

Babbitt coming to Twin Falls

Babbitt

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt will be at the College of Southern Idaho Friday to hear public testimony on the often divisive topic of grazing reform for federal lands.

The hearing before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee will begin at 9 a.m. in the Shields Building auditorium. Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, who is an outspoken critic of Babbitt, sits on the committee.

If past grazing reform hearings are any clue, Babbitt is likely to get an earful at Friday's hearing.

"He's been going to grazing hearings for a long time," said Babbitt's spokeswoman, Mary Helen Thompson, "and this is a chance for him to listen and respond."

"He's been in every state in the West in the past year," Thompson added, "so this is not unusual for him, by any means."

Babbitt will arrive in Twin Falls on Wednesday night. On Thursday, he will tour the Princess Blue Ribbon mine, 14 miles northeast of Fairfield, Thompson said.

The mine tour will not be open to the public.

Friday's public hearing, on the other hand, will be open to the public. A panel of speakers has been selected to present testimony and, if time permits, spectators can speak their piece, too.

Three Creek rancher George Swan, who is president of the Idaho Cattle Association, will testify — and he plans to tell Babbitt not to waste public money on grazing reform.

Swan, who likened Babbitt to former Nazi leader Adolf Hitler at a public hearing last month, maintained that range reform will put thousands of family ranches — including his — out of business.

"His agenda is to eliminate livestock grazing on the federal range,"

U.S. Marines sail for Haiti

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Haitians who flee their country by boat will not be allowed into the United States, but will either be taken to refugee camps in Panama or returned home, the Clinton administration said Tuesday.

In the latest shift in policy, the administration said it wanted to halt a surge of fleeing boat people. The announcement came a day after more than 3,000 Haitians were picked up by the U.S. Coast Guard.

And in a new show of military force, the administration ordered four more warships and 2,000 Marines to sail toward Haiti and prepare for a potential evacuation of U.S. citizens.

"Those who are not political refugees will be returned," said William Gray,

Gray

President Clinton's special adviser on Haiti. "Those who are refugees will be given safe haven — those that are picked up on the sea — in Panama."

Gray said Haitians who apply at U.S. offices inside Haiti will be allowed to come to the United States if they are granted refugee status based on a well-founded fear of persecution.

In an earlier change of a policy that had adopted from the previous administration, Clinton announced on May 8 that Haitians with a well-founded fear of persecution would be allowed to come to the United States to pursue their asylum claims or go to a third country.

But a surge in refugees turned into a tidal wave Monday, with the U.S. Coast Guard intercepting 3,247 Haitians in 70 boats, doubling the previous single-day high set in May 1992. More than 100 Haitians died when a boat capsized. Nearly 700 had been picked up by midday Tuesday and hundreds more were expected, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The flow has swelled as the Clinton administration has tightened economic sanctions against Haiti in an effort to force out the military leaders who ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in

Ship's tomb guards its secrets

The Associated Press

ABOARD THE SUBMARINE CLELIA — The Edmund Fitzgerald's mangled carcass juts like a mountain from the flat, barren Lake Superior floor, rising as abruptly as the ship plunged to its death 19 years ago.

The stricken giant's two main sections lie 180 feet apart, tons of tonnage ore pellets from the cargo hold strewn between them on the gray silt bottom. Jagged rips in the hull, twisted steel plates and the bow's crumpled nose bear witness to the catastrophic force of the shipwreck.

The windows of the pilot house are gone, blown away by the explosive rush of water. The crow's nest atop the bridge is surprisingly intact.

The ship's bell, engraved with the name of the legendary ship, dangles silently from its frame.

The scenes were visible from the miniature submarine Clelia on Tuesday as scientists and marine historians concluded a three-day mission to probe the mystery of the Fitzgerald's sinking Nov. 10, 1975. All 29 crew members died. No distress signal was sent.

The explorers, led by Canadian marine scientist Joe MacInnis, conducted the first extensive manned survey of the wreckage. Colleagues of Jacques Cousteau made brief dives in 1980, and unmanned robots have photographed the scene.

"We still can't say why the ship went down, but we've found things that have never been seen before," MacInnis said.

The explorers concluded that the Fitzgerald did not break up on the water's surface, as some have speculated.

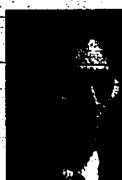

Damage to the bow — more extensive than previously thought — shows the 729-foot long ship probably hurtled downward with missile-like speed. Probably

Anti-gay leader dares ACLU to challenge initiative

Walton

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho Citizens Alliance founder Kelly Walton dared the American Civil Liberties Union Tuesday to carry out its threat of a court challenge if his anti-gay-rights initiative is adopted by voters this fall.

And he said if the state Supreme Court fails to uphold the constitutionality of the proposition, Idahoans should launch a campaign to oust the justices opposing it.

In an interview on KIDO radio in Boise the day before he planned to submit more than the required 32,061 registered voter signatures needed to put the proposition on the ballot, the Heyburn businessman said opponents of the initiative were dramatically oversteering its cost if adopted.

If the ACLU did sue, he added, that organization would be responsible for any skyrocketing legal bills, not the alliance.

"I refuse to bow to any threat of the ACLU," Walton said during the radio interview. "They can threaten me all day long, and I will continue and stay my course. These guys have no concept of what constitutionality is all about. All they want to do is revise what the constitution is about."

The initiative would ban state and local laws prohibiting discrimination against homosexuals. It would also bar public employees from portraying homosexuality as acceptable and restrict library material on homosexuality to adults.

A similar proposal in Colorado was ruled unconstitutional by a state judge there. That decision has been appealed.

Walton again dismissed opposition estimates of $26 million to bring libraries into compliance with the initiative's proscriptions and offered to have the alliance handle the matter for $20,000 a year or less.

Critics, who include nearly every political and civic leader in the state, maintain the initiative is not needed, is grounded in bigotry and would ac-

Heavy rain continues to soak Southeast, Midwest

The Associated Press

The remnants of Tropical Storm Alberto dumped heavy rain on the Southeast and Gulf Coast states Tuesday, while thundershowers rumbled across parts of the Midwest, spawning at least one tornado.

Just west of Maribel in eastern Wisconsin, a tornado caused some minor injuries, knocked down trees and power lines and damaged several homes in a rural subdivision, authorities said.

Moist tropical air brought the heaviest rain to Georgia, Alabama and Louisiana. During the six hours ending at noon EDT, 1.64 inches of rain fell in Lafayette, La.; 1.63 in New Orleans; 1.45 in Albany, Ga.; 1.41 in Atlanta; and 1.22 in Dothan, Ala.

Elsewhere, a cold front across the northern Plains produced scattered thundershowers. Rain showers and a few thundershowers also hit parts of Washington, Oregon and the northern Rockies. A severe thundershowers watch was posted for parts of Indiana, Ohio and the West Virginia.

Thundershowers dropped more than 3.5 inches of rain Tuesday morning in Grand Rapids, Mich.

September 1991.

Michael Barnes, a former congressman and close adviser to exiled Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, said he was confident Aristide would oppose the new policy.

"For the people of Haiti who are trying to escape from the reign of terror, this is a step backwards," Barnes said.

Amnesty International USA called the new policy "contrary to the intent of the 1980 Refugee Act to treat all refugees equally."

Gray said the first safe haven site would be in Panama and that agreement in principle also had been reached with the Caribbean nations of Dominica and Antigua. He said the agreement with Panama was for six months.

In Barbados, Antigua Prime Minister Lester B. Bird said Tuesday his country will allow the United States to process 2,000 Haitians during six months. The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees will operate the center, he said.

Gray noted that any "safe haven" would be on a temporary basis and that the Haitians will be repatriated when the crisis in their country is over.

Asked about the possibility of an invasion of Haiti, Gray said, "There is no military invasion imminent."

He deemed imminent as the next several days only, he is producing about the Great Lakes ecosystem.

the administration is "looking at that situation as it deteriorates." He said the sudden deployment of the warships was necessary because the deteriorating situation "poses a threat to the safety of Americans."

Pentagon spokesman Dennis Box said the new deployment will bring the number of U.S. warships in the region to about a dozen and will enable the military force "to deal with any contingencies."

The sailors and warships headed for Haiti had returned to the United States July 24, after a six-month deployment.

pelled by its 7,500-horsepower engines and the weight of its 26,000-ton ore cargo, the vessel reached the bottom in seconds and was smashed to pieces, said Tom Farnquist, director of the Great Lakes Shipwreck Historical Society.

"The crew had no idea what happened, it was so sudden, so explosive," Farnquist said.

A team of marine engineers and ship architects will analyze the findings, Farnquist said.

The two most common theories are that the ship took on water as 30-foot seas crashed over its side and finally nosedived under a monster wave; and that it hit a poorly charted shoal, tearing a gash in the hull hours before the sinking.

The search team conducted six dives over three days aboard Clella, a 22-foot submarine supplied by Harbor Branch Oceanographic Institution of Ft. Pierce, Fla.

From their base on the scientific research ship Edwin Link, the group crafted a detailed map of the wreck scene and compiled 10 hours of video footage. MacInnis said some of the scenes will appear in a television documentary he is producing about the Great Lakes ecosystem.

Farnquist will put some of the footage on display at the Great Lakes Shipwreck Museum at Whitefish Point, Mich., 17 miles from the Fitzgerald's grave site.

Swan said Tuesday in a telephone interview.

Critics have a lot of beefs with Babbitt's proposal, including provisions to:

- Double grazing fees to a base rate of $3.96 per month by 1997. After that, the fees could rise or fall by no more than 25 percent of the amount charged in the previous year.
- Charge more for holders of federal grazing permits to run cows they don't own. The Forest Service doesn't allow such sub-leasing, but the Bureau of Land Management does. Several categories of surcharges have been proposed, and the worst possible surcharge would boost the fee by 70 percent, Swan said.
- Allow environmentalists - who need not be residents of the area - to sit on advisory boards that make decisions about grazing on public lands.

was on a small trailer, surrounded by warning cones that said: "Caution Radioactive Material."

There was no one near the trailer, but Jakubowski said he found two Air Force men asleep inside an Air Force truck about a mile away.

Peugh and Sullivan said they've gotten two or three reports of Air Force activity on BLM land in recent weeks. Threat emitters don't do any damages to the surrounding area, Sullivan added.

At present, pilots from Mountain Home do their bomb training at several sites, including the Saylor Creek Range southeast of Banneux.

But Air Force officials say current training facilities are inadequate, and they are hoping to build a state-of-the-art bombing range on 25,000 acres in southern Owyhee County. If built, some 32 threat emitters would be installed across a huge area to provide realistic combat conditions for pilots.

Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus is a staunch backer of the proposed new range, but critics say current Air Force training activity is enough and more would jeopardize the area's wildlife.

A permanent threat emitter has been constructed on a five-acre site about six miles south of Grasmere, just west of Highway 51, Sullivan said. He personally negotiated the Air Force's right-of-way for access to the site.

Like Peugh, Sullivan said he's asked the Air Force to show its authority to put threat emitters on BLM land.

"If their answer is not acceptable, we will take the appropriate steps to bring them into compliance," he said.

ually strip homosexuals of basic civil rights. Attorney General Larry EchoHawk has twice said he believes it is unconstitutional.

Walton, reinforced by the opinion of eight lawyers that the initiative is constitutional, said the proposition amounts to a pre-emptive strike against further erosion of family values in Idaho. He argued that the state's highest court, all appointees of retiring Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, should recognize its legitimacy and value.

"If the Andrus-appointed court can't see the constitutionality of this initiative, we need new judges," Walton said. "Now that's not a threat. I'm hoping the court will see the common sense of this thing."

Opponents conceded last week that they had lost the battle to keep the initiative off the ballot but were heartened by the fact that Walton apparently fell far short of the 100,000 signatures he told supporters last winter that he wanted to gather. They promised a vigorous campaign costing up to $500,000 to defeat the initiative at the polls.

Identifying himself as a Republican, Walton said the alliance was a bipartisan organization. But he also blasted liberals for fighting the initiative and urged conservatives to make sure they are registered to vote.

"It only takes three or four minutes," he said. "It's an obligation. We've got to register to vote, especially if you're conservative. If you're liberal, forget it."

Walton made a pitch for Republican congressional challenger Helen Chenoweth, one of the few candidates to endorse the initiative, saying alliance members would work hard for her election over incumbent Democrat Larry LaRocco.

"We are helping lots of pro-family candidates and we're looking for others," he said.

Opponents of the initiative filed a complaint last spring with the Internal Revenue Service, claiming the alliance's involvement in partisan political campaigns violated the regulations governing its tax-exempt status. At that time, Walton said the alliance was not involved in partisan politics and any violation of IRS regulations was inadvertent.

That complaint is still pending.

Prosecutors: O.J. had time to kill

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A limousine driver and a guest at O.J. Simpson's estate told a tale of thumps in the night and a shadowy figure hurrying into the mansion as prosecutors Tuesday sought to establish that Simpson had as much as 75 minutes to commit murder.

Limo driver Allan Park testified he arrived early at Simpson's mansion for a 10:45 p.m. pickup the night of the murders and no one answered the intercom until after he saw a black person slip into the house close to 11 p.m.

"He told me he overslept, that he just got out of the shower and he'd be down in a minute," Park said of the voice over the intercom that he believed to be Simpson's.

And Brian "Kato" Kaelin, who lives in a guest house on the estate said he and Simpson returned from a McDonald's dinner about 9:45 p.m. and he didn't see him again until he went out to investigate thumps he heard at 10:40 p.m. and saw Simpson's short time later getting into the limousine.

Earlier testimony at the preliminary hearing has suggested that Simpson's ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and Ronald Goldman, a friend of hers, were killed between 10 and 11 p.m. June 12.

Howard Weitzman, one of Simpson's previous attorneys, said he was told by police that the slayings happened about 11 p.m. and that Simpson was at home at that time waiting for his ride to the airport. Simpson's lawyers have not disclosed his whereabouts in the hours of two leading up to 11 p.m.

Simpson, 46, is charged with stabbing to death Ms. Simpson, 33, and Goldman, 25.

So far, testimony at the hearing, which began Thursday and will determine whether there is enough evidence to go to trial, has shown only that Simpson had the opportunity to kill. There has been no evidence presented directly linking him to the murders.

And Municipal Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell hasn't yet revealed the contents of a bulky yellow envelope that Simpson's attorneys turned over last week. The appearance of the envelope gave rise to speculation that it could contain the 15-inch stiletto that Simpson allegedly bought several weeks before the murder.

After the lunch break, attorneys argued a defense motion to suppress 34 key pieces of evidence gathered at Simpson's home and the killings but before a search warrant was obtained. The defense says the search was illegal.

In court papers filed to counter that argument, prosecutors revealed for the first time that there was a path of bloody shoe prints from the dead bodies to an alley behind Ms. Simpson's condo.

The victims' necks suffered "extensive cutting" and there were "defensive wounds" on their hands, the prosecutors said.

In morning testimony, Park told of arriving early at Simpson's mansion on June 12 for a previously arranged 10:45 p.m. pickup, set to take Simpson to the airport.

Park said he repeatedly buzzed Simpson's intercom by the front gate from around 10:40 to 10:50 p.m. but didn't get an answer until around 11 p.m.

When Simpson's car arrived, he said he saw a tall, black person slip into the front door of the estate.

Park said the mystery figure was black, about 6 feet and 200 pounds, dressed in dark clothes and "was walking pretty fast." He couldn't tell if it was a man or woman, but acknowledged the build was probably that of a man.

Asked by Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark about Simpson's behavior when he came down, Park said, "I never met him before, and everything seemed O.K. to me." He said he saw no sign of injury to Simpson.

During the ride to the airport, Simpson complained two or three times of being hot and put his window down and turned the air conditioning on, Park testified.

Park also testified he didn't remember seeing Simpson's white Ford Bronco outside the house when he came by one of the compound's two gates. He spent most of his time waiting at the other gate.

Under cross-examination, defense attorney Robert Shapiro pointed out that Park had described the black person as a black male at the grand jury. He also quizzed him on apparent inconsistencies in his testimony on the time that everything happened.

Kaelin testified he chatted with Simpson at least four times the day of the murders.

After returning from a golf game mid-afternoon, Simpson spoke of his failed marriage, and after returning from his daughter's dance recital, he mentioned the tight dresses that his ex-wife and her friends were wearing, Kaelin said.

Later in the evening, Kaelin testified, Simpson came to his room and asked to borrow some small bills because he had only $100 bills and he wanted to tip a skycap at the airport.

When Simpson said he was going to McDonald's for a hamburger, Kaelin said he asked to go along. Simpson drove his Rolls-Royce through the drive-through and ate his hamburger behind the wheel.

Soldiers search for kidnapped fishermen

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Army troops searched Tuesday for three American fishermen kidnapped by an armed Indian group along Nicaragua's Atlantic coast, the Interior Ministry said.

Four fishermen were seized Saturday, and one was released Monday for health reasons, Interior Ministry spokesman Mario Tenorio said. He did not provide details. The four men were operating fishing boats owned by the U.S. company Gulf King.

Suicide drive falls short

DETROIT (AP) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian's drive to put the issue of assisted suicide before Michigan's voters this fall has apparently fallen short.

Kevorkian and his supporters need 256,457 signatures by Monday to get the issue on the Nov. 8 ballot. They are about 50,000 signatures short.

"I'm pretty sure we won't qualify for the ballot," Kevorkian told the Lansing State Journal on Monday as he collected signatures during a Fourth of July gathering at a park. "We'll shoot for November 1996. That's a presidential year. There will be a lot of voters."

The drive began in January to let voters decide if assisted suicide should be a constitutional right.

Endara, in debt to the United States, lends Clinton a hand

By George Gedda
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In seeking a helping hand on Haiti, the Clinton administration turned to the Latin American leader who owes more to the United States than any other: President Guillermo Endara of Panama.

Even before the latest upsurge in Haitian boat people, U.S. officials were working on contingency planning with Panamanian authorities in case the refugee problem reached crisis proportions.

And crisis is the best word to describe what happened starting last Friday. U.S. Coast Guard cutters picked up 5,894 Haitians during the four-day period ending on Monday — roughly one a minute.

The high administration hopes that the exodus of Haitians would be manageable failed to take into account just how many desperate Haitians there are these days. The Haitians simply were overwhelming the facilities set up by U.S. officials just three weeks ago to process them.

So the administration had to find a way to induce Haitians to stop seeking salvation by taking off in rickety boats. — and praying that the United States might somehow be their destination.

For an administration in need of help, Endara was a logical choice. He might have been one of history's footnotes were it not for what happened in a few December days of 1989 when President Bush ordered the invasion that deposed Manuel Antonio Noriega.

A year and a half earlier, Endara had won Panama's presidential election but Noriega prevented him from taking power. Bush rescued Endara from almost certain oblivion and, in effect, enforced the outcome of the May 1988 elections. Thanks to Bush, Endara wound up with the presidential sash. Noriega wound up in a Florida prison on drug charges.

Now Endara is responding to an SOS from Uncle Sam. As a lame duck with just a few months left in office, Endara had little to lose by going along with administration requests for help on Haiti.

Endara has agreed to grant a safe haven to Haitian boat people deemed by U.S. officials to have a well-founded fear of persecution. The administration hopes that Haitians will think twice about heading out to sea if they realize there is no chance of ending up in the United States.

There are some advantages for Panama as well. Panamanian enterprises are certain to fill at least some of the Haitians' material needs, giving a boost to the local economy. Also, the camps for the Haitians will be built with U.S. — not Panamanian — money. In addition, Panama has received assurances that the Haitians sent to Panama will be sent back home once constitutional rule is re-established in Haiti.

When that will occur is anybody's guess. It was just a year ago this week that a "definitive" solution to the Haitian crisis was signed at Governor's Island in New York.

But the Haitian military is still in charge, having shredded that agreement just three months after signing it.

WHY BEN WOULD CHOOSE OUR $59 GLASSES

If Ben Franklin were shopping for eyewear today, we think he would be impressed by our offer of a pair of quality eyeglasses, complete with single vision plastic lenses, for just $59.

After all, Ben was well known for saying "A penny saved is a penny earned."

He would also be delighted by our $39 price for additional pairs, same prescription, same visit.

Our modest added $80 cost for most bifocals would also be well received, though he might ask for a royalty, since he invented bifocals.

VALUE ISN'T JUST A LOW PRICE

We know, however, that price alone would not convince a man

FIRST PAIR OF GLASSES

$59.
Single vision plastic lenses. Most bifocals $80 more a pair.

like Ben Franklin. He would, no doubt, scrutinize the quality of glasses priced as low as ours. He'd discover that our laboratories employ state-of-the-art lens-grinding technology and maintain strict quality controls at every stage of production.

BEN WAS A STYLISH GUY

Ben was no fashion slouch. At our stores he would find cutting edge frame designs for fashionable, inaugural balls or conservative wire rims for just the right touch of dignity at a constitutional convention.

Each of our stores carries over 400 frames at our lowest price from designers like REM, St. Moritz, Converse, Zimco, Enrico Biegl and more.

"SUMMER IS COMING! SUMMER IS COMING!"
Now that summer is here, it's important to protect your eyes from the sun's damaging ultraviolet rays.

Whether your glasses are clear or have a sunless tint, you should still have UV protection. We offer it for $15. It's well worth the money if you spend any time outdoors or at a computer.

CONTACT LENSES AND GLASSES FOR JUST $73!

Our savings don't stop at eyeglasses. A pair of Sofmate B or Ultra DW contact lenses is just $34. (Eye exam not included.)

Back-up glasses, with single vision plastic lenses, is $39. That's a total of only $73 for both — contacts and eyeglasses!

Riga welcomes visitor in style

RIGA, Latvia (AP) — Sounds of hammers and clanging steel echoed through Riga's old town Tuesday as workmen made final preparations for President Clinton's visit — the first by a U.S. president to a Baltic state.

Scores of American and Latvian flags waved in the breeze along the Vansu bridge, which Clinton will cross on his way into town, passing under a huge banner that reads "Welcome President Clinton."

A dozen school children raked leaves and swept sidewalks by the towering Freedom Monument, where Clinton will speak during his one-day stay Wednesday.

"It's a great honor that an American president comes here," said 11-year-old Yuri Chahov, holding a red baseball cap in one hand and a broom in the other.

"I'm helping to clean because I want President Clinton to see that Latvians aren't just sitting around on their hands," he said. "We're trying to make our country a better place."

heavy beams that are part of a makeshift stage for Clinton.

"We've been working day and night," said one of the men, gasping for breath in the summer heat.

Since the former Soviet Baltic republics broke with Moscow in 1991, residents have grown accustomed to a steady stream of visits by Western heads of state. But Latvians say Clinton's visit is different.

"He's more important than the others," said Rubenis Laimonis, a 59-year-old pensioner, standing outside Riga's Little Johnny's American Pizza restaurant.

Brushing his hand through thick gray hair, Laimonis said he was especially thankful for the wholesale repair of otherwise bumpy city roads, completed in one week for Clinton's visit. "American presidents should come more often," he said.

As a security precaution, Latvian police finished battening down manhole covers and removing flower pots along the president's motorcade route.

An old biplane, one of a few aircraft in Latvia's tiny air force, flew overhead to make a security check.

On cobblestone streets around the capital, Latvians said they hoped Clinton's visit would bring long-lasting benefits.

"His visit could really help open us up to the West," said Alberts Berzaks, a 70-year-old retiree.

Clinton: World has chance to create jobs, ease tensions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Setting out on a four-nation trip to Europe, President Clinton said Tuesday the world has a rare opportunity to use a growing global economy to help generate more jobs and ease political insecurity.

Clinton, in a speech to U.S. business leaders a few hours before his departure, declared: "The mission to Europe on which I embark tonight is simple: to create jobs in a world of prosperity."

"We have to use this newfound strength to address how to give the citizens of our nation and all other nations the confidence they need to prosper in uncertain times," said Clinton, a sampling of flags from around the world arrayed behind him.

"We have to move from coping with crises to planning for prosperity," he said.

Clinton is traveling abroad at a time when his foreign policy faces criticism and his approval ratings have slipped.

In his speech, the president sought to stress the benefits at home of economic cooperation abroad.

"Even as we sow the seeds of our own renewal, we also must recognize that what happens around the world affects us here at home," Clinton said.

"We must have global-economic growth because when global-market growth is strong, and that means higher-paying jobs here in America."

He said the industrialized democracies' "first job is to create jobs and to develop the high-skill work force to fill them."

Swift ratification of a new world trade agreement would help in that regard, he added.

Clinton left Tuesday night for Riga, Latvia, where he will be the first U.S. president to visit a Baltic country. His next stop is Poland, for talks with President Lech Walesa and the foreign ministers of central and east European nations that are nervous about the possible security threat posed by Russia.

At both stops, Clinton will offer assurances that a strong Russia can help foster European stability without wielding undue influence over its former Warsaw Pact neighbors. In addition, he will encourage the new democracies' efforts to promote democratic and economic reforms.

"We want those nations to hold to the path of economic reform and democracy; for those are the only true routes to prosperity and peace," Clinton said. "They must believe that this difficult journey is worthwhile."

Drawing links between security and economic concerns, Clinton warned that "if the nations of Central and Eastern Europe fall backward in the chaos of authoritarianism, then legitimate security needs will soak up an ever-greater part of our budget in the future."

Russia enrolled last month in NATO's Partnership for Peace, which offers former Warsaw Pact nations broad political and military cooperation and holds out the possibility of eventual NATO membership. Russia's potential influence is a sensitive matter in other East European capitals, which worry that Moscow could have too strong a say in alliance dealings.

From Poland, Clinton travels to Naples, Italy, for the annual economic summit of seven industrialized nations and talks with Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Rainbow members leave campsite

BIG PINEY, Wyo. (AP) — Members of the Rainbow Family of Living Light, their day of prayer for world peace completed, are starting to leave their campsite in the Bridger-Teton National Forest near Big Piney.

U.S. Forest Service officials said after the number of people at the group's annual meeting peaked at 13,810 on Monday, group members began to leave the campsite.

The exodus is expected to continue through Thursday.

The July 4 holiday is traditionally the high point of the Rainbows' annual gathering, when members of the group pray for world peace.

Shortly after the period of prayer ended early Monday afternoon, a cloud in the sky over the basin briefly produced a rainbow, generating cheers from family members.

"It's just amazing, it happens every time," said Stoney, a Hickory, N.C., man who has attended five or six of the Rainbows' 23 national gatherings.

"The creator of the universe hears us when we get out and pray. It's his sign he'll not let us destroy the earth," he said.

Officials learned in April that the Rainbows would probably be holding their annual meeting in Wyoming and in mid-June, the Forest Service confirmed the meeting would be held in Snider Basin.

"It was a real gift," said Deanna, an executive for a rubber stamp manufacturing company in Fort Collins, Colo. "The people here are very wonderful, plus there's the water, the meadows, the view."

Sublette County Commissioner Buzz Wassenberg, a Big Piney resident, said area residents and Rainbows got along well during the gathering.

Forest Service officials also said they got along well with Rainbows during the meeting, but added a fire that broke out Sunday did cause some tensions at the camp.

The fire was contained Monday morning, but Forest Service spokesman Ron Jablonski said firefighters were delayed in dropping fire retardant on the flames from the air because some Rainbow members remained in the area after the fire started to help fight it.

"Not that we didn't appreciate their help," he said.

"But people who are naked and barefoot are not equipped to fight fires. It's not the kind of thing our firefighters are used to dealing with."

Phone companies take griefs to court

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battle to bring consumers futuristic telecommunications products and services is moving to a second front: the courts.

Four of the nation's largest telephone companies plan to file a suit today, seeking to abolish legal restrictions on the products and services they may offer.

The Baby Bells have been trying to get Congress to do away with the restrictions for years. While Congress is the closest it has ever been to doing this, through sweeping telecommunications reform legislation, passage this year is not certain.

There's a guarantee that Congress will act, so we owe it to our shareholders to pursue all avenues," said Nynex's top lobbyist, Thomas Tauke, in an interview on Tuesday.

Tauke said the suit complements the phone companies' legislative efforts. But other telecommunications executives said it is an attempt to hedge bets should reform legislation not be enacted this year.

The suit, to be filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, challenges the continued usefulness of a consent decree that broke up the Bell System in 1984, said phone company executives.

The decree bars the phone companies from engaging in a number of businesses, including providing long-distance service and manufacturing telecommunications equipment.

The crux of the companies' argument is that technology and the telecommunications marketplace have dramatically changed since 1984. As a result, the consent decree is no longer necessary, executives said.

It could take years for the court to issue a ruling, lawyers on both sides of the issue said.

Affidavits from leading academics contained in the suit seek to prove that "the consent decree is discouraging, rather than encouraging competition in the telecommunications marketplace," Tauke said.

Among the academics' findings is that consumers have paid between $38 billion and $58 billion more than they should have for long-distance service over the last 10 years due to lack of competition and inefficiencies on the part of long-distance companies, said a phone company executive, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

AT&T Corp., which historically has opposed Bell companies' efforts for greater freedoms in the telecommunications business, said it was not surprised by the impending suit.

In fact, AT&T said, a review of the telecommunications market since 1984 will show that the consent decree is still needed.

"We believe a comprehensive review would find that the local (phone) monopoly is still firmly entrenched. Until that ends and we have real competition for local phone service, the reasons the consent decree was entered in the first place are still valid, still protect the consumer and are still required," said AT&T spokeswoman Adel Ambrose.

With four of the nation's seven Bell operating companies behind the suit, the challenge is the most broadly backed assault on the decree since its inception, telecommunications executives said.

"We're putting the finishing touches on the plan," said Bell Atlantic Corp. spokeswoman Shannon Fioravanti.

Last week a pair of telecommunications reform bills easily passed the House. One of those bills would let the phone companies enter the long-distance and manufacturing businesses.

But the leading telecommunications reform measure in the Senate is not as generous to the companies' efforts to enter these areas. The final product of both chambers may not be either.

The parties in the suit are Bell Atlantic Corp., BellSouth, Nynex Corp. and Southwestern Bell Corp., phone company executives said.

Women sue company over Norplant removals

BOSTON (AP) — Paula already had two children and wanted to hold off on a third, so she asked her gynecologist for Norplant.

Fifteen months later, Paula discovered that the six matchstick-sized contraceptive capsules, under the skin of her upper left arm were harder to take out than put-in. She is among about 200 women who filed a class action suit against Norplant maker Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories, claiming they suffered permanent injury during removal.

Paula, who spoke on condition that her last name not be used, said her doctor told her the capsules got stuck in her arm.

"She was pulling and yanking them, but they weren't going anywhere," said Paula, 26. "It was painful. I have a scar that isn't going away."

The lawsuit was filed in Chicago earlier this month. It seeks undisclosed damages and an injunction to prevent Wyeth-Ayerst from selling Norplant to doctors who have not been properly trained to insert and remove it, said plaintiff lawyer Jewel Klein.

Norplant capsules are designed to remain in the arm for about five years, slowly releasing a synthetic hormone that prevents pregnancy.

Wyeth-Ayerst's literature depicts Norplant removal as simple surgery requiring only local anesthesia, but some women needed general anesthesia or several operations before all the capsules were removed, Klein said.

Study links strokes, heart wall thickening

CHICAGO (AP) — Older people who have a thickening of the wall around the heart's main pumping chamber are nearly three times as likely as people with normal hearts to suffer a stroke, a study found.

The thickening can be detected by echocardiography, but because of the $400 to $500 cost and because the exact relationship between the thickening and strokes is not yet clear, the ultrasound procedure should not be used routinely as a stroke-risk detector, doctors say.

The study is the first to find a link between heart-wall thickening and stroke risk regardless of whether other factors, such as high blood pressure or other heart conditions, are present, said a co-author, Dr. Daniel Levy.

"The heart may be a good barometer of risk throughout the entire cardiovascular system," said Levy, director of cardiology for the Framingham Heart Study, of which the new findings are part.

The Framingham Heart Study, based in Framingham, Mass., is one of the largest, longest-and-most-influential studies of heart disease and related ailments.

Levy's team, led by Dr. Mahesh Bikkina, used echocardiography to monitor the hearts of 1,230 men and women ages 59 through 90 for an eight-year period. Echocardiography produces pictures of the heart, much like sonar produces pictures of the ocean floor.

During the study, 89 strokes or "mini-strokes" occurred. Strokes were 2.73 times more likely in people with the greatest thickening around the heart's main pumping chamber than in people with the least thickening.

Crash of small plane barely misses 100 kids

SEELY LAKE, Mont. (AP) — A single-engine airplane crashed on an elementary school tennis court, killing the pilot and barely missing about 100 preschoolers gathered for a Fourth of July celebration.

The Piper J-3 bounced to within 15 feet of the children Monday, then spun into the net of the tennis court. The pilot, Bud Lidenor, was the only person in the plane. There were no other injuries.

The children were waiting for the plane to drop pingpong balls as part of a contest sponsored by local businesses. Some of the balls could be turned in for prizes.

A few minutes before the crash, the plane had dropped balls to a crowd of older children and adults on an adjacent baseball field.

Witnesses said the plane skidded nearby trees, struck a 10-foot-high fence and then slammed into the court.

"He knew he was in trouble," said Cindy Carlson, who was on the court with the children. "I looked at his face the whole time. He aimed that plane so he wouldn't hurt anybody."

The cause of the crash was under investigation.

Crash kills pilot, reporter

KINGFISHER, Okla. (AP) — A TV reporter and a pilot were killed in a plane crash Tuesday while filming a mock combat mission for a news story.

The Italian-built plane — a two-seat, propeller-driven aircraft — used by NATO to train fighter pilots — was on a dry run and crashed in a dry riverbed after Kathy Jones and her pilot, Skip Stevens, pretended to strafe a bridge.

Twin Falls County takes step toward wiser future

Glad tidings from the Twin Falls County Courthouse: Commissioners are about to start work on an updated comprehensive plan.

This news, announced last week, means a lot of work for county officials — and for local citizens, too. If done right, however, all that effort may pay off with orderly, sensible management of local growth.

We say "may," because comprehensive planning has a spotty record. Many communities' plans are dreamy and vague. Their glowing generalities arise from the lowest common denominators of community consensus. ("We all want a livable community, right? Let's say that in the plan!")

Once such plans are written, they often are ignored. Elected officials retire, and newcomers have no commitment to previous decisions. When landowners propose developments that contradict the plans, live voters generally take precedence over dead documents.

Within a few years, plans written with the best of intentions can become forgotten irrelevancies.

Twin Falls County officials should take pains to keep that from happening. Otherwise, they might as well save the trouble of writing a plan at all.

The reasons for taking that trouble are plain. Galloping growth is changing Twin Falls County's rural character. Unmanaged, those changes may not all be positive.

The county needs to address key questions:

• How much farmland are we willing to sacrifice for rural subdivisions? Where? Should commercial and industrial growth take place outside the cities? What steps, if any, should the county take to protect and enhance its parks and scenic vistas?

And many more.

Failing to plan would surrender those decisions to the whims of circumstance. On the other hand, planning has to be done right to be effective. Here's our advice:

• First, hire high-class outside expertise to advise local officials — but don't let the hired talent steer the decisions.

• Second, seek out the broadest possible involvement by landowners and other constituencies, such as canal companies and road districts. If the plan is not grounded in practical reality and local aspirations, it surely will be ignored later.

• Third, make the plan specific and clear. General goals and broad-brush zoning designations are easy to adopt, but they promote waffling if conflict arises later.

With those modest suggestions, we wish the commissioners good speed. Their task is big, but vital. No project facing the county this year is more important.

U.S. Supreme Court reaffirms property rights in land-use case

Michael M. Berger

The U.S. Supreme Court struck a sharp pin into land-use regulators. In Dolan v. Tigard, the court placed severe restrictions on the ability of local government agencies to demand "gifts" of land as conditions for permission to develop other land.

Although the case involved a small town in Oregon, the ruling in late June will have far greater impact in California, where this practice of extorting (the Supreme Court's word for it) property is rampant. Aggressive government agencies and a strident environmental movement have created a vigorous and inconsistent system of land-use regulation in California that is legendary throughout the country.

California's courts have shown great deference for whatever the regulators want to do. Years ago, the dean of governmental land-use lawyers suggested that a California property owner, instead of challenging a regulation in a state court, should simply slit his throat. It would be quicker, cheaper and easier — and lead to the same result.

Florence Dolan wanted only to expand her electrical and plumbing supply store. Instead of occupying 10,000 square feet of her 70,000-square-foot lot, the store would cover 17,000. The city agreed to issue the permit, but only if Dolan gave the city 7,000 square feet of land to increase the capacity of a creek, install a "greenway" along the creek and build a bike path. The city's justifications were that the increased size of the store could increase traffic and the need for flood control, which these improvements might alleviate.

The Supreme Court concluded that, if a city is going to take someone's land, firmer justification than that is needed in order to avoid the constitutional command to pay just compensation.

Pragmatically, the court affirmed the basic rule that property cannot be taken without payment. To permit government to do otherwise, the government must satisfy the burden of proving that the project proposed by the property owner would actually cause significant problems for the rest of society, which the land demanded as a "gift" would actually alleviate. The city had not proved that its justifications were genuine.

A spokesman for the Audubon Society probably best captured the impact of the new decision when he complained that 'this is an extraordinary intrusion by the court into the authority of local government. It elevates the interests of property owners over the interests of the community as a whole.'

A spokesman for the Audubon Society probably best captured the impact of the new decision when he complained that "this is an extraordinary intrusion by the court into the authority of local government. It elevates the interests of property owners over the interests of the community as a whole."

Actually, what the decision does is enforce a protection that has been part of our constitutional heritage: The Fifth Amendment has always "elevated" the interests of individuals over those of society — that's what the Bill of Rights is all about. The First Amendment, for example, has been used to protect the rights of nude dancers, flag burners and political protesters of all stripes.

What the Supreme Court said expressly in this case is that the Fifth Amendment rights of property owners are entitled to no less protection than the First Amendment rights of adult theaters, draft protesters and newspapers. If that "elevates the interests of property owners over the interests of the community as a whole," it is high time. Local governments and environmental activists have gotten used to treating property owners who need development permits as convenient fish in a barrel. The property owners' desire to do more than stare at their land has emboldened regulators to extract increasingly punitive "gifts" of property (of cash in lieu of property) in exchange for development permits. Often, the price demanded as ransom bears little, if any, relationship to the project proposed by the property owner. The process has been used widely by local governments to obtain substantial parcels of property. Without payment.

It is this game which the Supreme Court has said must end. The rights to life, liberty and property are protected by the same constitutional provision. None can cavalierly be tossed aside because it has suddenly become politically or environmentally correct to preserve some parcel of swamp, desert or shrub land.

The issue is ends and means. Most Bill of Rights cases are reduced to that common denominator. Our Constitution proclaims that the property of private citizens will not be taken from them unless they receive compensation. Regardless of the reason for the seizure: The Supreme Court has reaffirmed the continuing force of that concept: "It is now up to the test of us to respect it."

If the city of Tigard wants Dolan's land badly enough, it can buy it. The same goes for California communities that have acted in similar fashion.

Michael M. Berger is a land-use lawyer who has argued constitutional cases in the U.S. Supreme Court on behalf of property owners. He wrote this column for the Los Angeles Times.

Reporter gave wrong impression

What an intelligent, unbiased and uninformed article by Sean L. McCarthy.

First of all, we who are buying or have paid for our homes in the 17.75 acres are not against expansion; we are against the city having to change the zoning laws to please every contractor who doesn't have a plan for expansion that is acceptable into the zone where land is available.

The simple solution would be for construction people to present a plan that is acceptable in the zone. These builders know beforehand what type of structure is permissible in a zoned area. The 17.75-acre parcel Mr. McCarthy referred to is Zone 4, permissible for duplexes and fourplexes.

Mr. McCarthy failed to mention that the Sawtooth Construction Co.'s representative also had a plan which would conform to R-4 with minor changes, which he presented. The mayor thanked him and invited his company in June or July to present modified blueprints and perhaps they could get under production.

Hey, Sean, how about a soccer field?

Jack-Bills didn't make mistakes

This letter is in reply to Thomas P. Miller of Sacramento, Calif. I would like to question Mr. Miller's statement that Forest Supervisor Jack Bills "interprets, makes and enforces such flawed policy."

I will admit there are a lot of flawed policies in the Forest Service regulations, but I assure you Jack Bills did not make them. I have yet to see his dogmatic and ruthless sin as charged by Mr. Miller. That is some grudge you have carried for the past 15 years, Mr. Miller.

While I am not sure who works for whom, I believe you will find Arnold Soliz works directly for Ranger Don Omat and not Jack Bills. Now before you come to the conclusion Jack Bills and I are buddies, let me assure you, we are not. I am a cattleman whose cattle graze in Jack Bills' district, and we do have a working relationship.

Three years ago, our grazing association appealed a decision of Ranger Omat to Supervisor Bills' office, and he backed his employee all the way. I still think that was a mistake under the circumstances, but life goes on. I haven't time to brood over it for the next 15 years. I have found Jack to be straightforward; his door is always open and he will listen, as he is not biased. He will tour our range whenever possible and seems to base his decision on fact, not fiction. This is all I ask from any forest supervisor.

I have also worked with forest employee, Arnold Soliz. I found Arnold to be a hard-working and responsible employee. He does a good job on our allotment and I enjoy working with him. Yes, there certainly was a giant communication gap somewhere along the line that left the Mattooses stranded overnight, and we all agree that should not have happened. I am very comfortable with Supervisor Jack Bills' assurance that it won't happen again. I also think that some recognition should be presented by the Forest Service to the cowboy from the Wild Rose Association that rescued the Mattooses.

It makes me wonder where Mr. Miller gets all his information. Could it be directly from a local retired, subsidized Forest Service employee?

When someone from California calls for the resignation of a forest supervisor in Idaho, that is a bad omen.

TOPS program is for everyone

Before taking off for our trip to Murphy Hot Springs recently, a discussion took place among the metallic signs that I have on the doors of my car as area captain of Take Off Pounds Sensibly. I had thought that maybe someone might see the signs who would be interested in a support group, so we decided to keep them on for the trip.

While traveling through Twin Falls, we happened to get into a parade. It turned out to be rather delightful. People were marching and carrying signs saying "Jesus loves you," and I found myself calling out, "Jesus loves you," and in the moment of things, the smiles and warmth of the occasion.

It was a happenstance that turned out like the time I happened to pass by the junior high school when my son was up to bat and at that very moment when I passed by, he hit the ball, or the times that we say something like, "I hope we see some wildlife on this trip" and a squirrel lightpoes across a city street on a wire or the little lizard that just happens to be on the fence curiously wondering what you're doing, not realizing that it is his presence that has made the moment to be cherished. So thanks Twin Falls Christian community for the "moment" of joining your parade! It was my pleasure.

As for the conversation with the officer at the end of the parade, "Did you meet anyone who wanted to join TOPS?" I said no, "How about you?" He said he didn't have a weight problem. He was the first person I've met who didn't want to lose at least 10 pounds.

Idaho has the first husband and wife team to be King and Queen State Royalty, Mr. and Mrs. John Prockshl of Pocatello. (John lost 74% pounds to his goal and Sharon lost 64 pounds.) Just to let you be informed that TOPS is a weight-loss support group including men, women, preteens and teens who are looking for a healthy low-cost alternative to weight-loss clinics. TOPS is here for you.

To Jack Streeter of Mountain Home: I have noticed through your letters that you have a solution to all the world's problems. Hey, abandon that rocking chair and run for president.

Homosexuals aren't that meek

I believe that the cake that was decorated for honoring the Fourth of July in the June 29 paper must have been decorated by a member of the homosexuals, for no one else would have decorated our flag in that manner.

You Idahoans that are feeling sorry for the gay movement should see their violence.

They are not the meek and humble folk that you have pictured in your minds.

Editor's note: The American flag cake on the front of the June 29 Food and Home section was decorated correctly, with the stars on the left. The photo was inadvertently reversed in the newspaper, putting the stars on the right. Our apologies.

Thanks for baseball support

Thanks, everyone! This year, Filer had its first Filer High School Baseball Team since 1959, and the team did an excellent job.

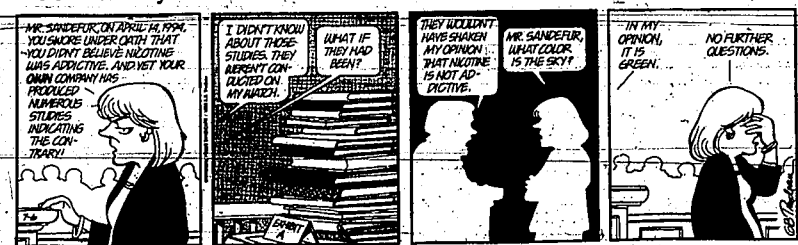

A community's regard for its children is directly reflected in the opportunities it gives children to learn by example to become productive and responsible citizens. Our children are the leaders of tomorrow. How we train them, how we demonstrate leadership and responsibility by our example will be directly reflected in their leadership and sense of responsibility. Our children are our future.

Contributions, including money, materials, equipment, services and labor to build the baseball diamond at Filer Elementary School, the backstop pads and team equipment were worthwhile investments of your time, resources and energy that will help ensure a bright future.

Again, thank you, Filer.

Arafat returns in triumph, without full house

JERICHO, West Bank (AP) — It was eerie déjà vu.

Young Palestinians stared blankly behind chain-link and barbed wire. Armed police strutted back and forth, ordering them to stay in place.

Then Yasser Arafat appeared. And, with a riotous surge, they trampled everything in their way — fences, security guards, TV crews and decades of history — to declare themselves free.

Saleh Nimir, 27, got close enough to catch the bouquet Arafat threw to the crowd. Only tough cops stopped him from barreling on to give his beloved "Abu Ammar" a bear hug.

"We love him," he explained.

It was symbolism at its highest, a combined prison break and rock concert to witness Arafat take control of an inchstone state which hardly anyone dreamed would exist a year ago.

In terms of hard reality, however, it was a far cry from the durable chairman who claims to lead the Palestinians and peppers each speech with the buzzwords, "National Unity!"

Nimir's fervor propelled him to the front, but only a few thousand people were in his way. For all of its historical moment, the long-awaited homecoming was far from a sellout performance.

To a sizeable number of Jericho's 15,000 inhabitants, Arafat's whole peace agreement with Israel was a sellout, pure and simple.

"What did Arafat achieve? Nothing," said Samir Oseleeh, a 24-year-old mechanic and Muslim zealot in the Hamas movement, who stayed home. "Israel made him a puppet."

Arafat blamed Israeli authorities and hostile settlers for sabotaging his homecoming by blocking the roads to Jericho. But all evidence suggests another reason: Few people bothered to come.

Although a lot of Israelis tried to cut off Jericho, the hearty faithful got through.

Nimir was delayed en route from Jerusalem because settlers slashed a bus tire. Police cleared the way, and he made it on time.

It took brothers Rajai and Rabin Sharif seven hours to come from Hebron, normally a two-hour trip. After four police checkpoints and two settlers' demonstrations, they walked the last three miles.

In the end, only scant thousands came in from elsewhere in the West Bank — hardly the hundreds of thousands Arafat aides predicted — but that was enough for a party.

By sundown, it was a carnival. Long past midnight, they were still dancing in the streets, making more noise than Jericho has heard since Joshua's trumpet recital 3,000 years ago.

At a sidewalk cassette stand, someone put on one of the dozen songs written for the homecoming, which goes something like: "With love, Arafat will unite us all."

At the first bars, an old woman in a plum satin dress and blue blazer began a belly dance.

This was still the West Bank, peace or not, but some changes were obvious.

3 arrested in soccer star's death

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Three more suspects have been arrested in the murder of soccer star Andres Escobar, who was shot to death because he scored an own-goal in Colombia's World Cup loss to the United States.

Authorities also said Tuesday that they seized 55 pounds of cocaine, two revolvers and a submachine gun in two homes where they arrested two men and a woman on Monday.

Escobar was shot early Saturday in the parking lot of a bar in Medellin, Colombia's third-largest city. Police arrested two suspects over the weekend, one of whom confessed to shooting Escobar.

Powers send ultimatum to Bosnians

GENEVA (AP) — The United States, Russia and three European powers issued an ultimatum Tuesday to the warring factions in Bosnia: Agree to a new peace package or face international reprisals.

Their foreign ministers approved a plan to give the new Bosnian-Croat federation roughly 51 percent of Bosnia's territory and the Serbs 49 percent. The Serbs now hold about 70 percent and are seen as the most likely to reject the demand.

"It would be a mistake of truly historic proportions for either party to feel they can serve their people well if they reject the proposal," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said after the three-hour meeting.

Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev described the plan as "the only possible alternative" to war.

"We have mapped out a peaceful ultimatum. This is the first such effort to force a compromise and peace," he said.

Kozyrev, who was host for the meeting for the envoys from the United States, Russia, Germany, France and Britain, said the Croat-Muslim federation and the Bosnian Serbs had two weeks to respond. Leaders of the Bosnian factions will be given a copy of the new map Wednesday.

The ministers aimed their ultimatum primarily at the Serbs, who would have to give up land they consider strategically important.

Christopher said U.N. sanctions against the Serbs would be gradually lifted if they withdrew to the areas designated under the proposal. He said that if they did not agree, enforcement of the sanctions would be tightened.

British Foreign Minister Douglas Hurd and his French counterpart, Alain Juppe, both warned their countries might be forced to pull their troops out of the U.N. peace-keeping mission in Bosnia if that happened. The two provide the biggest peacekeeper contingents.

Christopher also held out the possibility of more air strikes on Serb targets.

He said that as an incentive for the Muslim-Croat federation to accept the plan, the international community would give aid to rebuild the shattered land. And he indicated the United States would be willing to send military support to enforce the peace settlement.

French minister refutes charges of corruption

PARIS (AP) — The chairman of France's largest private corporation scoffed Tuesday at corruption charges against him, and the minister of industry and trade said the country has more important things to do in a recession than prosecute business leaders.

Pierre Suard, chairman of the energy, transport and telecommunications giant Alcatel-Alsthom, was arrested and charged late Monday with fraud, embezzlement and corruption.

One of France's most powerful and politically well-connected industrialists, Suard described as "banal" the allegations that he misused more than $600,000 in company funds to install security systems at two private residences.

Industry and Trade Minister Gerard Longuet called Suard a "very great business leader" and said it was "distressing that the image of a company with tens of thousands of employees can be tarnished" because of the case.

Hutus flee south from rebel front

GIKONGORO, Rwanda (AP) — Panicked Hutus fled south before advancing rebels Tuesday, fearing the Tutsi-led Rwandan Patriotic Front was bent on avenging ethnic massacres by supporters of the Hutu-dominated government.

Hutus streamed into a security zone established in southwestern Rwanda by French troops who intervened in the civil war two weeks ago. As 500 French marines and Foreign Legionnaires dug in howitzers and mortars, their leaders said the troops would fight if the rebels tried to enter the zone.

Rebel leaders accused France of trying to prop up Rwanda's Hutu-dominated government just as Paris did in 1990, the first year of the war in the Central African country, and said a confrontation was possible.

A column of about 2,000 rebel fighters was reported about 12 1/2 miles from the security zone, but French officials said there had not been any fighting.

While saying French soldiers would fight if necessary, French President Francois Mitterrand insisted the rebel front "is not our adversary," and said his troops would not prevent a rebel victory.

"We say simply that there must be somewhere a place for people in danger to take cover. We extend a helpful hand. Our action stops there," he said.

Hundreds of refugees trudged along the road leading to the French base at Gikongoro. They carried mattresses, baskets of food and suitcases stuffed with clothes balanced on their heads.

Thousands of Hutus already had come to the Gikongoro area over the past few months as the rebels captured town after town to the north. Kigali, the capital 85 miles to the northeast, fell to the rebels Monday, as did Butare, the country's second largest city.

Innocent Buzisi and about 100 of his Hutu relatives and neighbors followed their priest from a village near Butare to Gikongoro on Tuesday. Buzisi said they were fleeing the rebels and seeking safety with French troops.

China tightens grip on movies

BEIJING (AP) — The government plans to tighten control over movie production and screening, including restricting foreign films, to 30 percent of China's total market, an official newspaper said Tuesday.

Official censors will be empowered to block the release of movies co-produced in China by Chinese and foreign studios, said the China Daily, confirming earlier official reports.

It said co-productions will be limited to 30 a year and should be "of fine artistic taste."

The newspaper did not say when the new rules will take effect.

As for foreign movies, the China Daily said the government will conduct "more careful screening." It said imports will be limited to 30 percent of the total film market, without explaining how that figure would be calculated.

China has attracted attention in recent years by censoring several Chinese films that won awards overseas because the films were considered anti-Communist or were not produced under official auspices.

China fights bribes

BEIJING (AP) — China has executed two officials for taking bribes, an official newspaper said Tuesday, in the government's latest attempt to show severity toward widespread corruption.

The China Daily said Guo Ziweng, 52, the former president of the China Coal Marketing and Transportation Co., and Hu Cong, 38, director of the investment department in Beijing for the Fujian Agricultural Comprehensive Development and Investment Co., were executed Monday.

China Daily did not say how the men were executed. China usually uses a bullet to the back of the prisoner's head.

Author skips court

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A judge has given police one more month to arrest a feminist author facing death threats from Islamic fundamentalists.

After Taslima Nasrin and her attorneys failed to appear in court Monday to answer charges of blasphemy, Dhaka's city magistrate, Shahiduddin Ahmed, extended the term of her arrest warrant.

Ms. Nasrin, 31, went into hiding after the warrant was issued June 4 over an interview in which she was quoted as calling for changes in the Quran, the holy book of Islam.

Man sentenced to 10 years in state prison

TWIN FALLS - A man who pleaded guilty to sexually molesting a 16-year-old girl was sentenced Tuesday to 10 years at the state penitentiary.

Leland Elroy Dunnagan, 35, will serve at least one year at the Idaho State Penitentiary in Boise before being considered for parole, under Judge Roger Burdick's order.

In April, Dunnagan pleaded guilty to three counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor.

The maximum penalty for the charges against him is three life sentences.

In June 1991, a teen-age girl told investigators that Dunnagan had sexual intercourse with her three times that summer at his home in the Skyline Mobile Park. In April, she said he impregnated her and that she bore the child. Genetic tests showed a 99 percent probability he was the father, Prosecutor G. Richard Bevan said.

Bar fight lands 2 men in jail, including victim of stabbing

JEROME - Both the victim of a stabbing and the man with the knife ended up in jail after a fight in a Jerome bar.

Eugene Luna, 52, was arrested Monday after Jose Huerta, 21, was stabbed during an argument in the Northern Tavern.

Apparently Luna walked up behind Huerta and stabbed him in the back, Detective Dean Larson said. "It sounds like it was a running feud."

The victim was taken to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, where he was "stitched up and released," Larson said. Huerta, however, was wanted on two bench warrants. Courts said he failed to appear on a driving under the influence charge in June 1993 and on charges of disturbing the peace, and resisting and obstructing an officer in August 1993.

Drunk-driving arrests, other offenses lead to jail sentence

JEROME - Robert P. Crane, 44, was sentenced Tuesday to spend two to five years in the state penitentiary.

District Judge Philip M. Becker pronounced the sentence after questioning Crane at length on drinking and alcohol prevention programs Crane had been enrolled in.

Crane's first drunk-driving arrest was in 1976. He had two drunk-driving arrests in 1983 and 1987, and one in 1984, 1986, 1990 and 1992. He was cited for driving with a suspended license in 1977, 1978, 1979, 1983 and 1985. Crane had two charges of spousal abuse in 1990. Other offenses included failure to yield, carrying a loaded weapon in his vehicle, disorderly conduct and assault.

Crane was found in Arizona in April when authorities picked him up as he slept in a vacant lot. Jerome County Sheriff George Silver III brought him back to Jerome on the 1988 probation violation charge.

Crane is an uncle of Stephanie Crane who has been missing since October 1993. He was briefly the subject of a manhunt in connection with that case, but has been cleared of any involvement in Stephanie's disappearance.

Pickup truck strikes boy, 2, causing internal injuries

JEROME - A 2-year-old boy was struck by a pickup truck on the Fourth of July when the child ran out in front of the vehicle.

The driver, Robert Clayton, 57, was "apparently unable to stop in time," according to a police report by patrolman Earl Knutsen.

The child's name was not released upon his parents' request. He is in Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with internal injuries and cuts and bruises.

No citations were issued in the accident, which happened in the 200 block of West Fourth Street at 7:18 p.m.

It was the community's sixth auto-pedestrian accident in five months.

"I called my patrolmen in this morning and instructed them to crack down on drivers and pedestrians," police Chief James Dahl said.

"People are driving too fast. Pedestrians are in a hurry. This has got to stop," he said.

Former pols target city's government

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Several retired politicians have signed on to an anti-city government petition that could allow voters to disavow their unique form of city government in November.

Former Twin Falls Mayor Emery Petersen filed the "originating" petition with the city on Friday to begin the process of requesting a special election on the question: "Shall the city of Twin Falls ... retain its organization under the 'council-manager plan'?"

Lewiston and Twin Falls are the only two Idaho cities that have a City Council and an appointed city manager.

Residents in Idaho's other 197 incorporated cities elect a council, and a full-time mayor who runs the city.

Joining Petersen in signing the originating petition were former Republican Idaho House Speaker T.W. Silvers, former Republican Twin Falls County Clerk Richard Pence, former Twin Falls County Commissioner William Chancey, Democratic activist and attorney Lloyd Walker, and Republican Rep. Mark Strubbs.

The proposal may draw the opposition of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, which has held up the city's form of government as a model that counties might adopt.

J. Kent Just, executive vice president of the chamber, said he likes the way Twin Falls city government is run.

City Clerk Gary Evans said Tuesday that a couple of minor corrections need to be made in the wording of the petition. Once his petition is certified, Petersen will have 60 days to collect the valid signatures of 3,202 registered city voters.

That figure represents 20 percent of the eligible voters in the November 1993 City Council election.

Six of the council's seven members responded to the proposal Tuesday.

Mayor Gale Kleinkopf, who was appointed by the council in January and serves primarily as a parliamentary leader and figurehead, said an elected mayor would have to be a high-paid expert.

A full-time mayor would probably need to hire an additional layer of management to help him or her with the daily tasks of running the city, Kleinkopf said.

Councilman Lance Clow agreed. "Anybody who thinks they can step in and run the city on a day-to-day basis is fooling themselves," Clow said.

Vice Mayor Art Frantz said he doesn't see any problems with the way the city is being run now under the council-manager system.

Counties divide youth cells

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Cells in the new regional juvenile jail will probably be doled out to five Magic Valley counties according to a point scale that places a higher priority on kids who commit felony crimes.

Such an arrangement is necessary because the detention center that's almost ready to open in the Twin Falls industrial park only has 12 cells; when the counties pooled their money to build it, the lockup was planned to have 18 cells.

"We all know 12 beds is not enough to serve the region," Jerome County Commissioner Veronica Lierman said Tuesday in a meeting of commissioners from four of the five counties.

Commissioners from Blaine, Camas, Gooding, Jerome and Twin Falls counties signed an October 1992 agreement that:

- Handed over management of the youth lockup to Twin Falls County.

- Instructed Twin Falls County to build a center with at least 18 beds.

- And allowed six of those beds to be used solely by Twin Falls County.

Lierman said the five-county agreement needs to be amended to reflect the increased strain that the smaller facility places on each of the five counties.

According to the Oct. 26, 1992, agreement, 12 of the then-18 beds would be allocated on the basis of the risk each juvenile offender posed to the community.

A document prepared by Magistrate John F. Varin and Twin Falls officials would establish a priority scale for the region's juveniles housed in the 12-bed center nearing completion.

Each troubled youth would accumulate points based on the type of crime he committed, his criminal history (if applicable), his threat of escape or runaway, his suicide risk and other assorted factors.

Positive points could be added to the juvenile's record if the youth has a good relationship with his or her parents or is getting good grades.

"The assignment of numerical values as indicators of level of risk would allow facility staff to do quick comparisons on risk levels when asked to admit a youth when the facility is at maximum capacity," the document states.

Varin told the commissioners that each of the counties would have to adopt a risk-assessment policy for the point system to be effective.

Later in the meeting, he also said that Twin Falls County plans to use a computer program that allows the courts to keep track of repeat juvenile offenders.

Probation officers, detention workers, schools and police departments would be able to put juvenile records into the system. The resulting computer file would give the courts "a real good history" on a juvenile offender, Varin said.

Museum planned at river crossing

The Associated Press

GLENN'S FERRY - Glenns Ferry residents face a long journey toward their goal of an Oregon Trail Interpretive Center.

The town of 1,400 - 67 miles southeast of Boise - has raised $6,000 for the proposed $5 million center at Three Island Crossing State Park, where emigrants crossed the Snake River 150 years ago.

For inspiration, they need only look at the town of Baker City in southeastern Oregon. That community has used its 2-year-old National Historic Oregon Trail Interpretive Center, seven miles from town, to bring in tourists.

Glenns Ferry wants a piece of the rich history.

"There is a new enthusiasm to revitalize this community," said state Rep. Robbi King of Glenns Ferry, executive director of the nonprofit Crossing Development Corp. "I think you're going to see some business popping up. We've got a person talking about building a hotel near the highway."

Three Island Crossing State Park currently is Glenns Ferry's only tourist attraction. The park's 330 acres draw picnickers, highway drivers taking a break and history buffs.

Full Aug. 13, the community will re-enact an emigrant crossing, as it does every year.

In September, the project will undergo review for a $2.2 million grant administered by the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation. If the center gets the money, the town must raise an additional $1 million.

Several fund-raisers are under way, and King said private companies and corpora-

TWIN FALLS - Anderson Lumber Company has gotten the go-ahead to relocate to the 900 and 1000 blocks of Eastland Drive.

The City Council voted 5-2 Tuesday to approve a zoning change on the 10 acres just south of the Circle K for Anderson Lumber's move.

The vote came after council members thrice heard arguments for and against the commercialization of Eastland Drive between Addison Avenue and Kimberly Road.

In the end, Mayor Gale Kleinkopf, Vice Mayor Art Frantz and councilmen Jeff Gooding, Howard Allen, and Lance Clow voted for the zone change. Councilmen Chris Talkington and Tom Condie cast the dissenting votes.

Condie said commercializing Eastland Drive is a mistake.

"We do things that are not in the best interests of the entire city all for the sake of development," he said. "We'll all live to regret it."

The proposal entailed the city's first amendment to its 1993 comprehensive and-use plan. According to the plan, that section of Eastland Drive was to be left for the development of professional offices.

Also Tuesday, the council approved the elimination of Second Street South between Fifth Avenue South and Mindok Avenue.

Rick Beuss, the Old Mill Building Limited Liability Corp. want to use the street for parking spaces and a bike path in front of the brew-pub the corporation plans to open later this year.

David Woodhead, who owns the warehouse whose trucking docks encroach partially on Fifth Avenue South, said he supports Beuss' project to open the brew-pub and turn a triangular section of land in front

1995 arts grants announced

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Arts Council, the College of Southern Idaho and Lincoln Elementary School are among the groups receiving 1995 grants from the Idaho Commission on the Arts.

The commission was to announce its grants for the coming year today at press conferences throughout the state. The Magic Valley press conference is scheduled for 11 a.m. at the Twin Falls Public Library.

A total of $451,806 was granted for 140 projects in 47 towns in Idaho. All funds are matched by local communities.

"Decreased funds for grants from the state Legislature three years ago and federal cutbacks made our decisions particularly difficult this year," said the commission's executive director Marge H. Knight. "We could only fund 38 percent of requests."

Magic Valley groups chosen to receive funding are:

- Magic Valley Arts Council - $2,922 for general operating support, $1,000 for the Hispanic Heritage Festival, $1,075 for a performance by Daitze Floricanto.

- College of Southern Idaho - $1,912 for a performance by the Eugene Ballet Company.

Seastrom plant breaks ground; business to open by 1995

By Mick Norrington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Bob Seastrom, president of Seastrom Manufacturing Co., broke dirt on his company's new factory in the Twin Falls industrial park, vowing to open for business by New Year's Day.

About 40 members of city government and the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce gathered for Tuesday's ground breaking. The city and chamber have worked for more than three years to attract Seastrom Manufacturing to Twin Falls.

"I know we did make the right choice," Seastrom said. "I have no doubt about that. Everybody worked together for this, and we're not used to that."

A letter from Gov. Cecil Andrus was read at the ground breaking. Andrus thanked the Seastroms for choosing Twin Falls and pledged the state's support for their business.

Seastrom Manufacturing makes small electronic and machine parts. The company is moving from Glendale, Calif.

"We're not very often that we get to have a new start," Seastrom said.

Tuesday was also the one-year anniversary of the death of Seastrom's father, Wes Seastrom, who had run the company.

tions are prepared to kick in extra cash if the grant comes through.
A study of economic impact released in June reported that the project could draw from $984,000 to $2.7 million a year in visitor spending by 2005.

Baker City saw a boom when the doors opened in May 1992 at its $6.7 million facility. County room taxes in 1993 climbed more than $30,000 above past years, and 12 of 16 lodging owners said business increased after the center opened.

The interpretive center was projected to draw about 200,000 people per year. But in its first full year, the 1993 sequentennial of the Oregon Trail — it pulled in 347,765.

Attendance is expected to exceed 200,000 in 1994, said Walt Tegen, chief of visitor services for the Bureau of Land Management, which operates the center.

Historical tourism "is a very real, growing part of tourism here that hasn't been developed," said Julie Curtis of the Oregon Tourism Division in Salem.

Obituaries

Myrtle L. Clark-Henson

JEROME — Myrtle Irene Clark Henson, 76, of Jerome, passed from this life peacefully at her home in Jerome on Monday July 4, 1994. She was born May 3, 1918, in Ririe, Idaho, the daughter of George S. Smith and Eva Ann Shelton Clark.
Myrtle was a member of the LDS Church and had served faithfully in the Relief Society, teaching the literature lessons for seven years at one time and also as a visiting teacher. She was also a member of the Daughters of the Utah Pioneers, American War Mothers, TOPS and Home Extension Club. Until her health failed, she used her talents to teach crafts at St. Benedict's Union Term Care Unit. She was also an avid quilter and made a quilt for each child and grandchild as they got married. Her greatest joy in life was her family and she was proud of and loved every one of them very much. She married Donald Henry Henson on April 27, 1935, in Shoshone.
Survivors include her husband of Jerome; three daughters, Averil Sidwell of London, Utah, Pat Gregson of Salem, Utah, and Beverly Gidlowski of Jerome; one son, Darrell of Twin Falls and a daughter-in-law, Evelyn Henson of Wendell; 31 grandchildren; and 51 great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents, one son, two brothers and one sister.
The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Jerome 3rd Ward LDS Chapel on North Lincoln, with Bishop Alfred Nickels officiating. Burial will follow at the Jerome Cemetery. Friends may call from 8 to 8 p.m. today at the Hove-Robertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome and one hour before the funeral on Thursday at the church.

Neal R. Dalton
BUHL — Neal R. Dalton, 82, Buhl, died Monday, July 4, 1994, at his home.
He was born Sept. 2, 1911, near Sparan, N.C., the son of Steve W. and Rosabel Cox Dalton. In March of 1928, he moved with his family to Buhl. He received his schooling in North Carolina and Idaho. He farmed with his father in several locations in the Magic Valley. He then worked for other farmers as an irrigator, a job he loved. He also worked in the cattle, sheep and dairy business. On Jan. 3, 1938, he married Mary Alice Hepworth of Jerome and they had two children.

They were later divorced. He married Allen Reed of Eden on Dec. 16, 1944, in Twin Falls. They would have celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in December.
Survivors include his wife, Allen Dalton of Buhl; one daughter, Rose Lee (Ray) Chamberlain of Twin Falls; one son, Robert Dalton of Twin Falls; four granddaughters; one grandson; one great-granddaughter; two great-grandsons; and two nieces. Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday at White Mortuary.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, July 8, 1994, at White Mortuary in Twin Falls, with Pastor Myron Glatt officiating. Interment will follow at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday at White Mortuary.
The family suggests that memorials be made to the American Heart Association, in care of Chris Charlton, Rt. 2, 3655 N. 3300 E. Kimberly ID 83341, or to a charity of the donor's choice.

Dennis D. Conrad
TWIN FALLS — Dennis Dean Conrad, 39, of Twin Falls, died Friday, July 1, 1994, following a motorcycle accident.

He was born Oct. 25, 1955, in Post, Texas, the son of Frances and Elmer Conrad. He grew up and went to school in Post, Texas.
Dennis had a zest for life, with a smile on his face and love in his heart for his friends. He was an active member of the Twin Falls Optimist Club, serving as vice-president, and his job was helping kids that needed help. He was always quick with a handshake or a hug for those he cared about.
After school, he moved to Twin Falls and became a popular radio personality for KLLX Radio. He joined McDonald Insurance Agency in 1988, and enjoyed being a successful agent for his clients.
He is survived by his mother, Frances; his sister, Carol; a brother, Eddy; his daughter, Jennifer, Conrad; and loving companion, Holly Reese.
A graveside service to remember our friend Dennis will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday, July 6, 1994, at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension in Twin Falls, with a reception to follow. A wake service will be held at 2 p.m. at the Turf Club in Twin Falls.

Evalyn Martindale Ballard
SHOSHONE — Evalyn Martindale Ballard, 87, of Shoshone, died Monday, July 4, 1994, at the Wood River Care Center in Shoshone.

Evalyn was born Oct. 29, 1906, in Monmouth, Okla., the daughter of Lloyd L. and Ida Layne. She moved with her parents in 1910, to Richfield where they homesteaded. Evalyn married Gene Martindale in 1927, moving their home in Burley and later in Shoshone. He preceded her in death in 1951. Evalyn later married Verbal Ballard on May 22, 1958, in Winnemucca, Nev., making their home in Hailey and later in Jerome. He preceded her in death on Dec. 31, 1984. Evalyn recently moved to the Wood River Care Center in Shoshone.

She was a member of the First Baptist Church in Jerome.
Survivors include by three sons, Lewis L. and his wife, Ellen Martindale of Declo, Clifton L. Martindale of Boise and Raymond L. Martindale of Nampan, one daughter, Dorothy Lough of Boise, one sister, Cleora Taylor of Jerome; 11 grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her first and second husbands, her parents, one brother and one sister.
A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday, July 6, 1994, at the Shoshone Cemetery, with the Rev. Peter Wilson officiating. Friends may call from 9 to 11:30 a.m. today at Demary's Bergin Chapel in Shoshone.

John L. Gehrig
GOODING — John Leo Gehrig, 96, of Gooding, died Saturday, July 2, 1994, at the Green Acres Care Center in Gooding.

He was born Jan. 29, 1898, in Shoshone, the son of Gottlieb and Margaret Duffee Gehrig. He was raised in Shoshone and married Dorothy Flannery in Shoshone. He farmed in Shoshone, Gooding and King Hill. He later retired and moved to Gooding.
Survivors include two sons, David Gehrig of McCall and John Gehrig of Sacramento, Calif.; one daughter, Dorothy Leatherman of Boise; a brother, Charles Gehrig of Gooding; and numerous grand, great-grand and great-great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his wife, Dorothy; three sons, Richard, Charles and Fred; and a daughter, Margaret Corder.
Lo raised two families of grandchildren and showed great compassion for all kids. They were raised with love and understanding that both parents show. He will be missed by all.
A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, July 7, 1994, at the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding, with Pastor Neil Castle officiating. Friends may call from 1 to 7 p.m. today at Demary's Gooding Chapel.

Fires rare over holiday weekend

By Melissa Gibson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Despite the snap, crackle and pop of fireworks, the Fourth of July holiday was pronounced "all quiet" in most counties by fire department officials.
Bliss, Buhl, Carey, Castleford, Dietrich, Jerome and Minidoka counties reported very few, if any, fires caused by fireworks over the holiday weekend.
"We had a nice and quiet Fourth of July," said Rupert County Fire Chief Thayne Taylor. "It's been different from last year, when we had a couple of fires."
For some counties, the weekend was fire-free, but the week leading up to the holiday was filled with small fires caused by fireworks.

Jerome County Fire Department reported a small grass fire last week caused by a bottle rocket, said Fire Chief Dan Daniels. Two more separate fires, caused by a firework known as a "Jumping Jack," burned two large bushes near homes, he said. Daniels estimated that one of the bushes would cost $600 to replace.
Last year, Jerome County had no Fourth of July fires reported, Daniels said.
More fireworks-related blazes were reported last week in Gooding County, but the only July 4 fire was a warehouse blaze that caused $25,000 in damages, said Gooding County Fire Chief Pat Bishop. The cause of the fire isn't known yet, he said, but fireworks "aren't being ruled out."

Even though most counties weathered the holiday with very few blazes, "it is the season" for fires, said Twin Falls Fire-Department Battalion Chief Gary Cravens. In the next two weeks, the fire department will be expecting more fireworks-related incidents, he said.
Twin Falls County had the most July 4 fires reported with nine runs made. Cravens said. Most of the blazes were grass fires that caused little or no property damage, he said, and all nine fires were caused by fireworks.

"The conditions are a lot drier than in years past," and that will result in an increased number of fires, said Shoshone District Bureau of Land Management Fire Information Officer Pam Wallace.
So far this year, the BLM has fought a 2,000-acre range fire north of Shoshone, a 21,000-acre blaze about 15 miles north of Burley and several other fires. However, the fire is not used by firefighters, although investigations are still under way, she said.

After the ground breaking, Seastrom attended the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency and Industrial Development Commission. Both city agencies are helping arrange $2.5 million in industrial-development bonds to pay for the new factory. The bonds will be issued through First Security Bank and should go out on the market by early August.

Also, the Chamber of Commerce is transferring the land in the industrial park for the factory to the Urban Renewal Agency, which is selling it to Seastrom Manufacturing in a tax-incremental financing transaction.

The city is also applying to the Idaho Department of Commerce for a $296,000 grant to pay for utility improvements and two new streets for the Seastrom Manufacturing plant.

He said he hopes the city takes this opportunity to improve Fifth Avenue.

Fifth Avenue South swerves to the southwest of where it should intersect with Avenida Avenue, forcing southbound motorists to drive to the left of the stop sign.

The council also approved the final plat, or map plan, for the Park View Estates subdivision on Park Avenue just west of the Oregon Trail Elementary School.

The subdivision proposes about 143 lots on 35.4 acres.
According to the Old Town plan, that land was to remain undeveloped forever.

Camper falls 900 feet from Arizona cliff

LAKE MEAD NATIONAL RECREATION AREA, ARIZ. (AP) — A camper trying to find his way down the Grand Canyon fell 900 feet to his death over the holiday weekend; officials said Tuesday.

Richard A. Flowers, 35, of St. George, Utah, was staying at an unimproved campground on the north rim of the canyon, in the Arizona section of Lake Mead National Recreation Area near the Nevada state line, said Karen Whitney, spokeswoman for the recreation area.

He fell about 7 p.m. Saturday, after telling his woman companion he was going to see if there was a way down into the canyon, Whitney said.
He fell about 450 feet, hit a ledge, then fell another 450 feet before coming to rest against a tree.

Governor names members to state commissions, councils

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced a number of appointments and reappointments to state commissions, commissions and professional councils.

Among the appointments were:
• Mike Telford of Malta to the Idaho Beef Council for a term running to July 1, 1997. He replaces Harvey Bickett of Gooding, whose term expired.
• Gary Asson of Burley to the Motor Vehicle Dealer Advisory Board for a term running to July 1, 1997. He replaces Dick Dey of Twin Falls, whose term expired.

Councilman Jeff Gooding said he has no specific opinion on the proposed initiative but is willing to look into the idea of a council-mayor government.

"It never hurts to revisit old areas," Gooding said.
Councilman Howard Allen, himself a former mayor, said he wonders what agenda is motivating the petitioners to question the city's management.

Councilman Chris Taltrow, yet another former mayor, said residents are not necessarily concerned about how the city is run, but about how the city Council is run as well.

Taltrow said he is more concerned about the "general incompetence" he sees in county government, which he compared to having a three-mayor government.

The city of Pocatello had a city manager for 35 years before its residents moved to revert back to a council-mayor system.

Twin Falls residents mounted a similar effort in 1979 but failed by a 209-vote margin.
Petersen said Monday that he was reluctant to talk about the proposed citywide initiative because no petition drive has been mounted yet.

The task at hand, he said, is to ensure a second petition drive this summer — when he and other residents might have enough daylight hours to gather the 3,202 signatures.

The proposal could conceivably appear on the same ballot as a state constitutional amendment that would allow counties to adopt forms of government like Twin Falls city's.

Business is bountiful at Harvest Cafe

Buhl's support helps Coleman, restaurant grow

By Lynn C. Joyner
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Seven months ago, Wallace "Wally" Coleman opened the Harvest Cafe on Broadway Avenue in Buhl. Coleman is an accomplished chef, but this is the first restaurant he's ever owned.

Before opening the Harvest Cafe, Coleman worked at the Blue Lakes Country Club and the Sodbuster Restaurant in Twin Falls.

"I can taste almost any dish... then replicate it in my own kitchen," he said. The menu at the Harvest Cafe reflects a wide range of tastes and culinary ability, from chicken piccata and New York steaks to grilled sandwiches and polish sausages. One of Coleman's favorite dishes is pasta carbonara.

"All of the sauces and gravies are made from scratch, as well as the homemade breads, pies and pastries," he said.

Coleman said starting his own restaurant was harder than he thought it would be. He attributes his success to community support in Wallace "Wally" Coleman stands in the entrance to his Buhl restaurant, the Harvest Cafe.

Buhl, along with other factors.

Larry Motzner (cuisine instructor at the College of Southern Idaho) is a great chef and good friend," Coleman said. "He told me one day, 'Put this Tasty Bird sandwich on your menu, customers will love it.' And they do. Larry has encouraged me all the way."

The Tasty Bird sandwich consists of turkey, pineapple and Swiss cheese on sourdough bread.

Coleman also tries to accommodate special diets.

"If people tell me their diet restrictions and I know when they're coming in, I can prepare special dishes for them," he said. "I have several customers who I cook special dishes for now."

Coleman's restaurant also has banquet facilities. He hosts business and service organization meetings as well as casual card-party groups and an occasional wedding reception. Beverages are served from Jim's Lounge, which adjoins the restaurant.

The restaurant is light and airy, with natural wood touches and country decor. Inside, Coleman displays the paintings of local artists.

"I have a long history of cooks in my family," Coleman said. "My great grandmother worked at the Rogerson Cafe, my grandmother worked several places, including the Blue Top Cafe. And my mother worked at many restaurants. I've been cooking and baking as long as I can remember."

Coleman and Motzner are charter members of the Sawtooth Chapter of Chefs Association. Coleman served as treasurer of the group until he resigned to open his cafe.

"We're only seven months old," Coleman said, "and I'm really pleased with the way the business has progressed. I've progressed a lot, too. I guess you could say I'm growing along with it."

Reader recipes focus on beef, chicken

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

Whether it's hot enough to fire up the grill or cool enough to flip on the oven, readers have their favorite ways to cook their beef and chicken.

Here are some recipes to share.

Judy Kadlec of Twin Falls wrote that she looks forward to the Food & Home section of The Times-News each week. This week, she's sharing her favorite recipe for meat marinade.

My favorite marinade to tenderize meat is simply any good white vinegar, olive oil (1/4 cup), salt and freshly ground pepper. Tastes vary, but I usually use 3 or 4 parts of vinegar to 2 parts oil.

Vinegar is acidic and softens muscle fiber in the meat. Lemon, lime or orange juices, which are also acidic, can be substituted for the vinegar and are especially good for marinating chicken, fish, shellfish and vegetables.

For variation, add minced garlic, green onions or shallots, Dijon or dried mustard, parsley, dill, chives, tarragon or any herb of choice. Use a wire whisk to combine.

Tough meat can require as much as two days covered and stored in the refrigerator. If food is not immersed completely in marinade, members of our readers' kitchen can reduce cooking time by as much as one third.

Thelma Slegers of Jerome sent in this recipe for beef kabobs.

HERBED BEEF KABOBS

- 1/2 cup catsup
- 1/2 cup oil
- 1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
- 1/2 teaspoon basil
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/2 teaspoon minced onion
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1-2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Spread on both sides of beef-round or top sirloin steak. Cover and refrigerate for 2-6 hours. Cut into two-inch cubes. Place beef cubes on skewers. Cook meat on barbecue for 8 to 10 minutes, turning halfway through cooking time.

Joyce Johnson of Fairfield uses equal parts soy sauce and red wine to marinate beef. Sometimes, she adds garlic powder and lime juice.

She collects many of her recipes from "RV friends" in Yuma, Ariz., where she spends the winters, she wrote. Here are two of her favorite chicken breast recipes.

CHICKEN BREAST CASSEROLE

From our Colorado friend, Betty Lane:
8 boneless skinless chicken breasts
8 slices Swiss cheese
1 can cream of chicken soup (undiluted)
1/2 cup dry white wine
1 cup herb seasoned stuffing mix
1/2 cup margarine melted

Place chicken in oblong pan (glass) and top with cheese slices. Mix wine, soup and stuffing mix and pour over chicken. Drizzle the margarine over top. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour.

CHICKEN BREAST CASSEROLE

Wrap 8 boneless, skinless chicken breasts in bacon.
Place 5 ounce jar dried beef strips or corned beef strips in bottom of glass 9 by 12-inch pan. Top with chicken.
Mix 1 can cream of chicken soup and 1 cup sour cream. Pour over chicken.
Bake uncovered at 275 degrees for 3 hours.

A variation of this is to omit the dried/corned beef. Top chicken breasts with diced onion, Dijon mustard and crushed mushroom stems. Pour 1 can Cream of Mushroom soup and 1 cup sour cream over breasts. Bake as above.

Requests

Readers are still searching for recipes for English beef pie and lo-cal pizza... and recipes for boneless chicken dishes are in great demand.

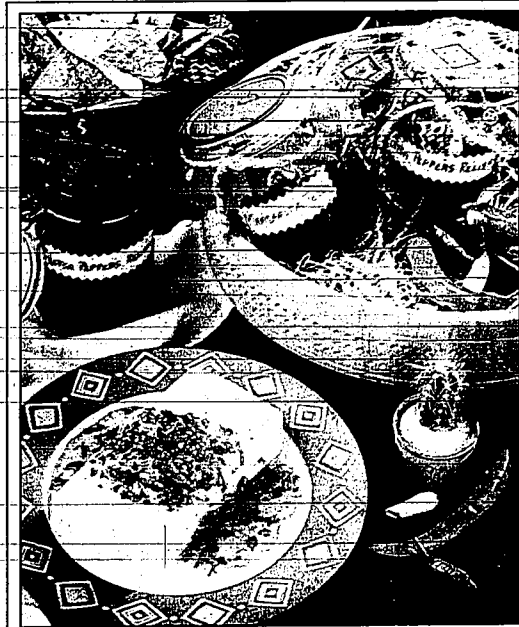

Also, Joyce Johnson of Fairfield wrote, "I really have appreciated all the great recipes. I would really like to see some for salads for company that would serve 12-18 people (gelatin type, pasta, vegetable, etc.)."

Any suggestions?

Requests for recipes or recipes to share should be sent to Recipe Exchange, Denise Turner, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303-0548. Please include name, address and phone number.

PEACH MELBA FRUIT SPREAD

- 4 cups prepared fruit (about 2 pounds fully ripe peaches or frozen unsweetened peaches, thawed and 1 pint fully ripe red raspberries)
- 2 cans (12 ounces each) frozen concentrated sweetened white grape juice, thawed
- 1 box Sure-Jell for lower sugar recipes fruit pectin
- 1/2-teaspoon margarine or butter

Peel, pit and finely chop peaches. Measure 3 cups into 6 or 8-quart saucepot. (Do not use a smaller saucepot or fruit spread will not set.) Crush raspberries thoroughly. 1 layer at a time. Measure 1 cup raspberries into peaches in saucepot. Stir in juice concentrate. Stir fruit pectin gradually into fruit in saucepot. Add margarine. Bring mixture to full rolling boil on high heat, stirring constantly. Boil exactly 20 minutes, stirring constantly. (It is important to stir constantly for 20 minutes to get a good set.) Remove from heat. Skim off any foam with metal spoon.

Ladle quickly into clean jars, "filling to within 1/8-inch of tops. Wipe jar rims and threads. Cover with two-piece lids. Screw bands tightly. **Invert jars 5 minutes, then turn upright. After jars are cooled completely, check seals.

Makes 4 1/2 cups or about 4 (1 cup) jars.

STRAWBERRY BANANA JAM

- 4 1/2 cups prepared fruit (about 2 quarts fully ripe strawberries and 3 fully ripe medium bananas)
- 3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 6 1/2 cups sugar
- 1 box Sure-Jell fruit pectin
- 1/2-teaspoon margarine or butter

Stem and thoroughly crush strawberries, 1 layer at a time. Measure 3 1/2 cups into 6- or 8-quart saucepot. Mash bananas thoroughly. Measure 1 1/2 cups into saucepot. Stir in lemon juice. Measure sugar into separate bowl. (Scrape excess sugar from cup with spatula to level for exact measure.) Stir pectin into fruit in saucepot. Add margarine. Bring to full rolling boil on high heat, stirring constantly. Quickly stir in all sugar. Return to full rolling boil and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Skim off any foam with metal spoon.

Ladle quickly into clean jars, "filling to within 1/8-inch of tops. Wipe jar rims and threads. Cover with two-piece lids. Screw bands tightly. **Invert jars 5 minutes, then turn upright. After jars are cooled completely, check seals.

Makes about 8 cups or 8 (1-cup) jars.

MIMOSA JELLY

- 1 1/2 cups champagne
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 3 1/2 cups sugar
- 1/2-teaspoon margarine or butter
- 1 pouch Certo fruit pectin

Measure champagne and orange juice into 6- or 8-quart saucepot. Measure sugar into separate bowl. (Scrape excess sugar from cup with spatula to level for exact measure.) Mix sugar thoroughly into juice in saucepot. Add margarine. Bring mixture to full rolling boil on high heat, stirring constantly. Quickly stir in fruit pectin. Return to full rolling boil and boil exactly 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Skim off any foam with metal spoon.

Ladle quickly into clean jars, "filling to within 1/8-inch of tops. Wipe jar rims and threads. Cover with two-piece lids. Screw bands tightly. **Invert jars 5 minutes, then turn upright. After jars are cooled completely, check seals.

Makes about 4 cups or 4 (1-cup) jars.

LOTSA PEPPERS RELISH

- 4 cups prepared peppers (3 medium red peppers, 2 medium green peppers, 10 large jalapeno peppers)
- 1 cup cider vinegar
- 5 cups sugar
- 1 box Sure-Jell fruit pectin
- 1/2-teaspoon margarine or butter

Stem and halve all peppers; discard seeds. Finely chop all peppers. Measure 4 cups into 6- or 8-quart saucepot. Stir in vinegar. Measure sugar into separate bowl. (Scrape excess sugar from cup with spatula to level for exact measure.) Stir fruit pectin into peppers in saucepot. Add margarine. Bring mixture to full rolling boil on high heat, stirring constantly.

Valley life

Each written thank-you helps mother bind wounds of grief

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in response to the letter signed "Still Grieving." The writer cannot believe that anyone would expect a grieving person to acknowledge floral tributes, memorials, etc. My husband and I also buried two children: One was 18, the other was 20. They died two months apart of unrelated causes.

Abby, you are so right when you say that such a double blow is more than the human spirit should be expected to endure. However, I found that writing those excruciatingly painful acknowledgments was therapeutic. I wrote notes to everyone, telling them how I felt. I cried with each note, thus ventilating my grief. Those who received my notes were very appreciative and understanding. It has been almost 20 years since our children died, and like "Still Grieving," we, too, are—and always will be—grieving to some extent, but we have to go on with our lives and learn to live with our loss. We couldn't have existed permanently with such searing pain. It has taken many years, and we have built new lives, which certainly include the memories of our deceased children.

"Still Grieving" need not give up one iota of the essence of her children. She can have them with her in all their beauty and sweetness forever. And the more she is able to live her life rather than simply exist in it, the more she will be able to exemplify what her children would want. Her life can be a tribute to them. I wish her peace.

Dear Abby

—STILL GRIEVING
IN MICHIGAN

DEAR STILL GRIEVING: Only those who have experienced the tragedy of having lost a child will appreciate the depth of such inextinguishable pain. But, thank God, it does become more tolerable with each passing day.

Many other readers also wrote to say that they found writing thank-you notes very therapeutic. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: "Still Grieving" wrote concerning thank-you notes for flowers sent at the time of death: "There is absolutely nothing you can say that will make me believe that all those people who sent flowers and cards expect a thank-you note."

Abby, thank-you notes have more than one purpose. Yes, they acknowledge the gift and the giver, but I learned the grieving process is enhanced as you express your thanks, praise another's thoughtfulness and show your appreciation. I wrote some 500 notes of thanks after our son took his own life. I found that expressing our thanks over and over for the kindness of others helped me with my grieving.

May I suggest that it's not too late for "Still Grieving" to write a few thank-you notes? Thanks, praise and appreciation are timeless.

—MARGE Z.
IN TOLEDO, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I could not believe that anyone would think it was inappropriate to wear a military uniform to a formal wedding. Those people would have been quite upset had they attended my wedding. When my police officer husband and I were married in 1972, even though his groomsmen wore police officers, we chose tuxedos for their attire.

However, on the morning of our wedding, my husband-to-be was advised that a protest march was to take place downtown, so members of the riot squad were put on alert. This meant they had to wear their uniforms to our wedding.

At first my husband was quite upset, thinking that some of the guests might think ours was a "shootgun" wedding, which it most certainly was not. Then he saw the humor in it—and we still laugh about it to this day!

Letters of thanks

Kiwanis Club thanks recyclers

The Kiwanis Club of Twin Falls wishes to thank Twin Falls County for its long-standing support.

By faithfully using our recycling bins since 1980, you have helped us keep 7,777,098 pounds of paper, aluminum cans, cardboard, glass and plastic out of the landfill. And you have helped us raise more than $78,000, all of which goes to the Kiwanis' youth fund, which is used to support youth groups and youth activities within the Magic Valley. We hope you will continue to use our recycling bins and help the Kiwanis in supporting youth in our community. Please remember to deposit only appropriate recycling materials in our bins. The cost of sorting out items that are not recyclable directly reduces the benefits to Twin Falls youths.

Thanks for doing your part in helping the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club help our youth!

Lacy leaves leave growers guessing

The phone jangled one bright morning recently. A worried grower was on the other end.

"Somebody's chewing on my rose leaves and they're all lacy and I don't know what to do," she said in one breath.

Telephone diagnosis is never the best way to go, but sometimes you can play detective long enough to make a pretty good guess.

Lilac leaves were chewed, too, the caller told me after some prodding. "What shape are the bite marks?" Where on the leaves have the culprits nibbled? Have you seen any unwanted critters?"

The replies: "Round. No, lacy. On the edges. No." She hadn't seen any bugs anywhere, but she had sprayed with Diazinon with no success.

That's the trouble with grabbing a sprayer without knowing who the enemy is. You kill everything out there — the good bugs along with the bad bugs.

whether you mean to or not. Some of the holes in the rose leaves are perfectly round, the caller said.

"Do they look like a very large paper punch-hole?" I asked.

Yes, they are perfect. And the same type holes were showing up in her lilacs.

Now, things began to make some sense.

Stop spraying, I told her. Leaf cutter bees have been carving pieces of leaves for their nests. When the nests are built, you won't have any more damage. They don't eat the leaves, just build with them.

Please, don't harm the bees. If you have a lot of round holes in rose and lilac leaves, you might be situated in a flyway.

Other leaves show a lacy outline, as well, the caller continued.

Something else is chewing when she isn't looking.

Although I'm sticking my neck out guessing over the phone, I told her that I've seen a "bazillion" baby grasshoppers in my garden, and baited for them this week. Also, some beetles hide in the soil around the base of a favorite plant during the day, then climb the stalk at night to dine. Granular insecticide often does the trick, when worked into the soil around the affected plants.

If chewed leaves are showing up in your vegetable garden, though, chemical insecticides aren't always safe to use. Read the label before you even buy a product. Then read it again each time you use it.

Keep your home looking lived-in when you're away

Orange County Register

Summer is prime time for crime.

Most homeowners think summer is for lazy days sitting and the pool in the sun. To potential burglars, it's the time when your home often proves an inviting target.

Summer is one of the biggest times of the year for home burglaries. Christmas, when gifts often are left under the tree while families attend church or visit a relative, is the other.

Two factors contribute to increased home burglaries in summer. First, teenagers are out of school. For some teens with nothing to do and no parental supervision, the temptation to break into a home for adventure can be great.

So, second, with many families taking trips while their young ones are on summer vacation, their empty homes can be easy targets.

So take a few simple precautions. Make it look as if someone is home. Buy a couple of timers, hook up lamps or wall or ceiling lights to them, and schedule them to go on at different times of the night.

But what do you do during the day? One way of making it look like someone is home is to tape a family conversation. Put it on an automatic-reverse tape player. Boost the volume enough so you can hear it if you put your ear to a window or door.

(Don't make it so loud the neighbors complain.) Then attach a timer to the tape player. Time it so it will go on about 8 a.m. through sundown when your other timers will turn on the lights.

That's the trouble with grabbing a sprayer without knowing who the enemy is. You kill everything out there — the good bugs along with the bad bugs.

These tips are good for any day, by the way, not just during the summer. Don't let things pile up. This means newspapers, circulars, anything that tells someone looking at your home that it's vacant.

Tell your neighbors that you'll be on vacation. Ask them to look at your front yard daily for publications, hand-distributed fliers, deliveries of packages, anything, what says: "There's no one home." Tell your neighbors you'll do the same for them when they're away.

Alarm systems. Does installing a burglar-alarm system guarantee that your home won't be burglarized? Of course not. If a professional burglar wants to get into your home, almost nothing will stop him. But it could stop a non-professional or frighten off someone who's trying to break in and trips the alarm.

Consider an alarm system that not only is meant to thwart break-ins, but acts as a safety system as well. Hook up smoke and heat detectors. And have the system monitored. You'll feel better knowing your possessions, loved ones and pets are protected from fire as well as theft.

Be sure to leave a "thwart break-ins" phone numbers or locations where you can be reached. Also leave them keys to your house and the code to turn off your alarm system. Show them where your alarm-system keypad is and give them instruction in how to work them.

After all, you don't want your alarm to remain on and bother your neighbors while you're away. You want friendly neighbors to come home to as well as a house that's been protected.

Cozy Ann Arbor feels spacious

At just 1,900 square feet, the cozy, country-style Ann Arbor isn't a large home, but it feels spacious. The combination-kitchen/family room has a lot to do with creating that sense of openness.

Located in the rear, this large space is bright and airy. Windows span most of that back wall, bringing the outdoors in, and a lofty vaulted ceiling adds volume. Still more light spills in through two skylights over the nook. During the darker months, the colored flames and warmth of the fireplace serve as a focal point.

Sliding glass doors in the nook open onto a wide patio with a built-in planter at center.

Sink and dishwasher are built into a counter that faces into the living area and could be used as an eating bar. A step-in pantry adds to the generous storage capacity. Utilities and a deep sink are tucked in a pass through space that connects the kitchen to the garage.

The master suite, well separated from the other two bedrooms, has a walk-in closet and private bathroom with dual vanity. Shower and toilet are separately enclosed. Sliding glass doors at the rear provide direct access to the patio. The other two bedrooms share a two-section bathroom.

A traditional post-and-rail covered porch wraps around most of the exterior of the living room, softening the light that illuminates the formal space.

All of the living areas are on one level, so this plan could be adapted for wheelchair accessibility.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jackson Drive, Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Ann Arbor 10-146 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring more than 150 home plans is available for $12. For more information, call (800) 634-0123.

Ductless air conditioner runs quietly, efficiently

Q: I want to add air-conditioning, but I cannot afford a central air system. I don't want noisy room air conditioners either. How efficient are the new quiet ductless mini-split models? - V. T.

A: New ductless air conditioners are efficient and extremely quiet. These air conditioners are ideal for any home, especially ones without air ducts (not warm or electric baseboard heat) or for a room addition. Not having to install ducts lowers the total cost. Heat pump models are available too.

A mini-split ductless system is somewhat like a central air ducted system because it has a compressor in the outdoors. Small quiet cooling blower units (only 8 inches deep) are mounted on the walls or ceilings in one to three rooms.

Often, three indoor blower units are adequate to cool an entire house.

The chilled refrigerant from the single outdoor compressor flows through small tubing to the indoor units. Some models allow you to locate the indoor units up to 100 feet from the outdoor compressor.

To install the indoor unit, you only have to cut a 3-inch hole in the outside wall. Refrigerant tubing and electric power come from the outdoor compressor unit, so you do not have to run wiring indoors.

Even if your house has a ducted hot air furnace, a ductless cooling system has advantages over central air: zone cooling, hand-held remote control, cool air outlet high on wall, and cleaner air for people with allergies.

Zone cooling can lower your electric bills. With a ductless system, you can easily keep your higher-activity areas (workroom, play room, etc.) cooler than other rooms. Built-in computerized clock thermostats let you automatically raise and lower the temperature in each area.

Many ductless systems have hand-held remote controls (like a TV remote) to adjust the temperature, blower speeds, humidity control, louver directions, etc. from your easy chair or bed. There is also a control keypad on the wall right beneath it.

Since the small indoor blowers are mounted high on a wall or ceiling, the cool air naturally circulates evenly throughout your rooms. This reduces isolated cold spots. Some models also have a special low-humidity mode.

If you have allergies and want to keep your bedroom air allergen free, a ductless system allows you to isolate that room while keeping it cool. There is also a built-in blower filter to further clean the air.

Write for Utility Bills Update No. 585 showing a buyer's guide, 11 ductless air conditioner manufacturers listing cooling outputs, efficiency ratings, types of remote controls, and special features. Please include $2 and a self-addressed envelope.

Q: I know that I should close the damper in my fireplace chimney in the winter, but is it necessary to close it in the summer too? Since hot air rises, the hot outdoor air should not come down.

A: If you air-condition your home, you should close the fireplace chimney damper. Even though it is cooler indoors, the sun shining on the chimney makes it warm. This creates an upward draft and draws out cooled air.

If you do not air-condition and you want to seal the chimney, leave the chimney damper open in the summer. A masonry chimney stays warm late into the evening. The natural draft helps draw air in your windows on a still day.

Train your garden to do topiary tricks

Orlando Sentinel

Just like the family pet, plants can do tricks too. But it does take some patience and guidance to train your favorite ornamentals into the attention-getting topiary.

Gardeners can manipulate their greenery into geometric shapes and lifelike animals or cartoon characters. Creating a topiary can take years of trimming trees and shrubs to the desired look. But eager gardeners can take a shortcut by forming a stuffed topiary covered with plastic to create a bear, a seal or a set of balanced balls in a matter of months.

First buy a frame from a gardening supply company or make your own. Bend 8 to 9-gauge galvanized steel or aluminum wire to the shape of the topiary. Weld the joints or use smaller wire to tie the pieces in place. Topiaries may need extra wood or metal supports to help hold the components together.

Form the body of the topiary by covering the frame with 1-inch mesh chicken fencing. Attach the mesh to the frame by staples or by sewing. The shape formed should be slightly smaller than the desired size of the topiary to leave room for plant growth. Wire the mesh to the frame, but leave an opening for stuffing with growing media.

Use sphagnum moss available from garden centers to create the growing area for plant roots within the frame. Moisten the moss, and pack it tightly. Tie the opening shut, and you are ready to plant the topiary.

Small leaf plants like the best cover for topiaries. The dainty foliage of the creeping fig or ornamental vines are ideal because they grow close to the surface of the wire mesh frame. Big-leaf plants can be used with large designs.

Get rooted cuttings or small plants to push through the openings of the wire mesh and into the sphagnum moss. Space the plants 6 to 8 inches apart so they have room to grow. Where necessary, some soil can be removed from root balls to make planting easier. Pin the plants in place with small pieces of wire shaped to form a U, or tie them to the mesh.

Create a topiary by adding colorful plants to form a ball, head or cluster of tail feathers. Use variegated ivies for their white or yellow foliage markings; begonias for red, pink or white foliage and flowers; or Joseph's coat for leaves of many colors. Select only small seedlings or rooted cuttings that fit through the wire mesh.

Stuffed topiaries need frequent watering to prevent the moss from drying. Check the surface daily, and when it starts to dry, it's time to water. Dry moss is difficult to wet but can be re-moistened by soaking the topiary in a container of water or allowing a sprinkler to moisten the surface gently.

Develop your own elements of style

Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

The designer, who makes her living decorating multimillion-dollar homes in South Florida, suddenly dropped her facade and let me see inside her head. Her nouveau riche clients would be appalled if I quoted her by name.

"All designers have one wish," she confessed during an interview. "If only those people who have money had taste. And if those who have taste only had money." Taste, Style. That elusive "something" you just can't go out and buy at any price. It's what Coco Chanel and Jackie-O had. Whether it's how they dressed or how they decorated their homes, they knew who they were and reflected it in effortless understatement.

Design takes time

Getting to understand who you really are takes time and a lot of hard work. That's why design experts warn young people not to make huge investments in furniture for their first apartment. As our personalities develop and we gain self-confidence, our tastes change.

Mine sure did. I cringe every time I look at the pictures of my first apartment. Rebelling against the Colonial furnishings of my parents' home, I had to have what I thought was the hip modern design of the '70s. The sofa was yellow with tiny orange stripes. The bookcases were bright yellow. The rug featured splashes of orange, yellow and brown with coordinating abstract prints on the wall.

These days my home decor—and my politics—have drifted to the more conservative side of the scale. No more, what the hell, of my furnishings, they are classic design—from the 1930s art deco adorne with walnut burl front to the bentwood dining room chairs. Textures are more important than before. The tapestry on one chair plays against the silk noie of another. The wicker coffee table contrasts with the mahogany of an 18th-century chest.

Room conditioners can cool key parts of house

Room air conditioners, if properly sized and maintained, can efficiently cool key parts of a house or apartment even in the hottest weather.

Room conditioners are most effective and economical if placed in well-used areas such as bedrooms and family rooms and used only during periods when the rooms are occupied or about to be occupied.

I've found that even a sweltering room can be made comfortable by a properly sized room conditioner in 30 to 45 minutes.

Some room conditioners are even light enough to be carried from room to room, making it possible to keep cool while watching television in one room, then tote the unit to a bedroom for a cool night.

Room conditioners are generally installed in windows, but can also be installed in openings in exterior walls. Wall installations are most practical for oversized conditioners capable of cooling large areas. Wall-installed conditioners, and many large window units, are usually left in place year-round.

Prices for room conditioners range from about $200 to $800 or more, depending on cooling capacity and brand.

Cooling capacity, or size, and energy efficiency, are two of the most important factors to keep in mind when shopping for a room conditioner.

The cooling capacity of room conditioners is rated in British thermal units (BTU) per hour, and there are complex formulas for calculating the proper size conditioner for a given room. Room air conditioners range in size from 5,000 to 25,000 BTUs.

It takes time to conceive and plan a room like this for your house.

Read, look, listen

My style won't be your style. But how do you find what yours really is? Style comes from exposure to good design that is absorbed and understood.

Buy or subscribe to design magazines, such as Traditional Home, Elle Decor, House Beautiful, American Homesite, and Metropolitan Home. Whenever you see something you like, tear it out and put it into a file. At the end of six months, go through the file and look for patterns. Eventually, you will see a pattern of color and styles you prefer.

Once you feel more confident about your personal style, start collecting samples. Go to fabric stores where they allow you to trim samples of the fabric and hardware stores where you can get samples of tile, paint and wallpaper.

But how do you learn how to put the things you like together?

Again, you will need to expose yourself to learn to express yourself. Visit designer show houses. Take classes on art and design. Plan vacations to Europe where you can learn about classic design and architecture. Read books that teach the design principles.

One of my favorites is "Interiors" (Clarkson N. Potter Inc., $50) by Min Hogg and Wendy Harrop. British editors of The World of Interiors magazine. A well-written commentary and 300 color photographs illustrate the differences among eight design styles. Other sources of inspiration include "Chic Simple Home" (Alfred A. Knopf, $24.50) by Kim Johnson Gross and Jeff Stone, "Decorative Style" (Simon and Schuster, $39.95) by Kevin McClelland and "A Passion for Detail" (Doubleday, $40) by Charlotte Moss.

A final word on style comes from Andrew Putman, an internationally known designer and tastemaker, quoted in "Chic Simple Home": "Style is to see beauty in modest things. Unless you have a feeling for that secret knowledge that modest things can be more beautiful than anything expensive, you will never have style. I have no recipe for how to combine things. But you must be sincere. And if you are, strangely, you will succeed."

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

A rule of thumb is that an air conditioner needs at least 20 BTUs for each square foot of living space it cools. By this rule, for example, a 15-by-20-foot room (300 square feet) would need a conditioner with a capacity of at least 6,000 BTUs. The rule doesn't apply to kitchens, which need several thousand additional BTUs to overcome heat generated by appliances and cooking.

Measure the length and width of the room to be cooled, including ceiling height, before shopping for a conditioner. Appliance dealers can often help in calculating the correct size of conditioner needed.

Those who want to make a very accurate calculation of cooling capacity for a specific room can get a work sheet from the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers, 20 N. Wacker Drive, Chicago 60606. Include a self-addressed, stamped envelope and ask for "cooling load estimate form." The AHAM form takes into consideration such factors as window size, type of ceiling construction, and number of people generally occupying the room.

A room air conditioner should be installed in a window or wall that is shaded by trees or an awning. It should tilt downward slightly on the outside so that water condensed during the cooling process drains outside.

Recipes for marinades, no clear scripts for life

My sleepy-eyed 9-year-old son wandered into the kitchen a few mornings ago and said, "Mom, what's for breakfast?"

I paused a moment, and he cooed, "Say French toast. That's your line."

I wish I had access to this little script of his. Without it, I find myself frequently ad libbing — and a mother really ought to have a script, don't you think?

I wish I had a script that would tell me how to refuse a request to go camping after I've discovered the kids roasting marshmallows over a candle flame on the kitchen cupboard.

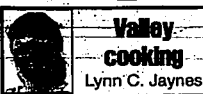

I wish I knew what to say when my young son becomes the proud owner of a gerbil and wants me to be thrilled because he paid for an imported rodent.

I wish there were an acceptable line to give my banker husband when he says I've overdrawn the checking account again. I tried

(a) I'm sorry, (b) I didn't do it and (c) Oh my goodness, where did the money go? Trust me, they weren't acceptable responses.

I think if I could just get my hands on this script that my non-mentioned, life would be much simpler. I've searched every book in the house for it and can't find it. In the meantime, I guess I'll just take the kids and the gerbil camping. We probably ought to go about the same time as those checks start hitting the bank.

My manuscript search wasn't entirely unproductive. It did reveal a few great marinade recipes to share with you. (Thank heavens we have instructions for a few things.)

Mix ingredients and add two pounds of stew meat or steaks. Marinate at least four hours before grilling.

This recipe comes from Joyce Scott in Kimberly and is an especially good one to use with wild game cuts.

LEMONY ORIENTAL MARINADE
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
3 tablespoons chopped green onion
1/4 tablespoons soy sauce
1/4 tablespoons vegetable oil
1/4 teaspoon ginger
1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper pods
Combine all ingredients, stirring until well blended. Makes about 1/2 cup. This recipe and the next came from the Idaho Beef Council several years back.

HONEY MUSTARD GLAZED STEAKS WITH GLAZED ONIONS

1/3 cup coarse grain dry style mustard
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1/4 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
1 tablespoon water
1/4 teaspoon hot red pepper sauce
1/4 teaspoon black pepper
2 well-trimmed boneless beef top loin steaks
1 large onion, cut into 1/4-inch thick slices
Combine mustard, parsley, honey, vinegar, water, pepper sauce and pepper. Place beef top loin steaks and onions on grid over medium coals; brush both sides liberally with glaze. Grill steaks and onions to desired doneness, turning once and again brushing with glaze.

CREATE-YOUR-OWN MARINADE

1/4 cup of your favorite steak sauce
2 tablespoons packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
Salt, if desired
Combine steak sauce, sugar and lime juice; reserve 2 tablespoons marinade. Place beefsteaks in plastic bag; add remaining marinade, turning to coat. Close bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 6 to 8 hours (or overnight). Use extra marinade to coat steaks while grilling.

Woman makes sauce from horseradish, jelly

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS. — Horseradish, apricot pineapple preserves, apple jelly and spices. Sounds like a recipe for indigestion.

Actually, Marie Whaley says Jezabel, a spicy southern sauce is her best seller.

"It's unique, and a lot of people like that hot and sweet taste," the 51-year-old Idaho Falls woman said. "And there are not a lot of products out there with horseradish in them."

Whaley is a gourmet cook who has turned a lifelong passion into a promising business venture. Ruby's Gourmet & Specialties is Whaley's attempt to develop a market for her wine and rose petal jellies, and flavored oils and vinegars.

Initial response to her products, particularly Jezabel, has been, well, delectable.

The tangy sauce can be poured over blue cheese and served with crackers, or used as a glaze on chicken pork or lamb. Some people like to use it as a dip for pretzels and tortilla chips.

When Whaley attends food fairs and shows to tempt customers with her wine and rose petal jellies, she finds people are more interested in tasting Jezabel.

"If you like horseradish, you really like Jezabel," she said. "We tried all kinds of things to see what would attract people to come over and talk to us, and that was always the hook."

Whaley believes the curiosity stems from the fact that there are very few products, other than shrimp cocktail sauce and a condiment for prime rib, on the store shelf made with horseradish.

Whaley started the business last November after spending 16 years as manager and co-owner of Rossier Electric Motor in Idaho Falls.

"I needed to do something different," she said, stirring a pot of merlot jelly.

"The unemployment office couldn't find us a job," added Whaley's assistant Wendy Baldwin.

A member of the Holy Rosary Catholic Church, Whaley leases the school house once or twice a week to bottle her culinary delights. She first canned jellies to sell at a church bazaar while living in Las Vegas.

Whaley says Johannsbrenn riesling and chardonnay from Carmela Vineyards in Orem, Utah, make wine jellies. She likes the idea of using another Idaho product to make her own. She also produces jelly from merlot and white zinfandel.

While they smell and taste like wine, the jellies contain no alcohol because it evaporates during boiling.

Roses for some of Whaley's products are grown in her backyard. The delicate, aromatic petals are used to flavor her jelly and vinegar.

Last year she had 30 roses bushes. This year her husband planted 40 more.

Whaley dubbed the company Ruby's because she's liked the name since she was a child.

"When I was a little girl I always loved the name Ruby and I always wished my mother would have called me Ruby, and it kind of stuck with me," she said.

Her mother still doesn't approve of the name, believing it common among women of all repute.

An avid and adventurous cook, Whaley lives trying new recipes and improving upon old ones. For instance, Whaley borrowed the recipe for Jezabel from a friend named Georgia and she added her own special touch.

I don't know what qualified you to be a gourmet cook, but if there's qualifications I possibly could be one," she said.

Whaley's products are sold at several gift and specialty shops across the West.

Charles wants to peddle princely cookies in U.S.

The Baltimore Sun

LONDON — Prince Charles wants to peddle cookies in America.

Actually the prince is unlikely to call his Duchy Originals biscuits "cookies." Cookies is an American as French Amos. Even chocolate chip cookies, like stretch limousines, are an American import.

The prince's cookies, uh, biscuits, are hard, crisp and thoroughly British oaten or gingered waters.

The prince, of course, doesn't personally pop the dough in the oven to make his Duchy Originals. They're a product of his Duchy of Cornwall and his interest in organic farming. Each cookie is impressed with the crest of the duchy.

You're not likely to find them very soon in your local 7-Eleven. Duchy Originals are upmarket cookies sold in London at Harrod's and Fortnum & Mason, mercantile marts so rarefied they hardly have counterparts in the United States. And you can easily get the prince's cookies on the Concorde, if you fly that supersonic aircraft to London for $4,378.

The Duchy of Cornwall is now engaged in what are called "delicate" negotiations to place them on the shelves of American retailers of the proper sort.

Prince Charles

The duchy is one of the oldest and largest landed estates in Britain and one of the richest in Europe. Edward III created it in 1337 for his son, the Black Prince (whose nickname derived either from his black armor or his "loul Angevin temper").

The duchy today consists of 150,000 acres, mostly agricultural land scattered over 23 counties, little of it, however, in Cornwall. The duchy also owns some residential property, shops and offices. The duchy is developing a village community called Poundbury, which is to incorporate the prince's vision of the architectural virtues of the traditional English country town.

Woodward & Lothrop, Bloomingdale's and Neiman Marcus come to mind as suitable purveyors of the prince's biscuits.

Charles, in addition to being the Prince of Wales, is also the Duke of Cornwall. The duchy provides the prince with his income. It is, in fact, his only source of income, but quite a handsome one. The duchy last year produced a "surplus" of $6 million for the prince.

Labels required on meat, poultry

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Shoppers should find something extra on that package of chicken, pork or other meat starting today: a label giving instructions on safe handling of raw meat.

The safe-handling labels have been required on all ground meats since May 27. Starting today, the requirement covers all raw meat products, including chickens, turkeys, roasts and steaks, veal and lamb.

The label, about the size of a credit card, cautions:

- Keep refrigerated or frozen and thaw in a refrigerator or microwave oven.
- Keep raw meat away from other foods; wash hands; utensils and cutting surfaces thoroughly after using raw meat.
- Cook thoroughly.
- Keep hot foods hot, refrigerate leftovers immediately or discard them.

Food

Let fajitas be fajitas

You can mess with foods, but don't call any old thing 'fajita'

By Russ Parsons
Los Angeles Times

Modern chefs play fast and loose with labels, and in most cases that's just fine with me. If someone wants to serve tuna carpaccio, as long as it tastes good, far be it from me to point out that carpaccio is made only with beef. The same thing is true for mint pesto. Everyone knows pesto is made from basil. So you've got this green smeary stuff that tastes like mint and you think people will try it only if you call it pesto?

No problem. But they never should have messed with fajitas.

Today, everyone knows fajitas — or thinks they do. It's that tangled mess of meat and vegetables that comes to you on that really neat sizzling, smoking plate. You wrap it up in tortillas and eat it. As such, it is kind of a four-way parlay of a dish, involving two cuisines. The tortillas are definitely Mexican, but the cooking (basically, a marinated stir fry) is Chinese, including the hot plate (from sizzling rice soup) and the method of eating (more like moo-shu pork than anything else).

It seems that almost anything can qualify for fajitas: pork, sirloin, shrimp, fish, chicken, even tofu. And they show up in the weirdest places. You can find fajitas on menus from Boston to Bakersfield. I once walked into an upscale grocery store and found that fully a third of the meat department was taken up with various kinds of fajitas for marinating in trays. That's going a bit too far.

What has happened here is perhaps the food world's greatest example of selling the sizzle. The thing people love most about fajitas is the way they come out popping and hissing on the big iron tray.

Well, it may be good marketing, but it's lousy food (its raging success, of course, only points out which side the food industry's bread is buttered on).

I happen to have a long and affectionate relationship with fajitas that dates back a couple of decades to summers spent in south Texas. Come a weekend evening, odds were you could find a party where someone was grilling fajitas, or roasting "cabrito," and serving it with lots of good local beer. If you were really lucky, you could get a couple of cold ones, too.

Real fajitas are a cowboy dish from the area around the King ranch (for those of you who aren't from around there, the King ranch actually takes up a sizeable chunk of south Texas, about 25,000 acres, stretching from near Houston almost to the Mexican border).

Fajitas are made from ragged triangles of skirt steak that are marinated in Fajitas are made from ragged triangles of skirt steak that are marinated in lime juice and jalapeno chiles, grilled all in a piece and then sliced thinly and served on a warm tortilla with salsa.

lime juice and jalapeno chiles, grilled all in a piece and then sliced thinly and served on a warm corn (or sometimes flour) tortilla with appropriate salsas.

According to Rick and Deann Bayless, "Authentic Mexican," there is a corresponding Mexican dish from Sonora called "arrachera al carbon." This is not surprising, since in this part of Texas, most of the cowboys are Mexican.

Skirt steak used to be ridiculously cheap. The diaphragm muscle of the cow, it is thin and extremely sinewy. In fact, it is downright chewy (something these ersatz fajitas almost never are). But at the same time, the skirt steak (like other hard-working cuts) is extremely flavorful. And that's why it's no longer so inexpensive.

So what you've got here is a fragrant, tender tortilla wrapped around meat; chewy strings of tangy, beefy meat. Slather on a little guacamole, and maybe some "pico de gallo" and, man, that is something that is too good to mess with.

REAL FAJITAS

1 pound skirt steak, whole
Salt
1 jalapeno chile, seeded and minced
Juice 1 lime
12 corn tortillas, warmed
Pico de Gallo Salsa
Guacamole

Lay skirt steaks on work table and check closely, removing any "silver skin." Salt lightly on both sides. Put in sealable plastic food bag with jalapeno and lime juice and refrigerate 1 hour to overnight.

Remove from bag and pat dry with paper towels. Grill over hot charcoal about 4 to 5 minutes. Turn and grill another 3 to 4 minutes on second side. Remove to cutting board and cut in thin strips.

Divide meat among warmed tortillas and garnish with 1 tablespoon Pico de Gallo Salsa and/or 1 tablespoon Guacamole. Makes 12 tacos.

PICO DE GALLO SALSA

1/2 white or red onion, minced
2 Roma tomatoes, seeded and chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 serrano chile, minced
1 tablespoon minced cilantro
Juice 1/2 lime

Combine onion, tomatoes, garlic, chile, cilantro and lime juice in small bowl and mix well. Makes 2 cups.

GUACAMOLE

2 ripe avocados, halved, seeded and scooped from skin

Low-fat Mediterranean diet wins researchers' endorsement

Knight-Ridder News Service

Supplement sales are soaring; yet most nutritionists still say that eating the right foods beats popping pills for good health.

That advice was echoed this month in Los Angeles, where leading researchers gathered at the University of Michigan Medical Center to review research on which foods prevent or cause cancer.

The daylong program, presented to about 100 dietitians, led to some strong conclusions: To benefit from foods linked to cancer prevention, people must eat them; the Mediterranean diet in particular got raves; Conversely, people must avoid foods linked to high cancer rates, rather than expecting supplements to immunize them against cancer.

"There are hundreds of food components that affect health, especially cancer risk. We are right at the beginning of learning about these," said Dr. Gary Beniczer, a researcher with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"We really can't say whether one or another is more important, because we have very little understanding of how they interact," said Beniczer, a research leader on the USDA's Human Nutrition Research Center in Beltsville, Md.

Scientists have inadvertently misled the public by isolating and studying one nutrient at a time, said Dr. Phyllis Bowen, a researcher at the University of Illinois in Chicago.

"They haven't yet taken up the challenge of learning how numerous compounds interact," said Bowen. "We have no studies where animals have been fed mixed vegetables to fight cancer," she said.

Studies of beta carotene, for example, led many Americans to believe it is a wonder nutrient. Found in carrots and other yellow-orange vegetables, it is converted into vitamin A and other compounds by the body. It is one of more than 600 similar compounds in nature, called carotenoids, new research shows that many carotenoids work together to prevent disease.

"Beta carotene is not the magic pill the public believes it is," said Bowen. And, she added, "People should not go hog wild with massive doses" of vitamin C.

Instead of depending on vitamin pills, the experts advised, people should eat diets low in fat and rich in grains, vegetables and proteins. Specifically, they should consider the Mediterranean diet of Italian and Greek peasants, credited with keeping disease rates low in southern Europe.

Compared to American meals, the Mediterranean diet has:

— A different fat. Shunning meat, milk, butter and cream — sources of saturated fat — Mediterraneans have a diet far higher in monounsaturated fat, which they obtain from olive oil.

Try something new on your summer picnics

Ready, Set, Picnic!

Chicken is a tried-and-true companion. From rotisserie chickens from the supermarket to buckets of carry-out fried chicken, there are countless ways to avoid cooking it. But there's no place to buy adobe oven-fried chicken, a finger-lickin' good reason to make it yourself.

ADOBE OVEN-FRIED CHICKEN

Preparation time: 20 minutes
Cooking time: 40 minutes

Yield: 4 to 6 servings
1/2 cup fresh cilantro, minced
6 tablespoons honey mustard
1 jalapeno chili, minced
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
1/2 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/2 cup yellow cornmeal
2 teaspoons chili powder
1/2 teaspoon each: salt, dried oregano, ground red pepper
1/2 cup vegetable oil

2 frying chickens, cut in serving pieces, skin removed
1. Heat oven to 400 degrees. Line a jellyroll pan with aluminum foil. Combine cilantro, mustard, jalapeno and lime juice in a small dish; set aside. Combine bread crumbs, cornmeal, chili powder, salt, oregano and red pepper in a shallow dish such as a pie plate. Drizzle oil over and mix with your hands until mixture is uniformly moistened.

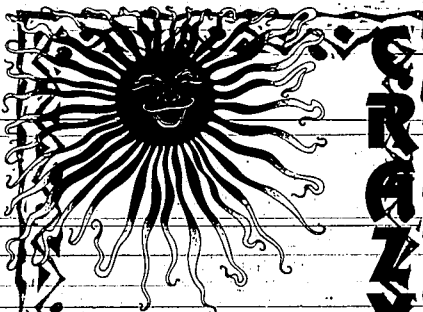

2. Using the back of a small spoon, coat chicken pieces with mustard mixture; roll in bread-crumbs mixture. Arrange meaty side up on jelly-roll pan.
3. Bake until juices from the thigh run clear instead of pink, 40 to 45 minutes. Serve hot or at room temperature.

AZTEC RICE PILAF

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Cooking time: 25 minutes

Yield: 6 servings
3 to 4 ounces chorizo sausage, casing removed
1 medium onion, finely diced
1 large clove garlic, minced
2 large Anaheim or poblano peppers, seeded, finely diced
2 cups converted white rice
2 cans (13% ounces each) reduced-salt chicken broth
1 1/2 cups corn kernels
1 roasted red bell pepper, seeded, finely diced, optional
2/3 cup chopped fresh cilantro
Salt to taste

1. Cook sausage in a medium saucepan, crumbling it as it cooks, until brown. Add onion, garlic and peppers. Cook, stirring often, until onion begins to soften, 4 to 5 minutes. Add rice; cook 1 minute. Add chicken broth.
2. Cover and heat to a boil; reduce heat and simmer until rice is tender and almost all liquid is absorbed, 15 to 17 minutes. Add corn, red pepper, cilantro and salt; cover and let stand 5 minutes. Serve hot or at room temperature.

Food, Wine Festival invades Aspen

Knight-Ridder News Service

ASPEN, Colo. — Colorado's glitziest zip code was invaded June 17 to 19 by foodies and wine lovers as well as Julia Child, Jacques Pepin, Marcella Hazan, Patricia Wells and a host of wine experts tasted and sipped at the annual Aspen Food & Wine Festival. The festivities — food and wine tastings, seminars, book signings and cooking demonstrations — took place in huge tents in a park in downtown Aspen as well as the ritz Ritz-Carlton Hotel. Here are some notes I made in between bites of chocolate and sips of South African wine:

EAT TO THE BEAT: The jokes about "caring cuisine" were flying hot and heavy in the Singapore tent where such Singaporean specialties as Nasi Goreng were served while a Singaporean country music band — Mathew ("The Singapore Cowboy") and the Mandarins — played a twangy version of Jimmy Buffett's "Margaritaville."

THE MUSIC OF FOOD: Texas chef and cookbook author Stephen Pyles chopped some onions and threw them in a saute pan at a cooking demonstration. When he heard the onions sizzling melodically, he began talking about "the music of cooking," an underappreciated but essential aspect of kitchen life. "It's very much a part of cooking. If you think of charcoal grilling and the sound of the fat sizzling. It's a wonderfully inviting sound," says Pyles as he uncouples his microphone and holds it next to the onions. "It's part of why I got into cooking. It's not just the smell and the sight of food, it's the sound," he adds.

VIVA ITALY! The Italians really know how to host and feed people, even if there are 3,000 of them. At the Italian pavilion I savored sweet prosciutto wrapped around breadsticks, perfect Parmigiano-Reggiano and romano cheeses, chocolate which tingled on my tongue as they melted into ambrosia, and more. Meanwhile there were dozens of Italian wines to sample as well as grappa, the fiery clear liquor.

NAPTIME: Question: What do you get when you have 3,000 flatlanders sipping sherry, beer, Scotch, grappa, brandy, champagne and hundreds of varieties of wine at 11 a.m. at high altitude on a dry, sunny day?

Answer: 3,000 flatlanders taking naps in the middle of the afternoon in their Aspen hotel rooms.

GOOD ADVICE: Stephan Pyles works with a lot of hot chilies in his new Texas cooking. He suggests coating your hands with a little vegetable oil before handling peppers to keep the potent oils from soaking into your skin.

COOKING MUSIC: After the demonstration, I asked Pyles whether he listens to music while he cooks. "I can't cook without listening. I used to listen to classical music. Now I listen to country-and-western. I like the new Texas folks like the Dixie Chicks."

Buster Douglas falls into coma

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Former heavyweight champion James “Buster” Douglas was reportedly hospitalized Tuesday in a diabetic coma.

WBNS-TV, citing no sources, said Douglas, 34, was upgraded from poor to stable condition at Grant Medical Center on Tuesday afternoon.

The hospital refused comment and hospital spokeswoman Karen Waldbillig said the family asked that no information be released.

Unidentified relatives of the former boxer had told the station Douglas was taken to the hospital Monday and had slipped in and out of a coma since then. They said Tuesday afternoon that his condition was improving.

It was not known whether Douglas previously had been diagnosed as a diabetic or which form of the disease he might have. In some cases, if diabetes goes untreated, the victim may go into a diabetic coma, which can lead to death.

Douglas’ father, Bill Douglas, could not be reached for comment. A man who answered the phone at Bill Douglas’ home Tuesday morning identified himself as a friend of the family and said he knew nothing of Douglas’ condition. He would not confirm that Douglas was in the hospital. There was no answer at the home Tuesday afternoon.

Messages seeking comment from the fighter’s business manager, Lawrence Nallie, were not returned.

Douglas, a native of Columbus, was the heavyweight champion for only eight months.

He was a 42-1 underdog when he won the title in February 1990 with a 10th-round knockout of then-undefeated Mike Tyson in Tokyo. Eight months later, an out-of-condition Douglas lost his first title defense in three rounds to Evander Holyfield.

Douglas took home a $24.1 million purse from the Holyfield fight. He finished his career with a record of 30-5-1. He used some of his winnings to build a community center near the east side neighborhood where he grew up.

Douglas said he was content with life outside the ring, but he also faced problems away from the spotlight.

In 1993, a jury ruled that Douglas owed his hometown $293,163 in taxes from the purse for the fight with Holyfield.

He was acquitted of drunken driving charges in 1992 and was convicted of speeding.

New York Met Fernando Vina, right, makes it safely back to first base and beats the tag from San Francisco Giant Dave Martinez Tuesday.

Saberhagen yields 2 hits against Giants

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Giants met their match in Bret Saberhagen and knew it.

The Mets only All-Star pitched six perfect innings before yielding a leadoff home run to Darren Lewis in the seventh inning of a 4-2 victory by the New York on Tuesday. The right-handed Saberhagen (9-4) worked eight innings, yielding just two hits and no walks, while striking out eight.

“Saberhagen was great today,” Giants manager Dusty Baker said. “He was hitting spots and throwing 94-95 (mph). You just hope he makes a mistake.”

More baseball — D2

It didn’t happen until Saberhagen hung a 2-2 breaking pitch to Lewis. The ball sailed over the left-field fence for Lewis’ second homer — his first since April 23 against the Mets.

“I was just trying to get something going as a leadoff hitter,” Lewis said. “I knew he had a perfect game going. I just got a hanging curve and I got all of it.”

Saberhagen, the first Mets pitcher to throw six perfect innings since Tom Seaver in 1975, also allowed a leadoff homer to Dave Martinez in the eighth.

“Every time Saberhagen goes out there, he has the potential of throwing a no-hitter,” Baker added.

Saberhagen also contributed to the Mets’ 12-hit attack with his first major league RBI, a run-scoring double in the sixth that made it 2-0.

Consecutive two-out singles by Joe Orsulak, Bobby Bonilla and Jeff Kent off Burkett (5-7) made it 4-0 in the first inning. Successive two-out doubles by Ryan Thompson, Saberhagen and Jose Vizcaino pushed it to 3-0 in the sixth.

Museeuw takes Tour lead

The Associated Press

CALAIS, France — Belgium’s Johan Museeuw took the lead in the Tour de France Tuesday after the team time trial Tuesday, and American Lance Armstrong moved into fifth place while heading a surge by his team.

In the battle of the two favorites, three-time winner Miguel Indurain of Spain gained a slight edge over Tony Rominger of Switzerland.

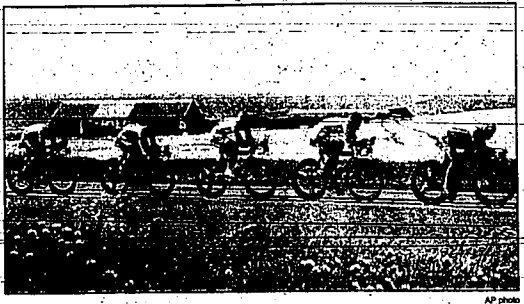

The team time trial, the Tour’s third stage, covered 41 miles from Calais to the Channel Tunnel.

Museeuw took the overall lead from Britain’s Chris Boardman, who had held it since the prologue Saturday. He dropped to 20th position, 54 seconds behind. Boardman’s team was more than a minute behind Museeuw’s team.

Museeuw held the individual lead by 10 seconds over Indurain. Third was Museeuw’s teammate, Dane Rolf Sorensen.

Indurain increased his margin over Rominger because the Spaniard’s team was 24 seconds ahead of the Swiss racer’s group. Rominger is now 10th, 38 seconds behind Museeuw.

Rominger and Indurain are the heavy favorites to duel for the overall title. Most of the early leaders are expected to fade when Chris Boardman of Great Britain, right, leads the Gans team towards the eighth place in the third stage of the Tour de France Tuesday.

The Tour reaches the mountains.

Armstrong moved into fifth place, 22 seconds behind.

His Motorola team was runnerup in the team race, six seconds back of Museeuw’s GB-MG team, and placed six riders in the

Amateur golf championship begins Friday

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

CALDWELL — A capital M to start your last name isn’t bad if you’re interested in winning the Idaho State Amateur Golf Championship.

Consider that Scott Masingill of Payette has won it six times. Dave Molitor of Pocatello four times and Joe Malay of Weiser and Jason Meyerhoeffer of Twin Falls once each since 1972.

And those names will be included among the 192 players that will contest the tournament Friday through Sunday at Caldwell’s Purple Sage Golf Course.

Masingill enters this year’s event as the defending champion and heads up a championship flight at includes 52 players with three and under handicaps.

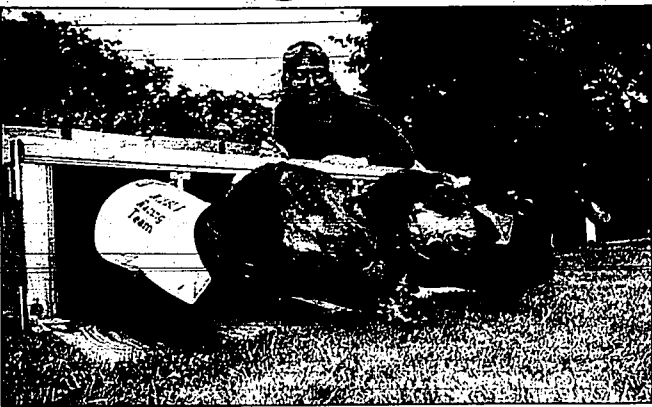

Over 280 individuals submitted application for entry but it was restricted to the 192 who have 10 and under handicaps.

The tournament was last played here in 1982 when Rich Hutchins of Boise was

Wiener-dog racing: Not just Miller Lite commercial

Lynn Niebur watches her racing dachshunds Max, left, Dancer, center, and Odyseus shoot out of the gate in preparation for this weekend's Wiener Dog Summer Nationals in Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Down the track they scamper, their stubby legs propelling their sausage-shaped bodies as their bellies nearly scrape the ground.

They are the dashing dachshunds of America and this weekend they'll be running in the Wiener Dog Summer Nationals at the Multnomah Greyhound Park in suburban Portland.

Both novice and experienced dachshunds will run on Saturday. The 32 beginners were chosen at random from some 2,700 Northwest dog owners who wanted their pets to compete for the grand prize of a year's supply of dog food.

The biggest question is whether they can be coaxed down the 100-yard main straightaway.

"We have one of his favorite females that we're going to try and put at the end of the finish line," said Kathleen Ayres, whose dog Otto will make his racing debut Saturday.

The experienced racers are trained to chase a plastic bag hooked to a wire on the ground.

"The crowd will go wild," predicted Larry Sorenson, president of the Dachshund Club of America. "The dogs put so much heart into it. They're kind of comical when they run, but they're dead serious about it. They have that long back and they coil it like an inchworm."

Dachshund owners have been racing their pets for at least 20 years, American said, but the national attention didn't come until the animals were featured in a beer commercial last year.

Some of the fastest wiener dogs in the West will be on hand for the exhibition race on Saturday night. The field includes Frankie and Max, the top two finishers among the 50 or 60 who dashed through the Hyatt grand ballroom in Palo Alto, Calif., in the big race at the club's convention in May.

Frankie, whose full name is Sausage Stables Franklin, is the talented newcomer among the low-riding rappers.

"Frankie was always kind of a shy boy and the just didn't get started until we took him to the races," said his owner, Miki Perry of Eagle Point, Ore. "He got to watching the other dogs and he absolutely went berserk."

He had a couple of second-place finishes in his first race a year ago, then left the others in his dust in Palo Alto.

"There was a good wiener dog length between him and any of the others," Perry said.

Max's owners, David and Lynn Niebur of Portland, aren't conceding anything, however, as Max loves to run.

"He'll get to the end and sometimes head back to the starting box so he can do it again," David Niebur said.

Although some owners may not like to see their pets made fun of, others are happy to show that dachshunds aren't just lap dogs.

"A lot of people think a dachshund is more or less a couch potato," Niebur said. "That's not really true. They're excellent hunting dogs. They're bred to hunt."

There are nationwide competitions in which they track a rabbit's scent above ground and find their way to a target below ground. They don't get much attention on the TV screen, but they'll be in the spotlight Saturday, when 15,000 to 17,000 people, twice the normal crowd, are expected at the greyhound track.

"They get to run their little hearts out and be cheered on for it," Lynn Niebur said. "It is their moment of glory."

'Regular' lives resume for U.S. World Cup team members

DANA POINT, Calif. (AP)—For the U.S. World Cup team, Tuesday was the last day of summer camp.

By midday, equipment bags were piled on the sidewalk outside the entrance of the Dana Point Resort. Less than 24 hours after their elimination by Brazil, players were scattering to resume their lives.

Alexi Lalas was off to New York to tape "Late Show with David Letterman." Tony Meola was getting ready for a fight with the Kansas City Chiefs and a movie reading as a pirate in a film with Geena Davis and Michael Douglas.

Some were off to Las Vegas for a few days of relaxation. Others were talking contracts with European clubs.

"Yesterday, going home on the plane, guys were asking, 'What are you going to do now?' That's the difficult part," Meola was saying as players gathered for one last meal together. "We were together so long."

The last time, the situation was we were together for two weeks and would go home for a week. Everybody was used to going their own way. We've built relationships that go far beyond soccer and far beyond sports."

Because they'll be with clubs in different parts of the globe, the core group isn't likely to gather again until next summer for the regional championship, the CONCACAF Gold Cup, or possibly the South American championship, the America Cup.

This team won't play another all-important game until 1996 or '97, when qualifying for the 1998 World Cup begins. This time, the Americans had an automatic berth as the host nation. In 1998, when the tournament expands to 32 teams, the North and Central American and Caribbean region probably will get three spots.

"I'm excited," John Harkes said. "I think about it already."

Of the six veterans of 1990, five are still under 30: Meola, Harkes, Balboa, Eric Wynalda and Marcelo Balboa. Alexi Lalas, Claudio Reyna, regarded as the best young player in the country, is just 20.

"The nucleus here on this side is brilliant," Harkes said. "There's a lot of players coming up through the ranks as well."

General manager Bill Nuttall said Tuesday he's received offers from European clubs for five players under contract to the U.S. Soccer Federation: Paul Caligiuri, Lalas, Sorber, Jones and Joe-Max Moore. Eight players already are with European clubs. Reyna and Frank Klopas, who are free to make their own deals, are negotiating, too.

"I'd like to have all the players over in Europe now," Harkes said. "It made me a better player the last four years."

Lalás, who figures to be a hit in Europe with his vibrant personality, hair and goatee, years for an atmosphere where soccer is all-important. The new U.S. professional league scheduled to start next year won't offer that — or the talent level of a European first division.

"If they want to be competitive, if they want to be the best in this sport, they have to

TV ratings increase for Brazil match

The Associated Press

The United States' 1-0 loss to Brazil in the World Cup on Monday drew a 16 million overnight rating and ABC estimated that 16 million people watched the game in the United States, a record for an American soccer game.

Nielsen Media Research said Tuesday that the game got a 27 percent share in the 31 major markets surveyed for the overnight ratings. The rating is the percentage of televisions tuned to a program; the share is the percentage watching among those televisions on at the time.

The fourth of July game at Stanford Stadium, the first beyond the opening round for the Americans in 64 years, is on track to break the U.S. rating record for soccer, set June 26 when the United States lost to Romania 1-0 in the first round of the World Cup. That game received a 6.8 national rating, one point lower than its overnight rating. The national rating for the United States-Brazil game is expected to be released by Nielsen on Friday.

"This is absolutely sensational," FIFA general secretary Sepp Blatter said. "I want to pay a compliment to ABC and to the U.S. audience."

In San Francisco, the market where Monday's match was played, the game got a 16.6 rating and a 39 share. The game received a 13.9 rating and a 33 share in Los Angeles and a 9.7 rating and 28 share in New York.

ABC's two other soccer broadcasts during the holiday weekend — Germany's 3-2 victory over Belgium and Sweden's 3-1 victory over Saudi Arabia — both got 4.0 overnight ratings.

While Nielsen provides ratings based on its surveys, networks make the audience estimates based on past viewing trends.

National ratings are lower than overnights for soccer because the sport is more popular in cities than rural areas.

ESPN still had not received ratings for the three second-round games it broadcast during the weekend. ABC averaged a 4.8 rating for four games during the first round. A 5.2 million viewers and ESPN averaged a 1.6 cable rating (1.01 million homes) for 32 first-round games.

First, the USSF must decide on Aug. 14 whether to re-elect Alan Rittenberg as president in a race expected to include Richard Groff, the organization's treasurer, and Hank des Bordes, its executive vice president. The winner makes the call.

Players couldn't care less who's in charge. They're still not convinced Major League Soccer will get going.

"I'm not ready to quit European soccer," Meola said.

Having a great career over there.

Four years ago in Tirrenia, when they left the Italian Olympic Training Center on a hot summer morning, players vowed to be back in 1994 and reach the second round. On Tuesday, the 1998 goal was set: the quarterfinals.

"In 1990, the discussion was whether the U.S. would score a goal. In 1994, it was whether we would get to the second round," Meola said. "Hopefully, two or three World Cups from now, it's going to be: 'Are they going to win the World Cup?'"

Just like four years ago, they left with the sea out beyond the beach shimmering from the sun in a cloudless blue sky. Just like four years ago, they left feeling they gave their all and did their best.

"Once again they had set their own challenge and fulfilled their own demands. They're a little less anonymous in their own country, and that made them most proud."

"I'm really satisfied," Meola said. "What we did for soccer in this country and how we helped it along — none of us ever thought we could."

Italy, Bulgaria take wins in soccer finals Quale wins 8th race

The Associated Press

Why stop now?

Ninety minutes weren't enough to decide either World Cup second-round game on Tuesday. Italian superstar Roberto Baggio scored in the 89th minute to lift his team into a tie, then connected on a penalty kick in the 102nd minute, giving Italy a 2-1 overtime victory against Nigeria.

Mexico and Bulgaria needed even more time to settle their match, with Bulgaria winning 3-1 on penalty kicks after a 1-1 tie.

"We have recovered the real Roberto Baggio, the player we always wanted to have on our team," Italian soccer chief Antonio Matarrese said after his team rallied despite playing down a man for 44 minutes.

"I'd like to kiss the entire nation of Bulgaria," goalie Borislav Mihaylov said after stopping three shots in the penalty kick shootout. "This is the happiest I have been in my life."

Italy plays Spain at Foxboro Stadium in the quarterfinals on Saturday. Bulgaria takes on defending champion Germany on Sunday at Giants Stadium.

Also on Saturday, Brazil meets the Netherlands at Dallas and Romania faces Sweden at Stanford, Calif.

Seven of the eight quarterfinalists are from Europe; no European team has won a World Cup staged in the Western Hemisphere.

Baggio, the 1993-player of the year, was invisible for most of the tournament. He surfaced in Italy's direct moment.

"We already were at the airport, we were mentally prepared to return home," Baggio said after his heroics. "I took them all down from the plane."

Scoreless for eight games and under heavy criticism back home, Baggio redeemed himself by converting a pass from Roberto Mussi with a brilliant kick to the left corner of the net.

Given life, Italy dominated the overtime. And when Antonio Benarrivo was dragged down in the penalty box in the 102nd minute, Baggio pun in the winner.

"I think to have overcome the problems, I feel reborn," Baggio said.

The Nigerians were so close to becoming the second African team to make the quarterfinals. Still, they felt their first World Cup was a success.

"It was a very good match," said coach Clemens Westerhof, a Dutchman. "Before we started, I said I wanted us to be the surprise of the Cup. I think we were the surprise of the Cup."

Bulgaria has been just as unexpected a survivor. After qualifying in the final seconds against France last November, the Bulgarians were abysmal in losing 3-0 to Nigeria in their World Cup opener.

TWIN FALLS — Bruce Quale took the lead on lap two of the 35-lap Pro Stock main event at Magic Valley Speedway Monday afternoon and cruised to his eighth victory in 11 races this season.

Eddy McKean, Rod Anderson, Mark Goodman and Harold Wantult finished second through fifth respectively.

Quale also won the heat race when he passed Ted Venstra on the outside on lap five and extended his season points lead to 41 over McKean. Venstra topped Anderson in the trophy dash.

Lance Hooper of Los Angeles, second in the points standings for the NASCAR Southwest Tour, won his second Intermedium Super Stock race at Magic Valley this season.

Lec Crysel, Ted Garabrant, Joe

Hood and Doug Binstock battled for second place well behind Hooper.

Binstock was first followed by Hooper and Darin Fairbanks of Twin Falls in the fast four qualifiers race. Fairbanks set the quick time of the night in qualifying but was slowed by accidents in both the heat and main event.

Wantult led from lap 10 through the checkered flag to win the Street Stock main event. Randy Schwab, Steve Quale, Jeffrey Meads and Gary Matlock rounded out the top five.

Steve Jones held the lead for the first nine laps over Quale and Ken Menck.

Jones on the B Heat race. Schwab took the A-heat: Meads won the trophy dash.

Action returns to the speedway at 7 p.m. Saturday with Pro Stocks, Street Stocks, Pony Stocks and GM Modifieds racing.

Indiana's disaster official resigns to take on racing

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jerome Hauer, head of Indiana's disaster agency, is resigning to develop a new series of Indianapolis-type auto races at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Speedway president Tony George said Tuesday.

George said Hauer will be responsible for developing an organization to manage, direct and promote the series, beginning in 1996.

Hauer, 42, will begin his job at the Speedway on Aug. 1. With the exception of the Indianapolis 500, the IndyCar circuit is conducted by Championship Auto Racing Teams Inc. The Indy 500 is sanctioned by the U.S. Auto Club.

Armstrong wins gold at Olympic Festival

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Patty Armstrong showed some of the younger competitors how it's done in platform diving at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Armstrong, at 26 the oldest female in the 10-meter finals, picked up where she left off during the preliminaries in easily winning the gold medal Tuesday night.

Diving was one of 14 sports contested on the fifth day of the Festival, which runs through Sunday. The day included a gold medal for two U.S. champions in boxing and another gold for the South women's basketball team.

Armstrong, of The Woodlands, Texas, finished with 427.45 points to beat Joy Burkholder, 19, of Mission Viejo, Calif. Burkholder scored 399.65, while Sherry Wigginton of the University of Texas won the bronze with 381.85.

"1996 is my ultimate goal," said Armstrong, who had won Sunday's preliminary round with nearly 50 points. "I've been trying to evaluate the weak points in my diving. With this victory, I think I've made some advances."

Another veteran, Kent Ferguson of Miami Beach, Fla., went for the gold medal in the 3-meter springboard later Tuesday. Ferguson, 31, was world champion in 1991 and an Olympian in 1992. He is competing in his ninth Festival winning this event in 1988.

In basketball, the South women won their third straight gold medal and eighth in the 13 years of the Festival with a 94-92 victory over the West.

"Coming in, there was a lot of pressure put on us," said South coach Harold Rhodes. "There were a lot of calls letting me know that the South hasn't lost here (much) and for us not to be the first."

Kendra Holland of Georgia scored the game's final point on two free throws with 1:27 left, and when Stanford's Kate Pate missed an off-balance shot at the buzzer the South had the victory.

Pashen Thompson of Tennessee scored 20 points and grabbed nine rebounds for the South (3-1) and was named the Festival's MVP. Marion Jones of North Carolina added 17 points.

Shalonda Ellis of Trinity Valley (Texas) Community College led the West (2-2) with 23 points but missed front end of a 1-and-1 with 7 seconds left that could have tied the game.

The West men finally won a game at the Festival, taking the bronze medal with a 127-121 victory over the North.

Dontae Jones of Northeast Mississippi Community College scored 28 points and Michigan recruit Jerod Ward added 26 for the West. The West had gone 0-3 in round-robin play, but had lost two games by a total of seven points.

The women's bronze medal went to the East, which beat the South 99-69. Dione Dixon of Kansas led the East (3-1) with 23 points. Stephanie White of West Lebanon, Ind., scored 27 for the North (0-4).
