Gooding 3rd-graders learn water safety from Bob Burks, Otto Otter

By Terrell Williams

Times-News correspondent
GOODING - Canals and rivers may look like fun places to play, but they can be deadly. Bob Burks told Gooding third grade students this week.
"I'm here because I'm concerned about kids," he told the children." I want to keep you from drowning."
Burks, 78, has been telling that message to Magic Valley school children for 15 years. He volunteered to take the nationally produced Otto Otter water safety program to the schools because, he said, it had to be done, and no one else had time to do it.
He is a retired dairyman, and he has been on the board of directors for the Swim where water is clean.

Watch out for moss. It can be mean.
Always swim with a pal.
Know how deep the water is.
Don't get in a canal with walls too steep to climb up.
Stay away from siphons and tubes.
If a friend's in trouble, don't jump in to save him. Hold out a stick or jacket for him to grab. A good precaution is to fill a plastic milk jug about one-third full of water, and tie a rope to it so it can be thrown to a person who needs help:

 Feel responsible to keep little tots away from water.
 Know how to restore a person's breathing.
 Do not swim at night and be careful when the sun is bright.
 Beware of cold water.
- Do not push others or tease them if they are afraid to get in the water. Swim where water is clean.

Fed chairman urges long-range view

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Alan Greenspandigorously-defended the Federal Reserve's string of interest rate increases this year, arguing before disgranuled senators Friday it was far better to take some credit pain now to head off serious economic problems later.
In the face of a blistering attack, complete with critical editorial cartoons blown up to poster size, the chairman of the Federal Reserve calmly insisted that the central bank was not trying to choke off the recovery. He said the Fed was merely making sure that unexpectedly fast economic growth this year does not translate into rising price and wage pressures next year.

The central bank pushed short-term interest raites down to a 30-year low in late 1992 and kept them there for over a year, But Greenspan said continuing with that policy

Advocates for abortion rights want issue kept out of 1996 platform

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Shunted aside at the 1992 GOP convention, Republicant supporters of abortion rights are quietly mapping a comeback they hope will strip the party's anti-abortion plank from the platform in 1006.

1996.
According to those involved, the heart of the effort is intended to multiply the number of delegates who oppose the abortion language at the next national convention, increasing their influence when the platform is drafted.

creasing their influence when the pflatform is drafted.

The 1992 convention produced a platform that was praised by the White House and conservatives but denounced as extreme by party moderates. Some moderates blame George Bush's election loss in part on the convention's tone, which they say alienated women and minority voters.

At a closed-door meeting Tuesday organized by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., representatives from the National Republicans for Choice discussed strategies to recruit likeminded delegates and ensure a mort forcettle presence at the 1994 convention.

Also participating were other groups with a interest in the outcome. The National Federation of Republican Women doesn't take sides on abortion, but thists the platform should be silent on the issue. The American Association of University Women is non-partisian, but supports reproductive changed to support abortion rights, Planned Parenthood representatives also attended.

"I believe the anti-abortion plank hurt the party badly in 1992," said Specter, who narrowly won his third term that year as Bush lost in Pennsylvania.
Abortion rights supporters "have not ocen as persistent or as well organized as the other side," Specter said.
Changing the abortion plank "will take getting involved in delegate selection in states. ... That's the only opportunity to become a member of the platform commitee," said Mary Dent Crisp, a former party occhairman who heads the National Republican Callition for Choice.
The latest effort appears as a spinoff from the Republican Majority Coalition, a group Specter helped found in 1992 to toroaden the party by emphasizing the economy, foreign policy and other "mainstream" Republican issues. Abortion, Specter and other members say, is a matter of conscience and should be dropped from the platform.

the platform.

He is optimistic about changing the plat-form, but the record tells another story. In the past four conventions, committees re-jected abortion-rights proposals by wide margins. An attempt to bring the issue to the convention floor in 1992 failed.

Specier, who was significant labor and black support in his 1992 race, has traveled widely in recent months, addressing groups from California to Connecticut to outline his vision for the party and try to build momentum to excise the abortion plank.

In a slide show, cartoon character Otto Otter listed water safety rules in rhyme. Wear life jackets in a boat, swim where there is a life guard, learn how to swim and float, the friendly animal advised. Don't depend on inflated devices and don't skate where thin ice is.

"Moss is real dangerous," he said. "It can grow, in a weck's time and be so thick that you can get tangled up in it."

It's up to older brothers and sisters to watch out for the younger children around water, Burks said.

Shallow water, too, is dangerous, he went on, advising the children to wear old tennis shoes when wading to protect their feet from glass and wire.

The students raised their right hands, repeated the rules of water safety and pledged to obey them. Burks gave each student a coloring book, Otto Otter stickers and waters to read.

Gooding County Sheriff Jim Jax said water safety programs for children are important to this-area because there are so many rivers, canals and ditches. Over the past 10 years in Idaho, drownings in canals and irrigation ditches has accounted for more than 15 percent of all accidental deaths for children age four and Waterfalls have hydraulics that can pull down swimmers with life jackets, he said.

"Even a little waterfalls on our canals, a kid wouldn't have a chance," he warned. "You can't swim in that foam."

Public education like the Otto Otter program helps make people aware of the dangers of water, Jax said.

Burks said he has volunteered his time for the water safety program because he knows too well the horror of drowning. He told the students that his sister drowned when she was a child. Burks also told how, during World War II, his ship was sunk at sea and he clung to a 10-man life raft with 30 other men for 36 hours.

The students took turns telling about their own close calls and places they like to swim. Burks admitted that, as a child, he loved to swim in canals on hot summer days near his rural home in North Korea talks end in failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talks between North Korea and the U.N.'s nuclear watchdog agency appear a have ended in failure, a senior administration official said Friday. The talks were an attempt to resolve-a dispute over the deflueling of a North Korean nuclear reactor. The official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the administration nonetheless was willing to resume its own high-level diplomatic talks with North Korea. He said no date has been set for resuming those talks, which could set a basis for normalizing U.S. relations with North Korea.

Meanwhile, Robert L. Gallucci, the State Department official coordinating U.S. policy on Korea, was quoted in an interview published Friday in a South Korean newspaper as saying the United States would be willing to set up a diplomatic liaison office in North Korea if the overall nuclear dispute were resolved.

The defueling issue is highly technical but is central to the main source of friction between North Korea and the international community: its nuclear intentions.

If the reactip is defueled in a certain way it would enable international inspectors to tell for sure whether North Korea lied about how much bomb-making plutonium it got from the reactor in 1989; If it is not done that way, the world will have lost forever the possibility of knowing North Korea's nuclear history. North Korea contends its nuclear program is strictly for non-military use.

BELPRE. Ohio (AP) — An explosion at a chemical plant-sent flames shooting hundreds of feet into the air Friday and produced a mass of thick, black smoke that forced 1,700 people to flee. Three employees who were in the Shell Chemical Co. plant were missing Friday afternoon, plant manager Arnie Dittmer said. He would not identify them, but said their families had been notified.

No injuries were reported, and it wasn't known whether the smoke and fumes were toxic. The plant produces a hermoplastic rubber used in automotive parts, footwar and adhesivbs.

Lobbyist indicted on fraud charges

BALTIMORE (AP) — A leading Maryland lobbyist was indicted on charges of overbilling clients and fun-neling the money into political campaigns.

Bruce Bereano billed clients for $16,000 worth of bogus "legislative entertainment-expenses" in 1990-91, and disguised the political contributions in two ways, an indictment filed in U.S. District Court on Thursday charged.

He had his employees contribute in their own names, then reimbursed them from the fradulent fees, the indictment; said. He also had relatives contribute to his own political action committee and reimbursed them, again from client fees, the indictment said.
Maryland law at the time allowed an individual to make a total of $5,000 in political contributions over any four-year period.

Candidate promises tax trim 🐃

BOISE (AP) — If Republican Phil Batt is elected governor in November, he promises fewer new state buildings, a property tax cut proposal next winter and reductions in the staffs of the Division of Financial Management and the Legislative Budget Office.

Batt won a four-way primary Tuesday for the GOP nomination against Democratic Atomey General Larry EchoHawk.

He said he would end the duplication of services between the execution of services between the execution of services between the execution of the budget staffs. "I don't think we have to spend all that time digging up all the nuts and bolls of the budget, Batt also promised fewer and staffs, uring taping for the could eliminate an number of people between the legislative and executive branches."

Batt also promised fewer new state buildings.

The teens were filming a remake of "The Karate Kid" at Hayden Lake's sportsman access as part of a media class.

Sportsman access as part of a media class.

Dorame, Garrett Gosch, Justin Wright and John Schroeder Jr., were rehearsing a fight when a man in his mid-to late 20s rushed over with a gun from a nearby campsile.

"He came up and told us to hit the ground and not move," Dorame said. The apparently intoxicated man forem into the ground and pointed a gun at his head.

The man let him up when Dorame, 17, said they were merely doing their homework. But when Wright, 19, told the man he was still angry about the incident, the man pulled a knife, Dorame said.

The boys fled to their car as the man grabbed a shotgun, a sheriff's report said. He was preparing to fire the weapon as they drove away.

Explicit mail arrives in Valley

JEROME - A blue envelope with the words "Adult Material" and addressed to Stanley Lot arrived at his house Friday. Inside was a 14-page pamphlet of 1-900 phone numbers with sexually explicit photos inside.

Lott's wife promptly burned the mate-

Such direct mailing of sexually explicit

These envelopes were mailed by bulk mail by Laguna Entertainment of Bevery Hills, Calif. The envelopes clearly state "Adult Material" and in small print there is a disclaimer that says "Sexually oriented material for adults only, not intended for minors."

Semple is trying to get people who have received the mailing from Laguna Entertainment to bring the material in to the post office. They must then sign a form stating they don't want such mail.

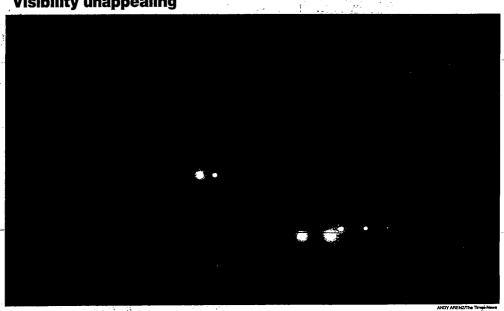

Then the U.S. Postal Service will order the company to remove the names and addresses from their mailing lists.

Lott said he doesn't know how he could have gotten on such a mailing list. The only magazines he subscribes to are Time, National Geographic and Reader's Digest.

BOISE – Resource industry groups have warned a legislative committee that a federal list of 844 Idaho stream segments potentially threatened by pollution could go a long way to wrecking the state; seconomy.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency on May 16 released the list for possible renovation under the federal Clean Water Act.

It includes nearly 12,000 miles of streams and was ordered by U.S. District Judge William Dwyer alter he determined the EPA did not adequately protect Idaho water quality in accepting the state is list of only 36 segments not meeting standards. The Clean Water Act would require a "total maximum daily load" of pollution a stream segment could take in, such as siltation. It could prevent any activity that would have an effect until the load is determined.

prevent any activity that would have an effect until the load is determined.

"If the judges order us to do that, it could shut down the state," said attorney Al Barker, representing the industries.

After a 30-day public comment period, the EPA will propose its priorities for cleanup, putting any action off until about mid-July.

Jim Yost of the Idaho Farm Bureau said that even if the state could narrow the list by 100 or more, there still would be hundreds of segments to consider.

The first farm group that would be affected are ranchers who graze their stock on public land, and feed lot operators, Yost said.

"They will be the first wave to feel that impact," he said. "Crop production that could contribute to the sediment loading would be next."

The state Division of Environ-mental Quality is also trying to fig-ure how it will handle the EPA's vast list, said Larry Koenig, chief of monitoring and technical support. "We took the tack that we were ter quality, he said, "We view the court ruling as guilty until proven innocent."

Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, chairman of the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, said he had checked some of the listed stream segments in his area and discovered "extreme errors and inaccuracies" in the EPA's judgment.

Walton Poole of the Division of Environmental Quality said the list would shrink rapidly if the public supplies plenty of evidence their local creeks are not aling as supposed. "The list wasn't intended to be gospel. It was intended to be used as a guide," Poole said. The legislators were not easily convinced it would be that easy.

"How can the EPA put it on the list by eyeball, and we can't take it off by cyeball?" asked Sen. Cecil largam, R. Boise. "This is going to cost trillions, instead of dollars and cents."

A petition signed by 25 physicians urged Sun Valley Mayor Jo Ann Levy and the city council to forget the lawsuit against Blaine County and the medical center. After Levy denied the group a spot on the council's May 19 agenda, the suit was filed that day seeking to dissolve Sun Valley's partnership with the county over the medical center.

The petitioners asked the gity to address the legality of Dr. Stephen Luber's ability to vote on hospital issues.

Sex offender pleads innocent to abuse

BURLEY — A convicted sex offender from Heyburn pleaded innocent Friday to three charges of sexual abuse of a child. John Ross Lee, 42, is accused of putting his hand under a pretent girl's shirt, kissing her and playing with her bra strap on three separate times between October and November 1993, according to a criminal complaint filed by the Cassia County prosecutor's office.

Lee's lawyer, John Bradley, requested a meeting with deputy prosecutor Howard Smyser for a tentative change of Lee's plea. Fifth District Judge George Granata set the meeting for June 23. Granata ordered that Lee not to be alone with children unless accompanied by an adult other than his wife.

Court drops theft charges against mute

Charges of theft against Juan Barhos were dropped Friday.

RUPERT – Juan Barhos cups his hands over his eyes as if peering through binocu-lars.

Outside the Mini-Cassia jail Friday, Barhos is communicating in the only way he knows – miming his denial that he stock a pair of binoculars from a truck on May 9.

Friday a magistrate judge in Minidoka County dropped a burglary charge, releasing Barhos after two weeks in jail. It could have cost taxpayers up to $200,000 to teach Barbos – who is deaf and dumb and cannot read or write – to defend himself, the judge said.

"Based on the nature of the crime involved here, it duesn't make sense," Magistrate Larry Duff said.

Barhos, 26, ran away from an abusive home in New York State when he was 15 or 16 and hich-hiked to Miami, Fla. before coming to Burley, public defender Kent Jensen said.

Jensen and a sign language expert from the College of Southern Idaho were able to glean the information from Barhos during a two-hour interview Thursday.

"He doesn't strike me as having the crimi-

Barhos can mime, draw pictures and write a few words on paper. But that type of conveyance fails to translate in the abstract world of legal debate.

"Think of how you would tell him of his right to remain silent, or consult with an attorney, let alone communicate with an attorney to be affective in his defense." Minidoka County Deputy Prosecutor E. Scott Paul said.

Minidoka County Deputy Prosecutor E. Scott Paul said.
Police arrested Barhus two weeks ago after someone spotted him taking a set of binoculars out of a truck near Connor's Cafe on state Highway 27.
Tuesday Duff ordered Paul to justify keeping Barhos in jail.
To prosecute Barhos, not only would the county have to pay for his language lessons, but it would also have to keep Barhos in jail until he learns to adequately communicate, which is unfair to Barhos. Paul said.
The Minidoka County Sheriff's Department will return the binoculars, Paul said.
Friday afternoon at the jail. Barhos rubbed his fingers together as if to say he needed money. His hands waved in the air like plane taking off. He printed "New York" on a piece of paper, wrote "$510" and drew a map of the United States.

ignites in Nampa

NAMPA (AP) — Some faculty and students were sent home for smoke inhalation after a military smoke grenade was detonated at Nampa's South Junior High School.

"It's a soup-can-size smoke grenade that burns at about 1,700 degrees Fahrenheit," city Detective Tim Randall said Friday. "They're used in the military as spotters so someone can be located."

Vice principall Ole Beymer said by the time he opened the doors at the south end for ventilation the smoke had traveled about 50 feet down the hallway. The school was evacuated but classes resumed at about 9;15 a.m.

"The smoke itself is not fatal (poisonous) but it could be from inhalation," Randall said.

"This is a felony — it could be considered attempted arson. We have two or three names of people and it should be only a matter of time before we find out who it was because kids will start talking."

Randall predicted the guilty party could receive anything from probation to jail detention. He also said restitution would be paid to the emergency vehicles that responded to the incident.

INEL project threatened again

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A congressional committee has voted again to strip funding for a research project at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, but it might be harder to get the money back this year.

ungineering Laboratory, our might be harder to get the money back this year.

The House Appropriations Committee again followed President Chinton's lead Thursday and voted to strip INEL's Integral Fast Reactor project of all but shutdown funds.

Last year Argonne National Laboratory officials were able to rally support in the Senate to get funding restored. But this year, project spokesman Richard Lindsay said the Energy Department has forbidden him and others from talking to Congress.

bidden him and others from usuary to Congress.
"They have done some strage things." Linkays said. "They have essentially put us on notice that if we mess with the system, all deals are off," and Argonne may end up losing funds for more projects.

The Integral Fast Reactor project is intended to create a safer generation of nuclear reactors able to burn nuclear wastes such see wearons—grade plutonium. It as weapons-grade plutonium. It costs about $118 million a year. The project has been going on a commercial scale.

The House committee agreed with Clinton that the project should end early, said committee saffer Aaron Edmondson. The government opposes the research contending it has no near-term commercial applications and the reactor could be modified to produce more plutonium and nuclear weapons.

Edmondson said the committee decided to give Argonne $90 million in the next budget to shut down tion in the next budget to saint down the program.

The House recommended similar action last year, but the Senate fought for the program and eventu-ally restored funding. Lindsay said he wasn't confident the same thing he wasn't confident the same thing would happen this year.

Lindsay previously said he checked Argonne to thrive in new fields of research even if the Idaho project ended, but Friday he wasn't so sure.

"I believe we have a group of people in Washington who are so anti-nuclear they won't rest until they've scattered all of the people at Argonne," he said.

Income tax falls short

BOISE (AP) — State personal income tax collections fell $10 million short of expectations in April to cut the current budget year's fotential cash surplus nearly in half.

The monthly revenue undue from tial cash surplus nearly in half.

The monthly revenue update from the Division of Financial Management, released on Friday, showed that the April 15 tax payments rose only 1.2 percent from April 1993.
That anemic performance was partially offset by continued unanticipated strength in paycheck withholding, and sales and corporate tax collections. But the potential cash surplus that totaled $11.5 million in March was still own to $5.5 million at the end of last month.
There were, however, indications that the siphoning of cash was over and the likely surplus would probably resume building during the final two months of the spending year that ends June 30.
"The early 1994 data shows no
letup in the state's expansion," said John Mitchell, chief economist for U.S. Bancorp. "The year is off to a strong start... The broad-based nature of the employment gains is evident — numerically dominated by the service sector, where business and health services grew rapidly."
Underscoring Mitchell's assessment was the fact that paycheck withholding, a key indicator of the state's employment strength, increased 7 percent more than analysts expected. Idaho has been among the national leaders in job growth for several year-corporate tax collections, which signal the relative financial strength of Idaho businesses, ran $3.5 million higher than expected in April and are $7 million over the projection for the first 10 months of the budget year.

Sales tax also continues to run ahead of expectations. Another $1 million more than predicted was collected last month to put total collections for the year more than $4 million above estimates.

Jazz play in harmony for 95-86 Rocket defeat

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Jazz won a game they desperately needed by finally playing like a team.

After failures in Games 1 and 2 that were marked by unbalanced scoring and Hakeem Olajuwon's dominance, the Jazz reversed those trends Friday night and beat the Houston Rockets 95-86 to cut their deficit to 2-1 in the Western Conference final.

The Jazz, who never trailed, got strong contributions from almost every player.
Karl Malone had 22 points and 16 rebounds, Jeff Hornacck had 17 points, Jay Humphries 15, David Benoit 14, John Stockton 13 points and I1 assists and Tom Chambers added 10 points.

In the first two games, only three players

— Malone, Hornacek and Stockton—scored more than 15 points in a game.
Olajuwon missed his first eight shots of the game, misfired on seven of 16 free throws and was reluctant to pass the ball when faced with double coverage. He finished with 29 points and 13 rebounds, but it was easily his worst game of the series.
Utah opened a 12-point lead at halftime, upped it to 18 in the third quarter and didn't let Houston get closer than eight in the final period.

didn't let Houston get closer than eight in the final period.

Utah had a 53-39 edge in rebounding, made 4-e-f-7 3-pointers while Houston went 6-of-21 from beyond the stripe, and shet 42 percent to Houston's 36.

The Jazz will look to even the best-of-7 series in Game 4 on Sunday afternoon.

of the car when he hit the wall."
Indy cars rarely catch on fire anymore.
That danger has been virtually-climinated with the development of a rubber fuel cell that evolved from Victnam-era helicopters and passed muster in initial tests by being dropped from a crane.

Now, a driver's legs remain hidden in the cockpit during the worst crashes. Not one, but two metal bulkends protect the legs, and the drivers' cockpit has been shifted further back in the car to even lessen the potential damage when a car slams into the wall at more than 200 mph.

"The cars, or safe it's beyond my wildest dreams, Grant said Friday, two days before the Indy 500. "We've seen plenty of accidents that would we've littled drivers in the past, and now they walk nway."

ing cestasy that is the New York Rangers' quest for the Cup continues. Seeking their first sip of Stanley Cup champagne in 54 years, the Rangers' quote first trip to the NHL championship round since 1979 with a 2-1 double-overtime victory over the New Jersey Devils on Friday night in the seventh game of the Eastern Conference final.

Stephane Matteau scored at 4:24 of the second overtime, sending the Madison Square Garden crowd into a frenzy and the Rangers into the finals for the 10th time. New York, which plays host to Yancouver on Tuesday, has won three titles — none since 1940.

The Rangers, who had the NHL's best regular-season record, held off their legendary Cup Curse despite allowing Valeri Zelepukin's tying goal with 7.7 seconds left in requalation. "It's an important step to get where we want to get to," Rangers captain Mark Messier said. "It was an ineredible series, obviously — three overtime games. Two strong teams going at it."

The Rangers outshot the Devils 48-32 and dominated both overtimes but couldn't claim the series until Matteau's unassisted goal.

Matteau carried the puck behind the New Jersey net and tried to center a pass to Ess Tikkanen. But the puck went off the stick of sliding Devils defenseman-Viancheslav Feitsow and past goalie Martin Brodeur, giving Matteau his second overtime in Game 3.

It capped an unprecendented comeback for the Rangers, who had lost cach of their previous 15 best-of-7 se-/ day's dramatics.

New Jersey, still looking for its first trip to the finals, also lost in seven games to Boston in the 1988 conference final.

Banks are 2-4 in seventh games over the years. New York's only other Game 7 victory, in 1992, came in a first-round series against the Devils. New York goalie Mike Richter made 31 swes, Brodeur 46.

A sensational goal by Brian Leetch put the Rangers up 1-0 at 9:31 of the second period.

He then spun 180 degrees to his backhand, feezing Devils defender 311 Guerin, before skating in front of the net and staffling a backhander past Bredour. Richter made the lead stand until the wanning seconds, when Zelepukin whicked a rebound of his own shot past the All-Star goaltender. It was the second time in the series that the Devils scored late to force overtime. Stephane Richer scored with 42 seconds left in Game 1 and New Jersey went on to win in double over-time.

After going 4-for-15, from the field in the first three quarters, Malone hit his first three shots of the final period as Utah took an 84-67 lead. Humphries' 3-pointer with 5-45 left made it 89-74, and from there it was only a matter of keeping Houston from going on too big of a run. The Rockets missed 15 of their first 18 shots in the quarter, but had a 7-0 run after Humphries' basket to get the deficit down to 89-81. Homaeck answered with a driving layup with 1:34 left, and when Vernon Maxwell and Robert Hornissed 3-pointers in the next 48 seconds, Houston's final charge was Very Line 1 and 1 and

The last time Utah was in the conference final was 1992, when the Jazz Jost the first two games at Portland and then won Game 3 at the Delta Center. From that team, only Malone, Stockton, Corbin and Benoit are still in uniform.

Maxwell had 17 points and Sam Cassell 14, but no other Houston player reached double figures. Mario Elie was 0-for-7, Kenny Smith 1-for-5 and Cassell 2-for-9.

The Jazz got the lead as high as 73-55 midway through the third quarter after a 17-7 run in which Benoit scored the last six points. Houston scored seven of its next nine points from the free throw line, and Cassell's 3-pointer with 13 seconds left got the deficit down to nine.

Hornack's two free throws with 0.9 seconds left sent Utah into the fourth quarter with a 78-67 lead.

Utah held a 52-40 lead at the half. The first two periods were noteworthy for the poor shooting by Olajuwon (4-for-15) and Malone (2-for-10) and for Houston's four technicals fouls, none of which were prompted by any ranting or raving. The officials called one each on coach Rudy Tomjanovich, Olajuwon, Marwell and Cassell after close calls and what seemed like normal backtalk from the Rockets.

Utah had a 9-0 run bridging the first and second periods and a 7-2 run midway through the second quarter. Olajuwon didn't score his first back tunil 1-27 remained, although he finished the half with 10 points and seven rebounds.

Parents. Promoter's. Agents. Tennis. Greed. Commerce, Media. Farne.

Fans. MTV. Da da, da da.

There seems no great urgency to blame Capriati herself. Child wonders do not have to burn out or grow up to be felons.

Some, like Shirley Temple, grow up to be ambassador to Czecheslovakia, I do not recall seeing either Tracey. Austin or Andrea Jaeger with numbers under their head shots. And, in fact, the two most often used examples of what tennis does to teen-agers have turned out fine. They are competent young women with full lives. But, more on what's next later. First Twould like to add my suspect to the culprit's list. I suggest that Capriati's problems are the fault of baseball. If baseball land not been on strike in the spring of 1990, maybe none of this would have happened. Missionaries press for S. Africa change

When something happens that is as starting and grand as the changes that recently took place in South Africa, most of us watch with interest but have little idea how many people risked their lives to bring it about. The struggle there went on for nearly 50 years. During that time, as you can imagine, a good many heroes emerged to kee'the effort going. Many of those heroes were missionaries from, the United States – every brand of Christian imaginable – sent to Africa to move people away from traditional African religions and establish Christianity forever.

Clark Morphew Faith

But instead, they were thrown into one of the most noble struggles of this century and a social transformation that will forever be recognized as catalogymic in nature. Not surprisingly, the first steps toward wiping out the buttal read divisions that characterized South Africa during those years were taken by those U.S. missionaries.

So, the other day I sat down with the Rev. Jim Knutson, 66, a former Lutherna missionary who spent 20 years in direct contact with the oppressed people of that nation. Knutson says the memory of events he witnessed in South Africa from 1954 to 1972 and the recent victories there have left him a bit diazed.

"I can't believe It," Knutson says as we began to talk. "I keep pinching myself. I get very emotional."

By the time Knutson and his wife, Arlene, began to talk. "I keep pinching myself. I get very emotional."

By the time Knutson and his wife, Arlene, arrived in South Africa as missionaries for the now-defunct Evangelical Lutheran Church, apartheid had already been established by the Nationalist Party, which came to power in 1948. Freedom of movement for blacks had been restricted. Some were denied an education. And no black person could vote.

But in the churches, black people ran the show. White missionaries did not automatically become the pastons of congregations, nor did they take the leadership positions at denominational headquarters.

Knutson says his assignment in South Africa was to support the native clergy who were heading panishes, running schools and ministering directly to the people in the black townships.

Industry Bathers. In the black town-ships.
But everything changed on March 21, 1960, when the repressed resentments of black peo-ple suddenly crupted in a town called Shapeville. The South African police moved in and massacred 68 black protesters. Many more were detained and tortured without trial. After that episcoke, Knutson says, the activists fled for their lives, some to foreign countries, where they found sympathizers and weapons. But the big change that took place in South Africa after the Sharpeville affair was the mobilization of the South African Council of Churches, which became the voice, of Christianity speaking against the oppression that held the country in chains. Every mainline church joined the ecumenical organization, and, with that solidarity came the power to speak against injustice.

with that solidarily came the power to speak against injustice. They were not speaking alone. The influence of Christianity in these matters lies in ish international unity. As the news of Stappreville spread around the world, every major denomination issuely resolutions decrying the violence and oppression. Even though the government refused to lift aparthed, the outery coming from religious people mised the concerns of the international community.

By the time Knutson left South Africa in 1972 to become the sceretary of African missions for his denomination, Nelson Mandela was a political prisoner, and his organization, the African National Congress, was excited a further was a "Femener," Knutson says, that drove the need for change deeper into the nation's consciousness.

Knutson looks back on these events with incrediality. He was a small-town boy who Knutson looks back on trese events with incredulity. He was a small-town boy who went to South Africa immediately after graduating from Luther Seminary in St. Paul, Minn. Little did he know that his assignment would throw him into one of the great dramas of this century.

"I've had the experiences of several lifetimes," Knutson says.

Now Knutson also believes that South Africa must move forward on its problems: 50 percent illiteracy among older citizens, half its people unemployed and 7 million living in shantles.

shanties.

"It will take a long time to overcome those problems," Knutson says. "But there's a lot of commitment-from people in the government and a lot of talent. I would say, except for the nee-Nazi hardifners on the right, whites are saying, 'We have to make this work.'"

Pastor documents rise of gay power

Conservative church became embroiled in debate when it fired homosexual organist

TWIN FALLS – It happened late at night, 11 years ago, but Chuck Mellhenny hasn't forgotten the sight, the sound or the feeling. At first, he thought someone was outside his home banging trash cans together. He quieted his breathing to listen more closely. A few seconds later, a ball of fire spun through his bedroom window. It was the culmination of nearly five years of death threats and attacks on his property, his church and his family, Mellhenny said in a phone interview last Monday. He's since written a book about his experiences. On Wednesday, Idaho Family Forum will bring him to Tyrin Falls to tell his story.

Mellhenny has been the pastor of the First Orthodox Presbyterian Church in San Francisco for more than 20 years. It's a small congregation, less than 50 members, with an old fashioned parsonage-next-door-to-the-church scrup. The church is of the conservative bent. Its pastor teaches his people that adultery, forhication and homosexuality are contrary to the word of God.

All was well in that little California congregation until the summer of '78, when word leaked out that the church organist was a practicing homosexual.

"We let him go," Mellhenny said, "and we soon found out it's against the law to do that."

we let him go, Meilhenny said, and we soon found out it's against the law to do that."

The church was sued.

Though Meilhenny and his people eventually won in court ("we had to prove there was a history behind our beliefs"), it cost them $100,000 to do so. By that time, the story had become a somewhat unwilling spokesman for the anti-gay culture.

"The whole issue of homosexuality was an area I didn't want to get into." Meilhenny said. "but, in the province of God, it was brought to us."

Meilhenny's book, written with his wife Donna, is entitled "When the Wicked Seize City." (Hunting House, $9.99) It explores "the rise of gay power" and encourages Christians to organize and prepare for battle. "The issue is actually secular humanism, and homosexuality is just one phase of it. "Meilhenny said." but homosexuality is explicitedly, repeatedly talked about in the Old and New. Testaments as being overthy-antagonistic to intofa values."

Mellhenny often uses Romans I and I Corinthians 6 in his sermions on the subject. And he lays the blame for today's troubles in a surprising spot.

"Indict the church community, for reject-"

"I indict the church community for rejecting historical biblical morality," he said. "In the '50s, when I was growing up in Maine, we had, blue laws and Bibles in school and

"A person's faith should never be the issue," he said.

tions on any controversial issue." He added, "Groups like the Idaho Family Formit are faming the Ilames of the controversy by oringing anti-gay activists cloaked as religious figures into Idaho."

Mellhenny said be has already received calls from gay protesters cursing him for Idanning his Idaho tin.

He just finished touring Australia, and his story has been told on the "700 Club" and "Focus on the Family."

Mellhenny is 47 pow. It is three children are 16, 18 and 20. The family lives with bars on their windows and a dog standing watch outside. After several attacks on their church, Mellhenny and group of evangelical pastors met with then San Francisco. mayor Dianne Feinstein. The result was police protection for the Mellhenny family. "Our kids have been raised in this environment," Mellhenny said. "Our youngest was the most affected. After her bedroom was attacked in the middle of the night, we had to build a special room inside the house with no windows so she could sleep."

Still. the Mellhenny, haven't seriously considered moving out of San Francisco. Chere has been no voice from God. Mellhenny said.

"It sounds like people behaved inappropriately (in the San Francisco incidents), and I condemn gay and lesbian people who harass other people, "asid Boise resident Brian Bergquist, a member of Don't Sign On and Idaho for Human Dignity, groups that oppose anti-gay discrimination, "but there is a minister who regularly goes and pickets the funerals of people who have died of AIDS, and that doesn't make me think all Christians picket funerals."

He declined to say whether or not that

"At least people owned up and acknowledged traditional moral values," he said.
Today, he contrads these

Today, he contends, there is a different mentality. It's a mentality that he characterizes as "complete and total abandonment" of biblical values.

Not everyone is a fan.

Religion takes center stage in Texas elections

"I don't think you have to be a religious conservative to realize that condom distribution is a volatile issue," he said.

That very issue was a hot topic in the recent school board elections in the Dallas suburb of Plano, where conservative Christians defeated the school board president, vice president and a 12-year board member.

said, "I don't want them telling my children when to pray and how to pray and giving my children their values."

Religion played a part in other elections with similar results.

In Austin, voters overturned the city "domestic partners" benefits policy following a campaign launched by the Ghristian group Concerned Texans Inc.

The policy extended insurance benefits to the unmarried partners of city employees – including same sex partners – and its defeat was, a blow to Austin Demoerats.

"They whipped us bad," said Scottic Falton, whipped us bad," said Scottic Falton, and the same sex partners of the same sex partners of the same sex partners – and its defeat was, a blow to Austin Demoerats.

"They whipped us bad," said Scottic Falton, and the same sex partners of the same sex partners of the same sex partners of the same sex partners. This is a wake-up call to liberal Austin and free thinkers everywhere."

In Midland, a loose group called Conservative Republicans endorsed candidates in four races for mayor, City Council, school district and college district. Two of those candidates – including the mayor's challenger – won.

And so, life goes on for Mellhenny.

Western gay congregations worry about fighting attacks

Conservative Christian groups, which initiated the campaign to delete religion from the list, claimed that employers would be forced to create "religion-free" workplaces in order to avoid legal action over religious disputes.
Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., who plans to hold hearings on the issue next month, agreed that "religious freedom could be suppressed in the workplace by employers who are simply trying to avoid legal problems."
"Apparently, if you have a Bible on the corner of your desk, that's going to constitute harassment," said. Rep. Roscoe Brattett, R-Md.
In response to protests over inclusion of religion in the guidelines, the EEOC has decided to extend for 30 days, until June 13, the period for public comment.

Church (U.S.A) is caught in the eye of the storm.
Last week, the Rev. Mary An Lundy, a top Presbyterian official who played a key role in organizing the event, resigned.
The denomination expects to lose millions of dollars from congregations who have cut donations in protest of the interdenominational conference sponsored by the World Council of Churches.

And the flood of discontent

Churches.
And the flood of discontent continues to rise.
For those unfamiliar with the flap, 2,000 women and some men attended a conference last fall to explore new ways of speaking about God - using insights from feminist theology.
Among the more sensational highlights: God got a feminine name; pagar and lesbian themes were hailed as holy; and some biblical views of Jesus Christ were, well, nailed to a cross.
"Re-Imagining." The label seems relatively harmless: A creative look at God. Not a bad idea - unless that fresh new view warps the reality of the Bible and undermines the foundation of the Christian faith.

Tin not a big lan of some tradi-

I'm not a big fan of some tradi-onal religious views.

I'm not a big fin of some tradi-tional religious views.

I don't see Jesus as having blond hair and blue eyes, as so many religious artists did. (Ethnically, Jesus was a Middle Eastern Jew who more than likely had dark hair and dark features).

I don't believe I have to be in a plush, stained-glass adorned edi-fice to worship God in spirit and dorsn't even own a building.)

I'm not impressed by fancy flowing robes, gold-plated sacra-mental utensils or pastoral plati-tudes delivered in the "high and holy" language of King James, (King James authorized a fine translation of the Bible, but most Americans just don't speak the king's English anymore.)

I don't believe in doing things such as having all-black or all-white churches – simply because 'that's the way we 've been doing things around here for years. Familiar religious trappings can be just that – a 'trap. They can hishibit growth – spiritual growth. So get creative in worship. Get inaginative. Get different. But don't get away from the truths of the Bible. This, I feel, is where the "Re-Imagining" conference creed.

the "Re-Imagining" conference orred.

I, like some feminist theologians, am not happy with sexist traditions that have been embraced by churches to make women feel like second-class efficients. The Jesus of the Bible never readed women that way.

I realize that many women have been traditionally taught to be submissive to men in a way that actually boils down to oppression through the use of Biblical verses that have been taken out of context. (Please note Ephesians 5:23–30.)

And Lunderstand that women have traditionally been blamed for

And Lunderstand that women have traditionally been blamed for everything wrong in the world. (Hey, my name is not Eve.)

But I don't believe that errant human tradition should be a springboard for creating or "reimagning" a new god – or rejecting the God of the Bible.

Men and women were created in God's image, not the other way around. Men and women have different strengths and weakness-es; together they make the perfect-qomplement. The Bible is an amazing document. Used. correctly and contextually, it can heal the problems that divide men and women today.

I hope the organizers of this conference "re-imagine" their goals and renew their trust in the Bible. God can hold his own.

Popular novel foretells peace accord

The story tells of an engaging, affishle stranger who appeared in the Holy Land in the hostile atmosphere between Jews and Palestinian Arabs, but he soon had them meeting together and building mutual trust.

It led to a pact of peace between them, the tale goes, ending their long, sometimes deadly conflict of suspicion, hared, fears and intermittent war.

before last fall's compact actually was achieved.

"An Orthodox rabbi called me up and said he had never dreamed that he would ever see the day when fiction would become prophecy," Gizzone said. "People said it couldn't happen and I had no way of knowing." So what produced his conclusion? "Well, I pray hard before I write, and I felt this is the way it's got to happen. I hoped somebody over there would see it, and plant the seed in some people's minds,"

Whateyer the effect, he said the book was "very, very popular in Israel" and "Arab people love it, too." Each side "could feet that with open hearts they could become instruments of peace to one another."

After the breakdown in negotiations caused by the Feb. 25 killings in a Hebron mosque, Girzone predicted revived talks, which were affirmed recently by both sides. "Peace will come," Girzone said. "People there are going to realize they have a winning combination just over the horizon."

The catalyst in the novel is a for-bearing, compassionate stranger named Joshua. He's also a key char-acter in Girzone's previous widely read novels, and will be in a forth-coming novel, "Joshua in New York Cilv."

In the Holy Land novel as elsewhere, Joshuar Identifiers himself as Jewish, as was Jesus, but showed equal regard for faiths of Muslims and Christians as serving the same God, enlisting all sides in a growing chain of meetings to foster understanding and peace.
"You have freed yourselves from bitterness and hatred and in the beautiful spirit of God's forgiveness you have befriended one another," Joshua told more than 30,000 on the plain of Esdraelon.

"This has not been easy, nor will it be easy in the future."
In Girzone's portrayal, Joshua is warm, caring and confident, and does some potent preaching. He said, "My message to you is: stay the course, continue on your way and do not lose heart. You are doing the work of God, and he will not allow you to fail."

The "Re-Imagining God" conference invited women theologians to look at new ways of picturing God, Jesus, church, cration, community, and the world. Conference participants reportedly challenged the overwhelmingly male references to God in prayer and scripture and explored God's feminine aspects.

The first Idaho Drug Prevention Conference just concluded in Suy Valley on May 14. In several presentations, character education and teaching common core values were presented as some of the best hopes for turning our nation around from the drug, sex and crime plagues that manpage around us. Our founding fathers set the nation up with character education because they knew it was essential for the survival of our democracy. The Bible was read from and a pmyer offered daily in our public schools right up until 1962-63.

Reader comment Steve Wills

This instruction in wisdom was good for believers and unbelievers. We then pulled our source of light. Andrew Jackson said, "That book is the rock on which our republic rests." According to Wallbuilders statistics, major crime and educational statistics remained at a steady level the 10 years before 1962-63. What happened after we pulled the character education program our founding fathers put in our schools? Unwed pregnancies went up 535 percent; divorce went up more than 100 percent; violent crimes went up 534 per cent; violent crimes went up 534 per cent; violent crimes went up 544 per cent.

America is No. 1 in the world in drug usage and abortion. I do not believe that these statistics are a coincidence. Our light has become darkness. Let us all return to the true light of the Bible and find truth, love, discipline, salvation and forgiveness through Jesus before it's too late for our country and our children.

Show care for those giving warning signs

Recently, our Twin Falls community learned of the apparent suicide of one of its prominent business-women. I could feel the shock, sorrow and disappointment of the town in tearning of her demise. So we have asked, "What could we have asked, "What was pain she was carrying?" "What was pain she was carrying? "What was pain she was carrying? "What was pain she was carrying? "What was pain she was a positive response to pain and is apositive response to pain and is always intentional. It often means listening closely to the people around us. One myth about suicide is that victims sound no warning. The fact is that, in most cases, people talk to others of their destructive intentions before they attempt suicide. We must take those soundings very scriously. "A" stands for affirmation. In this, we acknowledge another's worth as a human being, just because the person exists. The basic value of every life is a foundation of the Christian faith and still is a virtue in our society — I think. Affirming words help persons find the inner strength to seek solutions to their problems. "R" stands for responsibility. Everyone has the ability to respond to another's cry for help. The church is built around the premise that together we are stronger than we are apart. Alone we can't see the horizon. We need to stand on another's shoulders. Jesus expressed this when he beckoned to Jews to come unto him as a mother hen would beckon her chicks to come under her wings. "E" stands for recouragement.

On a recent Sunday, his 7,000-seat Family Worship Center was two-thirds empty as Swaggart started his pltch.

Swaggart is one of the most gifted television preachers, but even his enormous talent isn't enough to rebuild an empire he lost after his highly publicized meetings with prostitutes, televangelism scholars say.

The viewing audience that financially feeds his ministry also is vastly smaller. Where Swaggart's extensive network of cable and satellite feeds once covered the globe and reached a million Americans, only 100,000 U.S. households watch his weekly sermon coday, according to Arbitron, the rating agency.

A health and fitness center, originally built for students of the Bible college, sells memberships to the public.

Born to poverty in a Mississippi River Delta area in northeast Louisiana, Swaggart got his start in 1958, hitting the revival circuit with his wife, Frances, in a beat-up old Plymouth and living hand-to-mouth. By the 1980s, Swaggart had built a televangelism empire. His Family Worship Center overflowed with attendance, and 15,000 students attended his Bible college.

He spread his message through books and records. But his main instrument was his weekly telecast. He was the most-watched televangelist in the country for much of the last decade, according to Arbitron.

In 1991, he was stopped with a prositiute in his car in California.

His viewing audience fell to 400,000 households. His ministries complex, which once employed 1,500, was at half staff. His Bible college lost 70 percent of its sudents.

"Because of the second scandal, fit will be difficult for him, no matter how gifted a preacher and especially a television pracher, to rebuild a national ministry," said Queentin Schultz, author of "Televangelism and American Culture" and a communications professor at Calvin College in Grand Lavin Col

Church still suffers after re-imaging

The fullout from the November 1993 "Re-Imagining Conference" in Minneapolis continues to rain down, and the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A) is caught in the eye of the storm.

Last week, the Rev. Mary Ann Lundy, a top Presbyterian official who played a key role in organizing the event, resigned.

The denomination expects to lose millions of dollars from congregations who have cut donations in protest of the interdenominational conference sponsored by the World Council of Churches.

And the flood of discontent

And the froot of continues to rise.

For those unfamiliar with the flap, 2,000 women and some men attended a conference last full to explore new ways of speaking about God—using insights from attended a conterence has han to explore new ways of speaking about God — using insights from feminist theology.

Among the more sensational highlights; God got a feminine name; pagan and lesbian themes were hailed as holy; and some biblical views of Jesus Christwere, well, nailed to a cross.

"Re-Imagining." The labe, seems relatively harmless: A fresh eye. A new perspective. A fresh eye. A new perspective. A creative look at God. Not a batidea—unless that fresh new view warps the reality of the Bible and undermines the foundation of the Christian fails.

I'm not a big fan of some traditional religious views.

I don't see Jesus as having blond hair and blue eyes, as so many religious views.

I don't see Jesus as having blond hair and blue eyes, as so many religious views.

I don't see Jesus as having blond hair and blue features.)

I don't believe I have to be in a plush, stationed-gluss, adomed, edificate to worship God in spirit and in truth. (My congregation doesn't even own a building.),

I'm not impressed by fancy flowing robes, gold-plated sacrimental utensils or pastoral platitudes delivered in the "high and holy" language of King James.

(King James authorized a fine translation of the Bible, but most Americans just don't speak the king's English anymore.)

I don't believe in doing things—such as having all-black or all-white churches—simply because that's the way we've been doing things around here for years."

"that's the way we've been doing hings around here for years." Familiar religious trappings can be just that - a trap. They can inhibit growth - spiritual growth. So get creative in worship. Get unaginative. Get different. But don't get away from the truths of the Bible. This, I feel, is where the "Re-Imagining" conference erred.

erred.

I, like some feminist theolo-1. He some reminist theore-gians, am not happy with sexist traditions that have been embraced by churches to make women feel like second-class citi-zens. The Jesus of the Bible never zens. The Jesus of the Bible never treated women that way.

I realize that many women have been traditionally taught to be submissive to men in a way that actually boils down to oppression through the use of Biblical verses that have been taken out of context. (Please note Ephesians 5:25-30.)

And I understand that women

And I understand that women Jave traditionally been blamed for everything wrong in the world. (Hey, my name is not Eve.) But I don't believe that errant human tradition should be a springboard for creating or "reimagning", a new god - or rejecting the God of the Bible. Men and women have created in God's image, not the other way around. Men and women have different strengths and weaknesses; together they make the perfect complement. The Bible is an amazing document. Used correctly and contextually, it can heal the problems that divide men and women today.

I hope the organizers of this conference "re-imagine" their goals and renew their trust in the Bible. God can hold his own.

Popular novel foretells peace accord

The story tells of an engaging, affa-ble stranger who appeared in the Holy Land in the hostile atmosphere between Jews and Palestinian Arabs, but he soon had them meeting togeth-er and building mutual trust. It led to a pact of peace between them, the tale goes, ending their long, sometimes deadly conflict of suspi-cion, hatred, fears and intermittent war.

cion, hatred, fears and intermittent war.

That cooperative accord is described in a popular novel, "Joshua in the Holy Land" by the Rev. Joseph F. Girzone. It came out almost a year before last fall's compact actually was achieved.

"An Orthodox rabbi called me up and said he had never dreamed that he would ever see the day when fiction would become prophecy," Girzone said. "People said it couldn't happen and I had no way of knowing."

So what produced his conclusion? "Well. I pray hard before I write, and I felt this is the way it's got to happen. I hoped somebody over there would see it, and plant the seed in some people's minds."

Whatever the effect, he said the book was "very, very popular in Israel' and "Arab people love it, too." Each side "could feet that with open hears they could feet that with open hears they could become instruments of peece to one another."
After the breakdown in negotiations caused by the Feb. 25 killings in a Hebron mosque, Girzone predicted revived talks, which were affirmed recently by both sides. "Peace will come," Girzone said. "People there are going to realize they have a win-ning combination just over the hori-zon."

"You have freed yourselves from bitterness and hatred and in the beau-tiful spirit of God's forgiveness you have befriended one another," Joshua told more than 30,000 on the plain of Esdraelon.

"This has not been easy, nor will it be easy in the future."
In 'Girzone's portrayal, Joshua is warm, earing and confident, and does some potent preaching. He said, "My message to you is: stay the course, continue on your way and do not lose, heart, You are doing the work of God, and he will not allow you to fail."
Eventually, the meetings influenced conciliating shifts in the Israeli government, and through secret talks in Holland (paralleling the actual secret talks in Norway), a fictional compact was reached between Israel and Saudi Arabia, instead of the actual pact with the Palestine Liberation and Saudi Ambia, instead of the actu-al pact with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

When a reporter in the novel sug-gested it was a naive dream to think peace could be achieved between Jews and Ambs, Joshua said it "may seem like a dream" but dreams are "reality shorn of cynicism."
"Dreams have ... cleared the way for new realities," he said.

and decay they have created by rejecting God.

The first Idaho Drug Prevention Conference just concluded in Sun Valley on May 14. In several presentions, character education and teaching common core values were presented as some of the best hopes for turning our nation around from the drug, sex and crime plagues that rampage around us. Our founding fathers set the nation up with character education because they knew it was essential for the survival of our democracy. The Bibb was read from and a prayer offered daily in our public schools right up until 1962-63.

Reader comment Steve Wills

This instruction in wisdom was good for believers and unbelievers. We then pulled our source of light. Andrew Jackson said, "That book is the rock on which our republic rests." According to Wallbuilders statics, major crime and educational statistics remained at a steady level the 10 years before 1962-63. What happened after we pulled the character education program our founding fathers put in our schools? Unwed pregnancies went up 553 percent; divorce went up more than 100 percent; violent crimes went up 544 percent;

America is No. 1 in the world in drug usage and abortion. I do not believe that these statistics are a coin-eidence. Our light has become darkness. Let us all return to the true light of the Bible and find truth, love, discipline, salvation and forgiveness through Jesus before it's too late for our country and our children.

Show unravels Dead Sea Scrolls mysteries

SAN FRANCISCO - The

SAN FKANUSCO - Inscraps of manuscript are ragged, tom and blackened around the edges. The ancient ink of the Hebrew lettering fades into the grain of the brown parchment—made from the skin of sheep slaughtered 2,000 years ago in southern Palestine. But as the lights in the glass cases that house the scraps inside the M.H. de Young Museum blink on and off, it's as if they are signaling that these are no mere tatterings, but pieces of history. They are the Dead Sea Scrolls, manuscripts that illuminate the turbulent time of the ancient rabbis who formulated what became modern Judism, of Jesus and the Apostles, and the Roman destruction of the Second Temple in Jerusalem in A.D. 70. They are part of a new exhibit — "The Mystery of the Dead Sea Scrolls" — which will remain on display at the museum in Golden Gate Park through Sunday in their only West Coast showing.

"As. you're standing there contemplating these ancient texts, take a deep breath to get in touch with what you're seeing," advises Ken Cohen, president of Lehrhaus Judiaica, the Jewish adult education school that holds classes throughout Northern California.
"Realize that you are reading 2,000-year-old documents from the critical period when the world in which we lived was formed. It was the moment that saw the convergence of Greek and Roman culture, Jewish culture, and the emergence of Christianity to help form civilization as we know it."

Since their discovery in 1947 by three Ta'amirch Bedouin shepherds who wandered into a cave in the limestone cliffs near the western shore of the Dead Sea, the scrolls have generated enormous public interest. They have also unleashed a plethora of "learned vendettas" in the academic world, involving a sequence of remarkable controversies.

The proliferation followed passage of federal legislation in 1988. As a means of economic development, casinos have netted high profits and provided employment for tribal members, paid for health care, education and housing for once-impoverished tribes.

But the Rev. Stephen J. Sidorak, executive director of the Christian Conference of Connecticut, said gaming "could turn out to be another exploitation of Native Americans by outsiders." Other factors he cited are the competition between tribes and the likelihood of saturating the market.

Show care for those giving warning signs

Recently, our Twin Falls community learned of the apparent suicide of one of its prominent business-women. I could feel the shock, sorrow and disappolatiment of the town in learning of her demise.

Some have asked, "What could we have done to prevent this?" "Did anyoie know the pain she was carrying?" "What was her story?"

Most people will never know or need to know the pain she was carrying?" "What was her story?"

Most people will never know or need to know the answers to these questions in her case.

A better question might be, "Is anyone around you throwing out signs of warning?"

"C" stands for compassion. It is a positive response to pain and is always intentional. It often means listening closely to the people around us. One myth about suicide is that victims sound no warning. The fact is that, in most cases, people talk to others of their destructive intentions before they attempt suicide. We must take those soundings very seriously.

"A" stands for affirmation. In this, we acknowledge another's worth as a human being, just because the person exists. The basic value of every life is a foundation of the Christian faith and still is a virtue in our society – I think. Affirming words help persons find the inner strength to seek solutions to their problems.

"R" stands for responsibility. Everyone has the ability to respond to another's cry for help. The church is built around the premise that together we are stronger than we are apart. Alone we can't see the horizon. We need to stand on another's shoulders, Jesus expressed this when—he beckended to Jews to come untor him as a mother hen would becken her chicks to come under her wings.

"E" stands for encouragement.

Connecticut Christian leaders urge environmental activism

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) – Leaders of Christian churches in Connecticut are urging their con-gregations to become more aggres-sive in supporting environmental efforts. In a pastoral letter sent last week to 2,400 Catholic and Protestant churches in the state, the religious leaders from 14 denominations termed environmental concerns a moral issue. They said they are concerned "that the environmental crisis is not yet viewed with the urgency it warrants."

The letter, issued by the Christian Conference of Connecticut, asked each congregation to organize an environmental mission group and announced plans to convene statewide training conference on the environment next spring. "Our mission for the environment will be conducted in dialogue with those who work in our economic and governmental institutions," the letter said. "As Christian citizens we have a responsibility to suggest concrete actions and specific programs to the secular society."

Chinese government, businesses welcome Clinton's trade decision

The Associated Press

BEIJING — President Clinton has created a historic opportunity to improve relations with Beijing by cutting the link between China's human rights record and its trading rights with the United States, China said Priday.

"Chinese-American relations are important, and the importance far exceeds other bilateral relationships," Wu Jianmin, spokesman for China's Foreign Ministry, told reporters.

But Wu later added that there are still obstacles in relations between the two countries. He expressed regret that Clinton banned Chinese gun imports and urged Clinton to lift a U.S. ban on high-tech equipment sales to China.

The ban was imposed after Beijing used troops and traks to crush pro-democracy protests by hundreds of students and other troops and traks to rush pro-democracy for Tiananmen Square on June 3.4, 1988. Next week is the fifth anniversary of the erackdown.

Clinton announced Thursday he will request "most favored antion" rudine status for Clinton announced Thursday he will renew "most favored nation" trading status for China, granting low U.S. tariffs to Chinese imports. He also said future MFN renewals would be severed from human rights.

China rejects outside attempts to influence its policy. Wu said Washington's concerns over human rights in China were unwarranted "and, interfered in China's internal affaits."

Human rights groups were critical of the policy change, saying Clinton had removed all pressure on China to improve human rights.

The decision to renew MFN was a retreat from last year, when Clinton said China must produce "overall significant progress" on human rights this year to win creewal.

Expansion slows during early 1994

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Economic growth slowed dramatically in the first quarter of 1994 because of winter storms and the California earthquake, but remained stronger than anticipated, the government said Friday.

The Commerce Department said the economy expanded at a healthy 3 percent annual rate — down from the booming 7 percent tate for the final three months of 1993 but more rapidly than the government estimated a month ago.

The stock and bond markets, worried about inflation and rising interest rates, fell after the report. And analysts admitted they were scratching their heads over the continued strength of consumer buying and an unexpected rise in domestic government spending.

"It was stronger than I anticipated," said economist Sung Won Sohn of Norwest-Corp. "People were getting cabin fever in January and February and decided to go out and enjoy life in March."

But analysts said the economy still is slowing from the torrid pace at the end of last year and, with ligher interest rates, will slacken further in the latter half of 1994.

Friday's increase in the gross domestic product was revised upward from last month's 2.6 percent estimate for the first quarter of 1994.

The Commerce Department said higher consumer spending, government purchases and net exports more than offset a downward revision in business inventories.

The eye-popping growth that closed out last year — the highest since the start of 1984 — played a big part in prompting the Federal Reserve to boost short-term interest rates four times this year.

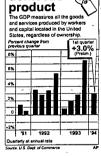

Economists insist most signs point to modest expansion this year, particularly after the full effects of the Fed's latest interest rate increases are felt.

High-tech park planned for Moscow area

MOSCOW APP—An economic development group has selected a parcel near Moscow's northwest side for a proposed research and technology business park.

Carole Helm, executive director of the Moscow-Latah County Economic Development Council, said the group will ask Moscow to serve as the lead agency in applying for state and federal grants to improve a 25-acre site.

The non-profit development council operates the University of Idahoowned Business Technology Incubator, where a number of high-tech companies are developing. Businesses are beginning to graduate from the 4-year-old incubator, and there is no place for them to go in Moscow.

Stockholders reject union-backed move to alter Albertson's policies

BOISE (AP) — Attempts by employee-shareholders to force confidential voting and the annual election of all board members were overwhelmingly rejected Friday by the stockholders of Albertson's Inc. Shareholders with nearly 75 percent of the stock represented at the annual meeting opposed the move to elect the entire 12-member board annually rather than a third every year and those with just under 70 percent of the stock backed the proposal for confidential voting.

About 85 percent of the 260 million shares were voted at the annual meeting of the nation's fourth largest retail food and drug chain, which reported a 6 percent increase in first quarter profits to $78.8 millions to board opposed both proposals.

Employees pressing the changes were supported by the Teamsters Union and Bart Naylor, a Boise native with the union's corporate affairs office in Washington, D.C., as part of the union's campaign to exert influence on corporate boards across the nation.

The Albertson's board said annual election of all members would eliminate continuity in corporate leadership and make corporate take-over by proxy easier. The board maintained it was a ploy by the union to gain leverage over the company for future contract negotiations.

But Naylor, referring to the more than $30 million 'Albertson's has paid to settle racial and sex discrimination suits in recent years, argued that the chain has problems with race and gender relations that its all-white, mostly, male board directors was not adequately responding to. The widow of corporate founder Joe Albertson, Kathyrn, is the only woman on the board.

Rainym, is the only woman on the board.

But Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Gary Michael emphasized that in the largest of the suits — a $29.5 million settlement in California — the company did not concede any discriminatory policy and the firm representing the workers allegedly discriminated against said it was willing to take the cash because Albertson's had already made strides in equal opportunity hiring and promotion. "We think we've got equal employment opportunities in place," Michael told more than a thousand shareholders attending the meeting in Boise, "We're proud of our record, We're making great progress." He also indicated that settling the complaint was cheaper than fight-ing it for years and years in the courts.

ing it for years and years in the courts.

Naylor said secret ballots were important to remove any employee-shareholders fear of retaliation by management for voting against its wishes, but he also conceded that there was no indication Albertson's, employee-shareholders had evereen subjected to coercion or retaliation in such cases.

The board cailed that proposal unnecessary and unworkable. It said stockholders can protect their identity, if they want, by have the shares held for them by a third party who would vote the annual proxy.

Advisors say Denny's settlement was best choice in bad situation

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — When Denny's restaurants settled dozens of racial discrimination complaints for 346 million, the chain's executives didn't have much choice, corporate crisis management advisers say.

The alternative was a potentially—long-court-fight that could have been more costly and done further damage to Denny's corporate image.

And by waiting almost two years to put the trouble behind it, Flagstar Cos. Inc., Denny's parent, may have been left with little choice but to settle for big money, said Gerald C. Meyers, the former chairman of American Motors and now a public relations consultant.

"Havine sone so far, they are really relations consultant.

"Having gone so far, they are really dealing in big-time damage control, as opposed to rational crisis management," Meyers said. They dug a hole so deep that there's almost.no choice, but to jump in and hope it doesn't go all the way to China."
In announcing the settlement Tuesday with the Justice Department,

Jerome J. Richardson, Flagstar's the chief executive officer, applogized for any discrimination against black patrons.

But he stopped short of admitting the Spartanburg-based company had policies that fostered discrimination. Some of 4,300 people who joined two class action lawsuits-against therestaurant charged they were forced to pay for their food in advance or were denied service.

Isobel Parke, a senior counselor with Jackson Jackson Wagner, a New Hampshire firm specializing in rehabilitating corporate images, said executives had to "do some very careful calculation, not only in the time it would take before the public eye but also in the legal fees."

In the end, she said, getting the issue out of the public's mind may have been the best thing to do.
"A perception in the court of public opinion can hurt you more than an indictment," Parke said.

Constance Bagley, a lawyer and lecturer at Sanford University's business school, said Richardson's failure to admit fault could end up turning off some customers who might have been brought back into the fold with a complete mea culpa. "There are instances when the proper thing to do is to step up to the plate and say we did do something wrong and we're sorry," Ms. Bagley said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"The perpetual obstacle to human advancement is custom." — John Stuart Mill.

West holds the key to defeating today's game. Unfortunately a routine defense will not succeed. Look over the play to see if you can spot where West missed his chance.
West led his fourth-best heart and dummy's king won in a 'now or never' effort. South crossed to his spade king to lead a low cub toward dummy, winning the king when West followed low. Back came a club toward South's ace, and when East played the nine, South ducked. West won his jack but he could not tatack hearts for any gain. In desperation, West led a diamond, but South had the ace instead of East. South now had his nine winners.
Where did West go wrong? He made the habitual play of second hand low in the club suit. Had he played his jack on the first lead of the suit. South would have had no winning option. If South played low from dummy, East would overtake and lead hearts. And if dummy's king won, East would have a natural club winner for the fatal heart return.
Would South have cinched the game by leading the first club from dummy, inserting his eight? Yes, but only if East failed to make the correct play of his nine. After East but only if East failed to make the correct play of his nine. After East but only if East failed to make the correct play of his nine.
