonstrators protested on the dock in Port-au-Prince. On board the vessel were more than 200 trainers and construction workers.

Clinton, keeping alive the threat of U.S. military action in Haiti, said Tuesday, "I'm not ruling out any option." He said Haiti's military rulers should get the message: "It's time for them to go."

The officials, who asked not to be identified by name, said that if the plan is revived, the means of dispatching the troops will be altered considerably to avoid a repeat of the debate last fall.

The possibility would be to fly the trainers in piecemeal to an air base in Haiti, the officials said. "They added that Army chief Raoul Cedras has not been approached about the proposal. Cedras had given his consent to the earlier attempt at deploying trainers six months ago."

According to the officials, the administration also is working with the United Nations on ways to tighten sanctions along Haiti's border with the Dominican Republic, where oil supplies are filtering through in violation of the embargo against Haiti.

The officials said the U.N. Security Council may eventually authorize monitors to keep an eye on Dominican military enforcement of the embargo. Clinton said the first step is to tighten economic sanctions on Haiti to bring pressure on the forces that ousted democratically elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

The military leaders of Haiti have abused their authority," Clinton said, pausing briefly to talk with reporters as he left the White House for a foreign policy speech in Atlanta.

It remains unclear whether signs of increased administration attention to the military option mark a turning point, or whether they are merely intended to scare Haiti's generals into surrendering power.

In any case, the focus this week is on the United Nations, where the administration is pushing for tightened international sanctions against Haiti.

Clinton said Haiti's military leaders are killing innocent civilians who are not involved in political life. He said the United States and the rest of the world are outraged.

Invoking Al Gore's 1992 campaign slogan about the Bush administration, Clinton said the same message now applies to Haiti's military rulers. "It's time for them to go."

Anthony Lake, Clinton's national security adviser, said the new sanctions would be much stronger and would be targeted specifically at Haiti's military leaders.

"We believe they will have a significant impact on them," said Lake, who accompanied Clinton.

Former president Bush reverses self on Haiti policy

HOUSTON (AP) — Former President George Bush has changed his mind on U.S. policy toward Haiti, saying it's time for "a significant shift" including dropping support for the return of ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"As president, I felt that the way to support democracy in Haiti was to insist on the return of Aristide to power," Bush said in a rare interview for Tuesday's editions of the Houston Chronicle. "Given recent events and Aristide's demonstrated instability, the time has come to break that linkage."

Bush said the United States must separate "backing democracy" from "backing Aristide."

Bush also told the newspaper it would be "a tremendous mistake" for the Clinton administration to use military action to restore democracy in Haiti.

Congressional backing for a military initiative has been increasing, and The Washington Post reported today that the administration is considering a plan to send armed military training personnel to Haiti.

"We can easily put our forces in, but when would they come home?" Bush asked. "I certainly could not support the use of U.S. troops under existing conditions in Haiti. No U.S. lives are at risk in Haiti today."

Character questions cling like burrs to the Velcro president

By Mike Feinberg
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If Ronald Reagan was the Teflon president because nothing stuck to him, Bill Clinton is the Velcro president: Doubts from his past cling like burrs.

Clinton is adept at shaking them off, but they have a habit of returning.

Now he is hiring a personal lawyer to deal with pre-presidential allegations — a step suggesting how disruptive the character question has become to his presidency.

Robert Bennett, one of Washington's best-known white collar criminal lawyers, is being brought in by White House counsel Lloyd Cutler said he had spoken with Bennett "about the possibility of him helping" if Paul Jones, a former Arkansas state employee, files suit against Clinton.

Ms. Jones is said to be contemplating legal action, she asserted at a Feb. 11 news conference here that in 1991, when Clinton was governor, he summoned her to a hotel room and made sexual advances toward her.

There was a time when election to the presidency granted political rebirth. New presidents were absolved of past sins.

For example, Herblock, the Washington Post cartoonist, always had portrayed Richard Nixon as a heavy-bearded habitué of the sewers. But once Nixon was elected president in 1968, Herblock gave him a shave.

No one has given Clinton a clean shave. During his campaign he had to deal with a barrage of questions about his personal life and behavior. He carried an Arkansas sobriquet, "Slick Willie."

As a result, he came into office without having established the moral authority Americans traditionally give their presidents, says Suzanne Gornet, resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute and author of "Scandal: The Culture of Mistrust in American Politics."

"He belongs to the group of '60s kids that didn't want to go fight in Vietnam and that first used marijuana as a kind of cultural statement, and that was the antithesis of being grown up," she said.

"The public wonders 'not simply whether he has an OK character or whether he committed this or that sin, but whether he's a grown-up and can be trusted.'"

In addition, Republicans have found it useful to capitalize on personal questions because Clinton hasn't given them much political ground from which to attack him. He's stolen some of their issues. The economy is doing fine.

So Whitewater becomes a way to slow his progress. Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole threatens to bring the Senate to a halt until Whitewater hearings are called.

Moreover, press standards have changed. Tabloid television helps set the pace. Stories from fringe publications get picked up by the mainstream press.

Newsweek this week analyzes Clinton's "recklessness" under a big headline: "The Politics of Promiscuity." British newspapers, in which sex is a daily staple, have paid enormous attention to allegations about Clinton's sex life. "Fornicate" is one paper's headline term for it.

The Washington press corps is larger, too: News organizations have the resources to put half a dozen reporters in Little Rock, Ark., for months. That kind of effort is bound to lead to stories. Lewis Gould, a presidential historian at the University of Texas, says Clinton's election with less than a majority in a three-man race robbed him of "a sense of legitimacy."

"Republicans have a sense that Clinton doesn't deserve to be where he is," Gould says.

But Frank Fahrenkopf, who was GOP national chairman in the Reagan years, disputes the view that Clinton is unusually vulnerable. Fahrenkopf sees Clinton as more Teflon than Velcro.

"He has this remarkable ability to be able to respond to just about anything without ever admitting that he made a mistake or did anything wrong," Fahrenkopf says. "He bounces like a cue ball from one cushion to another."

And a moderate Republican, Rep. Sherwood Boehlert from New York state, thinks Clinton is sheltered by his personality.

"People generally like Bill Clinton," he says. "Real people identify with him more than they did with George Bush, for example. He's proven he's very human."

Still, the line by which presidents are judged seems to have shifted. Clinton is held to standards that did not apply to other presidents.

Lyndon B. Johnson's first election to the Senate was shaky. He won a runoff by 87 votes, and some Texans still swear it was a rigged election. But it wasn't held against him when he became president.

And, more analogous to the Whitewater questions, a mass of evidence suggests Johnson used undue influence to turn an Austin, Texas, radio station into a source of millions. But LBJ escaped the scrutiny that now haunts the Clintons. No one has yet to see LBJ's income tax returns.

States earn money for road safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of dollars in federal highway construction money is being switched to highway safety programs in states that haven't adopted both seat belt and motorcycle helmet laws.

The Transportation Department said Tuesday that $54 million in 1995 funds for 28 states will be affected by the decision.

Under the law, 1.5 percent of federal highway funds are switched from construction to safety programs in states that failed to adopt both seat belt and helmet laws by last Oct. 1.

As of that date, 25 states did not require motorcycle riders to wear helmets and seven states did not have acceptable seat belt requirements. Because of overlap, 28 states are affected, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said.

States that have laws in effect by Oct. 1, 1994, can avoid a second round of transferred funds, and recently Kentucky, Massachusetts and Vermont have enacted such laws.

States affected by the 1995 funds transfer are:

Alaska, $2,865,229; Arizona, $2,100,246; Colorado, $1,930,348; Connecticut, $2,461,515; Delaware, $746,747; Hawaii, $1,326,003; Idaho, $1,266,453; Illinois, $6,222,136; Indiana, $2,794,077; Iowa, $2,047,611; Kansas, $1,722,810; Kentucky, $2,174,129; Maine, $827,817; Massachusetts, $1,797,953; Minnesota, $2,164,265; Montana, $1,578,887; New Hampshire, $855,500; New Mexico, $1,942,827; North Dakota, $1,176,221; Ohio, $4,650,801; Oklahoma, $2,099,468; Rhode Island, $666,827; South Carolina, $1,902,502; South Dakota, $1,300,464; Utah, $1,133,268; Vermont, $665,976; Wisconsin, $2,398,679; and Wyoming, $1,071,546.

JFK documents, photos shed little light on slaying

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Gruesome photos of the interior of President Kennedy's limousine were released Tuesday by the National Archives, but nearly 50,000 documents also made public shed little additional light on the assassination.

The records were among 224 boxes of records, containing at least 50,000 new documents, released under a 1992 law that requires federal agencies to release all records related to their investigations of Kennedy's murder and

Oswald's killing. "What is here today will not cause significant change in what people think — either for people who think there was a conspiracy or people who think there wasn't," said Steve Tilly, the JFK liaison at the National Archives. "What we have here today is a lot of detail."

At least 100,000 CIA documents and more than 100 boxes of FBI material remain under seal, however, and are being reviewed by officials at those agencies before their release.

Illinois high court denies execution stay

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois Supreme Court Tuesday denied a motion to block the execution of serial killer John Wayne Gacy scheduled for a week from today.

Gacy, 52, still has two other lawsuits pending, that he hopes will delay or block the execution for the sex killings of 33 young men and boys two decades ago.

He originally was scheduled to die on June 2, 1980, but appeals have kept him alive on death row at Menard Correctional Center in Chester.

Gacy, a former building contractor who worked as a clown at children's parties, was convicted in 1980 of more than 30 murders than anyone in U.S. history up to that time. That record was surpassed seven years later by Donald Harvey, an Ohio nurse's aide now serving a life sentence for 37 slayings.

Gacy was accused of luring his victims to his home for sex, then strangling them. Twenty-seven bodies were found in the crawl space under his house. Others were found under the concrete floor of his garage and in rivers nearby.

In today's ruling, the Supreme Court issued a three-sentence order denying Gacy's motions to either postpone or overturn the execution order.

Change would benefit Cassia County courthouse

By Cassia County's standards, the rest of Idaho has about as much political stability as the Italian government.

Ex-County Clerk Frank Kearns, who won the first of his 10 elections in 1954, was the longest-serving elected county official in Idaho until his recent retirement. Commissioner Weldon Beck, who is seeking a 13th term, was first elected 36 years ago; he's Idaho's longest-serving county commissioner.

There are some real advantages to that kind of longevity, the most important being that Cassia County is run by people who have a commitment to good government. If that weren't the case, there would obviously have been more turnover.

But stability among elected officials can breed complacency, too.

Beck has rarely been challenged in the GOP primary — and for practical purposes, that's where elections are decided in Cassia County. But he has competition this year, in farmer Paul Christensen and wholesale gasoline distributor Dale Smith.

We think it's time for voters to consider the alternatives.

If he's re-elected, Beck will be 85 when his term expires in 1996. But age in itself shouldn't decide an election. The real issue is how well Cassia County residents are served by a commission that hasn't had a change in personnel since Michael Jordan was a college sophomore.

Recent indications are that they're not being served as well as they used to be.

The pending lawsuit against the county over financing of the new Cassia County hospital is perhaps the best example. Beck, as the county's representative on the hospital's advisory board, is the point man.

Rupert attorney Don Chisholm and real estate developer Truman Bradley allege that the county and Intermountain Health Care Hospitals Inc., which runs Cassia Memorial Hospital, broke the law in the process of building a new hospital and that the commissioners kept the public from finding out about it.

The county denies the charges. Beck told The Times-News in March that the deal didn't need public scrutiny, because the public wouldn't have understood why.

The county needed the money to subsidize the hospital.

That's a troubling attitude for someone running millions of dollars worth of the people's business.

If the taxpayers needn't be bothered by the details of building a new hospital, what else that's going on in the courthouse isn't the taxpayers' business?

But then again, when there's no one looking over your shoulder, the public's business becomes a franchise, not a trust.

We think either Christensen or Smith could change that, but Christensen gets our nod. He has served for seven years on the county's Law Enforcement Advisory Committee and was a member of the citizens' planning and zoning committee for two years.

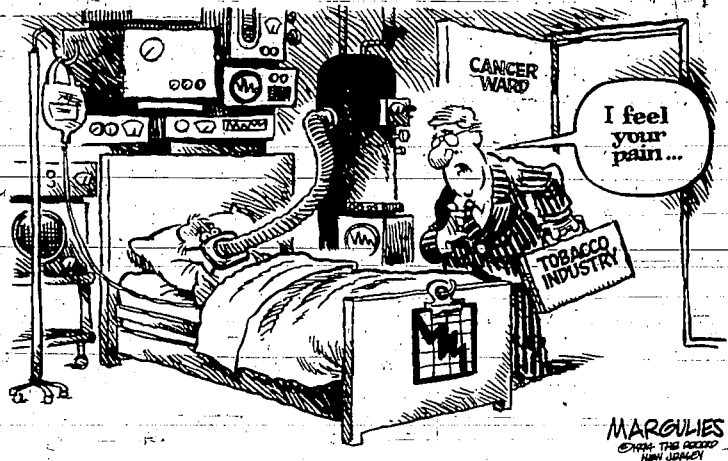

He believes the commissioners should do business at night when more people could attend the meetings, and he favors citizens' advisory committees to get the public more involved in its own business.

If Christensen gets the Republican nomination on May 24, the vote will mark a sea change in Cassia County politics.

And despite everything Weldon Beck has done for the county over the years, change is overdue.

Primary election

Cassia County Commissioner Weldon Beck is facing two challengers in the May 24 Republican primary: Paul Christensen and Dale Smith.

Civil Air Patrol crime answer

"Twin Falls crime surge" was the headline in the April 24 issue of The Times-News. It appears that youth crime was part of the surge. No doubt the answer is more complex than we would like to admit, but the Civil Air Patrol can help in the battle. I have been part of the Civil Air Patrol since 1960, and I have yet to learn of a cadet, whose age range from junior high through high school and who has stayed with the CAP program, to follow the juvenile crime route.

The CAP cadet program is patterned after the various service academies. That is, it is operated under cadet leadership (peers) and, of course, seniors (adults) are in charge overall.

It is a program that involves discipline (much needed today). CAP is an auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force. Scholarships are available, as is the opportunity to participate in search and rescue operations to find lost people or look for downed aircraft. Then there is the moral leadership program which is led by a chaplain or visiting clergy men or women. Moral and ethical principles are taught. In many cases, this is the only moral and ethical training these youth get because some do not attend a church of any denomination.

This is the reason for me to say that CAP is part of the solution. The whole cadet program is geared to assist youth in making a life that will make a contribution to society rather than having society paying for juvenile problems.

CAP is a good, youth-oriented program which we are looking into. Parents, help your son or daughter to become a better person. Look into the Civil Air Patrol. It is a program that can help your teen to become an asset to himself and to society.

CAP meets each Monday in a building at the Twin Falls Airport. Take the short drive out there some Monday night and see for yourself what CAP is all about. CAP can be part of the solution to the rising crime surge in Twin Falls.

Teacher suggests education at home

We, as educators, have some suggestions that we would like to share with all parents. Indicators show drug and alcohol abuse among students has increased in the last few years. Every year, students start experimenting with drugs and alcohol at younger ages. Programs have been implemented throughout the district to discuss the dangers of use/abuse and the need for responsible behavior. As teachers, we are with them for seven hours a day, and we hear and observe a lot! However, we cannot leave school with them at night to make sure they stay away from the "dangers."

We know that most of you trust your children. Be cautioned, however, you may not be able to trust all of their friends. Keep that in mind when they are going out at night. When a child asks to stay overnight at a friend's house, contact the other parents or guardians. We assume responsible parents will be grateful for your call. If they are not, maybe your child should not be staying at their house. Remember, everyone has different rules and different standards. Some children do not have curfews or have very lenient ones. Also, some parents believe it is OK to drink in their own homes as long as the children do not go anywhere. (It is against the law for anyone under 21 to consume alcohol in Idaho anywhere.)

If you need to leave town or even go out for an evening, make sure someone is supervising your home, as well as your children. Many parties are taking place while parents are out for dinner or especially when they are away for the weekend. You might be able to trust your children, but you may not be able to trust their peers or the inevitable "party crashers." Be aware of the alcohol you have in your home.

It is important to talk to your children about drugs, alcohol and other adult matters. They hear about these away from home, but they need to discuss these topics with you. We are in the process of putting together a parent library addressing these concerns and, upon request, we will share with interested parents.

Remember, parents, you are ultimately responsible for your children. We want you to know your children mean a lot to us. We want the best for them and everyone else involved. If you would like to contact us, please do so at 733-2155 and leave a message.

Homosexual bias going on

It seems to me that there is some bias going on. I've seen it on this opinion page. Lately, it has been in critical letters concerning not only the work and beliefs of but also the persons of Kelly Walton (Idaho Citizens Alliance) and Donald Wildmon (American Family Association). These letters have shown none of the love and tolerance so claimed by the liberal authors (Molly bins is one example). As intelligent people, we should refuse "spoon feeding" and see more than what is being claimed, watch for actions rather than words and take the time to find out what is true.

The topic at hand concerns homosexuality. Now smoking is your choice, but there is disease to consider as a consequence. Each package tells you: I am sexually active. It is your choice, but it also has consequences of disease. One percent of U.S. males consider themselves exclusively homosexual (Alan Guttmacher Institute, Research Division of Planned Parenthood). This 1 percent of our population accounts for the high majority of AIDS cases (Division of Health, Office of Epidemiological Services, Statehouse, Boise, phone 334-5939), half of the U.S. cases of syphilis (K. L. Lishman, "AIDS and Syphilis," The Atlantic Monthly, January 1988, p. 20), and half of the U.S. cases of gonorrhea of the throat and intestinal infections (E. Rowe, Homosexual Politics, CLA, 1984, p. 17).

It is not an opinion but a medical fact that homosexuality is not a healthy, harmless lifestyle. The Idaho Citizens Alliance and American Family Association are saying that it should not be promoted as though it were. This is what all the name-calling and slander from "compassionate and empathetic" liberals is all about.

Support voiced for Grindstaff

I am writing in support of Gary Grindstaff for Twin Falls County commissioner. Gary has the leadership credentials that the people of Twin Falls County need to lead them into the 21st century. Twin Falls and other counties in the Magic Valley are at a crossroads on many far-reaching issues dealing with water, land use and the continued viability of agriculture. It's going to take people with the talents of Gary Grindstaff to make tough decisions and, most importantly, make the right decisions.

I know Gary when he was a leader in his local soil conservation district and when he was president of the Idaho Association of Soil Conservation Districts. He proved himself to be not only a leader but, in many ways, a visionary. He saw what was needed to ensure the continued viability of agriculture and put his money and time where his mouth was and worked toward the betterment of his agricultural community.

Gary also served with me on the Middle Snake River Study Group. The group was formed to discover the reasons for declining water quality in the Middle Snake and to create a regional plan to deal with those problems. Gary brought a wealth of information to that group and was instrumental in the development of the plan. Gary proved to me, while serving on the study group, that he is a man of principle. He made the right decisions, not the politically expedient one. He never fell into the trap of listening to a few vocal people and thinking that they represented the desires of the many. Gary never jumped to conclusions but withheld his opinion until he had all the facts.

In short, Gary Grindstaff has proven himself through his work for the soil conservation district, the fair board and the Middle Snake River Study Group. Twin Falls County deserves a map of his quality to be one of its next county commissioners.

Achieving students recognized

How fortunate we are to have high-achieving students — those that go beyond the call of duty to be leaders.

Special recognition needs to be presented to the Robert Stuart Junior High students for participating in the Future Homemakers of America State Leadership Convention in April.

Rachel Bauer, an eighth-grader, was elected to the state office of junior high representative. Annie Christensen, a ninth-grader, earned a gold award for her illustrated talk entitled "Teen-age Entrepreneurism." Niki Graham received a gold award for her presentation of the FHA creed in sign language.

We need to emphasize the positive actions of our students more often. Let these students' accomplishments fill the headlines of our newspapers!

Skills for life learned in FHA/Home Economics will better prepare our students for their future. With the family as home economics' main focus, we look forward to The International Year of the Family being celebrated this year throughout the world.

Grieving for Richard Nixon

For the past week, we have seen a great expression of loss to this nation of former President Nixon who, since he was elected to the presidency of this great nation, has been accused of everything the opposing political party, the news media and any headline seeker could find to say or print that would be derogatory to his name or reputation.

Now that the nation, media and politicians have had a violent attack of shame, guilt and regret for past actions, they all cannot find ways and means to express honor and glory to this man who, while living, struggled to redeem some of the past possible mistakes that we all make at some time in our lives and wish we had done better. It is too bad that he is not here to hear some of the approval expressed at his services.

Our sympathy and best wishes go to his family that they may have a knowledge of the good this man leaves behind him and overlook the past actions of those who made his last years of mortal life so rough to endure. But he came through it all with flying colors.

Vote for Maxine Bell

To the people of Jerome County:

I would like to draw your attention to the fact that you will see candidates for the Legislature all being from Minidoka County, except for Maxine Bell. I believe that the people of Jerome County should have a representative in the state Legislature, and the only way that will happen is if you get out and vote in the primary election on May 24.

Maxine is only one of two on the Appropriations Committee from the Magic Valley, and that's where the money is spent. We need someone looking after us.

Please vote for Maxine Bell.

Columnist shouldn't judge Nixon

I haven't written for some time, but I can't pass this one up. It's the article written by George F. Will on April 28.

What right does Mr. Will have to judge President Richard M. Nixon that he has lost his soul unless God has that right. It's in very poor taste for Mr. Will to even write such an article.

Yes, Mr. Nixon made his mistakes. I'm sure he has had lots of talks with God before the end. So he was free — free indeed. I feel more sorry for you, Mr. Will, than I do for Nixon.

Ballot counting delays takeover

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Nelson Mandela's African National Congress must wait three extra days to take power because ballot counting is taking so long.

Even though the winner has claimed victory and the losers have conceded, almost half the votes remained to be counted in South Africa's first all-race election.

The 400-member National Assembly, the main chamber of the new Parliament, will now meet in Cape Town Monday rather than Friday. Its first, and somewhat urgent, task is the formal election of Mandela as South Africa's first black president.

His inauguration is planned for the next day, May 10, in Pretoria.

Mandela and the man he will soon replace, F.W. de Klerk, met to discuss who will be in the Cabinet their parties will dominate. De Klerk has said he wants the Cabinet chosen and sworn in the same day as the president. But that is not required, and is unlikely.

Provincial legislatures, which name the members of the new Senate, will not meet until Saturday, instead of Thursday.

The date changes were announced Tuesday by the Transitional Executive Council, which has been overseeing the governing of the country.

"The only date that seems cast in stone is the inauguration on Tuesday (May 10), because of the invited guests," said Dries van Heerden, spokesman for the council.

The tentative guest list includes the presidents of Israel and China, perhaps Yasser Arafat, Hillary Rodham Clinton and Britain's Prince Philip — people who can't be asked to hang around an extra day if things aren't ready yet.

By Tuesday evening, with 53 percent of the estimated 22.7 million votes counted, the ANC had 62.5 percent to the National Party's 22.1 percent.

Students from the University of Witwatersrand in Johannesburg march to celebrate Nelson Mandela's election Tuesday.

Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Zulu-based Inkatha Freedom Party had 8.3 percent. The Freedom Front, which demands a separate white homeland, had 2.7 percent.

Other small parties with enough votes for a few Parliament seats were the white, liberal Democratic Party, the black nationalist Pan-Africanist Congress and the new African Christian Democratic Party.

"Whether Mandela gets 60 percent or 65 percent, it won't make a difference," in selecting the president or in seating a Parliament, explained van Heerden.

If the electoral commission got held up over the last few thousand votes from rural areas, or a disputed tally, it could name provisional National Assembly members based on the results available, then change a few names later if necessary, he said.

However, under the constitution, Monday is the deadline for the electoral commission to confirm the election as "free and fair."

The exact proportion of votes for each party in the National Assembly is important only when it comes to assigning Cabinet jobs, van Heerden said. The government of national unity worked out between Mandela, de Klerk and other leaders entitles any party with 5 percent of the vote to one of about 25 Cabinet positions.

So far, Mandela's African National Congress, de Klerk's National Party, and the Inkatha Freedom Party have high enough percentages to claim Cabinet posts. But Mandela had said that in the interest of national peace, he would invite into the government representatives of less successful parties, such as the Freedom Front and the Pan-Africanist Congress.

Problems of past elections in South Africa

The Associated Press

Organizers of South Africa's first multiracial election faced enormous political and logistical problems, as well as the challenge to meet the "free and fair" standard set by international observers.

The process was beset with difficulties, and the Independent Election Commission is widely criticized. However, election monitors have generally concluded that the election allowed South Africans to make their political wishes known.

Problems:

- Political disputes. Planning took second place to creating the most "inclusive" election possible. A major political party, the Inkatha Freedom Party, joined the campaign a week before the vote, and polling stations were added in areas that political violence had previously made off-limits.

- Poor organization. Supplies had not reached all the polls for the start of voting.

- Inaccurate census. There may have been millions more eligible voters than records indicated.

- Bias. Several political parties have charged bias on the part of election workers.

- Illegal voters. Voter IDs allegedly were given out too hastily, particularly to underage applicants.

- Private polls. Political operatives allegedly set up their own polling stations.

- Missing ballot papers. Five election workers are under investigation for hiding unused ballots.

- Slow vote count. Vote counting started Saturday morning and was still going Tuesday night.

Syria gives Israel detailed peace terms

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Syria is offering Israel an unprecedented proposal as the two old foes pursue a land-for-peace swap that will bring Secretary of State Warren Christopher back to shuttle between them in mid-May.

Israel has already let it be known that for the right offer — and airtight security on the border — it would be willing to relinquish the Golan Heights and uproot all or most of the 13,000 Jews who have developed the enclave with agriculture and light industry.

That prospect is touching off anxiety and demonstrations in Israel, for occupation of the buffer in 1967 put an end to cross-border shelling of northern villages. Demonstrations against the government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin remind him of his campaign promise not to "go down" from the Golan Heights.

The motorcade that took Christopher and his aides from Jerusalem to Lod to fly to Cairo was diverted to a secondary road Tuesday to avoid one such demonstration.

As he flew here to assist in mopping up remaining details for an Israeli-PLO accord, Christopher told reporters: "I don't want to in any way mislead you into thinking that the parties are close together. There is a long road to travel."

But he said "there is a seriousness about the exploration I have not seen before."

Every since Israel and the Arabs opened peace talks in October 1991, Israel has complained Syria was demanding recovery of the Golan Heights, which it lost in the 1967 Six-Day war, without specifying the kind of peace terms it was offering in exchange.

But now, Christopher said, Syria through him had offered a more-detailed peace plan.

"There's still room for additional details," he said, "but it's a more comprehensive proposal than we've had before."

The last time a U.S. secretary of state attempted to reconcile Israel and Syria it took Henry A. Kissinger 31 days in 1974.

British aid group reports more 'genocide'

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Heavy shelling battered Rwanda's capital in a surge of fighting between Tutsi rebels and Hutu-led government troops Tuesday, and new reports on ethnic butchery in the countryside said militiamen killed 34 orphans and Red Cross workers.

A British-based aid group, Oxfam, pleaded with the United Nations to send troops back into Rwanda to protect civilians from the slaughter that has raged unchecked for nearly a month.

At least 100,000 Rwandans have been killed since Rwanda's president, a member of the majority Hutu ethnic group, died in a mysterious plane crash April 6 in the capital, Kigali. U.N. Secretary Boutros Boutros-Ghali has said the death toll may approach 200,000 out of a population of 8.5 million.

But Oxfam's director, David Bryer, said reports from his colleagues working with Rwandan refugees who have flooded into neighboring countries suggest that up to 500,000 people may have been slain, most of them minority Tutsis.

"If this is confirmed, it will represent genocide on a horrific scale, with a level of killing the world has not seen since Cambodia in the 1970s," Bryer said in a letter to British Prime Minister John Major urging international intervention.

In a new example of the sav-agery, the International Red Cross reported Tuesday that 21 orphans were slain by militiamen in Butare on Sunday, along with 13 Rwandan Red Cross workers who tried to protect them.

The Belgian Red Cross quoted one of its officials in Butare, Pascal Dufour, as saying the children — ages 3 to 12 — were "selected on an ethnic basis" from a group of 500 orphans evacuated last month from Kigali, about 50 miles to the north.

American author of popular children's books dies at age 74

GSTAAD, Switzerland (AP) — Richard McClure Scarry, whimsical American author and illustrator of popular children's books, died of a heart attack, his wife said Tuesday. He was 74.

Scarry's books have sold more than 100 million copies worldwide and have been translated into as many as 30 languages, said Patricia Murphy Scarry, his wife for more than 40 years.

"The Lowly Worm was his very favorite character for all the children," she said.

Many youngsters have delighted in finding Lowly — the Tyrolean-hatted earthworm — pecking from corners of Scarry's pictures. His books were filled with gentle-looking puppies, kittens, rabbits, pigs and other creatures, sometimes driving bizarre vehicles.

Twin Falls woman faces stabbing charge

TWIN FALLS — A 21-year-old Twin Falls woman was arraigned on a charge of aggravated battery Tuesday, after a man was stabbed when the woman threatened suicide.

Hyacinth Rasmussen, 151 Second Ave. E., pleaded not guilty.

According to a Twin Falls police report and a police officer's affidavit in 5th District Court, Rasmussen had threatened suicide late Monday.

When 18-year-old Theodore Clifton tried to take away a kitchen knife, he was stabbed three times in the hand and once in the left leg, the affidavit states. Clifton lives near Rasmussen, and twice tried to take away the knife, the affidavit and police report state.

Rasmussen's roommate, Peggy May Duffy, told police Rasmussen had threatened suicide before, according to a statement in the police report.

In a statement to police, Rasmussen wrote that Clifton's stabbing was an accident.

"I didn't mean to hurt him. I am so sorry," she wrote.

Jerome boy hit by pickup truck in serious condition

JEROME — An 8-year-old Jerome boy remains in serious condition after being hit by a pickup truck.

Joe Edgario Agueda, 31, driver of the pickup, was cited for speeding and passing a vehicle at a crosswalk.

The boy was flown to St. Alphonsus Medical Center in Boise Monday evening with head injuries. His name was not released by the Jerome Police Department.

A van had stopped in the inside lane at the crosswalk at North Lincoln and 4th Street and the pickup driven by Agueda slowed but did not stop.

In the police report, Agueda stated he "hit the brakes," the boy slowed as if to stop and he then started running again. Police records estimate the pickup was traveling at 30.5 mph in a 20 mph zone.

County commissioners consider ordinance for fair

TWIN FALLS — Parking in fire lanes or pandering goods without a permit may be more difficult to accomplish at this summer's county fair.

The county commissioners will consider an ordinance this morning that would give added authority for the Twin Falls County Fair Board to tow illegally parked cars and to keep unwanted solicitors away from the fairgrounds, according to Fair Manager Cindy Demoney.

The ordinance "gives some teeth" to the existing regulations on parking and pandering, Demoney said Tuesday.

"We have rules against selling things on the fairgrounds unless you have a booth," she said.

County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said the county encountered some problems during the 1993 fair with people selling goods on the fairgrounds property without a permit.

County Sheriff Wayne Tousley, Lt. Steve Nutting and Demoney drew up the proposed ordinance, Demoney said.

The commissioners will decide whether to adopt the fairgrounds resolution at 10 a.m. in their office at the county courthouse.

Rotary Club looking for seminar delegates

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Rotary Club is looking for people between the ages of 17 and 24 who have leadership qualities and are interested in attending the Rotary Youth Leadership Awards Seminar.

The seminar will run from Aug. 7 to 10 in Sun Valley.

The deadline for applying for the seminar is May 31 and is handled by Richard Cook at 734-6549.

County Democrats sponsor candidate party Saturday

TWIN FALLS — County Democrats are sponsoring a "meet the candidates" party and barbecue Saturday.

The public will have a chance to meet Democratic candidates for state and county offices at the event, to be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday at City Park.

Food and beverages will be served, while entertainment will be provided by Brett Reid. Door prizes also will be given out at the event.

The cost will be $5 for adults, $2 for children and $15 for families. Proceeds will benefit the Twin Falls County Democrats. For information, call 733-5082.

Grazing order decision delayed

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A controversial order for a 15 percent reduction in livestock grazing on public land southwest of Oakley has been put on hold by the Sawtooth National Forest supervisor.

The decision was roundly criticized by one former Forest Service employee — and applauded by one of the affected ranchers. "I feel good about it," said permittee Robert Whiteley of Burley. "It was the right decision because there is no resource concern."

source concern."

"It's business as usual for the cattlemen," said Jim Prunty, a 20-year Sawtooth Forest employee who retired in 1987. "The Forest Service is going along with the same policy of 'What the cattle ranchers want, the cattle ranchers get.'"

Supervisor Jack Bills' announced a stay Tuesday on a reduction that would have affected five permittees who graze cattle in the Goose Creek drainage. The grazers will be allowed to release their cows on public land on the traditional May 11 "turn-on" date.

Bills will decide in the next few weeks if Oman's order will be upheld, or struck down. The grazers can appeal Bills' decision to the regional forester in Ogdén, Utah.

If upheld, the four-year reduction will force the grazers to wait two weeks after the usual turn-on date, and require them to remove the cows two weeks early. It will not reduce the number of cattle, which remains fixed at 1,800.

The permittees, known as the Wild Rose Grazing Association, had appealed the reduction ordered by Twin Falls District Ranger Don Oman. For years, the Wild Rose grazers and Oman have disagreed sharply over land management practices — and one permittee wound up on the front page of the New York Times when he offered to slit Oman's throat.

Oman ordered the reduction on grounds that the grazers had not maintained stock water troughs and allowed their cattle to linger in areas that were closed. Oman said the abuses had been going on for years, but his order was based solely on last year's infractions.

Whiteley insisted that he and other Wild Please see GRAZING/B2

Murtaugh students compute from project

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — Anyone who has tried to decipher an 11-year-old's handwriting can appreciate the benefit of computers in the classroom.

For Murtaugh fifth-grade teacher Sandy Seever, the school district's $12,000 investment in lap-top computers for the elementary school is paying dividends.

Her students are learning vital typing and computer skills that will help them as they move on to middle school, high school and college or work.

The school computers also allow students to practice and polish their writing skills.

"They can do more writing, and they seem to like it better," Seever said. "We hardly ever get a chance to have them write as much as we would like."

The phone-book sized terminals also allow Hispanic students not proficient in English to do some assignments in Spanish and have them translated, Seever said.

The kids seem to love the educational toys. They type lessons, book reports, journals and other writing projects. Seever's 19 students were eagerly typing a practice lesson Tuesday afternoon.

Typing on the computers is "pretty fun," 11-year-old Cassie Mason said. Cassie likes to write stories about "almost anything" and said her typing has gotten faster since the computers appeared in the classroom.

"After a while, it gets easier," said Devin Poulton, 11; he likes to write about horses.

Seever and elementary school Principal Carrie Brooks first saw the computers during an in-service training session in Klamath Falls, Ore., last summer. They convinced the school board to buy Andrea Moyes and her fifth-grade classmates work on individual writing assignments on the lap-top computers the Murtaugh Elementary School obtained.

30 for the elementary and 30 more for the middle school.

Some of the money for the elementary computers came from a state grant. The district spent an additional $10,000 for the middle school terminals, Superintendent Michael Chesley said.

The lap-top computer setup is one of only two in the state; the other is in Coeur d'Alene.

Chesley said the program is just part of Murtaugh's commitment to computers. The high school has a new lab of IBM computers, as well as a Macintosh lab.

"One of our goals is to have all of our kids computer literate by the time they graduate," he said.

Candidate beats path to GOP neighborhood

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — In an age of billboards and sound bites, one Idaho politician is counting votes the old-fashioned way.

GOP gubernatorial candidate Phil Batt was in Twin Falls Tuesday, knocking on doors in the city's most Republican precincts as part of a statewide get-out-the-vote blitz.

Armed with computer-generated lists, Batt and other GOP hopefuls greet residents by name, admire their well-manicured lawns, and ask for their votes. Tuesday's work included a picnic in Cascade Park with other GOP candidates.

Some lucky voters get a copy of "Phil & Jacques Batt's Favorite Idaho Onion Recipes," including "Phil's favorite: Fire and Ice Salad." Everybody gets a flier that labels Batt "a problem-solver whose integrity, honesty, and plain speaking style have earned respect and trust."

Batt's polls show him leading 3-to-1, but "there's an awful lot of undecided voters," he concedes. Batt worries aloud that many — if not most — Idahoans will stay home on election day.

"We've got to get out there and meet the people," says the Wilder onion farmer as he hurries home to house.

At one house near Cascade Park, a grade school youngster, clad in a Jurassic Park T-shirt, answers the candidate's knock. "Hi, I'm a politician. Can I open to your opinion or dad?" Batt asks.

"Mom is home and she's impressed. She takes the sign."

Over on Bitterroot, one voter hesitates when Batt seeks his support. "Now wait a minute, are you a Republican?" the skeptic asks, looking gruff. After learning that the politician is conservative and pro-life, his gruff demeanor softens. "You're looking better all the time," he tells Batt, smiling broadly.

When Batt ran for governor in 1982, he grabbed the GOP nomination only to lose in November. This time, Batt says things are different.

"I was a greenhorn at the time. I think I do a better job of presenting myself and my platform to the people," he says.

Smiling, Batt presses on, eagerly greeting housewives and high school students, landscapers and lawn mowers. He encounters some cantankerous canines in the precinct, but escapes unscathed. "There's lots of dogs, but none of 'em have got at me yet," he notes with a grin.

Otter's chances for primary win not guaranteed

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — In 1990, Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter looked unbeatable. The Caldwell conservative, unopposed in the general election, was touted by many as the heir apparent to Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Four years later, if he wins the Republican primary on May 24, Otter faces a tough challenge in Carey Democrat state Sen. John Peavey. And Otter's victory is far from certain: two former GOP legislators are vying with Otter for their party's nomination.

Boise surgeon Dean Sorenson is mounting a stiff challenge to Otter. Also eager to replace Otter, Coeur d'Alene contractor Dean Haagenen.

Both want to topple Otter, the former Simplot executive who has held the office since 1987.

Twin Falls police officer ticketed for weekend accident

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Twin Falls police officer Ron Farnsworth was ticketed for running a red light Saturday after crashing his patrol car into a woman's car at an intersection.

Police Chief Paul Du Fresno said Tuesday his department is awaiting an accident report from the Idaho State Police. Farnsworth's supervisors will review the report, and Du Fresno will follow their recommendations on whether the accident merits action against Farnsworth.

"Any action would be taken only after we receive the report," Du Fresno said.

"Disciplinary action against Farnsworth—if any—probably will never be made public because 'personnel' issues are not public record in Idaho."

Farnsworth was driving south on Washington Street, responding to a call for assistance in a domestic dispute with weapons, when the Falls Avenue traffic signal turned red, said ISP Capt. Dave Neal. Reading from the accident report, Neal said Farnsworth's patrol car lights and signal were on as he reached the intersection.

Danielle M. Wallmer of Twin Falls was driving east on Falls and had pulled into the intersection with Washington on a green light, Neal said. Farnsworth said he slowed, and it appeared that other cars at the intersection were yielding to him, Neal said. Farnsworth sped up again, and that's when the accident happened, Neal said.

Farnsworth was cited for failing to obey a traffic signal, Neal said. Farnsworth estimated he was driving 35 to 40 mph when the collision occurred.

Neal was not sure if Wallmer was injured in the accident, but said the report listed "complaint of injury." Wallmer was not listed as a patient at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center on Tuesday, said a nursing supervisor.

Twin Falls doctors' group growing

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Drs. Paul Miles and Wayne Wright will try to recruit more local physicians for their proposed doctors' network today.

They will meet with physicians who deal with Magic Valley Regional Medical Center to discuss a proposed "managed-care" program with the hospital, which would eventually offer health coverage to local businesses.

A story in Tuesday's Times-News incorrectly explained who would run the program and the hospital.

Miles and Wright recently formed

Magic Valley Health Network, a for-profit "company" of local doctors who work with the hospital.

Miles and Wright have held other meetings with doctors and have verbal commitments to join the group from more than 40 local physicians.

The network is trying to work with the hospital board to form a non-profit "physician-hospital organization." Management of the physician-hospital organization would be split between network-doctors and hospital board members, Miles said.

Working together, the physician-hospital organization would come up with a managed health care insurance package to offer to local employers within the next four months, he said.

On Monday, the hospital board voted 7-1 to consider forming the physician-hospital organization with the network at its next meeting in early June.

Board Chairman James Herrett said he likes the physician-hospital idea because it could offer a locally managed health insurance product to local businesses. He said other managed-care companies are coming into the Magic Valley to offer their own insurance products.

And the hospital board would continue to be appointed by the county commissioners, Herrett said.

4th governor's conference in Sun Valley covers recreation, tourism

The Times-News

SUN VALLEY—The Idaho Governor's Conference on Recreation and Tourism, beginning today in Sun Valley, will bring together diverse perspectives on the state's tourism and recreational resources.

The theme of the three-day event is "Sustaining Quality." The conference, now in its fourth year, is expected to attract more than 300 delegates.

Speakers include Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, Steve Jones, of Cascade Raft Company and Bill Wassmuth, executive director of Northwest Coalition Against Malicious Harassment.

The conference cost is $125. General registration begins 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. today at the Sun Valley Inn Promenade; 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Thursday; and 7 a.m. to 3 p.m., Friday.

Opening ceremonies begin at 8:30 a.m. today in the Linelight Room of the Sun Valley Lodge, led by Sun Valley Mayor JoAnn Levy.

Alliance's petition drive far off goal

The Associated Press

BOISE—The Idaho Citizens Alliance is nearly 20,000 signatures short of the number needed to get its proposed anti-gay rights initiative on the November ballot, but proponents are not giving up.

A survey of county clerks, offices statewide on Monday showed the group had gathered about 13,500 valid signatures of registered voters. More than 32,000 are required by July 8 to qualify for a place on the ballot.

"I'm cautiously optimistic," Alliance Chairman Kelly Walton said. "We're going to get it done. I'm going Wednesday on a two-week statewide trip. We're going to be doing three meetings a day. I expect to raise some money and pass out about 30,000 petition sheets."

Opponents were hopeful, but not yet jubilant, about the results so far. "It just goes to show that Idaho is not the pushover state that they thought it was," said Brian Bergquist, co-chairman of the Don't Sign On Committee working against the initiative.

"If approved by voters, the initiative would prevent adoption of civil rights protections specifically for homosexuals. It also would prevent anyone from government bodies—including schools—from promoting or expressing approval of homosexuality."

Initiative supporters contend it would prevent homosexuals from receiving "special rights," but Attorney General Larry Eichelbaker and others have said the measure probably is unconstitutional.

Walton admitted he has downed his expectations for the initiative petition drive in the past year. He now says the Idaho Citizens Alliance will not meet the initial goal of 100,000 signatures. And with contributions of $10,508 from January through March, it likely will not raise the $400,000 he once estimated it would need.

2 Idaho Falls men want officials removed from ballot

The Associated Press

Two Idaho Falls men aren't getting much support from county and state election officials with their demand that four Bonneville County officials be taken off the 1994 ballot.

They also have asked national Republican officials to remove Idaho Falls attorney Blake Hall, GOP national committee member, from the ballot.

Kenneth Walton and Mike Aldana said Hall should be removed from his national job and the others taken off the ballot because "What we're willing to draw the line in terms of how much fraud we're willing to permit?"

County officials say Walton and Aldana are allied with the local GOP's conservative wing and are also interested in the 1994 primary.

"It's much ado about nothing," said Bonneville County Commissioner Lee Staker.

tary of State Pete Cenarrusa.

Walton also said Staker should be taken off the ballot because he signed a petition for Republican Kathy Stanger, who is challenging state Sen. Stan Hawens, R-Leon.

Walton also criticized Assessor Gary Paxman and Treasurer Lila Jordan, who along with Staker signed Edith Stanger's petition. Edith Stanger signed Kathy Stanger's petition.

Cenarrusa and County Clerk Ron Longmore said they weren't removing anybody.

"I'm not going to involve the integrity of this office in partisan political differences," Cenarrusa said. "With Stanger's is constitutionally and legally qualified to have her name placed on the ballot as are the other candidates such as Lila Jordan, Gary Paxman and Lee Staker."

Longmore said the law spells out who is qualified for county office. Staker, Jordan and Paxman meet the requirements.

"I don't see that it has merit as far as I'm concerned and I don't see how we could take any action on it," Longmore said.

As for firing Hall, that's a decision for the 1996 Idaho GOP convention.

Officials said although petitions obligate a person to "support" a candidate, that doesn't necessarily mean they have to vote for them.

Grazing

Rose grazers are good stewards of the land—and invited anyone who's interested to come have a look.

Bills said he stayed Oman's order because it would have caused economic hardship for the grazers. Further, the lands in question are in good shape and there is no immediate threat to the forest's well-being, Bills said.

What they said he and the other Wild Rose grazers stood to lose $100,000 if forced to feed cattle on their own land. In addition to the cost of feed, the grazers stood to lose money by not growing hay on their land.

Bills called his decision "neutral" and "not tilted one way or the other."

"This is part of a normal appeal," he said. "They wrote us a letter and requested that we put a stay on the decision."

No one other than the affected permittees had approached him on the issue, Bills added.

The stay on Oman's order was heavily weighed in the cattle ranchers' favor, Frantz said.

"The Forest Service has never had the fortitude to stand up to violators," he said, "and there's a long record of violations that don't seem to have any bearing on this."

Kenneth C. Richmond

TWIN FALLS—Kenneth Carl Richmond, 70, of Twin Falls, died Monday evening, May 2, 1994, at his home.

Kenneth was born Feb. 16, 1924, in Filer, to Floyd and Zolpha Richmond. He attended schools in Filer and Twin Falls and in 1941, enlisted into the Navy. He was stationed on the USS St. Louis in Pearl Harbor.

Kenneth continued in the military after the war, spending time in the Air Force. He returned to Twin Falls where he worked as a carpenter for Regal Homes, completing a number of homes near Kimberly.

Kenneth's hobby was cabinet making. He was also an avid fisherman, ATV rider and sportsman.

Kenneth was survived by his long-time companion, Jean Kenyon of Twin Falls; two daughters, Carla Sue Magnum of Oregon and Konya Lasso Stewart of Idaho; and two sons, Floyd D. Richmond of Washington and Raymond Richmond of California, and several grandchildren. He was preceded in death by a sister, Wilbur Klein.

A graveside service will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Military graveside rites by area veterans and auxiliary. Friends may call from 3 to 8 p.m. today at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Leo E. Jarolimek

PAUL—Leo E. Jarolimek, 74, of Paul, died Sunday, May 1, 1994, at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls. He was born July 22, 1919, near Dorchester, Neb., the son of Emanuel and Georgia Bors. He was married to Olga Bryd on June 9, 1942, and they resided on a farm near Crote, Neb., until moving to Filer in 1947, where he did custom farming. Later he and his brothers built special equipment and cleared sagebrush land which became his life's vocation. In 1958, the family moved to Paul and in 1970, they moved to Winnemucca, Nev., where they cleared land and farmed until his retirement in 1980. He enjoyed gardening and wood-working.

He leaves his wife, Olga Jarolimek of Paul; one daughter, Sandra and son-in-law Jim Stevens of Paul; two sons, Lacey and daughter-in-law, Sheila Jarolimek of Winnemucca, Nev.; and Daniel and daughter-in-law, Cathy Jarolimek of Rupert; 11 grandchildren; and one brother, Gilbert Jarolimek of Filer. He was preceded in death by his wife and two brothers, Edward and Robert.

Day after day we pleaded thus: Lord will you not release some of these people from us in peace?

And while we linger there, He swaggle sloops tonight and now.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Trinity Lutheran Church in Rupert, with Pastor L.G. Mlotzner officiating. Burial will follow at the Paul Cemetery. Friends may call from 3 to 8 p.m. today at the Hansen Mortuary in Rupert and from 10 to 11 a.m. on Thursday at the church.

For obituary rate information, call 733-0931, extension 278

The family suggests memorial contributions may be made to the Lutheran Church.

Donald L. O'Toole

JEROME—Donald LeRoy O'Toole, 61, of Jerome, died Monday, May 2, 1994, at his home, following an extended illness.

He was born July 27, 1932, in Weston, Kan., the son of Ed. Walton and Gladys Mosher O'Toole and was reared and educated in Jerome.

Donald married Jaralyn Somerset on April 6, 1958, in Jerome, and had been employed at Volvo as a cabinet maker for a number of years.

He enjoyed hunting and fishing. He was a member of the First Church of God and served in the Army during the Korean War.

Survivors include his wife, Jaralyn of Jerome; one son, Patrick of Jerome; three daughters, Donalyn Darling of Bond, Ore., and Shannon Banzinger and Cathleen Lancaster, both of Jerome; one brother, Kenneth of Jerome; one sister, Mary Lou Adkins, also of Jerome; and four grandchildren. He was preceded in death by parents and two sisters.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Thursday at the Hope-Rupert Funeral Chapel in Jerome, with the Rev. Elroy Wexler. Burial will follow at the Jerome Cemetery. Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. today and from 9 a.m. until noon on Thursday at the funeral chapel.

The family suggests donations to the First Church of God Building Fund, 131 E. Ave. "F", Jerome ID 83398.

Burley woman injured in accident

BURLEY — A Burley woman was injured Sunday when she lost control of her pickup. She was thrown from her vehicle when it overturned.

Jerilyn Rae Johnson, 19, was in stable condition at Cassia Memorial Hospital Monday.

According to an accident report, Johnson was driving north on 50 East Road between 300 South Road and 42nd Street. At about 9:23 p.m. her pickup hit a pothole and she lost control, she told police. Her pickup ran off the left shoulder of the road and overturned.

Surgeon to talk at Cassia hospital

BURLEY — Local surgeon Paul Dearing will speak about "Health and Exercise" at Cassia Memorial Hospital's monthly luncheon at noon May 12, Thursday.

Dearing is a general and vascular surgeon at Cassia Memorial Hospital. A 50 cent luncheon will be offered.

For more information call the hospital's general telephone number at 678-4444. Ask for the human resources department.

City Council approves irrigation bid

BURLEY — Burley City Council members approved a $101,590 bid to replace irrigation ditches at the new Cassia Memorial Hospital at 16th Street and Hilland Avenue.

Council members awarded the bid Monday night to the low much to two bidders, Hoffbuh Excavating Company Inc. of Burley. The second bidder, Walton Inc., of Heyburn, offered $103,208 for the work.

The contract is part of a two-year $160,000 road construction project, said Leon Heggie, Burley's public works director.

The project is funded jointly by Burley, Cassia, County and Cassia Memorial Hospital. The city pays about one third of the total cost, Burley city clerk Bud Bringer said.

Workers will replace the ditches with underground irrigation pipes and fill in the ditches with dirt.

In a separate project, workers will widen Hilland Avenue starting sometime in July and possibly end in August. Workers will start on 16th Street sometime next spring, Heggie said.

75-year-old woman arrested for shoplifting

BURLEY — A 75-year-old woman was arrested Monday for shoplifting from King's Discount and Department Store in Burley.

Doris Aline McKay, of Paul, is charged with petty theft. She posted a $150 bond out of Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center the same day.

According to an affidavit, McKay was leaving the store when the store alarm sounded at about 2:30 p.m. The store manager asked McKay if she was carrying any store items, she said no. Then she asked to use the bathroom.

A dog collar and a pair of earrings fell to the floor as she walked to the bathroom, the affidavit said. When police arrested her, they also found two packages of safety pins. The total value of the products was $7.80.

A store employee told McKay that she will be arrested for trespassing if she returns to the store.

Tourism forum unsuccessful

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

RUPERT — A public forum to get Mini-Cassia residents talking about tourism in rural areas drew only two people Tuesday morning.

But those two people — the owner of Pomerelle Ski Area and an outdoor recreation planner for the Bureau of Land Management's Burley District — had much to say about the tourist industry.

Magic Valley communities need to promote the area's geology and history with visitor centers, more signs and better roads, said Bill McNally, BLM Burley District outdoor recreation planner.

"I think there needs to be development to showcase what we have," McNally said.

But many people are turned off by the demands of visitors, said Woody Anderson, owner of Pomerelle Ski Area. Residents need to try to preserve the small town atmosphere of their communities, he said.

"I think people can become jaundiced, especially in the tourist industry," Anderson said.

The Rupert meeting was one of three in the Magic Valley. The Department of Commerce officials and University of Idaho researchers Monday and Tuesday. The state is hoping to boost tourism in rural areas.

The Magic Valley was selected by the state to develop a strategy for tapping into the tourist market on a regional level. Armed with citizens' opinions, state commerce officials will give a presentation of their findings May 24 in Twin Falls at the Canyon Springs Inn. At the May 24 meeting, state and local officials decide exactly what parts of the region to promote.

Tourism can provide an economic boost in areas heavily dependent on agriculture, especially during an economic slump, said Peter Fisher, commerce department economic development specialist.

Mini-Cassia residents, like others in the Magic Valley, need to decide if they want to promote tourism, and if they do, they should decide how much the state already identified several sites in the Mini-Cassia area, a researcher for the University of Idaho's department of resource recreation and tourism.

For instance, the roads to some geological areas aren't good enough roads to handle increased traffic. Promoting the area might do more harm than good, McGoughlin said.

According to the state's research over the past year, the public has already identified several sites in the Mini-Cassia area as possible hot spots for tourism — Oregon Trail near Milner Dam, the City of Rocks National Reserve and the town of Oakley.

Grants and loans to promote tourism are available from a variety of federal and state agencies, said Greg V. Seibert, Gem Community Coordinator for the commerce department.

Andrus says Clinton staff poorly informed on Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus looked out the window of his Statehouse office Tuesday and told group of visiting foreign journalists to take a look at the clear, blue sky.

Some places of the world, you can't even see the sky, he said. That healthy environment is a major reason why people like to live in Idaho.

But Andrus said, although President Clinton has "good environmental credentials," some members of his White House staff do not.

Particularly the younger members of the staff, "most of whom have never been west of the Mississippi River. The stuff (they're proposing) is too far out," the governor said.

"The biggest problem they have is trying to go too far, too fast," Andrus said.

Journalists from Germany, Japan and Switzerland visited with the governor on Tuesday as part of a tour arranged by the U.S. Information Agency for foreign journalists who reside in this country.

Andrus

The five-day trip included a visit to the Snake River and the Birds of Prey Natural Area south of Boise.

The journalists held meetings with Idaho's major natural resource industries, such as timber and mining, and conservation-environmental groups such as the Idaho Conservation League, the Nature Conservancy, Idaho Rivers United and the Wilderness Society.

After the Andrus interview, the four journalists started on a six-hour bus trip to Salmon, in Idaho's northern mountain area. The rest of the week they planned trips to gold mines and looks at local ranching and livestock operations.

Andrus said they wouldn't get much out of visits with administration bureaucrats in Washington.

"The rarified atmosphere inside the Beltway (around Washington) is not indicative of the rest of America," he said.

Andrus said he's an outdoorsman, likes to hunt and fish a lot, and drives his own pickup truck to work. "I don't let my staff drive it — they might scratch it," he said.

He said he gets along well with President Bill Clinton, but said the president has fallen into the same pattern as most of his predecessors.

He's elected out domestic issues but once in office, turns to world affairs and lets his staff handle domestic issues.

"Too many times they work in a vacuum back there without any practical experience," he said, calling it "a frustrating educational process."

In response to a question, Andrus said most Idaho residents aren't concerned about worldwide problems such as global warming, "unless it impacted their lifestyle and what they wanted to do."

7 states meet to discuss Nevada's quest for water

PHOENIX (AP) — Nevada and Arizona take their war of words over the Colorado River to the negotiating table today, at a meeting of the seven states with rights to the river.

Nevada Gov. Bob Miller seized the public initiative Tuesday, calling a news conference to propose a multi-state "water banking" scheme that he said would sustain the economic boom in Las Vegas.

Arizona, which is having trouble finding takers within the state for its share of the Colorado, says it's interested in serving as a temporary water bank for Nevada — and perhaps California. But despite pressure from Nevada to come up with a firm proposal, Arizona hasn't got the specifics on paper, said Laurence Linser, a deputy director of the state Department of Water Resources.

"We certainly support banking of unused entitlements in Arizona and it should be pursued," said Linser, whose boss, Rita Pearson, will represent the state.

The two-state tiff is the latest strain on the complex web of laws, court rulings and tradition that govern use of the river.

It apparently will be the main topic of discussion at the meeting Wednesday in Las Vegas.

Present will be top water officials from the states with rights to the river: Arizona, Nevada, California, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and New Mexico.

The powerful group has no formal name or meeting schedule, and sessions are closed to the public and the media.

Miller told a news conference Tuesday in Las Vegas that Nevada would propose a "water bank" plan for the seven states that would ensure sufficient water for southern Nevada for 75 years.

The idea is to store surplus water from the Colorado River in Lake Mead or elsewhere along the river's route. States having a surplus of water could then sell it to those states where there was a shortage, under a system run by a multi-state commission.

"Our proposal creates cooperation among Nevada, California and Arizona, where competitiveness has been the rule for too long," Miller said.

Gas line explosion kills 2

GREEN RIVER, Wyo. (AP) — Two people were killed and two others injured in an explosion ignited when construction crew apparently ruptured a gas line Tuesday afternoon, officials said.

The crew was in the early stages of a highway-reconstruction project about six miles west of Green River and was using heavy machinery on the site about 30 feet from the shoulder of Interstate 80, Wyoming Department of Transportation spokesman Bruce Burrows said.

Killed were the operators of a bulldozer and a scraper, which is used to move dirt and rocks, Burrows said.

The unconfirmed report was that they had tried to get the equipment out of there but they couldn't get going fast enough and the fire engulfed them," Burrows said, adding the exact cause of the blast was unknown.

Injured in the blaze, which was ignited about 4:50 p.m., were a man who has been flown to the Intermountain Burn Center in Salt Lake City, and a woman who was severely injured, Burrows said.

Names of those killed and injured were being withheld pending notification of their families, Burrows said.

Earlier, a spokesman for a Rock Springs hospital said that the injured people were a Fremont County couple traveling through the area.

The explosion threw up rocks and dirt onto the interstate, and heat from the flames was felt up to 300 feet away, Burrows said, adding heavy smoke hampered visibility in a large area around the explosion.

The blast left a crater measuring 30 feet long, 10 feet wide and 10 feet deep, Burrows said. The crater was buried several feet under the surface, he said.

Truck backs up, clips high voltage power line

KAYSVILLE, Utah (AP) — A driver backing up his semitrailer truck caused at least $20,000 damage when he knocked down a high-voltage power line at the Davis County central emissions testing station.

Environmental Health Division director Rich Harvey said the driver of the truck was misdirected, and when he tried to back his rig around to get out to the I-15 frontage road, the trailer became entangled in a guy wire supporting an electrical power pole.

The rig pulled down the pole, ripped down about 300 feet of power line and pulled the service meter off the wall of the emissions center, Harvey said.

Starvation death trial to begin Oct. 26

BLACKFOOT — Trial is scheduled Oct. 26 for a Blackfoot man and woman accused of causing the starvation-dehydration death of 18-month-old Cody Johnson.

Carmel Mickelsen, 20, the mother of Cody, and Troy Mickelsen, 23, the stepfather, pleaded innocent Monday to a felony charge of injury to a child. They were released on personal recognizance but ordered not to leave the state.

Cody died Dec. 29 or early Dec. 30 in the Mickelsen home. The charge carries a penalty of up to 10 years in prison.

Idaho Falls pathologist Dr. Gary Ellwein testified at a preliminary hearing that the child died of malnutrition and dehydration.

Attorneys seek to overturn conviction

IDAHO FALLS — Defense attorneys told the Idaho Supreme Court the prosecution used flawed evidence to convict an Ashton man of murder nearly nine years after the event and the conviction should be overturned.

The court on Monday heard an appeal from Rauland Grube, 30. He was sentenced two years ago to life in prison with no possibility of parole for the murder of Amy Hossner, 16, who was killed by a single-shotgun blast in her bedroom during the night of June 4, 1983.

The court took the appeal under advisement and will rule later. In a 1991 trial, prosecutors convinced a jury that Grube was the person who fired the fatal blast through Hossner's bedroom window while she lie in bed.

Pocastello nitrate decreases but still risky

POCASTELLO — Recent samplings of long-standing pollution in Pocastello-area wells show nitrate concentrations have decreased, but state officials still advise at-risk people to refrain from drinking the water.

Nitrate pollution in Black Cliffs groundwater southeast of Pocastello is probably from residential septic systems, according to a state Division of Water Quality report that regional administrator George Spinner expects to publish soon.

The latest sample from the well that supplies the Black Cliffs Mobile Home Park, taken in January, showed a nitrate concentration of 8.12 milligrams per liter. The federal safe limit is 10 mg.

Judge postpones Boise woman's trial

BOISE — A federal judge has postponed the trial of Mary "Peggy" Moore, a Boise woman accused of helping buy the gun that may have been used in the slaying of a New Plymouth policeman.

Mrs. Moore's son, James Robert Lee "Bobby" Moore, 14, is scheduled to stand trial in state court starting Aug. 8 for the Jan. 20 shooting death of Officer Ronald Wade Feldner.

Mrs. Moore, 49, and Lee Roy Wiley, 33, of Boise, were indicted in March on federal charges that they purchased a .25-caliber semiautomatic handgun for the teenager last September. Feldner was killed with a .25-caliber handgun but prosecutors have declined to say whether it was same weapon.

Mrs. Moore faces 10 years in prison and $500,000 in fines if convicted on felony counts of conspiracy and fraudulent acquisition of a firearm.

Regional center won't accept blood

BOISE — The American Red Cross regional blood center in Boise, which was expected to resume regular operations this week, will not start accepting blood donations until mid-May.

Blood drawings were stopped March 7 after the U.S. Food and Drug Administration told Red Cross officials that sloppy record-keeping, equipment maintenance and supervisory practices in the region did not guarantee clean blood. The FDA said aggressive, immediate action was needed to correct procedures to protect the blood supply.

Under "modified operations" at the Boise center, donors have been giving blood only in emergencies or when the blood is intended for the donor's own elective surgery.

Beitelspacher shifts on drawdown

LEWISTON — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ron Beitelspacher said he believes science no longer supports a biological test drawdown of Lower Granite Reservoir to save imperiled salmon runs.

But the former state senator from Grangeville said Monday that he would support an experimental drawdown and face the political consequences if it was justified by scientific data.

Otherwise, he said, the San Francisco-based 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals could mandate a drawdown, halt timber harvests and take other steps to protect endangered and threatened Snake River salmon.

Few Idaho molesters get proper treatment

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — George W. Keith molested two young girls in one year's time, but he is one of nearly 600 sex offenders in Idaho prisons receiving no treatment for deviant behavior.

Although they make up 21 percent of the prison system's 2,783 inmates, there is no specialized sex offender treatment available. Only parolers receive it.

The situation worries people like Tom Hearn, a Post Falls therapist and president of the recently formed Idaho Sex Offender Treatment Association.

"If they are going to be in prison for five to 10 years, then the treatment must be available to them to reduce the chance of recidivism," Hearn said. "My concern is that they will be just as dangerous when they get out as when they went in."

His group hopes to establish statewide treatment standards for sex offenders as well as certification requirements for the people who treat them.

"This is a dangerous population of people," Hearn said. "They commit a lot of crimes and they create a lot of victims."

"Our concern was, let's come up with some standards and guidelines."

Initiative is way to set morality, Bork declares

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's anti-gay rights initiative is a valid way of legislating public morality, says Robert Bork.

Bork was nominated for the U.S. Supreme Court by President Ronald Reagan, but failed to win U.S. Senate confirmation. He said Monday he has not read the Idaho initiative.

If sponsors can gather enough signatures, it will be on the November general election ballot in Idaho. Bork said communities should have the right "not to have a different morality thrust on people."

"It's not a movement to punish homosexuals in any. It's a defensive reaction," he said. "It's a movement not to give special rights to a group of people based on the grounds of their sexual orientation."

"There's a trend in the courts to see homosexuals as a class who must be treated as a minority and be given particular rights," Bork said.

Bork planned a Tuesday night speech on the Albertson College campus in Caldwell.

In past legal writings and in his book, "The Tempting of America," Bork has said he questions whether homosexuality should be illegal. But, he has argued, homosexuality is a chosen behavior, unlike race or gender, and should not be a protected class.

Gay rights supporters, and some scientists, argue that homosexuality is genetic. Because sexual orientation is not protected under civil rights provisions in many states and communities, gay rights supporters say homosexuals may be discriminated against.

Students protest bond issue failure

PRESTON (AP) — Between 300 and 400 students walked out of classrooms in Preston High School on Monday, protesting the community's refusal to pass a $5 million bond recently.

"Some camped out overnight at a football and planned to continue the protest Tuesday. A few middle school students joined."

High school principal Al Koch said he planned no disciplinary action against the students, although the school has a strict attendance policy, and if students exceed allowable absences, they might lose class credit.

"I told them I'm sure the community has taken notice of what they are doing and the school board and superintendent will be working with the committees that have been set up to solve the problems," he told students.

Koch said the administration and school board didn't anticipate the demonstration and there didn't seem to be any student ringleaders.

"Somebody probably said something during lunch hour and it snowballed," Koch said.

"Students have the right to do that. The only problem is that it's somewhat disruptive to school, and I don't care for that particular aspect of it."

The failed bond issue would have been used to construct a new middle school, relieving crowding at the middle school and high school.

"We're not trying to cut down the community. We're just trying to open eyes of the community. We're not here to raise havoc. We're here to prove a point," Lane Cromwell, a junior student, said.

Utah's veterans' organizations form alliance

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans and the Veterans of Foreign Wars are forming an alliance to "speak with one voice" on such issues as establishing a state veterans nursing home.

The "resolution of unity" creating the new alliance has been agreed upon by the command of the three organizations and will be subject to approval at their state conventions in June.

The issues include benefits for veterans and their families, children and youth programs and health.

The alliance also will address the Persian Gulf Syndrome, rising homelessness among veterans, and, in particular, the unsuccessful effort to establish a state veterans nursing home, the galvanizing issue and top priority.

Two consecutive legislatures rejected bills appropriating $2.3 million to build an 80-bed home along the Wasatch Front.

Utah has 147,000 veterans, including a large population of World War II-era vets in their 70s. It is the only state in the Intermountain West that does not have a state veterans nursing home, leaders of the veterans groups said. Idaho, by comparison, has some 50,000 fewer veterans and three homes. In fact, homes there and in South Dakota have taken in Utahns who must reside in a state-run veterans home in order for their care to be paid for by the VA.

"Two years in a row now we've gotten a bill through the House. But it dies in the same place each time — in the Senate Rules Committee," John Leete of the Utah Military and Veterans Affairs Committee said Monday. The small, nonprofit-UMVAC has spearheaded the issue for nearly three years. "UMVAC is not large enough by itself," Leete said.

Lindy Boggs chosen '94 top mother

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Lindy Boggs, who served Louisiana for nine terms in the House of Representatives, on Monday was named the 1994 American Mother of the Year.

Boggs, 78, was honored at the 59th annual convention of American Mothers Inc. for "creation of a home life which exemplifies an excellence of service to home, family and community."

She was among 36 women from the states, Puerto Rico and Washington D.C. who had been nominated for the award, organizers said.

"I'm overwhelmed," Boggs said after being presented with a statuette representing a typical family. "I'm in absolute awe of all the remarkable ladies who are here as state mothers."

Boggs, a Roman Catholic and Democrat, fought for civil rights during 17½ years in Congress and more than 50 years in politics.

She was the first woman to chair the Democratic National Convention, in 1976, and was the only white representing a black-majority district when she retired from Congress in July 1990.

Her nine terms began with a special election in 1973 to finish the term of her husband, Hale Boggs, who disappeared in an apparent airplane crash six months earlier in Alaska.

Three months after she retired, her elder daughter, Princeton, D.L. Mayor Barbara Boggs Sigmund, died of cancer.

Her other children are Cokie Roberts, a congressional correspondent for National Public Radio and ABC, and Thomas Hale Boggs Jr., an attorney and lobbyist.

Boggs said rearing children properly in the 1990s is both a critical and difficult task.

"Mothers have a very special burden, and I feel so sorry for young, single mothers," she said. "They're the group that most needs role models like the Mothers of America."

"Mothers have to live a kind of life as an example" for their children, Boggs said. "I think they need the confidence and moral values their mothers are giving to them."

The mother of the year is chosen by a panel selected by American Mothers Inc., which has 4,000 members nationwide.

She must be older than 45, have at least one child, be an active member of a religion and a participant in community, state or national activities, and be able to represent mothers as an exemplary role model, according to the organization.

Mormon leader urges group to promote values

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — American society is experiencing a moral and ethical slide that can be reversed only by traditional family values that promote civility and respect for others, a Mormon leader says.

Speaking to the annual convention of American Mothers, Inc., Gordon B. Hinckley said crumbling families, crime, pornography and immorality have always existed.

"But we cannot continue the fearsome trend we are presently experiencing without catastrophe overtaking us," Hinckley, the first counselor in the church's governing First Presidency, said Sunday in the Tabernacle on Temple Square.

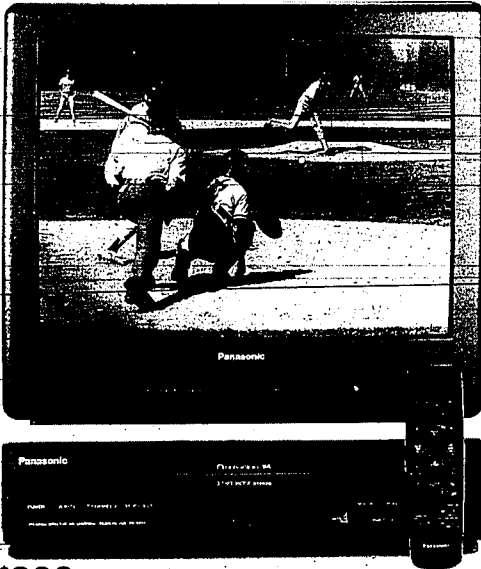

Hinckley said neither government nor the schools can teach the values of hard work, respect and religious faith that were so much a part of families in his generation. Great technological progress has not been matched by moral progress, said Hinckley, who is 83.

"Today we have fancy cars and worry about carjackings and drive-by shootings. We have television and cable...where entertainment, so often coarse in its nature, profane and obscene in its language, is poured into our living rooms," he said.

Bangladesh cyclone death toll tops 100; number of dead to rise

MUSONIPARA, Bangladesh (AP) — The howling wind sounded like "a thousand children crying in darkness," said Zaki Ahmed who spent the night in terror.

"At daybreak it was finally over," he said Tuesday after surviving the cyclone that pummelled Bangladesh's southeastern coast for five hours the day before, killing at least 100 people.

Relief workers said the toll would rise, but would be far less than the 130,000 dead from a 1991 cyclone in the same area.

Before weakening and moving into neighboring Burma, the cyclone flattened hundreds of villages, leaving tens of thousands of people homeless and hungry.

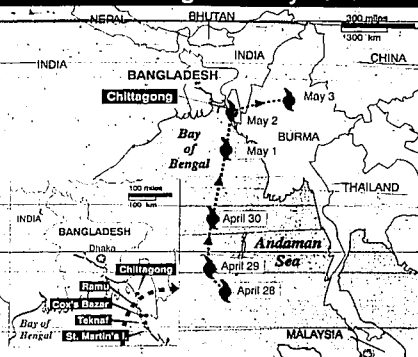

After the winds eased, Prime Minister Khaleda Zia flew to the area, which is hammered by the sea's fury almost every year, to inspect the damage. "My government will stand by you in your bad times," she told survivors.

In any time she moved to a new group of homeless people, women and children stretched out their hands, clamoring for food and money. Many others sat dumbly on the sheets of tin, which once were roofs of their flimsy huts before being wrenched and flung by the winds.

About 7 million people live in the cyclone-prone region along the 250-mile coast and on 50 islands.

The lower casualty count indicated the government has improved its early warning system and evacuation procedures since the 1991 disaster.

Path of the Bangladesh cyclone

aster, when the poor peasants who occupied the sandy islands and shifting coastline were reluctant to abandon their property.

This time, hundreds of thousands of people escaped to 900 concrete storm shelters that were built since the last cyclone.

Among the most badly hit communities were the 19 refugee camps for Burmese Muslims around Cox's Bazar. At least 85 refugees were killed in the camps, said Enamul Kabir, the district administrator of Cox's Bazar. He said 21 Bangladeshis died in the towns of Teknaf and Ukhaia.

In Teknaf, all mud huts were destroyed, Information Secretary Nuruddin Ali Masud told reporters in Dhaka. Relief officials said most deaths were caused by flying debris and falling trees.

In the coastal community of Musonipara outside Teknaf, a 50-foot concrete electricity pole built to withstand tidal waves snapped like a twig in the 130 mph winds.

Saddam drains southern marshes

LONDON (AP) — Reconnaissance photos show Saddam Hussein's government has drained more than 40 percent of Iraq's southern marshlands and burned villages once inhabited by opposition Shiite Muslims.

According to an environmental study released Tuesday, dead fish are floating on the surface of the marshes, vast areas including a lake have dried up, and the unique marshland habitat will probably be destroyed in the next decade or so.

The study's findings were supported by dramatic film taken March 4 by British air force fighters enforcing the "no-fly" zone over southern Iraq which was shown at a news conference Tuesday.

The footage showed smoke billowing from several burning villages and details of Iraq's water-diversion project, including areas which were green in 1990 that are now brown.

Ministry of Defense analyst Chris Lincoln-Jones said Saddam has used what started out as an agricultural project in the 1960s as a cover for persecution.

"The drying out is deliberate," he said. "What he has to do is open up the access into the marshes to his heavier equipment in order that he can get at the Shiite insurgents."

British lawmaker Emma Nicholson said at least 300,000 of the 650,000 Iraqis who took refuge in the marshlands after the Gulf War in 1991 have been killed. Only 10,000 Iraqis are left in the northern central marshes and 25,000 who fled to the eastern marshes can't get out, she said.

"The human and ecological disaster which is currently taking place is seeing the end of a unique habitat," said Ms. Nicholson.

She founded the relief organization Assist Marsh Arabs and Refugees which commissioned the environmental study.

Readers look for soup, leather recipes

This is the first in a series of monthly columns called "Recipe Exchange."

The column will feature recipe requests from our readers.

If anyone has a good recipe for any of the following dishes, please share. Information on where to send recipes is at the end of this column.

Several readers have already written in to ask for recipes. Some of them recall seeing recipes in newspapers or other publications, but never clipped them out. Others have lost favorite recipes through the years. Still others have never been able to find those perfect instructions for a dish that sounds yummy.

This week's recipe requests range from soup to salad to main dish to side dish to dessert. One request is for a tasty snack.

Dee Wildman of Buhl is looking for a recipe for chicken tortilla soup. "I made it a few times and it was good," she wrote, "but it could be great with the right touch."

Lydia Swinney of Buhl wants a recipe for pumpkin or squash fruit leather. "My husband grew some rather large squash in our home garden a few years ago, so I have plenty of it around," she wrote. "All of my grandchildren and some others love fruit leather, and I have been pureeing plums, peaches, pears and applesauce and just pouring it on the trays."

Edna Hoagland of King Hill is searching for the perfect meringue — one that does not weep, possibly one using marshmallow cream. "I used to make lemon pies, and they never did (weep)," she wrote, "but the last year or so they weep all the time."

Lisa Buhler of Twin Falls wants to make an old English beef pie, or a steak and kidney pie. She remembers hearing about one made with steak, potatoes and onion with a suet crust, put in a cheese cloth and steamed.

Orriette Sinclair of Twin Falls wants a recipe for low calorie pizza on a zucchini. "Leannine, niece of Twin Falls, recalls a recipe in a Dear Abby column for Abby's Pecan Pie. Marian McDonald of Shoshone remembers a good recipe for spaghetti salad.

Anyone who has any of these recipes or similar ones — please send to: Recipe Exchange, Denise Turner, The Times-News, P. O. Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303-0548. We will print selected recipes in the Wednesday food section of the paper.

Also, anyone who wants to request recipes from our readers may write to the same address. Include your name, address and daytime phone number.

Lucy Anderson of Twin Falls sent in one of her favorite recipes to share with readers. "It's delicious," she wrote.

BANANA NUT CAKE

- 1 Pillsbury or other brand cake mix
- 3 whole bananas
- 3 eggs
- 1 cup water
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil
- 1/2 cup minced walnuts

Put all ingredients into a large mixer or bowl. To make it easier on the mixer, mash the bananas before adding to the mix. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla and mix. Bake in 350 degree oven for one hour in angel food or bundt cake pan or in sheet pan. Ice with a light powdered sugar glaze. (I use 1 cup powdered sugar and 2 teaspoons coffee.)

Cookies: A delicious way to honor Mom

To mothers, the ultimate Mother's Day tribute is not flowers or gifts, but a sign of love from the heart. What could show children's feelings for Mom better than hand-crafted cards and gifts, and a pretty tray filled with the most delicious treats — a special expression of love for her.

PEANUT BUTTER & JELLY STREUSEL BARS

- 1/2 cup Crisco all-vegetable shortening
- 1/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1/4 cup creamy peanut butter
- 3 tablespoons milk
- 1 tablespoon vanilla
- 1 egg
- 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup strawberry jam (or your favorite), stirred
- 1/2 cup quick oats, uncooked

1. Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease 13 by 9-inch baking pan with shortening.
2. Combine shortening, brown sugar, peanut butter, milk and vanilla in large bowl. Beat at medium speed of electric mixer until well blended. Add egg. Beat just until blended.
3. Combine flour, baking soda and salt. Add to creamed mixture at low speed. Mix just until blended.
4. Pat 2/3 dough in bottom of prepared baking pan in an even layer. Spread jam evenly over crust to within 1/4 inch of sides.
5. Combine remaining dough with oats. Drop by spoonfuls onto jam layer. Dough will be somewhat stiff. Press lightly to even out dough layer.
6. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes, or until edges and streusel topping are lightly browned. Cool completely on wire rack. Cut into 2 by 1 1/2-inch bars. Makes 3 dozen bars.

CHEWY & CHOCOLATEY PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES

- 1 1/2 cups firmly packed light brown sugar
- 2/3 cup Crisco all-vegetable shortening
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 eggs
- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/3 cup unsweetened baking cocoa
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups (about 32) miniature peanut butter cups, unwrapped and quartered or coarsely chopped

1. Heat oven to 375 degrees. Place sheets of foil on countertop for cooling cookies.
2. Combine brown sugar, shortening, water and vanilla in large bowl. Beat at medium speed of electric mixer until well blended. Beat eggs into creamed mixture.
3. Combine flour, cocoa, baking soda and salt. Mix into creamed mixture at low speed just until blended. Stir in peanut butter cups.
4. Drop by rounded measuring table-spoonfuls of dough 2 inches apart onto ungreased baking sheet.

5. Bake one baking sheet at a time at 375 degrees for 7 to 9 minutes, or until cookies are set. Do not overbake. Cool 2 minutes on baking sheet. Remove cookies to foil to cool completely.
Makes about 3 dozen cookies.

ALOHA OATMEAL COOKIES

- 1/2 cup Butter Flavor Crisco all-vegetable shortening
- 1 1/2 cups firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons orange juice
- 1 tablespoon grated orange peel
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/2 teaspoon orange or lemon extract
- 3 cups quick oats, uncooked
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon powdered ginger
- 1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple in natural juice, well drained
- 1 cup flaked coconut
- 1 cup coarsely chopped macadamia nuts or blanched almonds

1. Heat oven to 375 degrees. Grease baking sheets with shortening. Place sheets of foil on countertop for cooling cookies.

Kids can make every day a mother's day

Mother's Day comes around just once a year, and while any gift may be appreciated, the gift of helping out will make Mom (and Dad, too, for that matter) feel especially happy all year around. Children can promise one special task throughout the year that will lighten Mom's load.

- With a little supervision, very young children can:
  - Empty household wastebaskets once a week.
  - Put away placemats, napkins, salt and pepper, etc. after dinner every evening.
  - Set the table for family meals.
  - Separate bottles, newspapers and aluminum cans for recycling.
  - Bring in the mail.

School-age children can:

- Take responsibility for emptying the dishwasher, or washing or drying dishes.

- Wash and dry one or more loads of laundry every week.
- Set out trash cans and recycling boxes on pick-up days.
- Feed and exercise the family pet.
- Help rake and weed the lawn and garden.

Teen-agers can:

- Watch younger children while Mom goes on errands or to the store.
- Shop for some of the weekly groceries.
- Clip coupons from newspapers and magazines.
- Wash or iron their own clothes.
- Replace buttons or snaps on the family clothing.

Mom is not the only beneficiary when children take part in the household chores. Responsibility and experience add to young people's skill levels and self-confidence as well.

Kimberly cook learns by the book

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

"KIMBERLY — Gloria St.Clair didn't do a lot of cooking while she was growing up. After she married, she taught herself with cookbooks.

Later, St.Clair's grandmother added to her culinary knowledge by giving her canning lessons and teaching her more about baking.

The recipes she uses now come from the 40 cookbooks she has purchased or received as gifts from friends and family members through the years. She said she has some favorites in this collection, but some of her recipes come from her step-mother, "a good cook who tries lots of new things."

St.Clair described her general cooking style as "basic meat and potatoes. For her baking, she uses recipes. She's developed particular expertise in such areas as pie crusts and bread making and was asked to do classes for teen-agers in her church for a couple of years.

She said learning to make good pie crust and bread is a matter of practice.

"It's like my grandmother always said about bread, that you have to just have the right feel," she said, "and you're supposed to knead it a full 10 minutes or whatever the recipe says."

But she said too much kneading can make the dough dry.

For pie dough, instead of placing it betwoen sheets of waxed paper to keep it from sticking, St.Clair uses a pastry cloth and a rolling pin stockinette.

Her lemon meringue pie is a big favorite in her family, even though she uses a packaged mix for the filling. She said the secret is to add a couple of drops of bottled lemon juice to the filling. This makes it more tangy. She cautioned not to add too much of it, because that will give the pie an imitation lemon taste.

Another trick she has come up with is for making fresh fruit pies. She said, because the pie is generally not consumed all in one sitting, the crust gets soggy. To prevent this, she rolls out her pie crust and places it on a cookie sheet, pricks it with a fork 3 to 5 inches apart, and bakes it as usual. She makes the glaze, adds fruit to it, and puts it in the refrigerator. Just before serving, she places slices of crust on individual plates, puts fruit with glaze over each and tops them with a whipped topping.

Here is the recipe she follows to make

PIE CRUST

- Makes enough for 2 (9-inch) pie crusts.
  - 2 cups flour
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 2/3 cup plus 2 tablespoons shortening (she prefers Crisco for this)
  - 1/4 cup water
- Measure flour into mixing bowl and mix salt through it. With pastry blender or fork, cut in shortening until shortening particles are the size of giant peas. Sprinkle with water, 1 tablespoon at a time, mixing lightly with a fork until all the flour is moistened. Gather dough together with fingers, so it cleans the bowl. Press firmly in a ball. Then roll out. (It may be refrigerated until you are ready to roll out.) Roll out and fill.

Valley life

Medicine cabinet trap is rude, childish

DEAR ABBY: Why on earth would anybody want to embarrass a guest for daring to open the medicine cabinet? Did it ever occur to hosts that a guest may have a legitimate reason to open the cabinet?

Sure, there are snoots who may be judgmental about your private life and drug abusers who are looking for prescription drugs. But what about guests who are looking for mouthwash because there was too much garlic in the dip? Or someone needing hand lotion, aspirin or dental floss?

If there are personal items such as medications, cosmetics or contraceptives, they shouldn't be in medicine cabinets when guests are expected. To hoist-trap a medicine cabinet with marbles that will come tumbling out and make a racket to deliberately embarrass someone is unbelievably childish and rude.

Is somebody did that to me, I would also walk out of the house - never to return.

- DENNY IN BOULDER

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: Will you please help me inform people that they should never talk to, pet or try to feed a Seeing Eye dog?

These dogs are working, and when they are distracted, they can't help the person they were trained to assist. This is a constant problem for people who have Seeing Eye dogs.

Some people say if you ask the owner if it is OK to pet their dog, it puts them in an awkward position because they hate to say no. Is it OK to talk directly to the sightless person about his or her dog?

- KAREN FLYNN, 13, AZLE, TEXAS

DEAR KAREN: You are right. When people see a person with a Seeing Eye dog, they should understand it is not just another person with his or her pet; the dog is working. They should not try to pet the dog.

A comment such as, "My, what a beautiful (or well-trained) dog," is permissible, but beyond that, no questions, please.

DEAR ABBY: I have read that you are something of an expert on the American presidents, so perhaps you can come up with the anti-war remarks made in a speech delivered by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. He was severely criticized for it because he was a West Point graduate.

- CURIOUS IN ABILENE, TEXAS

DEAR CURIOUS: I am far from an expert, but I have enjoyed learning about the American presidents, and the quotation to which you refer was made by President Eisenhower when he spoke before the American Society of Newspaper Editors in 1953:

"Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired signifies, in the final sense, a theft from those who hunger and are not clothed. This world in arms is not spending money alone. It is spending the sweat of its laborers, the genius of its scientists, the hopes of its children. ... This is not a way of life at all in any true sense. Under the cloud of war, it is humanity hanging on a cross of iron."

For an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person, order "How to Be Popular." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. ## Letter of thanks

8th grade enjoys Native American event

A team of eighth-graders at O'Leary Junior High recently participated in projects to demonstrate differences in various Native American cultures during a Native American Day.

A special thanks goes to The Times-News and KMYT for sending representatives to take pictures and air this special day for us. A big basket of thanks to Lee Heider for providing the teepee and Roy Graybill and friends for setting it up.

Thanks to our outstanding teachers and administration - Kelly Haffey, Brooke Bailey and Sherawn Merriat for their presentation on Native American mythology and the stars; Lesli O'Neill and Holly Tingey for teaching the students legends and sign language; and Mark Briere and Jim Brown for playing Indian games.

This was a great learning experience and one the students will always remember. Thanks again to all.

2 Scouts win awards for merit

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Two young men from Twin Falls have earned Eagle Scout awards through the Boy Scouts of America. The awards will be presented to Nathan Williams and Ben Jensen at a court of honor set for 5 p.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls LDS 8th Ward Church, 667 Harrison Street.

Scouts must complete 21 merit badges and a church or community service-related project to earn the award.

Nathan has completed 27 merit badges. For his project, he installed a flagpole at the picnic area located next to the Twin Falls LDS West Stake

Jensen

Center on Harrison Street.

Nathan is 14 and the son of Spencer and Valerie Williams of Twin Falls. He is active in JUMP Co.

Ben has completed 29 merit badges. His project involved collecting materials, organizing a work party and building shelves for the food bank at the Salvation Army.

Ben is 15 and a sophomore at Twin Falls High School, where he is active in sports and participates in football, basketball and tennis. He completed requirements in the Cub Scout program, including earning the Arrow of Light and Faith in God awards. He served as a staff member at Camp Bradley, the Boy Scout Camp near Stanley, in 1992. He is the son of Jerry and Kristine Jensen of Twin Falls.

Boss, 17, earns Eagle Scout Award

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Jason Boss has earned the Eagle Scout Award through the Boy Scouts of America. The award will be presented to Jason at a court of honor set for 7 p.m. Saturday at the Woods Pavilion at Rock Creek Park.

Boss

Jason completed 26 merit badges and a required Eagle project to earn the award. For his project, he made telephone stickers on labels with emergency numbers and the address grid of the Hollister/Rogerson residents.

Jason, 17, is the son of Charles and Marilyn Boss of Hollister. He is a junior at Filer High School. He enjoys Ryobu Kai Karate, piano, skiing and computer programming. He is a member of Troop 69, sponsored by the Twin Falls First Baptist Church.

McCartney offers frozen veggie dinners

Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

Another celeb is making a name in food: Linda McCartney's Home Style Cooking, the USA's first line of frozen meatless entrees, is being produced and marketed by Fairmont Foods of Minneapolis.

Production already has begun and the food will be in Minneapolis, Chicago, St. Louis, Denver and Milwaukee/Madison stores beginning May 1, with nationwide distribution to follow.

McCartney, wife of ex-Beatle Paul, created each of the entrees herself. Her 3-year-old line is already booming in Great Britain. It includes Spaghetti Milano, Lasagna Roma, Pasta Provencal, Pasta Primavera, Rigatoni Marinara, Chili Non Carne, Burrito Grande, Bavarian Goulash and Fettuccini Alfredo.

McCartney told a press conference last month that her family had been eating vegetarian meals for more than 20 years, and "taste has always been the main ingredient."

"This is a hands-on project for me," she said. "I have been involved every step of the way and I intend to keep it like that."

Cramming 2 different tastes into house splits newlyweds

Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Joshua Long adored everything about his fiancée Melissa Vaughn, or so he thought.

But soon after he married and moved in with his love, he discovered an area of dissonance: home decor. "He hates our shower curtain because it has butterflies on it," Melissa says. "He's just going to have to deal with it."

Dealing with it is often a way of life for newlyweds like Vaughn and Long, who find that cramming two tastes under one roof can get ugly.

In this decor war among the sexes, decorator Christine Gay often jumps into the role of mediator.

"When they come from different perspectives, you have to try to find common ground," she says.

Two spouses making decisions means two often disparate ideas of how a home should look. The result can either be clash or compromise.

When decorator Gina Lane-Olsson moved in with her husband, Jon Olsson, nine years ago, she saw no room for compromise. She knew she could never live with his jewel-studded easy chair, which looked like it came from an "Addams Family" garage sale. Nor could she spend her days looking at her husband's bizarre collection of antique pharmaceutical supplies.

"My easy answer to that was all this stuff had to go," she says. "I knew that I had good taste and he didn't."

Begrudgingly, her husband sold his treasures.

"I had some regrets," he says. "I thought there was some intrinsic value in my junk. But she could never see the beauty in hideousness. And she was more stubborn than I was."

Almost a decade later, Olsson is glad his stuff was purged.

"There was an understanding I had to go through that I had no taste," he says. "Since she's got that through to me, we've lived much happier."

Time often has a way of bringing two tastes closer together.

Charles Williams says he and Jennie Williams, his wife of 30 years, have agreed on home decor as long as he can remember.

"We've pretty much blended, I would say. We both like contemporary," he says.

"But, now, we're both leaning toward a more traditional, but a more modest look."

The outdoor and modern look blend to please both husband and wife.

consensus is sometimes as easy as making subtle color changes from the offending hues.

"Let's say the woman likes pink. A lot of men still don't like pink, so instead, you can go to a rose or peach," she says. "Men generally like stripes, plaids and paisleys. So if the woman likes florals, you can incorporate them with paisley."

But when one spouse likes furniture from the "Addams Family," it's time to forget about compromise and blending, and just declare war.

"Some things are just ugly," she says.

Like people, plants need soap to keep bugs away

More than 20 years ago, Jerry Baker (America's Master Gardener) wrote a book called "Plants are Like People."

In it, he advocated the use of soap on plants for a variety of uses. The one that sticks in my memory is Baker's addition of soap to watering cans to discourage insects, with the rationalization that soap tastes bad.

Baker said that, when he added soap, not detergent, to the water that he gave to plants, bugs were less likely to eat those plants.

"Remember when parents used to wash a child's mouth out with soap?" Baker wrote. "Well, try that on garden bugs. Believe me, it's just as effective."

Pests and people have one thing in common: taste. They both like things that taste good, and neither the insects nor we like the taste of soap in any way, shape or form. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary that you use the mild shampoo on a regular basis to discourage the return of insects.

The addition of soap to plant diets also make the water "wetter" and helps it penetrate dried-out soil. And there's the obvious use of soap: add dishwashing soap to a bowl of warm water to give indoor plants a bath. Use it in your hose-end sprayer to bathe outdoor shrubs. Spider mites will slip-slide into the sunset.

"Ploosey!" said the experts.

Since the book was published, various and sundry experts have denounced the use of soap on plants to dissuade bug bites.

Now, there is evidence that there might be something to sudsing up the snapdragons. In my readings, I came across recent studies pointing to evidence that soap used on plants seems to discourage insects. Well, glory be. For those of us who want to give simpler remedies a try, Jerry Baker recently ran a recipe for flowering plants: ¼ teaspoon 15-30-15 water soluble plant food, ¼ teaspoon liquid dish soap, 1½ teaspoon KNOX gelatin, ½ cup beer, 1 gallon water. Feed each plant 1 cup of this mixture while watering your garden. Make sure to feed before noon.

Note: In last week's column, I mentioned that foxglove could be planted in an herb garden to add color. Just in case you thought it could also be used as an herb, don't! It is harmful if eaten. Don't eat it.

Mark your calendar: JoAnn Robbins, Wood River extension agent, will teach homeowners how to compost at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Twin Falls County Extension office, 246 Third Ave. E.

On Friday, the annual Mother's Day mini-rose sale sponsored by the Magic Valley Rose Society will take place at the Magic Valley Mall. All week, during "Pavilions on Parade," pretty things to put in the garden will be on display at the mall. Items will be auctioned off at 4 p.m. Saturday. All proceeds will go toward maintenance of the Commemorative Rose Garden.

Around the house

Wash louvered doors with a 2-inch brush that has been dipped in a mild household cleaner. Rinse and repeat on other side.

When storing woollens, stash a bay leaf in storage container. Crofters with small sweaters and moths will be discouraged.

Avoid holes in interior walls. Use a hot-glue gun to hang pictures, sconces and other objects. When ready to remove, use a blow dryer to soften glue.

Need to reopen a sealed envelope? Place letter in microwave for about 20 seconds to soften the glue. Flap will peel away easily.

Mobility important in baby items Concrete patchers repair gouged steps

By Nick Harder
Orange County Register

I thought I'd finished all the reading and listening I could do to make my home ready for a newborn. Despite all the preparations, some things haven't worked out the way we'd planned. And we've learned a lot along the way.

"Take the situation with the changing tables. Most such tables are atop a chest of drawers. We wanted two portable ones, which I made. It's a good thing we made them portable. So far, we've used them in just about every location except where we'd planned."

Even I've gotten into the changing act, which has altered the location of one of the tables. After a few days of watching my wife struggle around the clock with the baby, I got the nerve to volunteer to take a regular shift so she could sleep.

I keep him in my study most evenings where I can close the doors to keep his cries to a low level. That necessitated moving one of the changing tables and other portable bassinets and other paraphernalia into that room.

That brings up another point. You might want to get more than one or two of the same infant-care items to keep in different locations. It's really helped us avoid dragging everything

How to baby-proof your home

By Nick Harder
Orange County Register

Before we know it, our adopted son will be crawling and walking. Though Jonathan is only a month old, I've been busy baby-proofing our home because it will take some time to accomplish all of these tasks. Better to have the child-proofing done early in case he crawls sooner than expected.

Despite having studied child-proofing and written stories on the topic, I discovered a few new things in getting my home ready for our child. They might help you start thinking about your own home.

Baby-proofing isn't just for people who have infants or children. Grandparents or neighbors of families who have little ones also should be aware of potential problems.

This doesn't mean a grandparent or neighbor has to take all of the steps outlined here, but it does mean you should be aware of potential problems and minimize them.

Consider electrical outlets in areas where children often come to play. Install easy-to-use outlet protectors. If electrical cords cross play or traffic areas, fasten them to the floor or hide them in some other way.

Look for objects a child might pull down. Protect the child and your valuables by removing the temptation. I have a custom-made cuckoo clock I bought in Germany's Black Forest. The three weights that power the clock hang on 6-foot-long chains that dangle invitingly. I'll have to figure a way to encase the weights and chains.

It's things like this, which we see every day, that can be the most dangerous. One day I decided to follow the advice in several baby books: Get down on my hands and knees and crawl around to discover what a child would encounter.

There it was, right in front of me: a stuffed lamb standing in a "pasture" surrounded by a miniature picket fence. Suddenly, I could imagine a child impaling himself on one of the pickets. Neither my wife nor I, nor the two people who came to inspect our home for home studies, had seen this potential problem. I'm going to "free" the lamb by taking down the picket fence.

Portability also has proven helpful in another respect: My wife — ever from one floor to another or one room to another.

the traditionalist — had planned for a long time that I would make a cradle. But friends who had infants talked us out of it. Lugging the cradle from room to room — especially with a sleeping baby in it — would get old fast, they said.

So they loaned us two bassinets on wheels. We keep one upstairs and one down. As it is, we still drag the upstairs bassinet from the nursery to the master bedroom and the downstairs one from the family room to my study. Those lightweight bassinets with wheels are much easier to handle than a cradle.

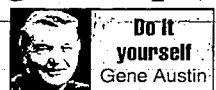

Wherever you place the bassinet or take the baby for a diaper change, be conscious of the brightness of light. Books we read said we should keep bright lights to a minimum.

We've been bathing the baby in a special little tub that we place on the counter in the master bath between the two sinks. To make this environmentally friendly to the baby, I replaced the 100-watt floodlights above the bathroom sink with 25-watt lights, so the light in the baby's eyes would not be harsh. That seems to have worked, except that I've cut myself twice trying to shave in near darkness.

Now, if I could only get the little guy to fuss more at another time. He seems to save it all up for my shift.

Is all this just getting me ready for when he's a teen-ager?

Q. Our concrete steps were damaged by winter frost using chipping tools and salt to remove and melt ice. Small chunks were gouged out and there was some flaking. How can we repair this inconspicuously? — D. Rigg

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

A. Special, self-bonding patching cements that can be spread in very thin layers are available at many home centers, hardware stores and building-supply outlets. Examples are Top 'n' Bond and Super-Bond. This type of "resurfacing" patcher is best for making shallow repairs to concrete since many ordinary patching products will quickly work loose and fall out.

Read directions carefully before using patching cements, which are sold in dry form in bags or plastic tubs and are mixed with water immediately before use.

The surface to be repaired should be cleaned of dirt and loose material. A small brush or vacuum can be used for cleaning. In general, the surface should also be dampened just before the patcher is applied.

If the cured patches prove too conspicuous for your taste, they can be concealed by painting the steps with masonry paint. Another treatment to give a uniform color is a slurry mix of the self-bonding cement and spread it over the entire surface of the steps with a broom or brush.

Q. I plan to clean my vinyl siding. I don't want to use a power washer so I have decided to hand-scrub it. What size brush should I use and should I start at the top or bottom of a siding section? — H. Wright

A. You might be able to clean the siding adequately simply by rinsing it thoroughly with a garden hose. Some home centers and hardware stores also sell a product called EZ Deck Vinyl/Stucco Cleaner that is applied with a sprayer, then rinsed off with a hose.

If you intend to scrub with a brush, use soft-bristled brush such as the car-washing brushes available at auto-parts stores. These have long handles, that will extend your reach.

The following homemade cleaning solution is recommended for dirty vinyl siding by the Vinyl Siding Institute, a trade group in New York City: Mix 1/3 cup of powdered detergent (Tide, Fab) and 2/3 cup of household cleaner (Solaux, Spic & Span) in a gallon of water. Apply the solution with a cloth or brush, then rinse.

Always start at the bottom when cleaning a dirty wall. If you start at the top, dirty water will run over the dirt bottom portion and cause streaks that are very difficult to remove. Dirty water running over a cleaned portion of wall is easily rinsed off.

Q. We are thinking of having our basement window wells sealed by filling with concrete to keep water from draining into our basement through the cracks. A contractor suggests digging the wells deeper and filling them with rocks to improve drainage. What do we do? — R. Goldsborough

A. I think these are pretty drastic solutions. If rain water or water from melting snow drains into your basement through window wells, it is often possible to halt the drainage by installing transparent covers over the well openings, which help keep out rain, snow and debris. Well covers in standard sizes are available at some home centers and building-supply dealers. Custom-made covers are available from Dilworth Manufacturing Co., Box 158, Honey Brook, Pa. 19344; write for information or call 717-354-8956.

Q. We painted our concrete garage floor with deck paint, but the paint peeled where the tires rest. What did we do wrong? — Saul

A. Tires contain compounds that can soften and loosen floor paint unless special precautions are taken or special paint is used. Sometimes, if regular porch-and-deck paint is used, it is necessary to wait a month or so before parking on the painted surface, but other cases can be more complicated.

Remember: In design, accommodate growing old

Orange County Register

Aging is not something most of us like to think about. We get old — or more politically correct, mature? Get a life.

But, whether we want to think about it or not, the facts are the facts. It is projected that by the year 2030, the percentage of those 65 and older in the United States will increase to almost 25 percent of the population.

And, a recent membership poll by the American Association of Retired Persons indicates that 86 percent want to remain in their homes as they get older, commonly referred to as "aging in place."

From a design standpoint, the question then becomes this: How do we adapt our living spaces to the fact that we are getting older and our bodies are operating at a lower gear?

The ASID Report is a publication of the American Society of Interior Designers, and the January/February issue contains a bunch of good information on how we can make our living spaces work for us instead of against us. The information is aimed at working designers, but can work just as well for all of us.

Lighting. Norey Linda Blue, a Scarsdale, N.Y., designer, is a major consideration when dealing with aging and the potential for diminished eyesight.

Create balanced light, she advised. Be aware that shadow and glare can cause distractions that affect balance, orientation, attention span and short-term memory.

To reduce glare, use materials that are poor reflectors, such as textured surfaces. Avoid shiny surfaces on walls, floors, cabinets, tables and countertops.

Also, put a night light on the path to the bathroom from the bedroom and install illuminated wall switches in the bedroom to aid in the adjustment from light to dark.

At the entry to the house, place a light switch just inside the door at door-handle level for ease of reach and safety purposes.

On the color front, bright shades and distinct contrast are best, said McLean, Va., designer Martha Clark. Different intensities help people with sight problems see where the floor ends and the wall begins.

If you plan to use carpet, look for styles that have strong color borders to separate transition areas from one room or space to another. Patterns on carpet make those with limited sight dizzy when they walk.

To avoid mishaps in the kitchen, install Kanohe, Hawaii, designer Karen Barozzi, counters should have rounded edges. If there's a wheelchair in the household, counters should be at wheelchair height with deep knee spaces.

A smart choice for wallcovering is vinyl, which is easy to maintain and is available in many colors.

Patterned fabrics in deep jewel tones are a good choice for upholstered furniture pieces because the colors and patterns help mask stains.

And seating should have arms plus firm upholstery so that people can raise and lower themselves easily. Furniture seats should be at least 19 inches off the floor for the same reason.

Furnishings with curved backs also can be a plus because curved backs help to support the body.

Designers critique White House

Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — When the president and the first lady made their changes to the White House's living quarters, they called upon Kaki Hockersmith, the Little Rock, Ark.-based designer who had redecorated the Clinton's family quarters in the Arkansas governor's mansion in 1990.

Featured in the March issue of House Beautiful magazine, with a cover shot of Hillary Rodham Clinton posing in the West Sitting Hall, are photographs of the family quarters and the Oval Office.

The feature, produced by editor Peggy Kennedy, details the year of refurbishment that awaited the 45-year-old Hockersmith. According to Kennedy, House Beautiful has received considerable response from its readers regarding the feature, but the reaction hasn't been from a design point of view.

Chicago designers, however, don't seem to care too much about the political aspects. They do have lots to say about the $396,000 redecoration job, financed entirely by private funding.

Here are excerpts from conversations with professionals.

JOAN KAUFMAN: "One has to be politically correct here and I think she's (Hockersmith) an ASID (American Society of Interior Designers) member," said Kaufman of Interior Planning & Design Inc., Wheaton. "I've heard people say, 'It looks like the president's living in a museum.' And Kaki's answer was, 'It is a museum.' I'm glad she was sensitive to that."

JOHN MACMILLAN: "If bad taste were a treasonable offense, Hockersmith would be doing life in Leavenworth (the federal prison in Kansas)," says MacMillan, a Chicago interior designer. "It's 1600 Tobacco Road, not 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.; it looks like a 'Gone With the Wind' rummage sale," he says, citing the clashing fabrics in the Lincoln Sitting Room.

RICHARD "BUZZ" NORTON: "Luckily there's no burden of knowledge to complicate the thrust," says Norton, dean of Chicago antique dealers and owner of Richard Norton Inc., located in the Merchandise Mart.

Beauty in trees runs deeper than leaves

Orlando Sentinel

Many trees have interesting bark, but perhaps you haven't noticed. Usually hidden beneath a canopy of foliage, the inner beauty of a tree easily is overlooked.

The bark of deciduous trees is most noticeable during the fall and winter, when the leaves have dropped, and during early spring as new growth is beginning. It's the best time to study the tan to cinnamon crappe myrtle trunks, dark brown corky ridges of winged elm and coppery gray bark of the weeping mulberry.

Trees with interesting bark make nice specimen plants for areas of the landscape that need color during the dormant season," said Shaun Martin, botanical specialist at Harry P. Lee Gardens in Orlando, Fla. Barks also may display peeling, chunky or smooth growth characteristics to catch your attention, he said.

Some barks are so unusual that gardeners may think they have discovered a pest clinging to the limbs.

The corky ridges popping out from sweet gum twigs are often mistaken for scale insects, but it's just part of the tree's beauty.

You also can look for the flaking bark of the wild black cherry, which turns a slate gray color, or take time to study the splotchy gray to tan patterns created along the trunk of the wax myrtle. Other barks that are more noticeable before the leaves fully develop include the smooth reddish-brown bark of the flatwoods plum and the shredding deep brown bark of the bald cypress.

A few trees have bark features that can be seen through the canopy of foliage. The open growth habit of the sycamore reveals the tan sheets of bark peeling from the tree's creamy white trunk. The Chinese elm also produces obvious gray and cinnamon patterns along the trunk as the bark flakes.

Evergreen trees may have interesting bark, but it's harder to get a good look at the trunk because the leaf cover is almost constant.

Coffee stays hotter with cream

Not all who drink their coffee black know that you put cream in coffee to keep it hot. Cream first cools it just enough, then forms an insulating layer of fat molecules across the surface to hold in the heat that's left. Elders believed thunder sounded milk. They were almost right. High humidity in summer thunder storms lets bacteria form quickly. Bacteria convert milk sugar to lactic acid. That does the souring.

Q. In what subject, statistically, is a student most likely to get an "A"?

A. American History. That subject in which said student is most likely to get an "F" in English.

Q. How did the Ozarks get that name?

A. Arkansas Indians lived there, so the French called it "aux Arkansas." Anglos cut it to "aux Arcs." It just kept getting tightened up, finally into Ozarks.

Q. What's the largest tree-flowing river left in the contiguous United States?

A. The 571-miles-of the Yellowstone. Shoppers used to be leary of grocery carts. For most mysterious reasons. Many refused to use them back in the 1930s after Sylvan N. Goldman invented the first of same. So it was the job of the grocery boys in numerous markets not just to carry out the sacks, but to tag along with the shoppers, pushing their carts through the aisles as they picked out the goods.

Ballplayers, a monkey, blimp tout food labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball stars Roger Clemens and Kirby Puckett are teaming up with the Goodyear blimp and Curious George, the storybook monkey, to get out the word that new food labels are on the way.

They're helping introduce the Food and Drug Administration's "Nutrition Facts" label that manufacturers must start using by May 8 — the first major change in food labels since they were introduced in the 1970s.

Ten years in the making, the labels are designed to show health-conscious consumers how particular foods, fat and don't fit — into their diets.

"The new food label represents nothing less than an enormous public health opportunity that comes only rarely," FDA Commissioner David Kessler said in announcing the public awareness campaign today.

"Using the new label, Americans will be able to make truly informed choices about the foods they eat."

The new label has standardized serving sizes that are considered larger and more realistic than what many companies use. A single serving is 18 potato chips, for example, instead of eight.

It also features a larger, easier-to-read type, and highlights information on calories and the amounts of dietary fat, sodium, cholesterol, fiber and nutrients per serving in bold print.

That information is also listed as a percentage of a person's daily intake and not by the number of milligrams per serving, which meant little to average shoppers.

Food manufacturers must begin using the new label next Sunday, although some makers have already begun including it on their packages.

"Americans are becoming increasingly more health-conscious and we are demanding more information," said

Food and Drug Administration Commissioner David Kessler explains the new food labels that manufacturers must start using by May 8.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala. "The new food label tells us the kind of information we need to make informed healthy choices about the foods we eat."

Clemens, a pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, and Kirby Puckett, a Minnesota Twins outfielder, will appear in a public service announcement the FDA has given the television networks.

The agency has also given the spots to major league baseball and several teams have agreed to air them on the slogan, "The New Food Label: Check It Out" on their scoreboards, FDA spokesman Jim O'Hara said Sunday.

Curious George, the monkey made famous in a series of children's books, will serve as mascot and will appear in educational material developed and targeted at elementary school children.

Three Goodyear blimps will also carry the message.

The baseball players, Curious George and Goodyear are donating their time to the government, which has already spent $1.5 million over the past three years developing the label, O'Hara said.

"We thought that it was important to highlight in this visible way the label and education activities that will make the label truly useful for consumers," he said.

Franchisee pushes KFC to try recipe

Knight-Ridder News Service

Every day, KFC sells $2 million worth of chicken that bears Col. Harland D. Sanders' name, but not his recipe.

The product is a 3-pound roasted bird called Colonel's Rotisserie Gold; the man behind it is John Marsella, a suburban KFC franchisee who spent two years trying to convince corporate executives they would strike gold with his version of fried chicken.

Marsella doesn't have the name recognition that Col. Sanders does. But in seven months' time, he has made KFC — best known for fried chicken — a major player in the rotisserie chicken league.

Since its nationwide introduction last September, $500 million worth of CRG — that's company shorthand for Colonel's Rotisserie Gold — has been sold. CRG currently represents 20 percent of all KFC chicken sales, within three years, Marsella expects that figure to climb to 50 percent.

Yet few people know he's the guy behind it all. Not long ago, when Marsella's youngest son mentioned an elementary school that his dad was also the father of Rotisserie Gold, the response was "Yeah, right."

"He came home one day and he asked me, 'Dad, do you have any proof you did that?'" Marsella, 48, recounted with great amusement. "I thought about it a minute, and I said, 'No, I don't.' He said, 'Well, then they're never going to believe me.'"

Marsella subsequently won an innovator award from KFC. His son took it to school and proudly showed it to the cynics.

More recently, Marsella received another honor: a Best New Product award from the American Marketing Association. "The most satisfying thing about this," he said, "is that I proved I was able to fuck the system."

earned a liberal arts degree from LaSalle University, learned to motivate people during a stint in the Marine Corps, and first entered the fast-food lane as an assistant management trainee in the mid-1970s with Gino's Restaurants. There, he climbed the corporate ladder and began learning about product development.

Marsella's career took an entrepreneurial turn when he joined KFC in 1981. Within nine years, he and a partner bought 15 stores in suburban Philadelphia; all were sold back to the corporation in 1990.

Marsella currently owns four KFC franchises in New Jersey with another partner, Jim Nasuti of Radnor, Pa. Nasuti, an attorney, handles the administrative side of their business, while Marsella tends to hands-on chores and ponders new product possibilities.

It was Nasuti who conceived the idea for what would become Rotisserie Gold. Working in a Philadelphia law office, he frequently lunched at the Reading Terminal Market. Being in the chicken business, he couldn't help but notice the crowds that flocked to Diener's Barbecue Chicken, a takeout rotisserie chicken stall.

The customers were old and young, men and women, singles and families, of every ethnic persuasion. KFC had been testing various types of non-fried chicken since 1987; Nasuti and Marsella were convinced this was it.

Marsella called KFC's research and development headquarters in Louisville and asked if they had done any studies in rotisserie chicken.

"The answer was: Nothing. I was shocked," Marsella said. At the same time, he was excited, because he knew he and Nasuti had the concept to themselves.

But there was resistance at the top. An executive who has since left the company wanted to stake the future on a skinless baked chicken breast called Monterey Boil. It was in the test-marketing stages and national introduction looked imminent.

The challenge was to develop a rotisserie chicken that would cook quickly, stay moist, and be standardized so that every one from Oregon to New York would look and taste exactly the same.

Marsella searched out computerized convection equipment that could cook whole chickens in an hour and 20 minutes; developed a marinade and seasoning recipe, wrote an operations and marketing plan — and still met resistance, because rotisserie chicken wasn't "new."

After calling headquarters every week for five months, Marsella got the go-ahead to test-market rotisserie chicken at his Hamilton franchise. The executive who gave the reluctant OK gave it a 5 percent chance of success.

Kentucky Rotisserie Chicken made its debut in April 1992. With no advertising — and no start-up money from KFC — sales at the start-up store jumped 12 percent within two weeks, at a time when they were down 10 to 12 percent nationwide.

The corporation took note. Executives dropped in for a taste. Test marketing was expanded to 120 stores in July 1993. The original seasoning recipe was toned down after surveys showed it contained too much garlic and paprika for Midwestern tastes.

Colonel's Rotisserie Gold went national in September in all 5,100 KFC stores in the United States with a $100 million startup budget.

Marsella and Nasuti will soon open other KFCs. And Marsella has a few new products up his lightly-starched sleeve: rotisserie-cooked turkey breasts and jumbo wings.

Government labels more confusing

I should have known the government would have difficulty making anything less confusing.

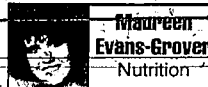

In an attempt to eliminate the confusion over what foods contain and which are healthier than others, a new federal law dictates that food processors must begin using new, standard food labels by Sunday.

So what's the skinny on these new labels? What changes are helpful, which ones are confusing? A little bit of both, in my opinion.

Standardized serving sizes. Servings for various products have been set by the Food and Drug Administration, making it easier to compare the nutrition of different brands. This standardization also forces manufacturers to give more realistic serving sizes. For example, one serving of potato chips is 18 chips rather than eight. (After all, who can eat just eight?)

More information on fat. Not only will total fat be listed but also will be saturated fat. No, this is not a new kind of fat, but it is the key player in raising blood cholesterol and risk of heart disease. Also included will be the number of calories supplied by the fat.

More information on fiber. This will be listed under the carbohydrate heading and includes both soluble and insoluble kinds of dietary fiber.

Maureen Evans-Grover Nutrition

Grandma called it "roughage," and her advice to eat more is still correct.

New definitions. Suddenly, several new vague terms such as "light," "high fiber" and "low fat" take on specific meanings. For example, any food claiming to be a "lite" must contain a third fewer calories or half the fat of the original food. "Fat free" or "sugar free" foods must have less than half of gram of each. (Warning: Restaurants will still be able to use these terms any way they like.)

Daily values. Some of the most vital information on existing and new labels is how much fat, cholesterol, sodium, fiber and nutrients are in each serving. These will no longer be listed in milligrams, which is Greek to most people, but as a simple percentage of a person's daily allotment.

What's confusing? Daily values. The percent of daily values listed on the new labels is based on a 2,000-calorie diet. These daily values can be misleading if people misread it to mean that a food contains only 10 percent fat when it really means it is 10 percent of your total fat intake for the whole day. Also of concern is the fact that many people don't need 2,000 calories a day. The average American who doesn't exercise much needs maybe 1,800 or even fewer calories, and adjusting the daily value figures on the labels may be too difficult or time-consuming for the average person.

Missing Vitamin E and zinc. I would like to have seen the labels include more nutrients such as Vitamin E and zinc. Because Vitamin E is found in fats and oils and red meat is a good source of zinc, these key nutrients are being cut from many people's diets who are eliminating oils and red meat as a way of reducing fat.

No distinction between polyunsaturated and mono-unsaturated fats. Lumping these two types of fats together in the same category is another disappointment. Mono-unsaturated fats (such as olive and canola oils) don't promote artery clogging in the heart or fat-related cancers. Consumers should be aware that labeling is voluntary for fresh meat, poultry, fish, fruits and vegetables. Also, small businesses such as delicatessens are exempt from the law.

Maureen Evans-Grover writes on nutritional issues. She has a bachelor's degree in journalism and a minor in nutrition. Her column appears once a month in The Times-News.

A $250 cookie recipe — for free

The Washington Post

An urban myth — the $250 Neiman Marcus cookie recipe — has hit the newest form of communication, the Internet.

Although the details of the story differ from year to year, the gist of the story is this: After a nice lunch at the top, retailer's restaurant, a Houston shopper asks to buy the recipe for the Neiman Marcus cookie.

"Sure," the waitress says. "For two fifty." Fine, the shopper replies, "Just add a tiny tab." But when the bill arrives later that month, the shopper finds out the charge was $250, not $250. The store refuses to change the bill: "All the recipes were this expensive so not just everyone could duplicate any of our bakery recipes," the shopper is told. So she sends copies to everyone to "get even."

The story circulates once a year, and once a year, Pogue says, the store issues the same reply.

This time she did it by fax: "We have never heard of this cookie — we don't sell our recipes. We give them away, upon request."

Likewise, we pass on the recipe, as well as the infamous Neiman Marcus tale — even though we also have no idea where it came from.

THE NOT EXACTLY NEIMAN

MARCUS COOKIE

(Makes 3 dozen cookies)

2½ cups oatmeal

1 cup (2 sticks) butter

1 cup brown sugar, packed

1 cup granulated white sugar

2 eggs

1 teaspoon vanilla

2 cups flour

½ teaspoon salt

1 teaspoon baking powder

1 teaspoon baking soda

12-ounce package (2 cups) chocolate chips

4-ounce Hershey Bar, grated

¾ cups chopped walnuts or pecans

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Process oatmeal in blender or food processor until oatmeal turns into a fine powder. Set aside.

Cream the butter with both sugars.

Add eggs, one at a time, then the vanilla.

Add flour, salt, baking powder, baking soda and the oatmeal.

Stir in the chocolate chips, grated Hershey Bar and nuts.

Roll into balls and place 2 inches apart on a cookie sheet. Bake for 10 minutes.

3 more World Cup games sold out

NEW YORK — Three more World Cup games sold out Monday, including the first involving the United States team.

The sellouts announced Tuesday are Colombia-United States at Pasadena, Calif., on June 22, Nigeria-Greece at Foxboro, Mass., on June 30 and the second-round game at Washington on July 2.

Nineteen of 48 games during the first three rounds have sold out, and about 160,000 of 450,000 tickets put on sale Sunday have been sold, U.S. World Cup officials said Tuesday.

No tickets remain for games involving Italy, Ireland, Mexico and Norway. Tickets still remained Tuesday for the United States' opener against Switzerland at Pontiac, Mich., on June 18 and its game against Romania at Pasadena, Calif., on June 26.

Major league to announce All-Star teams on TV

NEW YORK — Major league baseball will announce its All-Star teams on national television for the first time, releasing the final vote totals for starters along with the chosen pitchers and reserves on July 3.

The announcement will be made on NBC during a one-hour program scheduled to start at 5 p.m. EDT. The game is scheduled for July 12 at Pittsburgh, also on NBC.

In the past, starters were announced on one day, with pitchers and reserves announced a day or two later.

Viacom considers selling Madison Square Garden

NEW YORK — Viacom Inc. said Tuesday it is considering selling Madison Square Garden and the arena's two primary occupants — the New York Knicks and New York Rangers.

The company said it has received "expressions of interest from a number of parties" since it bought a majority stake in March in Paramount Communications Inc., the previous owner of the Garden.

A sale could generate cash to reduce the estimated $8 billion in debt that Viacom, a cable TV and media company, was left with after the Paramount deal.

There has been speculation the Garden could attract a bid of up to $1 billion, reflecting the supposed ego gratification that owning a pro sports team carries for some potential buyers.

Baseball roundups — D3

CHICAGO — The Chicago Cubs have tried almost everything — changing uniforms, holding chats with fans, juggling the batting order. Still, they can't win at home in 1994.

They broke a 92-year-old club record by losing their 12th consecutive home game, falling to the Cincinnati Reds 5-2 Tuesday as Tony Fernandez and Hal Morris drove in two runs apiece.

The previous record was set in 1902, when the Cubs played at West Side Grounds. The previous Wrigley Field record was 10. The NL mark is 14 by the 1911 Boston Braves.

"You have to think about the (NL) record," said Cubs manager Tom Trebelhorn. "It's getting urgent for all of us."

The players are frustrated, too. "We're trying hard but nothing helps," said pitcher Jose Bautista. "When we pitch good, we don't hit. When we hit, we don't get the pitching. We need our starters to go six innings."

Trebelhorn, who turned in new uniforms on Monday, juggled his lineup Tuesday. Sammy Sosa moved from fifth to leadoff, Karl Rhodes dropped to second and Ryne Sandberg went from second to fifth in the batting order.

But starting pitching failed again, dropping to 4-14 this season. Mike Morgan (0-4) gave up four runs and seven hits in four innings, struck out three and walked one.

"When this team was going good, like in 1992, I'd win that game 5-4," said Morgan, who knows about losing. "I was on the Baltimore team (in 1988) that lost 21 in a row."

Erk Hanson (2-1) allowed two runs — one earned — and six hits in five innings. Jeff Brantley pitched the ninth for his third save.

"I didn't have my good stuff today but I hung in there," said Hanson, who didn't want to be the guy who lost the first home at Chicago in 1994. "It's in the back of your mind. You don't want to be that guy."

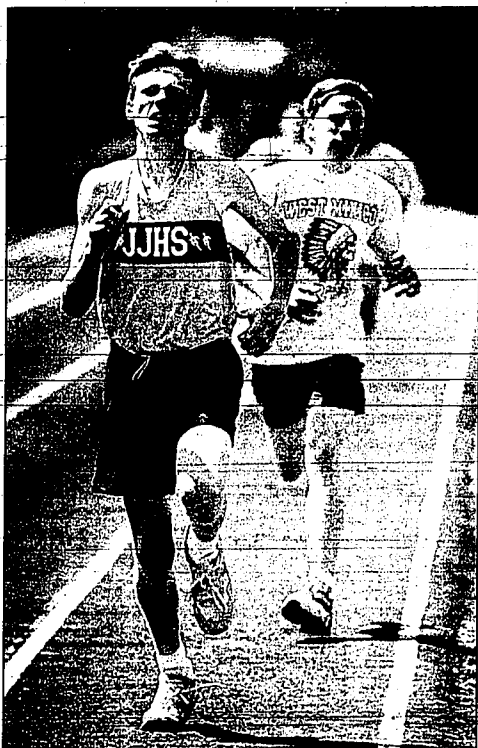

The Reds sympathize with the Cubs. "We went through a streak where we lost nine or 10 in a row. They just have to bear it. They are going to win. They are a good team," said Barry Larkin, who had two of Cincinnati's 11 hits.

Cincinnati went ahead 3-0 in the second. Fernandez, 6-for-10 with nine RBIs against Chicago this season, doubled in the first run and Morris drove in two with a bases-loaded single.

NBA names Webber top rookie of year

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Chris Webber, who helped make the Golden State Warriors the league's most improved team, Tuesday was named the NBA's rookie of the year.

The first of Michigan's Fab Five to play in the NBA and the youngest player in the league this season, Webber edged Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway, the player Golden State drafted third and sent to the Magic for the rights to Webber, the No. 1 selection last year.

Webber received 53 votes to 47 for Hardaway in balloting by a panel of sports writers and broadcasters. It was the closest vote since 1981, when Darrell Griffith of Utah beat Portland's Kevin Ranney by one vote. Jamal Mashburn of Dallas got the remaining vote.

Webber, who went to the Final Four twice with Michigan before heading to the NBA, said he considered the award "definitely one of my highest basketball memories."

"He's no longer a rookie. He's a pro," Golden

State coach Don Nelson said. "There isn't anything the guy won't be able to do in another couple of years. He's got a chance to be the best power forward that ever played the game."

Webber is the fourth straight No. 1 pick to become rookie of the year, following Shaquille O'Neal (1993), Larry Johnson (1992) and Derrick Coleman (1991).

Webber teamed on the job against the likes of Charles Barkley and Hakeem Olajuwon in helping the Warriors return to the playoffs, despite the absence of Tim Hardaway and Sarunas Marciulionis, who missed the season because of knee injuries.

Utah resort realigns lift for ski championships

The Associated Press

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The U.S. Ski Team has announced it will hold next year's U.S. National Alpine downhill and "Super G" championships at Snowbasin Ski Resort east of Ogden.

The race, scheduled for March 23-24, will require the resort to realign a proposed new ski lift on John Paul Peak to meet the requirements of the racecourse designer, Bernard Russi.

Russi, a 1972 Olympic downhill gold medalist from Switzerland, designed the downhill course used this year at the Lillehammer Olympics. Russi toured the site in March with Snowbasin officials and Ogden-U.S. Forest District Ranger Randy Welsh.

"Russi said the lift was a distraction to racers," Welsh said. "The lift was realigned for safety and aesthetic reasons."

The realignment must be approved by the Forest Service. Welsh said the proposal is now being evaluated and that a study document will be released for public comment by the end of May.

Snowbasin's original alignment began lower on the mountain near the base of the Porcupine lift. The new proposal calls for locating the fixed-grip quad chairlift higher on the mountain in Mount Ogden bowl. It will terminate at the original location.

Welsh said the Forest Service's final decision will be made by late June or early July. A mandatory 45-day appeal period follows the decision, so work on the new lift couldn't begin before August, Welsh said.

The race was held in Winter Park, Colo., last year.

Rodman may be 'punk', but he's only band leader

By Rich Hofmann

Commentary

PHILADELPHIA — NBC's Bob Costas called Dennis Rodman a "punk." He said it on national television Saturday afternoon, right after Rodman nudged out his knee in the direction of a cutting John Stockton, pretty obviously attempting to injure Stockton — and succeeding.

Stockton, of the Utah Jazz, had to leave the game. Rodman of the San Antonio Spurs, was ejected minutes later for a different transgression. Everybody saw what he did to Stockton — it was subtle, but clear. Everybody saw it, except the officials. Anyway, Costas saw it and said it. Punk. That was the word.

Now, this isn't exactly on the scale of Walter Cronkite stepping out from behind his anchor desk in the late '60s and wondering aloud if the Vietnam War was a lost cause. Still, there had to be some trembling in the NBA offices in New York.

Costas is, far and away, the most respected sports-television journalist in the country — and deservedly so. In fact, based upon his acclaimed interview show, "Later," he is probably in the top handful of television newscasters/interviewers in the nation; sports or otherwise. When Costas talks, everybody does listen.

Punk. This was punk weekend, all around the NBA playoffs. Maybe it's because the whole thing is so wide open now that Michael Jordan is a baseball player. Maybe it's a natural progression when the stakes get higher (although the opposite happens in hockey during the playoffs — fighting goes down). Maybe it's just a reaction to the defensive edge this league has acquired in recent years.

Whatever it is, almost every one of these playoff games seems to teeter on the edge of emotional control. And when the bonds break — as they did this weekend in San Antonio, Atlanta and New York, to varying degrees the result is really scary. It's much scarier, frankly, than wrestling bears on skates.

Right now, not only is the NBA on TNT — the NBA is TNT. And so, the league has acted. Following the weekend's main event, a bench-clearing brawl between the Atlanta Hawks and the Miami Heat, NBA vice president of operations/dean of discipline Rod Thorn announced a round of fines and suspensions for the house.

Grant Lough touched off the brawl with a foul against the Hawks' Duane Ferrell. Long

Buckner fired after 1st year

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Quinn Buckner, accused by the club owner of fostering widespread discontent on the team, was fired Tuesday after coaching the Dallas Mavericks to the worst record in the NBA this season.

Buckner had four years left on his contract. His team went 13-69 in a season marked by a chorus of complaints from his best players — rookie Jamal Mashburn, Jim Jackson and Derek Harper, later traded to the New York Knicks.

"It wasn't just the young players," Mavericks owner Donald Carter said. "Let's face it, it was young and old."

Carter said Buckner tried to change but couldn't. "I think I saw changes in his personality but there weren't enough times there that we could get the bridges built," Carter said.

Said Buckner: "We had a great run. It was fun and I'm sorry it didn't work out. It was a great experience. I learned a lot about myself and I learned a lot about people. I wish the Mavericks the best of luck in their quest for a championship."

Dick Motta, who coached the Mavericks from 1980 to 1987, is the top candidate to replace Buckner.

Buckner

Buckner, 39, brought a history of winning to the Mavericks. He played on an NCAA championship team at Indiana and spent 10 years in the NBA, winning a championship with the 1983-84 Boston Celtics. He also earned a gold medal on the 1976 U.S. Olympic team.

When he left NBC-TV as an NBA analyst to sign a five-year contract with the Mavericks March 4, 1993, Buckner said, "The Mavericks will play hard, play smart, and have fun."

It didn't happen. Rick Sund, then the team's vice president of basketball operations, had said of Buckner: "I recommended Quinn for the job because I feel his ability to lead is one of his outstanding qualities."

Sund was fired last month. Carter said the remainder of Buckner's contract will be honored. Asked if Buckner would take another job in the organization, Carter said, "He has not applied for any."

Carter said he made the decision to fire the coach after four days of meetings.

Buhl sweeps Wendell with grand slam Atlanta falls to Heat without fight, 90-86

The Times-News

BUILH — Michelle Kippes hit a slam home run to key even seventh inning and complete a doubleheader sweep of Wendell in girls' softball on Tuesday.

Buhl pulled out a 17-6 win in the second game after downing Wendell 7-5 in the first game.

Kippes' shot tied the game at 10. Three batters later, the Trojans' 13th error of the game led in the winning run. Buhl scored six of the seven runs in the last inning after two were out. Wendell led the contest 1-0 after three and one-half innings.

Sarah Thornborough led the Indian attack, going 3-for-4.

Andrea Bohman went 3-for-3 to lead Buhl to a 7-5 win in the first game.

Atlanta falls to Heat

without fight, 90-86

MIAMI (AP) — Steve Smith scored 25 points, including three free throws in the final 18 seconds Tuesday night, leading Miami's tight 90-86 victory over Atlanta that gave the Heat a 2-1 lead in their first-round playoff series.

With one more victory, Miami would become the first No. 8 seed to beat a No. 1 seed in NBA history. Game 4 in the best-of-5 series will be Thursday.

Giants slam Mets with 9th inning run

NEW YORK (AP) — Barry Bonds—sacrifice fly—capped a two-run ninth inning rally against John Franco of the New York Mets.

Pinch-hitter Joe Orsulak hit a grand slam in the seventh inning to give the Mets a 5-4 lead before Franco (0-1) blew it.

Dave Martinez singled to open the ninth and Jeff Bagwell pinch-hitting for Mike Jackson (2-0), singled to put runners at first and third. Darren Lewis hit an infield grounder to score Martinez to tie it at 5.

Dodgers 10, Expos 4
MONTREAL — Orel Hershisser scattered seven hits in 7 1/3 innings and drove in two runs.

Jose-Offerman drove in a career-high four runs, and Mike Piazza hit a two-run homer and two doubles as Los Angeles won a 17-hit attack to end Montreal's six-game winning streak.

Hershisser (2-0) carried a four-hitter into the eighth before allowing a two-run homer to Mike Lansing.

Los Angeles broke a 2-2 tie with a four-run fourth. Raul Mondesi singled off Rodney Henderson (0-1) to open the inning, score second and scored on Offerman's triple.

Marlins 6, Braves 3
ATLANTA — Chuck Carr had Florida's first five-hit game and the Marlins moved two games over .500 for the first time in their two-year history.

The Braves have lost four straight and nine of 11, their worst skid since April 13-24-1992 when they lost five of seven games.

Charlie Hough (3-0) limited the Braves to four hits over six innings before giving up a two-run homer to Charlie O'Brien in the seventh.

Hough, 46, in his 24th major league season, last beat the Braves on Sept. 17, 1979, when he was

Strawberry expected to leave rehab soon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Darryl Strawberry is expected to be released from a drug treatment center in a matter of days. However, the lawyer for the Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder will not speculate on when he might play.

"The reports I have indicate he's doing exceedingly well in rehabilitation," Bob Shapiro told The Associated Press on Tuesday. "His total focus now is on rehabilitation and after-care, and he looks forward to sobriety the rest of his life."

Asked when Strawberry will be released, Shapiro said, "I can't answer that because I don't know."

Strawberry, 32, entered a treatment center April 8. Generally, the first phase of rehabilitation in most situations involves about four weeks in a facility, followed by an after-care program.

"His after-care will be determined by his doctors, whose advice he will follow," Shapiro said.

Shapiro said he hasn't spoken with

Astros 7, Pirates 4
PITTSBURGH — Doug Drabek survived a bullpen scare to win in Pittsburgh for the first time since leaving the Pirates and Andruw Cedeno hit a two-run homer.

Drabek (3-1), over .500 for the first time since departing Pittsburgh to sign with Houston before the 1993 season, left with a 6-2 lead after scattering eight hits over seven innings. The Pirates scored twice in the eighth against Mike Hampton, but Tom Edens worked out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam and Mitch Williams pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Craig Biggio doubled in a run in the Astros' two-run fourth inning off Zane Smith (3-2).

Padres 8, Phillies 3
PHILADELPHIA — A.J. Sager earned his first major-league win and Tony Gwynn homered, as the Padres ended their five-game losing streak.

For the third straight game between the two teams, there were problems with close pitches. Andy Carter made his debut in the majors in the seventh inning for Philadelphia and was ejected after hitting two batters.

Phillies manager Jim Fregosi was ejected for arguing with plate umpire Jim Quick. Phil Phanter of the Padres was hit by David West in the ninth, but there was no trouble.

On Monday night, the benches erupted after Mariano Duncan tried to charge Padres pitcher Andy Axtby after a knockdown. A week ago Sunday in San Diego, Gwynn had words with Curt Schilling after being hit.

Sager (1-2) shut out the Phillies on two hits for 4 2/3 innings.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Greg Vaughn, who made the final out of Scott Erickson's no-hitter last week, drove in five runs with a homer and double Tuesday night as the Milwaukee Brewers rocked Erickson and beat the Minnesota Twins 7-6.

Erickson (2-4) reverted to his old habit self, allowing nine hits and seven runs in five innings. Erickson, who led baseball in his allowed and losses in 1993 and brought a 7.48 ERA into Wednesday's 6-0 win over Milwaukee, still hasn't won consecutive decisions since September 1992.

His chances of duplicating Johnny Vander Meer's 1938 feat of consecutive no-hitters ended on the second pitch, when Darryl Hamilton beat out a high-chopper to the mound. Turner Ward singled with one out before Vaughn hit his third homer for a 3-2 lead.

Kirby Puckett homered and Jeff Brackley got his first save.

Strawberry or the Dodgers since the player entered the treatment center. Shapiro wouldn't say where Strawberry is being treated, although reportedly in Rancho Mirage, Calif.

Strawberry failed to appear for the Dodgers' final exhibition game April 3. The following day, a day before the Dodgers opened their season, he admitted to having a substance abuse dependency.

Fred Claire, the Dodgers executive vice-president, has not said what the team plans to do when Strawberry is ready to return.

The Dodgers are paying Strawberry $3 million this season and owe him another $5 million for next season, the final year of the five-year, $20.25 million contract he signed before the 1991 season.

Blue Jays 1, Royals 0
TORONTO — Pat Hentgen struck out a team-record 14 and pitched a two-hitter for the first shutout of his career, leading the Toronto Blue Jays over Kansas City.

Kevin Appier (2-3) lost despite pitching a three-hitter and striking out 10. Joe Carter drove in the only run with an infield single in the fourth inning.

Hentgen (4-2) broke the club record for strikeouts of 12, shared by Pete Vukovich, Jim Clancy and Tom Candiotti. He struck out the side in the first and eighth innings.

The shutout came in Hentgen's 41st career start. He walked two in his third complete game of the season. His 14 strikeouts were the most in the majors this season.

Red Sox 7, Mariners 6
BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox lost two pitchers to injuries in the third inning — one of them during a bench-clearing brawl — but came back to beat the Seattle Mariners for their sixth straight win.

Starter Frank Viola, who underwent surgery on his left elbow last Sept. 29, eluded the same elbow after throwing a wild pitch far behind Eric Anthony in the third inning. X-rays were inconclusive, and he was scheduled for an MRI examination Wednesday.

Paul Quantrill-relieved Viola and threw a high-and-tight pitch that sent Anthony to the ground.

Anthony was then intentionally walked, and got halfway to first base when he ran at Quantrill and tackled the pitcher.

Quantrill wound up on the bottom of a pileup. When order was restored, the right-hander left with numbness in his pitching hand. Anthony was ejected.

Bankhead (3-0) pitched 3 1/3 hitless innings for the win. The Mariners scored three times in the ninth, two on a homer by Ken Griffey Jr. Ken Ryan got two outs for his second save. Dave Fleming (2-4) was the loser.

White Sox 12, Indians 1
CHICAGO — Alex Fernandez allowed six hits in eight innings and Frank Thomas hit a three-run homer as the Chicago White Sox beat Cleveland.

Fernandez (3-3) gave up a leadoff homer to Jim Thome in the eighth, snapping his scoreless streak of 19 straight innings. He walked none and struck out five.

Tim Lincecum had three hits, and Robin Ventura had three hits and two RBIs for the White Sox. Jack Morris (1-3) was the loser.

Rangers 7, Tigers 2
DETROIT — Juan Gonzalez had four hits and three RBIs, leading Kevin Brown and the Texas Rangers over Detroit.

Brown (2-4) allowed eight hits — including homers by Mickey Tettleton and Tony Phillips — struck out eight and walked one. It Brown's first complete game of the season and the first by the Rangers.

Jose Canseco homered in sending Tim Lincecum (0-5) to his fifth straight loss, the longest skid of his career.

Tour DuPont will feature 2 former winners

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — For the first time in race history, the Tour DuPont will have two former winners in the field when Raul Alcala and Greg LeMond compete starting Wednesday in the $300,000 cycle race.

Alcala, 30, Mexico, the defending champion, and LeMond, 32, the three-time Tour de France titlist from Medina, Minn., will be among the 112 riders who comprise 10 professional and six amateur teams.

The 12-day, 1,050-mile race, with cyclists from 19 countries, will start with a 2.98-mile prologue, or pre-race, that determines the overall leader for Thursday's 74-mile road race first stage from Dover to Wilmington.

Alcala, a superior climber and time trialist, battles reigning world titlist Lance Armstrong of Austin, Texas, during several mountain stages last year.

But in Greensboro, N.C., Alcala overwhelmed the field during the final-day time trial and won the race over Armstrong by 2 minutes, 26 seconds.

Ironically, Alcala the former team leader of WorldPerfect, signed a contract with Motorola last winter and is now Armstrong's teammate. Alcala also won the Tour DuPont in 1990.

"It's most important for Motorola to win. But I came here to win, too," Alcala, a several time 10-Tour de France finisher, said Tuesday. "I need a win for my motivation."

LeMond will try to regain the prowess that catapulted him to the top of the sport in the late 1980s.

Although he has a combined six Tour de France and World Championship titles, LeMond has had little success since he won the Tour DuPont title two years ago. He rode strongly and finished eighth Sunday in the Union Grand Prix in Atlanta, despite a cracked rear wheel late in the race.

"The competition is a little bit tougher than when I won," said LeMond, whose Tour DuPont win was his first U.S. stage race victory since 1985. "I would like to do well, sure. But I will go for a stage win first, and then wait to see how the others do."

Armstrong, 22, a second-year pro, may be considered the race favorite.

After his second-place Tour DuPont finish last year, Armstrong went on to several victories, including a stage win in the Tour de France and the World Championship road title in Norway last August. Two weeks ago, he finished second in Liege-Bastogne-Liege, the oldest of the famed one-day European classics.

"A lot of people think Raul is riding for Lance to win," said Armstrong. "But I would be happy if Raul won. Except for Raul's win in Mexico (in January), we haven't won a race this year, so it's very important for us."

Johnson joins HBO, but doesn't leave NFL too far behind

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Johnson added HBO to his growing television football duties Tuesday, yet still left open the possibility of returning to the NFL as a coach.

"If the situation's right," he said of coaching again. "But it's got to be right."

Two weeks after joining Fox Sports as an NFL analyst, Johnson, who coached the Dallas Cowboys to the last two Super Bowl titles, was added to the team for HBO's long-running series "Inside The NFL" where he joins Len Dawson, Nick Buonicintini and Cris Collinsworth.

Ross Greenburg, HBO Sports executive producer, who introduced Johnson at a news conference Tuesday, said the one-year contract would not keep Johnson from returning to the sidelines.

"He can become a coach yesterday and we could wish him well," said Greenburg, who refused to say how much Johnson is being paid. "Like Jimmy, I anticipate him coaching again."

Johnson, 50, said he would never have enough money to buy an team and said he would never return to college coaching.

Greenburg said Johnson, who lives in southern Florida, would be seen via satellite from Miami for 16 of the 22 weeks the show is televised.

"For five weeks, we'll be on the road and he'll be with us on the road with our family," Greenburg said.

Jimmy Johnson

Leaving NFL option open
The final week is HBO's pre-Super Bowl show which will be televised Jan. 26, 1995, from Miami.

Johnson said his desire to do "Inside The NFL" figured into his decision to sign with Fox Sports.

"We wanted to make sure we did HBO," he said. "That had a lot of bearing on where we went."

In April, Johnson signed a multi-year contract with Fox Sports as a studio analyst for the network's NFL coverage, reportedly for about $600,000 a year.

Johnson, walked with his almost daily duels with Cowboys owner Jerry Jones, walked away from a team in March that he might have taken to a third straight Super Bowl. His resignation capped a long-standing feud that boiled over in Orlando, Fla., when Jones suggested in a barroom conversation that he might hire a new coach.

Johnson took over a team that had finished 3-13 under Tom Landry in 1988. Things got worse, and in 1989 the Cowboys posted a 1-15 record.

The next year, the team improved to 7-9 and nearly made the playoffs. In 1991, they were 11-5 and in the postseason. The following year, they won all the way, finishing 13-3 in the regular season and swamping Buffalo 52-17 in the Super Bowl.

They repeated this year, again against Buffalo.

He promised to be honest in his commentary.

"I'll bring a sincere enthusiastic approach," he said. "I'll be straightforward and state my opinion."

Johnson has television experience. He had a show 25 years ago when he was a young assistant at Arkansas. He also had shows at Oklahoma State, Miami and with the Cowboys.

Television has been a frequent career change for coaches leaving the NFL. Others who have switched from the field to the TV booth include John Madden, Bill Walsh, Mike Ditka, Bill Parcells and Joe Gibbs.

Walsh and Parcells have returned to coaching.

L.A. Rams look for new home

Knight-Ridder News Service

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The Los Angeles Rams had their attorney deliver a letter and a check for $2 million to Anaheim City Hall Tuesday morning. They are now free agents, and despite what their 19-45 record in the 90's might suggest, they are considered a hot commodity.

With the $2 million payment and a one-paragraph letter sent to Anaheim's mayor, city manager and city council members, the Rams formally gave 15 months' notice of their intention to terminate their Anaheim Stadium lease.

The notice can be revoked any time between now and Aug. 3, 1995. But the Rams aren't likely to do that until they've fielded offers from a number of other cities eager to have an NFL team call their own.

St. Louis and Memphis, all losers in last fall's NFL expansion derby, are considered the frontrunners in this consolation race. San Antonio and Hartford have emerged as longshot entries.

In a brief press release issued Tuesday, the Rams said they have not decided to leave Anaheim, and have not begun negotiations with "any other city or stadium authority."

Tuesday's action was not unexpected. The Rams informed Anaheim officials of their intention of exercising the termination clause in their lease on Jan. 3.

"This notice has been anticipated for some time and therefore comes as no surprise to us," Anaheim city manager James D. Ruth said in a prepared statement. "The City remains open and responsive to exploring options that would keep the Rams in Anaheim. We will continue to work with them in the coming months to identify contractual issues and resolve them in a manner that will satisfy both sides."

But the Rams had hoped that Anaheim would come forward with a proposal to entice them to stay before now. That was the purpose of the move they made in January, informing the city of their intentions.

Said Ruth after receiving the first letter from the Rams in January: "Because this formal notification won't take place until May 3, we now have a window of opportunity to reach some kind of arrangement with the Rams that would keep them in Anaheim."

Based on the contents of the letter we have received, our next step will be to sit down with the Rams and discuss options and needs which could be the basis for a possible resolution of this situation."

Such a meeting never came about, and Anaheim's "window" has apparently been closed. During the past four months, the only agreement reached between the Rams and Anaheim came on a 10-year lease for the club's practice facility. And the heated dispute over that lease was settled only after the Rams were threatened with eviction, and reluctantly agreed to Anaheim's terms.

Anaheim city council members have vowed not to use public money to keep the Rams, and have expressed varying degrees of anger at the negotiating style of John Shaw, the Rams' executive vice president. Shaw retreated into the woodwork Tuesday, telling a Ram spokesman that he would be unavailable for comment.

Even earlier in the week, Shaw said the club was exploring alternatives because Anaheim Stadium has become "economically obsolete" in terms of its ability to generate revenue for the club.

"I do understand the city's (economic) problems," Shaw said. "This stadium does not provide sources of revenue that the new modern stadiums provide, and that's a major problem. That problem comes down to... whether the economics of the facility are antiquated. That really is the larger issue here."

Anaheim officials say they have begun to turn their attention toward leasing an NFL team to replace the Rams should they leave. And, perhaps in an attempt to send a message to Ram management, the city Tuesday issued a press release indicating that it had entered into discussions with the Angels about a renegotiated, more appealing lease. The Angels' current Anaheim Stadium lease runs through 2001.

"We don't let the door hit you on the way out," said Frank Bryant, president of the Ram booster club and a board member of that group since its formation in 1979, hopes not. Bryant wants city officials to recognize the economic impact of losing the Rams might have on Orange County.

"We don't want to see this business leave the county because if they do, the payroll and the jobs go with them," Bryant said. "The ripple effect from those jobs, his people in other industries. There are economic reasons, just like we don't want to see Taco Bell go to Texas. We want to keep as many jobs here as we can."

(The Rams) have a very high payroll. Some of their employees make much higher than average wages, and they buy cars that we don't buy. They spend their money here. If they weren't here, they'd spend it somewhere else."

Trainer's son still will root for Tabasco Cat in Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jeff Lukas doesn't remember the moment on Dec. 15 when Tabasco Cat ran him down. He won't forget the moment Saturday should Tabasco Cat win the Kentucky Derby.

The son of trainer D. Wayne Lukas will be watching the Derby on television from his California home, where he is recovering from brain injuries sustained when Tabasco Cat ran over him in the Santa Anita stable area.

"He's very attuned to what we're doing," Lukas said of his 36-year-old son, who also is his chief assistant. "I talk to him daily."

"I told him to call me and not just read the papers. I want him to get it accurate."

What Lukas has been telling people this week is that "in reality there are only four or five horses that should win the race." He considers Tabasco Cat one of them.

Lukas says his colt's chief rivals are Brocco, winner of the Santa Anita Derby; front-running Holy Bull, winner of the Florida Derby and Blue Grass; Strokes Creek, third in Santa Anita Derby; and Valiant Nature, winner of the Hollywood Futurity and second in the Blue Grass.

Tabasco Cat has won two stakes and finished second in the Santa Anita Derby in three starts this year.

"This is the best chance we've had since Winning Colors," Lukas said Tuesday.

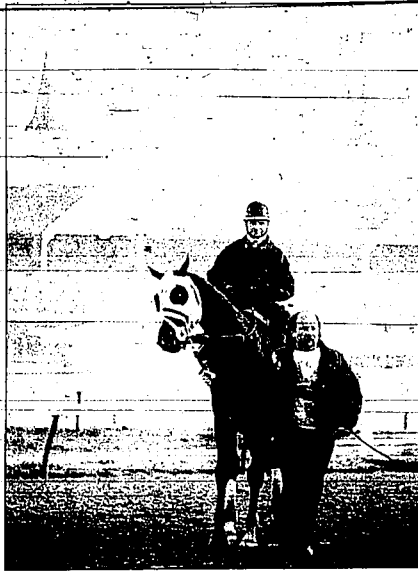

The filly Winning Colors gave Lukas his only Derby win in 1988. Tabasco Cat will be the trainer's 23rd starter in his 14th consecutive Derby.

The record for is 24 held by H.J. "Dick" Thompson from 1920 to 1937.

"The colt's fine," Lukas said. "I've had a great spring with him." Tabasco Cat won three of six starts as a 2-year-old and ended the year with a third behind Brocco and Blumin Affair in the Breeders Cup Juvenile Nov. 6.

The son of Storm Cat stayed near the pace, then won the 1 1/16-mile El Camino Real Derby in his 3-year-old debut Jan. 23 at Bay Meadows. In his next start he led wire-to-wire in the 1-mile San Rafael.

In the Santa Anita Derby, he pressed pace-setter Flyin J. Bryan until taking the lead nearing the quarter pole. He then surrendered to Brocco, and those two battled to wire, with Brocco winning by a half-length.

Lukas said Tabasco Cat, ridden by Pat Day, won't be far off the lead in the Derby. Derby trainers worry that no one will run with Holy Bull and let the big gray dictate the pace.

"In the Derby you tell the riders, 'Don't leave them too much to do. You'd better be in contention at the eighth pole,'" Lukas said.

Others expected to be entered on Thursday for the 121st Derby are Kandaly, Powis Castle, Smilin' Sam, Blumin Affair, Go For Gin, Mahogany Hall, Meadow Flight, Soul Of The Matter, Southern Rhythm and Ulysses.

Kandaly, winner of the Louisiana Derby, worked five-eighths of a mile in 1:01 Tuesday. Powis Castle, second in the Jim Beam, went five-eighths in 1:00 3/5. Smilin' Sam, front-running winner of the Remington Park Derby, moved five-eighths in 1:00 4/5.

Derby can't end songwriter's sleep

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Singer-songwriter Burt Bacharach was due at Churchill Downs on Wednesday for the Kentucky Derby. Trainer Dick Mandella didn't expect him to.

"He doesn't get up very well," said Mandella, who trains Derby contender Soul Of The Matter for Bacharach.

"I called him down at Keeneland before the Lexington, and the hotel wouldn't even put calls through to his room before 10. So I told him later I was going to come beat on his door with a feed tub."

Soul Of The Matter has won two of his four starts this year and is among his victims both Brocco and Valiant Nature, two of the more highly regarded 3-year-old colts in this year's Derby field.

He's easily the best 3-year-old colt

Bacharach has ever owned, although he had the 1983 3-year-old filly champion in Heartlight No. One.

The road to the Kentucky Derby has not been an easy one for Soul Of The Matter. He didn't even get onto the track as a 2-year-old until October, then he cracked a hoof in his first start of 1994, a victory in the Private Cove at Santa Anita on March 5.

Then, on March 20, he met Brocco, last year's Breeders' Cup Juvenile winner, and the horse that beat Brocco last December, Valiant Nature, in the San Felipe at Santa Anita.

Both Brocco and Valiant Nature were slightly off form, and Soul Of The Matter won by 2 1/2 lengths. To help protect Soul Of The Matter's cracked hoof, Mandella put a rubber bell boot over the foot as he prepared him for the Santa Anita Derby.

The bell boot, however, rubbed a blister on his left front foot, and Soul Of The Matter was scratched from the Santa Anita Derby. That meant Soul Of The Matter would have to wait until the Lexington at Keeneland two weeks later on April 24.

"It wasn't that big of a deal," Mandella said. "We'd been looking at the Lexington as a possibility from the beginning anyway."

In the extra two weeks, though, Soul Of The Matter lost some of his conditioning and finished second by 2 1/2 lengths to Southern Rhythm.

"I thought he would relax better, maybe get there, maybe no," Mandella said. "He moved a little quicker than I thought he would, but he ran a good race."

Italian officials probe Senna's death

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — As Italian authorities served notice that his death may be treated as a possible homicide, the body of Ayrton Senna departed Tuesday for Brazil accompanied by reverence usually associated with a fallen hero.

Technical crews in England poured over the information from the "black box" data-logging system from Senna's car, while Italian authorities investigating the crash that killed him continued their investigations.

Federico Bendinelli, managing director of the Sagis company which owns the Imola autodrome, was formally told by police that he was being investigated. Court sources in Bologna said that other track officials would be similarly notified.

The investigation was based on the possibility that the notoriously fast Imola track played a role in the spate of crashes during the Grand Prix weekend.

Race organizers abruptly canceled a scheduled news conference, claiming they could not speak while the investigation continued. Officials with the International Auto Racing Federation (FIA), the sport's governing body, reiterated that the track had passed a safety check last week.

At the Bologna airport, Italian police lined the pathway and presented arms to pay homage to Senna as the three-time world champion's coffin was placed on an Italian air force plane for a flight to Paris.

"I hope the murder of Imola is punished," said Italian Defense Minister Fabio Fabbrì at a political rally in Venice. "The Formula One world is worse than the gladiator's circus."

Fabbrì joined the chorus after one of the most tragic weekends in Formula One history. Austrian rookie Roland Ratzenberger also died in a crash during Saturday's qualifying.

The motor racing world was rife with speculation but short on facts as the investigation continued into the cause of Senna's mysterious crash. Every possibility from a heart attack to a tire-puncturing bolt has been mentioned.

Medical officials made no statement following the autopsy, although the Italian news agency ANSA reported that doctors had ruled out sudden illness before the crash and that "first reports indicate the death was caused by multiple trauma with heart failure."

The Williams-Renault team was trying to find an answer in the black box, hoping the computerized data it contained would provide a clue as to why Senna halted to turn left at the Tamborello curve and instead went head-on into a concrete barrier at about 180 mph.

The team wishes to point out that any theories from any source as to the cause of Ayrton Senna's accident are pure speculation," Williams said in a statement. "A thorough investigation is being undertaken utilizing the available data."

Williams, however, was still unable to examine the wreckage from the car, which has been impounded by Italian authorities pending the investigation.

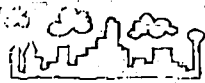

The Simtek Ford team was examining data from the black box from Ratzenberger's car, although television replays appeared to indicate a mechanical fault caused his crash.

Williams and Simtek will present their findings to FIA, which has scheduled a "top-level" meeting in Paris on Wednesday to review the events.

"The meeting is unlikely to produce any immediate changes in Formula One," FIA President Max Mosley defended the sport Monday, saying it was "no more dangerous or safer than it was a week ago" and that, in his opinion, "nothing has changed except that we've had two tragedies."

Mosley also said the Imola crashes had nothing to do with new rules designed to eliminate many electronic drivers' aids, rules which Italian and Brazilian newspapers claim were at least a partly to blame.

Businessman turns fugitive after company's collapse

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — People in South Carolina knew Raymond Taylor as a private man with plenty of cash.

In Georgia, he was Paul Fenwick — writer, small-town businessman, helpful neighbor.

In reality, he was Malcolm Check, fugitive from St. Louis, a man who left behind his family, a $1.7 million house with Waterford crystal chandeliers and three Mercedes-Benzes in the garage. He also left $514 million in debts.

Once credited with molding his St. Louis engineering consulting firm, Y&A Group Inc., into a hot investment, Check vanished during a business trip to New York in 1993. Weeks later, Y&A collapsed under the weight of a surprise $75 million loss. Check was accused of bank fraud, among other things.

"I don't understand how someone could be that hard-working, that dedicated to his family, and go that wrong," said Del LaRue, who first met Check in the '70s. "I want to know... was he bad in the beginning or did he somehow become bad?"

Investigators say Check's scheme unraveled April 2 when the FBI caught up with him in South Carolina, where he had fled with his wife. He had rented a luxury waterfront condo in Georgetown and was negotiating to buy a vacuum repair shop.

In-laws had told federal agents where he was. He doesn't blame his relatives, saying the government built them.

He fled because he saw no way to save the company and he feared for his safety.

"I'm not defending my decision," he said in an interview from the Franklin County Jail 45 miles west of St. Louis. "In hindsight, I would have done a number of things differently."

Wherever he went, Check had impressed people with his business sense.

D. Ralph Young, who discovered him working for an electric cooperative in Alaska, brought him to St. Louis to head his engineering firm in 1981.

"My first impression was that he was a guy I would hope would take over as president after I retired," said Young, former Y&A chairman, who now lives in Tampa, Fla. "I was very impressed with his ability and his knowledge of financial matters."

At its peak, Y&A stock traded at $42.4 a share.

Authorities say Check, 44, orchestrated a deception that began in June 1989, about the time Y&A was formed. They say he filed false financial statements, double-pledged shares of stock to multiple banks, embezzled thousands from employee pension plans.

They say he carefully planned his disappearance, moving expensive furniture from his suburban house in anticipation of bankruptcy proceedings and directing a sister-in-law to buy a house in northern Georgia under the name Paul Fenwick.

Georgia authorities are investigating charges that while there, Check stole thousands of dollars from business associates and investors. Check denies any wrongdoing.

John and Cynthia Ferris had gone into business with him in a log home dealership in Jasper, Ga.

"I'm still in shock," said Cynthia

Ferris, who claims Check left them holding $250,000 in debt. "I haven't actually dealt with all of it... All I can say is it's a trauma for us."

LaRue had sold his small engineering firm in Alaska to the bigger Y&A just five months before Check disappeared. He later bought it back from the bank.

"I sold it primarily because we were friends, and a matter of months later he took off and left everybody holding the bag," said LaRue, who figures his losses at $300,000 to $400,000.

The Checks and their two sons, now 23 and 18, were a tight-knit family, going to games and movies together.

They lived very in their five-bedroom house in the upscale suburb of Brentwood and Canyons.

"We were curious as to how he could do it," said Steve Spieker, a Y&A partner whose own family was forced into bankruptcy by its collapse. "We were not able to do that. Everything we had was in the business."

Check and his wife, Stephanie, have pleaded innocent to charges in a 27-count indictment. Check is being held without bond. Mrs. Check, accused of lying about his whereabouts, is being held in lieu of $175,000 bail.

Check says his wife did nothing wrong. He said he never told her he was leaving because he didn't want to involve his family.

But months ago in Georgia finally got to be too much, and he contacted her at her new home in Atlanta, in the spring of 1992. She tried to talk him into surrendering, he said.

"I planned later to come forward in some fashion and tell my story and I wasn't quite sure how to do that," he said.

Weak dollar concerns fade

Blue chip stocks end high; other issues finish low

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Blue chip stocks overcame concerns about the dollar's weakness to close solidly higher Tuesday while the broad range of other issues ended mostly lower.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 13.39 to 3,714.41 as Eastman Kodak and several economically sensitive stocks climbed. It was the best close since March 28 when the popular market indicator ended at 3,762.35.

More comprehensive measures of market performance turned in so-so readings. Two days of advancing stock prices encouraged investors to sell and collect profits, which contributed to a downward bias on Wall Street.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 9 to 8 on the New York Stock Exchange. The NYSE composite index finished nearly flat at 251.46, off 0.04 and Standard & Poor's 500 stock index ended almost unchanged at 453.03, up 0.01.

Among other indicators, the Nasdaq Stock Market composite index fell 1.31 to 739.37 while at the American Stock Exchange, the market value in-

Volume of the Big Board's floor came to 286.02 million shares as of 4 p.m. EDT, down from 296.11 million on Monday.

Selling in the bond market combined with further weakness in the dollar blunted stock buying interest for much of the day.

The bond market succumbed to selling in response to news that the government's chief gauge of future economic activity rose 0.7 percent to 101.2 — the highest figure since the government began keeping the Index of Leading Indicators in 1948.

In late trading, the 30-year Treasury bond was off 5.16 point, pushing its yield to 7.35 percent from 7.33 percent late Monday.

Drug and health care issues were in the spotlight for a second straight session.

Eastman Kodak rose 1.1 to 46 1/4 in heavy NYSE trading after the company said it will divest its pharmaceutical subsidiary, Sterling Winthrop Inc., and two other divisions to concentrate on its photography and imaging business.

United Healthcare gained 2 1/2 to 46 1/2 in active Big Board trading on news that the company planned to sell its Diversified Pharmaceutical Services unit for $2.3 billion in cash to the American-armed-of-Britain-SmithKline Beecham PLC.

The most heavily traded Big Board issue was Syntex, which shed 3/4 to 23 1/4. The stock had surged Monday in reaction to the announcement that Roche Holding will buy the drug maker for $5.3 billion.

Also active on the NYSE was Time Warner, which jumped 3/4 to 40 as takeover rumors swirled around the stock.

One notable gain was Broderbund Software, which jumped 6 1/2 to 41 1/2 in heavy Nasdaq volume. News that the company's proposed merger with Electronic Arts had been called off left investors betting that Broderbund would thrive independently.

Electronic Arts lost 1 1/2 to 20 1/2 in heavy Nasdaq volume. Stocks lost ground in most major foreign financial centers: the Japanese stock market was closed for a holiday.

Longer work hours in March push leading indicators to high

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans worked longer hours in March, helping push the government's main gauge of future economic activity to a record high.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday the Index of Leading Economic Indicators advanced a robust 0.7 percent to 101.2 — the highest figure since the government began keeping the index in 1948.

The Clinton administration said it is pleased with the latest economic report, and private analysts said the data suggest the economy is behaving well and is not growing at a sluggish pace.

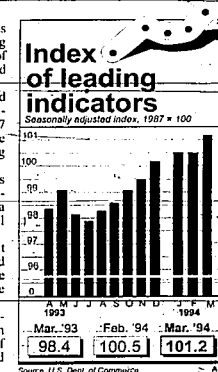

"It's in comfortable middle-age. It isn't running out late at night," said economist Robert Dederick of the Northern Trust Co in Chicago. "We're not growing too fast."

Economists emphasized that the increase in the average work week in March to a post-World War II high of 42.2 hours a week was directly related to a change in the weather.

Not only did severe storms in February keep many workers off the job, but employers may have been trying to make up for lost time in March.

"It doesn't mean the economy is improving, just the weather," said Michael Evans of the Evans Group in Princeton, N.J. He said the rate of economic growth could be slowing down during the current year.

Laura D'Andrea Tyson, head of the president's Council of Economic Advisors, said the economy is on track to meet the administration's forecast for 3 percent growth and moderate inflation of 3 percent this year.

Economic Committee Democrats criticize Fed interest rate increases

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democrats on the congressional Joint Economic Committee used their annual report to criticize the Republican-controlled Federal Reserve Board — a switch from years ago when they focused on rebuking GOP presidents.

"Perhaps the greatest threat to sustained recovery would be continuing and unwarranted increases in interest rates," said the report issued Tuesday.

The report is the latest manifestation of growing concern among Democrats in Congress that the Republican-controlled Federal Reserve threatens to choke off the economic recovery, on which President Clinton's re-election depends.

Growth, as measured by the gross domestic product, lapsed to a modest 2.6 percent in the first quarter of this year, down from a booming 7 percent rate during the last three months of 1993.

"As we continue along a path of... tight budgets, it is critical that recovery not be disrupted by any unnecessary rate hikes," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., the chairman of the panel.

Republicans counterattacked at a news conference, accusing the Democrats of using the economic report as "a very partisan propaganda tool."

Rep. Dick Armey of Texas, the senior GOP member on the panel, said Democrats have been on an "easy money honeymoon" that has choked the life of their high-tax and over-regulation policies.

"The Democrats know full well that without that extraordinary rate of increase in the money supply that they've enjoyed, the economy can't be sustained. The Fed is doing its duty... The duty of the Federal Reserve System is to fight inflation," he said.

The Fed, which is controlled by appointees of presidents Bush and Reagan, has raised the interest rate changed among banks for overnight loans from 3 percent to 3.75 percent, in three quarter-point steps on Feb. 4, March 22 and April 14.

Banks have responded by raising their prime rate — the rate charged to their best business borrowers — from 6 percent to 6.75 percent. And that has rippled into rate increases to consumers on loans ranging from home equity lines to credit cards.

Hartford mulls giving schools to private company

The Associated Press

HARTFORD, Conn. — Rock-bottom student test scores, a towering dropout rate and deteriorating classrooms have pushed this city to the verge of hiring a profit-making company to help run the entire school system.

"It's time that we look at alternatives to the way we've been doing business," said Stephanie Lightfoot, the school board member who broached the idea.

Educational Alternatives Inc. of Minneapolis was to submit a preliminary outline Tuesday of its proposal to improve student achievement without laying anyone off while staying within next year's proposed $171.1 million budget.

Everyone agrees the school system, which serves more than 25,000 students, badly needs an overhaul.

Some say its problems stem from the city's eroding economic base; others blame the school board for poor financial management and an inability to make tough decisions.

Not everyone is comfortable with the idea of privatization.

"It shows our inadequacy, that we had to go outside our school system, out of state to show us what to do and how to do it," said Shirley West, who has three children in the Hartford schools.

At least county six of the nine school board members supported privatization. The nine-member City Council also must approve any deal; no clear majority has emerged there. Employee unions oppose the idea.

The company wouldn't have total control. It has described its proposed relationship as a partnership with the school system. The board would retain oversight and wants the right to cancel the contract with 90 days' notice.

In general, Educational Alternatives has promised a cash infusion of up to $20 million for the system's 32 schools, curriculum improvements and teacher training.

In exchange, it will try to make the city's $8.450 per student go further, using its profit as a portion of whatever money it saves.

Weaver High School principal Eddie Davis talks with students in a classroom at the Hartford, Conn., school. Davis says he is keeping an open mind on the proposal that Education Alternatives Inc., a privately run firm based in Minneapolis, Minn., run the city's 32 schools.

Education Alternatives made just under $3 million last year at the schools it manages now: 12 public schools in Baltimore and one in Miami, plus two private schools in Minnesota and Arizona, spokeswoman Lory Sutton said.

Building maintenance has been deferred, and computers and libraries are painfully out of date. "We haven't made major purchases to update books in libraries for years," Lightfoot said.

"Our children are better than that, but I think we have not been able to provide our children with the proper level of support and resources so that they can do their best," Lightfoot said. She hopes the company's investment will provide those resources.

The principal of Weaver High School likes what he's heard about Educational Alternatives' Baltimore experiment, but he has doubts.

"In the Baltimore schools, where they are also strapped for cash, they've put in computers, cleaned up buildings, and brought in a second adult for every classroom," Eddie Davis said. "They did it in a year. But can you do that in an entire district?"

Hartford's school board chairman, William E. Meagher, doesn't like what he's heard about Educational Alternatives' work in Baltimore.

Others say the company, started in 1986, just hasn't proved it can handle the job.

U.S. schools under private management

The Associated Press

Places where public schools have tried private management or where private management is being considered:

- Chelsea, Mass. Boston University has 10-year contract to manage budget of city's nine public schools and to develop educational plans with local educators.

- Minneapolis. Private consulting firm hired to help resolve financial problems of one 79-school system. School board made company president the superintendent.

- Baltimore. Education Alternatives Inc. of Minneapolis, private, for-profit company, manages 12 of city's public schools.

- Miami. EAI manages one public school.

- Hartford, Conn. School board considering hiring EAI to help manage all 32 public schools.

- Pinckney, Mich., community schools. Village considering hiring EAI to help run its seven schools.

man, William E. Meagher, doesn't like what he's heard about Educational Alternatives' work in Baltimore.

"Some say they've brought in lower-paid, less-experienced and mainstream special education to save money. One person who's investigated them said they've reduced art and music classes. I'm told their main objective is to make money."

Others say the company, started in 1986, just hasn't proved it can handle the job.

The American Federation of Teachers and its Connecticut affiliate agree, citing an AFT study that found a decline in 1992-93 test scores in the company's Baltimore schools.

Educational Alternatives says those scores come from a transition year when its programs were not yet in place. It takes at least three years for academic improvements to show, the company said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"Fanaticism consists in redoubling your efforts when you have forgotten your aim."

— George Santayana.

Which is the surest way to play for 12 tricks in today's small slam? The first step in solving the problem is to remember to aim at 12 sure tricks instead of a possible 13. Today's declarer didn't get past the first step.

South won his club ace, drew trumps and cashed his heart ace. He led a club to dummy's Jack and led another heart, intending to finesse. When East discarded, South won his heart king and took the diamond finesse. Had it won, he would have discarded a heart loser on dummy's ace to make the slam. East won his diamond king and exited safely in diamonds. South had to concede a heart to West for one down.

South's line was not the best, but he could have survived had he seen all the cards. After the bad heart break is revealed, South succeeds if he cashes one more high club and then plays the ace and queen of diamonds. East is allowed to win while South discards a heart, and East's forced diamond lead offers a ruff and sluff to make the slam.

The best line for 12 tricks (and a possible 13) is for South to draw trumps and cash the heart and diamond aces. After ruffing the queen of diamonds, he takes his club winners ending in dummy and leads a low heart. When East discards, South plays low. West winning West must surrender a free heart finesse or a ruff and sluff, and the slam is scored.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to a resolution adopted on April 12, 1994, by the Board of Trustees of School District No. 413, a Special Bond Election will be held in said District on between the hours of 12:00 o'clock noon and 8:00 o'clock P.M., for the purpose of voting upon the question and proposition of issuing general obligation school bonds in the principal amount of $5,520,000 for the purpose of providing funds to pay the cost of acquiring a site and constructing a school building and improving and equipping the same, and related improvements and costs, all pursuant to the provisions of said resolution adopted on April 12, 1994.

The total estimated cost of the Project is $5,520,000, all of which is to be paid from the sale of the proposed bond issue.

The question to be submitted to the electors shall be by ballot reading substantially as follows:

SHALL THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 413 BE AUTHORIZED TO ISSUE THE GENERAL OBLIGATION SCHOOL BONDS OF SAID DISTRICT IN THE PRINCIPAL AMOUNT OF $5,520,000, TO BECOME DUE IN SUCH INSTALLMENTS AS MAY BE FIXED BY THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES, THE FINAL INSTALLMENT TO FALL DUE NOT MORE THAN TWENTY (20) YEARS FROM THE DATE OF THE BONDS, FOR THE PURPOSE OF FINANCING THE COSTS OF ACQUIRING A SITE AND CONSTRUCTING A SCHOOL BUILDING, AND FURNISHING AND EQUIPPING THE SAME, INCLUDING GAS UTILITIES, HEATING, VENTILATION, WATER, AND SANITATION FACILITIES, AND RELATED IMPROVEMENTS, AND ALL PLIANCES NECESSARY TO MAINTAIN AND OPERATE SAID FACILITIES, ALL AS PROVIDED IN THE RESOLUTION OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES ADOPTED ON APRIL 12, 1994?

The following information is required by Section 34-40, Idaho Code:

The District has existing indebtedness in the amount of $559,123. The interest rate anticipated on the proposed bonds is 5.50% per annum. The range of anticipated rates is from four percent (4.0%) to ten percent (10.0%) per annum. The total amount to be repaid over the life of the proposed bonds, principal and interest, based on the anticipated interest rate, is estimated to be $4,724,859.

Qualified electors shall vote at the following polling places:

Flor High School
Holt High School
Holt, Idaho

Holister Elementary School Gymnasium
2453 Salmon Avenue
Holt, Idaho

Only qualified and registered electors eighteen (18) years of age or older who have resided in the State of Idaho and in the District for a least thirty (30) days next preceding the election, and no others, will be permitted to vote at said special election. No person so qualified and registered and offering himself or herself at the polling place at which he or she is entitled to vote will be denied the privilege of voting at said special election.

The Clerk of Twin Falls County, Idaho, is the Registrar of the District, and the place of registration for such electors is the Twin Falls County Courthouse, Twin Falls, Idaho. Persons may register on each business day at any time during office hours of the County Clerk until May 9, 1994. An elector may also register before the precinct registrar for the voting precinct which he or she resides until and including May 2, 1994. No qualified elector of the District who was duly registered as a voter, and who continues to reside at the same address or within the same precinct in which he or she is registered, and has voted in at least one election for which county registration is required in the past four years, shall be required to re-register.

Any qualified elector who expects to be absent from the District on the day of election, or who will be unable, because of physical disability or blindness, to go to the polling place, may vote by absentee ballot in the manner provided by law. Applications for absentee ballots shall be made to the District Clerk not later than one (1) hour prior to the opening of the polls.

Polls will be open at the hour of 12:00 o'clock noon on Thursday, May 19, 1994, and will be open continuously until the hour of 8:00 o'clock P.M., at which time the polls will be closed.

If at said election two-thirds (2/3) of the qualified electors voting at such election assent to the issuance of said bonds for the purposes set forth in the resolution adopted on April 12, 1994, the general obligation school bonds of the District will be issued for said purposes, which bonds will mature annually over a period of twenty (20) years from date, will bear interest at a rate or rates agreeable to the District, and will be payable from taxes levied upon all taxable property within the District.

106 HAPPY ADS

106 HAPPY ADS

HOLY SPIRIT. You who solve all problems, light all roads so that I can obtain my goals. You who give me the divine gift to forget all my sins and me that in all instances of my life you are with me, I want in this short prayer to again thank you for all things as you once again confirm that I never want to be separated from you even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me & mine. Say this prayer 3 days in a row and the favor requested will be granted. Publish this prayer immediately after the request is granted without mentioning the favor. RC
