BURLEY – Faith has kept Giselle Booth Carson alive for the past-40 years, ever since she received her first "death sentence" at the age of six months. "I have lived on faith," said Booth Carson, who has a defective heart. "I thank the Heav-enly Father every night, and I pray every monthing."

Last month, Call implanted a pacemaker into Booth Carson, who had a heart attack less than an hour before surgery. While her breathing has improved and part of the flesh under her fingermails is no longer purple, Booth Carson said the pacemaker didn't make as big of an improvement as she'd hoped.

So last week, after sending her case file to other physicians, Call suggested she try to have a heart and transplant, Booth Carson said:

Wallman has already presided over hearings in Boston and Denver. She will take the reams of suggestions to Washington for consideration. Some will be readed by 1996, in time for the 2000 census.

While the federal government has always counted people by race — and slaves as fractions of humans — since the country's origins, it was only in 1973 that then-Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Caspar Weinberger became interested in the lack of government data on racial and ethnic groups and decided to do something about it. He and his staff devised the budget office is Directive 15, which sets up the categories used to collect race and ethnic data.

Now, with 17 years' experience with the current rules, there is a groundswell of noise from statistics professionals, minority activists and unaffliated folks for change.

What's at stack? Self-esteem, said many of those testifying. But also pride. Money fower. Votes. Redistricting. Legislative seats. Congressional seats. Voting rights. Money for schools. Bilingual ballots. Clout in Congress. Campaign funds.

"I stand in front of the mirror of Directive 15, and 1 do not see myself," said Wallace, a Stanford doctoral candidate, whose parents are white and black. She testified for Reclass All Children Equally (RACE), a group promoting a "biracial" category. If ever a moment challenged the notion of "race" as science, this hearing was it. Some lobbied for dropping "race" and substituting "ethnicity." No suitable pigeonhole existed, for example, for Arab-Americans. They aren't "white," some say. But neither are they "Asian." Some are black. But most are not.

It was clear that "race" is a mostly political notion, social convention, term of art — and about as solid as a Dove Bar on a hot August sidewalk.

The stretch and intensity of opinions reflected the great range of emotions reflected the great range of emotion about race in the United States.

John C. Cougill Jr., for instance, who is white, came from Eugene; Ore,, to urge the government to stop collecting statistics by race.

"Racial data collection keeps racism alive," Cougill said. "Race' was used to identify individuals who deserved to be slaves in American history, individuals who deserved to the ovens in Nazi history, and to identify individuals who deserved to be sent to the ovens in Nazi history, and to identify individuals who deserved as service at Denny's restaurants."

But Gilbert E. Martin, who is black and represented the International French Creole Cultural Society, en-tered a copy of the Creole Declaration of Frustration into the record. He wanted a finer degree of discrimina-tion: "We are the oldest multiracial group on this side of the globe," Mar-tin said. "We are seeking our own box on the census as a matter of right."

Written comments on the statistical to Katherine Wallman, Office of Management and Budget, 725 17th Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20503.

Successful modern-day bank robbers in custody

DALLAS — From their California home they had the kind of stunning view that seemed like a window into another world.

It was a Pacific Coast vista enjoyed by the couple now accused of being the most successful modern-day bank robbers in America—perhaps the most meticulous, successful ones ever hunted by the FBI. The couple are being held without bond in the Pierce County Jail in Tacoma, Wash. The Williamses, who say they are indigent, could not be reached; their court-appointed lawyers declined to comment.

Over the last eight years, the accused bank robbers and the cops and agents chasing them grew increasingly locked into an obsessive

The FBI dryly stated: "We interviewed both Johnny Madison Williams Jr. and his wife Carolyn Williams John of them confessed to committing fifty-six (36) bank roberies in the states of Texas, California and Washington."

GOP senators find Brever acceptable court nominee

WASHINGTON — When a bald, scholarly looking Stephen Breyer marched through the hearing room to begin his testimony last week, Republican conservative Orni Hatch escorted him, the senator's hand on the judge's shoulder.

It was a remarkable spectacle well noted on both sides of the political aisle, one that marked a sea-change from the blood-on-the-wall nominations of Robert Bork and Clarence-Thomas.

He gave few clues to his views on controversial subjects such as abortion, using legal artifice to endorse court precedents in that and other tricky areas only as "settled law."

He did say that unlike his predecessor, retirting Justice Harry A. Blackmun, he has no stong views on the death penalty.

And he seemed to endorse the court's revolutionary decision last month favoring an Oregon property owner's rights over local government's attempts to claim part of the property in return for development approval, although he stopped short of advocations have been proved to the property of the pro

Breyer gave a passing nod to a judge's need to put his heart as well as his head into his interpretation of the law, for, he said "if you don't have." But that committee veteran is a Republican who has been in the thick of the fight with Democrats in the past over the Thomas and Bork nominations. "But after all, Hatch picked him," the staffer said. The lunar soil remains undisturbed by anyone following in Cernan's footsteps. And neither the United States, nor any other space-faring nation, has plans to send astronauts to the moon or beyond.

The Apollo program, a political and technical triumph, has become an increasingly distant memory as the space agency commemorates the 25th anniversary of the first moon landing on July 20, 1969.

The U.S. census Bureau estimates 87 million Americans—one-third of the population — have been born since Armstrong made his historic first step onto the lunar surface.

NASA has prospered "when thera are overarching purposes that the public can understand," said Charles Fellerin, a former NASA strategic planner now at the University of Colorado, "The vision for NASA really is the establishment of human presence beyond the Earth."

After reaching the moon, the U.S. effort at human exploration of space took a U-turn back to Earth orbit. NASA haunched a modest but useful space station called Skylab, only to abandom it and allow it to plummet back to Earth. The agency built a fleet of costly space shuttles, which have

For example, it directs local school bourds to establish "timetables and stratebourds to establish "timetables and strategies for developing gender equitable and multicultural instructional materials." Meanwhile, the Senate version (the House has already passed its own bill) refers to the "disproven theory that children must first learn basic skills before engaging in more complex tasks." It discourages "repetitive drill practice" at the supposed expense of "context-rich instruction." It's outcome-based education on a national scale.

Congress is about to grab a far bigger share of power over 'America's public schools. The biggest losers will be America's school children.

The vehicle for this power grab is Senate bill 1513, the 1994 Elementary and Secondary Education Act. This bill, championed by Sen. Ted Kennedy. D-Mass., would substantially expand the default government's power over the curricula of most American public schools. Through mandates and funding threats, the bill would force schools to adopt federal standards and guidelines for teaching. It would five a school's federal funding threats, the bill would five schools to adopt federal standards and guidelines for teaching. This flexing of federal power over edu-cation should come as no suprise. It's a fact of political life that taxpayer money always comes-with strings attached. What government funds, it inevitably seeks to control. As funding for public education has shifted from local taxpayers to state and federal taxpayers, control over schools has also shifted from local school boards to state legislatures and now to Congress.

school boards to state legislatures and now to Congress.

Centralization of education spells badnews for students. As control of education drils further away from parents, political agendas take priority over educational quality. It's no coincidence that, during the last 30 years, the quality of public education in America has declined as federal involvement has grown.

In the name of quality education, the Senate should vote down this latest effort to expand federal power over how and what our children are taught in school.

Funding relief deserves passage

The movement to relieve cities and states from the heavy financial burden by infunded federal mandates is picking up steam in the U.S. Senate.

A Senate mandate reform bill, drafted by Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, and John Glenn, D-Oho, has made it to the floor and could be voted on this month. This vital piece of legislation deserves passage.

Cities' such as Dallas have shelled out millions of dollars to meet stringent new federal guidelines without receiving any innancial reimbursement from Washing-fon, D.C. At least $20 million in Dallas' operating budget this year is committed to pay for unfunded federal mandates.

Under the Kempthome-Glenn bill, the Congressional Budget Office will be required to determine the state and local impact of all legislation approved by congressional committees. These bills then can be stopped if the financial requirements for compliance exceed $50 million. The proposed legislation also would require federal agencies to consult with local governments to determine how the impact of existing federal mandates could be lessened. local governments to determine how the impact of existing federal mandates could be lessened.

Crities of the Kempthorne-Glenn bill complain it is an underhanded way to throttle the Environmental Protection Agency, whose enforcement of the Clean Air and Water Act has cost municipalities billions of dollars.

But the legislation has nothing to do with environmental regulation. The bill simply requires Congress to act responsibly when it approves rules that overburden state and local budgets.

While 57 senators are co-sponsoring the Kempthorne-Glenn bill, proposed revisions to the legislation threaten hopes for speedy approval.

One amendment would extend the review to federal mandates for the private sector as well. This addition is neither reaction on appropriate.

It is important that the Senate stay focused on the key issue – the harsh impact that federal mandates have had on local taxpayers. Thanks to the hard work of Sen. Kempthorne and an endorsement from President Clinton, relief is now closer than ever.

Some officers follow policies
Yes, we and all brour contacts within Kimberly that we have spoken to agree that we need the problem of our day officers reviewed. There is no way to absolve Jim Campbell and his conduct on investigations; they are deplorable!
We do have several officers who are trying hard to do their job whenever Campbell will allow them to do so. We would like to mention their names – Pan Birmingham and Eugene Bradley, both full-time officers, and Roger Hinton, our part-time officer. They try to follow police policy and procedures, not Campbell County policy, Let's hope that none of these officers are replaced for following the rules.
We would disk the fixed of losing any of these officers. We know we can count on them to do what is right. Let's all band together as concerned citizens and get rid of the corruption our city government.
Please plan to attend the City Council meeting at 7 p.m. Aug 9 and let your voices be heard and your opinions known.

'Accidents' have hidden causes

*Accidents' have hidden causes

As a veteran firefighter with 17 years' experience, a wilderness survival instructor and disaster relief manager, I must concur with your editorial assessment that the recent deaths of 14 firefighters on a mountain in Colorado didn't have to happen. Not knowing all the details of his tragedy, I won't second-guess the strategy of those in-harge of this detail but will comment in general on the myopic malaise of American leadership in general.

After years of experience in a broad range of incidents dealing with natural, political and social emergencies, I am convinced there is no such thing as an accident. What we write off as accidents are usually ntributable to lapses in judgment, lack of respect for natural phenomena or a mindset of man separate and beyond the rules of nature. Lives, property and natural resources are institutions to look at the whole. Our social structures and institutions have endowed the masses and those we choose to call leaders with blinders which leads to wasteful and dangerous tunnel vision. Too often, economic self-interest or political expectioney are key motivators that turn short-term objectives into long-term disasters.

I've said this as hundred times before: 'In a spherical reality, we are linear thinkers.'' tives into long-term disasters.

Tve said this a hundred times before: "In a spherical reality, we are linear thinkers." Our churches, our schools, our government institutions and our businesses are premised on and maintain their power, based on a linear structure and philosophy. That mindset purposefully limits the information available to use for making quality decisions.

The tragedy in Colorado, the earthquakes in Los Angeles and the ongoing sags of nuclear waste storage at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory have a common element and a shared portent for tragedy and sorrow. Will we ever be free of trial and tribulation? Probably not, but we can certainly mitigate against the obvious by throwing off the shackles of a debilitating mindset and the social institutions and leadership that profit from our losses.

Media failed to cover pageant

I'm writing in regard to the way the media chose to handle the Miss Magic Valley Scholarship Pageant. Much time and money goes into preparing for this pageant. Families have traveled to Boise and Salt Lake City looking for beautiful dresses, shoes, earrings, etc., for this special event. The Times-News plays a big role in pro-moting the Magic Valley and its events. I re-alize with an 11 p.m. press deadline, it would be hard to have it in Sunday's paper, but the pageant was over by 10:30 p.m. with not a reporter there either - or did someone show up to buy a $1 program and copy the story of Miss Thietter? The pageant was changed last year from Miss Twin Falls to the Miss Magic Valley Scholarship Pageant because of a lack of participants. Perhaps if there was more media coverage, many others would know of the great opportunity it provides and would want to participate. Maybe some support from the media would be helpful for the

the single largest source of women's scholarship in America and possibly Miss Idaho

No longer do criminals set curfews; they don't keep people from coming and going; and their open-air drug sales have decreased significantly. Yet, serious crime problems remain in mar because our public-safety strategies are consistently attacked by well-intentioned, but misguided, lawyers at the ACLUs from setting up shop in our units by requiring all visitors to show photo IDs, so the identities of everyone in the complexes at a given time would be on record. The ACLU lawyers thwarded this plan, calling it unfair. After all, guests in non-public housing aren't required to prove their identities. We set curfews, forcing all visitors to leave by midnight. We found many of the male "visitors" had been living there for years with families, without being on the lease. But the ACLU has prevented us from maintaining the curfews. Our policy was encouraging marriage: The curfews sent many of these men into my office, complaining that they wanted to stay with their children and common-law wives, but couldn't affort to get married. So we held a fund-miser and a mass wedding for 18 couples.

My reason was simple: If criminals fire randomly at people, at cars, and out of windows, it is no different from a bomb threat. With a bomb threat, you look everywhere you can to save lives; you don't wall for a search warrant.

Last April, a federal judge sided with the ACLU in banning the search for weapons except in "emergencies." Believe me, we will be having more emergencies. The love me, we will be having more emergencies. The love me, we will be having more emergencies. The love me, we will be having more emergencies. The love me, we will be having more emergencies.

No one should be surprised by conditions in public housing. When children see adults waiting for welfare checks, childen thaving thirden, men sneaking in after dark, and the drug culture, they grow up thinking these are normal. For a young girl in these communities, it's a rice of passage. Have a baby as soon as possible, get your green card and public-housing unit and food stamps—and you're home free.

But when we break up the concentrations of welfare recipients by mixing new private business development with low-income families, an amazing thing happens, At Lake Pare Place, where we put people with regular jobs in living armagements alongside the same number of families on welfare, the results were better than we could have imagined: Now we have no vandalism, no graffiti, and almost no serious crime. Moreover, 20 percent of the families who started out on welfare now have members working a full-time jobs. Lake Pare Place has become a rental burgain for working families.

The committee will make its decision about when to put the project out to bid in September, when it hopes to have the state's final approval of the design plans.

State approval is taking longer than anticipated because of the large number of building plans that have been submitted from various school districts.

Filer Fire and Rescue volunteers learn to rescue accident victims

FILER - Residents of the west end of Twin Falls County may have more qualified rescuers if they should get in an accident. Like their counterparts in other Idaho towns, volunteers from Filer Fire and Rescue are learning to rescue accident victims from vehicles with help from paramedics from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Jeff Webster, a medical center paramedic, said members of the Filer department have been learning the techniques of removing an injured person from wrecked vehicle without causing further injury.

The skills the volunteers have picked up will be supplemented with on-going training as new rescue techniques are developed, he said. Filer Fire Chief Buddy Compher said 16 members of his department spent five hours

Saturday learning the proper use of rescue tools such as "laws of Life" in an effort to provide the residents of the West End a better chance of surviving automobile accidents, "In an effort to gain a better rapport with the public, the Filer Rural Fire Department is expublic, the Filer Rural Fire Department is expublic, the stream of the west end of the control of a year.

Columbia River salmon industry nears extinction Quest for water hurts

SEATTLE (AP) — At the Pike Street Market, camera-clutching tourists still marvel at the "salmon toss" where vendors hurl the glistening fish across sizles to have them wrapped for sale.
Piles of the fabled fish, stacked like cords of wood on ioe, give no hint that the Pacific salmon is in a state of crisis. "We've got plenty of fish," assures Harry Calvo, 46, who has been hawking salmon ever since he came back from Vietnam.
But the bustle at the market belies the turmoid and urgency that surrounds the Northwest's most famous fish. If something isn't done, say environmentalists and fishermen, the Pacific salmon might disappear.
Alaska and Canadian salmon still read abundant. But along the Columbia River, where once 16 million adultigations are shundant. But along the Columbia River, where once 16 million adultigations are salmon and the salmon swam each year, it is another Fewer than 2,000 adult salmon made it up the Snake River to Idaho this spring and summer, companed to 10 dimes than number as recently as four years, say federal fisheries experts. "The Northwest without salmon is unhinkable, but now we are, on the brink of the unthinkable," reflects Lorraine Bodi, who has followed the decline of Columbia River salmon stocks for 15 years as a government worker and now with the conservation group, American Rivers.

Never has the need for revitalizing-the salmon been as urgent. From Puget Sound to Northern California, salmon fishermen have been confined to shore this summer after the government banned salmon fishing along the U.S. Pacific Coast to the Canadian border, in an attempt to restore stocks.

Salmon still come into Seattle docks from Alaska and Canada, but the Canadians recently became sproutraged about U.S. fishermen catching too many Canadian salmon that they imposed a $1,100 transit fee for fishing boats using Canadian waters.

Along the Snake and Columbia rivers, a protracted war of words, conflicting scientific studies, and fingerpointing has hampered efforts to develop a salmon recovery plan. The key question: How to protect the fish from the string of hydroelectric dams that are blamed for killing young salmon by the millions as they make their way to the ocean each spring and summer. In a region that has been stung by the emotionally charged conflict between loggers and environmentalists

The benefits of diverting more water

The benefits of diverting more water from the electricity-producing turbines and spilling it over dams to help the sahmon also has been in disjute. After a recent series of dam spills were ordered by the National Marine Fisheries Service, scientists at the Bonneville Power Authority maintained that the additional water flow may actually harm the salmon. They attribute this to the creation of high amounts of nitrogen bubbles that give the fish something akin to the bends. Last year, Bonneville, a federally operated provider of wholesale electricity, spent nearly $530 million for salmon recovery, compared to $150 million for the year and years ago, says Randy Hardy, authority administrator. And he suggests these costs are certain to increase.

Earlier this year a federal judge in Porlland accused the federal National Marine Fisheries Service of not adequately protecting the salmon under the Endangered Species Act. Since then, both federal and regional regulator tory groups have stepped up the pressure to develop salmon recovery plans.

For decades, elforts to harness the

the attention of the Northwest and the nation.

A chart of the Columbia's annual flow at The Dalles, Ore, graphically shows the change. The combination of drought and completion of reservoirs to store floodwaters shaved the peaks and filled the yalleys.

For some, the hydrograph resembles an EKG, its stark profile going flat. The heart of the Columbia no longer turns for the salmon runs that helped give the Northwest its identity.

The Northwest Power Planning Council estimates the Columbia once attracted 11 to 16 million salmon.

But by 1992, that estimate had plummeted to one million fish-and the Endangered Species Act kicked in. Like a lottery player betting the last paycheck in a desperate effort to avoid bankruptcy, the council set out a strategy for doubling the salmon runs.

But again like a lottery, the odds were against the individual players: shippers, farmers and power consumers.

shippers, farmers and power consumers.

A new bureaueracy has taken control of the river and the intricate mechanisms designed to harness its flow.

On the Stake, the National Marine Fisheries Service wants to change the timing of flows. The current water releases have a simple goal: trying to recreate a spring freshel to help flush young salmon downstream.

Some 14 million acre-feet flow downstream during normal years from the upper Snake and through Hells Canyon, At Lewiston, the total flow is closer to twice that total, roughly 25 million acre-feet.

But things are tight this year.

Some—2.3-million acre-feet—was expected to flow from the upper Snake.

The upper Snake was targeted to supply a total of 737,000 acre-feet through releases from federal reservoirs, and arrangements between the Bonneville Power Administration and daho Power Co.

Improvements in survival must be made, in all stages of the salmon's life," maintains Donald Bevan, the University of Washington professor who headed a government-sponsored team of scientists that studied the problem. The scientists — and almost everyone else, in fact — age that the answer rests in better protection for the spawning areas harmed by commercial development; in improved hatchery operations so the captive fish do not degrade the wild ones; in curbing how many fish are caught. Interior to release report on water spreading

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Interior's Office of Inspector General is expected to release a report soon on the irrigation of ineligible lands, referred to as water spreading ing.

The Bureau of Reclamation defines water spreading as the unauthorized use of federally developed project facilities or water supplies on lands not approved, by Reclamation for such."

A rigid policy to end water spreading would have a drastic impact on agriculture in the Northwest.

Oregon Water Resources Congress has worked proactively to reauthorize lands to clear up ambiguity surrounding water spreading and seek solutions that are fair and equitable to Oregon agriculture.

Lendl aces U.S. Pro Tennis with win over Washington

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Ivan Lendl became the eighth three-time champi-on of the U.S. Pro Tennis Champi-onships with a 7-5, 7-6 (7-5) victory over MaliVai Washington on Sunday onships with a 7-5, 7-6 (7-5) vectory ver Malivai Washington on Sunday night.

Lendl, the top seed in the $250,000 hardcourt tournment, has won three straight titles. Among the others with at least three championships are Bjorn Borg and Rod Laver.

Lendl had three service breaks in the match, the only times the third-seeded Washington lost his serve all week.
Lendl won $50,000, while Washington carned $25,000.

The match went on serve until 5-5 of the first set, when Lendl broke Washington's serve and then served out the first set. Each had two service breaks early in the second set.

Lendl took an early 5-1 lead in the inbreaker and then led 6-3 before Washington saved a couple of match points on Lendl's serve. But Lendl won the next point on Washington's serve to complete the victory.

St. Louis Blues hire Keenan as coach, general manager

DES PERES, Mo. — Mike
Keenan, who coached the New York
Rangers to their first Stanley Cup championship in 54 years and then vacated his job unexpectedly last Friday, became coach and general manager of the St. Louis Blues on Sunday night.
In the latest in a series of surprising announcements concerning Keenan, the Blues confirmed the deal while still meeting with Keenan at a restaurant in suburban St. Louis.
"This has come around very quickly. I'm very fortunate to have the opportunity." Keenan said.

No one would say Sunday who was responsible for slipping through a ceiling into the umpires' dressing/room at Comiskey Park during Friday's game and making the switch. And no one could say for certain whether the bat that showed up Sunday was the same one originally taken.

Indians general manager John Hart would not reveal the name of the person involved in the break-in nor would he say lift was an Indians player. But he left little doubt that the person was affiliated with the team.

"Obviously, it was someone internally with the Indians," Hart said Sunday.

"There will be disciplinary action taken at some point, I'm sure, and that will be determined with the Indians, the commissioner's office and the league office."

Nick Price of Zimbabwe sinks his 18th hole putt to win the 123rd British Open, Sunday

TURNBERRY, Scotland — As Nick Price walked up to the 17th green Sunday to survey his 50-foot put for an eagle, he smiled at his long-time caddie, Jeff Medlen, and said, "We haven't made a long putt all week, let's give it a shot."

give it a shot."

In the end, it was a shot heard 'round the world of golf, a shot for the ages and the memory banks of anyone who witnessed it, a shot that would be a death blow to the hopes of young lesper Parnevit, the 29-year-old Swede who had made a fatal mistake by not looking at a leader board until it was far too late.

It was a shot for a cuple 3 on the 498-yard par-5 hole that vaulted Price into the lead at long last in the 123rd British Open. In 1982; Price squandered a three-stroke lead in the final six holes, allowing Tom Watson to win at Royal Troon. In 1988, he battled Seve Ballesteros all the way around before succumbing at Royal Lytham. But on this day of hazy sunshine, almost-imprereptible breezes and high drama down the stretch, Price persevered, winning his fourth tournament this season, his second major and a winner's share of $1716,000.

With a final round that was saved from a nightmarsh disaster by remarkable salvages of par at the 13th and 14th holes. Price concluded his fabulous four-under 66 the way players are taught, and the way champions, are supposed to respond.

It was birdie at the 16th, cagle at the 17th, par at the 18th-for a 12-under score of 268 and his fourth round in the sixties this week. Far more significant, it provided a one-stroke margin over parrevik, the stunned Swede who shot 67-269 and thought he had to birdie the 18th hole to win, when only a par was necessary.

Eddy McKean took the lead on the first lap of the 35 lap Pro Stock main event and extended that lead.

Butch Veenstra was held up before he was able to clear traffic. He then started to eat into McKean's big lead and by lap 30, he had closed to a couple of car lengths.

Veenstra took the lead on lap 33 with McKean leading the 34th lap for some exiting side by side racing. It was Veenstra completing the outside pass on the white flag lap to take a car length victory. time driver Thane Ketterling, win in his first attempt. The Mountain States Modifieds thirty lap feature was won by Bruce Compton, who lead for most of the race. He didn't, however, win without a fight as he held off the outside challenges of three different drivers. He was followed closely to the checkered flag by Vic Jackman, Dustin Rowland, Dave Saunders and Jim Wysong. The B heat winner was Rick Corbridge. years, a host of new and particular professional sports leagues have sprung up, Indoor soccer in towns like Seattle, indoor roller hockey in places like Portland, Arena football in Arizona the Rattlers of Phoenix) and tennis in Boise (the Idaho Sneakers). Not to mention the Canadian Football League, struggling in Las Vegas and hore other U.S. Iocales.

Jimmy Connors, Martina Nauratilova, and a host of fellow racqueters pose no threat to the Mariners on Marins, of course. But soccer's soccer could take a significant bite out of the summer sporting market. The game bifers something few other major U.S. sports cam: nonstop action (if not non-stop excitement). Eschewing the leisurely pace of baseball, soccer is constant motion. No seventh-inning stretches in this sport.

The past month has been soccer nirvan, but now World Cup '94 is history. Perhaps the cuphoria will fade, the futbol fascination will fail and we'll see this month as an aberration. Maybe for Americans this World Cup is a one-hit wonder. But Major League Baseball executives can hardly afford to rest on their 125-year-old laurels. Despite Michael Jordan and juiced balls, The Big Hurt and the big Griffey, Jr, baseball owners claim they're losing millions, and that only salary caps and revenue sharing can avert diarhonfield disaster. Polls show fans are fed up with big league greedmongers: both management and players. After two recent work stoppages, many say another is imminent: mid-August or early September, they say.

Major league baseball is foolish to test the patience of its fans. It's unwise to hold the sport hostage, in a militionare's battle for bucks. If American sports afficianados adopt a "three strikes, you're out" view of baseball lockouts and work stoppages, they could decide baseball in t ternal after all, and set their sights on soccer. all, and set their sights on soccer.

Danish rider Rolf Sorensen dumps water on his face on his way to win the 14th stage of the Tour de France cycling race, Sunmore than a week to go.

MONTPELLIER, France (AP)—Miguel Indurain of Spain maintained his commanding lead in the Tour deFrance Sunday, as Rolf Sorenken of Denmark won the 14th stage.

Sorensen's triumph was the second Danish victory in a row. Bjarne Riis won Saturday.

In winning the 126-mile stage from Castres to Montpellier, Sorensen beat Neil Stephens of Australia in the final strin as the two broke away from a small group in the final six miles. Indurain, seeking his fourth consecutive title, was in the main pack, less than six minutes behind. He was not concerned about losing much time, as Sorensen was more than 35 minutes behind at the stage and Stephens was 55 minutes back in the overall standings.

Gianni Bugno of Injly became the latest noted ruler tod rop out, failing-to-start the stage. He was among mort than 20 riders who stopped competing, as the heat wave in southern France continued, with the temperature above 100 degrees.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BODDY WOLF

One beats the bush, another atches the bird." —German proverb.

A declarer with his sights on a maximum number of overtricks thrashes awy at today's spade suit. He gets nothing Another declarer ploted along with his club suit. He gets game, rubber, and an overtrick as well.

The declarer who tries for five spade tricks wins the first heart, cashes his spade ace and takes a losing finesse to dummy 's spade jack. East wins and switches to diamonds, and declarer begins to feel the impending danger. Dummy's king wins and the spade king is cashed, but when the suit does not spill 3-3, the game is out of reach. With his greedy try for five spade winners and two overtricks, South limits himself to seven winners and two overtricks. South limits himself to seven winners and two down.

The declarer who settles for a sure 10 winners instead of a possible 11 puts his focus on the solid club suit instead of the porous spade mil.

At trick two, be leads a club to dummy's queen and East's king. East switches to diamonds, but it does little harm. Dummy wins, the club continuation knocks out Weet's ace, and South can claim his sure 10 kyinners.

I licks you've contracted for 11 tricks, a sure 10 winners are always betten than a doubtful 11.

So I was very interested when alert reace.

Michael Robinson sent me a column entitled "Ask Jack Sunn" from the Dec. 13, 1993, issue of the Jackson, Miss, ClarionLedger. Here's an excerpt from a consumer's letter to this column, which I am

Dave Rarry Humor

"Last year, my two daughters received presents of two Rollerhlade Barbie dolls by Mattel. On Mardh 8, my 8-year-old daughter was playing beauty shop with her 4 year-old brothet. After spraying him with hair spray, the children began to play with the boot to Rollerblade Barbie. My little girl innocently ran the skate across her brother's bottom, which immediately ignited his active."

The letter adds that "There are no warnings concerning fire on these toys ... I feel the need to warn potential buyers of their ings concerning fire on these toys... I feel the need to warm potential buyers of Their danger."

In his response, Jack Sunn says, cryptically, that "Mattel does not manufacture Rollerblade Barbie any more." He does not address the critical question that the consumer's letter raised in my mind, as I'm sure it did yours, namely. Hun?

I realized that the only way to answer this question was to conduct a scientific experiment. As you may recall, last year, in response to a news item concerning a kitchen fire in Ohio, I did an experiment proving that if you put a Kellogg's strawberry Pop-Tart in a toaster and hold the toaster lever ddwn for five nimutes and 50 seconds, the Pop-Tart will turn into a snack-pastry blow-torch, shooting flames up to 30 inches high. Also your toaster will be ruined.

The problem was that I did not have a Rollerblade Barbie. My son happens to be a boy, and we never went through the Barbie phase. We went through The Barbie phase. We went through The Barbie phase. We went through The Masters of the Universe phase. For two years our household, was the scene of a fierce, unceasing battle between armies of good and evil action figures. They were everywhere. You'd open up the salad crisper, and there would be He-Man and Skeletor, striking each other with carrots.

So at the end of a recent column, I printed with carrost and the with carrost and the with carrost and the end of a recent column, I printed an otte appealing for a Rollerblade Barbie. I got two immediately; one from Rence Simmons of Clinton, lowa, and one from Randy Langhenty of Gainesville, Ga., who said it belonged to his 6-year-old daughter, Greta. ("It would help me if you could get Barbie back to north Georgia before Greta notices she's gone," Randy wrote. Rollerblade Barbie is basically a standard Barbie, which is to say, she represents the feminine beauty ideal, if your concept of a Please see BARRY/UZ

The nylon jungle Women find they can run, but can't

By Cathy Walworth Times-News correspondent

hide from pantyhose

Times-News correspondent.

TWIN FALLS — What do you buy before you try? Bunches, bags, binds and snags?

Panyhose. They're a thin, stretchy, itchy, baggy, ill-fitting garment with a lifespan which approximates that of a fruit fly. They're not worn, but applied to the body by limber comortionists in the name of fashion.

They were supposed to rescue women from the impossible tangling and gouging of garters. But back in the bad old days, if she got a run in one leg, a gal could pull a switch with a leg from another pair and run along.

Now, a run in one leg alls for replacement of the whole ungainly set of underwear, at hundreds of dollars a year.

You can't live with them and you can't do without them, say Magic Valley professional women.

"Bare legs don't look as nire," aid Midge.

without them, say Magic Valley professional women.

"Bare legs don't look as nice," said Midge Fisher of the Silver Sage Girl Scout Count.

"You can't look professional in a dress without them. It finishes an outfit and gives a nice look. Otherwise, it would be like a man in a suit with loafers and no socks." Fisher-says her office rules, so, sy females do not cyme to work "bare-legsed," and years ago, when she worked at The Farrie, a fine wormenswear shop, "We had to dress in dress-and wear hose, not pants. You didn't think twice about doing it. It was specied. I like professional people to look competent."

Humorous hose -D4

"I wear them when I need them, when I wear a dress," said,Susan Kelley, exceutive director of United Way of Magic Valley. "I'll be damned if I know about the alternatives. You cannot go without."

State Rep. Celia Gould, R.Buhl, agrees that women do not appear professional withous, but "I hope it's not always the case."

The best thing Ruth Stevens, an accountant and president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, could think to say about panty-hose was, "They're a necessary evil."

Oh, my aching back

Oh, my aching back
Donning the dubious undergament is, "The hardest thing I do in the morning," said Mary Lou Panatopoulos, manager of First American Title. "They're a necessity in today's world and I have asked all my employees to wear them, even with (dressy) shorts. But with back problems, it's a read ordeal getting hern on."
To the untilated, i.e., a man, pantyhose are tangle of mystery. Husbands, consider yourselves warned. Do not laugh while your wife hops around on one foot during said ordeal.
"Why don't they make them in the shape of a real leg?" he asks, eyeing a newly-hatched pair of pantyhose.

a real leg?" he asks, eyeing a newly-hatched pair of panyhose.

The wrinkled, supposedly skin-toned lump of stretchy fabric that comtes out of the pack-age is designed to be gathered all the way down to one too. Then the victim is to dairly slip her toes into the end of the hose. The next step is to gently stretch the hose all the way up that leg, smoothing and straightening the fab-ric.

"Repeat for the other leg," the directions say.

Hold the phone. Pantyhose are hooked to-gether in the middle. One would think that whomever worte those directions might have noticed that. Many women's body construc-tion is such that the top of the first leg is a 1-o-o-n-g way from the toe of the other leg.

But it's special to be female. Mother said

For many, pantyhose make good health sense

TWIN FALLS — There are some good reasons to wear pantyhose, said Dr. David Becker, a Twin Falls plastic surgeon.

'I think people who have trouble with varicose veins, or those who are on their feet a lot," benefit from wearing support hose, he said.

hose, he said.

The gradient-type support hose can also help those with "spider veins" in their legs. The package will usually say whether the hose are the gradient type, or the kind that puts more pressure on the lower leg than the upper leg.

"It's very important to wear that type for vascular problems," Becker said.

The gradient pressure "tends to help

So the other leg is gathered up into a smunched ball and placed over the other foot while leaning against a wall, solid chair or other immovable object. So far so good.

The nylon is pulled up the leg, expertly reeling out just enough material to stretch up and.

Yep, that's right. They run right out of the package. What now?

package. What now?
"Pretend it's the first time you've seen the run when someone mentions it later," Gould advised.

Almost all the women interviewed said they buy at least two pair of hose at a time, and always keep an emergency backup pair in a desk or glove compartment.

milk the blood back up the leg," Becker said, and are good for those with poor cir-culation. Unfortunately, Becker says, "It seems like every woman I've seen (with this problem) got tight knee-highs, which made it worse."

Often nylons that are designed to go only as high as the top of the calf cause more problems for the wearer, Becker said.

"Below the knee you might see a band of elastic flaterial — that acts like a tourniquet, and that impedes the blood flow on the leg."

The better gradient-type hose are available at local department stores, Becker

The cost

Whipping out her trusty calculator, Stevens estimated she spends at least $250 a year If she wears one pair of pantyhose per week.

"I wish I owned stock in the pantyhose company," she lamented.
And that's just for the everyday-cheapy hose that rip as you get into the ear to leave for work in the morning, or cross your legs under the desk and tear a hole in the knee. For dressy-occasions, the price poses up. sions, the price goes up.

Some women try to get a leg up with bar-gain brands they send away for. Panatopoulos gets hers in the mail at a rate of 12 for $22.

"They'll get nubby before they'll run, usual-

Practical uses for old pantyhose

Clear nail polish is the clear front-moner for fixing runs in pantyhose, but some women have more creative ideas. Patricia Saras, a Twin Falk veterinarian, says nail polish is OK; but she reaches for the surgical tissue glue.

"It's like Super Glue, but it's a special formula so it won't overheat. It will stick to your skin," so it's not without it's own drawbacks.

to your skin," so it's not without it's own drawbacks.

But when it's time to siled the old, nubby, perforated, run-filled pair of pantylose for the last time, what do you do with them?

Here are some ideas:

1. Filter the dryer. You only have to change it two, three times a year because you have all that length.

2. Take, the top clastic and, put.it, around your head to hold back your hair while you put on your makeup.

3. Put them back, in the back of the drawer until you wear a long skir.

4. "Stuff something, Pillows? Quilts? My Mom-used to do something like that."

ly," she said. "I get a dozen wearings or ly, she said. "I get a dozen wearings or more."

Others, buy the more expensive, and heavier, support-type pantyhose.

Jody Craig at Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital says she got used to the support hose when she worked as a nurse, and simply "switched colors," when she changed jobs. "It's part of life." Craig said. "If you buy good support hose that look good, they last." "I feel like I've been set free," said Jeane Schlaugenhauf, director of the Consumer Credit Counseling Service of Tuni Falls. "I couldn't stand the restrictive nature of the pantyhose.— so I went high-highs." They're cheaper and they don't have a lot of the problems of their longer, attached cousins, she explained.

And once they're on .

And once they're on ...
Lydia Justice Edwards, Idaho's two-tenn Republican state treasurer is spittin' mad.
"I'm trying to bring Hanes to their knees," she said. "They're cheating women. When you open the package it's either no good or gone in 10 minutes."

For the past couple of years Edwards has staged a one-woman war on the hosiety industry, taking it to task for "poor quality" and lack of adequate labeling. Looking good

There's a difference between casual, sloppy jeans at work

As summer tightens its grip, dress codes are loosening up in the workplace.

The move toward more casual dressing has been gaining momentum in offices' across America since the dress-for-success '80s cased into the laid-back '90s. Some businesses designate Friday as "casual day" during the summer months. Others drop the formality of suits, ties and stockings every day of the week, from June through August.

Some even allow employees to come to work wearing that ultimate symbol of casual comfort: denim jeans.

However, there is a difference between wearing denim jeans.

However, there is a difference between wearing jeans to the office and to the office picnic. It's the difference between casual and sloppy.

After all, you are still at work. You're there to get a job tione and to represent the company—which means looking presentable at all times.

POTENCY PILLS POOH-POOHED: Sorry guys. A federal court has shut down a mail-order company that peddled pills promising "new heights of sexual performance" for men, even those who are frequently impotent. Authorities say the "Nitrocet HP" pills — which cost '524.95 for a one-month supply — don't work and, in fact, may sicken people with kidney problems.

THE BODY SCIENTIFIC: In the near future, medical science may not be so hot for your bod. Instead of cutting up cadavers, a new computer program called Glaxo Virtual Anatomy, expected to hit the market in 1995, will allow medical students to use photo-realistic, three-dimension graphics based on hundreds of photographs to view body parts.

OVERNIGHT DELIVERY: What's the hurry? OVERNIGHT DELIVERY: What's the hurry? The American Medical Association has expressed concern about a trend among insurance companies to pay for only 24 hours of hospital care for women who have just given birth. The AMA will conduct a study of what the practice has done to the health of infants and mothers, its effects on remaining family members, its the personal and financial impact and its affect on instruction and education in such matters as breast feeding and immunization.

HEALTHY RECOVERY: Does the nation's economic health affect our physical health? Well, a new study has found that after decreasing for the previous three years, participation in exercise activities increased last year. "Many in the fitness industry said that the recession caused a slow-down in the fitness movement and these findings suggest they may be right," says the head of the Fitness Products Council, which helped sponsor the survey.

UNDER YOUR SKIN: For years, researchers have tried to get the skin to accept more complicated molecules through patch technology, but the skin wouldn't budge. Now Americare Transtech has achieved a breakthrough in figuring out how to get insulin and other large-malecule drugs through the skin and into the bloodstream from a patch. Called Command and Demand, the firm's, patches contain multiple doses. The user simply pulls a strip to activate the dose. It is still being tested. The company also is working to develop an electronic system of delivering drugs to the body through a wristwatch-like device.

To insure high standards of scientific accuracy, I conducted the experiment in my driveway. Aside from Rollerblade Barbie, my materials consisted of several brands of hair spray and — this was a painful sacrifice — a set of my veteran underwear (estimated year of purchase; 1968). I spread the underwear on the driveway, then ranged it with hair soray, then made underwear on the driveway, then sprayed it with hair spray, then made

Rollerblade Barbie skate across it, sparking her booties. I found that if you use the right brand of hair spray — I got excellent results with "Rave" — Rollerblade Barbie does indeed cause the underwear to burst dramatically

(While I was doing this, a neigh-bor walked up, and I just want to say that if you think it's easy to explain why you're squatting in your drive-way, in front of a set of burning unrwear, surrounded by hair spray ttles, holding a Barbie doll in your hand, then you are mistuken.)

At this point, the only remaining scientific question — I mrsure this has occurred to you — was: Coal Rollerblade Barthie set fire to a Kellogg's strawberry Pop-Tart? The answer turns out to be yes, but you have to be in the act of hair-spraying the Pop-Tart when Barthie roller-blades over it, so you get a blowtorch effect that could very easily set fire to Barbie's hair, not to mention your ownersonal self. Plus you get tart filling in the booties.

So we can see why Mattel ceased manufacturing Rollerblade Batbie. I imagine that whichever toy designer dreamed up this exciting concept has been transferred to Mattel's coveted Bosnia plant. But what should be done about all the Rollerblade Batbies that are already in circulation? I believe that the only solution is for all concerned consumers to demand that our congresshumans pass a federal law requir-ing that all underwear, snack pastries and other household objects carry a prominent label statings. lunch at a decent restaurant.

So how do you dress up your jeans for work?

No make sure they are clean, neat and pressed, for starters. Ripped or frayed jeans may be cool at the pool, mail or club, but they'll get you into hot water at the office. Too-tight jeans are another no-no. That's not the way you want to attract attention in the workplace.

Better choices are fuller "relaxed cut" jeans, pleated styles and classic five-pocket jeans. These can be had for as little as $15 at a factory outlet — or for more than $150 from a designer boutique. The price difference generally has more to do with cachet than quality. Oversized hip-hop jeans that hang from the hips and puddle at the ankles are out for the office. So are styles cut so narrow that they need zippers down the legs.

Darker shades are dressier than the bleached and faded look — and may last longer because the jeans haven't been subjected to as many fading treatments that can weaken the fabric.

Once you've got the right jeans, put a little thought into the rest of your outliff. Don't wear your office jeans with T-shirts emblazoned with rock stars, beer cans or suggestive slogans; with shoulder-baring tank tops or belly-baring crop tops; or with beach sandals or sneakers.

Tips help navigate denim do's, don'ts

When putting together a jeans outfit for the office, balance casulat comfort with good taste and common sense. Here are tips for achieving the right look and avoiding the wrong look:

Do wear fuller cut jeans that are clean and near.

Do wear a belt.
 Do invest in good quality T-shirts, sport shirts, blouses or the neckline. Avoid tees that are tight or over-sized. For women, the bodysuit is a handy alternative as it stays tucked-in and smooth. And a vest will make any T-shirt look dressier.

Men also may opt for knit polo shirts; short- or long-sleeved sport shirts in cotton, rayon or silk; and this year's fashion favorite, the band-collar shirt. These come in sol-id, colors, fun prints and stripes. There's also that casual-Briday classic, the denim or chambray shirt, worn with an expressive tie.

Similarly, for women, the combination of silk shirt and jeans has become a classic. Almost any blouse can be teamed with jeans—so long as it's not too bare, too sheer or too tight. Long, unie-style tops are a good choice for camouflaging a bulging rear, hips or thicks.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Concerned Mom," whose 2-year-olds son, "Ricky," liked to play with dolls. We, too, have a son who at that agrequested a special Cabbage Pach doll for Christmas. He played with the doll for years, and now, at the age of 12, he still keeps that doll in his room. Has it made him "funny"? Only if you consider a young man who nevies taves for school, hangs up the phone, or goes to sleep without telling us he loves us "funny"; who never allows me to open a door, who always completionents his autust and sister, who cringes when he hears other children talk back to their parents, who absolutely lowes to baby-sit young children, who can carry and an intelligent conversation with adults, who plays baseball and basket ball with a vengeance, and is not afraid to clean up the kitchen or show affect of the property of the pr kitchen window.

One day I saw a rather disagreeable elderly neighbor woman bend over and say something to him, which caused him to run to our front door. When I opened it, he asked, "Monniny, am I a little boy or a little girl?" Of course, I told him that he was a little boy, and since (even at 2 1/2) he spoke very clearly, I told him what to say if this neighbor – or anyone else – questioned him about his doll.

Here is the story I planned to write when given this assignment:
Oh, you poor women out there. I had no idea of the pain and suffering you have gone through all these years by wearing these horrible little sausage casings on your legs.
But now, under orders from my boss, I have walked a mile in your hose. I am hot and miserable. I snagged them on a desk drawer, and another pair will cost $5, making a total of $389 I have spent on pantyhose this week along.
Please get them off me. And I won't blame you if you never, ever wear them again.

I like 'em.' As I write this, I am wearing Leggs. Control Top, Sheer toe. Black. Oooh, baby baby, I feel dangerous. Did I mention that white pantyhose also are very poor at covering up dense mats of dark leg hair?

Next I vetoed the nude hosiery. That would be like wearing clear makeup. What's the roint?

What's the point?

Mccklenburg County, N.C., health director Dr. Steve Keener said the rash — a fine red rash as opposed to a splotchy measles-like rash — is a "late sign. Once it's gotten that far, it's very difficult to reverse." Most times, treatment with antibiotics is started before laboratory tests confirm the disease. "The golden rule is, if someone has a fever and headache and particularly, a rash, but even if not, younced to think of Rocky Mountain spotted Tever," said "Dr. Jared", Schwartz, a pathologist at Presbyterian Hospital in Charlotte. "Usually if you get treated in the first four to live days after you develop symptoms, you'll recover," he said. Lyme disease, which also causes flu-like symptoms, is transmitted by deer ticks and is most prevalent in the Northeast, where it was first reported in 1975. The most recognizable symptom is rash, resembling a bull's-eye. Unlike Rocky Mountain spotted fever, Lyme disease is not fatal but it can cause chronic problems, such as arthritis. Cheryl Masson listed her husband's cause of death in his obituary-with the hope that somebody would see it and perhaps it would save another life. Chiropractic...

Comes from the Greek words "cheir" and "parklikis" meaning "done by hand." It is a natural approach to health, independent of drugs and surgery. Hippocrates, known as "the father of modern medicine," Dr. Marsha Gehl laid the foundation for today's chiropractic care. This ancient physician believed that the function of good medicine is to assist the body's natural ability to repair and heal itself. Even during his time, spinal adjusting was viewed as a powerful aid to self-healing.

Tom anterior cruciate ligaments are one of the most common sports injuries, and ligament replacement — usually with a tendon from the patient or from a cadaver — has become the hottest thing in orthopedics, particularly since the development of arthroscopic surgery.

Jerrod Vickers, a 23-year-old weekend soccer player who also accepts about any invitation to play racquetball or backetball or anything else, is recovering from his second ACL replacement.

The other option — "traditionally the gold standard," Jansson says — is an autograft, in which the middle third of the patient's patellar tendon's used. The best way to prevent tearing an anterior cruciate ligament is to play sports safely. Sport physician Mary Lynch lists how to avoid some common errors:

BASKETBALL: Don't try to grab the ball and stop at the same time, or to make a one-handed slam-dunk with a 360-degree turn.

GYMNASTICS: Bend the leg for landings. Nadia-Gomaneci's landings weren't on straight legs, despite the way they may have ward.

SKIING: Loosen your bindings. Loosening them enough so that you can make yourself pop out of them with a hard lateral shift when you're standing still would prevent 96 percent-of the skiing ACL injuries.
BASEBALL: Sliding into fired bases can cause injuries.

BASEBALL: Sliding into fixed bases can cause injuries, as can rounding second and changing your mind. Another potential problem: the outfielder who things himself forward when he's short of the ball.

TRACK: Watch out for the long jump, the triple jump and the high hurdles. SILMS WITH SYM-TRACK SILMS W Vickets showed up for his surgery at 9 a.m. and was home by 9 p.m. He'll be on crutches three to four weeks. Had he not also had some cartilage repaired, it would have been three days. He could return to competitive sports a year from now, but because he has a wife and a baby on the way, he's not sure that he will.

Torn ligaments Women athletes have suffered far more injuries than men to the

About 80 percent of partial tears will heal to some degree — many of them very well — without surgery, Lynch says. However, an ACL torn all the way through won't heal by itself, and it can't be sewn together successfully. Jansson and Lynch say.

Shirley Zander of Wichita tore hers on a sik slope in Colorado. "It was so quick. I mean the left ski hooked on the right ski and threw my knee outward." She tried therapy for several months, then went to Jansson in November 1992. "He was a little reluctant because I'm old," says Zander. "Athat point, I was his oldest ACL replacement. And he said had I not been active, he probably would not have done it." She was 52 at the time.

"I went sking November of '93. I'm a volleyball player, too. He let me start playing recreational volleyball the next summer. Which would have been summer of '93, and I play at least three times a week."

Jansson and Lynch say ligaments used to be replaced only in professional athletes, then only in those under 40. Now, Lynch would recommend the procedure even for a physically active 65-year-old who wanted to remain that way. She's also seeing younger and younger patients.

Zander's daughter, Tara, 33, also went to Jansson.

the United States. "We do anywhere from six to nine a week here, just in my office."

The anterior cruciate ligament, about the width of a little finger, is one of the main ligaments in the knee. It runs from the back of the femur, or thighbone, to the front of the tibia, or shinbone. "They give the knee stability, front to back," Jansson says.

Normally, when the leg straightens, the knee turns slightly, says sports physician Mary Lynch. Without the cruciate to stop it, the knee would keep right on sliding, destroying the meniscus, or the knee's protective cartilage. "The best way to save a knee is to keep your cruciate intact," she says.

Being fit and being flexible won't protect you from injury, Lynch says. "If you get your leg in the wrong position at the wrong time, you can tear your anterior cruciate."

Lynch calls a tom ACL "an out-of-control injury" that occurs when an athlete tries to stop and change direction at the same time, as in dodging a tackle or keeping a basketball inbounds. It can happen when a gymnast lands straight-legged from a height. The person feels intense pain on the outside or back of the knee.
