the construction will take or how the hotel will look.

But the deal on the land came suddenly, Dave Harvey – president of Meldeo Inc., which owns the land – decided on a whim in early July to mail out basic site maps to Shito Inns to see if the company would-be interested in the land.

Meanwhile, the Summit Group of South Dakota, which owns the local Comfort Inn. was starting negotiations with Harvey to buy the land to build their own hotel.

But Shilo Inns executives looked at the plans for a week, then responded quickly. They flew in from Portland and came to terms with Harvey in just three days, snatching the land from the Summit Group. "It's strategically located," said Linda Burt, director of marketing for Shilo Inns.

Utah — Is America's love affair with its overcrowded national parks with its overcrowded national parks fading?

For the first time since the end of World War II, the number of people visiting national parks is heading down, in a decline that started two years ago.
And that spells trouble for businesses that cater to park visitors.
Even in this desert park of 2,000 natural stone arches, where visitor numbers had jumped 51 percent since 1990, attendance may be down this year, says Park Superintendent Noel Poe.
"We didn't believe it could continue foreyer. Maybe we're at that point," Pré-said.
Neighboring Canyonlands, where growth had been even higher than Arches, also is in a decline.
But not every park is down.
Attendance at some parks that draw from major population centers is climbing, including Yosemite, up 9 percent, and Rocky Mountain near Denver, up 17 percent for the first five months of this year. But nationally, visitors to the park system's 332 reporting until characteristic and initial reports for June and July suggest further drops. Last year, visits were down to 273.1 million, down from the previous year's 274.7 million.

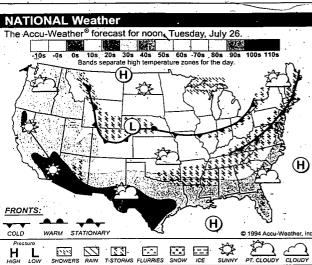

In 1947, the number was 25.5 million.

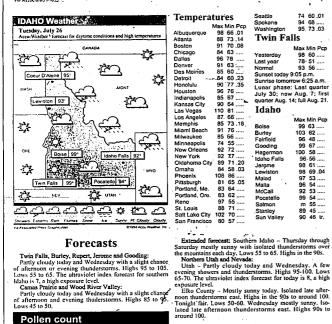

Many reasons are given why Many reasons are given why park system numbers are down, ranging from an uncertain world economy to the international attraction of all the World Cup soccer matches to overcrowded parks.

"People are tired of going to overcrowded parks," said Rod Greenough of the Salt Lake City office of the National Parks and Conservation Association.

Israel, Jordan pledge end to war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel and Jordan pledged Monday to war no more, their historic declaration echoing from the White House as President Clinton marveled at a "new currency of hope" surging through the Middle East.

Sitting at the same desk used in 1979 for a peace treaty between, Egypt and Israel and last September to establish Palestinian self-rule, King Hussein of Jordan and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin owed "to bring an end to bloodshed and sorrow" between their nations.
The king patted Rabin on the shoulder and they shook hands warmly. Hussein, who had hesitated for decades in making peace with Israel, declared in a Rose Garden ceremony that preceded the declaration of nonbelligerency: "Out of all the days of my life, I don't believe there is one such as this."

of unbelligerency: "Out of all the days of my life, I don't believe there is one such as this."

The king, who saw his grandfather, King; Abdallah, murdered by a Muslim extremist in 1951, defield today's extremists in taking a step that is designed to lead to a peace treaty by year's end. Glancing toward Rabin, who commanded Israeli forces in the 1967 Six-Day war that cost Jordan the West Bank, Hussein promised "we will meet as often as we are able and as required to shepherd this process."

"A new day is dawning," Rabin said, reflecting the optimism their meeting engendered. Perhaps this first public handshake with the king—who until now has had to meet in screet with Israeli leaders—will someday become "most routine." The prime minister said.

Egypt and Israel came to terms in 1979. Last September, also on the White House lawn, Israel and the PLO agreed to establish Palestinian self-rule in Gaza and on the West Bank. But negotiations between Israel and two other Arab nations, Syria and Lebanon, are flagging.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who is planning to return to the Middle East in early August, said after a lunch for the three leaders, "There is now set in motion a process which I hope and believe is irreversible. The ice is broken.

Americans, Israelis and Jordanians set on metal folding chairs for the outdoor ceremony, napt in the history unfolding before them but also wilting in the heat. They applauded every assertion of good will, some also fanning themselves in an attempt to break the still air.

PARK RIDGE, III. (AP)—This is a story of sex, drugs and videotape in a well-to-do suburb where crime is an infrequent visitor.

It is a tale of a 19-year-old who police say served young girls drinks and sometimes drugged them, then started the camera rolling to record his sexual asseutls.

Jada Saenz, a college student and bank employee, was arrested last week after the father of a 13-year-old girl told police he had found his daughter and a 12-year-old friend unconscious at Saenz's apartment.

U.S. First Army stages Normandy breakout with objective Coutances

Knight-Ridder News Service

The fall of St. Lo on July 18, 1944, put the U.S. First Army in position for the great breakout from Normandy.

The plan was to use the 4th, 9th and 30th Infantry divisions to push through the thick "ensu" of the German defenses on the right of the Allied line. Then the 2nd and 3rd Armored divisions with the fully motorized 1st Infantry Division would drive through the hole. This mass was organized under Muj. Gen. J. Lawton Collins' VII Corps.

The ultimate objective was Coutances to the southwest. This would take the exploitation force behind the German LXXXIV Corps, to trap and destroy it. A future VII Corps would launch a similar "left book" behind the German LXXIV Corps. to trap and the traqis in Kuwait during Desert Storm.

To pave the way for the infantry assault, the U.S. 8th and 9th Air Forces would carpet bomb the area just across the St. Lo-Periers road, west of the town.

Three hundred fifty 9th Tactical Air Three hundred fifty 9th Tactical Air Command fighter-bombers would hit the first. Then 1,800 heavy bombers, from the 8th AF would blast the area for an hour. Then the fighter bombers were to return, followed by nearly 400 medium bombers from the 9th AF who July 24 was set for the attack, but the bombers had to be recalled because of bad weather. Some didn't get the word, and a few of these dropped their bombs short, killing 21 American soldiers. The next day, the skies cleared, and the bombers went in as planned. But again, songe bombs fell short, killing 111 American Gls (including LJ. Gen. Lesley McNair, commander of Army variatine, who was visiting the front) Lesley McNair, commander of Army training, who was visiting the from and wounding 490 others. The front-line Germans were decimated, Parts of the elite Panzer Lehr division simply disappeared. However, units farther back held their ground.

The advance the first day was slower than anticipated, but then the pace picked up. German strong points blocked major routes but were spread too thin to cover all areas. American units searched for holes and pushed through where they could. They tore up telephone wires and overant command posts. A sense of movement had taken hold after weeks of static fighting. Some German units pulled back, exposing neighboring units to flank attacks.

The Germans were handicapped in their response because Gen. Paul Hausser had placed the LXXIV Corps's mobile units (the 2nd SS Panzer and Panzer Lehr divisions along with the remnants of the 17th SS Panzergenediers) in the front line to provide support for the 5th Parachute Division.

These tank and paratrooper teams were potent in defense but were now being bypassed by the U.S. advance. In reserve, Hausser had only two infantry divisions, which were not mobile enough to meet the American break-

When resistance was encountered, the infantry would divi-mount to fix the enemy position, then the tanks were to blast it. Rose kept the column moving all night to prevent the Germans from regaining their balance.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge
Monday ordered a trial on whether records of President Clinton's health care working group must be made public.

Among those who may be called to testify are First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton and White House adviser Ira Magaziner, who together led the group, said attorney Kent Masterson Brown, who represents three organizations that are challenging the task force's secret.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge
Monday ordered a trial on whether records of President Clinton's health care working group the defined motions filed by both sides to rule on the case without a trial. There are foo many factual dispatch that most be resolved in a trial, he said.

The judge deferred until after the trial any action on the three groups' bid to have together led the group, sontend Magaziner held in contempt of court. The groups contend Magaziner lied in a March 1993 sworn affidavit when he said all members of the working group were either govern-

bers of the working group were either government employees or consultants.

The Association of American Physicians and Surgeons, the American Council for Health-Care Reform and the National Legal Policy Center are seeking hundreds of thousands of transcripts, drafts, minutes and other documents generated by the working group. The working group's more than 500 members met-from-January through May 1993 to make recommendations on a health care plain. The three groups say the Federal Advisory Committee Act requires any such group to meet in public if it includes non-government members.

Government attorney Mark Stern told Lamberth the panel was too loosely structured to be covered by the federal advisory panel law.

Lamberth said he would discuss the timing of a trial with attorneys on Tuesday.

Brown told reporters afterward that Lamberth's decision to take the case to trial was "a major win as far as we're concerned."

gun-toting troublemakers out of the schools.*

Lousy idea to make it federal law. That's what Democratic Sens. Dianne Feinstein of California and Byron Dorgan of North Dakota have proposed. They'd attach the proviso to an education bill pending before Congress that would require any school district that receives federal funds to expel any student who shows up on the school grounds with a firearm.

The theory, of course, is zero tolerance of guns at school — no exceptions, no second chances, no excuses. A recent survey by Metropolitan Life showed more than one in 10 teachers and nearly one in four students reported they had been victims of violence at or near their schools, according to The Associated Press.

The same poll also showed 13 percent of students said they had brought a weapon to school at least once. That's a statistic that no parent wants to contemplate, and in a world of random and frightening violence, one that can be changed in a hurry.

There's no legitimate excuse for a kid to bring a firearm to school, and anyone who does may forfeit the right to be there.

But that's a decision for the local school board, not for some bureaucrat wearing a visor and wielding a rubber stamp in the bowels of the Department of Education building in Washington.

Initiative will deny civil rights

Initiative win delay countrights
I am writing today to clarify some of the misconceptions surrounding the Idaho Critzens Alliance anti-gay initiative that will be on the ballot in November.
The main point of the initiative is to deny basic civil rights to homosexuals. Currently it is legal in the state of Idaho to discriminate against people based on their real or suspected sexual orientation. This will be changed by the initiative.

orientation. This will be changed by the imma-tive.

What we stand to lose is the right to change this in the future. According to the attorney gen-eral of Idaho, if it passes, "agencies, departments or political subdivisions of the state could not re-quire equal treatment of homosexuals either by enacting anti-discrimination laws and ordi-enactors or by prohibiting discrimination based on sexual orientation in their rules, policies and agreements. The right to get and keep a job based on your ability and performance is not a special right. It is a basic civil right that is not currently protected under Idaho or federal Jaw. In addition, the initiative violates the constitu-tions of the state of Idaho and of the United States. The Idaho attorney general has twice de-termined that it is unconstitutional. If we allow it to pass, we (as taxpayers) will be obligated to de-tend it.

Colordans have already spent 33 million defined it.

Coloradans have already spent 33 million defending the amit-gay initiative that they let pass, and they are not done yet. It is estimated that Colorado has lost nearly $120 million to tourism and convention boycotts. Although no one wants to endure such an outcome, it is important to keep in mind that (dasho's primary products—potatoes, rout and tourism— are easily identifiable by people outside of (dasho and thus are extremely vulnerable to boycott. If for no other reason than economics, we need to defeat this initiative.

Help reader understand points

Help-reader-understand points
The debate about the Idaho Citizens Alliance initiative concerning "Bay rights" has produced a lot of heat, but not much light. Terms like "family values" and "pro-Nazi" have not helped me to make up my mind which way I should vote. As a Latter-day Saint, I and effinitely not "pro-gay," but as a Latter-day Saint, I have been attacked by the "Christian right" also, and I understand the gays_concerns. Since I am not a firm member of either camp, I am looking for information with which to make my decision. The Times. News should host a debate between the two sides and then print it in the religious section. The complete initiative should be printed in a sidebar to the debate article. The two sides should cover each section of the injutative. The ICA should lead out on each section, explaiging what it means and why they put in. The Dort 1 Sign On-people should reply with what they think the section means, and why they do not want it. Each side should then have an opportunity to reply to the points made by the opposition before moving on to the next section. After the initiative has been covered, each side should be given the opportunity to summarize its position.

I believe the debate should be done completely by letter, each not more than one page long, to avoid misquotes or statements taken out of context. The Times-News should then out of context. The Times-News should then print the letters in sequence in the article. Any editoralizing should be kept to a sidebar article, the end, I still might be undecided, but I will know more about the initiative than if I vote for it am a Nazi, and if I vote against it, I am antifamily values.

in I am a Nazi, and if I vote against it, I am antifamily values.

I depend on The Times-News for my news, My 5:30 a.m.-to-midnight lifestyle does not head isself to television watching, so I am not exposed to sound blies and talking heads. I want my news straight and plain, with any editorial comment off to the side. News in written form can be kept, reviewed and discussed, where television and radio news disappears at the speed of sound. I am sure The Times-News is capable of providing that to me. The first question is: Will you? The second question is: Does anyone else care to read such an article? S.H. "SHY" BISHOP Bliss

Gun control doesn't work

Gun control doesn't work

I was totally outraged by one of your headlines in the July 15 issue, "Gunman seen as victim." If this wasn't such a serious issue, it would be quite a joke!
Floyd Hazen of Blue Lakes Sporting Goods is an honorable, respected member of our community, as well as a local business owner. To call him a "gunman" for defending himself and his property against a criminal is totally insane.
This is a prime example of how jadde al liberal press has become toward guns or gun control.
How about a headline like, "Local businessman uses gun to successfully defend store?"
Not that I ever expect the press to defend ownership of Tirearms, but it would be nice to tell the truth.

the truth.

The American Civil Liberties Union and a liberal Congress have given criminals more rights at the expense of the law-abiding citizens. Why don't you guys get a clue and tell the truth that gun control doesn't work. The answer is criminal control, If a few more burglars got shot, my bet is that our crime rate would go down.

The media gods see the light

Glory be! The New York Times and CBS News, definers of the news that is fit to print and broadcast, decided to boldly go where few journalists have gone before: into the valey of cultural outcasts where religious believers, a.k.a. conservative Christians, hang out. These media gods have delivered to the nation a poil that reaches the most amazing conclusions. It turns out, to what I'm sure must have been this astonishment of The New York Times and CBS (but not to most people who do other things on Sunday mornings in addition to, or instead of, reading the Times and watching CBS), that the "Christian right, which has been the focus of an intense debate in the Republican Party, is a far more diverse group in terms of geography, politics and even religious doctrine than is generally suggested by either its critics or its most vocal proponents."

gested by either its critics or its most vocal proponents."
That CBS and The New York Times have been among hoss doing the general suggesting goes unadmitted in a news story on the poll. But they do admit to a "carrieature" of Christians as "Republican Southerners (who) follow-a monolithic religious agenda."
"They are as likely to be Democrats as Republicans," the poll says. "And while they are disproportionately from the South, conservative Christians live in all parts of the country."

tive Christians live in all parts of the country."
That ought to cause great concern among people who thought they had these folk isolated. Why, employees of the Times or CBS might be living closer to one or more of these people than they think.
There's more. The poll suggests that the debate over the appropriate role of religion in politics" cannot be painted in the sort of black-and-white terms offered by either side. Including, one might add, the media gods who have deliberately closed their eyes to this subject for years, preferring to stereotype, car-icature, ridicule and portray in black-and-white such people and their deeply held be-

It gets better (or worse, depending on your liefs.

If gets better (or worse, depending on your perspective).

The poll found the education backgrounds of these people "are roughly the same as all Americans." This after years of portraying conservative Christians as snake handlers, book burners, misogynists and meists who didn't graduate from real universities and who never read books, other than the King James version of the Blbic.

It is the equivalent of discovering that blacks are fully human or that women can succeed working outside as well as inside the home. The press continues to flaunt its deliberate ignorance of religion and religious people. Editors would never allow any other group to be portrayed in this manner, especially a group so large.

Recall a Washington Post story that described evangeliculs and fundamentalists (the press uses these words but few norreligious reporters can define them) as "poor, uneducated and easy to command." Following a flood of phone calls and fetters protesting such a stereotype, the Post ombudsman lame yexplained that most reporters don't know any of "these people." Since they are everywhere in the country, why can't journalists find them and fairly report on their beliefs?

When Jimmy Carter burst on the national scene in 1976, he proclaimed himself to have been 'born again.' NBC's John Chancellor took to the air and said, 'We've looked up 'born again' and it is nothing new.' That's right, John. The term wasn't invented by Jimny Carter, though the One who coined it had the same initials. Millions of Americans for other than the othe were outraged at such ignorance. (For the the-ologically challenged, the definition is found in the New Testament, Book of John, Chapter in the New Testament, Book of John, Chapter 3,)

Information about the beliefs of people the Times/CBS News poll surveyed is not classified. It is available in the Book most news-rooms have, but seldom consult. How can we report on people whose beliefs we don't know? We read the platforms of political parties, but refuse to read the spiritual platform of believers. This is journalistically indefensible. Reporters and commentators have an obligation to understand the terms and beliefs, of persons about whom they write. They don't have to believe in the same things to do their job well, but accuracy and fairness ought to be expected.

Eighten years have passed since Jimmy Carter ran for President. There is no excuse for waiting so long to do a survey like this.

Carter ran for President. There is no excuse for waiting so long to do a survey like this. Because religion is so intertwined with contemporary politics, newsrooms ought to conduct an affirmative action program to include people on their staffs who believe as millions of Americans do and who can report correctly and fairly on those beliefs in a way that will inform all of us.

Beware tyrannical government

Beware tyrannical government

I'd like to respond to Molly Ivins' column,
'Consider the merits of the kinfe,' on July 19.
Ms. Jvins' simplistic, juvenile, one-sided views are starting to make me ill. Ms. Ivins claims to support the Second Amendment, and, then in her next breath, proceeds to tear
it limb from limb.

She claims that firearms were never intended for private citizens but rather for 'wellregulated militias.' She further states that "14-year-old boye" and 'wacky religious cults' are not part of a well-regulated militia.
She apparently doesn't understand that the militias that won this country for us enlisted hundreds of Ireen-aged boys and that most of the members of the militia were considered to wacky religious activists by the British be wacky religious activists by the British government.

She goes on to use Thomas Jefferson's honorable name to employ blatant scare tactics, "... teen-gaed drug dealers perforating their fellow citizen," etc. She says it was never his intention to allow the average person to own firearms. This is simply not true! Mr. Jefferson was quoted to have said, "It is ever citizen's right and duty to remain at all times armed."

armed."
George Washington said that the rifle and pistol are second in importance only to the Constitution itself.
Jefferson also said that the Second Amendment was not written to protect us from crime but to protect us from a "tyrannical government.

Still, Ms. Ivins and other "Clinton worshippers" contend that the armed forces and the National Guard are the only militia Americans need. I don't want to offend any of our great and courageous soldiers, but isn't that like asking the Redcoats to protect you from the king? the king?
Ms. Ivins' sights that "rattlesnake hunters

Ms. Ivins' sights that 'raticisance hunters' should be subject to the same restrictions placed on gun owners in England — a nation in which liberty has survived nicely without an armed populace." Excuse mel Did we read the same history book? I seem to recall a small incident called the American Revolution. I believe that firearms played a large role in that chapter.

My friends, now is the time to be concerned. Every day a little more of our liberty is squeezed from us. We are restricted and controlled in our everyday as sets. The liberal media tells us only what it wants us to know. So far we have failed to recognize that the problem in our nation is the Molly Ivins all over the country.

Men and women with the courage and foresight to speak up are scoffed at (as surely 1 will be). They are called radicals, religious right wings, and in Ms. Ivins' own words, "gun nuts."

Be worried, be very worried. Every day brings us closer to the tyrannical type of government that lefferson himself foresaw. "Ban the damn things, ban them all."

Ms. Ivins, we want protection, but we already have more dogs than we want. They wear $1,500 suits and call themselves politicians.

Goma airport overflows with Rwandan relief

GOMA, Zaire (AP) — As thousands of desperate Rwandan, refugees die of hunger and disease, an American relief effort is being held up because workers at Goma's iny airport cannot distribute the aid that's already come in.

Some American planes have been forded to circle overhead for hours waiting for the single runway to clear; a few have run low on fuel and gone elsewhere. "
U.S. officials were optimistic that a American C-5 transport on its way from Germany with water purification units would be able to land Monday to ease a cholera epidemic that has killed 11,000 people.

"It is out of control," Hansen, said. The U.N. World Food Program and private agencies have delivered more than 1,100 jons of food to Goma in recent days, but little has been distributed because of a shortage of trucks and personnel.

Three Air Force C-141 cargo planes from bases in Germany rushed to Goma over the weekend only to buzz overhead, waiting for the runway to clear of other aid planes. Low on fuel, they flew to Kenya and Uganda to wait for permission to try again.

Three other U.S. cargo craft landed Sunday and Monday after more than an hour's delay overhead. Zairian airport authorities charged each aircraft $2,000 to land.

Planes were parked on both ends of the runway as aid workers unloaded them, often by hand.

The two water purification machines aboard the American C-5 would be able to purge cholera bacteria from the waters of Lake-Kivu at the rate of 1,200 gallons an hour.

The machines would be among the first to reach the area, and with the United Nations putting basic daily consumption at five quarts per person, even that equipment would only put a dent in the overwhelming need.

A water filtration plant that could purify 51,000 gallons an hour was being flown in from San Francisco, and was to go into operation in Goma on Tuesday.

Privately, many independent aid workers and some U.S. personnel blame the air traffic foulups on-french forces who have run the airport since mid-June.

"The Americans could come in and run this airport far more efficiently than it's being run right now, We hope that will happen," said Ray Wilkinson of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

"This crisis calls out for a military-style operation," he said. "That needs to be imposed, in as generous a manner as possible, by the Americans."

From early morning until dark, kids of Little League age struggle to shove gruesome bundles into the back of trucks.

Sometimes the bundles are tiny, easily tossed onto the pile. But the killer here is cholera, not the malnutrition of infants, and more often the victims are adults.

"It is only normal, isn't it?" asked Jean Wauters, a retired Belgian importer in a rolled kerchief who supervises 500 young volunteers. "Scouts do their part."

Over 10 days, the kids and older ex-Scouts have collected 7,000 bodieso utiside Goma; and their work is only beginning. Aid officials say as many as 80,000 could die before the epidemic runs its course. As many as 11,000 had died by Monday.

French soldiers pick up corpses in Goma, where they have scooped out a huge common grave in a banana grove. Some European volunteers help, Mostly, Boy Scouts do the job. Bodies are everywhere: dotting city streets, lining the roads out of town, stacked like logs in the refugee camps.

Some are wrapped in bright-colored sarongs. More are in woven straw sleeping mats: One was boxed neatly in a cardboard food aid container, strapped as if for mailing. A large label read, "Hard Biscuit."

Early on Monday, a crew worked at Mugunga camp near Goma, a patch of hell on earth where the vast swath of laid-out corpses never seems to get smaller, despite regular_calls by the body trucks.

"I must do this," explained Oscar Benda, 20, as he helped two boys fiolist a corpse onto a battered blue Toyota flatbed. "The disease might get me next and, in a few days, this could be me."

Each day, the scout teams prowl the camps, roadsides and lakefront for more bundles. When the trucks are full, they drive to the French-dug grave among the banana trees.

Unmarked and unmourned, the victims' remains are pitched into the common grave. Other graves will be necessary, Mosquito said, but everyone is too busy to dig them. To save time, French engineers are dynamiting the volcanie rock near Goma to open more space for burials.

The teams beg gloves and antiseptic solution wherever they can. Wauter's was at Mugungu to get a meager supply from the Irish aid group Concern.

Policies keep BSU enrollment holding steady

BOISE (AP) — Enrollment at Boise State University likely will hold steady this fall for the first time in five years.

Boise State University officials expect about 15,000 students — close to the number who enrolled last fall. Enrollment has been growing by 3 percent to 6 percent annually.

"We just can't continue to accommodate the kind of growth we've had in the past," says Dave Taylor, Boise State vice president for student affairs.

Taylor credits changes in the admissions process with tightening the reins on enrollment. A deadline first implemented in summer 1993, prevents students from enrolling as rull-time degree-seeking students after the last week in July.

Previously, students who had been admitted to Boise State University could walk in on the first day of school and register for classes — without any prior contact with the university.

"We had walk-ins competing with continuing students for class space," Taylor says.

continuing students for class space," Taylor says.

Another new admissions policy sets higher standards for acceptance to the university. The fall 1994 term marks the first time the admissions office will require a minimum cumulative grade-point average and American College Test score.

Taylor estimates the new minimum standards keep out 100 to 150 students who would have been accepted under the less-stringent academic requirements.

Businesses must comply with disabilities law today

By Mick Normington Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Most of the businesses in the Magic Valley have to be in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities, Act today.

It is the deadline for small businesses companies with 15 to 25 employees — to obey the ADA.

Complying with the ADA is more than just making an office or store accessible to somebody in a wheelchair, said attorney Skip Sperry.

One part accessibility. But the major thust of ADA is there can't be discrimination based on a disability "sid Sperry, who is a management consultant on the federal law to Idaho businesses through IEC Management Resource Group of Boise.

So employers must not discriminate in the "terms, conditions or privileges of employment" to any employee or potential employee under the ADA guidelines, he said.

The law states that if a disabled worker is qualified to do a job then the employer must make a "reasonable accommodation" for that worker to perform the job "so long as it doesn't jose an undue hardship on the employer.

While it often sounds complicated and ambiguous, Sperry said in some cases the ADA is more poweful than civil rights laws regarding worker discrimination.

Roughly 3,000 businesses in Idaho are affected by the ADA requirements that go into effect today, Sperry said. That cludes most of the businesses in the Magic Valley, or the businesses in the Sperident George Bush pushed for this complex labor law.

Two years ago, the ADA went into affect for companies with 25 or more employees.

TWIN FALLS - The city won't reclaim the 200 block of Fifth Avenue South from the warehouses whose trucks and grain bins have shut down half the roadway.

Not yet, anyway.
Instead, the City Council voted Monday to turn that block of Old Town into a one-way street for Minidoka Avenue's bundtriffic only.

Councilman Jeff Gooding called the vote, at best, "a short-term solution" to the problems confounding the first business to attempt to redevelop Old Town Twin Falls.

The city's right-of-way between Second Street South and Minidoka Avenue is undeveloped, and warehouses encroach upon the road all along its northeast border.

Appellate court decision may increase taxes By Julie M. McKinnon Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Some county officials are concerned that a recent appellate court decision demanding Payette County pay the outstanding medical bills for two poor people could mean they must do the same.

And, if they do, it will mean a tax increase for residents they same. And, if they do, it with mean a tax increase for residents, they said.

The state took over financial control of the program from the counties in 1991.

"I'm quite confident that the problem will be solved at that point," said Twin Falls County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman, adding that officials want $16 million set aside for the state Catastrophic Program. "It's been a pet peeve between our current governor and the Legislature."

For the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, Twin Falls County budgeted $1.5 million for the county's indigent fund, which covers rent, utility bills and medical bills for those who-cannot afford them. That fund is almost broke, Hempleman said.

Cassia County budgeted $350,000 for its indigent fund, but if counties have to pay the full amount for catastrophic medical bills, then Cassia will have to at least double that amount, said Prosecuting Attorney Steven Bywater.

Bywater said the county has about $400,000 in indigent medical bills that qualify for Catastrophic Program payment.

Jerome County has 24 outstanding indigent cases for the Catastrophic Program tolding $360,958,37.

When having a party: It doesn't have to cost a-lot of time or money

Karen Mann remembers the birth-y parties of her childhood as sim-e, fun-filled afternoons in the back yard. "We played musical chairs and pin the tail on the donkey," said Mann, a Plantation, Fla., mother of two girls. "We had cupcakes. It was not elaborate at all." Whatever happened to those unaffected celebrations for which mothers baked two-tler cakes and chilldren served as each other's entertainment! Have they given way to paid magicians, rented ponies and catered dishes? Increasingly, yes. Mann recently

"A good party," observed Vicki Overstreet, an author of "Great Parties for Kids," "is one in which the brithday child feels special and the children leave after having fun. Nothing more, nothing less."

You can have low-cost, littlestress birthday parties if you put your mind to it. Mann did, after making a few expensive mistakes herself. For her daughter Julie's first birthday five years ago, Mann decided to make each child a T-shirt. It was lots of work and lots of money. Since then she has simplified, simpl

What you do have to do is make the birthday child feel like the center of attention.

Yet, what may work for one family could be disastrous for another. Some mothers thrive on organizing games for a houseful of children. Others might prefer a handful of children in; a place where someone else wornies about the food and the entertainment.

"You have to know your tolerance," Lansky said, "Some people can have a houseful of children without a problem. Others can't."

Should the birthday girl ask everyone in her class or only her closest friends? Twenty toddlers or five?

Most parents set a limit on the number of guests, especially forvery young children. "You have to," said Annamaria Toller. "When they're little, every child means at least one or two adults. You're getting three for one."

A popular rule of thumb is to invite one guest for each year of your child's life plus one. So, if Suzy is turning 5, you would invite six children. Unfortunately, this doesn't always work out, particularly for kids with lots of cousins. The solution: get help from an older child, a teen-age neighbor, grandmother or another parent. Author Vicki Overstreet recommends, one adult helper for every six or seven close friends instead of the entire class, but if you are handing out invitations to most of the class, it is rude — and hurful — to leave out only two or three children.

Conference OKs compromise interstate banking bill

WASHINGTON — House and Senate negotiators resolved their differences Monday over wide-ranging legislation that would sweep away most of the barriers preventing banks from operating freely across state lines.

The compromise bill, dismantling laws dating to the 1920s, would have its biggest impact on the 60 million Americans who live in metropolitan areas straddline state borders.

Americans who live in metropolitan ar-eas straddling state borders.

They and the businesses that serve them probably would find banking more convenient. Individuals would be able to deposit their paycheck in one state, where they worked, for instance, and withdraw the funds in another, where they lived.

The compromise is expected to be approved easily, as soon as this week, by the House. But Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said he would try to use parliamentary tacties to block it in the Senate because of a provision affecting the Texas state constitution.

the Texas state constitution.

A year after enactment, bank holding companies would be permitted to acquire banks in any state. After June 1, 1997, banking companies could consolidate their holdings into a branch network of a single bank, saving millions of dollars in administrative expenses. Industry analysts believe the measure, dismantling laws dating to the 1920s, will accelerate the already-rapid pace of consolidation in banking. Eventually, it will mean fewer and bigger banks, layoffs among bank employees and probably less control of lending by local bankers.

On the other hand, it will mean more

On the other hand, it will mean more banking choices for people in towns not now served by big banks and, ad-vocates say, it will produce a banking system less prone to failures and better able to keep lending in good times and bad.

Attached to the bill were a wide varicty of other measures that congressional banking committees have been working on since early last year.

One, aimed at fulfilling a campaign promise by President Clinton, authorizes $382 million in spending over four years for a new fund that would offer technical assistance and grants to specialized lenders operating in poor rural areas and inner cities. Senate negotiators accepted a House provision that earmarks a third of the money for deposit-insurance subsidies to commercial banks and savings institutions that increase their lending in poor areas, assist specialized community lenders or offer low-cost checking accounts to poor poorpole.

ty lenders of other low-cost enecking accounts to poor people.

Otherparts of the legislation would:

Give the Federal Reserve new au-thority to curb "reverse redlining" schemes where lenders foreclose on homes owned by poor and elderly peo-ple after tricking them into home im-provement loans on usurious terms.

• Cut banks' paperwork require-ments and exempt healthy small banks from the annual examination require-ment.

ing them into securities.

• Bolster the National Flood Insur-borrowers to have flood insurance. Monday's approval by the House-Senate conference committee completed work begun last week.

At the insistence of Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee, the conference included a provision reversing a federal court decision that croded the so-called homestead protection in the Texas state constitution.

To be sure, commercial airlines rank among the safest ways to travel.

In 1993, more than 40,000 people died on U.S. highways — a death toll equivalent to a jumbo jet crashing every day. There were no crashes involving major airlines.

Still, consumer advocates say the airlines need to do more to protect passengers when a plane does crash. Studies show that many people don't die from the impact of the crash but from the fire and smoke afterward.

In the early 1980s, the Federal Avistation Administration studied crashes in which investigators found there was a chance of survival — more than 80 percent of accidents, In those crashes, the agency attributed 40 percent of the deaths to fire.

After the Charlotte crash, nearly half of the 37 people who died were found within a dozen feet of an open exit:

It's too soon to tell if additional safety features — including better fire and smoke protection and stronger seats—could have saved anyone in that crash, Federal investigators will be exploring that question for months.

For years, the government, airlines and consumer groups have considered:

Stronger seats: In a requirement dating to the 1950s, most airlines seats are built to withstand only nine G's of force — or nine times the weight of a passenger hurtling forward.

Better seat belts: Safety advocates believe that shoulder restraints could save lives: But the FAA says that would also require much stronger seats.— a airlines and the July 2 emstar are allowed to hold children younger than 2 in their laps without buying a ticket, Cone baby, traveling on her mother's lap, died in the July 2 emstar.

LEXINGTON. Ky. — Listen to a tale of two homeowners.

Sandra Park, director of adolescent day treatment at Charter Ridge Hospital, has spent far more time and money fixing up the home she bought two years ago than she cares to remember.

She bought the house for $66,000, partially because friends encouraged her to stop wasting her money on rent. She likes her home, but would consider renting again.

"I don't think economically it was the best choice for me, 'she said of home ownership." If you are not adept at doing your own repair work, you are stuck. I have had many crash courses in electricity and wiring and plumbing." Reg White, on the other hand, has never felt so settled, so secure or so independent sinch he bought his first home in the spring for $60,000 in Lexington.

White, a social worker, wanted his own place so badly he got a second job — working up to 20 hours a week in a retail store — to come up with a down payment.

His monthly payments are about what he pald in rent, plus the interest is tax-deductible.
"There is nothing like it,' he said. "It's mine. I don't have to answer to a landlord. I feel settled with a sense of $ecurity."

Interest-rates have been rising, but mortgage lenders and real estate agents say first-time buyers such as White and Park have set the local market on fire. Many are embarking on the largest purchase of their lives because they can own for what it costs them to rent, they can deduct all the mortgage interest from their taxes and they usually can get a return on their investment should they sell.

But they worry whether they are making a good investment.

The solution to finding a 10th winmer with kafety was too simple for him to see.

East took his diamond ace and,
lacking a more attractive return, led a diamond back to dummy's king. South tried a low spade from dummy, but East had heard South's pre-empt; he rose with his king to lead a trump. South won and rattled off five more trump miners, but he eventually had to try the club finesse. When it failed, the defenders had a total of four tricks — two diamonds, a club and a spade for one down.
Can you spot the simplest route to scoring the game? It will not become apparent unless one counts declarer can be sure of one diamond and seven trumps, all he needs are two club winners to score his game. To ensure his two club winners with minimum risk of losing the game. South must establish a second club win. The bidding:

Miami Dolphin Cox sues NFL for discrimination

DAVIE, Fia. — Dolphins linebacker Bryan Cox, taunted by racial insults from fans in Buffalo last season, plans to sue the NFL, charging racial discrimination made him a lesser player and "", "noted him to drink heavity."

"For the first nine games, you saw a Bryan Cox playing with emotion and kick-ing but," he said. "For the last five games I didn't lose control of myself, you saw a per-

Cox was fined $10,000 by the NFL for responding to Buffalo fans racial insults with obscene gestures. NFL commissioner Paul Taglibue later reduced the fine to $3,000.

He was also fined $3,000 for unneccessary roughness against the Philadelphia Eagles and $5,000 for his oudbursts in a game against the New York Giants.

BOSTON — Teams rarely base a long re-building process on a 34-year-old player, even if that player is the still spectacular Dominique

Twin Falls takes American Legion doubleheader from Spartans to close regular season schedule Monday

By Mike Maller Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS - Holding Minico to nine hits in two games, the Twin Falls Cowboys closed regular season play with a 7-1, 6-3 doubleheader sweep in American Legion baseball at Frontier Field Monday.

American Legion baseball at Frontier Field Monday.

The Cowboys finished 18-25.

In the first game, Mark Scofield threw a shutout for six and two-thirds innings, getting the victory with a five-hitter and seven strikcouts.

The Cowboys took a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the second on Luke Mickelson's two-run homer.

An RBI single by Willie Bird, who was 4-for-4 in the game, made it 3-0 in the fourth. Andy Heyer tripled and Jamie Hyde doubled to highlight a three-run fifth. A double by Bird and Scofield's second single of the game brought in Cowboy run No. 7.

Minico loaded the bases with no one out in the top of the sixth, but a strike out and a line drive double play by Relvy Salinas ended the threat.

A double and a pair of walks loaded the bases with one out in the seventh. Seofield got a popup for the second out, but Chad Schow reached out and poked a single into right field to score the Spartans only run.

In the nightcap, Hyde pitched a shutout for five and one-third innings, fanning eight and holding the Spartans to four hits and five walks. Tim Stadelmeir walked the bases loaded in the seventh, but got a popup and two strikeouts to cam a save.

Scoffield homered to lead off the bottom of the fourth, upping the Cowboys' lead to 3-0. Jon Axtman singled home Bird for a 4-0 advantage in the fifth.

A triple by Chad Schow, a single by Eric Hartruft, a double from Nathan Rich and a Twin Falls throwing error brought Minico within 4-3 in the top of the sixth.

The Cowboys padded their lead with back-to-back doubles from Mickelson and John Sudik and sacri-fice bunts by Travis Hamilton and Bird.

Lasorda, Strawberry make peace

Los Angeles Dodgers' manager Tommy Lasorda, right, talks with for-mer Dodger, now San Francisco Gi-ant Darryl Strawberry, Monday.

SAN FRANCISCO — Darryl Strawberry took care of unfinished business Monday night, moving to make his peace with Tom Lasorda.

Strawberry, sober now and helping the San Francisco Giants after his release by the Dodgers, approached his former manger when he saw Lasorda on the field during batting practice two hours before gametime. He shook hands with Lasorda and hugged him.

"It's good to see you," Lasorda told Strawberry, "I hope everything goes well for you. Good luck to you. Take care of yourself."

Strawberry field his former.

yourself." Strawberry faced his former team for the first time. During batting practice there was a smattering of mocking "Dar-ryll" chants from Dodger fans when Strawberry was in the batting cage. But there was plenty of support, including banners proclaiming one stadium section "Berry Patch."

He has batted 310 with two home runs and 11 RBIs since joining the Giants, helping San Francisco surge into contention in the NL West, His July 7 artival colocided with a 12-2 burst that carried the Giants within 1½ games of the front-running Dodgers, losers of eight of their last 10 before Monday night?

What was a striggling Giants' offense seems to life, Barry Bonds and Matt Williams, the two-players butting in front of Strawberry, are hitting a combined, 343 (37-for-108) with seven doubles, 13 home mas and 31 RBIs in the 12 previous games Strawberry still had good baseball left in him, but was surprised Strawberry returned to the majors so soon after his May 25 release following treatment for substance abuse.

That hasn't stopped Lasorda from his criticism of Strawberry handling his drug relapse a character weakness. This past weekend he said Strawberry had let down himself, his former teammates and owner Peter O'Malley, who paid a $4.8 million settlement in releasing the outfielder.

"It's an almost unbelievable situation," Lasorda said, "We paid him off. He's 'got our money and he's out here now trying to beat us, the same guys who were feeding him. It's a crazy gamer, isn't it?"

Union, executive board to set strike date

NEW YORK (AP) — The executive board of the Major League Basehall Players Association will meet by telephone on Thursday and is expected to set a strike date.

Union head Donald Fehr said Monady that it was still "possible to likely" that a strike date would be set during the conference call. The union is considering various strike dates from mid-August through late September. In the last week, several players have said Aug. 19 is a possible date to focus on.

Bargaining is Scheduled to resume Tuesday when discussion groups will meet. A full negoriating session is scheduled for Wednesday, but nothing significant is expected to occur then.

"We're going to brief the players on Thursday regardless." Fehr said.

Asked what he thought would happen during the conference call, Fehr said: "It depends on what happens Wednesday."

The purpose of setting a strike date is not to go on strike," Fehr said in an interview scheduled to be shown Monday night on ABC's "Nightline."

"The object is to create a focal points on that hopefully the negotiations will conclude before you have to get there."

Each side refuses to consider the other's position, leaving baseball headed toward its eighth work stoppage in 22 years. Owners, claiming they forsee competitive difficulty for small-market clubs, are demanding that players agree to a salary cap in exchange for a 5h-50 split of revenue.

Players, claiming the industry is booming, see no need for a cap and want the current agreement largely unchanged. Their major demands are increasing the minimum salary from $109,000 to $175,000-$200,000 and restoring the threshold for salary arbitration to two years of major league service, its level from 1974-92.

the union is ignoring management a needs.

Feltr says a cap would destroy free agency and owners' proposal for a sev-en-year agreement would cost players at least $1.5 billion.

"Baseball faces a lot of difficulties. We are trying to solve them," Ravitch told "Nightline."
